Time change calls for increased safety

by Charles Gerrior
Reese Ground Safety Manager

Saturday night, when we all turn our clocks back to Standard Time, we will once again feel that we are spending more hours of the day in darkness.

We must increase our awareness of road hazards as the availability of light on roadways is decreased. Driving at night can be a trying experience. Many times we have to adjust our eyes to the lights of oncoming automobiles and we are not always able to see objects clearly.

The best way to survive these driving conditions is to reduce our driving speed, take extra time and be cautious.

One of the real dangers on Reese and on local roads is bicyclists—especially cyclists who wear dark clothing, ride a bicycle without a front headlight, rear tail lights or enough reflectors to make their presence on the roadway known to others.

A similar hazard is joggers—especially those who run on the street with the flow of traffic wearing dark clothing without any reflective material. All runners should consider carrying a light to alert drivers to their presence.

Remember to be aware of the potential dangers and problems we will be facing for the next few months during the increased hours of darkness.

Take an energy reality check

by John Kain
Reese Energy Manager

For those of you who haven't noticed the articles in the Roundup, the posters in your facilities, or the marquee at the front gate, October is national energy awareness month. It's the time when we bombard you with energy-saving tips, quips and responsibilities.

A friend told me the other day that he was a responsible person. Seems that every time something went wrong, he was responsible.

Many of us don't know what our responsibility is until something goes wrong. We seem to live in a world of crisis management because everyone wants everything right now and some things have to wait. The end result is late suspenses, increased cost or an opportunity missed.

It is my job as base energy manager to keep everyone informed of changes in energy policy, ideas for energy reduction, and promote energy awareness. By presidential executive order, all federal agencies must take whatever appropriate action is necessary to reduce their energy use by 20 percent by the year 2000 and reduce fuel consumption by 10 percent by the year 1995.

To date Reese has met these goals and in some cases exceeded them. As a result, the base has won the command's energy award four of the past five years. However, just because we have won the award does not mean we can sit back and relax. We have a long way to go to reach that 20 percent goal and as the year 2000 approaches, it gets harder to show increased improvement.

For Reese to meet this long-term goal and avoid the last minute crisis, we all must work together to promote and practice energy-saving strategies. Many things are already being done, like replacement of less energy efficient equipment, reduced wattage in lighting fixtures, and a future conversion of military vehicles to natural gas.

These ongoing programs will help reduce our energy consumption, but not enough to achieve or exceed our goal. The remainder of the reduction requirement is the responsibility of every person working or living on Reese Air Force Base.

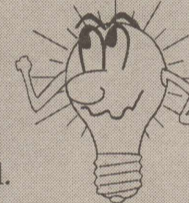

The energy-saving tips appearing in the Roundup are there to promote this awareness and give some ideas on how to help in this reduction. Many of these things, like adjusting thermostats and turning out unused lights may seem small and insignificant. But if everyone participates in energy conservation we should show vast improvement. Keep in mind the suggestion program for your energy-saving ideas, which could result in a monetary award to the suggester.

If you have any ideas which you think we could use, please forward them to the energy conservation monitor in your area or to the energy office, 64 CES/DEME, or call 3510.

Small scams pass increased costs to everyone

by MSgt. Roger Gravelle
64th Security Police Squadron

When people hear fraud, waste and abuse, horror stories come to mind of major defense contractors bilking the Air Force out of millions of dollars with one kind of scam or another.

There are cases of FWA happening every day around the Air Force, but you don't read about them because, compared to the big rip-offs, these are just nickel and dime occurrences. But all of those little losses can add up to big bucks in a hurry.

Having spent several years as a security police investigator, it was my job to track down some of these small-time scammers. Here are some of their stories.

A young airman purchased a slightly damaged used car figuring to put a few dollars into it and have the body repaired. He ended up putting every penny he had, and could borrow, into the car just to keep it running. After all this he didn't have enough money to do the body work.

So he filed a false police report stating the car had been the victim of a hit-and-run driver. Then he filed a false claim against his insurance company and a false claim with the base legal office.

This scam cost him not only the car, which was eventually repossessed, but his career as well.

Sometimes an anonymous tip leads to a case.

One morning I received a newspaper clipping and a note. It was a photo from the local paper of a couple who had been married that weekend, and the note suggested they had moved very rapidly through the housing waiting list, since they were already in military family housing.

