Captain Radliff, Lieutenant Hinger receive annual awards

Two Reese officers were recognized by the Texas Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution here Wednesday.

Mrs. William Stegall, Texas Regent of the DAR, presented the Outstanding Instructor Pilot of the Year Award to Captain Bryan Radliff, 54th Flying Training Squadron, and the Support Officer of the Year Award to 1st Lt. Ward Hinger, 64th Medical Group.

The awards, which are made by the society annually, are given to the people who "best exemplify the qualities of leadership, military discipline, dependability and good character."

Lubbock County Judge Don McBeath was the guest speaker for the ceremony.

Mrs. William Stegall, center, presents 1st Lt. Ward Hinger, left, and Capt. Bryan Radliff, with Texas Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution awards here Wednesday.

Radliff, is the assistant standardization and evaluation flight commander and flight examiner for the 54th FTS. In addition to his flying duties, he serves as the narrator for major wing events and is the primary wing mission briefer.

Hinger is the Reese TriCare director and is responsible for managing 64th MDG patient administration.

DOD seeks $58.9 billion in Air Force budget authority

WASHINGTON (AFNS) — The $243.4 billion in budget authority sought by the Defense Department in the president's budget for fiscal 1997 includes $58.9 billion for the Air Force and strikes a "prudent balance" among readiness, troop morale and long-term modernization, according to Defense Secretary William Perry.

The DOD proposal includes a 3-percent pay raise for the active-duty force and civilians and protects commissary benefits and variable housing rates. The budget also makes quality-of-life initiatives and improvements the top priority, Perry said March 4.

"The new budget strongly supports the Clinton administration's national security strategy and the three lines of its defense strategy," according to a DOD statement. The three elements include preventing threats from emerging, deterring threats that do emerge and if deterrence fails, defeating threats with military force.

Air Force's portion of the proposal contains provisions to build, replace and improve 1,712 family housing units; build 14 new dormitories and renovate four others.

Additional military funding will be devoted to build one new dining hall and renovate one, construct a new child development center, and renovate and expand one physical fitness center.

Modernization programs are prioritized in four categories.

□ Near-term global mobility: $2.2 billion for eight C-17 Globemaster III airlifters.

□ Mid-term bomber upgrades: $251 million for airframe modifications and $293 million for precision guided munitions.

□ Long-term air superiority: Just over $2 billion on the Deadly jewelry

Mercury-filled necklaces pose severe health risk

Testing by the Texas Department of Health's laboratory has determined that the silver liquid in glass vial necklaces popular among school children in the Lower Rio Grande Valley is mercury metal — a toxic substance that can cause a variety of health problems.

The laboratory confirmation prompted Texas Commissioner of Health, David R. Smith, M.D., to warn the public of the dangers posed by the necklaces.

The jewelry consists of a clear-glass vial attached to a waxed cord. The vials vary in shape and are filled with mercury and another liquid of assorted colors.

"This is a protective measure," Smith said. "The last place in the world we should find a hazardous substance is hanging from a child's neck."

Though the necklaces have predominantly been found in the Valley area, TDH officials say they could appear in other locations throughout the state.

Health officials are concerned that the glass vial could break causing the mercury metal to spill, releasing invisible vapors that enter the bloodstream when breathed into the lungs.

Liquid mercury can be absorbed through the skin and soft tissues of the mouth and nose. Officials also said asphyxiation can occur if the necklace vial breaks in the mouth and the metal is swallowed.

People manufacturing the necklaces could be in danger from prolonged exposure to mercury vapors.

Exposure to mercury metal, especially prolonged exposure, can affect the brain and nervous system causing vision, hearing, memory and learning impairments. Nervousness, short-temperedness, reduced self-confidence, appetite loss and changes in sleep patterns also can occur.

Impaired nerve-to-muscle coordination, digestive problems, skin rashes and kidney damage are other potential consequences.

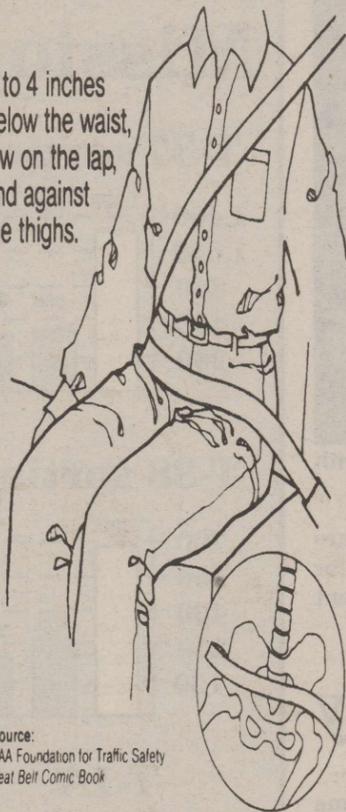

State health officials warned that the necklaces should not be thrown in the trash, but should be taken to the nearest hazardous waste disposal site.

