Community Building At ORC Given 'Green Light'

Completion Expected By May 1

Construction on an Olton Community Building on the property of Olton Recreation Center will begin as soon as weather permits.

That word was passed on Monday night by the ORC's board of directors, as following unanimous approval of the project last Thursday night by 120 members who attended the ORC's annual meeting at the school cafeteria.

In other action, ORC members named a new slate of officers for 1961 and voted a $2 per month raise in dues for members.

Eldon Franks was elected president of the ORC, succeeding Truitt Sides.

Other 1961 officers are Dr. Basil Johns, vice-president; Mrs. M.T. James Jr., secretary; and Bill Kelley, treasurer. New directors are Frank Cornelius, Bob Duncan, and Sides.

But the big item of the meeting was the wholehearted support given to plans for the new building and the increase in dues.

A maximum of $10,000 was set on building costs. Carroll Cox and Sides were appointed to head the ORC's building committee.

A sketch of the layout of the new building received approval of the board Monday night.

Plans call for the building to be constructed on the north side of the ORC swimming pool, facing east. Its outside dimensions will be 36 feet by 50 feet.

A lounge-meeting room will be the largest room in the structure. It will be 24 by 36.

Included in the plans are a 12 by 20 proshop, 12 by 14 bag room, men's and women's restrooms and showers and storage on the south side.

Completion of the building should be no later than May 1, according to Cox, building co-chairman.

Besides giving approval to the plans for the new building Monday night, the ORC board appointed committee chairman for the year.

They are: T. J. Roberson, greens; Herb Owens Jr., tournament; Elmer Moore, membership; Mrs. Gilbert Roberson, swimming pool; Don Spain, landscaping; Owen Norfleet, and Frank Cornelius, finance; Billie Norfleet, social; and Basil Johns and Bill Turner, publicity.

Diphtheria, Hepatitis Rumors Prove Untrue

Rumors that an Olton Latin American child died of diphtheria and that new cases of hepatitis were discovered have proved to be untrue.

Talk had it last week that a pre-school age Latin child from Olton had died of diphtheria in a Lubbock hospital.

Miss Leta Bell, school nurse, said Wednesday, however, that she checked into the story and found it to be untrue.

Miss Bell said the child in question, age 4, months, died in a Plainview hospital, of dehydration and pneumonia.

No cases of diphtheria have been reported by medical authorities in Olton.

One case of hepatitis was reported two weeks ago by Dr. Basil Johns, city health officer. Dr. Johns said at the time he did not expect the disease to spread here, because the child, a Latin American second grader, had been confined to a Plainview hospital and no new cases had been reported here at that time.

Miss Bell said Wednesday she has heard of no other cases of hepatitis here.

Planning Ahead Helps Students Entering Tech

High school seniors thinking of entering Texas Tech next fall will find planning ahead to meet testing requirements helps smooth the process of registration.

Tech officials recommend that high school students take either the American College Test (ACT) or the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) during their senior year and have the results sent to Tech. High school counselors can be contacted for application blanks and testing blanks.

If students are not able to take the ACT or the SAT, they must arrange to take the battery of tests offered by Tech. For convenience of prospective Techsians, three testing dates are scheduled for June. They are to be given at 8 a.m. June 5, 19 or 26 in the Agriculture Memorial Auditorium.

Fee for the tests is $2 and may be paid at time of testing.

The tests are not entrance examinations, but will be used to aid in counseling students during their college careers. Students unable to take the June tests and who have not taken the ACT or the SAT will be tested 8 a.m. Sept. 11.

Application for the June test dates may be made by writing the Testing and Counseling Center, Texas Technological College, Lubbock. The preferred test date should be specified. Completing testing requirements prior to registration will help entering freshmen avoid registration delay.

OLTON SUGAR BEET ASSOCIATION

Invites You to Help Bring a New Major Cash Crop To This Area.
Join Today! We Must Act Now! Present Sugar Act Expires March, 1961.

The U.S. in the past has been dependent upon imported sugar, particularly Cuban sugar.
HELP PRODUCE SUGAR HERE AT HOME!

