Volume 44, Number 36

September 11, 1992

Reese Air Force Base, Texas 79489

(Mike Parrish)

TSgt. Scott Thornton and his girl friend Susan Gabel share a moment before the Reese "warrior" departed Wednesday.

Six wing members promoted

Six wing members were notified of their selection for promotion Tuesday morning.

Lt. Cols. Julius McRee, deputy commander for operations and Stan Gorenc, past commander of the 54th Flying Training Squadron now assigned to Andrews AFB, Md., were both selected for colonel.

Maj. Debra Hughes, 64th Medical Squadron assistant chief nurse, nursing services and clinical coordinator, outpatient services, was selected for lieutenant colonel.

Under a supplemental E-7 board, TSgt. Normando Febus, 64th Security Police Squadron, picked up his sixth stripe.

Additionally, Sgts. David Anderson, 64th Mission Support Squadron, military personnel branch, and Jeri Lalonde, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, heavy equipment repair section, both picked up another stripe under the E-5 supplemental board.

Reese 'warriors' head for Saudi

Several 64th Security Police Squadron members deployed to Saudi Arabia Wednesday morning as a follow on contingency in support of Operation Desert Storm.

According to Capt. Gerard Jolivette, 64SPS commander, this is a recurring effort to maintain the peacekeeping forces within Saudi. Although there has been some talk about a buildup of arms and troops, the captain noted that this deployment is based on a predetermined rotation of troops.

"Our training focuses extensively on air base defense, and each member of this select team is looking forward to the opportunity to test their skills," said Captain Jolivette, noting the squadron's primary mission of air base ground defense. "The fact that each deploying member volunteered speaks for the calibre of this group and their willingness to contribute."

Only one of the members that deployed last year in support of Desert Shield/Storm will return for a second time.

SSgt. Stuart Stanfield, an assistant law enforcement operations shift leader, looks at this as an opportunity to use the experience he gained during the last deployment to help out the other deploying security policemen.

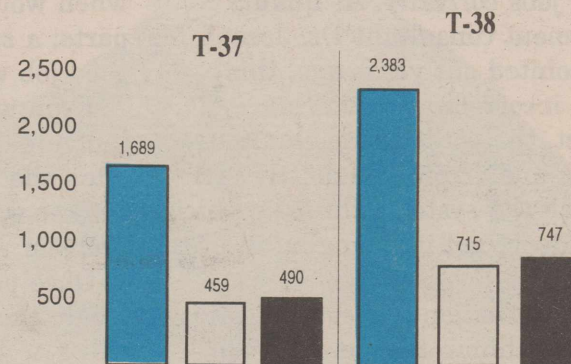

"Last time was pretty tough," said Sergeant Stanfield. "I think it will be much better this time."

Captain Jolivette said that because of the strong support received from augmenting wing agencies, he does not expect any decline in law enforcement operations in support of the wing mission.

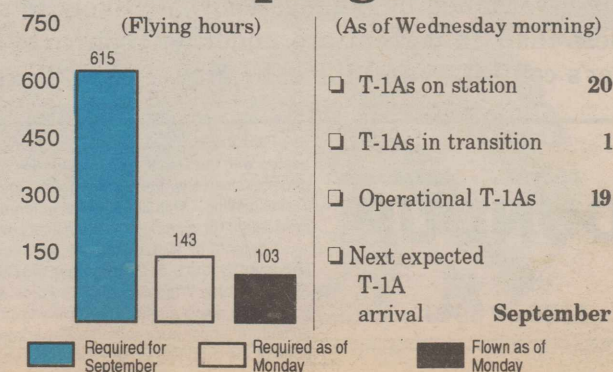

"The men and women of the squadron are thankful for the support received from everyone," said the captain. "This goes to show that we are all one team."

Anyone wishing to correspond with the deployed troops should address items to 4404 CW(P)/SPS, Unit 70407 Box 21, APO AE 09849-0407.

Quality Air Force

by 2nd Lt. Eric R. Pierce
64th CES

The reorganization of Reese's 64th Civil Engineering Squadron has allowed quality improvements to be made in how we perform our peacetime and wartime missions.

