Housing streets get face lift

A Birchwood Construction Co. crew lays a concrete slab as part of base housing street construction. Construction on base housing streets will continue through June. Residents should keep their cars off the street and not water their lawns while their area is under construction. For more information call SSgt. Tone' Sanchez at 3922.

"Gable 01 - number one," came the request.

Tower answered, "Gable 01, you are cleared for takeoff."

The engines roared as the throttles were advanced. After an engine check at full power, the brakes were released, and the first Reese T-1A sortie became reality.

"All of the planning and the waiting are behind us," said Lt. Col. Bob Cass, T-1A qualification and operational test and evaluation deputy for operations. "It feels great to finally get started."

From my perspective

by 2nd Lt. Tupper Daniels
64th FTW inspections

As usual, at 7:29 a.m. I was racing down War Highway, toothbrush in one hand, razor in the other, right foot trying to shove a bending gas pedal through a rusting floorboard and my left knee making a weak attempt at keeping my poor excuse of a vehicle on the road.

When I finally got on base, I discovered one of the local security policemen standing in the middle of the road frantically trying to wave me down. He was looming in front of me like a troll, guarding the only "bridge" to my office.

As I brought my car to a grinding halt, I glanced down at my watch...7:31 a.m. Late again. Sweat was already beginning to gleam on my forehead as I stared aghast at this young airman standing in front of his squad car, lights flashing. I almost ripped the knob off the window crank while I began to yell out the small crack of an opening my inoperative window offered me.

I still had no idea what was going on in front of me, but the SP was walking this way, apparently in an effort to explain some of the happenings. I couldn't wait. Flinging my resisting door wide open, I catapulted myself out of the driver's seat into the path of the oncoming airman. Not waiting to give him a chance to utter some pathetic excuse as to why he was blocking the road, I exclaimed, "What is going on here? Get that heap outta my way!"

My opposition endeavored to explain that there was an ongoing exercise that needed to be cordoned off. What?! I could already see the front door of my building which led to my office. A mere 50 yards away, I could almost smell the familiar odor of the copy machine.

"Perhaps you don't understand, I need to get through in order to do my job. Some of us have important things to do around here, you know!" He remained calm continuing to explain that I would either have to wait for a while before being let through or find another route to my destination. I decided a different approach might get better results. I looked away for a moment and took a deep breath in a futile effort to let some of my boiling blood drain from my face.

In a poor attempt at self control, I said, "Excuuuuuse me, but I reaaaalllly need to get through. And since this is only an exercise, would you pleeeaaase let me slip by." Once again to no avail. To my extreme displeasure, I had to waste more of my precious time while I took the long way around. All because of this "stupid exercise."

When I finally rested this frustrated body in a form-fitting office chair, I proceeded to relate my experience to my esteemed colleagues. After finishing, several associates went on to describe something they had seen a few days ago. It was a television show about United Airlines Flight 232. It seems that this flight was a DC-10 carrying almost 300 passengers. The aircraft lost an engine and headed for Sioux City.

Following the crash landing, the response forces acted quickly and efficiently preventing as many deaths as possible. Many of the response forces remarked on the training they had received prior to the accident. Rescue workers fell back on old habit patterns and used experience gained through practice to perform their tasks. Many admitted they did not want to join in the exercises. Complaints such as, "Why do we need to practice this anyway," or "What a dumb exercise, it's not realistic at all" were heard during the practice sessions. It turns out it was the exercise practice that paid the dividends in the long run. Lives were saved.

As I reflect on the duties and cooperation required of the entire rescue staff, I realize that proper training is essential to perform their tasks properly and efficiently. I guess the SP who was blocking the road to my office was doing his job. Everyone must appreciate that exercises are an important part of training for a real catastrophe, and cooperating with those who need the training is just as important.

It just might save a life.

Quality improvement

By Capt. William R. Moore
64 FTW Quality Improvement Office

In the past few weeks we have discussed the customer—both internal and external. We looked at the need to satisfy our customers and the customer's role in providing feedback.

