Mission

Reese shines for IG!

Reese and its people shined during the two-week Quality Air Force Assessment and Operational Readiness Inspection conducted by Hq. ATC personnel and completed April 9.

During the inspection outbrief, command officials praised the wing for its work. Col. Willard Grosvenor, ATC inspector general, said the wing is "definitely a credit to ATC," while the command's director of operations cited the attitude present at Reese.

"You can see the camaraderie, esprit de corps and enthusiasm on the base," said Brig. Gen. John McFalls. "You all deserve a pat on the back."

Areas on the base that did exceptionally well during the inspection included wing flightsafety, the religious program support and functional/facility management programs at the chapel, the international military student office and learning center in the 64th Operations Support Squadron, and the combat operations support flight in the 64th Logistics Squadron.

In addition, the base as a whole did very well on customs and courtesies. The IG team paid particular praise on the appearance of base personnel.

"This inspection has been a complete success in my mind," said Col. David Love, wing commander. "The suggestions the IG team has left us with will enable us to make things even better."

"Everyone on base has worked hard," he said. "With a little bit of attention to detail, we can remain on the 'knife's edge' we're on now."

From my perspective

by Col. F. Randall Starbuck
64th Operations Group commander

"You're on!" cried the stage manager to W. C. Fields, who, after a few pick-me-ups, was snoozing peacefully on a chair in his dressing room. Fields, bleary-eyed, sat up with a start. "I am?" he mumbled. "How am I doing?"

With the ink still wet on the Hq. ATC Quality Air Force Assessment and Operational Readiness Inspection reports, we have a pretty good idea of how we're doing as a unit. We're doing excellent!

But, most people need an answer every now and then to the question "How am I doing?" With the performance feedback worksheet features of the officer and enlisted effectiveness systems, it's mandatory. But it shouldn't be mandatory! It's a commander's or supervisor's job to tell people how they're doing — whether good or bad. Unfortunately, many of us duck the task when it's unpleasant. But a major shortcoming in many organizations is a failure to recognize those who excel based on the accepted standards and a failure to praise the person who has performed far above his previous efforts.

We should also, on occasions when performance is not satisfactory, provide constructive feedback with a clear indication that we are confident the subordinate can improve. That isn't a pleasant task. Most of us hate to do it. Perhaps that's why we tend to avoid, postpone or neglect this duty. Yet this is one of the most useful, fruitful things we can do. That is because criticism, used correctly, can change a pattern. Criticism just doesn't motivate people as much as praise. With criticism, if they try harder, it's because they have to. With praise, people try harder because they want to.

Even when the criticism is called for, try to work in some praise. To set the stage, bring up the good things a person has done. Then, focus on the weak spot that needs improving. Don't try to fool anybody. Say what you mean and mean what you say. People don't like double talk and they don't like liars. Most people prefer a leader who gives them straight facts — even when they're not very pleasant.

On the other hand, if work is excellent, recognize it! Let your people know their efforts are appreciated. It's wonderful to get credit for the things we do — for the ordinary, everyday things as well as the big things. Giving that credit and seeing that nobody misses out on it is one of the most important things a supervisor can do. But you also have to appreciate what people do even when they aren't necessarily the "greatest" or "best." With a little praise and appreciation, people will try harder because they want to.

A lot of a commander's or supervisor's time goes toward administrative and disciplinary actions. But you must also make time to spend with those people who perform in a satisfactory or outstanding manner. Recognizing them is a more important function of command. If the boss doesn't give thanks and appreciation, who will? The best supervisors are great cheerleaders. They realize that praising the good things people do provides far more stimulus than criticizing the bad.

People have a natural need to feel they're wanted and their efforts are appreciated. They like to know that what they do is significant and that they are an important part of the team effort. Sincere praise fills this need. Most people like increased challenges and responsibilities, a chance to be more important to the organization. That's why praise is such an effective tool for getting better results.

Respect for the flag

by Maj. Gary Tucker
64th OSS

All personnel in uniform must face the flag and salute during the raising (Reveille) and lowering (Retreat) of the flag.

Upon the first note of the National Anthem or "To The Colors," all personnel in uniform who are not in formation must stand and face the flag (or the music if the flag is not visible) and salute. Hold the salute until the last note of the music is played.

All vehicles in motion must stop at the first note of the music, and the occupants sit quietly until the music ends.

Deliberately avoiding saluting our flag, seeking cover or ignoring the sounding of Retreat, the National Anthem or To The Colors, is disrespectful to our country and the men and women who have fought and died for it. Give a hoot — salute.

Getting to know a prospective thief

Editor's note: The following was submitted by the 64th Security Police Squadron.

I'd like to take this opportunity to introduce myself. I'm the base thief. Hey, everybody needs a hobby. Mine just happens to be helping myself to other people's things. It's not like I break into homes or offices or anything. I just kind of pick up stuff I find around the base. You know, nice things, that you just didn't bother to take the time to lock up.

