Flag unit takes part in celebration

The Reese 50-State Flag Formation will be one of many units taking part in the Lubbock Fourth of July parade Saturday. The parade starts at 9:30 a.m. at the Lubbock Coliseum and will make its way down Broadway to the Civic Center. The "Fourth on Broadway" celebration follows at 11 a.m. A concert and fireworks are set for 7:30 and 9:57 p.m. at the center park.

MWRS best in ATC

The 64th MWR Services Squadron has captured the ATC Mickey L. Johnston Awards, signifying the top MWR program in the command, in the small base category.

Command MWR officials said Reese MWRS was to be commended for their "outstanding teamwork and the excellent programs provided to the patrons."

According to local MWRS official, some of the unit's achievements during the past year included:

- The integration of MWR and the old services squadron into one unit. This move made MWRS the largest squadron on base, and it streamlined services and consolidated facilities while improving the accountability of organizations.

- □ An "aggressive" construction program designed to meet MWR expansion needs and ensure top service. Some of the projects included a new auto hobby shop (due to be complete in early August), ongoing renovation of the Mathis Community Center, a new surveillance system at the child development preschool has been installed and improvements in the

Class 92-11 picks up wings

Seventeen of the Air Force's newest pilots received their wings when Reese UPT Class 92-11 graduated during a ceremony at 10 a.m. Thursday in the Simler Theater.

The ceremony followed by several events in the Reese Officers' Open Mess. They included an afternoon buffet, parents' social and dinner-dance.

The guest speaker at the graduation was Col. Larry G. Carter, course director for the national security forum, Department of National Security Studies, Air War College, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

During the ceremony and dinner-dance, awards were presented to students and permanent party members. They included the commander's trophy (top graduate), "top stick" (best in flying training), academics, distinguished graduate, leadership and outstanding second lieutenant.

Permanent party awards went to the outstanding academic and flightline instructor pilots, maintainers and mission makers. Full details on the awardees will appear in the July 10 Roundup.

Independence Day Messages

From the President

I am delighted to send special greetings to the men and women of the United States Armed Forces as we celebrate the 216th anniversary of America's Independence.

"What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly; it is dearness only that gives everything its value. Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods; and it would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as freedom should not be highly rated."

With these stirring words, the great patriot Thomas Paine helped to rally the soldiers of the Continental Army as they fought to win our Nation's freedom from Great Britain. For more than two centuries, the spirit of our Revolutionary War heroes has lived on in the hearts of our dedicated service members, who know that, although its preservation requires courage and eternal vigilance, the cause of liberty is both worthy and just.

Today, our Nation and peoples around the globe rejoice in one of freedom's most historic victories - the end of the Cold War. The ideals of democracy have triumphed over imperial Communism, and the world now stands poised for peace. On this day that we celebrate our cherished independence, it is fitting that we pay tribute to you, our men and women in uniform, who have sacrificed so much to protect our national interests and to promote peace and freedom everywhere. On behalf of all Americans, I salute you.

Barbara joins me in sending best wishes to you and to your families for a safe and enjoyable holiday. God bless you, and God bless the United States of America.

George Bush
President

From the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

This Fourth of July, we will commemorate the 216th anniversary of this great nation's declaration of independence. Americans worldwide will celebrate in ways that express their love of country and spirit of patriotism.

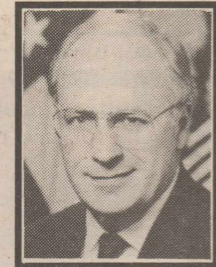

We are free to do so because of sacrifices made by our fellow Americans over the past two centuries. The first Independence Day came against the backdrop of the Revolutionary War. Yet this holiday is not just a symbol of that struggle; it is in recognition of all those commitments to liberty and freedom that stretch from Valley Forge to Desert Storm.

Those of you in uniform willingly provide selfless service in defense of freedom throughout the world. It is through your dedication and patriotism, and through the efforts of the men and women of the armed forces of the United States who preceded you, that the dreams of our forefathers are as real and vital today as they were in 1776. We must never forget our comrades who have made the ultimate sacrifice, who have become captors of the enemy, or who still remain unaccounted for.

