Reese earns energy savings award again

AETC gives wing $50,000 incentive

Energy conservation efforts at Reese have once again netted the base a $50,000 incentive award from Air Education and Training Command.

Gen. Billy Boles, AETC commander, presented a check for $50,000 to Col. Randy Gelwix, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, during last week's AETC Commander's Conference at Randolph Air Force Base, Texas.

The award is presented annually to the AETC installation with the best overall energy management program. Reese has won the small installation category seven times in eight years.

"Reese continues to lead the way because everyone at Reese is actively involved in our energy conservation program," said Gelwix. "From sorting waste for recycling to simply ensuring that the lights are off when we go home, conserving has become a way of life here."

The award is traditionally used for quality of life programs at Reese. Previous awards have been used to improve the family support center, upgrade the physical fitness and child development centers and build Reese Manor.

Maj. James Sohan, 64th Civil Engineer commander, said Reese's success is the result of an aggressive energy program that merges common sense practices with high-tech innovations.

Among the contributing factors cited were:

- Replacement of some older facilities with new, energy efficient facilities
- Remodeling of several family housing units using energy efficient materials and equipment
- A strong energy awareness program conducted by John Kain, Reese energy program manager

Sohan also said the relatively mild weather in 1995 also contributed to wing energy savings.

"We really haven't introduced any earth-shattering ideas," said Sohan. "What we have done is made a diligent effort to make the most out of proven technologies. We have also received tremendous wing-wide support."

CSAF reports Air Force posture to Senate panel

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The Air Force is "well postured to carry out the United States' national security strategy of engagement and enlargement" but modernization efforts are crucial to ensure future readiness, the Air Force chief of staff told a Senate panel March 14.

The readiness of today's Air Force reflects the United States' investment in air and space systems of the 1980s, Gen. Ronald R. Fogleman told the Senate Armed Services Committee's Subcommittee on Readiness.

"Now we're confronted with a similar requirement to invest in tomorrow's readiness by beginning to recapitalize and modernize today," he said.

In fact, Fogleman said, "The greatest problem we face today in the Air Force is long-range modernization."

The need for modernization and its impact on readiness is a concern military leaders have for several years linked to quality of life, retention and troop morale. Fogleman cited steps taken by the Air Force and the Department of Defense to address these issues.

"Realizing that the Air Force cannot procure all our priorities at once, we've developed a balanced, time-phased modernization plan that will provide the advanced air and space capabilities required by the nation and our theater commanders-in-chief in the 21st century," Fogleman said.

The fiscal year 1997 budget request reflects the phases of the modernization plan:

- Near-term: Eight C-17 Globemaster III airlifters

Mid-term: Conventional upgrades to the entire bomber force and purchase of all-weather precision-guided munitions

Long-term: F-22 air superiority fighters and joint strike fighters

Continuing programs: Evolved expendable launch vehicles for assured access to space, and improved space-based infrared systems to support joint ballistic missile initiatives

Air Force has also developed several innovations to address readiness

Commander's conference addresses key issues

General Boles discusses accountability, mentoring and stability

by Col. Randy Gelwix
64th FTW commander

I recently returned from the semi-annual AETC Commander's Conference held March 18-21 at Tyndall Air Force Base, Fla.

During this meeting, Gen. Billy Boles and members of his immediate staff at Randolph AFB updated us all on the key issues confronting AETC and our Air Force. I thought you might be interested in several of these areas so I'll try to provide a short synopsis.

At the top of the list, without question, is individual accountability.

Everyone is responsible for their own actions and supervisors are definitely responsible for maintaining the appropriate attitude and environment in the work place.

It is my hope that everyone of us live up to the high standards required by our Air Force, but if someone stumbles we need to pick them up and get them back on track ... if they violate an obvious performance standard then the punishment should match the crime.

Here's where my next discussion area ... mentoring ... makes sense.

The general was quick to reemphasize the importance of mentoring in AETC. Properly motivated supervisors "growing" the next generation is the goal in this vital program.