Customer service is the essence of total quality management; however, to really reap the benefits of quality improvement, supervisors must empower their workers. Those closest to any process are the most capable of initiating improvement. Empowerment results when supervisors act as coaches and allow workers to initiate improvement.

At the same time, workers must be willing to accept the challenge of empowerment. They need to assume some of the responsibility for making things better. We all need to look for ways to improve the work processes we are associated with. Ownership of the process results in pride of workmanship.

Basically, it is a total team effort, where everyone plays a part—supervisors and workers doing their part to make Reese better able to accomplish the mission. Working as a team, we can accomplish more than as individuals. We can be more productive, efficient and effective through team effort. Remember the old adage, "Two heads are better than one."

Through all this, however, we must keep one thing in mind—we are still a military organization. Our responsibility is to be ready to defend our nation. To do this, leadership is key—along with maintaining a strong chain of command. We cannot lose sight of our role as warriors, ready when called. A strong chain of command and a responsive leader-subordinate relationship will ensure our ability to meet any situation.

Quality improvement is just one tool that, we, at all levels in the chain, can use to ensure we are ready to do our job!

flight with T-1A QOT&E Test Director Lt. Col. Wayne Schulz and Colonel Cass at the controls, while Wing Commander Col. Bill Henny manned the observer's position.

First, the crew flew southwest of Reese to check out the plane's handling characteristics in normal flight maneuvers. Then they returned to Reese for several visual approaches and landings, followed by some simulated instrument approach work at Lubbock International Airport. After spending more time in the air than any two normal T-38 sorties combined, they headed for home.

"This aircraft is a pleasure to fly," said Colonel Schulz. "While it's too soon to know for sure, the fact that we had no malfunctions during the ride is a good indication that we're getting a solid product."

The first sortie explored aircrew procedures which might cause confusion or conflict. In one such instance, Colonel Schulz explained "there is only one set of controls on the center console, making it difficult for the second crew member to assist in some functions," such as changing the aircraft configuration during touch-and-go landings. Lessons learned here will become recommendations for T-1A procedural guidance publications.

Sorties were also scheduled to get three pilots qualified as instructors by next Wednesday. If everything goes as planned, these instructors will begin teaching "students" by March 23.

Contrary to their title, these "students" have already earned their wings. They are two experienced ATC pilots who have experience in tanker or transport aircraft but who have not been checked out in the Jayhawk, and four recent UPT graduates. They will perform as students for the test and evaluation of the aircraft and the simulator, according to Colonel Schulz.

Fortunately for these surrogate students, it is a no-risk situation. They will not be graded on their performance on the rides. "The purpose of flying with the surrogate students is not to test their flying abilities," said Colonel Schulz. "It's to determine how well the aircraft performs as a training platform. We want to see which procedures enhance the learning experience and which ones detract."

The "students" will fly a series of ten missions, each covering all maneuvers in the syllabus, to verify the T-1A's effectiveness and locate any deficiencies. As part of their evaluation, the team will make recommendations on how to most effectively use the aircraft as a trainer. These recommendations will be made available for ATC to modify as required.

As more T-1As are delivered to Reese, the number of sorties will increase. Some will continue to be used by the test team for test and proficiency sorties, while others will be used to qualify the follow-on test and evaluation team and the T-1A initial cadre of instructors. Eventually, there will be pilot instructor training as well.

"At this point, it appears the T-1A will make an excellent aircraft to initiate specialized undergraduate pilot training," said Colonel Schulz. "It should enable us to improve the quality of our pilot graduates well into the next century."

Tax withholding tables change for some people

Low-, middle-income people to see more in paychecks

Most low- and middle-income taxpayers will see more in their paychecks as the Internal Revenue Service has new withholding tables that cut tax withholding for those groups.

Military members and civilians who are withheld at the married rate may see as much as $345 more in their take-home pay over the next year according to 1st Lt. John Pletcher, Reese accounting and finance officer. Those withheld at the single rate may see up to $172 more.

"This is not a tax cut," the lieutenant said. "People's tax liability will remain the same; only the amount withheld will change."