Kind of like the 10-speed bike I took from the enlisted club. At first I wasn't really interested in it. But after seeing it sitting there for a couple of days, unlocked, and no one paying any attention to it, what the heck, someone might as well get some use out of it. Hey, if someone had just bothered to chain it up it might still be there.

Then there was the day I was at the base exchange. Just dropped in to "pick up" a few things.

Now now, I was going to pay for them. Anyway, I was on my way out and stepped into the latrine for a second and someone had left their jewelry just lying there. Guess they washed their hands or something and just left the stuff there. Nice stuff too! Just kept my eye on it for a while, and when no one showed up, I figured it must be mine. Hey, I'm not the base Lost and Found am I?

Got a nice little stereo too. I have to admit I kind of planned that one, but it didn't take much work. I'd seen it sitting on this desk in an office down the hall. Every time I went by, there it was, whether anyone was in the office or not! I just couldn't take it anymore, so to speak, so I did. Just kind of picked it up on the way home from work once day. Look, if they really wanted it they would have locked it in the desk or something, right?

But what I really like is the great radio controlled boat I sort of found. Well, it wasn't like it was locked up or anything. I was just looking around and saw this shed so I checked it out. I mean, it's not like there was a lock on the door or anything. There was lots of great stuff in there, but the boat was the only thing I could carry and still ride the bike!

I'm looking forward to a great summer! Figure I'll get me a different bike, maybe two or three. You know, one for the wife and kids. Need a new lawn mower too. Mine's kind of trashed after last year. I'll probably be able to pick one up in a week or two, now that the weather is getting warmer. Maybe even a new grill while I'm thinking about it. I could use a couple of lawn chairs too. But hey, it's not like it's my fault. It's not like I break into homes or offices or anything. I just kind of pick up stuff I find around the base. You know, nice things, that you just didn't bother to take the time to lock up.

Quality Air Force

by Lt. Col. Michael R. Barnes
Hq ATC Logistics Supply Operations Branch

We all know that aircraft can't fly without essential spare parts that generally cost a great deal of money.

However, many times the parts problems come down to relatively inexpensive items with which we can more readily associate (e.g., specialized bolts, screws and the like). These relatively small, inexpensive items are used to repair larger, expensive items and their nonavailability can cause the large items to sit idle in base repair shops. The result is degraded aircraft availability.

In the logistics community, we refer to the lack of these bits and pieces as "awaiting parts," or more commonly, AWP.

In October 1992, Air Force bases began paying for the expensive spares on aircraft that were previously funded by our air logistics centers. This has resulted in a more focused effort to repair more aircraft spares at our bases, rather than return the unserviceable spares to depot and the resultant loss of base operations and maintenance funds.

Hence, AWP bits and pieces have taken on new importance: bases prefer to purchase small, inexpensive parts to repair the more expensive item, rather than purchasing the end item itself.

While this is a simple philosophy, the AWP process itself is complicated with numerous system interfaces involving various agencies. With this in mind, a process action team was formed last spring to evaluate and improve the AWP process.

The team consisted of representatives from the ATC headquarters supply and maintenance divisions, T-37 and T-38 program managers at Kelly AFB's San Antonio Air Logistics Center, a representative from the Defense Logistics Agency, and the AWP monitor from the 12th Supply Squadron at Randolph AFB, Texas.

Members of the team evaluated both the flow and management of AWP requirements. The analysis ranged from a retail and wholesale perspective to see where improvements could be made to support our customers — ATC maintainers who repair systems or items which couldn't be repaired on the flightline.

During the initial meeting there was skepticism about how we could make any improvements in the Air Force-wide system. At first glance, the task at hand seemed too large and involved to handle. However, during the second meeting one could see the enthusiasm building.

Base-level people began learning more about how the supporting depots worked, and our wholesale friends got an understanding of the positive impact on an ATC base when AWP bits and pieces are available.

As our study expanded and we followed the incremental steps of a quality approach, we found our "monster" of a project was actually manageable. Even more important, team members saw their ideas and efforts made a difference.

Numerous improvements were derived from studying the AWP process. First, a monthly listing was developed to make depot workers aware of AWP requests. Another listing was also developed so management personnel would know the age and quantity of AWP requirements.

The group also opted to have the bases identify and produce a monthly list of the "Top Ten" items. The identified items — outlined in a list sent to the headquarters — caused the largest impact on mission performance.

Further, a recommendation for improving the way AWP requirements are measured was forwarded to the Air Staff for consideration. Early results of our efforts have shown the average wait time for outstanding AWP requirements within ATC has been reduced by 16 percent since the beginning of the process action team.

This program has been so successful in the aircraft area — excluding engine parts — that we are presently expanding our scope to include engines.

We found that involvement in a quality initiative requires patience and discipline. However, the benefits are worth it — our team members made a direct contribution to aiding our base maintenance technicians and increasing mission effectiveness.

While a decrease in future Air Force funding may lessen the availability of AWP bits and pieces, our group members are confident they will also meet this challenge through a continual quality approach. (ATC News Service)

Reese AFSA chapter tops in division

Reese captures award for second consecutive year

Officials from the Air Force Sergeant's Association Division 10 recently selected Reese Chapter 1068 as the best small chapter of the year for the second consecutive year.

