Some hostages have mental scars

West Point to be site for Sunday reunion with families

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Doctors flashed the green light Friday for a weekend homecoming by the 52 American hostages, but said some have mental scars from their 44-day captivity that will require time and treatment to heal.

The 50 men and two women were due to leave the U.S. Air Force base here Sunday morning and Pentagon sources in Washington said they will be reunited with their families at Stewart Air Base in Newburgh, N.Y., and then go to the nearby U.S. Military Academy at West Point for a few days rest.

There were reports that one of the hostages, Donald R. Hohman of West Sacramento, Calif., would remain in Frankfurt, where his German wife and the couple's children have lived since the U.S. Embassy was seized in

Would NBC leave game for hostages?

NEW YORK (AP) — Support for the former hostages' arrival in this country during NBC's broadcast Sunday of the Super Bowl football game. What will the network do?

We would have to make an editorial decision at that time, a network spokesman, George Hoover, said Friday.

I don't think there's much chance that it will happen, he added, noting the hostages are expected to arrive in this country between noon and 3 p.m. EST.

The Super Bowl broadcast from New Orleans is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

We do know they want to see the Super Bowl, Hoover said of the 52 Americans, and they have to be here to do that.

One man killed, another wounded during drug bust

ORLA (AP) — One man was killed by an airplane propeller as he tried to escape and another was wounded when state troopers returned fire Friday on a group of suspected marijuana smugglers, officials said.

Five other men were arrested by the Department of Public Safety officers who surrounded a light plane and at least one other suspect eluded capture, a DPS spokesman said.

The raid began at 11:20 p.m. Thursday when five DPS officers hiding in the desert watched a Cessna 210 aircraft land on a lonely farm road west of Orla, a tiny West Texas town about 35 miles southeast of New Mexico's Carlsbad Caverns.

The DPS officers were on surveillance, and when the aircraft landed they attempted to arrest the suspect in the airplane and those on the ground who came to meet it, said DPS Sgt. Johnny Koonce of Pecos, who supervised the raid.

The pilot attempted to escape and ran into the prop. It tore half his face off. He was killed instantly," Koonce said. "One of the others tried to shoot DPS officer Cleve Buckaloo, and that's when Officer (Charley) Denning shot him."

He said Denning was standing about 30 feet away when he fired two shots with a .45-caliber automatic pistol, striking the gunman once in the shoulder. The gunman, who had been aiming a high-powered rifle at Buckaloo, was hospitalized in Pecos in stable condition.

"He saved Buckaloo's life — no doubt about it," said Koonce.

The other suspects, who surrendered after the shots were fired, were jailed in Pecos and held under $50,000 bond each on drug conspiracy charges. Koonce said more charges could be filed later, including attempted murder.

However, as the five DPS officers were rounding up the suspects near the airplane, a white car suddenly started up and sped away in the distance, and Koonce said it is believed whoever was in that car was also involved with the accused smugglers. A search was launched.

Koonce said the Cessna 210 had been stolen last month in Hereford, Texas. DPS agents seized it, along with a van, a car, 600 pounds of marijuana valued at $200,000, $26,100 in cash, and six guns.

Koonce said the raid came after two weeks of undercover work.

Authorities identified the six surviving suspects arrested as three men from Odessa, Hector Manuel Acosta, 32, Gilberto Salidas Casas, 25, and Jonny Rimas Chavarria, 22, two Mexicans, Martin Gonzalez Aguilar, 29, who was wounded, and Armando Torres Rayos, 23; and Alejandro Ibarra, 27, of Balch Springs, Texas.

Prices up 12.4 percent in '80

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices surged upward by 12.4 percent last year, climaxing the worst three-year period of inflation in the United States since World War I, the government reported Friday.

The after-tax buying power of a typical American worker sank 4.8 percent during 1980, nearly as bad as the 5.3 percent loss he suffered in 1979, the Labor Department said. And there was no sign that inflation was about to cool.

The government's Consumer Price Index ended the year at 258.4, which means a consumer who bought goods and services for $100 in 1967 would need $258.40 to buy the same items at the end of 1980.

The cost of living rose by 1.1 percent in December, caused primarily by higher transportation, housing and food expenses, the Labor Department said. It was the fourth consecutive month that consumer prices had jumped 1 percent or higher.

President Reagan has pledged sharp reductions in federal taxes and spending in an effort to overcome the economic troubles that plagued Jimmy Carter's presidency. Reagan met Friday with congressional Republicans to discuss the economic battle plan he is expected to announce soon.

Part of that plan involves easing government regulation of businesses. The president hired an expert in that field Friday, naming Murray Weidenbaum, a professor at Washington University in St. Louis, as chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers.

Reagan also held his first meeting with Paul Volcker, the Federal Reserve chairman who has tried to fight inflation by tightening the money supply.