It didn't take long to uncover the fact that this young captain figured to get a jump on the housing list. He fraudulently represented himself as being married and added his name to the list several months before he was eligible.

In fact, the couple had lived in government quarters for a couple of months before the wedding. Needless to say, he received an unexpected wedding present.

The strangest case of fraud I ever investigated came to me via the FBI. They called to tell me about a technical school student who was an escaped federal prisoner.

Seems an Army private was court-martialed as a dorm thief. While doing his time in an Army confinement facility, he escaped, arranged a new identity, and joined the Air Force. When his fingerprints for security clearance got to the bureau, they ran into his old prints from the Army. As I searched his dorm room, I found the birth certificates, Social Security cards and other papers for two more identities. The new car he was driving also happened to be stolen.

The Army was more than willing to get him back and tack a couple of extra years onto his original sentence.

Who's the victim in these crimes? We all are.

People like the airman who made the false claims cost all of us money in higher insurance rates. The captain robbed someone who was authorized—and who may have badly needed the quarters—of the privilege of living rent- and utilities-free in family housing. And the Army private wasted the money it costs to train and equip someone for today's Air Force.

If you suspect someone of fraud, waste or abuse, report it! Use the Reese Fraud, Waste and Abuse Hotline at 6547. You may be saving yourself some money.

Town meeting:

Medical system, future construction head discussion

Proposed changes to the military health system and various base construction projects headed the topics discussed at the "town meeting" held last week at the enlisted open mess.

Col. Bob Brooks, 64th Support Group commander, chaired the quarterly meeting.

Lt. Col. Tim Loftus, 64th Medical Squadron commander, talked about various proposed changes to the military health care system, including "medical right-sizing" here at Reese. (See related story on page 7 for specific details.)

Continued upgrading of the "Phase III" Reese Village units was briefed by Lt. Col. Scott Showers, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron commander. He noted that 12 of the 108 phase three units have been completed by the contractor and will soon be available for people on the housing waiting list. The colonel noted this is a modification of the units and not a complete renovation as completed in phases one and two.

The colonel also outlined current and upcoming street construction projects. He acknowledged there will be some inconveniences and asked for base support. A detailed listing of the projects and a construction area map appeared in last week's Roundup.

Mr. Bruce Hale, chief of environmental services, spoke about the need to protect the environment by correctly disposing of household chemicals. He urged people to try to exhaust all household chemicals before disposing of the containers. He also noted that housing residents will soon be receiving environmental materials which define the hazards of household chemicals and suggest non-toxic alternatives.

Halloween "trick or treating" will be authorized in Reese Village from 6 to 8 p.m. on Sunday, according to Maj. James Peck, 64th Security Police Squadron commander. For more information about Halloween activities see page 4.

SPs help make base's Halloween safe

by MSgt. B. C. Hicks
64th Security Police Squadron

This year's Halloween trick-or-treat hours will be from 6 to 8 p.m. on Sunday. A few precautions and common sense will make the evening a safe and enjoyable night for everyone.

To aid in monitoring and promoting safety, Reese's Security Police, accompanied by McGruff, the "Crime Fighting Dog" (with lots of candy) will be patrolling throughout the housing area.

Consider the following safety tips as you prepare to trick-or-treat:

□ Never let small children go trick-or-treating alone. They should be accompanied by an older child or adult.

□ Children's trick-or-treat rounds should be confined to their own neighborhood.

□ Pets should not be allowed to accompany children. Pet owners are reminded to keep their pets restrained at all times.

□ Urge children to wait until they get home to taste their "treats" so that parents can first inspect them. Parents should discard unwrapped food and homemade treats received from strangers and check commercial products for signs of tampering. If treats appear to have been tampered with, immediately notify the security police.

NOTE: Security police will check candy for metal objects at the Visitor Control Center. The checks will be conducted with hand-held metal detectors. Even after the candy has been checked by Security Police, parents should check it again thoroughly.

□ See that children wear costumes that are light in color, short enough to prevent tripping, non-flammable and don't restrict vision. Costumes can be covered with reflective tape or "glow" spray paint so they pick up beams of auto headlights and other lights.