"Considering that, in 1989, this chapter was on the verge of folding, this is an honor to win this award not only once, but twice," said outgoing president MSgt. Joe Slack.

"We would not have been able to achieve this honor without excellent support from the base, our retired community and the auxiliary," said retired CMSgt. Clarence Wilchenski, who attended this year's convention along with retired SMSgt. Chuck Brewer, chapter vice president.

The 1993 Chapter President, MSgt. Donald "Dino" Carroll, added, "Our chapter has many new challenges ahead as we prepare to host the 1994 Division 6/10 convention.

The chapter's projects over the past year included the restoration of the Wolforth cemetery, donating food to needy families and assisting other Veterans organizations, to name a few."

"Our AFSA chapter continues to be a valuable asset to the wing and the Reese community," said Col. David Love, 64th FTW commander. "It's no surprise Chapter 1068 has been recognized as the best."

Chapter 1068 holds its general membership meetings every third Monday of the month at the enlisted open mess at 7 p.m.

Wing sergeant headed to OTS

A member of the 64th Operations Support Squadron has been selected to attend Officer Training School.

SSgt. Robert Kraetsch, a forecaster in the base weather squadron, will begin the 14-week course at Lackland AFB, Texas, June 3.

"I'm concentrating now on what I'll have to do to make it through OTS," he said. "I'm looking forward to the challenge."

