

Safety efforts pay off!

Wing excels at mishap prevention during 101 critical days

by Chuck Gerrior
Reese ground safety chief

The hard work of commanders, supervisors and individuals has resulted in finishing the "101 Critical Days of Summer" with only one reportable off-duty mishap, the best record Reese has ever experienced.

Even one mishap is too many, but we're doing better than last year. We experienced 10 work-loss incidents then, which makes this summer a 90-percent improvement.

"The tremendous improvement in our statistics, and more importantly the well-being of our people, is due to the right amount of emphasis on safety by commanders," said Col. Bill Henny, 64th Flying Training Wing commander. "They got people thinking about being smart beforehand."

The wing has 23 days until Sept. 30 when the mishap reporting period for fiscal 1991 is closed out. During fiscal 1991, we have reduced the numbers of on- and off-duty mishaps significantly. As of Tuesday, we reduced reportable mishaps for the entire year by 56 percent.

Summer is fading into fall. We all must prepare ourselves for the upcoming seasonal changes. Increased hours of darkness, lower temperatures, hunting activities, football and basketball are a few of the fall activities that can cause problems.

Colonel Henny stated he expects the attitude that resulted in a safe summer to continue.

"Reese has done great this summer, and I want everyone to keep thinking about what hazards lie around the corner."

Healthy lifestyle can 'insure' future

by SSgt. Charles Risley
64th MS

As we forge our way through the 90s, more and more people are looking for better ways to invest their money to help ensure better standards of living during their retirement years.

With the Social Security system under a strain and medical costs continuing to skyrocket, many Americans find themselves perplexed as they try to decide which retirement and insurance investments are best for them.

One of the best investments that any person can make is that of a healthy lifestyle — comprised of a proper diet, exercise and regular checkups with their physician. The benefits of such an investment can be seen for years to come.

In response to this, the 64th Medical Squadron is sponsoring a health fair from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sept. 14 under the gazebo between the Main Exchange and Commissary. The theme of this year's fair is healthy living.

Complimentary eye examinations and blood pressure checks will be conducted. In addition, displays and free information will be available on areas of interest such as smoking cessation, stress management, physical fitness, nutrition, substance abuse, hypertension, dental health and family support. Cholesterol screenings will be available for eligible military beneficiaries. Additionally, Sparky the fire mouse and McGruff the crime dog will be there to visit with the children and hand out fire and crime safety tips.

Regardless of your age or present health, healthy living can be incorporated into your daily regimen. So make an investment in yourself and visit the health fair. This event is open to the entire base community and we look forward to seeing you there.

If you need additional information, please call the health promotion office at 3140.

Is your escape plan ready?

by MSgt. Roy Napper
Reese Fire Department

The most important activity you can undertake to protect your family is to devise an escape plan for your home.

Fire authorities agree that hundreds of lives could be saved each year if people knew in advance exactly how they could get out of their homes in the heavy smoke, hot flames and confusion that frequently accompany a fire.

Not everyone instinctively flees from a burning house; children often panic and hide in closets or under beds. Knowing what to do in case of fire can mean the difference between life and death.

Assemble all members of your family and go over these escape protection procedures.

Make sure all family members sleep with their bedroom doors closed at night. A closed door can delay the spread of fire and keep out deadly gases and smoke for the few minutes needed to escape.

Draw a floor plan of your home. Mark an escape route and an alternate route from each room in the house. Pay particular attention to the bedrooms since nighttime fires are usually the most serious.

Check all windows and make sure that bedroom windows, screens and storm windows can be opened easily by children and others. Explain how to break window glass with a chair, bat or heavy object, and how to clear away pieces of glass remaining in the frame with a shoe or similar object.

Getting down from a second-story window may require the purchase of a rope or folding ladder unless there is a roof, porch or extension underneath the window. If you do not have an emergency ladder in bedrooms, make sure there is a ladder available to assist outside rescues. Bedding can be used to assist in an escape or to cushion a fall.

Very young children, handicapped and elderly persons should receive careful attention when mapping family escape plans.

Agree on ways members of the family can sound an alarm. It is likely that fire may block hallways and prevent you from reaching other bedrooms. This can occur in as little as two minutes. Pound on a wall, yell, use a whistle or any other method that will awaken members of the family who are asleep.

Instruct family members not to waste time getting dressed or collecting prized possessions.

Make sure that every family member knows how to test a door. If panels are warm, keep the door closed and use alternate escape routes. If not, brace the foot and hip against the door and open cautiously to prevent superheated air from flowing it open. If no hot air or smoke greets you, it is probably safe to pass through. Remember to close the door.