In order to provide quality service, we have now decentralized the maintenance sections and have rearranged them geographically. Previously, the civil engineering maintenance shops were organized by craft. There were separate shops for carpentry, plumbing, sheet metal, electrical, heating and air conditioning and power production, to name a few. Unfortunately, most jobs required the services of two or more shops. Work orders had to be resubmitted and routed back through the system. This unwieldy procedure caused a considerable waste of time and resources, not to mention the frustration and aggravation for our people and our customers. The reorganization has solved these problems.

We essentially divided the squadron into three sections, facility maintenance, infrastructure support and heavy repair. These new sections are multi-crafted and are designed to provide our customer with one-stop services. Our craftsmen are undergoing exhaustive training to become qualified in the multifaceted craft disciplines. Now, the same craftsman who comes to repair the hole in your wall can also repair the light switch and the leaky faucet. Most maintenance jobs will be handled by the facility maintenance section, which is divided into three area maintenance units.

With each AMU assigned to provide services for a specific area, pride in ownership and stricter accountability is now possible. Our AMU's are providing one-on-one, personalized service to our customers. In doing so, we provide a greater level of customer service, with the same manpower and equipment resources.

The reorganization also enhances our wartime operational readiness. The wartime tasking of civil engineering calls for multi-skilled personnel and units similar to the ones formed under the new system. Our peacetime operations and training now mirror our wartime operations. This allows for a quicker transition from a peacetime to a wartime posture, and for an overall increase in unit effectiveness.

Is this new infrastructure meeting our goals and your expectations? An overwhelming majority of our customers say they are extremely satisfied with the new service. The newly formed AMUs are working hard to serve the needs of our customers. Please help us continue to improve our process by completing a customer service survey whenever one of our craftsmen completes a job for you.

If you would like to contact us about maintenance problems, you may now contact the appropriate AMU directly. The new number for customer service is 3210 for AMU 1, 6461 for AMU 2 and 3047 for housing residents. Building managers may call 3647 (AMU 1) or 6622 (AMU 2).

TRAINING TOMORROW'S BEST TODAY — FOR GLOBAL POWER AND REACH

'85/15 rule' says improve system, not the workers

There is a widely held belief that an organization would have few, if any, problems if only workers would do their jobs correctly. As quality management consultant Dr. Joseph M. Juran pointed out years ago, this belief is incorrect.

In fact, the potential to eliminate mistakes and errors lies mostly in improving the systems through which work is done, not in changing the workers.

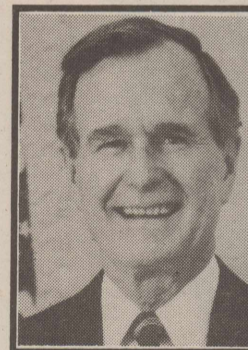

This observation has evolved into the rule of thumb that at least 85 percent of problems can only be corrected by changing systems (which are largely determined by management) and less than 15 percent are under a worker's control — and the split may lean even more toward the system.

For example, a production line worker cannot do a top quality job when working with faulty tools or parts; a surgical nurse cannot do a good job with gloves that do not fit.

Even when it does appear that an individual is doing something wrong, often the trouble lies in how that worker was trained, which is a system problem.

Once people recognize that systems create the majority of problems, they will stop blaming individual workers. They will instead ask which system needs improvement, and will be more likely to seek out and find the true source of a problem. (Courtesy of the "Team Handbook")

Are you registered to vote?

As we approach the November presidential election, many people are beginning to take an interest in registering and voting. However, to vote, you must first register.

Registering is actually very simple and takes only about five minutes or less to do. The first step is to check your leave and earnings statement to determine what your legal state of residency is. If it is any other state than Texas, you must register to vote by absentee ballot. Contact your unit voting officer and they will get you the form and help you fill it out. You will get a response from your state within 60 days giving you confirmation of registration. Thirty days prior to election date, they will mail you the absentee ballot for each election you wish to vote in as identified on the registration application.

If the state of residency on your LES is Texas, and you do not live in Lubbock County, register to vote as previously described as an out-of-state registrant. You will be sent a registration confirmation card and absentee ballots from that county.

If Texas is your state of residency and you live in Lubbock County, you can obtain the proper registration form from Maj. Gary Tucker, wing voting representative, or 2nd Lt. Diane Higginbotham. This form will allow you to register by mail, however, you will have to vote in person in the precinct you currently live in. You will receive voter registration confirmation which will identify your precinct. You will need to take it with you when you vote.