On behalf of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, I extend my appreciation for all you have done and continue to do. My best wishes to you and your families for a safe and enjoyable holiday.

Gen. Colin L. Powell
Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

From the Secretary of Defense

On a hot day in Philadelphia 216 years ago, the members of the Continental Congress pledged their lives, fortunes and sacred honor to the cause of liberty. Those patriots approved the Declaration of Independence with confidence that brave Americans would step forward to fight for freedom and independence.

Today, those of you in uniform serving your country preserve that precious legacy our forefathers fought and died to secure for us. The long honor roll of American men and women who have offered their lives in the defense of freedom is a lasting testimony that the preservation of liberty is neither easy nor without cost.

On this Independence Day, wherever you serve, let me assure you that your efforts are deeply appreciated. You are the guardians of that intangible gift of freedom entrusted to us by the patriots of 1776. And I can assure that you have the trust and confidence of the American people.

Dick Cheney
Secretary of Defense

From the ATC Commander

On July 4, we will celebrate our independence and offer our gratitude to those who went before us — for it's their sacrifice that has blessed us with the precious heritage we enjoy today.

This is an exciting and special time in history, as many people around the world who have not been so fortunate are now securing the independence and freedom we have enjoyed for so long. Challenges still remain, however, so on this Independence Day, let us reaffirm our commitment to the legacy our forefathers made a reality — a legacy of liberty. This is the real cause for celebration.

Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Ashy
ATC Commander

From the Wing Commander

The men and women of Reese work hard producing the best pilots in the world, so it is good that we are able to "cool our jets" during the week to commemorate the 4th of July.

While it is a day off, it's also a time for the Reese community to reflect on our ever continuing commitment to defend the country.

As you enjoy the 4th of July, celebrate safely. Thinking about what you do before you do it will ensure that you return to the job healthy, ready and able to continue your responsibility at Reese.

Col. David R. Love
Wing Commander, Reese AFB

A moment in history

Editor's note: This is the second of a three-part series recounting the history of Reese Air Force Base.

About two years after reactivation, the T-6 aircraft was replaced with the T-28 which became very popular among students. In 1953, Reese's designation changed from advanced multi-engine pilot training to basic pilot training. Graduates were then reassigned for further training in various types of aircraft at other bases. This procedure has remained the same until the present time.

In January 1955, single-engine training was phased out, leaving an all multi-engine training program. Then, in 1958, the Air Force began phasing out the B-25 and the T-33 Shooting Star replaced it as the basic pilot trainer, ushering in the single engine jet aircraft at Reese. The last class of multi-engine B-25 students, Class 59-E, graduated in January 1959. Reese Air Force Base was the last training base to use the B-25 as a trainer. "Project Commemorate" was held and the last B-25 to fly at Reese was unveiled for display adjacent to the Main Gate.

The T-33, a single-engine jet, was used as the only training aircraft at Reese until the T-37 "Tweet" jet aircraft was introduced in April 1961. Only the basic phase of pilot training was offered until the arrival of the T-37 when Reese assumed full responsibility for training pilots through the pre-flight, primary and basic phases. The training program throughout Air Training Command then became the Undergraduate Pilot Training program. Civilian contract bases were closed, and military bases took over full responsibility for pilot training.

Reese training since reactivation had included training of aviation cadets and student officers. The last cadets completed training in Class 62-B, graduating September 14, 1961, and were awarded commissions as well as silver wings. Presently, students arriving at Reese for flying training have previously received their commissions. Also in training most of the time have been students from friendly foreign nations.

The supersonic T-38 Talon replaced the T-33 as basic trainer in 1963 to permit qualification of pilots for quicker transition to larger and speedier planes. The first Talon arrived at Reese in January 1963 and instructor pilots were trained throughout most of the year to teach students in the new plane. The first class to start T-38 training was Class 64-B, arriving in September 1963.

During a period from March 1965 to June 1973, the T-41A Mescalero, a military version of the Cessna 172, was used as a pre-flight trainer. These flights were flown from what is now Lubbock International Airport. This Primary Phase I program was used to help screen potential pilots and provided a stepping stone to help those with little or no experience adapt to military flying.