Locations of the nearest sites can be obtained by contacting the 64th Medical Group Bioenvironmental Engineering Office at 3327 or the 64th MDG Public Health office at 6198.

To avoid excess shipping costs predetermine household weight

by Staff Sgt. Robert Heasley
NCOIC, Traffic Management

Moving to a new place can cause anxiety, even for the most experienced traveler.

Many Reese employees will be moving over the next 18 months.

Air Force moves are primarily based on the needs of the service. Therefore Congress establishes entitlements for the movement of employees and their property.

These entitlements establish maximum weight allowances. The member will assume any costs associated with the shipment and storage of excess weight. This excess cost can be very expensive.

For example, in 1992, 2,700 members received bills for excess costs. These bills ranged from $30 to a whopping $20,800. The average was $661.

A key to preventing these charges is accurately estimating the weight of personal property. How do you do this?

An easy and fairly accurate method is to figure 1,000 pounds for each room in the house. Don't count closets and bathrooms. Do count the garage and backyard storage shed.

Large shipments of personal property require a pre-move survey by the carrier. In this survey, the carrier makes a preliminary assessment of total weight. These estimates by the member and carrier are simple planning tools and not a basis for excess costs. If it appears that a shipment may go over the weight limit, careful planning may reduce or eliminate the excess cost. Dispose of unneeded or unwanted property. Have a garage sale or donate to charity. That old exercise bicycle used for a coat rack can cost anywhere from $37 to $225 to ship, based on the mode of shipment and final destination.

Military members anticipating excess costs can claim professional books, paper and equipment and deduct the weight of these items from the total. Professional items are: flying gear, reference books, tools, and communication equipment used while performing official duty. It also includes awards and memorabilia received while performing official duty.

Another way to reduce excess cost is to request a re-weigh with the destination Traffic Management Office. The lower of the two weigh is used to compute excess cost.

Another thing to remember is to file those claims with the legal office. The weight of lost or irreparably damaged articles are deducted before cost computation. Remember, it is the member's responsibility to stay within their weight allowance, not that of the TMO or carrier.

The fact that a member may not have been advised by TMO or the carrier of an overweight situation does not relieve them of the liability for excess costs.

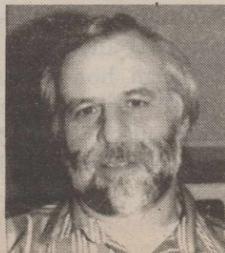

The only way to specifically determine excess weight is to pack and load the goods, then transport them to a certified scale. Notification of overweight charges can take several months after the move is completed. Excess-weight costs will not delay the delivery of shipments for those people continuing federal employment. Personnel separating, or no longer in a pay status, must pay these costs before the shipment will be moved.

For answers to TMO questions call 3836 or 3838.

Four master sergeants selected for promotion

Four Reese master sergeants were selected for promotion to senior master sergeant Wednesday.

The E-8 selectees are: Master Sgt. Gary Loftus, 64th Operations Support Squadron; Master Sgt. James Williams, 64th Logistics Squadron; Master Sergeant David Sylwestrek, 64th Medical Group; and Master Sgt. Steven Hastings, 64th MDG.

According to Reese Military Personnel Flight officials, the four were among the 44 considered for promotion by the senior master sergeant selection board. Reese's 9.09 percent selection rate was two percentage points higher than the Air Education and Training Command and the Air Force selection rates.

Air Force-wide, 21,139 E-7s were considered with 1,546 selected for a 7.31 percentage rate. In AETC, 2,568 were eligible and 7.09 percent (182 people), were selected.

The complete list of those selected for promotion was placed on the Air Force Link home page (<http://www.af.mil>) at noon CST, Thursday. To access the listing, click on "Web Sites," then on "Air Force Personnel Center," then on "SMSgt. List."

Quality of life issues critical to readiness

WASHINGTON — Recent actions by Congress have had a positive impact on quality of life in the Air Force but there's still work to be done, Air Force's top enlisted person told a congressional panel Feb. 29.

CMSAF David Campanale told a House Appropriations Subcommittee on Military Construction that having the ability to provide more family housing and dormitories tops the list of necessary improvements.

Campanale lauded Congress for "listening to our comments and requests for assistance last year" and cited several examples of congressional support that went beyond Air Force's proposals.

In fiscal 1996, Air Force requested $132.6 million for 24 dormitory projects. Congress added $45.6 million to fund seven more dorms and another $100 million of real property maintenance funds specifically designated for dorm renovation and repair projects.

