64th CS earns command honor

The 64th Communications Squadron is the winner of the 1992 ATC Maintenance Effectiveness Award for communications and computer system activities (small category).

According to the CS commander, the award is the result of a lot of work by a lot of people.

"A lot of extra time and work went into this," said Capt. James Williams. "Different individuals had their hands in different projects during the year, but it was a squadron-wide effort that won this award."

One way CS members took initiative was through several self-help projects during the year. For example, they installed a new supervisor of flying position in the air traffic control tower, which is credited with "greatly enhancing" flight safety.

Another major self-help effort was the "VORTAC" antenna system removal, which was part of a three-phase upgrade project.

They also replaced a base public address system, which had become a "maintenance nightmare," and recently handled a relocation of the base communication antenna from atop the water tower. The antenna had to be relocated so the tower could be painted.

Worker initiative was the key to many CS projects.

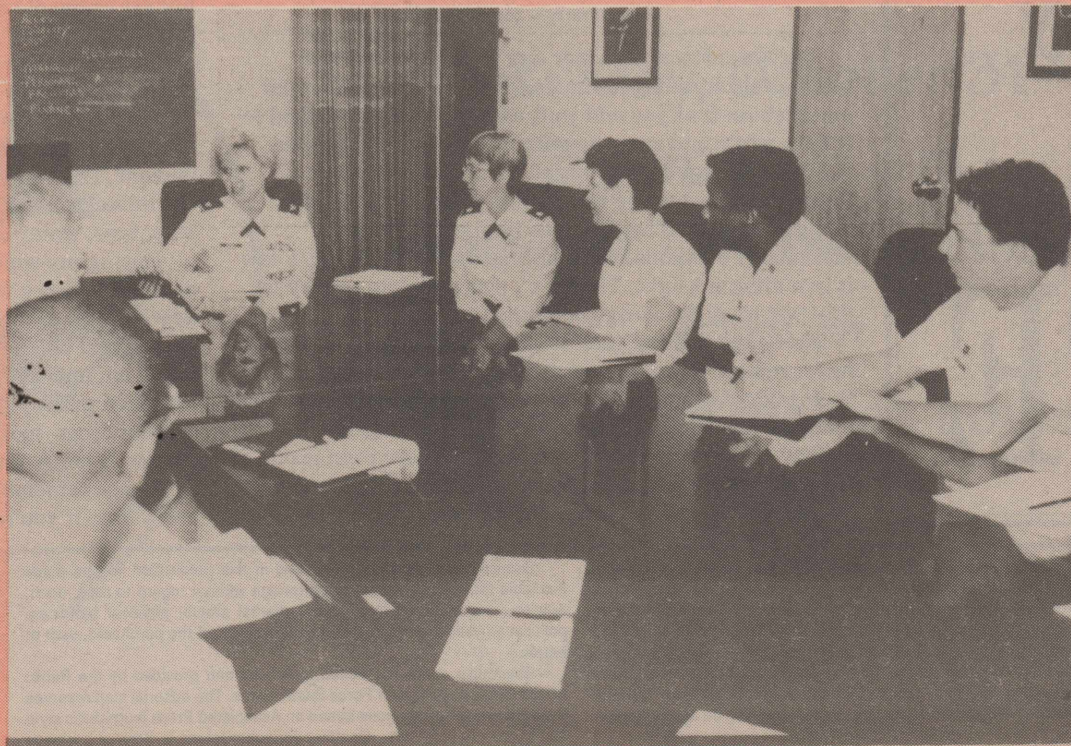

"People suggested a lot of smarter ways we could do business," said Captain Williams. "This really falls in line with the Quality Air Force program, and the ramifications have been very positive."

CS will now represent ATC at the Air Force competition for this award.

QUALITY AIR FORCE

For the next several weeks, the 64th FTW Quality Office will describe for you some of the quality tools available.

Probably the most common tool used for generating ideas is "brainstorming." Most of us have used this technique at one time or another.

BRAINSTORMING

What it is:

Brainstorming is a group technique for generating a "shopping list" of ideas about a specific problem or topic. It can help you:

- Generate a variety of ideas in a short time.
- Produce new and creative ideas.

Brainstorming is used solely for generating ideas; it does not involve analysis.