Manpower demands and fiscal management resulted in the Phase I training being consolidated at one base in Hondo, Texas.

All classes after 74-07 have been required to have successfully completed this training or its equivalent before coming to Reese.

Commander Marks ATC Anniversary

On 7 July we commemorate 49 years of dedication to national service.

Our precursor, the Army Air Forces Training Command (AAFTC) resulted from a merger on 7 July 1943 of the U.S. Army's Flying Training Command and its Technical Training Command. The new command under Maj. Gen. Barton K. Yount, was headquartered in Fort Worth, Texas. Air Training Command assumed its present name on 1 July 1946.

Since our beginnings in July 1943, we have performed basic, technical and flying training. In 1954 we gained recruiting as a fourth mission. Over the years, ATC has trained over 13 million students. This past year, we trained over 300,000 people, including over 1500 pilots, nearly 500 navigators, more than 29,000 basic trainees, and over 232,000 technical training students. We can take great pride in being "the first command" for all entering enlisted personnel and nearly 90 percent of entering officers.

ATC's training mission continues to be vital to our national defense. Our success over the last half century has been due to the dedication of men and women like you, who in today's quality Air Force continue to "show the way" and who have made Air Training Command what it is today.

Thank you for your dedication and service for the nation.

Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Ashy

Pentagon shifts direction of bomber roles

by TSgt. David P. Masko
Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — The Air Force has offered Congress a new blueprint for the heavy bomber that shifts emphasis from nuclear deterrence to a conventional warfare role.

Air Force Secretary Donald B. Rice said the Air Force has built a "bomber road map" to determine what steps it needs to take for conventional bomber capabilities within a reduced Air Force and Defense Department budget.

"The programs we are proposing in our road map meet the challenge of converting from a bomber force focused on nuclear war to a smaller, more sophisticated force equipped to perform a variety of missions," Secretary Rice told the Senate Armed Service Committee June 17.

The overall purpose of the bomber road map is to increase the conventional capabilities of the bomber force, provide rapid, long-range crisis response and increase ability to attack targets with precision and mass.

"It is also clear to us that the bomber force we are constructing—the combination of mass, reach and immediacy with precision strike—will be a weapon of choice for operational commanders in a future that will almost certainly be marked by fast breaking crises."

The proposed bomber force includes 20 B-2s, 96 B-1Bs and approximately 96 B-52Hs.

The bomber road map is a key element of the Pentagon's crisis response plan because the bomber is the only element of the strategic triad that can be launched and recalled for conventional or nuclear options.

"They will provide us a combination of mass and reach and immediacy that only a long-range aircraft can guarantee, provided that we put the precision capabilities on them that will allow them to deal with a full range of targets," Secretary Rice said.

"The fiscal 1993 president's budget is an essential bridge to this future force. Twenty B-2s are needed to unleash the full potential of the overall bomber force."

At the same time, Secretary Rice said he personally believes the B-2 is the last bomber the military will ever build. "Without the kind of threats we had during the Cold War, it's hard to see how the nation would be willing to mount up the kind of investment it takes to do another one.

"We've have tried to look very carefully at the total bomber force, and we think it is sufficient to the nation's needs; out as far as we can reasonably plan to that point, I'd say 2010 certainly."

Other plans for the future mix of bombers include:

□ The B-52 will be primarily a stand-off platform, although it will also be able to provide precision and massive firepower in lower threat environments.

□ The B-1 will be able to penetrate or stand-off, and add mass and precision to composite strike packages.

□ The B-2 will hit the toughest targets, penetrating and surviving, unHINGING an enemy's strategic plan and neutralizing defenses to allow less stealthy systems to operate.

Gen. John M. Loh, commander, Air Combat Command, and Gen. George L. Butler, commander of the U.S. Strategic Command, both said they support the integrated way of thinking about the bomber force and airpower, and the B-2's special role in it.

"Recognizing that our potential aggressor will not pause, the B-2 can be a very strong deterrent to regional aggression in the future, because we will have that immediacy to attack on day one," General Loh said.