The Carter administration had predicted at least one more year of high inflation — about 12.5 percent — fueled by rising costs of food, energy and housing. Carter officials say Reagan's policies might well make inflation worse.

Food and energy prices are expected to continue their rapid increase in 1981, partly because of a drought and the ever-rising cost of imported oil.

Despite last spring's recession, the 1980 inflation rate of 12.4 percent was down only slightly from 1979's rate of 13.3 percent. The 1978 rate was 9 percent, making the past three years the worst for inflation since 1916-19, when inflation exceeded 10 percent for four years running.

After tax buying power has fallen 13.3 percent in the past three years for the man the government considers a "typical worker" — a married man with three dependents.

The latest figures for main categories show:

— Housing costs rose 13.7 percent last year after increasing 15.2 percent in 1979. The cost of housing climbed 1.3 percent in December in the department's seasonally adjusted figures. Rapidly rising mortgage costs were responsible for the biggest part of the overall increases for both the month and the year.

The department noted that if the volatile effects of mortgage interest rates were eliminated from the current method of computation, the inflation rate for all prices would have been 10.8 percent last year — a figure, some economists feel more accurately reflects the effect of inflation on most consumers.

— Transportation prices increased 14.7 percent for the year, following an 18.2 percent rise in 1979. The were up 1 percent for December. Gasoline prices — up 18.9 percent for the year and 1.1 percent for the month — were a major factor.

— Food and beverage prices rose 10.1 percent in 1980, about the same as in 1979. The category was up 1 percent in December. The increase for the year was spread fairly evenly among major food groups.

— Clothing costs increased 6.8 percent for the year, medical care 10 percent and entertainment costs 9.6 percent.

Agriculture Department officials said food prices in 1980 averaged 8.6 percent higher than in 1979, when they gained 10.9 percent. That is an average computed over the entire 12-month period and compared to a similar average for the previous year.

"This is the lowest annual increase in food prices since 1977, primarily due to the relatively small retail meat price rise last year," the department said.

Officials said they were holding to an earlier prediction that food prices may go up an additional 10 percent to 15 percent in 1981, fanned by higher prices for meat, sugar and peanut butter.

China shaken by major earthquake

PEKING (AP) — A major earthquake struck a mountainous area of Sichuan Province near Tibet Saturday, flattening two thirds of the buildings and killing at least 100 people, the seismological bureau in the region reported.

Officials said the quake measured 6.9 on the Richter scale and struck at 5:13 a.m. in Daofu County in western Sichuan province. They said rescue teams were immediately dispatched to the area.

Daofu County, inhabited by many Tibetans, is about 150 miles northwest of the provincial capital of Chengdu and about 100 miles from the Tibetan border.

First reports erroneously said the epicenter was southwest of Chengdu. Sichuan, in south central China, is the nation's largest province with a population of about 100 million people.

On July 28, 1976, an earthquake in the industrial city of Tangshan in northern Hebei province killed 655,237 people and injured 779,000, according to Chinese government figures. It registered 8.3 on the Richter scale and was the most devastating earthquake in history.

It is believed that the deadliest quake was one in 1556 that killed as many as 830,000 people in China's Shannxi province.

The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. An earthquake of 6 on the Richter scale can cause severe damage and a 7 reading is considered a "major" quake capable of widespread heavy damage, and 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.

The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated to have had an 8.3 reading.

Andrews men killed in crash

ANDREWS — Two persons died in a fiery two-vehicle accident near here early Friday afternoon.

The Department of Public Safety identified the victims as Edward G. Talcott, 45, and Warren Harding Vicars, 60, both of Andrews. They were pronounced dead at Permian General Hospital by Andrews Justice of the Peace G. A. Ragdale.

According to DPS reports, the accident occurred a half-mile south of Andrews about 2:10 p.m. Friday. Talcott was southbound on U.S. 385 in a 1973 Lincoln and Vicars was northbound.

Both drivers swerved but were unable to avoid the collision, which caused Vicars' 1978 pickup truck to burst into flames. There were no passengers in either car.

The Andrews volunteer fire department was called to the scene, but Chief Jack Clements said employees of a nearby well service company almost had the blaze extinguished when firemen arrived.

The bodies were taken to the Singleton Funeral Home in Andrews, where services are pending.

Williams gets 20 years

DENTON, Texas (AP) — A jury sentenced Terry Wayne Williams to 20 years in prison Friday for his part in the killing of North Texas State University football player Bernard Jackson. The jury deliberated 55 minutes Friday morning before returning its decision. It had deliberated two days before finding Williams, 21, guilty Thursday. Formal sentencing was set for Feb. 5. Jackson, a 22-year-old running back, was killed outside the "Mean Green Inn," a popular nightclub near the NTSU campus. He died after being shot once in the chest with a .38-caliber pistol. Samuel Crockett, 22, was tried and convicted earlier for his part in the shooting and is serving 20 years in prison. Defense attorneys called no witnesses in the case, but argued that Williams shot Jackson in self defense after Jackson had been removed from the night club for allegedly stealing tips from a bartender. Denton County District Attorney Gerald Cobb called five witnesses for the prosecution, among them the owner of the club who told the court that Williams fired the fatal shot.