Your $10 membership will go for top professional representation in Washington which is waging an effective battle for legislation which would give us a sugar beet quota. The cost of this battle is approximately six thousand dollars a month, and we must shoulder our share of the cost. Your membership in the local organization also goes to fact-gathering trips to sugar beet areas by local people. Your local association will make contacts with sugar beet processing industries in an effort to acquire a plant for the Olton area.

Sugar beets are the one crop that contributes more than anything else to a rounded-out, complete agricultural program.

DOMESTIC BEET SUGAR AND THE SUSPENDED CUBAN QUOTA

With the deterioration of relations with Castro's Cuba, all US imports of Cuban cane sugar have been suspended. In the past the US has depended heavily on imports of Cuban cane sugar. And Cuba has depended heavily on the US market for its sugar. That market has heretofore been assured to Cuba under the Sugar Act of 1948 as amended, which not only has accorded to Cuba a liberal quota of 3,200,000 tons a year, but a premium price.

The time has come to rethink our long term sugar policy. A good case can be made for a considerable reduction in our reliance on Cuba's sugar after Castro, both in the interest of the US and in that of Cuba. The purpose of the present review is to set forth the advantages to the US which would ensue from the development of additional sugar beet production in this country to replace in part or in whole the cane sugar heretofore imported from Cuba, bearing in mind that there is no difference between refined cane and beet sugar in any respect.

AGRICULTURAL ADVANTAGES OF SUGAR BEET FARMING

Crop rotation, which the sugar beet requires, increases soil equilibrium. Since the sugar beet thrives in a variety of soils, altitudes and climates - often in areas where other crops will not thrive - sugar beet culture materially helps in the extensive development of otherwise less productive areas, such as arid, alkali regions of the West. It has been estimated that the use of beets in crop rotation has brought about a 15% increase in the yield of wheat and a 10% increase in that of some other crops. Indeed, some instances of increases of up to 75% have been reported.

A characteristic of the sugar beet is that its byproducts - tops, pulp and molasses - food and fibre for human use in the forms of meat, milk and wool. Sugar-beet by-products thus, indirectly, contribute to the production of are highly nutritious feeds for livestock and fed along with grain and alfalfa hay produce beef, mutton and lamb at lower cost than any other ration available in the US. An acre producing 20 tons of beet roots for sugar generally will yield 12 to 15 tons of green tops. More over, the pulp left over after removal of the sugar in the processing factory also is sought by dairymen and livestock feeders. A higher rate of animal survival results from the addition of sugar beet pulp to the ration, experience shows. Thus, in various ways, the sugar beet contributes to better farming practices and a sounder agriculture. Greater economic stability of farming results.

An acre of land producing 20 tons of beets or 6,000 lbs. of pure granulated sugar also yields as byproducts, when fed to livestock, either 400 to 600 lbs. of meat, or 5,000 to 6,000 lbs. of milk. Furthermore, where the byproducts are fed on the farm that produces the beets, most of the vegetable part of the beet is returned to the farm through manure. Since sugar consists of only carbon, hydrogen and oxygen, the production of beet sugar leaves behind the big three soil elements nitrogen, phosphorus and potash for return to the land. Therefore, the sugar beet is one of the most efficient crops known.

R.H. Cottrell of the Amalgamated Sugar Company put it in a nutshell when he said that sugar is composed essentially of sunlight and carbon dioxide from the air; so its removal in no way depletes the fertility of the soil.

ECONOMIC ASPECTS

Since the sugar beet farmer contracts for the sale of his crop in advance, he has an assured market even before the seed is in the ground. Advance contracting, moreover, facilitates the agreement of financing at the farmer's local bank.

Five dozen beet sugar factories scattered over 15 states today handle the annual US sugar beet crop. Because beets are perishable, and also bulky, they cannot be shipped long distances, and the factories This provides economy both in the growing and the manufacturing processes. The end product, beet sugar, being compact, may then be shipped even to distant markets without burdensome freight charges.