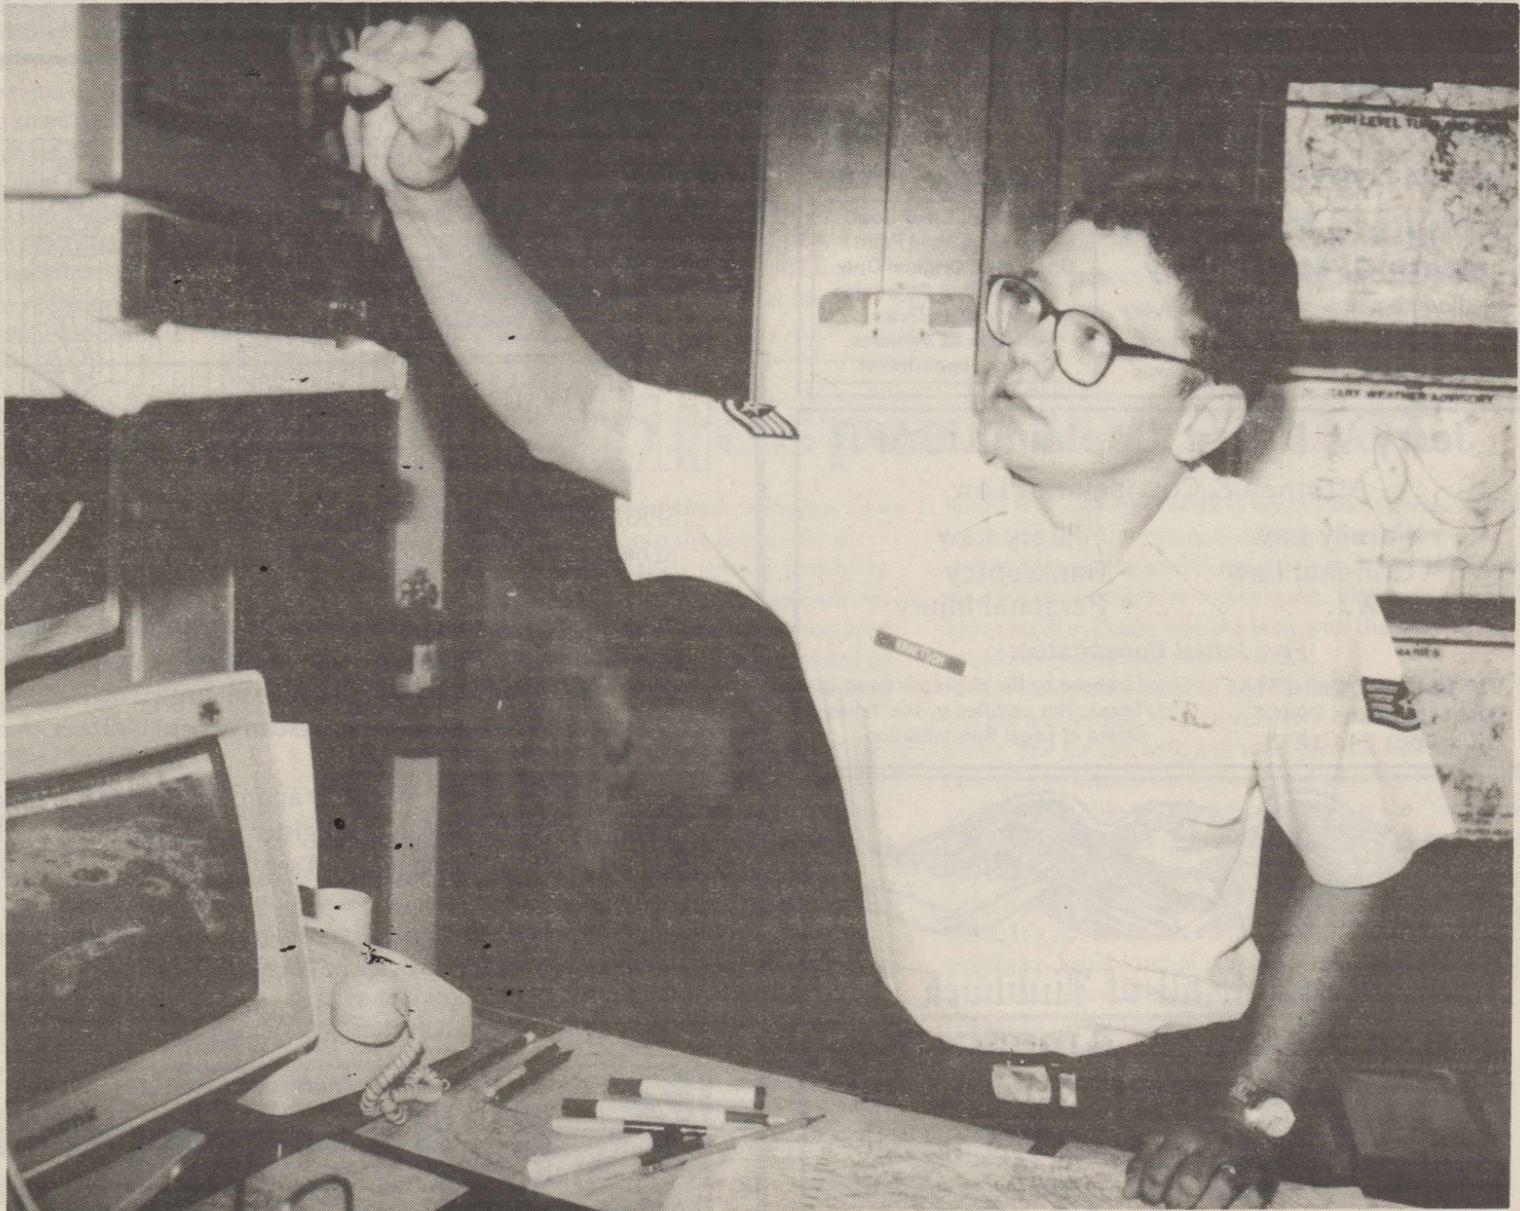

The Wisconsin native's selection for OTS is no surprise in light of his past accomplishments. Among other accolades, he was named the top forecaster in ATC in 1992.

His supervisors cited his performance and motivation, calling them both "unsurpassed."

He's been forecasting at Reese since 1990, and he said he enjoys the "challenging" weather in West Texas. Following OTS, he will resume duties in the weather career field.