How to do it:

The goal of brainstorming is to generate ideas. Before you start, make sure everyone in your group understands the importance of postponing judgments until after the brainstorming session is completed.

- Write the problem or topic on a chalkboard or flipchart where all participants can see it.
- Write all ideas on the board and do as little editing as possible.
- Number each idea for future reference.
- Use one of the following brainstorming techniques: structured brainstorming, free-form brainstorming, or silent brainstorming.

In structured brainstorming:

- Solicit one idea from each person in sequence.
- Participants who don't have an idea at the moment may say "pass."
- A complete round of passes ends the brainstorming session.
- The advantage of structured brainstorming is that each person has an equal chance to participate, regardless of rank or personality.
- The disadvantage of structured brainstorming is that it lacks spontaneity and can be somewhat rigid.

In free-form (or unstructured) brainstorming:

- Participants simply contribute ideas as they come to mind.
- The advantage of free-form brainstorming is that participants can build off each other's ideas. The atmosphere is very relaxed.

- The disadvantage of free-form brainstorming is that the less assertive or lower ranking participants may not contribute at all.

An ideal approach is to combine these two methods. Begin the session with structured brainstorming and finish up with a period of unstructured brainstorming.

In silent brainstorming:

- Have participants write ideas individually on sticky-back notes or small slips of paper.

- Collect the papers and post them for all to see.

The advantage of silent brainstorming is that it prevents individuals from making disruptive "analysis" comments during the brainstorming session.

- The disadvantage of silent brainstorming is that the group loses the synergy that comes from an open session.

Silent brainstorming is best used in combination with other brainstorming techniques.

The result of a brainstorming session is a list of ideas. If this list is too long, the group can boil it down using one of the decision-making tools which we'll describe in a later article.

Points to remember:

Never judge ideas as they are generated. The goal of brainstorming is to generate a lot of ideas in a short time. Analysis of these ideas is a separate process, to be done later.

Don't quit at the first lull. All brainstorming sessions reach lulls, which are uncomfortable for the participants. Research indicates that most of the best ideas occur during the last part of a session. Try to encourage the group to push through at least two or three lulls.

Try to write down all of the ideas exactly as they were presented. When you condense an idea to one or two words for ease of recording, you are doing analysis. Analysis should be done later.

Encourage outrageous ideas. While these ideas may not be practical, they may start a flow of creative ideas that can be used. This can help you break through a lull.

Try to have a diverse group. Involve process owners, customers and suppliers to obtain a diverse set of ideas from several perspectives. (Courtesy of "The ESD Process Improvement Guide.")

Energy conservation is vital

by John Kain
base energy manager

I saw a cartoon the other day which showed four individuals standing around and pointing at each other — one of those that you add your own caption to. I looked at it for a while and came up with the caption, "Who is in charge of energy in your area". There are two ways of looking at this cartoon to try and understand the idea being portrayed. The first idea implies the "not me" attitude by everyone pointing fingers at each other. I saw it in a different light. The idea I was trying to convey is that we are all in charge of energy.

As we enter fiscal year 1993 we need to look at ways to improve how we do business. Everyone will be looking at their budget constraints, manpower availability and work load. I would like to add one more item to that list — facility energy conservation. Energy conservation is one of the most overlooked "targets of opportunity" and needs to be planned well in advance of the others. Reese's energy budget is one of the largest budgets on base and it affects manpower and work load.

Every day I go out to a facility and just walk around to see how energy is being used. On the average, heating and air conditioning use 40 percent of the annual energy budget, lighting another 22 to 25 percent. That leaves approximately 35 percent for all the miscellaneous items like computers, copiers, coffee pots, fans, water coolers, refrigerators, etc.

During my walk through I have noticed several potential energy wasting operations. Offices which provided space for three people now only contain one person and all the lights are on; unoccupied offices with lights on; and multiple coffee pots. The list could be extended greatly. We all should be more aware of our surroundings, look for energy wasting items and become our own energy managers.

Please remember to be aware of the energy you use every day. If you're not using it, shut it off.

Reese exceeds CFC goal

Reese surpassed its 1992 Combined Federal Campaign goal of $82,000 by donating $82,529 as of Tuesday. That total represents 100.6 percent of goal, and it could rise before the campaign ends today, according to Lt. Col. Harvey Farr, wing CFC project officer. He described the campaign's success as a total team effort, involving senior leadership commitment and a superlative sense of caring by all Reese personnel.

