SGLI increasing Members must choose an option

WASHINGTON—Servicemembers can apply for additional Servicemen's Group Life Insurance coverage up to $200,000 beginning Dec. 1.

The Veterans Benefits Act of 1992, signed by the president Oct. 29, raises the maximum amount of available SGLI coverage from $100,000. The additional $100,000 coverage is optional insurance requiring a voluntary election.

Every member on base must fill out a new form regardless of whether or not they want to change their coverage, according to 2nd Lt. Todd Phillips, chief of customer assistance in the Reese CBPO. New forms are not in yet, but are expected soon. Wing members can call 3276 to check on the forms before going to CBPO.

Cost for the new SGLI coverage will remain at 8 cents per $1,000, for a maximum of $16 per month for $200,000.

It is in the members' interest to apply for the increased SGLI coverage before Jan. 1, Air Force officials said, because they anticipate a large number of people will want to increase their SGLI coverage between Dec. 1 and March 31, when the conversion period ends.

Applications taken after March 31 will require a statement of health, as required under the present SGLI program.

In addition to the SGLI change, Veterans Group Life Insurance also is increased from $100,000 to $200,000.

Under the present law, VGLI provides a five-year, nonrenewable, insurance protection. But the new law changes VGLI to a five-year, renewable term insurance with an option to convert to a permanent policy with one of the insurance underwriters. The change also allows people to review VGLI coverage at the end of each five-year period.

Current age-based premiums for VGLI will remain unchanged. Effective date of these changes is Dec. 1. (AFNS)

Thanksgiving

Messages

by Dr. Donald B. Rice
secretary of the Air Force

Thanksgiving is a special time for Americans and particularly for members of the armed forces who have helped our country win a hard-earned peace. As we pause to count our blessings, however, we remember that there are still places around the world where peace remains elusive.

While we are thankful for America's blessings, we also remember that at this moment, Air Force people are on duty in many troubled places, reaching out across the globe to extend America's helping hand. The sacrifices and courage of Air Force people continue to make the difference between life and death for thousands — and are a credit to our country and our way of life.

I'd like to extend my gratitude and best wishes on this special day for a happy Thanksgiving to Air Force people and their families everywhere around the world.

by Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Ashy
commander, Air Training Command

Thanksgiving is a special time for family and friends, and a time to reflect on that for which we are grateful. It's a particularly special time for members of the world's best Air Force to take time to pause and reflect on the momentous changes which have occurred in our world and our contribution toward peace. And as we give thanks for America's blessings, let's not forget that we still have members faithfully serving across the globe to guarantee the peace of our great nation, and their families back home awaiting their return.

Sue joins me in sending you the very best Thanksgiving wishes, and in thanking you for your dedicated service.

by Col. David R. Love
64th FTW commander

The Thanksgiving weekend is the time when we reflect on accomplishments and successes of the past year. It is also a time for gathering of family and friends.

This is the third and final fall holiday for 1992. Weather may play a large part in travel and outdoor activity plans as conditions can change from good to poor in a matter of hours. This time of year, you might expect rain, sleet and snow to slow your travel plans.

As you entertain this weekend please remember the word "moderation" should be part of your physical activities, eating and consumption of alcohol. Exceeding your capacity in physical activities, such as pick-up games of football or making that extra run on the ski slopes, can potentially produce serious injuries. As for overconsumption of alcohol, the consequences of these actions are severe and can be avoided in every case. Watch out for your family and friends.

A holiday is the time to enjoy family and friends, not the time to have a mishap. I expect to see all Reese personnel back to work safely after the holiday.

May the holiday be a safe and happy one for you and your family. Happy Thanksgiving!

Reese vision: "Reese people leading the way in supporting and training professional officers and quality pilots for the Air Force."

QUALITY AIR FORCE

by Col. Dennis R. Samic
ATC Financial Management and Comptroller

In the Air Training Command financial management community, we used quality improvement principles to change a long-standing but cumbersome process.

Student pilots maintaining cross-country flight and navigational proficiency are required to use a flight order whenever the aircraft is flown. If the trip qualified for reimbursement of expenses in a temporary duty status, separate travel orders also had to be authorized and processed for payment.

Most of the pilots were issued blanket travel orders, but this still strapped them and management with extra paper work as these had to be endorsed with an estimated cost of each trip.