□ Although trick-or-treating is a child's activity, parents should escort their children and remain with them at all times. Groups should be no more than four or five in number, so that each child can receive proper attention without the donor feeling swamped. Children should be told to:

□ Cross only at corners, never between cars and never diagonally across an intersection.

□ Look in all directions before crossing the street.

□ Watch for and obey all traffic lights.

□ Walk, never run across the street.

□ Use sidewalks, not the street for walking.

□ Wait on the curb, not on the street, until street is clear to cross.

□ Children should carry flashlights after dark.

Those driving to the base housing area to trick-or-treat are asked to park their vehicles and walk their desired route. Don't follow your trick-or-treaters in a car from house to house.

People wishing to welcome children participating in the trick-or-treat activities should turn on their outside lights to let children know they are welcome. This should also lessen the chance of someone tripping over objects in the dark and being injured.

Don't invite children into your home; any fancy Halloween displays should be set up outside.

We suggest that householders give children factory-wrapped or sealed treats only. No loose or uncovered candy, popcorn, fruit or other goodies.

Don't permit unlawful acts. This will not be tolerated by security police patrols. All acts of vandalism, soaping of cars, throwing eggs and the like should be reported to the security police on Crime Stop Line, 885-3000.

Help the security police to help everyone have a safe and enjoyable Halloween.

A Night Evil Things Roam The Earth

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

Many, many years ago, a group of people called Celts, the first Aryan people who came from Asia to settle in Europe, lionized their New Year on the first day of November.

In accordance with their beliefs, the last night of the old year, Oct. 31, was set aside especially for the souls of the dead to return to their homes. After all, it wasn't nice to keep the poor dead souls away from their homes the entire year. The spirits could warm themselves at the blazing hearth and at least enjoy the smell of food cooking on spits in the fireplace.

Not only were the dead souls permitted in town, but witches, sirens, demons, hobgoblins, trolls and every conceivable kind of evil spirit were allowed to roam the earth on this night. People believed that witches, women in league with the devil, rode through the sky on broomsticks. The witches danced the boogaloo on the hilltops with goblins and imps to the music of the cool devil's bagpipes or castanets made from dead men's bones.

Certainly none of these visitors could be allowed to run around the countryside scaring little children on Nov. 1, All Saints' Day.

In some parts of Merry Ole England, immense bonfires were kept alive throughout the night to keep the scary evil things at bay. As in most superstitious atmospheres, a single precaution isn't enough for some people. Sssooooo, to add more deterrents for the blood-curdling evil things, men armed with pitchforks and shouting loudly frolicked around the bonfires.