For more information, contact your unit voting representative. They are:

Three sergeants return from NCO Academy

Three wing noncommissioned officers recently returned from San Antonio as graduates of the ATC NCO Academy.

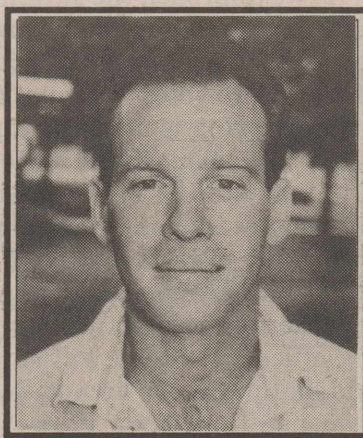

MSgt. Rick Holland, wing safety, and TSgt. Larry Bryant, T-1A Test Team, and SSgt. Dan Tebon, 64th Medical Squadron, attended the five and one-half-week course at Lackland AFB, Texas, graduating Aug. 26.

Sergeant Tebon, NCO in charge of patient administration, felt the course was excellent.

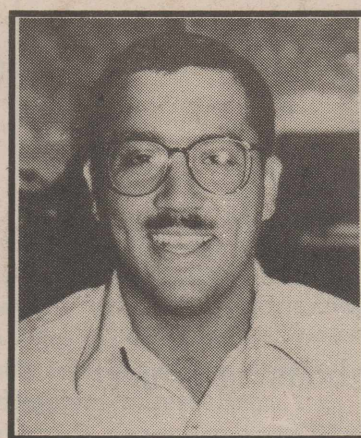

"I think that if someone has the opportunity to go they should," said Sergeant Tebon, who was the youngest person in the class of

Sergeant Holland

Sergeant Bryant

Sergeant Tebon

137, in addition to having the least time in grade and most recent date of rank.

"The skills they teach you aren't just for now. People are people. If you can lead people now, you can lead them in the civilian world. What I learned I'll carry with me for a long time."

CMSgt. David Ptomey, wing senior enlisted advisor, said the academy gets a lot more in depth on the skills learned in leadership school, and allows for a lot of crossfeed with peers.

"It's rewarding to the individual," said the chief, "but it's also very rewarding to the Air Force."