The accountants and resource advisors needed a better process to control valid commitments and obligations, and easily determine how much funding was available at any given time to the flying squadron commander.

We formed a Process Action Team with our counterparts in the deputy chiefs of staff for information management and operations and readiness. The team documented the requirements of our various customers — the pilots, squadron funds managers, wing commanders and accounting managers — and then dissected the process we were using to satisfy them.

We clearly needed a streamlined process, but one which meets our legal requirement to accurately reflect obligation and protect against potential fraud, waste and abuse.

The team reviewed the criteria used to determine whether flights were funded or unfunded; examined the critical elements of order processing, commitment accounting, and voucher handling; and identified ways to eliminate steps which added no value to the entire process.

Finally, the team decided to combine the flight order and the travel order into one, dual-purpose form.

We selected Reese as our test site, and asked base customers to use the new form and its accompanying procedures. They made recommendations which further reduced administrative workload and improved the process. Based on customer feedback, the team revised both the form and the procedures before they were adopted for command-wide use.

The flying squadron commanders now control both their cross-country flying and their funds with a single document — ATC Form 71.

The new form is processed in the same manner as other travel orders, thus creating a positive commitment of government funds. It eliminates special estimating and dramatically reduces the number of individual and blanket travel orders required.

This is a classic case of Quality Improvement. Knowledgeable people used quality principles and tools to streamline an important process. We now give our customers better service, while saving both money and time. (ATC News Service)

Enlisted award winners honored

Reese's top enlisted members of the year were named Saturday night during the annual enlisted awards banquet.

The winners in each category are:

MSgt. Keith Close

Senior NCO of the year

Sergeant Close, 64th Mission Support Squadron, is the program manager for the Reese Airman Leadership School. A native of New York, Sergeant Close's selection as senior NCO of the year comes on the heels of his winning the same award for the past quarter.

Sergeant Close began the year working T-1A issues. He was credited with developing the T-1A training schedule to ensure that tools, classrooms, instructors, students and aircraft were all available for training. He identified shortages in these areas and came up with recommendations to correct these short-falls.

Later in the year, Sergeant Close moved to the Reese Professional Military Education Center, where his efforts again went towards training improvements. He developed a comprehensive training guide for ALS instructors, and he video-taped all school lessons so that students and instructors could review them at a later date, if needed.

In his off-duty time, Sergeant Close is president of the Reese Elementary School Parent-Teacher Organization and the MSSQ Booster Club, an active member of the Reese Top Three Association and the NCO Academy Graduates Association, and a volunteer with "Contact Lubbock," a local crisis intervention agency.

TSgt. Joseph Thompson

NCO of the year

Sergeant Thompson, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, is NCO in charge of contract management. Squadron officials said his attention to detail and "superb" knowledge of construction practices have enabled him to identify numerous improvements that have saved thousands of dollars and eliminated potential safety problems.

His knowledge of contracting and construction procedures was so good that his commander selected him to work at the 64th Contracting Squadron when they experienced a shortage of administrators during the year.

Sergeant Thompson's on-duty efforts weren't the only ones that drew notice. He was selected as the base athlete of the year for his participation in squadron sports.

He is also a member of the CES Booster Club and a volunteer with Special Olympics. He works closely with the youth basketball league on base and he organizes and monitors the CES fitness program.

Editor's note: This week's "One on one" is with CMSAF Gary Pfingston, who was the guest speaker at the annual enlisted awards banquet Saturday.

You do a lot of traveling to different bases as chief master sergeant of the Air Force. From what you've seen, what's the current state of morale in the enlisted force in light of the ongoing cuts and the drawdown?

The morale's just as good as it's ever been. As a matter of fact, I think it's probably better. The people are tremendously motivated, dedicated and professional as they've ever been in spite of the uncertainty. They're doing a great job.

In talking to the people, is there any key issue or issues that are on their minds?

Nothing more than what's been on their minds for the last three years, and that's the question of what the Air Force is going to be like in the future and how it's going to pertain to them — will they continue to have the opportunity to stay in and advance in their career and so forth. The promotion rates are pretty much the same as they have been for the last couple of years.

What about the possibility of an early selective retirement board next year for senior NCOs?

A senior NCO SERB is something we're looking at. We may ultimately have no choice, what with the balancing and drawdown process. I don't see an urgency to do one real soon. It's another tool to draw the force down.

