Applicants for the WTC women's basketball position had until last Friday to submit resumes for the post vacated when former coach Anthony Portley's contract was not renewed.

WTC to fulfill golfer scholarship pledge

By Jonathan Carroll
Texan Staffer

As a result of the recent NJCAA sanctions against the WTC golf team, college officials will relax a campus scholarship policy relating to international students for one year only and honor a two-year commitment to potentially four returning foreign men's golfers next year.

In the past, only athletic scholarships have been given to international students. On April 16, WTC was informed its men's golf team was eliminated from post-season competition and put on one-year probation for having too many foreign golfers on athletic scholarship.

As part of these sanctions, the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA) notified golf coach and athletic director Milton Ham that the WTC team could not participate at the regional tournament in Waco April 18-19. In addition, the one-year probation limits the WTC team to only one foreign golf athletic scholarship next season. The team may otherwise compete as usual next year.

NJCAA rules stipulate that an institution may not award more than two athletic scholarships to foreign golfers.

The WTC golf team had five international students on athletic scholarship, although Ham said he believed the college was in compliance because of the way the scholarships were awarded.

Specifically, four of the students split the benefits of two athletic scholarships. The fifth golfer received a donated award, the Gary Schoen Memorial Scholarship, named after and created by the family of a former WTC golfer.

Wayne Baker, an NJCAA official based in Colorado Springs, explained the reason for the two scholarship rule. See SCHOLARSHIPS, page 6

Student Services fee to rise

Campus groups gain more funds

By Mark Harrington
Texan Staffer

The student service fee for WTC students will increase next school year from its current $3 per semester hour to $6, a change that is projected to generate some $40,000 more in income.

Overall, college officials have budgeted some $142,000 in student service fee income, money which is used to benefit the student body.

George Cormack, dean of students, oversees the student service fee account. "This is the first increase for the student service fee in 10 years," Cormack said.

Assuming a student took 15 semester hours, the student service fee this spring would have been $45. This will increase to $90 next fall.

"This is the first increase for the student service fee in 10 years,"-- George Cormack

A student services fee fund meeting was held March 26 to determine how the money will be spent next year. Attending were Burzin Unwalla, Chris Tovar, Carmen Zarate, Myles Bell and George Cormack, dean of students.

The increase will allow for some $11,000 more in student scholarships. Scholarships from student services will increase from last year's $26,300 to $37,950.

Other scholarships associated with the student services fee include $6,700 for athletics and $8,100 for rodeo athletes, a group granted a $6,000 increase for next year.

Cormack noted several other areas expected to benefit from the increase fees including the number of on-campus student activities next year.

The student activities fund spent some $5,000 this year bringing in three events, a basketball shooting game, virtual reality and laser tag.

For next school year, this budget has been increased to $10,500. Cormack said they expect to schedule at least five and possibly six events next year.

Other benefiting from the increased revenue will be the WTC cheerleaders and two new organizations on campus, the GLT Student Group and the Veteran Student Group.

The cheerleaders will receive $7,500 which will be used to send them to a cheer leading camp. Also, $800 was budgeted to purchase a Westerner mascot uniform for next year.

Both the GLT Student Group and the Veterans Student Group were bud-

Initial step taken for scholarship drive

By Joyce May
Texan Staffer

Officials here are moving ahead with plans aimed at a major scholarship fund raising effort to benefit Western Texas College.

In the latest action, the WTC Scholarship Foundation board has employed a Fort Worth-based firm to conduct a pre-campaign survey.

Such a survey is used to develop a strategy for the actual campaign, according to WTC President Harry Krenek.

The survey is to be conducted by

Cargill Associates, a fund raising consulting firm. Cost of the survey is $15,000

"Cargill recommends we do the survey to determine what a reasonable [dollar] amount to set—we don't want to set to low or too high—and also to try to predict the success for the campaign," Krenek said.

"Also, the survey will gather information about the community's assessment of the college, its strengths and weaknesses, and how people view us."

Krenek noted the WTC board of trustees has agreed to underwrite the initial $15,000 expense if for some reason the Foundation Board does not ultimately go ahead with the fund-raising effort.

He said the board has discussed going ahead and seeking donations for the scholarship fund informing contributors that a percentage of their donations would go towards the pre-campaign survey.

"However, Cargill has advised us to seek other means of financing it," Krenek said.

Krenek pointed out the whole objective of the fund-raising campaign is to increase the amount of the scholarship foundation in order to help more students.

"We're taking a good long look at our scholarship fund and seeing if it's effective and how we might improve," he said. "The whole bottom line is to help more people go to school."