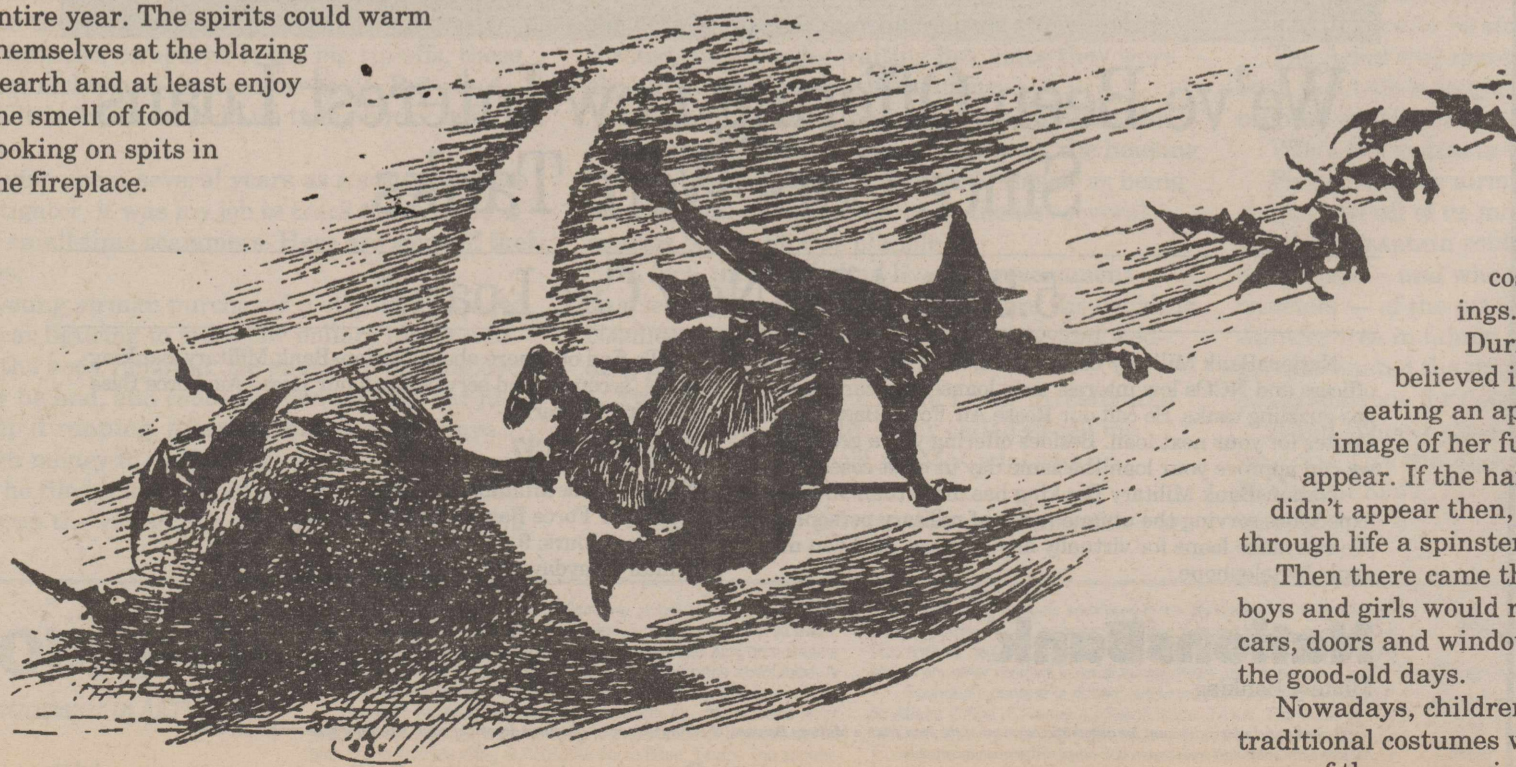

As the years passed, and people grew older and wiser, they started to cast aside their superstitions and turned the evening of Oct. 31 into a festival of parties for young people, and "old young people," who decked out in weird costumes for the happenings.

During this phase, a girl believed if she sat before a mirror eating an apple at midnight, the image of her future husband would appear. If the handsome young knight didn't appear then, the poor girl would go through life a spinster.

Then there came the time when groups of boys and girls would roam the street marking cars, doors and windows with soap. Those were the good-old days.

Nowadays, children go from door to door in traditional costumes warning, "trick or treat" some of them mean just that!

Using illegal software can be costly

by Sgt. Bertrand Washer
Reese Public Affairs

Base computer systems security officers, from Data Monitor Systems Inc., are currently checking Reese organizations' computers for their annual computer security inspection.

The inspections for base units will last through mid-November, but inspectors are concerned with possible software violations that may be discovered during their spot checks.

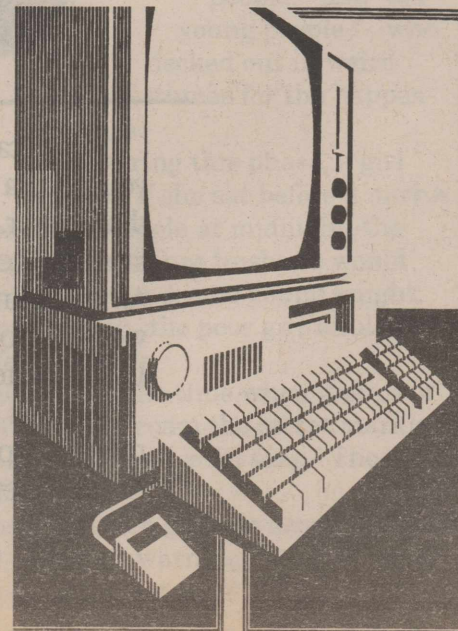

Changes in Title 17, Section 106 of the United States Code have increased the penalties for software copyright abusers. A story ran in the Reese Roundup July 2 issue addressing the most common questions concerning software misuse.

Basically the article stated that copies of software used in the work area may violate federal copyright law.