The processing of sugar beets obviously is of considerable economic benefit to the local community. Of the sugar beet, a well-known reclamation commissioner, Elwood Mead, once said:

"It is the one crop that contributes more than anything else to a roundabout, complete agricultural program, gives winter and summer employment, enables the farmer to make the largest and best use of the surrounding grazing land, largest and best use of the alfalfa that is grown, and gives in an unusual measure a continuous employment for the family on the farms, with more stable income than anything else."

The economic benefit to the farmer and the beet processor in turn is spread to the community, as is attended by the development of business, roads and other facilities in the beet sugar regions of this and other countries. In the US these benefits are to be found across a wide area, from the Great Lakes to the Pacific Coast,

The economic significance of the sugar beet was portrayed in 1956 by the Western Beet Sugar Producers, Inc., as follows:

"The direct contribution of this industry to the American economy is spread agriculturally into 21 beet-producing states and industrially into the states that have beet sugar factories. Indirectly the purchases of the factories and of beet growers spread to many other industries and help meet payrolls throughout the nation.

"For example, more automobiles are purchased in Weld County, Colo. - one of hundreds of counties where the beet sugar industry is a dominant factor in the economy - than in the entire nation of Cuba.

"Sugar beets add close to $200 million a year to farm purchasing power, enabling farmers to buy hundreds of the products of American industry.

"In a typical year, beet sugar company payrolls amount to more than $50 1/4 million, and in many factory towns the sugar plant has the largest industrial payroll of the community. The industry pays railroad freight bills of nearly $34 million and another $12 1/2 million for trucking and other freight. No other major crop produces so much revenue per acre for the nation's transportation systems as does the sugar beet crop.

"The $5 1/4 million the industry pays annually in state and local taxes and the $32 million in Federal taxes help materially to provide the good schools, paved highways and other community improvements that make America a better place to live."

WHAT SUBSTITUTING BEET SUGAR FOR IMPORTED CUBAN CANE WOULD MEAN IN JOBS AND PAYROLLS

The 1958 Census of Manufactures showed that the 66 beet sugar mills then operating in the US employed 10,324 persons, had a payroll of $48,652,000, and shipped $392,000,000 of products, of which the value added by manufacture (unadjusted) was over $96,000,000. Based on these 1958 data, the average beet sugar factory had 156 employees, a payroll of about $738,000, and shipped $5,939,000 worth of products during the year, of which value added by manufacture (adjusted) was nearly $2,000,000. (1958 CENSUS OF MANUFACTURES: INDUSTRY AND PRODUCT REPORTS (Subject to Revision), June 1960.)

Were we to replace with additional US grown beet sugar the entire amount of cane sugar heretofore bought from Cuba, based on the Census data just cited, the 51 new beet sugar factories needed to process the additional beet sugar would employ 7,956 persons, have aggregate payrolls of $37,638,000 and ship $303,000,000 worth of products each year. WARTIME ADVANTAGES OF GREATER SELF-SUFFICIENCY IN SUGAR

Another aspect of beet sugar farming is that of national defense. Congress has repeatedly recognized the wisdom of producing a substantial portion of the sugar we need within the US. A Congressional report of 1960 explains:

"For many years it has been the policy of the United States Government for defense and strategic reasons to preserve within the United States the ability to produce a portion of our sugar requirements. This has been done because sugar is an essential and vital food product needed by American consumers, the supply of which on a worldwide scale, has been marked by periods of alternation scarcity and surplus."

Production of sugar within the continental US insures the availability of the product in times of military or other emergency without the use of scarce shipping, which is vulnerable to enemy attack in time of war. For a time in the early part of World War II, when the submarine menace was at its height, it was impossible to bring sugar from Puerto Rico or even Cuba.

HOW MORE BEET SUGAR WOULD HELP IN THE BALANCE OF PAYMENTS

A lessening of US dependence on imported sugar would be of assistance in handling the nation's adverse balance of international payments, which in the past three years has resulted in both a large and disturbing outflow of gold, and a growing total of foreign short-term dollar balances. These in turn constitute a potential claim against our remaining gold stock.