Do you see any repeat of any of the early out programs from earlier this year, such as the voluntary separation incentive or the special separation bonus?

Not in 1993. It was very well advertised that we were doing 1992 and 1993 drawdowns at the same time under VSI and SSB. So for 1993, we're rather stable. As for 1994, the process will be determined later.

What's the status of the new uniform. When can the average airman expect to see it at his or her base?

We will finish the test soon — we're winding it down right now as a matter of fact. The final decision on what the end product will look like will be made early next year, and the next step will be to enter into full-scale production. We hope to have the uniform available for purchase in 1994.

The new uniform has been incredibly well received. I'd estimate that 70 to 80 percent of the people like it.

What do you see as the greatest challenge for the enlisted force in the future?

First off, I see an Air Force in five years that's going to be a new Air Force, something people haven't seen in the past. It's not going to be a miniature version of the Air Force of the sixties, seventies or eighties. We have the opportunity to build a brand new Air Force, and we are doing just that.

I see the role of the enlisted member, and of the NCO and senior NCO, becoming more important in building and ensuring a higher quality Air Force than ever before. Although somewhat smaller, I still see an organized, trained, well-prepared and equipped organization, probably better than the Air Force has ever been.

What advice would you have for someone who's looking to make the Air Force a career?

Be totally involved. Understand the importance of the two types of performance — on the job and off the job. We're on the clock 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Be the best you can be in whatever your chosen field is.

Anything to add?

I appreciate the opportunity to be at Reese, and I'm honored to have been invited to address the outstanding enlisted performers of the year. It's indeed an honor and pleasure, and I want to thank everyone for this opportunity. And continued thanks to everyone for what they do for their organization and the Air Force.

CONEX

Reese warriors battle cold, aggressors during deployment to Reese West

More than 150 Reese warriors battled the cold and "enemy" attacks during a 72-hour deployment to Reese West last week.

The deployment, one of four contingency exercises (called CONEX) held here each year, tested the wing's ability to mobilize specified units and their respective abilities to operate in a remote location.

In this case, the remote location, was Reese West, an exercise camp area west of the flightline. Reese people deployed to the camp on Nov. 17 and returned on Nov. 20.

Maj. Melinda Edwards, Base Exercise Evaluation Team chief, said temperatures dipped to near freezing during the later stages of the deployment, but did not dampen the enthusiasm and professionalism of the exercise participants.

"The purpose of the CONEX is to simulate conditions as closely as possible to those units would encounter when actually deployed to a remote location," said Major Edwards. "The camp was basically self-contained with its own messing, exchange, and medical facilities."

The CONEX tested elements from the 64th Operations Group, 64th Support Group, wing staff agencies and the 64th Medical Squadron, with a series of actual and simulated exercises.

The exercise included aircrew rescue and recovery operations, air base security, site preparation and activation, runway repair, simulated air, mortar and chemical warfare attacks and emergency personnel actions.

TSgt. Victor Perkins, 64th CES, sees the CONEX through the visor of a chem gear mask.

Smoke rolls across Reese West (above) during a simulated air attack. Defensive procedures were part of the operations tested during the three-day deployment. CONEX participants don chem gear in preparation for an "enemy" attack.

CONEX participants pause to clean their mess gear in the hot water barrels at Camp West.

MSgt. William Pictum, 64th MWRS, smiles in the face of bitter cold, demonstrating the "can do" attitude evident throughout the CONEX.

Airman Zapata, 64th Operations Support Squadron, is an air traffic controller. During the year, he was given credit for helping with the safe recovery of more than 100 imperiled aircraft. His skills are such that he was selected to control air traffic during the last open house, which included the Thunderbirds, Golden Knights parachute team and more than 40 different aircraft.

He also provided input on the development of a more effective apprentice training program, which improved customer support.

Airman Zapata made great strides during the year in his education. He completed his associate's degree with Community College of the Air Force, and he finished 24 credits toward his bachelor's degree in business administration as well.

His efforts also went toward the local community. He supported a fundraiser for Big Brothers and Sisters, and he helped raise $1,500 for his squadron's newly formed booster club by working a booth at a local fair.

During the year, he earned the Gen. Gordon Blake Save Award for saving an imperiled aircraft, and he was the wing airman of the quarter for April through June.