According to the base computer system security officers, the law states that anyone who purchases a copy of software has the right to load that copy onto a single computer and to make one backup copy "for archival purposes only." It is illegal to use that software on more than one computer or to distribute copies of that software unless specific permission has been obtained from the copyright owner. Those in violation, whether knowingly or unknowingly, may face not only a civil lawsuit, but also criminal liability as well, which includes up to $100,000 fines per infringement and jail terms of up to five years.

Because the personnel computer industry is still new, and software copying is so easy, many people are either unaware of the laws or choose to ignore them. In addition to the above penalties, military people violating copyright law may also be punished under the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Even though each unit has computer security monitors, it is the responsibility of everyone using the software to understand and adhere to the laws. Base computer system security officers stress that ignorance of the law is no excuse.

For more information or answers to questions about your computer's software, contact Tyree Marshall or Bill Barr at 3707 or 3326.

Health care reform: Administration proposes changes to military medical care

by Capt. Mark Lewandowski
Reese Managed Care Director

Much has been said and written about the health care reform measures proposed by President Clinton, but only recently have articles appeared in the Air Force Times and Airman describing the effect of those measures on the military health care system.

HOW IT WORKS

Briefly, the health care reform measures would allow the Department of Defense to establish military health plans, known as TRICARE, covering broad geographical regions in which military hospitals will play a central role. These military health plans will also contract with civilian health providers to deliver services to military beneficiaries on a more consistent basis throughout the United States.

The plan divides the country into 12 regions that will be managed by a major medical facility called a "lead agent," from one of the three services. The "lead agent" for our region is Wilford Hall Medical Center, region six. Implementation of this plan in our region is expected in May 1995.

REASON FOR HEALTH CARE REFORM

Family members of active-duty and retirees receive high quality and comprehensive health care. However, many of these beneficiaries experience uneven access to health care and/or relatively high out-of-pocket costs because they don't live near a military hospital/clinic or overcrowding at those facilities cause them to find their own providers and pay higher out-of-pocket costs under CHAMPUS or Medicare.

HEALTH CARE PLANS

Upon implementation of the new health care reform proposal, active-duty personnel will automatically be enrolled in TRICARE. Family members of active duty and retirees under the age of 65 would have two choices: (1) join a military health plan (TRICARE), or (2) join one of the civilian health plans.

Those members choosing a TRICARE military health plan would use an integrated network of military treatment facilities and contracted civilian providers.

There will be no deductibles, and their cost-sharing for civilian-provided services would be less than standard CHAMPUS.

Active-duty families of E-4s and below will be able to join at no cost; all others would have to pay a modest annual fee.

Those who choose a civilian plan can join either a "managed care" plan that offers medical care through a network of selected providers with a potential out-of-pocket cost higher than the TRICARE military health plan or choose still another plan that offers a wider choice of civilian providers but with a generally higher out-of-pocket cost than the civilian managed care plan. Enrollees in civilian health care plans will not be permitted use of military hospitals or clinics.

AREAS WITHOUT A MILITARY TREATMENT FACILITY

In the limited areas of the country where a military health plan may not be available, active-duty family members would be able to choose from among several civilian health plans. DOD beneficiaries who choose a civilian managed care plan will pay the same premium costs as the military health plan. This would allow beneficiaries who now have to rely on CHAMPUS—and pay higher levels of cost-sharing as well as face potentially catastrophic expenses—to have guaranteed access to the same comprehensive benefits at a similar cost as those in a military health plan.

MEMBERS OVER 65

Family members or retirees who are age 65 or older would also have two basic choices: (1) use Medicare, or (2) join the TRICARE military health plan. Cost sharing under the TRICARE plan will be lower than under Medicare.

FINAL THOUGHTS

As you move from military to civilian health care plans or choose a civilian plan that offers more choice, you will probably incur a higher out-of-pocket cost. It also must be remembered that this plan is only a plan until congress passes the proposed legislation, and DOD implements the legislation. Until then, the proposed fees, co-payment and benefit package as published are subject to change. As more information becomes available we plan to publish articles to keep you abreast of the status of this legislation as soon as we can. Your health benefits advisor at the hospital can be reached at 3581.

Co-workers watch as MSgt Steve Hastings, 64th Medical Squadron is arrested by security police specialist A1C Tiffany Weaver.