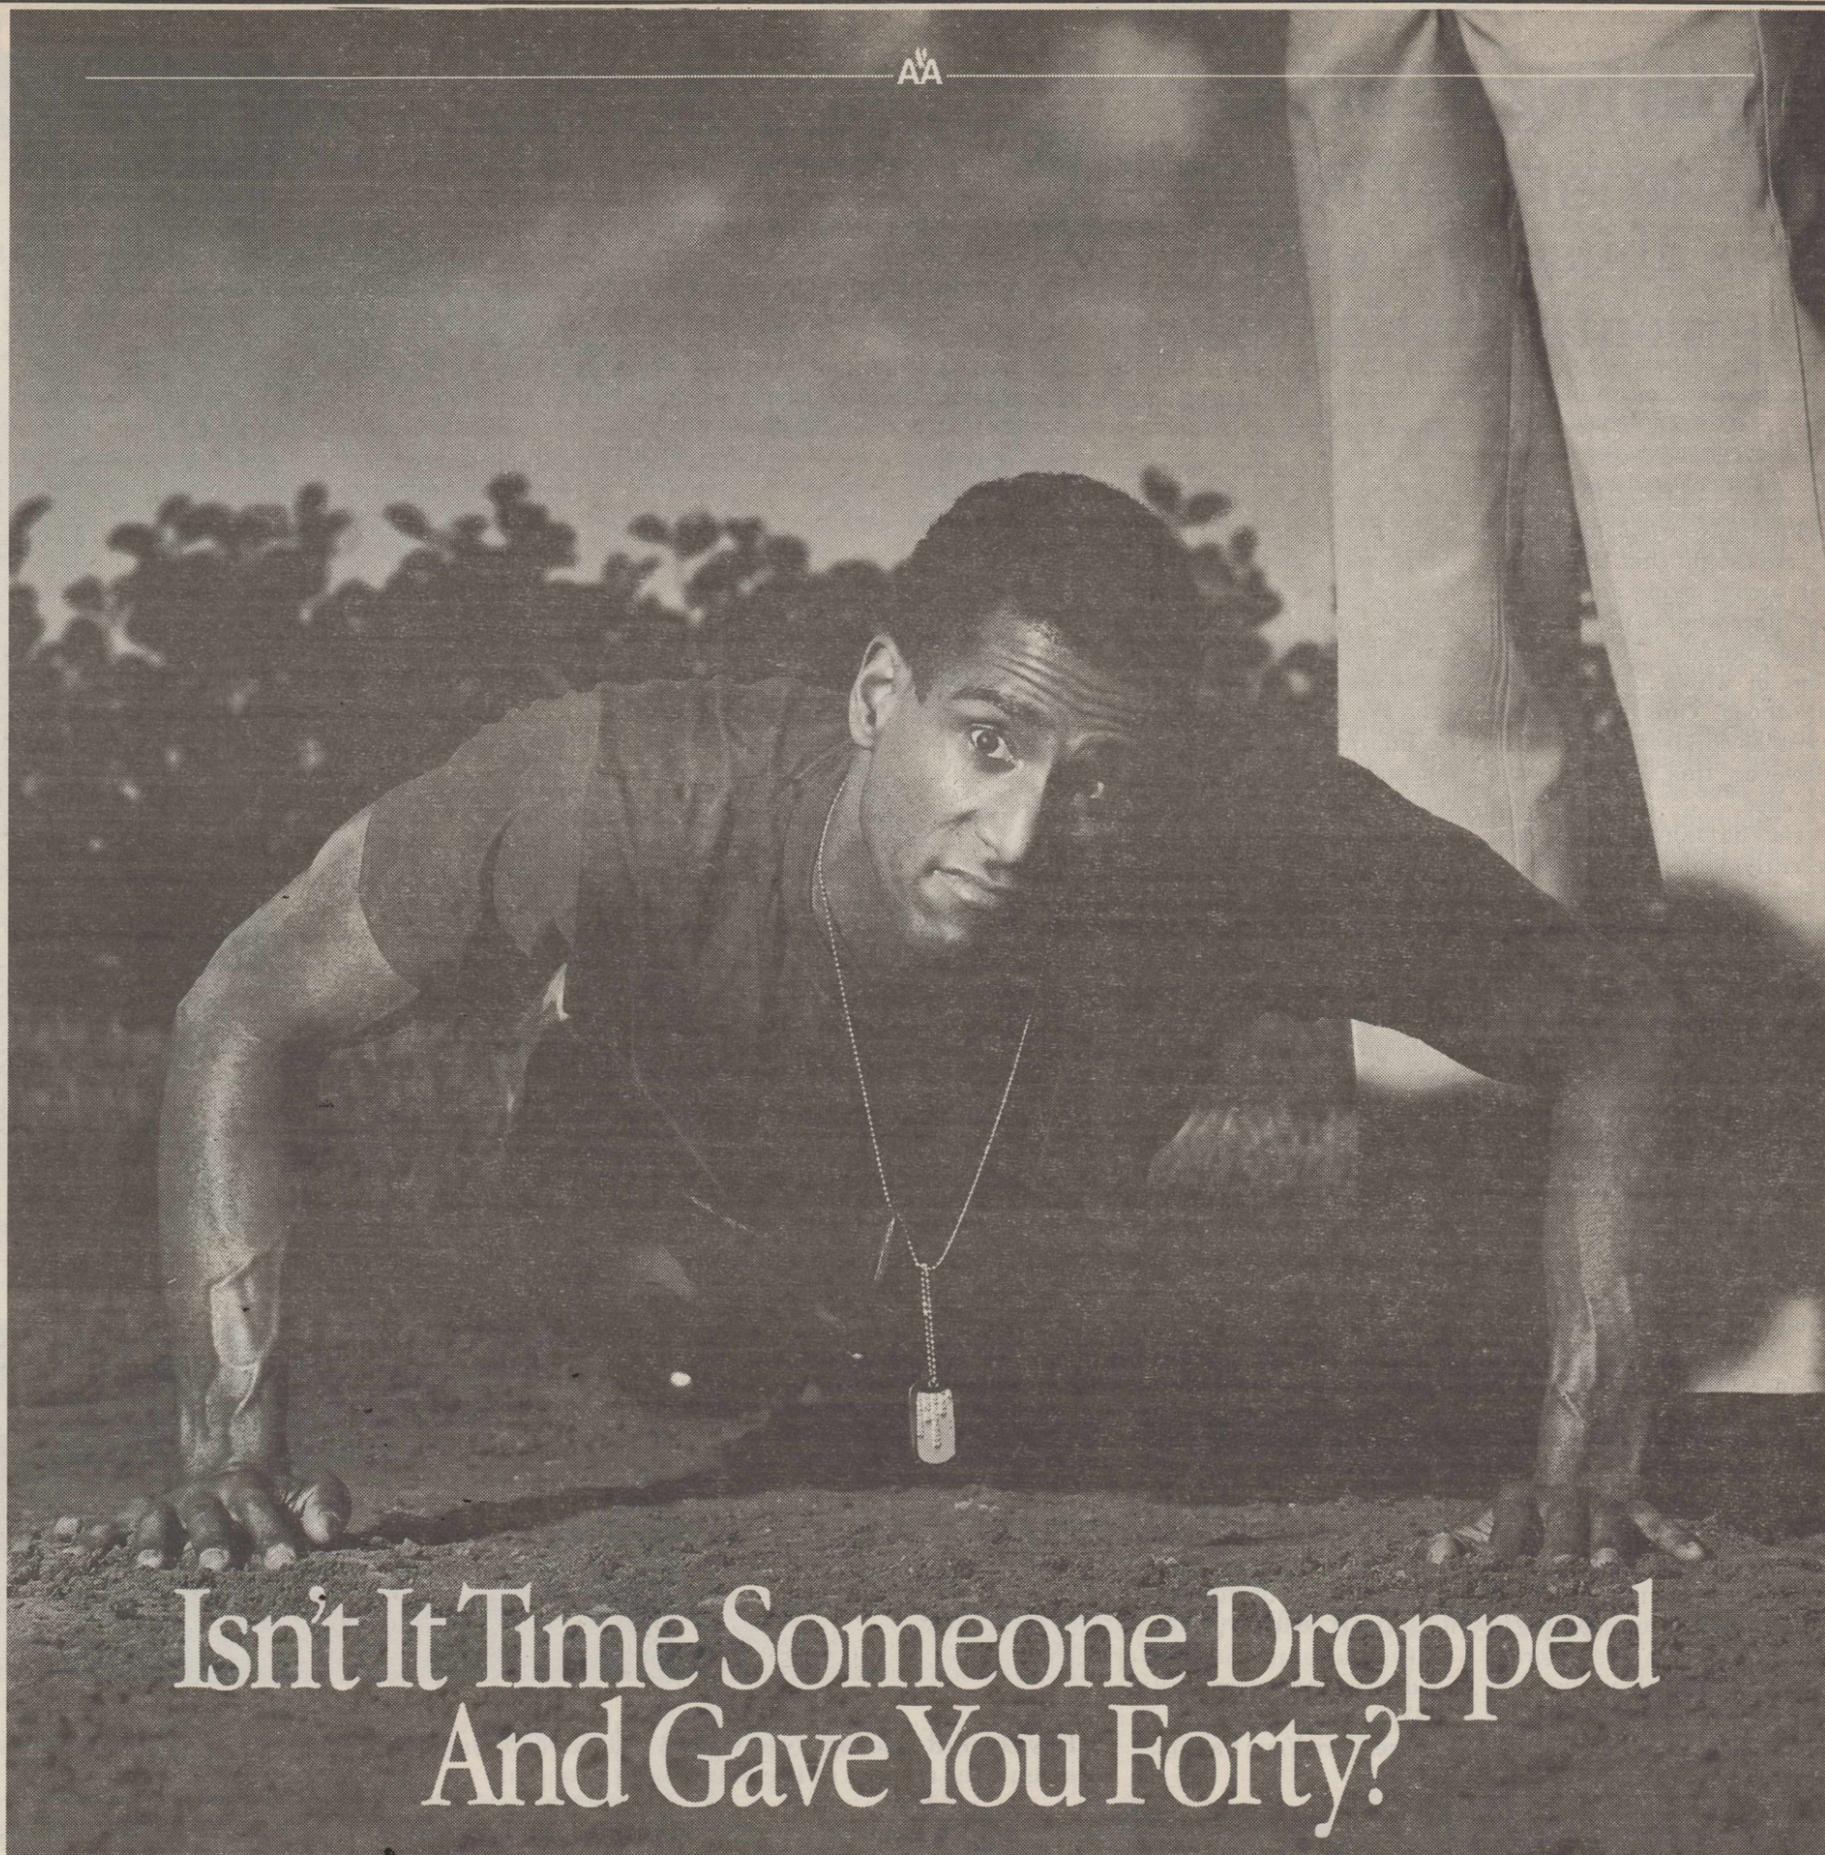

The 27-year-old completed his bachelor's degree in weather technology in November from Wayland Baptist University. In his free time, he is an active member of the Lubbock Jaycees.

Sergeant Kraetsch and his wife Kelly have two daughters — Nikki, 4, and Nesse, 2 months.

Fighting violence

Family issues discussed as abuse prevention month continues

by Kay Dyer
Reese family advocacy
outreach manager

From our earliest memories we are taught that the family is a warm, loving and protective place where a person finds understanding, support and help in which to grow into adulthood. Our first picture books as children tell us that. However, this is not always the case.

How do we know this? Until recently, violence in the family was not discussed, written about or used as a subject for television. With the increased attention to child abuse came the awareness of spouse abuse and abuse among other family members. Abuse can happen to anyone: neighbors, friends, family members and co-workers.

The fact is that domestic violence occurs in all kinds of families—the rich, the poor and those in between. It exists among people of all educational levels and of all occupations—doctors, military officers, lawyers, judges, carpenters, plumbers and the unemployed. It is found among persons of all religions and ethnic backgrounds.

There is no single explanation for family violence. Some general factors contributing to family violence are: stereotyped traditional family roles, media violence, alcohol and drugs, stress and learned behavior.