I like to think of it as setting the proper example, showing the way, in many respects like our parents raised us to continue in their footsteps ... said another way, the younger generation should be working hard to make the older generation proud. As supervisors we should exemplify the appropriate father or mother figure no matter the level of supervision.

Another key discussion subject was stability in the size of our force. We have all experienced, over the past five years, a tumultuous time in the Air Force's effort to downsize. We should all be thankful that 95 percent of this process was accomplished voluntarily. Reductions in Force were kept to a minimum.

Our Air Force has finally arrived at the manning level that should remain constant for the foreseeable future.

With stability comes increased predictability ... something important to us all when it comes to promotions and assignment opportunities.

On a note close to home at Reese, the general was quite complimentary of our efforts toward base closure. He mentioned to the entire conference that "the Reese closure is going on without a lot of fanfare."

This is a tribute to all of the hard work by everyone involved.

When we added base closure to our mission list in October 1995 we challenged everyone to keep their focus on the flying mission and take on closure when the time was right.

So far this approach has been very successful, but it requires day-to-day diligence to keep it on track.

I was extremely proud to represent the Reese Family at the AETC Commander's Conference.

We have a great reputation in AETC and our Air Force thanks to all of your dedication and just plain old hard work.

Colonel Gelwix

It will take commitment from each of us to maintain this super reputation ... If we take care of each other I know we can accomplish anything.

Mentoring requires day-to-day commitment

by Ralph Monson
64th FTW Public Affairs

Long before a "packed classroom" became the preferred forum for teaching, people learned by working day-after-day with someone far more experienced.

It was a very personal type of instruction ... one designed to evaluate and nurture the abilities of the individual student.

That concept of career development forms the centerpiece of the Air Education and Training Command Mentoring Program.

While recently attending one of the special supervisor training sessions conducted by Col. Randy Gelwix, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, I began to understand the difference between mentoring and modern-day supervising.

In today's high-tech Air Force we can be very clinical in our approach to management. Flow charts and benchmarking help us to improve our operations, but sometimes the human element gets lost in the data and spreadsheets.

Mentoring is the way people used to supervise. It's very personal. It's day-to-day. It's taking someone under your wing and helping them reach their full potential.

The key here is "their" full potential. Mentors groom and evaluate. They help define achievable goals and appropriate levels of responsibility. Mentoring really is an "Air Force family" approach.

It's time to get back to what really works ... to supervise the old fashion way ... by caring. Mentoring works. It always has!

To do this, Air Force created a reporting system to track progress in achieving this goal. In 1994, crews assigned to 18 systems exceeded that goal. In 1995, that number was cut in half.

Additionally, Air Force Reserve and Guard units began taking on increased assignments to give active-duty units a break from deployments.

And this year DOD has requested up-front funding for continuing contingency operations in fiscal year 1997, Fogleman said. Previously, contingencies were funded by current year funds as contingencies arose and required supplemental funds from Congress.

"When we take the costs for such operations out of hide while we wait for a supplemental appropriation, that can harm current readiness," Fogleman said.

Fogleman stressed to the committee that Air Force

"stands ready" but also said: "As good as it is today, unless we recapitalize we are not going to be capable to meet future threats."

Reese Family Fun Day scheduled for April 13

by Elsa Summers
Family Support Center

Good old-fashion family fun is the focus of this year's Family Fun Day at Reese, April 13.

Families are invited to the Reese Youth Center to participate in a variety of games, events and demonstrations from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

There will be plenty to do for children of all ages. Relay sack races, magic shows, puppet shows, pinatas and special appearances by Spiderman, Sparky the fire dog, McGruff the crime dog and a clown are just a few of the day's highlights.

"This is a great opportunity for families to spend a day together having fun and not have to spend a lot of money to do so," said Capt. Mary Quint, Family Advocacy Officer. Family Fun Day is being held in honor of Month of the Military Child. Many base agencies have worked together to plan the event and to ensure that there are activities for children of all ages. There will be many free prizes and giveaways available. Refreshments and $2-plate lunches will be available.

For more information call Sara Olguin, 3739.