Excepting for two years, the US balance of payments has been adverse to this country during the past eleven years. The payments deficit has assumed disturbing proportions in the last three years, during which the deficit has aggregated about $11 billion. As this experience has taught us, foreign countries from whom we import goods do not necessarily spend all the money thereby received from us on American goods, but may invest it in bank balances and securities in this country, or may buy gold with it.

Referring to the $366,000,000 annual average US payment to Cuba for sugar in 1958 and 1959, the substitution of US beet sugar for imported Cuban cane sugar would mean an equal saving in our balance of international payments and gold outflow year after year. The figure cited equals about a tenth of our international payments deficit, which the Government has been strenuously trying to rectify.

EXPORTS TO CUBA DIVERSIFIED

The proceeds of Cuban exports to the US, including sugar exports, have been spent on a widely diversified list of commodities and services. In 1957 - the year before the Castro disturbances began - Cuba imported $618 million (fob) of US goods. Auto, parts and accessories, accounted for about $53 million; electrical apparatus, $51 million; rice, $40 million; industrial, manufacturing and service industry machinery, $38 million; petroleum and products, $28 million; agricultural machinery and tractors, $10 million. In 1957 we exported to Cuba about $135 million of human foodstuffs, including $18 million of vegetables and preparations, $9 million of wheat flour, and $8 million of fruits and preparations.

While, to the extent that they succeed, Cuba's diversification efforts tend to reduce its need to import, the population growth and improvement in living standards tend to have the opposite effect. Thus, during the 1947-1957 period when Cuba was more than tripling its domestic rice production, the island continued to buy substantial amounts of American rice. In 1947 Cuba produced 84 million lbs. of clean rice; in the 1957 crop year, 370 million, an increase of 286 million lbs. US exports of rice to Cuba declined during the decade by 162 million lbs. (US exports of rice to Cuba in 1947, at the unusually high level of 737 million lbs., reflected the spending of wartime savings. A more representative figure for the period, used by the State Department, is the average for 1947, 1948, 1951 and 1952 - 575 million lbs. This compares with 413 million lbs. in 1957, a difference of 162 million lbs.)

WHAT IF WE DON'T RESUME BUYING CUBAN SUGAR?

In the light of the varied nature of our pre-Castro trade with Cuba, should the US lift the present embargo on trade with the island excepting for resumption of the purchase of Cuban sugar - thereby having the effect of limiting Cuba's overseas purchasing power excepting as Cuba may find bona fide alternative markets for sugar elsewhere - it is not possible to say precisely which Cuban imports of American goods and services would tend to be restricted; although, presumably, imports of essential foodstuffs and medicines would be favored by official Cuban policies in the Allocation of dollar exchange.

A permanent reduction, after Castro, in Cuba's sugar exports would mean continued pressure on Cuba's external purchasing power, - until sugar should be replaced by some other sources of export income, or savings in imports through the development of domestic production.

At the same time the substitution of US beet sugar for Cuban cane sugar in this country would provide an economic stimulus in the domestic areas where new land or otherwise less economic acreage is devoted to the sugar beet. The benefits would subsequently be felt by the whole nation.

Assuming that the present embargo on imports of sugar from Cuba becomes permanent and that the policy is adopted of increasing US beet sugar production to the point where it takes the place of all our former imports of cane sugar from Cuba, what would this mean economically?

Our imports of Cuban cane sugar prior to the embargo totalled 3,200,000 tons a year. It would take 1,280,000 acres of sugar beets to produce an equal yield of sugar at 2 1/2 tons of beet sugar per acre.

The average US sugar beet crop per acre in 1959 and 1960 was 18 1/4 tons. Taking 18 tons per acre, 1,280,000 acres would produce 23,040,000 tons of beets. During the five years 1955 to 1959 the average price per short ton of sugar beets was $13.81. At this price the sugar beet harvest would yield a gross income to the farmers of some $318,000,000 a year. (This compares with the average f.o.b. cost of Cuban sugar imported into the US in 1958 and 1959, $366,000,000.)