The lower withholding rates may result in smaller refunds or additional money owed when filing 1992 taxes. If, because of these new rules, too little tax is withheld from a paycheck during 1992, the IRS will not penalize taxpayers for underwithholding.

The new withholding tables became effective March 1. People who do not want their withholding changed should complete a W-4 form at the accounting and finance office, Bldg. 800. Withholding can be increased either by reducing the number of allowances claimed or by requesting a fixed additional amount be deducted.

Details on withholding can be found in IRS Publication 919, "Is My Withholding Correct?" Also, people can call the IRS at 1-800-829-1040 for more information.

"People should consider this information carefully in deciding whether or not to change their withholding to avoid having to pay additional taxes next year," MSgt. David Currier, accounting and finance superintendent, said.

For more information, call accounting at 3360.

Time at Reese: Three years.

Hometown: Lufkin, Texas.

Achievements during the year: Lieutenant Crain distinguished himself as the top T-37 pilot at Top Flight II at Vance AFB, Okla., in October. He was also part of the top T-37 flight and top overall flight in the competition, thus helping the wing earn top overall wing honors.

In addition to his Top Flight performance, the lieutenant's ability was evidenced by the "excellent" ratings he received in a no-notice ground evaluation and contact, formation and instrument check rides according to 35th FTS officials.

Also, he was selected as the top T-37 flightline instructor for UPT Class 92-05.

"Kenny's work throughout the year has been outstanding," said Lt. Col. Rick Robinson, 35th FTS commander. "His abilities as a check pilot and an instructor are evident to everyone he works with."

Lieutenant Crain credited part of his success as an IP to the students he works with.

"The feedback I get from them helps me be a better IP," he said. "The comments I get are often helpful in evaluating my performance on the ground and in the air."

The lieutenant's efforts extended into the base community. During the year, he helped with Camp Blue Yonder and Black History Month.

Education: Bachelor's degree in space operations, Air Force Academy.

Goals: The lieutenant wants to continue his Air Force career and work with youth.

Hobbies: Sports and investments.

OPENS FRIDAY, MARCH 13TH

Captain selected as support officer of year

Capt. Kerri Bedesem is the wing's 1991 support officer of the year. Representing the 64th Mission Support Squadron, Captain Bedesem was recognized for her work as chief of wing protocol and administration and as a squadron section commander.

Time in service: Four years, three months.

Time at Reese: Four years.

Hometown: Phoenix.

Achievements during the year: Captain Bedesem earned top marks during the 1991 command unit effectiveness inspection. As section commander in the 64th Supply (now Logistics) Squadron, she developed personnel programs covering weight management, security, leave accounting, performance reports and awards that earned her recognition as the wing "expert" on these programs.

In addition, she was named wing information manager of the year for 1991 in the junior officer category.

As wing protocol officer, she worked many high-profile projects such as the open house, 50th anniversary celebration, Prisoner of War—Missing in Action Day and several congressional visits.

"Kerri's job often makes her the first person that VIPs come into contact with at Reese," said Col. Bob Negley, 64th FTW vice commander. "Everyone she's worked with has had nothing but praise for her professionalism and work."

Captain Bedesem also works in the base and local communities. She works with Camp Blue Yonder, the Reese Company Grade Officers Council and the Lubbock Coalition for Literacy. She said her off-duty efforts are based on the idea that "giving to others makes you a better person in the long run -- I learn as much as they do."

"You can't set out to win this award," she said. "You simply do your best at each task and maybe you'll get lucky."

Education: Bachelor's degree in political science, University of Arizona; master's degree in finance and financial planning, Texas Tech.

Goals: The captain hopes to get into the personnel field.

Hobbies: Sports, reading and cooking.

Captain Bedesem updates a scheduling board.

First airman leadership class graduates

A member of the 64th Operations Support Squadron was the top graduate for the first Reese Airman Leadership School class, which graduated March 6. Sgt. Teri Morecraft was named the John L. Levitow Honor Graduate Award winner

Sergeant Morecraft (Sgt. Greg Spraggins)
...ALS Levitow winner

for Class 92-A during the graduation ceremony in the Reese Enlisted Open Mess. Other award winners included Sgts. L.D. Harper, 64th Security Police Squadron, and Timothy Leick, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, who were distinguished graduates; and SrA. Kevin Johnson of CES, who won the military citizenship award.

