Board selects new BTZ senior airmen at Reese

Tech. Sgt. Dave Brown
Editor

Two members of the Reese team received stripes from Col. Kodak Horton, 64th Flying Training Wing commander, and Chief Master Sgt. Al Keenum, 64th FTW senior enlisted advisor, for being selected for promotion to senior airman below-the-zone.

The promotees, Airman 1st Class Stephani Bair, 64th Medical Group, and Airman 1st Class Jaime Muldoon, 64th Logistics Squadron, were selected for promotion by a BTZ board. They will sew on their new stripes six months earlier than their original promotion dates.

Staff Sgt. Gary Thurman, 64th Mission Support Squadron noncommissioned officer in charge of career enhancements, said there were 20 Reese airmen 1st class eligible for promotion and three were selected.

The third selection was Airman 1st Class Shawna Taylor, formerly of the 64th LS, who already left for her new assignment.

Reese people 'doing great job' -- 64th SPTG/CC

Jones

Lt. Col. Mike Jones
64th Support Group
commander

I recently returned to my home of record, preparing for the retirement jump. While back in the beautiful mid-South, home of William Faulkner, W.C. Handy, Elvis Presley and John Grisham, I forayed into a world filled with civilians. (No, I'm not kidding!) While "out there," I engaged in some friendly banter in usual waiting areas and homes of friends and family (not necessarily the same thing.)

Here's an updated report from mid-America:

They are proud of us. Despite the Kelly Flinn diversion, the real folks out there do not think of us as soap opera participants, but real warriors doing a great job.

The folks I talked to had no idea about the quadrennial review nor seemed to care much when I talked about it. They think we are underpaid for what we do, but still think we get free food and room, medical and dental care for the family, free uniforms, etc., and to my chagrin, think we are still a part of the Army.

OK, let me call this the citizen's big, albeit fuzzy, picture. Here is what it means to us at Reese.

You are doing a great job. Those unsung heroes who hear the complaints, overlook slights and keep on smiling and performing daily miracles, are serving before self.

Those of you who are repeatedly doing repetitive tasks like inventories and file moving and packing and crating and doing it right every time are demonstrating real integrity.

Those of you who take time to hear someone out, to think about doing something better or more efficiently are practicing real Quality Air Force principles. And those of you who help one another in so very many ways truly understand the Golden Rule.

My dad and mom taught me the value of hard work, ethics and honesty, and the dignity of all people. I admire these traits greatly and I do not squander praises, so Team Reese, take this message to heart—it's heartfelt from me—I am very proud to be working here with all of you.

You make me very proud to be part of the Air Force. You make me proud to have been a part of Reese's history.

Medal of Honor winner talks about 'Mike's flag'

(Condensed from a speech Leo Thorness, recipient the Congressional Medal of Honor)

You've probably seen the bumper sticker somewhere along the road. It depicts an American flag, accompanied by the words "These colors don't run." I'm always glad to see this, because it reminds me of an incident from my confinement in North Vietnam at the Hao Lo POW camp, or the "Hanoi Hilton," as it became known.

Then a major in the U.S. Air Force, I had been captured and imprisoned from 1967-1973. Our treatment had been frequently brutal. After three years, however, the beatings and torture became less frequent.

During the last year, we were allowed outside most days for a couple of minutes to bathe. We showered by drawing water from a concrete tank with a homemade bucket. One day as we all stood by the tank, stripped of our clothes, a young Naval pilot named Mike Christian found the remnants of a handkerchief in a gutter that ran under the prison wall.

He managed to sneak the grimy rag into our cell and began fashioning it into a flag. Over time we all loaned him a little soap, and he spent days cleaning the material.

We helped by scrounging and stealing bits and pieces of anything he could use.

At night, under his mosquito net, Mike worked on the flag. He made red and blue from ground-up roof tiles and tiny amounts of ink and painted the colors onto the cloth with watery rice glue. Using thread from his own blanket and a homemade bamboo needle, he sewed on stars.

Early in the morning a few days later, when the guards were not alert, he whispered loudly from the back of our cell, "Hey gang, look here."

He proudly held up this tattered piece of cloth, waving it as if in a breeze. If you used your imagination, you could tell it was supposed to be an American flag.

When he raised that smudgy fabric, we automatically stood straight and saluted, our chests puffing out, and more than a few eyes had tears.

About once a week the guard would strip us, run us outside and go through our clothing. During one of those shakedowns, they found Mike's flag.

We all knew what would happen.

That night they came for him. Night interrogations were always the worst. They opened the cell door and pulled Mike out.

We could hear the beginning of the torture before they even had time in the torture cell. They beat him most of the night.

About daylight they pushed what was left of him back through the cell door. He was badly broken; even his voice was gone.

Within two weeks, despite the danger, Mike scrounged another piece of cloth and began another flag.

The Stars and Stripes, our national symbol, was worth the sacrifice to him.