"There was super support from all the units on base — operations, support, medical and tenant — everybody really pitched in," Colonel Farr said. "The individual key workers and the loan executives did a super job, too."

Each year, the campaign gives military members and other federal employees a chance to donate to any of a wide variety of charitable institutions. People who donate also have a variety of payment options, such as paying directly or through allotment.

Colonel Farr said this year the base goal was realistic and was also considerably higher than many other bases in the command. "In actual dollars, we contributed more than most of the other units," he said. "Thanks to all Reese people, military and civilian, for showing once again that we're No.1."

Honor guard names members of year

(Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Airman Novak attaches a rifle sling.

A member of the 64th Mission Support Squadron was named member of the year during the Reese Honor Guard's annual banquet Saturday in the Enlisted Open Mess.

SrA. Michelle Novak took the top honor based on her "leadership skills, military bearing, overall knowledge and sacrifices made for the benefit of the team." She also earned an "extra mile award," given to members whose "dedication and sacrifice" have set them apart.

During her three-year tenure in the honor guard, Airman Novak has completed more than 300 details.

Annual awards are voted upon by honor guard members. Other awardees this year included:

□ Sgt. John Wilson, 64th Logistics Squadron, earned the military excellence award. He was cited for his outstanding attitude, military bearing, leadership and adherence to uniform standards. He also earned an extra mile award, having completed more than 200 details during his tenure.

□ Sgt. William Carey, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, won the motivation award for "continually displaying a positive attitude toward the Air Force and the honor guard" and for "motivating others and fostering high morale," according to honor guard officials.

The guest speaker at this year's event was SMSgt. Timothy Dickens, superintendent of the Air Force Presidential Honor Guard. During his remarks, Sergeant Dickens commented on the pleasure he finds in "seeing there are still sharp people out there who are willing to do the sometimes thankless job" of being on the honor guard team.

In addition, Sgt. Greg Spraggins took first place in one of the photography categories and second in the sportswriting competition.

MSSQ names best

The 64th Mission Support Squadron has selected its top performers of the year. They are:

□ MSgt. Keith Close, senior NCO category.

□ TSgt. Kerry Eason, NCO.

□ SrA. Darryl Karp, airman.

Also, MSSQ has named their top people for the past quarter. They are:

□ Sergeant Close, senior NCO.

□ SrA. Miguel Baca, airman.

Reese captains excel at SOS

A pair of wing officers were recently among the tops in their class at Squadron Officer School.

Capt. Jefferson Dunn and Capt. Michael Kennedy were distinguished graduates for SOS Class 92-E at Maxwell AFB, Ala., graduating in the top 9 percent of their 580-member class.

The seven-week course is the first level of professional military education for officers. Designed to enhance professional development, it consists of four phases: academics, writing, speaking and leadership.

Safety names quarter's best

A 64th Mission Support Squadron member is the winner of the quarterly individual ground safety award.

Second Lt. Teresa Forest, the MSSQ unit safety representative, was credited with turning "a barely satisfactory program into an excellent one." Initiatives on her part included both scheduled and spot inspections around MSSQ, consistently following up on mishap reports to prevent repeat occurrences, and a rewrite of self-inspection guidelines.

Halloween activities set for this weekend

The traditional trick-or-treating in Reese Village will be allowed from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Saturday, according to 64th Security Police Squadron officials. In addition, the SPs said that only cars with base decals will be allowed into the village at these hours.

Other events scheduled in conjunction with Halloween include:

□ A Halloween carnival will be held by Reese scouts from 6 to 9:30 p.m. today at Reese Elementary School. Admission is two cans of food, which will go to the Lubbock Food Bank. Game tickets will be 10 cents each and will benefit Girl Scouts and Cub Scouts on base.