If you are forced to remain in a room, stay near a slightly open window. Place towels or clothes in the door cracks. To reach to other side of a smoke-filled room, crawl

TEMPEST

Do you know what it means to you?

by Charles Coward
Reese TEMPEST manager

With more people using their computers as the means of communication, more attention must be paid to the security of these machines. Unless specific countermeasures are taken, it is likely that unintentional signals will be radiated — signals that contain classified information.

If a person will be using equipment to type, display, hear, print out, reproduce or generate classified material, then the person should contact their local "TEMPEST" manager to ensure the specific equipment being used is approved, as installed, for processing classified information.

Some countermeasures that can be taken include:

- Keeping equipment that process classified information separated from those processors which do not.
- Keeping wires that carry classified information separated from wires that carry unclassified information.
- Shielding wires or running them in conduit.
- Establishing controlled and accessibility spaces to contain the compromising emanations.

Naturally, cost plays a part in protecting the systems, and the countermeasures implemented should be selected to achieve the desired protection at the least cost.

The level of required protection is determined by a vulnerability assessment. The location of the equipment and type of material to be processed are some of the factors considered in this assessment.

The protection and safeguarding of classified information is everyone's ongoing responsibility. TEMPEST is not a discipline where a person can ensure it is right one time and then be done with it. A continuous program is needed to ensure protection is maintained. TEMPEST policies are developed with this in mind and the responsibilities for compliance applies to all commands, organizations, offices and the people who electronically process classified information.

Drugs and alcohol

Parents, education are keys to the battle

by SSgt. Stewart Stanfield
64th SPS

There has been a growing concern about alcohol and drug abuse worldwide.

No longer is the problem confined to large cities. It has infiltrated the streets, suburbs and small towns — where our families live — and is affecting all our lives.

Education is a powerful weapon against alcohol and drug abuse. It is time for the American public to challenge the intolerable abuse of alcohol and drugs. The time has come for everyone to band together and show our youth that we care about their future. It is important to set examples for our young people to help them learn to battle the drug problem and help them learn to say "No." As adults, we should set the example by not using illegal drugs.

Do not keep illegal drugs in your home and do not allow them to be used there by anyone. Let family and friends know that illegal drugs are not accepted and will not be tolerated at parties you or your family attend, or anywhere near you.

If alcohol is used, it should be by someone that is of legal age, and then only in moderation. Any use of alcohol by a child is abuse, and against the law.

Some tips to help children say "no" to drugs include:

☐ Talk to your children about alcohol and other drugs. Children are more likely to communicate when they have cues that parents or adults are listening and interested in what they have to say.

☐ Help your children deal with peer pressure and make policies that help them say "no." Many young people start using drugs because of peer pressure.

☐ Help your children to develop a healthy self-image and a strong system of values.

☐ Encourage your children to join and take an active part in an anti-drug club or program such as drug abuse resistance education.

☐ Encourage healthy, creative activities that may help prevent children from using alcohol and other drugs. Studies have shown that once involvement with drugs begins, it often is followed by a predictable sequence leading to drug abuse.

☐ Don't use terror tactics. Your children are not stupid. They know from friends and older siblings what the effects of most drugs are, so telling them that smoking one marijuana cigarette will cause insanity will not stop them. It will only weaken your credibility.

☐ Teach your children responsibility. Allow your child to make mistakes, but let him understand the consequences. If your 16-year-old son gets a driving-while-intoxicated ticket, make him pay the fine and then take his driver's license away (if the court doesn't do it first).

☐ Know your children's friends. It's incredible, but sometimes a mother will study the label on a soup can to buy what is best for her children, but never know anything about who her 15-year-old is dating or where she's going Saturday night. Asking to meet your children's friends is not "prying;" it's letting your children know that you care about them. Active parental guidance is a must.

☐ Learn about the signs of drug abuse and what types of drugs are available in your area. Learn what drug paraphernalia looks like and don't turn a blind eye if you find rolling papers or a "roach" clip in your child's room. Confront the child with it and demand an explanation. It's up to you to set the example.

Security police NCO retires after 20 years

Sergeant Bergen reflects on career, discusses future

A member of the 64th Security Police Squadron retired Aug. 28 after 20 years of active-duty.

MSgt. Danny Bergen traded in his uniform for civilian clothes after 18 years in security police and two years as an Office of Special Investigations agent.

During his career, Sergeant Bergen was stationed in Japan, Korea, England and Germany. His continental tours included Charleston AFB, S.C., and Castle AFB, Calif.