Also last year, Air Force requested $39.4 million for five child development centers and four transient quarters projects.

Congress funded those requests and added $22.3 million for two additional transient quarters, a dining facility and a learning center.

Additionally, Congress met Air Force's request for $249 million to fund 2,135 housing units and tacked on $44 million to fund 367 more units.

Even so, continued strong support on these quality of life matters is necessary, Campanale said. "If we are to continue to retain quality people and recruit others with similar skills, then we must provide them the quality of life they deserve."

Campanale detailed for the committee — chaired by Rep. Barbara F. Vucanovich, R-Nev. — areas of concern. These included:

- 39,000 people are on waiting lists for family housing.

- More child development centers are needed. Over the next five years, even though Air Force's current program will increase capacity by 13,000 spaces, only 65 percent of the 86,000-space requirement will be met.

- Conversion of dorms with so-called "gang latrines" and crowded "two plus two" living arrangements need to be accelerated to "provide our people what they deserve and ask for most — privacy," he said.

- New fitness and education centers are needed, especially overseas, to replace aging facilities that are being taxed to the limit by expanding missions.

- "We have a solid plan for continued improvement for our people, both stateside and overseas," Campanale said. "Recent year programs and money have been limited, so now we need additional investment so necessary projects can be planned, funded, scheduled and completed.

- "I know you recognize that quality of life has a defining impact on the morale, esprit and readiness of our troops," he said.

Master Sergeants to attend Senior NCO Academy

Some active-duty master sergeants will attend the Senior NCO Academy in October.

- The Senior NCO Academy selection list was released Wednesday.

- Those with the greatest potential for future leadership positions will be identified as primary and alternate attendees.

- For those not selected, a new version of the Senior NCO Academy correspondence course will be available in October.

- The course will be available on paper and on CD-ROM.

- Voluntary registration will begin Oct. 1.

DOD seeks $58.9 billion for Air Force

F-22 and $264 million on joint advanced strike technology and joint strike fighter.

- Ongoing priorities: $44 million on evolved expendable launch vehicles and $319 million on space-based infrared systems.

Overall, today's readiness programs — including resources, training and people — are funded and enhanced, and tomorrow's readiness — ensured through modernization — must be kept on schedule, the official said.

The official also provided several comparisons to illustrate how Air Force has evolved since fiscal 1990. Air Force active duty and civilian force will be 381,000 and 178,000, respectively, by the end of fiscal 1997. These compare to 538,000 and 249,000 in fiscal 1990.

Over the same period major installations will have reduced from 139 to 86; active fighter wings will have dropped from 24 to 13; Reserve and Guard fighter wings will dip from 12 to seven; bombers will be down from 301 to 126 and intercontinental ballistic missiles down from 1,000 to 580.

Unlike previous DOD budget proposals, this year's budget includes funding for contingency operations expected to carry over into the coming fiscal year. Roughly $1.1 billion — including $590 million for Southwest Asia operations and $542 million for operations in Bosnia — are funded.

"There is a clear advantage to budgeting for these contingency costs rather than requesting and waiting for congressional approval of a supplemental appropriation to fund these operations," the DOD statement said.

"If Congress approves this contingency funding, and if the department encounters no new unexpected costs, training and maintenance will not have to be curtailed while awaiting congressional approval of supplemental funding," the statement indicated.

Phone Slamming — Could your long distance service be switched without your knowledge or consent? It's happening to many unsuspecting consumers and businesses who become entrapped in a scam called "phone slamming." The scam begins with a company that buys access to telecommunications lines from large, well-known companies and resells the long-distance service to consumers at a profit. Some resellers use deceptive measures to switch customers' long distance services. Protect yourself by regularly checking your phone bills and if you suspect that your service has been changed, call the Better Business Bureau at 763-0459.

Innovative Irrigation For Home Gardeners

(NAPS)—A large number of home gardeners are growing with the flow thanks to an innovative irrigation technique once only available to commercial farmers. The product, called Rain Tape, is used in almost every type of row crop, including peppers, beans, squash, etc. Though farmers buy it in mile-long rolls to irrigate their crops, which can cover hundreds of acres, home gardeners now can buy this water saving type of irrigation in smaller kits for home gardens. The Rain Tape Soaker Tape Watering System can efficiently water up to 6,800 square feet of vegetables, fruits, roses and other flowers from a single faucet. Spaced eight inches apart, the product's emitters use pressure compensation technology to deliver the same amount of water to every plant in every row. Rain Tape is easy to install; it takes only minutes to set up.

A soaker tape is considered the perfect watering system for gardeners who want to grow strong, healthy plants.