Also, members of the class who ran more than 50 miles above what was required during physical conditioning sessions were given "mileage awards." Winners were Sergeant Harper, SrA. Troy McKay of SPS and Airman Johnson.

Guest speaker at the luncheon ceremony was Col. Bill Henny, 64th Flying Training Wing commander.

Other graduates included:

□ 33rd Flying Training Squadron — Sgt. Mary Ballard.

□ OSS — Sgt. George Epps.

□ 64th Logistics Squadron — Sgts. Gary Appel,

Marvin Davis and Denver Sperry.

□ 64th Medical Squadron — Sgts. Phillip Thompson and Bradley Tucker.

□ 64th Mission Support Squadron — Sgts. Eric Carter, Randall Majors and Lei Pruitt.

This inaugural ALS class went very well according to students and staff.

"I really learned a lot," said Sergeant Morecraft, who added that one of her goals in the class was to learn more about supervisory skills like writing performance reports and award packages.

"The class was able to learn a lot about doing things smarter and better. A lot of it dealt with solving problems at our own level, but it also touched on knowing how and when to refer one of our people to another agency for help."

"This was a really good first class," said TSgt. Derald Jones, ALS program manager. "It was the sort of group we hoped we would have to get the new curriculum off the ground."

Sergeant Jones added his thanks to the EOM staff for their support in providing the graduation luncheon.

AFAF

Ongoing support needed

The annual Air Force Assistance Fund drive runs through March 28 on Reese, and with a little over two weeks to go wing members have already pledged $19,022 (as of Wednesday).

While the base's generosity has put Reese $4,352 past its goal, the wing AFAF project officer reminded people that continued support is still important.

"The different agencies that AFAF supports do an enormous amount of good work for Air Force people, and when we help them, we're essentially helping ourselves," said Capt. Albert Whitley. The captain added that one wing member looking to "help himself" made an anonymous donation of $1,000.

In 1991, about $19 million went to 30,000 Air Force people in interest-free loans or grants from the Air Force Aid Society, one of the drive's beneficiaries. Locally, $49,052 helped 75 people in the Reese community last year, according to Captain Whitley.

Individuals or groups who contribute at least $100 during the drive will receive a sponsor donor certificate. Contributions of $500 or more earn a patron donor certificate. Those groups or individuals contributing $1000 or more receive a founding donor certificate. To find out more contact your unit project officer.

Program assists in career transition

Reese's first Transition Assistance Program workshop was well received by people in attendance according to officials in the Reese Family Support Center.

The Feb. 25-27 workshop was aimed at helping retiring and separating members "transfer their military experience into a civilian job, as well as showing them the techniques involved in job hunting," according to Phil Thierry, center director. He said the workshop included job interview training and critiques of participants' interview abilities, as well as a chance to place résumés into a national job search network.

"It was a real good program — I got a lot of valuable information out of it," said workshop participant MSgt. Willie Lee, 64th Operations Support Squadron. "I feel I'm better prepared (for the civilian job market) thanks to the workshop."

"All in all, the first workshop was a big hit with the participants," said Mario Manfre, transition manager for Reese and the surrounding communities. "Of course, following each workshop, improvements will be made based on the participant evaluations."

The next workshop is set for April 21 through 23. Mr. Manfre said that servicemembers who wish to attend future workshops must be within 180 days of their separation.

To sign up, call family support at 3305.

FSC officials advised people to sign up early since space is limited.

'BALONEY'

DOD warns against deeper cuts

by TSgt. David P. Masko
Air Force News Service

WASHINGTON — In the wake of a House resolution to take an additional $7 billion from defense, the Pentagon said it may be forced to double its personnel cuts next year if Congress continues to demand more reductions.

To get quick savings in the fiscal 1993 defense budget "there is only one way, and that's to cut personnel," Defense Secretary Dick Cheney told the House Foreign Affairs Committee March 4.