Sergeant selected for booster club lock-up

By A1C Tabatha Eanes
Reese Public Affairs

As he was thrown against the wall, frisked and handcuffed, he wondered what was going to happen to him next. Co-workers and other base people stared while he was put into the police car like a common criminal.

MSgt. Steve Hastings, 64th Medical Squadron, was "arrested" Oct. 22 at 10 a.m.

The "arrest" was part of the 64th Medical Squadron's booster club fundraiser. There were five suspects being elected for the fake arrest including Hastings, Capt. Paul Nelson, Capt. Eric Taylor, Capt. Maritza Milan and MSgt. Donald Carroll — all members of the 64th Medical Squadron.

Votes were tallied from monetary donations placed in canisters around the hospital, with the member receiving the most cash becoming the lead "suspect."

"We had to come up with a creative idea to help support the organizational activities," Hastings said. The idea had to be a unique event that didn't compete with other services offered on base.

Hastings was taken to the security police building; while awaiting his release he continued his paperwork. His "pardon" came soon; as he was released before lunch getting time off his "sentence" for good behavior.

White House asks for presidential aide

RANDOLPH AFB, Texas — The White House Military Office needs six Air Force officers, majors and lieutenant colonel selectees, to compete for the job of Air Force aide to the president.

Nominees should be available for interviews starting in December and able to report for duty in May. The officer selected will serve a two-year joint service duty and work with a representative from each of the other services, Air Force personnel officials said.

Military aides share four functions — emergency actions officer, White House Military Office operations officer, aide de camp and ceremonial aide.

More information about duty requirements and nomination procedures is available from Capt. Karen Van Wickler, AFMPC/DPMRSH, at DSN 487-6771, or commercial (210) 652-6771. (AFNS)

Notes

Workshop helps job search

A workshop for getting your foot in the door through temporary employment will be offered 2-3:30 p.m., Nov. 9 at the family support center. To make reservations, call Cynthia Hood at 3079 or 3305.

Volunteers to be recognized

Helping Hand quarterly award nominations are due by close of business Monday. This is an excellent way to acknowledge base volunteers' contributions to our community. The nominations are for the past quarter, July-September. For more information, call the family support center at 3305.

Become a tour guide

The partnership program with mentors from Reese and sixth-grade students from Friendship Intermediate School are coming for a base tour, Thursday. Those interested in assisting with the group's tour may contact Capt. Marshall at 3893.

Volunteer needed at CPO

Reese's Civilian Personnel Office needs a volunteer to help as an administrative assistant. Background in customer service and office automation is preferred. Hours are flexible, a few hours a couple days each week. For more information, call the volunteer program at 3305.

Base's top talent shines

Congratulations to A1C Cynthia Dunning of the 64th Medical Squadron and SrA. Frank Tibbets, of the 64th Logistics Squadron who were selected to represent Reese at the Air Education and Training Command's talent show at Keesler AFB, Miss. running through Saturday.

Problems getting a ride?

If you have a problem or complaint regarding the base's transportation contractor, the 64th Transportation Squadron would like to hear from you. Please complete an Air Force Form 714 and send it to LGT/22 or call 3357 or 3358. Transportation will look into any complaint and resolve the issue.

CGOC heads food drive

The annual Reese Thanksgiving Food Drive began Monday and runs through Nov. 19. Donations will be distributed to 40 or more active-duty families for their Thanksgiving day meal. Boxes are located in every squadron for the canned and boxed goods. For more information, contact 2nd Lt. Terry Forest at 3520 or 1st Lt. Susan Kirkham at 6187.

Have ghoulish good time

The enlisted club is having a Halloween party 7 p.m. - 2 a.m., Saturday. Music by Maestro Lee and a costume contest to highlight the haunted happenings with cash prizes for the best costumes. Come and have a devil of a time.

Empty your wardrobes

The 64th Operations Support Squadron is sponsoring a base-wide clothing drive through Thursday. If you have any clothes you would like to donate, bring them to Bldg. 820, Room 24 or call to arrange a pickup before 3 p.m. Nov. 4. The clothes will be distributed to various organizations in the Lubbock community. For more information, call 1st Lt. Steven Brahm at 3491.