Krenek said once the survey has been completed, Cargill Associates will provide the college with a document on how the community views the college and of sources of funding.

"I think it will be worth doing just for the information about the college," Krenek said.

'Lone Star' explores cultural pluralism in Texas

By Pamela Foster
Texan Staffer

"Lone Star" is a journey through the intricate tapestry of cultural pluralism in southern Texas. This incredible story is the tale of a 40-year-old murder of a Rio County Sheriff and the intrigue surrounding a cover-up that has lasted a lifetime. Sheriff Sam Deeds (Chris Cooper) is the incumbent sheriff and the son of another Rio County sheriff of whom the town has admired for years. Now dead, his memory is being honored by the "Buddy Deeds Memorial Courthouse," a new courthouse in which his son, Sam, doesn't feel the town needs. He is sure that the only reason it's being built is to line a few pockets of some of the more prominent city fathers and to keep a few more townspeople in work. Certain that his father had established this model of running the town, Sam chases one story about Buddy to the next, trying to uncover the truth about a father that he has never respected.

When the body of Sheriff Charlie Wade (Kris Kristofferson) is discovered in the abandoned firing range of Ft. McKenzie, Sam begins his investigation of the events surrounding this possible murder in earnest. Charlie Wade had been a lawless man who strong-armed the citizens of this small south Texas town, extorting money and fear from Hispanics and the Blacks alike. He ran his town to suit his needs and to line his pockets. Everyone paid Charlie Wade for anything that was going on, from legitimate businesses to running Mexican citizens across the river to the States. Buddy Deeds stood up to Wade, and everyone knew that there was no love lost between these two.

You get a feel for the complexities of this Texas stew of old Spanish culture, influenced by whites, blacks, and Indians that make up life along the Rio Grande.

Throw in the difficulties of such diverse cultures and the controversy over which version of history should be taught to the high school students, add a new commander of Ft. McKenzie, (who just happens to be the estranged son of the local Black leader of this little town) and the problems the armed forces are facing in dealing with new recruits who are given the choice of service or jail time, toss in an old love affair between Sheriff Sam and the local history teacher, Pilar (Elizabeth Pena) whose mother is the patrona of the local Hispanics, and who just happens to be the one (along with Sam's father) who broke up Sam and Pilar when they were children, and you get a feel for the complexities of this Texas stew of old Spanish culture, influenced by whites, blacks and Indians that make up life along the Rio Grande.

This is an excellent movie, multilayered with past and present obstacles we face everyday as citizens of Texas. Chris Cooper, Mathew McConaughey, Kris Kristofferson, Elizabeth Pena, Joe Morton and Frances McDormand all give strong performances. John Sayles has shown us his solid talent for directing, bringing together a rather lengthy film (2 hrs. 15 min.) that keeps you involved from beginning to end. "Lone Star" is a must see for everyone. It is most certainly one of the better films of 1996.

"Lone Star" was produced by R. Paul Miller and Maggie Renzi, and written by John Sayles. It contains adult language, violence and adult situations.

2nd 'Veruca Salt' effort rocks

By Joshua Nash
Texan Staffer

In my humble opinion the only thing sexier than a good looking female is a good looking female holding a guitar. Conceited though I may be, I realize the influx of female-headed rock bands is not in response to my preferences. L7, Hole, Sheryl Crow, Jewel—just to name a few—have been rocking just as hard as their male counterparts recently. Well within the

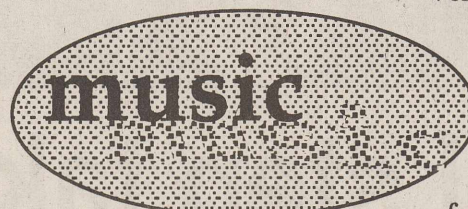

If anyone felt that Veruca Salt's first album was good but needed a little something, that little something showed up in force for their second album.

was just recently released. Nina Gordon and Louise Post, sharing guitar and lead vocals fairly equally, produced a strong, clear rock forefront of female-headed bands, Veruca Salt's second album, entitled "Eight Arms to Hold You," sound with their second effort.

Veruca Salt's first single to be released, "Volcano Girls," quite easily reminds me of "Seether" found on their first album, "American Thighs." Both songs are, well, enjoyably upbeat. More specifically, the two songs are just plain fun to listen to as well as sing along with. However, the biggest difference between the two songs is the fact that "Seether" is one of a few harder rock songs surrounded by slower ballad-type songs where as "Volcano Girls" is but one of the numerous guitar blasting songs on "Eight Arms to Hold You." One right after another, "Straight," "Don't Make Me Prove It," "Awesome," and others bring forth a gritty crunch to their music only hinted to in their first album. If anyone felt that Veruca Salt's first album was good but needed a little something, that little something showed up in force for their second album.