Stress in the family may include problems on the job, poor communication, financial issues, medical problems and so on. In addition, learned behavior may come from family members, social or cultural groups, and in some cases through mass media. Violence in the family produces bad results for all family members. Be informed about the problem and resources available to counteract it. Be aware of the signs of a family in trouble. Remember:

□ Violence is a learned behavior, and the behavior can be unlearned.

□ Violence is never an acceptable way to deal with a problem. A marriage license is not a license to hit.

□ People can disagree in nonviolent ways.

□ Violence in families is not just a crime against the family but against all of society.

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month. Watch for information tables at the base exchange during this special month. Promotional items such as books, calendars, book-markers and handouts will be available. In addition the family support center and I will present a class called "Understanding Your Teen" April 29 from noon to 3 p.m. at the family support center.

If you have any questions or need assistance, please call me at 3739.

Foreign gift policy detailed

Editor's note: The following was submitted by the Reese Legal Office.

Although you may not expect a gift from a foreign government in the near future, would you know what to do in the event that you become such a beneficiary?

With the foreign training requirement for ATC and Reese, the question is not as farfetched as it may seem. The immediate answer is to seek guidance from Air Force Regulation 11-27.

AFR 11-27, paragraph six, requires all military and civilian personnel to report gifts receive from foreign governments or their representatives if the gift has a retail value of more than $200. When more than one tangible gift is presented, the combined value of the gifts will be used to determine minimal value. This includes gifts that will be retained for official use or display.

Gifts must be reported within 60 days of receipt to Hq. AFMPC/DPMASA, 550 C Street, West Suite 12, Randolph AFB, Texas 78150-4714. Violations of the provisions of AFR 11-27 could result in a fine not to exceed the retail value of the gift plus $5,000.

If you find yourself in this situation, contact the base legal office at 3505 for assistance in fulfilling the reporting requirements.

Sergeant Anderson

Quality performer

This week's quality performer deals with quality issues every day.

MSgt. Robert Anderson, a quality assurance evaluator in the 64th Operations Group, works with the aircraft maintenance contract. His main expertise is as a general inspector, but he also works as a fuels and environmental evaluator.

Sergeant Anderson has been in the service more than 15 years and has been at Reese since 1991.

He has completed all levels of NCO professional military education up to and including the NCO Academy, and he is currently enrolled in the Senior NCO Academy by correspondence.

His past awards include OPG senior NCO of the quarter and he received an Air Force Commendation Medal for his participation in Operation Desert Storm.

In his free time, Sergeant Anderson enjoys bowling and camping and he serves as a lector and usher for Catholic parish on base.

Sergeant Anderson and his wife, Carol, have two children — Danielle, 9, and Ashley, 5.

Air Force leads the way on environmental issues

The Air Force is the leading government organization implementing a clean environment for the public. The goal, according to 64th Civil Engineering Squadron officials, is to create a safer and cleaner environment for everyone.

Reese has a pollution prevention management plan which talks about minimizing waste and source reduction. The source reduction aims to prevent the creation of hazardous waste. This is preferable to recycling or handling the hazardous waste.

Waste that cannot be recycled will be treated in an environmentally safe manner. Disposal should be the last resort.

Program implementation requires a team approach. A good rule to follow is the "Three R" rule, which consists of reduce, recycle and reuse. CES officials said that each person living and working on the base has a role and responsibility to enhance our environment to a cleaner and safer environment for everyone.

If you have any questions or comments, or if you need a copy of the Pollution Prevention Management Plan, call civil engineering at 3150.

From YOUR perspective

(Editor's note: The following is Wing Commander Col. David Love's policy regarding the Careline.)

As wing commander, I need to hear things from your perspective. Your inputs and suggestions can help Reese remain the pacesetter in the command. If you see something good, call me. If you have a problem that you feel needs my attention, call me. First, however, consider using your chain of command.

You may remain anonymous if you wish; all problems that are called in anonymously will be investigated and corrected if need be, but they will not be printed in the Roundup. Individuals who leave their name and number can get a direct response, and calls that are of base-wide interest will be printed in the Roundup.

Calls can be made to the Careline 24 hours a day at 3273.

I have received several inquiries about the sale of cigarettes at the commissary. The following is provided for clarification on this matter.

Prior to the establishment of the Defense Commissary Agency last year, there was no uniform guidance regarding the quantity of cigarettes that could be purchased. Each commissary, if not restricted by state law, could set their own limit. At Reese, the limit was 10 cartons per sale.

DeCA Directive 40-13, paragraph 7-2.b, dated July 10, 1992, states, "When no state law exists, the installation commander will be requested to determine the sales limitations applicable for the installation. Normally, except in unusual circumstances as determined by the installation commander, the limit will be set at no more than four cartons of cigarettes."

The guidance is adequate, clear and necessary to prevent potential abuse. You may request a waiver, in writing, from my office should you feel your personal circumstances are unusual. Appropriate paperwork to request such a waiver is available at the commissary.