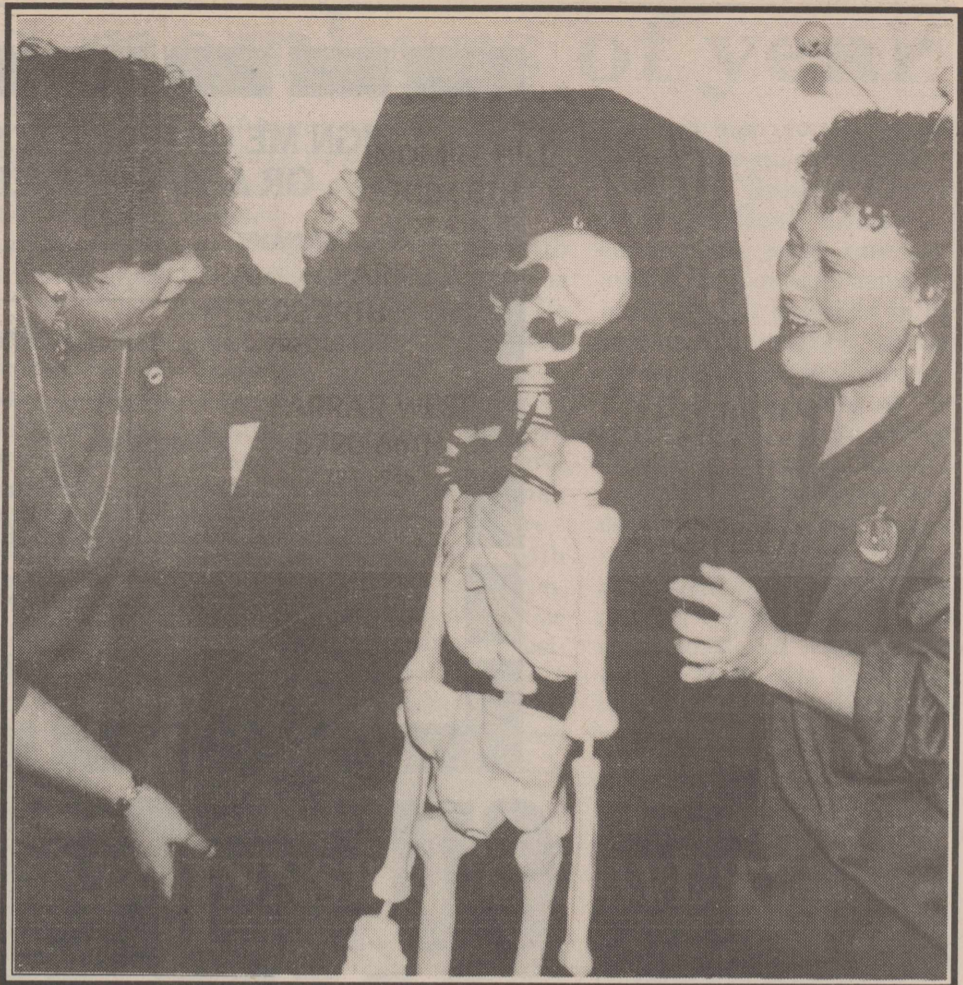

Food items will include corn dogs, frito pies, nachos and more.

□ A "monster mash" bash, haunted house and carnival will be held from 6 to 11 p.m. Saturday at 100 and 102 Mitchell Blvd. The haunted house will be $1; booths will be 25 cents. Security police will be on hand to check Halloween candy.

□ A "spook house" sponsored by the West Carlisle Volunteer Fire Department will be at 40th Street and Frankford Avenue. The house is $3 per person, $5 for couples, $2 for kids 6-12, and free for kids under 6 who are with a paying adult. The hours are 7:30 to midnight tonight, and beginning at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday.

Security police advised parents to have their children walk in groups, wear light or reflective clothing, carry a flashlight, and avoid walking in the streets unless crossing from one side to another. They added that parents should accompany small children, and they should check their children's candy if it is not checked by the SPs.

Holiday treats can 'sour' the teeth

by Capt. (Dr.) Michael P. Najera
Reese Dental Clinic

Despite what you might believe, Halloween doesn't have to be a dental nightmare. In fact, Dr. Herbert Simmons, the consumer adviser for the American Dental Association, even suggests that you let your kids eat as much candy as they want for the week after Halloween.

As you might expect, though, there is a catch. After that week, Dr. Simmons recommends discarding the rest of the candy. He bases this on research that suggests tooth decay results less from what you eat than how often you eat it. Fortunately, after a week of unlimited candy even kids usually tire of it. If continued for more than a week, candy consumption harms your children's teeth and can very possibly result in cavities. Here are some tips to minimize damage and keep the "cavity creeps" away:

□ Avoid sticky, chewy candy. Teach your kids to avoid caramel and toffee.