"People will tell you, 'Well, we're not going to cut personnel,'" Secretary Cheney said. "Baloney, we can't do it that way. Half my budget is personnel...46 percent of everything I spend goes to personnel."

"The only way to get savings of this magnitude in a short period of time is for me to fire 300,000 active-duty military personnel in one year, on top of the 236,000 we're already getting rid of (in 1992-93)," Secretary Cheney said.

The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Gen. Colin Powell, told the committee that deeper cuts will not only hurt the armed forces, but hinder the men and women who will be needed to fight the nation's battles in the future.

The United States is reducing the size of its military force structure in response to the demise of major global threats, particularly the Soviet Union. But any reduction must also mean retaining experienced military personnel with a "competitive edge" in order to win any battle, General Powell said.

It is also important to retain elements of the strategic triad because the United States and its allies must be able to respond as they have in the past.

"We must be prepared to respond," the general said. "The key to preparedness is building forces flexible enough to react to the unknown."

At the same time, the chairman believes that if Congress makes the wrong calls and takes the military down too fast, it will "break it."

If the United States military is broken because of careless budget cuts — and then called upon to Moreover, Secretary Cheney and General Powell said it has taken decades to build today's force and that Congress will "bust it in a heartbeat" if it approves more cuts.

To counter another hollow force, Congress must look to the future and allow the Pentagon to preserve the quality and sufficiency of the armed forces while it transitions to lower spending levels, Secretary Cheney said.

In the meantime, the secretary challenged the Congress to:

- Terminate unneeded programs.
- Close, consolidate or realign military bases.
- Streamline defense infrastructure and procedures.
- Reduce manpower without arbitrary restrictions.
- Maintain proper balance between active and reserve forces.

"People will tell you, 'Well, we're not going to cut personnel... Baloney, we can't do it that way.'"

—Richard Cheney
Secretary of Defense

commit its forces overseas — it will not be able to respond as dramatically as it did during Desert Storm, General Powell said.

To illustrate the Pentagon's concern, the chairman pointed to the historical fact that in World War II, Korea and Vietnam the military was forced to rely on a neglected pool of general purpose forces until it could rebuild a warfighting force.

"For the secretary and the chairman who comes after us, I don't want them to curse our names because we broke the force as a result of trying to accelerate this," General Powell said.

"For example, there are 50,000 pink slips this year alone," he said. "This means soldiers who didn't want to leave are being forced out through reduction-in-force procedures."

"We can now (as a result of the Pentagon's proposals) reduce the overall size of our forces, and cut our defense budget," Secretary Cheney said. "But it's important for us to remember that future peace and stability in the world will continue to depend in large measure on our willingness to deploy forces overseas in Europe, Southwest Asia and the Pacific to maintain high quality forces here at home."

"These forces are critical to allow us to defend our national interest and to come to the aid our friends if they are threatened."

The decisions on defense that Congress faces in the coming months are at least as important as those made at the height of the Cold War, the secretary said. If the military is cut too fast, the United States will risk repetition of earlier conflicts.

Quality performer

Quality can be judged in many different ways. To TSgt. Normando Febus, NCO in charge of standardization and evaluation, 64th Security Police Squadron, quality is judged by the detail others emphasize on the job.

Sergeant Febus is responsible for evaluating procedures used by law enforcement personnel in all phases of their duties from staff positions to flight operations. He also serves as the self-inspection monitor, whereby he ensures compliance with directives in the work centers within the unit.

"My job allows me to learn about all the different areas in the security police career field," said Sergeant Febus. "In order to progress up the ladder, you need to know all the different functions. Knowing what's going on helps you to make smarter decisions."

Sergeant Febus has been in the Air Force for 11 years. His past assignments include Chanute AFB, Ill.; Clark AB, Philippines; and RAF Fairford, U.K. He said that the pride within the security police field is what he enjoys most about being in the Air Force.

"Our job can vary from 'ground pounding' to gate guard," he said. "I like having that variety to choose from within a single career field."