Please do not get me wrong, "Eight Arms to Hold You" does possess a few very nice softer songs. "One Last Time," and "Earthcrosser," are perfect songs to listen to in order to zone out. Being a big acoustic guitar fan myself, I was quite pleased to find two songs that utilized an acoustic base. "Benjamin" has an acoustic guitar throughout the song while "Loneliness is Worse" incorporates some acoustic work at the beginning of the song. The fact that "Benjamin" is the only song that has an acoustic guitar through the entire length of the song leads me to wonder if Veruca Salt was pleased with their experimentation with the new sound.

Basically what I have tried to explain to you in this article is that chicks with guitars are cool. Be they solely acoustic as Jewel is or rock crunch as Veruca Salt is, female-headed bands are fun to listen to. Possibly the popularity of the singer/songwriter/guitarist combination growing in the field of music for females will spawn new and equally talented musicians. Maybe by then I will understand what seether means.

Student 'kicks' state title

At state Tae Kwon Do tournament

By Cindy Goates

A WTC student has qualified to compete at the national level in the martial arts discipline Tae Kwon Do.

Jud Chapman, a sophomore from Brownwood, qualified by his performance at the state tournament April 3.

Due to the expense of traveling to nationals, held this year in Oakland, Calif., he will not be able to compete, however, but noted he would have been honored to represent the state of Texas at the event.

At the state level, the top three competitors in each division go on to the national level. Jud received 3rd place in forms and 3rd place in fighting.

At WTC, he is majoring in criminal justice.

Jud's parents are Elmer and Solange Chapman of Brownwood.