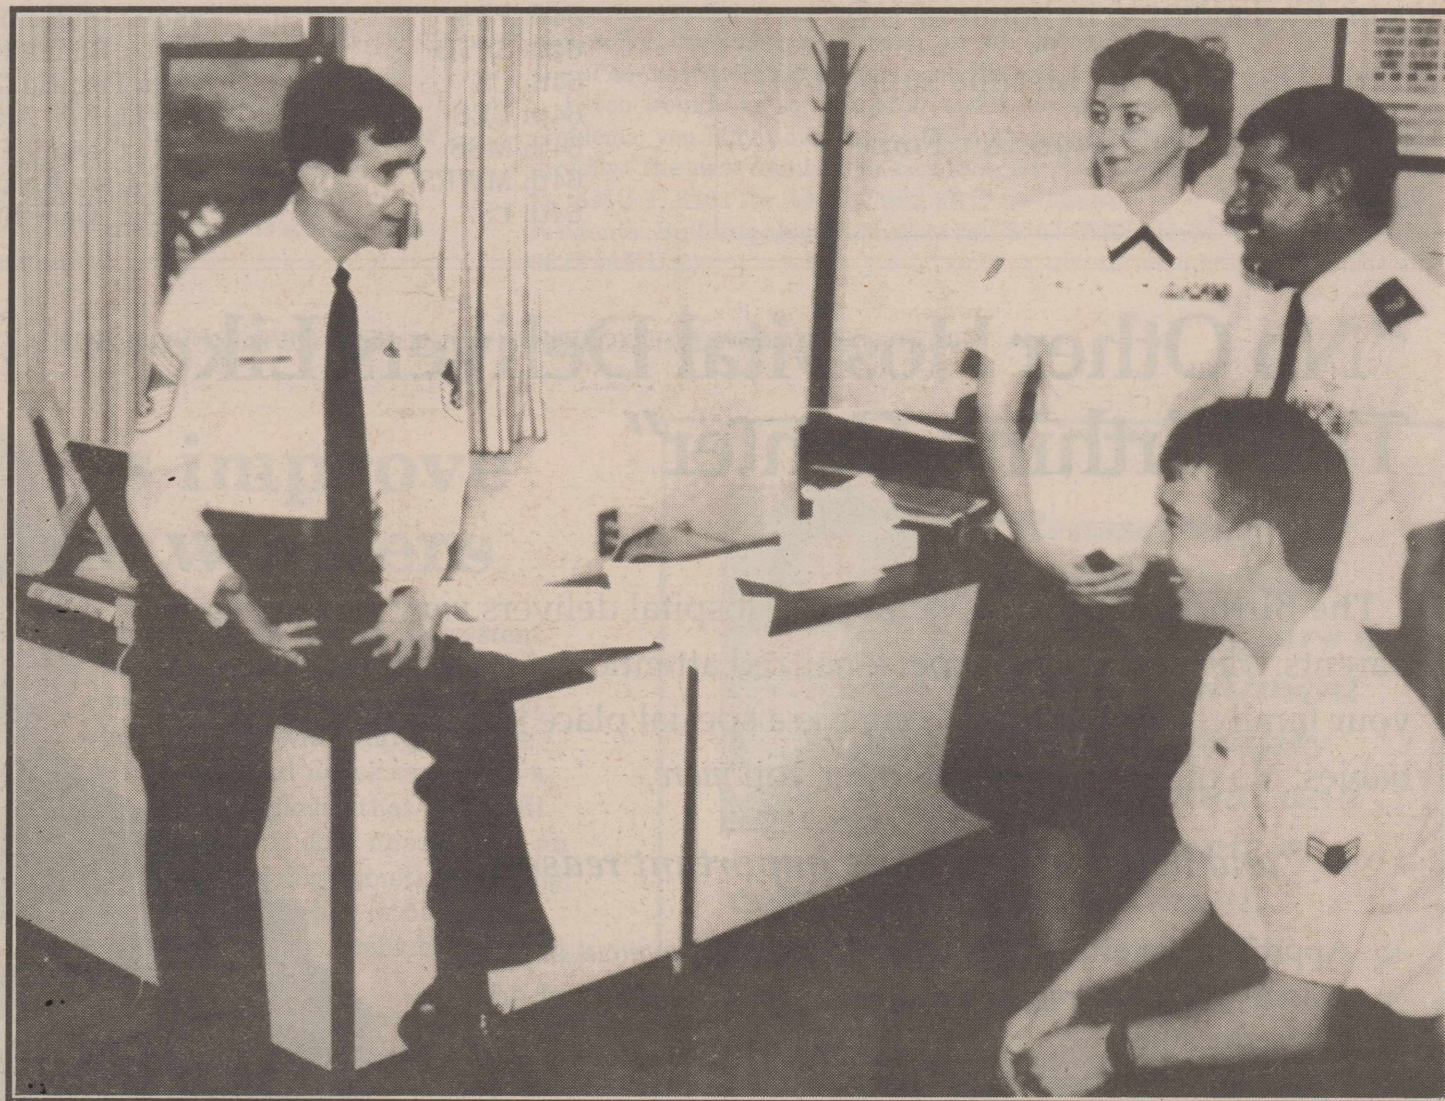

During the course, the students learn leadership and management skills, personality traits, communication, leadership styles and management and supervisory skills.

Sergeant Tebon said the the best part of the academy was the things he learned during the problem solving and personality traits courses.

"Learning about people and why they do things helps me to plan and manage better," he said. "It'll also make me a better supervisor because I can handle the problems better, and the skills will flow down to my people so they can become better managers."

ATC senior enlisted advisor visits Reese

Your I.D. card is worth $400

In recognition of your patriotic service, Lincoln-Mercury has a reward for you.

All you have to do is show your military I.D.

Here's how it works. Go into your local Lincoln-Mercury dealer; make your best deal on any '92 Topaz or Capri, or on a '92 or '93 Tracer, including any current rebates or incentives, other than the college graduate or first time buyer programs, then present your I.D. card and get an additional $400 off. This program applies to purchase or lease. Just make your best deal, then show your I.D.

This offer is open to all branches of the armed forces. The only stipulations are that you have an active duty military identification card or a dependent unlimited access identification card, and take delivery (only two per customer) from a local Lincoln-Mercury dealer by September 24, 1992. It's SNAFU-proof.