□ Lollipops and other hard candy are also bad because they keep sugar too close to the teeth for long periods.

□ Candy is less harmful if eaten after meals. Saliva produced in chewing dinner helps clear sugar from the mouth.

To minimize tooth decay throughout the year, the Reese dental clinic also recommends limiting the consumption of sugary, sticky foods and avoiding snacks between meals. And, as always, they strongly encourage regular dental check-ups.

Mr. Perez (left) is assisted by Mr. Manfre in using the nationwide job listing. The listing is one of a variety of transition assistance services provided by the Reese Transition Office to people who are separating or retiring from the military.

Tapping into the job market

Reese Transition Office helps people begin new careers

A program at Reese is helping retirees and other separating military members prepare to TAP into the civilian world.

TAP, or Transition Assistance Program, brings members up to date on education, government and private sector employment programs, medical and dental coverage, financial planning and relocation assistance that is available to them or that they will face outside the military.

The program has been ongoing at Reese since October 1991 as part of a five-year program established to make the transition from the military to the civilian sector easier for people.

Over 450 clients have been assisted by the Reese Transition Office since January.

"The main focus of the program is to provide the member and his or her family with techniques, confidence and know-how for successful job hunting," said Mario Manfre, transition program manager here. "I think the results we are getting go to show that this isn't just another one of those programs. It is doing what it was intended to do...get results."

Jose J. Perez, a recently retired master sergeant, went through the first TAP class at Reese in February. When he retired Oct. 9, he had a job waiting on him.

"At first I was apprehensive about the program because of the drawdown. I thought it was just another program you have to go through before you get out," said Mr. Perez. "When I got into it I was shocked by how detailed they covered the different job opportunities and benefits. It really put me on

According to Mr. Manfre, the program helps members write professional resumes, as well as link members up with the Transition Bulletin Board and the Defense Outplacement Referral System.

TBB is a computerized classified job list that is updated daily at the Reese Family Support Center. Members and their families can scan the list for actual job openings nationwide and contact employers directly.

The DORS program is a mini-resume system that matches qualifications and desired work locations with requirements of prospective employers nationwide.

Mr. Perez said the program not only put him in the right direction, but also helped his family prepare for the changes ahead.

"They (transition office) did everything they could to help us prepare," he said. "I would advise anyone who's getting out of the military to go through the program. It builds a foundation of what you need that you otherwise wouldn't know about. It's made a real difference."

The next TAP workshop will be held Dec. 8 through 10.

To be eligible for TAP, you must be within 180 days of separation, retirement or departure from the area.

"I think we're going to see a lot more success stories from users of the program," said Mr. Manfre. "We are evaluating the quality of the program by the results we are getting, and so far, the results are excellent."

For more information call Mr. Manfre or Pamela Appell at 3305 or visit the Reese Transition Office in Bldg. 310.

"The main focus of the program is to provide the member and his or her family with techniques, confidence and know-how for successful job hunting."

Aid society announces scholarships

The Air Force Aid Society awarded more than $5 million in education grants for school year 1992-93.

The education grant program, begun four years ago, provides $1,000 grants to sons and daughters of active duty, retired or deceased Air Force members, retired reservists over the age of 60, and Title 10 reservists on extended active duty (all other reserve and ANG are not eligible). This year, 5,003 young men and women received grants to help them pursue their educational goals.

MSgt. Don Minnis, Reese Family Support Center, said several Reese people benefited from these grants last year, and applications for this year are available.

The program was initiated by the society's board of directors in 1988 in response to the rising cost of education, especially for the transient Air Force community. In its first year, the program was restricted to children of active duty personnel and 804 awards were provided. But the overwhelming response, reflected by the number of applicants, led society officials to expand the program to children in other categories. The number of possible awards has increased from the original 804 to 5,003 this year; and the society expects to award another 5,000 education grants for the upcoming academic year.

Dory Larkin, the society's education program manager, though very pleased with the overall response to the program, did voice one concern. According to Ms. Larkin, "Too many applicants did not complete the entire application process. Out of 9,988 initial applications received last year, nearly 1,900 failed to include a financial statement and were therefore automatically disqualified from selection for a grant." Ms. Larkin continued by stressing that "it is premature for families to disqualify themselves based on past experience with college financial aid systems."