□ Their work on projects like the 1991 air show and open house, the Desert Storm celebration and others played an important role in base-community relations.

□ The unit developed several unique ways to promote ongoing programs and special events. These included "Crush" the Recycleosaurus, good behavior incentive programs at the Youth Center and the "I Beat a Cop" tournament at the bowling center.

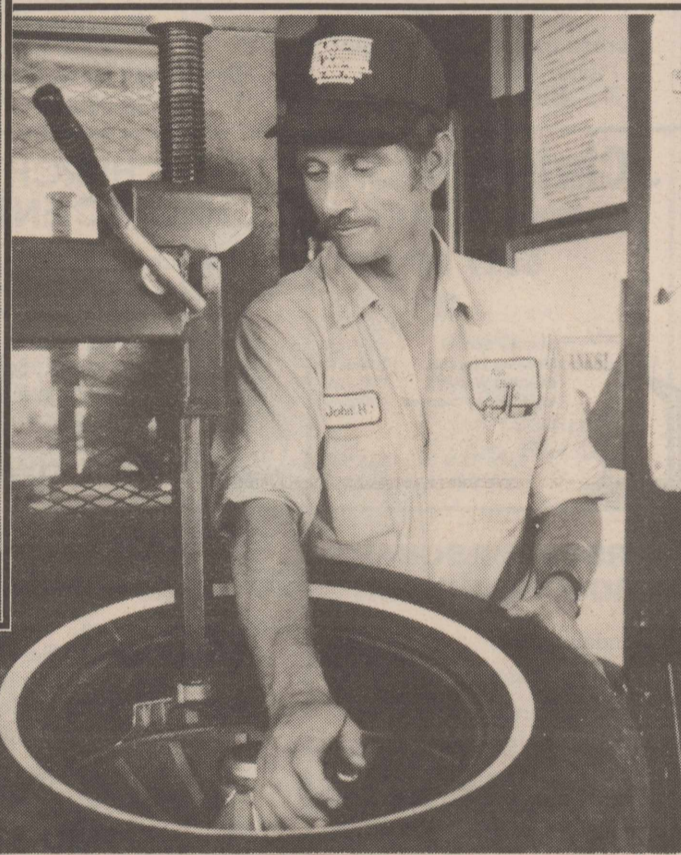

"All the things wouldn't have been possible without the efforts of everyone in the unit," said Jim Hernandez, recreation services chief. "Every single person in MWRS is part of this award, and they all deserve a big hand."

The unit will now compete for the Maj. Gen. Eugene L. Eubank Award at the Air Force level.

Recruiting needs remain despite cuts

by TSgt. David P. Masko
Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — As the Pentagon braces for deeper manpower cuts, the Air Force says it needs 35,100 more enlisted recruits in fiscal 1992.

The increase in Air Force recruitment is up 5,100 from 1991's accession total of 30,000, and is an aggressive move in light of the proposed 25 percent reduction in both end strength and recruiting by 1995. These recruits are needed to maintain the quality of the all-volunteer force.

"We must recruit a larger number of airmen this year to meet the unique skill and grade requirements of a balanced force in the late 1990s," said Brig. Gen. Michael G. Vergamini, commander, Air Force Recruiting Service.

General Vergamini believes the much-publicized force reduction may have sent a discouraging signal to some potential recruits who assume that Air Force opportunities are closed to them.

"We're finding that people are surprised that we're still recruiting or they think our goals are relatively small," General Vergamini said.

Dispelling the myth that the Air Force is not hiring has also become an important aim for recruiters.

For instance, recruiters are placing ads in the help wanted columns, promoting more free public service announcements at radio and television stations and making more personal appearances.

Their goal is to increase awareness that Air Force Recruiting Service is doing business as usual, officials said.

Likewise, the assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel wants new recruits to be aware of military job opportunities because of future manning requirements and to avoid long term manpower skill shortages.

"The challenge we face is not simply to reduce our force, but to shape it so that our manning is aligned with our emerging force structure," Christopher Jehn told the Senate Armed Services subcommittee on manpower and personnel June 2.

"Although we will accomplish a great deal of our manpower reductions by decreased recruiting, too few recruits today would mean too few seasoned noncommissioned and petty officers a decade from now," Mr. Jehn said.