"My job as an SP has moved me all over the world," Sergeant Bergen said. "I really enjoyed moving around and being able to see different cultures."

Sergeant Bergen recalled the days when he was stationed at Kwang Ju AB, Korea. "When I was stationed there, I managed to keep myself busy as well as represent the Air Force in the community," he said. "I was a security policeman, worked on a live radio program and taught conversational English at the Hundai Foreign Language Institute."

He decided to retrain into OSI,

MSgt. Danny Bergen
...career provided chance to see different cultures

but later went back into security police. "I decided to go back because in OSI, people weren't getting promoted," he said. "I wanted the chance to get promoted."

Looking to the future, he noted that people must work with the ongoing changes in the military and not against them if the restructured Air Force is going to be able to do its mission more efficiently.

"The SPS is a good example. The new senior noncommissioned officers and commander coming in can cause waves, but people must work together a team," he said.

Sergeant Bergen also commented that every aspect of the Air Force must work together.

"With the Air Force down-sizing its force, it will become harder for people to get promoted because they will be competing against a smaller, highly competitive group," he said. "People who will be testing for promotion need to start studying early and not wait to the last minute. A lot of people don't get promoted because they wait to the last minute."

Sergeant Bergen is pursuing an associates degree in police science. After he receives his associates, he plans to pursue a bachelor's degree in business administration and management. "Right now, I'm hoping to begin working with an insurance or private investigation firm," he said.

He plans to make New Port Richey, Fla., his permanent home.

Sgt. Daniel Williams goes over files in the 64th Contracting Squadron.

(Amn. José Alejandro)

Mission maker

This week's mission maker is Sgt. Daniel Williams, 64th Contracting Squadron. As a contracting specialist, Sergeant Williams buys contracts for the Air Force and acts as administrator for services contracts.

"I enjoy the challenge in working with our civilian counterparts," he said. "I also like to see how the business side of the Air Force works."

Sergeant Williams worked as a pneudraulic aircraft systems mechanic before retraining into contracts. "I enjoyed working in maintenance, but it wasn't a challenge anymore," he said. "I spent two years in Germany and two years here in the maintenance field before deciding to retrain."

He's been stationed at Reese since June 1988 and in the Air Force since December 1985. "I joined the Air Force because I needed a step in the right direction," Sergeant Williams said.

"To this day, I still consider that decision a wise one."

The 25-year-old is pursuing an associates degree in aircraft systems maintenance and government procurement. He hopes to get an assignment to the New England area.

The Massachusetts native enjoys reading books, listening to music and skiing. He also enjoys spending time with his wife, Paula, and their two children, Nicole, 4; and Analise, 2.

The Reese Youth Center is offering a before and after school program that includes organized games, arts and crafts and more. In addition, their "advantage program" includes all before and after school care, all field trips, full day care when's school is off and a half-price center membership.

Also, the center is offering birthday parties for kids. For $25, the center will provide the room, cake, punch and paper goods. A room can be rented for $7.50 by people who want to supply their own goods.

For details, on any of these programs, call 3820.

SPs recover items

The 64th Security Police Squadron has recovered the following items: women's watch (with other jewelry), a plastic Nintendo case with money, a men's 12-speed bicycle and a set of keys. Anyone who thinks any of these items may be theirs should call the SPS Investigations Section, 3999.

Housing office moves

The Reese Housing Office will move to Bldg. 310 on or about Sept. 16. Housing officials said that telephone and customer service will be extremely limited that day, and they asked for everyone's patience.

NCOLS graduation planned

Class 91-H in the Reese Noncommissioned Officer Leadership School will graduate Sept. 19 in the Enlisted Open Mess. Social hour will begin at 6:30 p.m., with dinner following at 7.

Everyone on base is welcome. R.S.V.P. by Sept. 17, 3147.

Career day planned

A career information day is set for 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Sept. 17 in the university center at Texas Tech. Officials in the Reese Family Support Center said the day will be an "excellent opportunity" for base spouses and others to find out about employment opportunities in Lubbock and elsewhere.

For more information, call Reynalda Schroeder at the center, 6494.

'Shhh' . . . Reese librarian's efforts, work with kids make for anything but a 'quiet' life.

by Sheila Baxley
Reese Public Affairs Division

Librarian.

The name conjures images of a quiet bookworm type, perhaps peering through granny glasses, articulating a seemingly-limited vocabulary.

"Shhh . . .!"

However, one librarian on base is a notable exception. Juanita Beedy has been with the Reese Library for two-and-one-half years as both a part-time worker and a volunteer.