MSgt. Joseph Slack
First sergeant of the year
Sergeant Slack is first sergeant for the 64th Medical Squadron.

During the year, Sergeant Slack was cited for always ensuring the people in his unit come first, helping unit members receive more than $5,000 from the Air Force Aid Society.

He also was praised for being a cohesive force in the squadron during several turbulent periods.

In addition, Sergeant Slack was described as "a gifted counselor whose recommendations are always on the mark."

His efforts also positively affected people outside the squadron.

He spearheaded the restoration of the Wolfforth Cemetery along with other members of the local Air Force

Sergeants Association chapter, making it a "place of honor for fallen veterans." The AFSA chapter, which Sergeant Slack is president of, was selected as small chapter of the year for AFSA Division 10.

He also served as co-chairman of the Special Olympics track and field games, managing more than 150 base volunteers.

He also is a member of the Area 17 Special Olympics Development and Planning Council, which planned events that raised more than $39,000 — the largest total in their history.

Sergeant Slack also helped gather donations to provide toys for the Reese Family Support Center playroom.

Quality performer

All Air Force members can say that their job is important, but not all can say that their job is sometimes a matter of life and death.

For A1C Ronald Soman, 64th Medical Squadron, the knowledge that his job can be just that is a big motivator.

"The things we teach here could save one of these pilots one day," said the 21-year-old aerospace physiology specialist. "It really could save their lives."

Airman Soman has been at Reese for nearly two years. He hails from St. Lucia, West Indies. In his time here, he has made a mark for himself, taking honors as squadron airman of the quarter earlier this year and as the wing's outstanding career development course graduate of the year. He was also voted the most improved member of the year on the Reese Honor Guard.

In his free time, Airman

Soman enjoys soccer, jogging and table tennis. He said he looks forward to the opportunity to attend airman leadership school, and his goals include getting his bachelor's degree.

Notes

BX council meeting

The base exchange/commissary council will meet at 2 p.m., Dec. 3 in Reese Manor.

Center collects clothes

The Reese Youth Center is collecting clothes to distribute to the needy in the Reese and Lubbock communities. Clothes for all ages are needed, and coats, sweaters and snowsuits are especially needed.

All items must be laundered and in good condition, and they should be placed in a plastic bag to prevent them from being soiled. Call 3820 for pick-up information.

Toys for tots collected

The annual Toys for Tots Christmas Drive is on and will run through Dec. 16. Collection bins will be stationed in most squadron areas, and officials are asking for new and "like new" toys. Volunteers are needed. Call MSgt. Joseph Slack at 3281 for details.

Vehicle registration due

People with vehicle stickers dated 1992 or earlier must stop by the visitor center by Dec. 31 and renew their base registration. To make the process easier, security police officials suggest that people bring their license number and decal number with them.

For details, call the visitor center at 6652 or pass and registration at 6261.

Santa suits available

Santa suits are available for rent at the Mathis Recreation Center for $25. Call 3722 or 3787.

Phone books recycled

Old phone books will be picked up for recycling through Nov. 30. On base, books should be placed next to office recycling bins. In housing, they should be placed next to their curbside recycling bags. Call 3820 for details.

Chapel collect blankets

The Reese Women of the Chapel are collecting blankets. New and freshly laundered blankets can be dropped off any day during working hours at the chapel. All sizes are needed. Also, stacks of paper plates and cups are needed for a shelter for the homeless.

Child care extended

The Reese Child Development Center will extend their hours of operation for units holding holiday parties with prior coordination and minimum participation. Call 3541 for details.

Hoops action

Updates

Christmas classic coming

The Christmas Classic High School Basketball Tournament is Dec. 3-5 in the Reese Physical Fitness Center. The center basketball court and locker rooms will be closed those days, but the weight room and two of the racquetball courts will be open. Equipment and towel issue will not be available.

People who have their gym gear in center lockers are asked to clear them out during the tournament.

Also sponsors are still needed to host teams. Call Jake Trevino for details at 3207.

Ski meet planned at Hill

Applications for the 1993 Hill AFB (Utah) Invitational Ski Meet Feb. 28 through March 5 are available from Jake Trevino, Reese Physical Fitness Center.

The meet is a permissive TDY, and registration deadline is Jan. 5.