A dry fact perhaps, but the result is not a dry plant or vegetable in the house (garden, actually).

Promoting mora

The 64th Services Squadron's mission is to promote Wing readiness and mission accomplishment through stimulating services promoting physical fitness, unit and community cohesion, family well-being and quality of life.

This is accomplished through the efforts of plans and force management and four support flights: membership, recreation, youth and military.

Plans and force management organizes the Readiness In Base Services (RIB) deployment team, Search and Rescue team, and the Wing's Honor Guard. Some of its responsibilities is to provide mortuary affairs for active duty, dependents and retirees in the local area. It also offers human resource's non-appropriated positions and publicizes Services' activities.

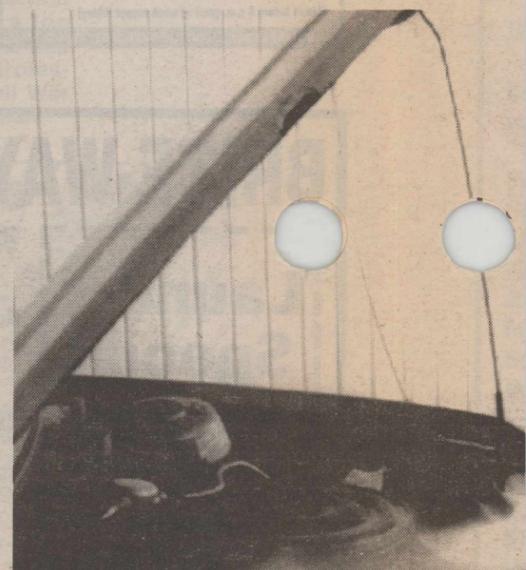

The membership support flight operates the Reese Club, Ruby's, High Plains Golf Course and Windmill Lanes. The Reese Club offers a versatile dining and entertainment experience for all its members. Ruby's is a full service hospitality facility offering quality entertainment and professional service. The golf course and bowling center provide a wholesome recreational facility and a social environment for all eligible patrons.

The recreation support flight operates the base library, Arts and Crafts Center, Auto Hobby Shop,

The youth support flight is comprised of the child development center and the youth center. The child development program offers the highest quality of care services available for children 6 months to 12 years of age. The CDC is one of three day cares in the Lubbock area to receive a four star rating during the last state inspection. The youth center offers a variety of programs for five to 18 years old. The center is in the process of obtaining national accreditation.

The military support flight operates the Caprock Cafe, Reese Inn, and the fitness center. The Caprock Cafe provides three meals a day to over 200 individuals. The Reese Inn facilities consist of 48 single occupancy rooms, 10 distinguished visitor suites, and a 25 family unit Transient Living Facility (TLF). The fitness center is the most important on-base service to single enlisted and officers according to General Fogleman's Quality of Life Survey.

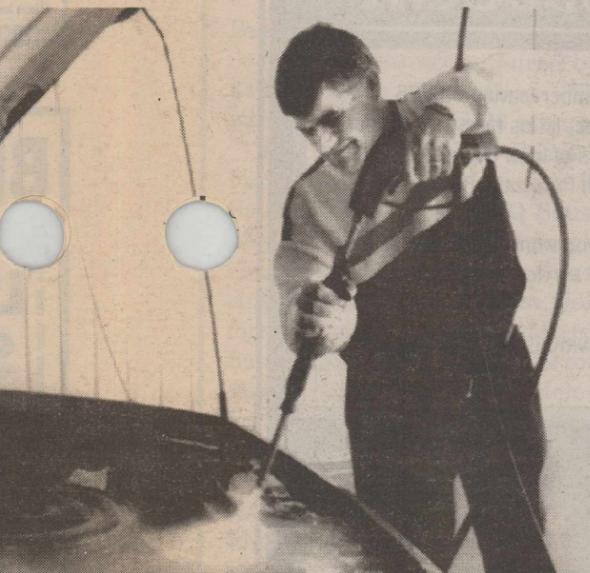

Together the combined effort and service from the people of the 64th SVS helps boost morale and quality of life for Reese personnel.

64th MDG records two volleyball wins

The 64th Medical Group capped off last week with two victories to keep the team in the National League title chase.

The team defeated the 64th Civil Engineer Squadron-A and the 64th Logistics Squadron-A.

The 64th MDG took the first game against the 64th CES-A, 15-7, March 5. However, the 64th CES-A bounced back in the second game for a 9-11 win. The third game was close, but the 64th MDG was able to take the game, 12-10, to win the match.

On the following night, the team went the distance against the 64th LS-A. The medics won the first game with ease, 15-2. It dropped the next game, 9-15. In the final game, the 64th MDG came together and won, 14-9, for the match victory.