Household items up for bids

A sealed bid sale will be held 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., Wednesday at Bldg. 2107. Bid items include televisions, mattresses, end tables, writing tables and other miscellaneous items. Viewing is 9 a.m. - 4 p.m., Tuesday. Bids will be awarded noon Nov. 15. Bidding terms available at time of viewing on items requiring a minimum bid. All bids must contain your name, phone number, bid amount and item number that you are bidding on. For more information on the sale, call Billy Duke at 3155.

Advisory council meets

The base exchange/commissary advisory council meeting is 2 p.m., Thursday in the Reese Manor. If you have questions or suggestions, please contact your unit representative.

Civilians needed for SOS

Nominations of civilians are being taken for the fiscal year 1994 Squadron Officers School. All GS-9s through GS-12 civilian employees with at least three years of continuous federal service are eligible for SOS. A bachelors degree is highly desirable. Also, ability to meet or exceed specific physical requirements is necessary. Nominations are due by Nov. 15 to 64 MSSQ/MSCE. For more information, call 3803.

Cadets host POW/MIA vigil

Arnold Air Society and Angel Flight members at Texas Tech University are hosting an around the clock vigil to bring attention to American prisoners of war and those missing in action. The opening ceremony begins at noon Nov. 5 at the Memorial Circle on the Tech campus. The guest speaker, retired Air Force Lt. Gen. Bernhard Mittermeyer from Maryland, will be present. A flyover of F-111s from Cannon AFB, N.M., will be featured at the opening events, as the cadet's sabre flight drill team begins the 24-hour vigil. For more information, call Steven Mathews at 742-7851.

OWC plans bazaar

Anyone who would like to rent a booth at the Nov. 6 Reese Officers Wives Club bazaar should call Laura Graulty at 794-5301 or Peggy Vivori at 794-7031. All items at the event should be handcrafted or personalized.

The bazaar will be open to the public, and admission will be free. It is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Mathis Community Center. All proceeds from booth rental will go to the OWC scholarship and charity fund.

Bible study meets for lunch

If you need a spiritual lift in the mid-week, Reese Chapel conducts a Bible study at noon every Wednesday for all adult Reese community members. A complimentary sandwich lunch is provided for those joining our study. Call Chaplain (Capt.) Steven Crossman at 3237.

Looking for your blood

Reese's bimonthly blood drive will be held 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Mathis Recreation Center Ballroom. United Blood Services is looking for donations of all blood types. For more information, call Capt. Theresa Satterfield at 3219.

Women's group forms

A women's support group is being formed by the base family advocacy officer for Reese mothers. Anyone interested should contact Capt. Sharon Bailey ay 3739 for details.

Chairperson needed

A volunteer Red Cross chairperson is needed. According to family support officials, interested individuals need to be dedicated, good-natured, "but most of all, have a big heart." Duties will include attending board meetings, updating job descriptions and orienting new volunteers. In addition, a volunteer administrative assistant is needed in the base legal office. Call 3305 for details on either position.

Weight problems begin in early years

Many parents are concerned about their child's weight, and with good reason, said dietitian Lt. Col. Alana D. Cline.

"In the past 15 years, obesity in children ages 6 to 11 has increased an estimated 54 percent," said Cline, who heads the Clinical Dietetics division at Tripler Army Medical Center, Hawaii. She attributes the increase to families having fewer scheduled meals, decreased emphasis on physical education in some schools and continued popularity of high-calorie snack foods.

"If you suspect your child is overweight, first check with your pediatrician or a registered dietitian," said Cline. "It may be that your child is experiencing a temporary growth spurt that may even out in time. It would be harmful to interfere at this time. But if your child is confirmed to be overweight, it's wise to take some preventive steps.

"Strict dieting in children can be harmful because it can affect their normal growth and development," she said, suggesting parents aim at slowing their child's rate of weight gain so the child will grow into an appropriate weight. "You want to teach your child to rely on internal cues to regulate how much to eat. If your child learns to stop eating when full, he or she will possess a powerful tool toward lifetime weight management."

Parents can help their child learn good eating habits by taking the following steps, said Cline:

- Have regular times and places for meals and snacks.
- Make eating a "pure" activity — no eating while watching television.
- Allow children to eat as much at meals as they want. Clinical studies show children limited on food at mealtime are prone to overeating when unsupervised.
- Display alternate ways of reacting to stress — going for a walk instead of eating cookies.
- Remove reminders of eating. Put foods away after meals, don't leave sweets out in view. (AFNS)