Her personal life is more fascinating than the fictional books checked out by her library customers. Mrs. Beedy describes herself as a "people person." Off-duty time is spent with family and friends, and enjoying hobbies ranging from fishing and hunting deer and rabbits, to snorkeling and cave hunting.

Achieving publication of her eight different illustrated children's books is another high priority. The books, geared for toddlers 1- to 4-years-old, were inspired by interaction with kids through previous experiences as a room mother, Cub Scout den mother, school cafeteria worker and, significantly, her position at the library.

Base parents were requesting books the children described from story hour sessions Mrs. Beedy conducts, only to learn the stories, based on "moral lessons," were her own. Beedy has recently secured an agent in New York to assist her publication efforts.

Mrs. Beedy devotes much of professional efforts toward the betterment of Reese children. This past summer, the library organized and presented an arts and crafts program for the youth community.

Reese Youth Center members and walk-ins created self-portraits, experimented with chalk and water colors, and enjoyed the group atmosphere.

Currently, Mrs. Beedy offers a Wednesday morning story hour program. Between the hours of 9 and 10 and from 11 to noon, children and parents can join in an hour of learning and fun.

Story hours are tailored to fit each week's group, depending on age and experience of the youngsters. Activities range from story telling, artwork, video review and, at times, sign language and Spanish lessons.

Mrs. Beedy attributes her library career to motivation by her sons, Robert and Alexander, now 21 and 17, whose childhood years included frequent trips to their library.

Also, she said she receives tremendous encouragement from her husband, retired master sergeant and current Lockheed employee Robert Beedy.

Mrs. Beedy's goals for the library include building a larger children's reading program and developing programs to promote public awareness of library resources. MWR's employee of the year for 1990, she anticipates continued personal involvement with base activities, especially with youth functions.

Certainly, Mrs. Beedy's life is anything but "quiet."

Fire

with your head about 18 inches above the floor. This is where the coolest and cleanest air is. Hang a sheet outside the window to signal for help.

Decide on a meeting place outside the house where everyone will assemble as soon as they are outside. Once you have made your escape, never go back inside!

Call the fire department as soon as possible. Speak clearly and plainly, making sure to give your name and address. Everyone should remain at the outside meeting place until the fire department arrives. If everyone is not out of the house or apartment, tell the firefighters in what part of the house the person sleeps. This will help them rescue the person much faster.

In high-rise buildings, do not use elevators in fire emergencies. They may be inaccessible or may trap you if the power fails (or, if the elevator opened up on the fire floor, instant death could result). The fire prevention office has pamphlets titled "Traveler's Guide for Hotel Fire Safety" which contains many facts on preplanning your escape from hotels.

Hold a practice drill once you have set up escape routes, and then repeat drills periodically.

Many families who have never experienced a fire in their homes do not understand how frightening or traumatic it can be. We hope you never do, but according to the National Fire Protection Association, there were more than 600,000 house fires reported in 1989 that resulted in 6,000 deaths, 19,000 injuries and over $4 billion in direct property damage.

Other important things to do are properly installing and testing smoke detectors and having a portable fire extinguisher for both home and automobile.

These facts can help save your life. Help us help you!

Crud tournament set

On Sept. 13, the Reese Officers' Open Mess will host another crud tournament. Competition for the wing championship remains keen.

The Bulls (33rd Flying Training Squadron) and Cobras (52nd FTS) will attempt to run down the Foxes (35th FTS) as the 1991 Reese crud season heads into the home stretch.

Through four tournaments there have been no repeat winners, but the Foxes have been the most consistent with first-place (25 points), second-place (15 points) and fourth-place (10 points) finishes.

With two more tournaments planned, any team can step forward and claim the title.

In June, the "P-Qual" team (64th Operations Support Squadron) won the ATC-level tournament held in conjunction with "Top Flight" at Laughlin AFB, Texas. The next Top Flight is just over the horizon —

Oct. 3-4, and every flight is expected to field a team Sept. 13 to take advantage of the opportunity to gauge themselves in actual competition.

Additionally, several visiting teams from Laughlin and the student team from Undergraduate Pilot Training Class 92-03 are expected to make strong showings. Everything considered, this should be the best, hardest-fought crud contest yet.

Crud season standings

Foxes (35th FTS)	50 points
Bulls (33rd FTS)	40 points
Cobras (52nd FTS)	35 points
Ops (64th OSS)	35 points
92-03 (52nd FTS)	15 points

1st place = 25 points
2nd place = 15 points
3rd and 4th place = 10 points