Sergeant Febus has been at Reese for two and one-half years, six months of that time spent serving in Desert Shield-Storm.

In his spare time, the 31-year-old enjoys riding horses, bicycling and jogging.

Sergeant Febus recently completed the ATC NCO Academy and is currently enrolled in the Community College of the Air Force pursuing a degree in criminal justice.

Recycling, RV show set

A recreational vehicle and recycling display will be at the Reese Main Exchange gazebo from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday.

The event will consist of a visit from the "Crush," the "recyclesaurus," recycling prizes and more. For details, call Richard Cunningham at 3815.

Accounting sets closings

Travel pay, military pay and the cashier's cage in the Reese Accounting and Finance Office will be closed from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday for an office function.

Also, accounting will be closed from 7:30-8:30 a.m. every Thursday for training. Anyone needing emergency assistance at this time can call 3432.

Mexican lunch planned

The Caprock Cafe will hold a Mexican fiesta with Mariachi band from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday. Everyone on base is welcome; applicable surcharge will apply.

Women's luncheon planned

The Federal Women's Group has a luncheon scheduled for 11:30 a.m. March 25 in the Reese Officers' Open Mess. Three speakers — Capt. Melinda Edwards, 64th FTW Inspections chief; Mary Williams, Reese Main Exchange manager; and Patricia Hernandez, the associate general counsel at Texas Tech — will be on hand for the event.

There will be serving line service at the luncheon, but R.S.V.P.s are requested. Call Marianne Lacy at 3976 for details.

'Smooth move' set

A "smooth move" workshop is set for 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. March 26 in the Reese Family Support Center. The workshop is designed to eliminate confusion that can result from a permanent-change-of-station move.

Reservations are required by March 24. Center officials encourage spouses and children to attend these briefings with the military member. Child care will be available with a reservation. For details, call 3305.

Passover feast scheduled

A "Seder" — the Jewish feast of Passover — will be conducted at 7 p.m. March 24 in the Reese Chapel by Rev. Sol Rosen, pastor of the Rose of Sharon Judeo-Christian Fellowship.

Chapel officials said the reverend "will present the meal in its Jewish context and then give the full Christian meaning." Everyone on base is welcome; call 3237 for reservations.

Herbicides require care

With spring drawing near, the self-help store in the 64th Civil Engineering Squadron will be issuing chemicals, including herbicides, to help base residents keep up their lawns.

Officials in the entomology shop said it is "imperative" that people read the labels of the herbicides they use so that they can avoid accidents and misuse. For details, call entomology at 6654.

'Angel' volunteers sought

Nominations are being sought on base for outstanding volunteers of the year who can be recognized under the "angel" recognition program.

Nominations packets have already been distributed on base, and submissions are due to the Reese Family Support Center by April 3. Call 3305 for details.

School improvement possible

A free video program on improving in school is being offered weekday afternoons from 4-4:30, 4:30-5 and 5-5:30 in the Reese Youth Center. Grade school and high school videos are available.

The only supplies needed are pen and paper. To sign up, stop by the center or call 3820.

Kids can get PCS help

Family members between 6 and 18 who will be going to a new base in the near future can get information about their next station and possibly a pen pal through "kids in touch with kids."

Anyone who would like to find out more, or who would like to be a pen pal to kids coming here should call the Reese Family Services Center at 3306.

Insurance info needed

People who are going to be admitted to the base hospital and who have insurance besides the Civilian Health and Medical Plan of the Uniformed Services should bring certain information about their other coverage with them.

This includes company name, policy number, effective date, company address, who is covered and expiration date. Officials in the 64th Medical Squadron said that this information is usually on a wallet-size card that is provided with the policy. For details, call 3521.

More tips available for voting

As primary season continues, many wing members have questions about their rights and responsibilities as voters. The questions and answers below are provided by the wing voting officer:

Q: I am from North Dakota, am registered to vote there, but have not done so in years. How do I vote?

A: Send in a request for an absentee ballot. If you still have your voter registration card, send that number into them along with the new address.

Q: Do I have to request a ballot for every election if I am still a registered voter?