Schedule of events

10 a.m. - Magic show by Cliff T. Clown

10:30 a.m. - Puppet show

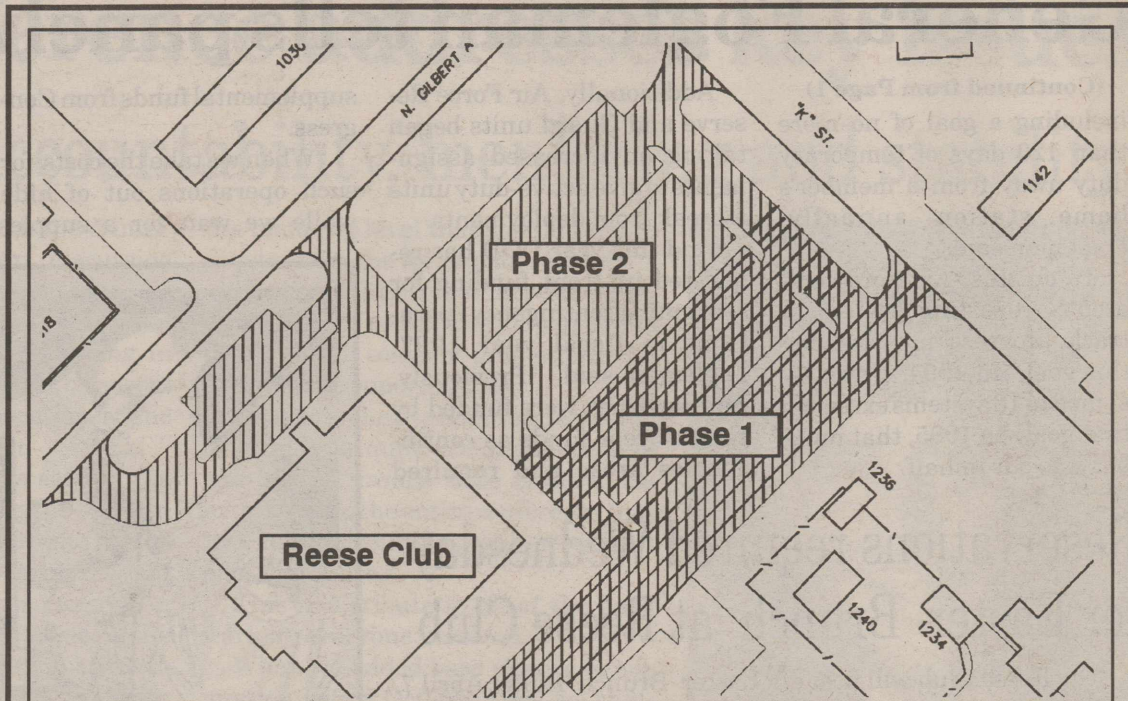

11 a.m. - Family sack relay race and games

12 p.m. - Military working dog demonstration

12:30 p.m. - Firetruck demonstration and fire safety presentation

1 p.m. - Pinata fiesta

1:30 p.m. - Taste and toss food art contest

Parking lot repaving set for Reese Club

The pavements contractor will begin surface and repair work on the Reese Club parking lot Monday.

The work will be done on one-half of the parking lot at a time. Beginning on the east half first. This area should be completed by April 13.

If work on the first phase is completed sooner, the contractor will begin work on the second half of the parking area promptly.

The entire parking lot will be resurfaced before the parking stripes are replaced.

All resurfacing on the parking area is scheduled to be completed on or before April 20. The parking stripes are to be repainted by April 26.

Deployed U.S. Troops receive tax break

On March 20, the President signed into law legislation designating Bosnia, Herzegovina, Croatia, and Macedonia as a "Qualified Hazardous Duty Area."

□ Military personnel in a QHDA receive the same tax relief given to those serving in a combat zone, including:

-- Exemption of military pay from federal taxation (all enlisted pay is exempt while the first $4,254 per month is exempt for officers)

-- Extension of the tax filing deadline for 180 days from the date the member returns to the US without interest or penalty

□ The law is retroactive to Nov. 21, which means that people who qualify will receive corrected W-2s from DFAS.