Even at a force of 1.6 million — what the Pentagon is shooting for in the late 1990s — he said the services will still need to recruit 240,000 men and women each year.

With the ongoing reductions, the services still continued the recruiting successes of the recent past, achieving 100 percent of their recruiting objectives.

However, with these personnel cuts, recruiting also showed a decline. The number of new active-duty people recruited was 224,100 in 1990, as compared to 200,700 in 1991, for a 10 percent reduction.

Even with this drop in recruits, Mr. Jehn said the services have been successful in recruiting high-quality youth in 1992.

Over the first seven months of 1992, 99 percent of all military recruits were high school graduates, compared with 97 percent for the same period in 1991.

In addition, the proportion of recruits who scored average or above on the enlistment test increased from 97 percent in 1990 to more than 99 percent in 1991.

Mr. Jehn said the success in current recruiting goals will continue in the coming years, but any deeper cuts in accessions would upset the experience level and skill mix of the armed forces, "now and for many years to come."

Consequently, a recent youth attitude tracking study showed that the percentage of youth who said they would "definitely" or "probably" enlist over the next few years dropped from 32 to 29 percent; proportionately a 10 percent decline in interest in just one year.

"Recruiting levels and resources have been reduced as much as it's safe," Mr. Jehn said.

"Any further reductions would have serious adverse effects on our ability to recruit and on the readiness of our force."

Savings bonds campaign continues

by Lt. Col. Claude Branscome
64th Support Group

The good things of life don't come easy. You want the best for your family even if that means struggling to balance your career, home life, and the whirlwind of activities in which your children involve you.

As if getting through today isn't hard enough, everywhere you turn someone is urging you to save for the future. Obviously it's difficult to worry about tomorrow when today is so demanding.

But when you consider the steady escalation of college expenses — something fundamental to the success of your children — you'll see that you must prepare. Luckily, that preparation just became a little easier.

The parents' friend is a financial instrument too often neglected these days, United States Savings Bonds. That's right, savings bonds. Once considered stodgy, and certainly not on the cutting edge of investment products, savings bonds have been — for 50 years — a constant friend Americans could count on to finance their children's education, put a down payment on a home, buy a new car, or help provide a more secure retirement.

For the parent facing system overload, savings bonds are nearly perfect. They can be purchased automatically through payroll savings.

In order to be eligible for the tax exclusion, bonds should be registered in your name, not your child's — and you must be at least 24 years of age.

The bonds also have to be redeemed within the same calendar year that tuition and fees are paid and you must meet certain income requirements during that year.

Another interesting wrinkle of the new program is that it applies not only to your child's secondary education but to your own higher education as well.

If your projected income is too high to qualify for this tax exclusion, you can still benefit by buying bonds for your children's education.

Bonds purchased in a child's name with a parent as beneficiary (not co-owner) will also yield tax advantages.

For a child under 14, only the interest and dividend income in excess of $1,000 is taxed at the parent's rate. If the child is 14 or older, all income is taxed at the child's rate. You may choose between annual and deferred reporting, depending on your child's age and expected future income.

Whichever method you choose, whether you qualify for the tax exclusion or not, your savings bonds will maintain all of the traditional benefits that have endeared them to the American parent for half a century. They are always free from state and local income tax, and guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the United States. Savings bonds are also guaranteed against theft, loss, or destruction.

And if this isn't enough, the interest on savings bonds is tied to the market when they are held five years or more, with a guaranteed minimum rate to protect them for a long market decline.

With the convenience and peace of mind that an investment in savings bonds will give you, planning for the future will be even easier than getting through today. For more information about Bonds and the new education benefit, contact your group-squadron project officer (see listing, next page).

Dental premium hike

WASHINGTON — Dependents Dental Plan single and family premiums will increase Aug. 1, when the basic plan is renewed for another year, CHAMPUS officials said.

Premiums will rise from $4.57 to $5.20 for the single rate and $9.14 to $10 for the family rate. Because the plan is a prepaid insurance program, the increase will be reflected in July pay statements but will not be effective until August.