It's as easy as a milk run.

No opposition, not hard to find, just go in and get it. That's the way this mission lays out, nice and easy. Just

Reese CFC goal set at $82,000

The 1992 Combined Federal Campaign will kick off with an 11:30 a.m. luncheon Thursday in the Officers' Open Mess. Glenn Cochran, president, United Way of Lubbock, is the scheduled speaker.

After a thorough review of the base organizational manning levels, Col. David Love, wing commander, announced the wing's goal of $82,000. Colonel Love noted that a reduction in the base's total worker population has resulted in the reduction from last year's goal.

"Based on Reese's high participation rates in previous CFCs (approaching 70 percent overall), I anticipate we will meet and very likely exceed this goal," said Colonel Love. "Our CFC is an opportunity for everyone at Reese to shine as they provide opportunities to and extend kindness toward members of our society who truly need us."

The CFC was developed in response to employee wishes for a single annual charity campaign, to reduce administrative expenditures, to permit voluntary payroll withholding for contributions and to better support charitable organizations. Through the CFC, wing members can provide assistance to a great number of people in a variety of ways. For example, many youth organizations, such as the Reese Youth Center, benefit directly from the campaign.

Donations may be made by cash, check or payroll deduction. Individuals can also designate the agency or agencies (up to five) that will receive the donation. Nearly 900 national agencies and federations are listed in this year's CFC brochure. Many deserving Lubbock organizations, approved by the Lubbock Federal Coordinating Committee, are also included.

Undesignated contributions will be distributed by the United Way of Lubbock.

Certificates will be given to squadrons that have 65 percent total participation or 25 percent on level II (individuals donating one hour's pay per month for one year). Those individuals contributing at level II will also receive a CFC mug.

The campaign will run through Oct. 30.

Wing project officers have been appointed to coordinate canvassing efforts for the base units. They are:

Captain Nielsen goes through a pre-flight check on a T-38.

Quality performer

Capt. Steven R. Nielsen knows Reese probably better than anyone else. He has been in the Air Force four years and five months and spent his entire time here.

Captain Nielsen serves a dual capacity in the 52nd Flying Training Squadron, serving as both a T-38 instructor pilot and the assistant flight commander for Bravo Flight.

As the assistant flight commander, he is responsible for the welfare and training of 50 undergraduate pilot training students annually, standardizes and executes activities such as career counseling, assignment release, graduation and recognizing outstanding graduates.

"I would say that the most rewarding thing at Reese is taking an inexperienced student and transforming that person into a useful, effective pilot," the captain said.

In fact, Capt Nielsen does his job so well that just this year he received the instructor pilot of the month award for February and his flight has received flight of the quarter for April to June.

52FTS's Bravo Flight commander, Capt. Bruce Rowe, said "He's my jack of all trades. When I have a problem, he's a great troubleshooter."

Capt. Nielsen was raised in Atlantic, Iowa, and graduated from Atlantic High School. He went on to attend college at Iowa State and graduated with a degree in industrial technology.

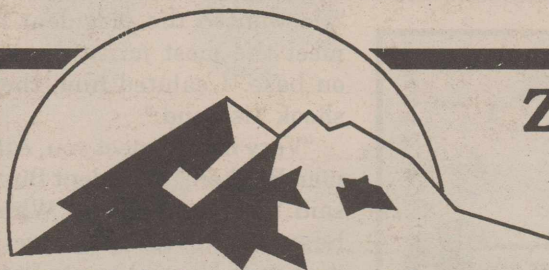

Another noteworthy aspect of Capt. Nielsen is that he devotes time to the volunteer fire department in West Carlisle, Texas. In fact, while not at work at the base, he carries a pager with him at all times, in case of an emergency.

In his free time, Capt Nielsen enjoys woodworking and golf.

His future goals include becoming a C-141 pilot at McChord AFB, Wash., and attending Squadron Officer School in residence in October of this year.

Reese's newest airman meets President Bush

AB Jay Bakken had been at Reese only two days when the wing's senior enlisted advisor, CMSgt. David Ptomey, called him to his office. On the way to the chief's office in the headquarters building, the 23-year-old operations resource manager assigned to the 33rd Flying Training Squadron recalled, "Oh geez, I'm in trouble already."