Applications for the Air Force Aid Society's 1993-94 Education Grant Program can be obtained by contacting Sergeant Minnis at 6395 or by writing to: "HQ AFAS, Education Department, 1745 Jefferson Davis Highway, Suite 202, Arlington, VA 22202."

Youth center holds opening

SUMMERTIME VILLA

(Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Sergeant Stalker takes inventory of mobility bags.

Quality performer

This week's quality performer is MSgt. Robert Stalker, a 17-year service veteran assigned to the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron.

A native of Philadelphia, Sergeant Stalker is in training to be the NCO in charge of the Prime BEEF section, overseeing one 50-member and two 12-member mobility teams. He said his new job is a complete change from his old duties.

"It was a real challenge when I first started training," he said. "But I'm starting to feel comfortable with it."

Sergeant Stalker's career has taken him back and forth between the Pacific and the states. Past assignments include Homestead AFB, Fla.; Osan AB, Korea; MacDill AFB, Fla.; Kadena AB, Japan; and Whiteman AFB, Mo. He's been here for two years.

All that traveling hasn't stopped him from pursuing an education. He has an associate's degree in applied science-ecological controls from the Community College of the Air Force, and he's also completed NCO Leadership School and NCO Academy. He is currently enrolled in the Senior NCO Academy by correspondence.

He hopes to attend the senior academy in residence eventually and he plans to pursue a degree in computer science after he finishes his military career.

In his free time, he enjoys reading, music, sports and computers. He and his wife, Wena, have two children — Jay, 17, and Chris, 14.

17 Reese airmen among 7,272 graduating CCAF

This month, the Community College of the Air Force awarded 7,272 associate in applied science degrees to Air Force enlisted students.

Seventeen CCAF graduates from Reese will be awarded diplomas Nov. 16 at 3 p.m. at the Enlisted Open Mess.

CCAF students are comprised of active-duty Air Force, Air National Guard, and the Air Force Reserve. This October class, in combination with the April class, adds up to 13,343 degrees conferred this year to Air Force people around the world.

A total of 110,848 two-year degrees in occupationally-rated Air Force career fields have been earned from the "enlisted person's college," since the college began in 1971.

"Over 7,000 degrees in a single year speaks volumes about the quality of our enlisted personnel. More importantly, it represents increased capabilities which translate into the Air Force readiness," said Lt. Col. Johnny M. Collins, deputy commander.

The CCAF is a system made up of the CCAF staff at Maxwell AFB, Ala., affiliated schools, including professional military education, and education services officers Air Force wide. CCAF is accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, Commission on Colleges. (ATC News Service)

From YOUR perspective

(Editor's note: The following is Wing Commander Col. David Love's policy regarding the Careline.)

As wing commander, I need to hear things from your perspective. Your inputs and suggestions can help Reese remain the pacesetter in the command. If you see something good, call me. If you have a problem that you feel needs my attention, call me. First, however, consider using your chain of command.

You may remain anonymous if you wish; all problems that are called in anonymously will be investigated and corrected if need be, but they will not be printed in the Roundup. Individuals who leave their name and number can get a direct response, and calls that are of base-wide interest will be printed in the Roundup.

Calls can be made to the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273.

Asbestos fumes

I just went over to the shoppette and there was a notice on the door that said it was closed due to asbestos fumes. I was wondering if proper care is being taken to get rid of them and why they occurred; I didn't know asbestos had fumes.

On the day you went there, contractors doing the shoppette/package store renovation were using adhesive to install wall paneling on the cooler. The facility was closed at 4:10 p.m. because of strong fumes from the adhesive.

The sign you saw said the closure was due to "adhesive" fumes, not asbestos fumes. We are sorry for any inconvenience the closure caused.

Gym privileges

I'm calling about after-hour gym privileges being revoked. Is there a way to continue this privilege for people who are responsible, take care of the gym equipment and fill out the proper paperwork? I'm in a routine I don't want to quit, and there are other people that use it after hours as well.

I'm sorry the change disrupted your routine. We've tried the after-hours program for more than two years and encountered many problems that we're unable to resolve. They've included people working out without partners, loss of equipment, the facility being left unsecured and contract cleaners not being able to do their job because of people working out.