The contractor has the option to increase premiums each time the contract comes up for renewal. The increases do not mean individuals can disenroll from the program before the two-year enrollment requirement expires. Additionally, the increases do not expand the plan's benefits.

More information is available from local health benefits offices. Call 4581 for details. (Air Force News Service)

OWC plans tea

The Reese Officers' Wives Club will hold an a tea from 4 to 6 p.m. Thursday in the Reese Officers' Open Mess in honor of Darlean Love.

Daedalians plan meeting

Caprock Flight of the Order of Daedalians will meet at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Jack Davis Room at the Reese Officers' Open Mess. Daedalain members who have arrived at Reese in the last year but who have not joined Caprock Flight are welcome.

The guest speaker will be retired Maj. J.D. Cutter, who flew the F-105, F-4E and AT-38, survived two ejections and was a prisoner of war in Southeast Asia for 14 months.

The cost of the meal is $9.75. Please R.S.V.P. by Tuesday to Capt. Peggy Boldrick or TSgt. Diane Peets at 6187.

CDC closes earlier

The Reese Child Development Center will close at 6 p.m. Friday evening beginning July 10. The center will be open later for special events if there are a guaranteed number of reservations. For more information, call Viola Aiken at 3541.

Top three forms, meets

The newly formed Top Three Association on base will meet at 3 p.m. July 16 in the Reese Enlisted Open Mess.

The association's aim is to promote a better quality of life for enlisted members, according to orgnaizers. For its first project, the top three helped remove the lava rock around the Caprock Cafe and replace it with grass, which is easier to maintain.

The hazards of power mowers

By Jonathan Hataway
Wing Safety Staff

The hazards of power mowers are demonstrated by the alarming number of mishaps involving them. Sections of cutting blades that flew off, stones, pieces of wire and other materials thrown by the high speed blades have injured both operators and bystanders. In addition, contact with revolving blades and other moving parts have injured operators' feet and hands.

Recently, one of our own was injured by a piece of wire that was discharged as the riding lawn mower passed over it. The individual was standing off to the side of the riding mower which was operated by his son. The wire pierced his right boot, lacerating his right foot which required four stitches to close.

More than 62,000 people are injured in lawn mower accidents annually. The Reese Safety Division cautions people against becoming lax in their safety practices as summer begins. The following are a few safe operation practices that should be of concern:

□ Clear the area of rocks, stones, wires, sticks, or other debris before mowing. Do not rotate blades when crossing graveled areas. Keep cutting area clear of all persons and animals. Allow no one but the operator near the mower while the mower is in operation. Shut off the mower when someone approaches.

□ Operators of power mowers should wear heavy, close-fitting trousers and steel-toed safety shoes or boots. It is strongly recommended that operators also wear safety glasses.

□ Read the instruction manual and know your mower thoroughly. Know the controls and how to stop quickly.

□ Keep your hands and feet clear of the mower's moving parts when in operation. Start the mower on firm, clear, level ground. The operator should maintain a firm grip on the mower, or place a foot on the housing, and stand to one side when starting it.

□ Shut off mower before moving it from one level to another. Shut mower off before clearing machine of debris.

□ Be certain of your footing and balance, especially when mowing on an incline. Cut hills and banks sidewise instead of up and down when using walk-behind mowers. In addition, don't pull a mower towards you—always push it.

□ Do not smoke while fueling your mower. Gasoline is explosive. Waiting five minutes is sufficient for your mower to cool before refueling. Store and pour gasoline carefully, and above all, keep it in an approved metal container. Keep containers outdoors in a shed or a garage—not in the basement or utility room.

□ If you do your own cleaning and tune-ups, disconnect the spark plug or remove it before you start any maintenance. If a blade is turned by hand, the mower might start if the plug is still connected. Check electric mowers for frayed or damaged cords. Frayed insulation added to a metal mower and damp or wet grass can cause lethal shocks or severe electrical burns.

Technical Order 47-C-1-1 provides additional safety instructions for lawn care equipment to Air Force units.

The key to mower safety is the same as in all other areas—awareness. Everyone should keep in mind that they're operating a machine that improperly used is capable of inflicting all sorts of injuries.