□ Members who receive corrected W-2s and who have already filed their 1995 income tax return should file amended returns.

□ This tax relief does not automatically apply to state income taxes although eight states have already established some type of tax relief.

Contact the Reese Legal Office or the squadron tax advisor for more information.

Civilians selected for executive development

This month, Air Force announced the selection of 85 civilians to attend Executive Development and Long Term Training for academic year 1996/7.

□ They will attend courses ranging from three weeks to one year.

□ Examples include Air War College, Air Command and Staff College, Harvard, and the Congressional Fellows Program

□ Civilians remain an integral part of the Total Force

Licensed Reese Village care givers provide quality alternative to CDC

With the Reese Child Development Center booked to capacity, parents can still find quality child care on base.

According to 64th Services Squadron officials, there are seven certified "home care" operations in Reese Village.

These licensed child care providers offer full-time and part-time care.

A referral list of providers is available at the child development center.

Tonya Mena, Reese Family Day Care coordinator, can answer questions about these providers and assist in placing children. She can be contacted at 885-6270.

Reese Village family day care providers are trained professionals. They are CPR and First Aid certified. They also receive child development, health and safety, and nutritional training semi-annually.

Weekly lesson plans and menus are created by each provider. Lesson plans are reviewed by Mena, ensuring activities are developmentally appropriate for all age groups.

Menus are approved by the USDA, certifying a balanced diet.

Reese Village day care providers are subject to unannounced inspections.

ECAMP outbrief scheduled

MaryAnn Lacy gives Brian Walton some literature about his reassignment to Randolph AFB, San Antonio.

64th MSS strives for perfection

The mission of the 64th Mission Support Squadron is to provide customer satisfaction through outstanding service.

The squadron handles information management, social programs and resources to enhance mission effectiveness and support for commanders at all levels.

The family support center offers a variety of services to the Reese community. The center has services to help people transition to the base or relocating to another base, manage money, emergency Air Force Aid, parenting skills, play groups and job and career help for spouses.

The education and training flight is responsible for off-duty education programs on base and funding of all educational opportunities for military members. The flight also oversees commissioning programs, military education, promotion testing, enlisted on-the-job program and college level examination program.

The military personnel flight provides support to all Air Force members assigned to the base. It is responsible for all officer and airmen assignments, promotions, personnel records and quality force issues.

Administrative responsibility for Reese's 4 civilians relies on the civilian personnel flight. The flight has many responsibilities ranging from establishing and maintaining the civilian employment plan to conducting the employee benefits program and administering the civilian career program.

The information management flight, which will soon become part of the 64th Communications Squadron, is responsible for mail, distribution, publications library and reproduction. The base information transfer center was the first in the Air Force to implement the use of dormitory cluster boxes for mail.

Together the flights of the 64th MSS provide and manage comprehensive command and mission support programs which support the 64th Flying Training Wing.

TriCare Update

by 1st Lt. Ward Hinger
Reese TriCare Director

Recent changes in federal law have eliminated the $5 processing fee for the TriCare Prime quarterly payment option.

The effective date of this legislation was Feb. 10. Section 713 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 states: "Without imposing additional costs on covered beneficiaries who participate in contracts for health care services, the Secretary of Defense shall permit such covered beneficiaries to pay, on a quarterly basis, any enrollment fee required for such par-

AFA team to perform

A member of the Air Force Academy Wings of Blue parachute demonstration team glides in for a pinpoint landing. The team is scheduled to perform at the Reese Air Show May 18 and 19. The two-day show will also include demonstrations by the U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds (May 18), the U.S. Army Golden Knights parachute team and several other aerial performers.

□ Small Business Development Class, April 30, 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

All classes will be held in the Reese Family Support Center. Call Pam Appell at 3305 for additional information.

SGLI increased to $200,000

Effective Monday, all service members eligible for Servicemen's Group Life Insurance, will be insured at the new maximum rate of $200,000.