We have extended the opening hour to 6:30 a.m. for people who want to work out before duty hours. We are also considering staying open an hour later if attendance can justify the manpower needed.

Retiree days well received

I just want to say that 2nd Lt. Teresa Forest did an excellent job as a tour guide during Retiree Appreciation Days. She was very patient with the folks there, answering their questions and so forth, and I just wanted to say thanks.

This is the kind of feedback we enjoy! Lieutenant Forest worked hard for several months with the volunteers at the retiree affairs office to plan that event.

While we at Reese try to support retirees as much as possible throughout the year, we set aside a couple of days to devote to retirees and show them how much they mean to the base community. Thanks for calling; your call reinforces those efforts.

Parking at the vets

The parking situation at the base veterinarian's is terrible. I'm handicapped, and I had to park a block away. I had to circle four or five times just to find that spot.

Our apologies. You are correct, and we have fixed this problem. We had a work order in to put in a handicapped spot, but we were slow to make it happen. Thank you for pointing that out.

Locked out by housing

Housing officials came into my home in Reese Village today, without police escort, while nobody was home. They didn't have my permission to do this.

They locked the door behind them when they left, which locked my kids out when they came home from school. We were all stranded until 5:30 p.m. when my husband came home.

I'd like to know why they can get away with that.

Let me give you some background on what happened. Several weeks ago, a proposed settlement was reached with the contractor for the Phase II housing renovation, his insurance company and the government. The settlement stated that the contractor would replace the floor covering in all the homes that have red or blue marks bleeding through the vinyl.

However, to satisfy the insurance company, a complete inspection of all the Phase II houses had to be done. The insurance adjustor made a house-to-house inspection and found only half the residents home. The day before the adjustor was due to return, all the people whose homes were missed the first time were phoned at work or home regarding the inspections.

When we were unable to reach some of the residents, we should have contacted their commanders and made sure we contacted those people before entering their homes. We didn't do this and we apologize. The inspection was necessary but our handling of it was wrong.

In the future, housing personnel will not enter any home without prior permission. Sorry for our shortcomings.

Intramural football playoffs get started

The base intramural flag football playoffs began Wednesday and will continue through Nov 5.

The playoffs had been scheduled to match up the top three teams in each division, plus the next two best records, regardless of division.

According to Gary Grant, physical fitness center specialist, at the end of the season, there were so many of the third place teams and teams with final records of 4-6 or 4-7 that all teams will be allowed to compete in the playoffs.

However, four teams were given a first round bye. They are the 54th Flying Training Squadron "A" and "B" teams, 64th Logistics Squadron and the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron.

HOOOPS: Lady Rattlers open play Thursday in South Plains College tournament

The Reese Lady Rattlers will start off the 1992-93 season Thursday in the South Plains College Tournament at South Plains College, Levelland, Texas.

The Lady Rattlers ended the 1991-92 season undefeated, building an impressive 28-0 record.

According to the Lady Rattlers coach, Sgt. Frank Parker, the competition will be pretty tough this year because the team's schedule lists many college teams as season opponents.

"We lost five of the ladies from last year's team, all having NCAA experience," said Sergeant Parker. "It's going to be tough to match last year's perfect record, but with the team's willingness to work and enthusiasm, we should more than compensate for the difference."

Last season, the Lady Rattlers played in a downtown league, and against other bases.

This year, they will play mainly against other military bases and college teams.

"We think our teams have shown in the past that they are determined to be the best," said Sergeant Parker. "The only way to find out if you're the best is to play against the best. That's what we are aiming to do this year."

Five of the team's 13 players returned from last year's roster.

"Our main focus right now is to bring the new players up to speed with our style of play," said Sergeant Parker, noting the team's philosophy of the players looking to take the shot first and to pass second.

"We don't teach the players to be selfish with the ball, but to take the shot if they have it, which will open up the middle," said Sergeant Parker. "From then on, everything else will take care of itself."

The Lady Rattlers currently have about 28 games scheduled for the season, which includes the base intramural league.

The team began practicing around the first of October, setting its goal on starting the season off with a win.

"A lot of people are gonna take them for granted early," he said. "These girls are rough, and they can play ball. We're out to have some fun this year, but we're gonna beat a lot of teams while we're doing it."