WHAT IT WOULD DO FOR SMALL COMMUNITIES

To process this increment in US sugar beet production would require the construction of perhaps 51 new beet sugar factories assuming for each such a factory a supporting acreage of 25,000. If these new factories cost an average of $15,000,000 each, it would entail an investment of $765,000,000 - a worthwhile piece of new business to the equipment manufacturers, construction firms and others concerned. Each such sugar factory would create new jobs in a small, rural community.

ACT NOW---

Write the officials listed here and express your views:

We Need A Sugar Act That Will Give Us A Quota of One Million Tons of Raw Sugar. We are asking for only about one-third of the present Cuban Sugar Quota.

President John F. Kennedy, Vice-President Lyndon Johnson, Rep. W. R. Poage, Rep. Walter Rogers, Rep. George Mahon, Rep. Sam Rayburn, Sen. Ralph Yarborough, Sen. Bill Blakley, Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman. Correspondence should be addressed to Washington, D.C.

The processing of sugar beets is of considerable economic benefit to the local community.

It gives winter and summer employment

Gives more stable income than anything else.

Enables the farmer to make the largest and best use of the surrounding grazing land.

HOW'S YOUR HEX APPEAL?

Almost everyone recognizes at least one friend who would be further along than he is now—happier, perhaps wealthier, almost certainly more agreeable—if he had only learned to correct some minor flaws in his personality, appearance or treatment of people.

Such self-improvement is easier now than it has ever been before. Psychologists are learning something new every day about what makes people tick—and sharing their knowledge with us in newspaper and magazine articles and TV talks. A host of new products and conveniences, from power-spray deodorants to super razor blades to wrinkle-resistant fabrics help make it easy to avoid obvious social errors. Then why aren't we all howling successes?

The fact is that we often fail to correct our drawbacks because we don't know what they are! Here is a 20-question quiz that may help you pinpoint some of your minor flaws:

1. Do you sometimes forget to say thank you—or to repay a favor done you?
2. Ever catch yourself taking out your temper on your family or on people at the office who can't fire you?

3. Do you ever "good-naturedly" tease someone about his physical appearance, or about some "funny" mistake he made?
4. Do you ever let preoccupation with your own affairs keep you from really listening to what others are saying to you?

5. Do you generally fail to take care of headaches, upset stomachs, colds?
6. Are you habitually just a few minutes late to work and for appointments?
7. Do people frequently have to ask you to repeat what you said—in person or over the phone?

8. Do you cling to old ways of doing things, letting comfortable habit substitute for creative thought?
9. Do you have a poor memory for names and faces?
10. Do you tend to bristle when criticized?

11. Have you any little mannerisms that might annoy others?
12. Outside of your working hours, do you sometimes "knock the company" to friends?
13. Do you wait for others to take the initiative in being friendly?

14. Do you sometimes fail to make good on promises that nobody can hold you to?
15. Do you believe in getting your rights at any cost—even if this involves you in frequent arguments?
16. Do you pride yourself on being frank—telling people exactly what you think is wrong with them?

17. Do you ever try to get by with a shirt that should have been sent to the laundry . . . or don shoes that need a polishing . . . or persuade yourself you're saving money by avoiding the barber or shaving with a used razor blade?
18. Do you enjoy a gossip session now and then?
19. Are you unenthusiastic about your work?
20. Do you like to indulge in griping?

ANSWERS

1. If you think nobody notices when you're too "busy" to think of saying thank you or remembering to return a favor, recall how you felt the last time someone failed to appreciate a kindness you'd done him. Examine your feelings when someone sincerely expresses his appreciation, and you'll have some idea of what one little "thank you" can do.

2. Never mind what you thought you heard psychologists say about how bottling up your aggressions is so bad for you. Giving vent to anger is equally bad—because it makes people feel aggressive toward you. What the psychologist really means is that you should find some harmless outlet for your tensions—like whacking a tennis ball or knocking heck out of those ten-pins on bowling night.

3. Building your ego at the expense of others is all too tempting—but it sends your hex appeal score soaring. Instead, try complimenting the other person's good points—and let the answering response boost your ego.