According to Reese Military Personnel Flight officials, members may elect to decline coverage or reduce coverage in $10,000 increments.

Changes to the coverage must be made between Monday and April 30 to avoid deduction of unwanted premiums.

For more information call Senior Airman Kim Machuca at 3276.

X-rays available for pickup

The 64th Medical Group has been authorized to give retirees and their dependents their X-rays to take to an alternate facility or physician because of base closure.

X-rays can be picked up at the radiology department from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Due to the Privacy Act, all dependents 18 years old and older must personally pick up their own films or have a signed release in their medical records to authorize the release of their X-rays.

ment from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday. Due to the Privacy Act, all dependents 18 years old and older must personally pick up their own films or have a signed release in their medical records to authorize the release of their X-rays.

For more information call the radiology department at 3337 or 3183.

Job search classes coming

It's not easy finding a job but research has proven that by using the right methods, most people can reduce the time it takes to find one.

The family support center will be holding very quick job search classes. The classes cover the job search techniques that work best and reduce the time it takes to get work.

The classes will be taught Thursday from 5 to 8 p.m., May 2 from 8 a.m. to noon and June 6 from noon until 4 p.m. in the family support center classroom. To register call 3305.

64th MSS/IM holds meeting

The 64th Mission Support Squadron Information Management Flight will hold an IM Call Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. in the Reese Club.

Questions can be directed to Tech. Sgt. David Harris at 3437.

WAPS CDC study material available

As a reminder, Extension Course Institute will cease processing shipments of WAPS CDC study reference material June 15 for those people testing for staff sergeant.

Anyone eligible to test who has not received the material should contact their unit WAPS monitor for further guidance.

Volunteer of the Year packages due

Nomination packages for the Volunteers of the Year have been distributed base-wide and are due by close of business today.

The awards will be presented at a social open to all base personnel at the Reese Club April 24 from 3 to 4:30 p.m. For more information call 3305.

ticipation in the TriCare program."

TriCare Prime enrollees can still pay the annual enrollment fee all at once or in quarterly payments. When a beneficiary selects the quarterly payment option when enrolling in Prime, they may make one quarterly payment at a time or make several quarterly payments in advance.

TriCare Prime enrollees who use the quarterly payment option, and beneficiaries interested in joining TriCare Prime, should subtract the processing fee from the "quarterly payment amount due" statement published in the current TriCare program marketing and enrollment materials.

For additional information about the TriCare quarterly payment option or other TriCare programs, call Richard Broxson, Reese Beneficiary Service Representative, at 885-2506.

IM bowlers chase top seeds

Twenty-four weeks have rolled by in intramural bowling and teams are scrambling for the top seeds in both leagues.

Larry Million had the hot ball as he bowled a 214, 223 and 193 for the Fire Department.

Million's 630 pins led the Fire Department victory over the 64th Operations Support Squadron. The team won 3-out-of-4 games to remain four games out of first place in the National League.

Lockheed Martin Logistics Management overtook the 35th Flying Training Squadron as the top seed team in the NL Monday. LMLM downed the 64th Mission Support Squadron three games to one, while the 35th FTS fell to the 64th Logistics Squadron three games to one. Randall Tucker led LMLM bowlers with 575 and Hal Corbin bowled a 603 in the losing effort for the 64th MSS. Scott Aldridge bowled the highest score of the night knocking over 202, 235 and 236 pins for 663 pins for the 64th LS. Jeff Myer had 615 pins in the loss for the 35th FTS.

The 64th Medical Group had the best overall team effort Monday as three members bowled over 500 as the team blanked the 64th Contracting Squadron 4-0. Joe Hunter led the 64th MDG with 632 pins. Bob Gregorio followed suit with 575 pins and Roger Glover had 522 pins.

In other matches, Kip Huston bowled a 632 for the 64th Security Police Squadron's win against the 64th Comptroller Flight, 3-1; Vic Perkins led the 64th Civil Engineer Squadron to a 3-1 victory against the 64th Services Squadron with 634 pins; and the 54th FTS defeated the 52nd FTS, 3-1.