Thinking the worst, Airman Bakken reported to Chief Ptomey. But his fears were soon put to rest when the chief asked, "How would you like to meet the president?"

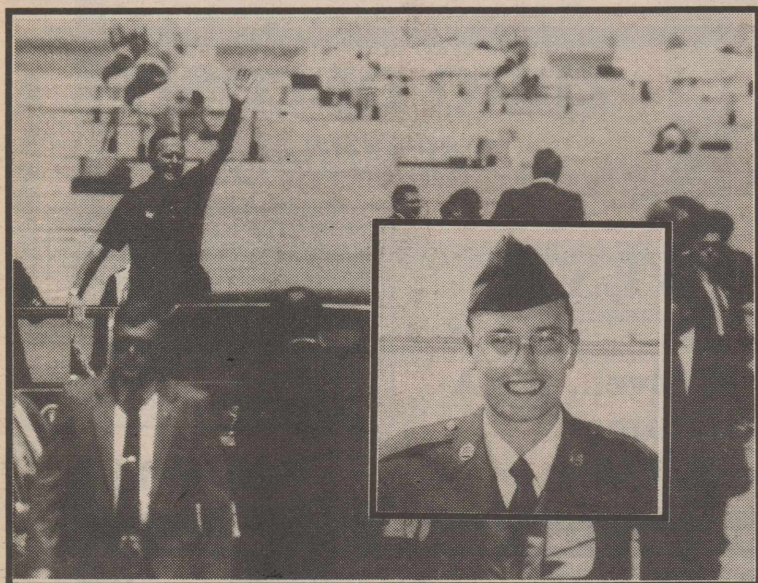

When President George Bush stopped at Reese last week, the receiving line began with Col. David Love, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, and extended to some dozen more individuals from the base and local community. But when it came time for his departure, there were only two people standing at the base of the stairs leading to Air Force One to say goodbye to the president: Colonel Love and Airman Bakken.

"Colonel Love explained that I'd been here just two days," said Airman Bakken. "He wanted the president to meet the most junior person on base. I saluted him, then shook his hand."

"Very nice to meet you, Airman Bakken," President Bush said. "Where you from?" When he answered, "Iowa," the president said, "I was close to Iowa today — went to South Dakota."

With still one more stop to make before heading back to Washington, D.C., the president said goodbye to Colonel Love and Airman Bakken. Reflecting on the fleeting moment, the last thing the young airman said to the departing president summed up his feelings on meeting his commander in chief, "Sir, it was an honor to meet you."

ESL class offered

An "English as a Second Language" class will be offered Monday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. in the Family Support Center classroom. There is no fee for the class, and materials are furnished.

"If your primary language is not English and you are having a difficult time speaking and understanding it, then a class on English as a second language, or ESL, may be helpful," said Reynalda Schroeder, program coordinator.

According to Mrs. Schroeder, the adult education class is designed to improve a non-English speaking person's proficiency in reading, writing, sentence structure and speaking everyday English. The class is designed to help individuals acquire an effective use of the English language, which will enable them to more easily adapt to military family life and the American culture.

For more information, call Mrs. Schroeder at 6494.

Program challenges kids to say no

The prevention of substance use among school-aged children is a major concern in our community, as it is elsewhere in the nation. To address this problem, the 64th Security Police Squadron is presenting a substance use prevention program entitled DARE, or Drug Abuse Resistance Education, for students within the Frenship school district.

SSgt. Robert Colosimo, who runs the program, is in the third week of teaching DARE classes to sixth grade students. He will teach the class two days a week for 17 weeks.

"The program is going great. The kids are real receptive to the program and the school has been fantastic," he said. "There is no doubt about it that the program works. The kids look forward to the classes."

Sergeant Colosimo, who recently graduated from the DARE America training program, said the curriculum includes such topics as the eight ways to say no to drugs, peer pressure, self-esteem, assertiveness, social influences contributing to the use of drugs and positive alternatives to drug use.

"I have gotten more and more questions from the kids, which tells me that they're really interested in what's going on," he said.

Sergeant Colosimo will also provide a program for parents and work with them to ensure children are well-informed regarding the dangers of drug use.