Reynalda Schroeder (Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Quality performer

One challenge of moving from base to base during a military career is making new friends. Another challenge, usually faced by family members, is finding a job. Well, Reynalda Schroeder can be one of the best friends a job seeker has if they are at Reese.

As manager-coordinator of the Career Focus Program on base, she's the Reese Family Support Center's specialist on helping wing members in their job search.

Having made several moves with a military family herself,

Mrs. Schroeder can identify with the demands of adjusting to a new place. Her determination on the job enables her to help others make that adjustment more smoothly.

"Her one goal in life is to do the best she can in everything she does," said Phil Thierry, FSC director. "People who want to start job hunting should come by and see her."

Mrs. Schroeder holds bachelors' and masters' degrees from New Mexico State University, but her knowledge about finding and working different jobs comes from experience. She's "done just about everything," from being a maid to a veterinary assistant.

She and her husband, Russ, and their daughters, Amanda and Kristen, came to Reese after two-and-one-half years in the Philippines. Besides reading, spending time with her family is one of the things she enjoys most in her free time.

"My daughters are really wonderful," she said. "They have been a real pleasure in my life and it has been great watching them grow."

Net-work time

Reese IP shows ability on volleyball court

First Lt. Amy Rosenquest knows about getting airborne, whether it's in the cockpit during a T-37 sortie or at the net during a volleyball match.

The 35th Flying Training

Squadron instructor pilot has played the sport at all levels, most recently competing as a member of the armed forces team for the second time in May. In the past, she's played four years in high school in Illinois and another four at the Air Force Academy, where she was team captain and the most valuable player as a senior.

Her track record indicates that she and her teammates have been well able to adjust to the game's quick tempo. While at the academy, her team was in the top 15 of NCAA Division II. The Air Force teams she has played with the last two years have earned the armed forces championship, and the armed forces teams she has played on have steadily become more competitive.

"We didn't win (at the U.S. Volleyball Association National Tournament), but each year we've done better," she said about the military team's performance in the national tournament. The team trained in Pensicola, Fla., and competed in Reno, Nev. She said that one factor not in the armed forces' favor was the fact that they didn't have much experience as a team, unlike their competitors.

Future competitions will include base intramurals and downtown league participation on both women's and mixed teams. She said she likes to keep sharp through playing with these teams.

Although volleyball is thought of by many as a leisurely, "at the beach" sort of game, it's the quick pace and rapid changes in the game that appeal to her.

"You can be hitting the ball as the offensive player and a split second later you can be back on defense if the shot's blocked," said the 24-year-old lieutenant, who plays as a strong side, outside hitter. "It's a powerful game with a lot of strategy."

Lieutenant Rosenquest practices near the base tennis courts.

Teams 'scramble' at tourney

(Msgt. Ralph Monson)

Second Lt. Cuevier Lipscomb keeps his eye on the ball while teeing off on the 4th hole during Friday's CGOC "Scramble" golf tournament.

Lt. Col. Bob Samay's "closest to the pin" effort on the par-3 third hole, placed his team on a 12 under par 60 and a first place finish in Friday's Company Grade Officers Council golf tournament.

Teaming with retired Col. Don Neff; 2nd Lt Bruce Upton, 64th Logistics Squadron; and 2nd Lt. Teri Forest, 64th Mission Support Squadron, Colonel Samay's squad finished the 6,367-yard High Plains course one stroke ahead of a team from the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron.

Colonel Samay placed his tee shot on the 186-yard third hole within 18 inches of the pin and set up a short birdie putt.

The team may have won the tournament on the tough 516-yard, par-5 10th hole, reaching the green in two and holing out for an eagle-3.

The CE squad kept pace throughout the day. Tom McFarland took "longest drive" honors with a booming 315-yard drive on the par-4, fourth hole. Also representing CE were: Ron Rush, Craig Anderson and 1st Lt. Bob Howland.

Finishing third at 63 was a team from the Financial Management/Comptroller Division. Team members were: Lt. Col. Joseph Buchwald, 1st Lt. John Pletcher, MSgt Dave Courrier and Don Brown.