Now, whenever I see the flag, I think of Mike and the morning he first waved that tattered emblem of a nation. It was then, thousands of miles from home in a lonely prison cell, that he showed us what it is to be truly free.

Editor's Note:

Saturday, June 14, is Flag Day in America.

We Americans who serve or have served our country proudly, need to take just a minute to reflect what our national symbol really means in our hearts.

As a career member of the Air Force, I proudly stand next to the Stars and Stripes, thanking God for the opportunity to serve and defend this country of ours and what it stands for.

Staff Sgt. Orlando Guerrero

Anyone can look over the roof of Bldg. 800 eastward and see the American flag, and view of the static displays down Mitchell Blvd. The flag flies valiantly, giving a majestic display of freedom.

64th SPS certifies Lubbock PD dogs at Reese

Tech. Sgt. Dave Brown
Editor

Reese Air Force Base received a bit of help from the Lubbock Police Department Monday when three of LPD's drug dogs were certified for U.S. Air Force installations and standards.

Master Sgt. Jim Franks, 64th Security Police Squadron training and resources superintendent, stated the certification will be a real plus for Reese. "We lost all our military working dogs to PCS attrition," he said. "By having the Lubbock drug dogs certified, we ensure there won't be a problem when a drug dog is needed."

Watching and certifying the performance of each of the dogs were Col. Kodak Horton, 64th Flying Training Wing commander; Lt. Col. Mike Jones, 64th Support Group commander; Lt. Col. Jean Dailey, 64th Mission Support Squadron commander; Lt. Col. Joe Wilson, 64th Logistics Squadron commander; and Capt. John O'Connor, 64th SPS commander.

The dogs and their handlers went through an intensive search program, certifying on at least five different types of drugs in different locations.

Fire department explains what fire is

Mike Guzman
Fire department

Many people believe that fire "only happens to the other guy." The truth is, no one is excluded. Here is a little insight into what causes fire.

Every fire requires:

- a heat source (flame, electricity, friction);
- a fuel source (sofa, gasoline, electric appliances);
- oxygen;
- and something to bring them together. That something nearly always has a human component involved.

Apply the four elements of fire. Last week, the Reese community experienced a fire in military family housing. The fire department responded to a 9-1-1 phone call made by a neighbor reporting that smoke was coming from the house next door. On-scene firefighters found a house filled with thick black smoke. After forcible entry and a search of the house, firefighters were surprised to find a mattress lying in a waterbed frame. The hot smoldering mattress was on the verge of breaking into flames. Firefighters removed the mattress and ventilated the house, minimizing smoke damage.

After an investigation, fire officials found that the waterbed's heater was left in the "on" position (the heat source) while the waterbed was empty. On top of the heater lay a mattress (the fuel) that was being used to help empty the waterbed bladder.

The occupant failed to turn off the waterbed heating element (the human component), which nearly caused the loss of personal items and a $60,000 housing unit. All the elements were there: heat, fuel, oxygen and human error.

A fire can happen to anyone! Heat, fuel, oxygen and human error can be used as a stepping stone to help prevent fires. Be careful and please...think firesafe!

Dennis Ryder, right, prepares to extinguish any fire with a fire hose, preventing additional damage and injury or loss of life. Airman 1st Class Jacob Chauklin, left, prepares to knock the door down with a fire ax if entry cannot be acquired otherwise.

Photo above, three members of the Reese fire department prepare to enter quarters on Shell Blvd., in base housing, where a smoke alarm went off. The results of that smoke alarm can be seen in the photo at right. The white box shows where the heater began to smolder and burn the waterbed mattress. In addition, some smoke damage occurred to the quarters.

The intramural softball season comes to a close with a rivalry between 64th Mission Support Squadron and 64th Logistics Squadron in the championship game Thursday. Rain and a wet field postponed the game from June 4.

MSS completes the winner's bracket, while LS/A competes in the championship game from the loser's bracket.

The intramural playoffs began June 2 with 64th LS/A blanking 64th LS/B 14-0; 64th SVS squeaking out a 14-13 victory over 64th SPS; 64th CES/B sending the Photo below, Crandall, Kane and Sanchez discuss strategy on how to properly prepare and drain the field of the remaining water still standing from this week's rains.

64th Medical Group to the loser's bracket with a 12-2 win; and MSS beating 64th CES/A 10-7 to start their run to the championship game.

LS/A and MSS faced each other in the final winner's bracket game June 4. MSS squeaked out a 9-8 win by scoring two runs in the bottom of the seventh inning after having a 7-6 lead in the 6th inning.

LS/A had to play a loser's bracket game against SPS to make the championship game. Both teams scored in the first inning with LS/A leading 4-1.

The logisticians began to pull away in the second with three runs, two runs in the fourth and one in the sixth before a time limit was called.

The final score was LS/A 10-5 over the cops.

The championship game starts at 5 p.m. Thursday with a second game immediately afterward if necessary.

The winner will be crowned 1997 Reese Air Force Base Intramural Softball champions and the last champions at Reese.