4. There's no higher compliment you can pay a man than really listening to what he says—and no greater insult than failing to listen. Don't imagine you can get away with it, either. If your glazed eyes don't give you away, your "left field" replies to questions or comments will.

5. Refusing to "give in" to minor ailments may seem stoic to you, but actually these are temper-spoilers—and prime boosters of hex appeal. And you know the kind of appeal you'll have for the person who catches your cold.

6. Punctuality, business and social, prompts people to think of you as considerate, reliable and well-organized. Lateness, even of just a few minutes duration, makes them think just the opposite.

7. This time-consumer is a real annoyance to others—and the fault is probably not with the secretaries people hire nowadays. Sloppy enunciation together with massacre of the Queen's English—has halted many an able man's advancement.

8. From grooming to gardening to garnering to plaudits of the boss, there's usually a better and quicker way of the things done—and you can miss out on much fun and success if you don't seek it out. You can begin as early in the day as your morning shave. The new super fast blue blades men are talking about everywhere are said to reduce your shaving time sharply while providing the last word in comfort. Worth-while? Only you can decide—try one and see. On the job, conduct your own "time-motion studies" to eliminate unnecessary work; get into the habit of jotting down brainstorming that may pay off for your company. Off the job, experiment with new games, hobbies, vacation spots.

9. So do most people—but the man who gets ahead is usually the one who can pay people the elementary compliment of remembering who they are. The worst memory can be substantially improved with good hard work—and a good way to remember a name or face is simply to tell yourself firmly that you must. It helps to repeat the name aloud upon being introduced.

10. It's hard to work effectively with other people unless you can take criticism with a smile and more important, use it if it's valid. If you react to criticism as a personal insult, people will soon dismiss you as "temperamental"—and then you'd better show the genius often associated with this quality!

11. Nail-biting, drumming on the desk with a pencil, frequent repetition of a phrase like "I said" or "I mean" may seem minor to you, but they can build up irritation in others—and boost your hex appeal accordingly.

12. They may laugh, but since a man's livelihood is so important a part of his life, a man who disparages it is as hard to respect as a man who's always belittling himself.

13. Like you, they may be "shy"—and getting a reputation for snootiness.

14. Few qualities are more prized than reliability. Whether it's a trip to the zoo or an extra bit of research you promised the boss, deliver—and watch your stock soar.

15. You may win a battle, but lose a war. Giving in even when you know you're right often gives you a psychological advantage—the other person feels obligated and maybe slightly uneasy. In that frame of mind, he's more likely to make other concessions.

16. Don't be surprised to find your circle of friends narrowing. Giving criticism is often necessary—but it should always be constructive, always gently phrased, never personal.

17. Sure you're a great guy—but chances are few people will take the trouble to discover it if you alienate them with careless grooming. Shirts should be laundered after each wearing—and discarded when cuffs and collars fray. Letting your hair go uncut longer than you should or trying to get an extra shave from a razor blade are false economies, since the saving is tiny and the damage to your appearance may be crucial.

18. On or off the job, this can hurt you. Even if your remarks don't get back to the person who was the subject of your gossip, you're bound to lose respect, get tagged as small-minded.

19. This attitude will make you unpopular not only with your supervisors, but with co-workers who must work extra hard to fight your drag on their morale—and, if you couple unenthusiastic attitude with lackadaisical performance—to make up for your dragging feet.

20. On or off the job, griping in generally unendearing to others. Even if you're really witty about your gripes—which mighty few people are—you'll be thought of as essentially a negative person.

SCORE
15-20: Your hex appeal is a real aura—a fog that's dampening your chances of success. Dispel it right away!
9-14: You're a man of average hex appeal—but you'll be infinitely more attractive to others—no matter what their hex—if you lower your score.

Below 9: Here's one case where being low man on the totem pole really pays off—and if you're smart, you'll lower yourself still further.

Here's How Bill Becomes Law

A bill before Congress is an idea for a law.

Who thinks it up? A congressman, the home folks, the President, almost anybody.

How does it become a law?