A: To be on the safe side, yes. Some states need you to request it every time.

Q: My spouse is from Maine but now lives here. What is her state of residency?

A: Because the law varies widely from state to state, your best bet is to contact the Reese Legal Office at 3505 for assistance with this question.

Q: How do I determine where I need to send the voter registration card?

A: Tell the unit voting representative where you wish to vote and he or she can look it up.

If you have other questions or need voting assistance, contact your unit voting officer or call Maj. Gary Tucker, wing project officer, at 3284.

Going for the gold

Reese boxer 'swings' toward Olympic trials

by Sgt. Greg Spraggins

Not many people would call Mack Gadsden a lightweight. For one thing he's a light middleweight. For another, he packs a powerful punch for anyone with chin enough to step into the same ring.

Mr. Gadsden, Air Force Office of Special Investigation, Det. 1025, won the 156-pound weight class in the Wichita Falls Regional Golden Gloves Tournament last weekend with a decision over three-time defending regional champion Jimmy Medrano. This earned him a berth in the Texas State Golden Gloves Tournament set for Tuesday through March 21 at Fort Worth, Texas.

Mr. Gadsden won at the Air Force championships at Kelly AFB, Texas in January. It was the second time in three years he attended the the Air Force camp, withdrawing from the finals in 1990 after a hand injury and missing the 1991 camp while deployed to Desert Storm.

"I was upset that I didn't get to go in 1991," said the Charleston, S.C., native, "but it made me work even harder preparing for the next chance."

Even after the work, though, you can't win them all. Mr. Gadsden took two of his three losses recently at the armed forces championships at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and at the U.S. boxing championships held at the Olympic training center at Colorado Springs, Colo. Ironically, the two losses, leaving him with a 15-3 record, were against two of the eight boxers that will compete in the Olympic trials this year.

"It's not so bad loosing to someone that will be in the Olympic trials," said Mr. Gadsden, "and I know that if I don't make it this year, I will in 1996 if I don't try to turn professional."

It's been said "There's no substitute for experience," but Mr. Gadsden believes dedication can pack an equally powerful punch.

"Some of the guys I fight have 80 or 100 fights under their belts," he said. "I've picked up some good things from them. I'm fortunate to be moving along (in boxing) so well."

The 24-year-old has only been boxing five years, taking up the sport while stationed in England. After a basketball ankle injury sidelined him, he started watching the boxers working out and grew interested.

It was about seven months later that Mr. Gadsden won the United Kingdom and U.S. Air Forces in Europe championships. A year later, he matched that.

"I have to know that when I'm in the ring, I'm in better condition than the other guy - period. That's my confidence," he said. Mr. Gadsden runs four to five miles a day and does a two-hour workout at the L u b b o c k Warrior's Boxing Club.

Mr. Gadsden said the gym training is the important part and credits much of his success to his trainers.

"What the coaches and trainers teach you is what you do in the ring," he said. "You don't go in knowing what you're going to do—you must rely on instinct."

Mr. Gadsden said his biggest future challenge will be staying motivated and focused on winning every time he gets into the ring.

Mr. Gadsden shows the opponent's view of his technique. (Sgt. Greg Spraggins)

Ask about our Advantage Card

General Motors Extends Our Salute To America's Armed Forces.

General Motors is proud of America's armed forces. That's why from now until September 30th, your Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Buick and GMC Truck dealers are offering a Special Military Program to all active U.S.-based military personnel or their spouses on a wide array of popular cars and trucks.

While these GM divisions already have incentive plans in place on many of these vehicles that help make it easy to buy or lease a new car or light truck, the Special Military Program makes it even easier. Under the program, you get $400 cash when you buy or lease an eligible new GM car or light truck. Add that to existing GM incentives and you can save even more. The Special Military Program is not available with the college graduate, first-time buyer or overseas vehicle purchase programs. See your GM dealer for the list of eligible vehicles and details of the incentive plans.

Many of you have already taken advantage of the GM Special Military Program. So visit your GM dealer today, and see how much we appreciate your efforts.