"I think the program is actually doing what it set out to do," he said. "The long term goal is to prepare the kids on how to resist drugs and alcohol. If even one of these kids is helped, then it's well worth the effort."

For information call Sergeant Colosimo at 6261.

Top volunteers of quarter selected

The top military and civilian volunteers of the quarter were cited recently with "Helping Hands" awards.

SSgt. Stuart Stanfield, 64th Security Police Squadron, and Louis Ward, 64th Medical Squadron, were singled out for their efforts in volunteer activities during the past quarter.

During the quarter, Sergeant Stanfield helped raise over $100,000 for the Children's Hospital through the Lubbock

Children's Network Telethon. He's involved with Boy Scout Post 458, Girl Scout Post 263, Explorer Post 2864 (law enforcement) as a merit badge counselor, teaching wilderness survival skills and finger printing, and is a coach for Reese youth basketball and Lubbock Little League baseball. He also teaches communication and computer skills to underprivileged children at the Lubbock Goodwill Center and has played the part of McGruff promoting child safety at the Reese Easter Seal's "Camp I Can" and Reese Elementary's summer safety program.

"Sergeant Stanfield is a truly exceptional volunteer," said Capt. Gerard Jolivet, 64th Security Police Squadron commander. "He has unselfishly given a great deal of time, effort and energy to the community and is truly deserving of the award."

Mr. Ward volunteered 245 hours of his time over the past quarter. During the facility manager's absence for a week in May and a week in June, Mr. Ward maintained a balanced temperature when three fourths of the hospital's air conditioning system failed. He took apart and sterilized all of the hospital's ice machines and now has them set up on a preventive maintenance schedule. He has also painted the new hospital commander's office and is painting the hallways and door jams throughout the hospital. He has helped landscaped the hospital grounds and has assisted in running computer cables throughout the hospital.

"It doesn't matter what task he is asked to do, you can depend on it being done in a speedy and professional manner," said Jerry Jones, hospital facilities manager.

"Mr. Ward is worth his weight in gold."

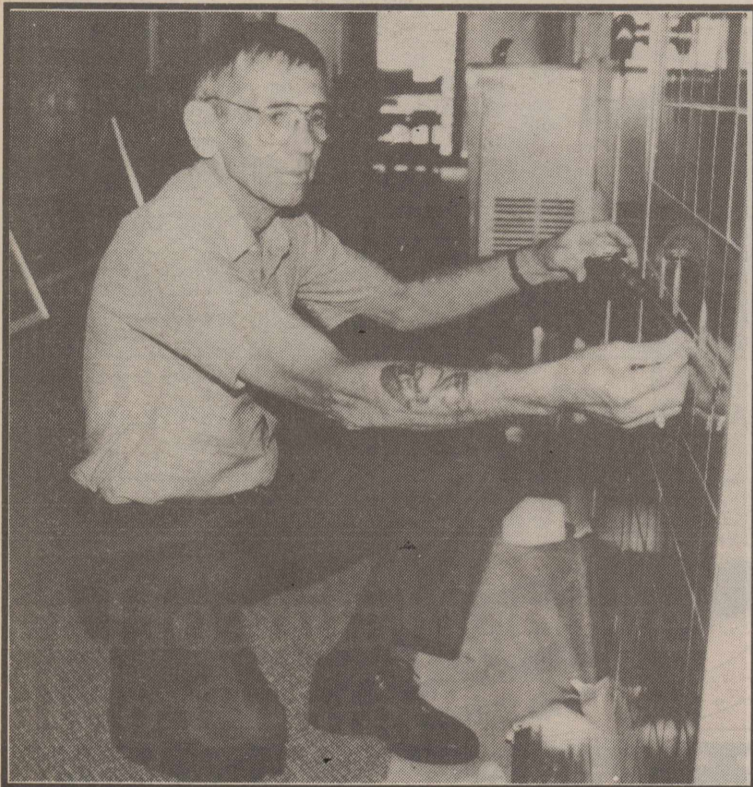

"Customer service has increased in many areas where it wouldn't have if weren't for the volunteers," said Phil Thierry, Family Support Center director.

"Volunteers play a very important role in customer service to support the wing's mission."

According to Mr. Thierry, volunteerism is probably the highest it has been in recent years. He noted however, that there is always room for more volunteers.

Anyone interested in volunteering can call 3305.