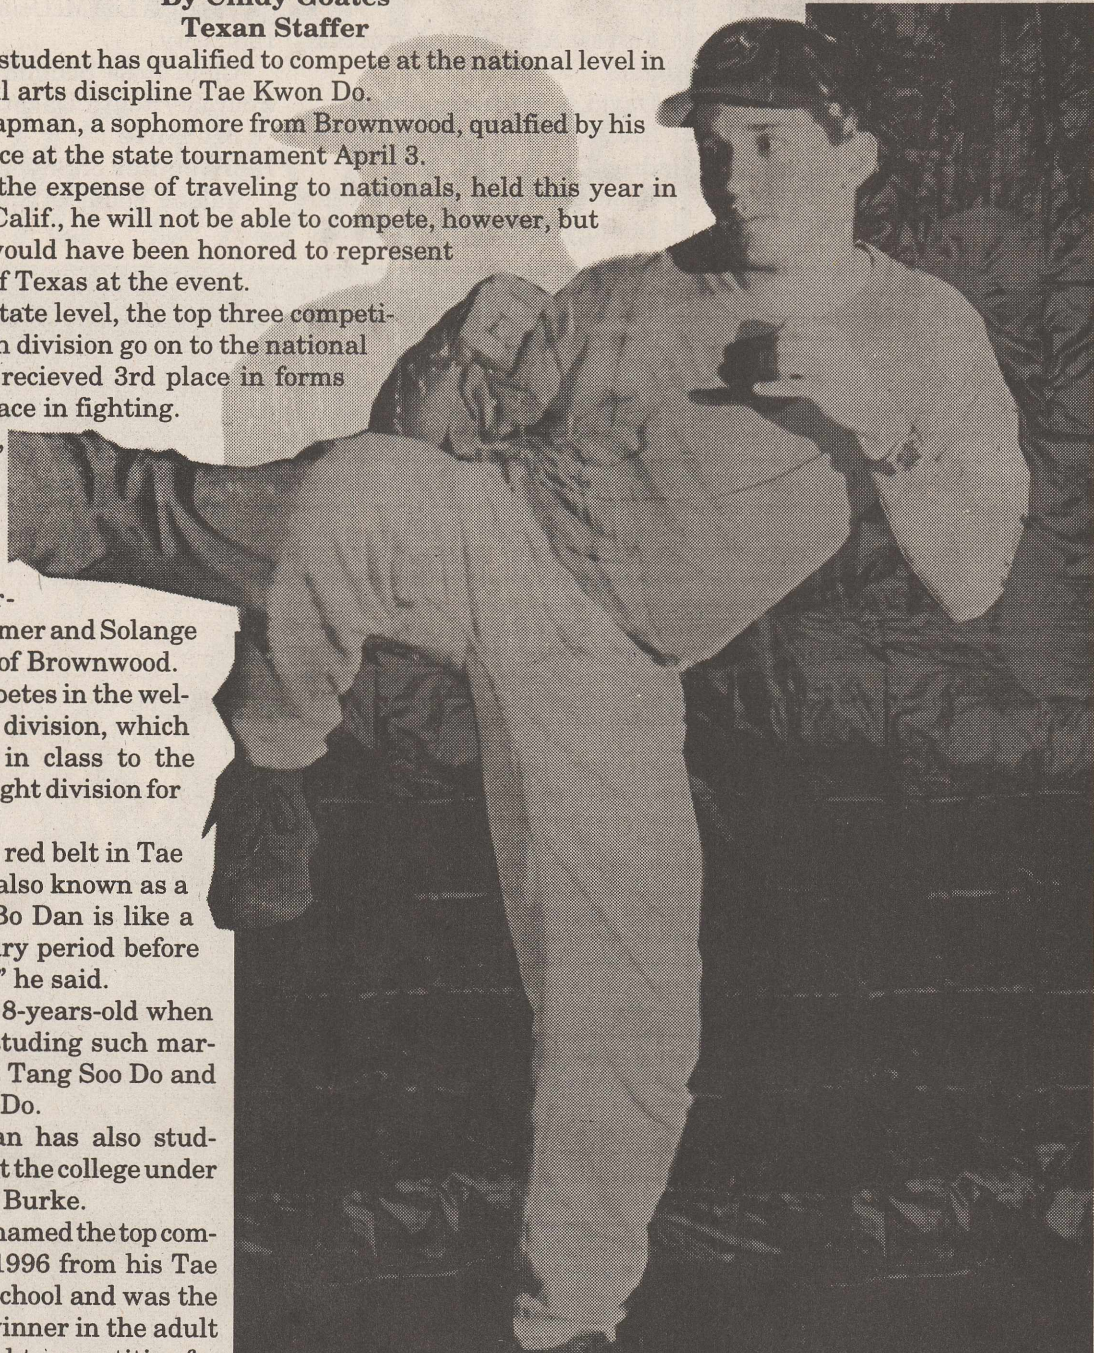

He competes in the welter weight division, which is similar in class to the middle weight division for boxing.

Jud is a red belt in Tae Kwon Do, also known as a Bo Dan. "Bo Dan is like a probationary period before black belt," he said.

He was 8-years-old when he began studying such martial arts as Tang Soo Do and Tae Kwon Do.

Chapman has also studied Akido at the college under Coach Lee Burke.

He was named the top competitor of 1996 from his Tae Kwon Do school and was the 1st place winner in the adult welter weight competition for the past two years.

individuals over the telephone.

"Expect to have several other resumes in the mail today," he said Friday.

He noted the college would accept applications past the Friday deadline from persons who had previously contacted him via the telephone.

The next step in the process to replace Portley will involve a campus steering committee formed to screen applicants.

Members of that committee include Ham, Gay Hickman, vice president for business; Bettie McQueen, dean of instruction; George Cormack, dean of students; Lee Burke, division chair for Health, Physical Education; and Bonnie Fry, this year's president of the WTC Booster Club.

Portley finished his first year at WTC this spring. He was still under a two-year contract probationary period and Ham said it was recommended his contract not be renewed.

Under policy, no specific reasons have to be given for non-renewal of a contract during the two year probationary period.

Campus officials have declined to specify why Portley's contract was not renewed.

Golfer scholarships to be honored here

"The intent is for community college sports to be first for the community players, second for the state players, third for the country and fourth for the foreign players."

Baker noted that the rule is well known and that violations are uncommon. "The rule does not limit opportunity," he said.

In addition, Baker added that it is illegal to offer foreign students academic scholarships unless the students meet the schools specific criteria.

Regarding awarding foreign students academic scholarships at WTC, George Cormack, dean of student services, said, "As a rule we don't."

exception next school year to honor the two-year scholarship offer made to the four golfers already here and planning to return.

"I felt like it was the ethical thing to do since we had made a commitment to these young men," Cormack said.

WTC will award scholarships to the returning golfers through the student services fee fund.

"The following year there will be only two international scholarships for golf, period," said Cormack about the policy that will be put in place once the golf team is off probation.

When asked how the NJCAA learned of the WTC infraction, Baker declined to identify a specific school but indicated the report had come from a "competitor."