Notes

Top Three hold car wash

The Reese Top Three Association will hold a car wash at 11 a.m. Saturday behind the commissary. Top Three members who can help out should call SMSgt. Barry Rex at 3452.

Also, the Top Three will meet at 3 p.m. Tuesday in the enlisted open mess.

FSC plans seminars

The family support center has several workshops planned in the near future. These include:

□ A free civilian career options workshop from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through April 23. Reservations are due today; call 3305.

□ A "smooth move" relocation workshop from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday. Reservations are needed by Monday; call 6034. Family members are encouraged to attend.

Volunteers appreciated

A volunteer appreciation social honoring the year's top volunteers will be held at 4 p.m. Thursday in the officers' open mess. Awards will be presented in four categories: youth activities; religious activities; community service and family support.

For more information, call Cheryl Ortiz at 3305.

Magic show set

A free magic show featuring Jack Bauer will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. Thursday in the Simler Theater. Everyone on base is welcome.

Scouts, leaders sought

Boys between the ages of 11 and 18 who would like to camp monthly and take part in other activities should call Reese Scoutmaster Matt Alvarez at 885-2426.

Also, adults who would like to work with the base troop should also call Mr. Alvarez.

Computer class offered

An introductory computer course in MS-DOS will be held from 9 a.m. to noon April 27-28 in Bldg. 920, Room 138. Call 3299 for details.

'Kite' watching

Wing members are asked to help the base control "Mississippi Kites," the birds which have nested on base in past summers and harassed passers-by.

Anyone who sees evidence of kite nests should call Dennis Tates, 64th Civil Engineering Squadron, at 3484 or 3171.

The nests are usually about one foot across, loosely constructed from twigs, and found in the notch of two tree limbs toward the tops of taller trees on base, usually the Siberian Elms.

Employment computer open

The family support center has recently installed a computer in the library that can be of great help to people planning a transition to the civilian sector. The computer has résumé and federal employment application programs, among others, that wing members can use after hours and on weekends.

However, members must be trained on the computer before they can use it. Library hours are 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, and noon to 4 p.m. weekends.

Call Pam Appell at 3079 or 3305 for more information.

ER changes May 1

Beginning May 1, the emergency room on base will convert from a 24-hour unit to an extended hours primary care clinic. The clinic's hours will be from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. weekdays and 8 to 11:30 a.m. weekends and holidays.

Appointments will be available by calling 3245.

Intramural volleyball continues

Playoffs on tap for Reese teams

The base intramural volleyball league's regular season is set to end Thursday. Several teams have already earned playoff berths, while some are definitely out.

The top three teams in each league and the next two teams with the best records, regardless of league, will advance to the double-elimination post-season round, scheduled to begin April 26.

Five of the seven teams in the National League are in position to make the playoffs. They are the 64th Civil engineering Squadron "A" team, 35th Flying Training Squadron "A," 64th Medical Squadron "A," 54th FTS and 64th Operations Support Squadron.

While the 64th Mission Support Squadron has the American League wrapped up at 9-2, none of their division rivals seem to have clinched their playoff spot. The three teams still competing for the final two spots are the 64th Logistics Squadron, 35th FTS "B" and the 64th Communications Squadron.

For more information call A1C Dan Allers or Gary Grant at 3783.

Let The Buyer Be Aware

Most people, at one time or another, will buy a diamond. Just about anyone can, and just about anyone can sell one. You don't need a license to call yourself a jeweler. Anyone can, and many have - including the mass merchants, catalog showrooms, jewelry "factories", and like establishments who are sometimes more exploitive than experienced.

American Gem Society jewelers grade diamonds correctly because they have both knowledge and ethics. The most ethical person in the world can unknowingly mislead a customer without knowledge of the product. The most knowledgeable person can readily deceive a customer if not adhering to the highest code of ethics. As a member of the American Gem Society, Anderson Bros. is re-examined each year to meet the Society's high standards of knowledge, professionalism and integrity.

Many of these jewelry dealers have neither the requisite training in gemology nor an understanding of the ethics that have long inspired the diamond industry. The results of this decline in standards include inaccurate diamond grading, misleading advertising and deceptive guarantees.

April is diamond month at Anderson Bros. Jewelers. Let us help you select a quality diamond that is right for you and your budget.

Bowling center starts 'country club'

The Windmill Lanes "Country Club" is here! The country club will run from May through Aug. 15. By joining, you will receive a special membership card, a T-shirt specially designed for country club members in teal or pink, collectible mug and Reese Key ring.

Membership has its privileges, according to 64th MWR-Services Squadron officials. By showing your country club card you can bowl three games for

$1 during open bowling, get free shoe rental, receive discounts on drinks, practice spares for one cent per minute, get collectible mug refills for only 50 cents (you must have your mug to receive refills), and receive free happy hour bowling. All this is $15 per person or $30 for the entire family.

Free happy hour bowling is Monday through Friday from 9 to 11 a.m. and 4 to 6 p.m.,

Saturdays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 4 to 6 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 2 p.m.

For more information, please call 3116.