1. The congressman calls on the Congressional Legislative Service to cast the idea into legal language.

2. He drops his bill into a LEGISLATIVE HOPPER. The clerk numbers and passes it to the Speaker of the House of Representatives. He refers it to a committee. There it may "die" unless the sponsor asks for action.

3. If he does, the committee may consider the bill or assign it to a subcommittee to consider the bill. Usually, either the committee or the subcommittee will hold hearings, study the merits of the bill, and prepare a report on it to be submitted to the House.

4. At long last the committee votes on it. If most members support it, it goes "out of committee" to the House.

5. It gets on the calendar and the House Rules Committee says how, when and for how long the House may review the bill.

6. The Speaker sets a time for debate with equal time to both sides.

7. Afterwards the House votes. If passed, the bill becomes an "act" and goes to the Senate.

8. The Senate President refers the act once again to a committee which may "table" it, or report it out with or without changes.

9. The Majority Policy Committee sets the time for debate on the bill, and a member asks to have the act considered. If this motion is carried, it calls for debate, perhaps amendments, and a vote.

High among the special pleasures of Cadillac ownership is the car's remarkable handling ease. It seems almost to drive itself. In parking, traffic, or on the open road, a Cadillac maneuvers with scarcely more than your thoughts to prompt it. And contributing to this relaxing feeling of effortless driving is the superb silence of the Cadillac engine . . . the virtual absence of travel noise . . . and those deep and buoyant Cadillac seats. Your Cadillac dealer will be more than happy to let you see for yourself how deftly a 1961 Cadillac handles.

Who's In The Dog House Over The Fire? Nobody!

Mr. and Mrs. Don Williams went to considerable pains to make sure everything was fine for their children and the family dog, "Buster Brown," before they left to spend a few days at Abilene.

They left the children in the care of Mrs. Ruby Sturch, a school teacher who went home with the Williams children after school. And Don made sure the light in the doghouse was working so the dog would stay warm.

Early Tuesday, about 3 a.m., the dog house caught on fire, either from the heat of the light or a wiring short. The flames licked at the corner of the Williams' home.

"Buster Brown" made a racket and Mrs. Sturch awoke. "The dog almost knocked me down when I opened the door, he was so scared," Mrs. Sturch told the Williams later.

The fire department was called and the volunteers made their way to the Williams home. They battled not only the fire but also weather conditions. Snow had stacked up to six inches and still was falling. Mrs. Sturch called the Williams at Abilene about 3:30 a.m. Tuesday to tell them of the fire.

She let them know that Mike, Gail and Jean Yvonne were safe and so was the dog.

And the Williams learned that firemen stopped the blaze before it did much damage to the home. Only a corner caught on fire, and firemen had that out before it got inside the house.

But the dog house didn't fare so well. It burned to the ground.

Lamb Water Table Drops

Despite a rise of over one foot in 11 water wells in Lamb County during the past year, the decline in 24 other wells gave the county an average loss in the water table of .68 of a foot.

The 24 wells showed an average decline of 1.62 feet. The other 11 wells of the 35 measured showed a rise of 1.36 feet.

The measurements are taken annually by the Texas State Board of Water Engineers and the Plainview office of the U.S. Geological Survey.

The recorded average decline is much less than engineers recorded in 1960. Last year 32 measured wells in Lamb County showed an average decline of 3.66 feet.

Water levels this year measured an average of 98.19 feet. This compares favorably with the 1958 figure of 91.55 feet, 91.89 feet in 1959 and 95.59 in 1960.

Congratulations, Champions!

Your Work And Purina Make An Unbeatable Team

Good Luck To All Our 4H, FFA & FHA Youngsters

Olton exhibitors captured the championship of every division at last weekend's Lamb County Fat Stock Show at Littlefield.
It is no "sheer coincidence" that all these champion animals are on the Purina Feeding Program. Again, Purina has shown, with facts not "chin music," that its program is the profitable, proved way to grow livestock.
Plan to stop in an visit with us about the Purina Feeding Program next time you're in town. We're at the store with the Red and White Checkerboard sign.