Metal poisoning cases reported

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Health officials who have confirmed eight cases of thallium poisoning say they suspect the rare, toxic metal may be responsible for the illness of as many as 14 other patients in a puzzling outbreak along the state's Gulf Coast. "The severity of the problem alarms us," said Ron Tisdell of the University of Texas Poison Control Center. "It would appear that the poisonings have gone unrecognized until now." Thallium, a soft metal once used in dozens of consumer products ranging from hair dye to rat poison, was banned from consumer use in 1972. It still is used for some industrial purposes and occasionally is a byproduct of metal smelting. It changes from a solid to an odorless, highly toxic gas at room temperature. Tisdell said three new cases of suspected thallium poisoning were reported to his office Thursday, making a total of six suspected cases in addition to the eight already confirmed. A Dallas physician later phoned Tisdell to report he was treating seven people exhibiting poisoning symptoms. Except for the seven Dallas patients and one of the new suspected incidents, all the cases were reported from the upper Gulf Coast, from Beaumont to Corpus Christi.

All the cases have been reported since last September, he said. "It (thallium poisoning) certainly hasn't been reported as a common problem in this country," Tisdell said. "That may mean that it has been mis-diagnosed." Texas authorities were first alerted to the possibility of thallium poisoning by the case of Pat Murphy, 37, of the Corpus Christi suburb of Portland. Her trouble started two years ago, she said, upon moving into a new house. Within months her hair began to fall out, her toenails decayed and her foot became numb, she said. "You could stick a needle all the way in it and I couldn't feel it," she said. A neurologist finally diagnosed thallium poisoning in December 1979, and subsequent tests on her husband and children also found traces of the metal. The Texas Health Department did extensive tests on the Murphy house but found nothing helpful. An Environmental Protection Agency official said Thursday that only 17 cases of the poisoning have been reported nationwide since 1966. Most of the Texas cases involve men and women in their late 30s, although at least one confirmed case involves a child, said Tisdell. Davis Lane, deputy regional administrator of the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration at Dallas, said Thursday there is no indication thus far that the poisonings are the result of occupational exposures. "I can make no recommendations about what to avoid at this point," he said when asked to explain how people contact the material. Mike Ellis, director of the Poison Control Center, said, "We don't know if we really have an outbreak or if we're just seeing things that have always been there." Thallium may accumulate in bone marrow for years before poisoning becomes noticeable, he said. Dr. John Loomis, University of Houston associate pharmacy professor, said experts have checked soil and water in areas where victims live but have found no trace of thallium. Loomis added, however, that thallium is a naturally occurring metal found in deposits in soil in Switzerland and Scandinavia.

Big Spring woman tested

GALVESTON — Officials with the Poison Control Center here confirmed Friday that a Big Spring woman is undergoing tests at Parkland Hospital in Dallas for suspected rare metal poisoning. A spokesman for the center said the unidentified woman is one of 21 persons under recent investigation for rare metal poisoning, which generally attacks the central nervous system, producing hair loss, vomiting and, in some cases, hysteria. The spokesman declined to release the woman's name, as did officials from Parkland Hospital. No other details were available at press time.

Soviet media lashes out at Solidarity

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet news media on Friday attacked leaders of Solidarity, the independent Polish union, for urging workers to boycott their jobs to demand a five-day, 40-hour workweek. The criticism came on the eve of expected warning strikes Saturday by Solidarity members defying a government call for normal work. The official Soviet news agency Tass said Walesa's call confirmed the intention of Solidarity's leaders to disrupt Poland's economic life and provoke a "deliberate confrontation with organs of the peoples' power." It blamed "anti-socialist elements" among the union's "right wing" for pressing the job action. On Friday, Solidarity leader Lech Walesa told the union's estimated 10 million members to stay home Saturday to press for the demand, one of nearly two dozen agreed to by the government during widespread Polish labor unrest last summer.

Tass said Poland's communist government has warned that the Saturday strike would cause "major damage" to the economy with production losses of more than a billion dollars. Solidarity is going ahead with strike plans, a Soviet television report said, "despite the resolution of the government which indicates that in connection with the economic situation of the country, not all Saturdays can be work-free, only every second Saturday." The 40-hour week is widespread in the Soviet Union and many Soviets have Saturdays off. "However, proceeding from the concrete situation, this can't be done immediately," the report said. "First it is necessary to overcome the period of difficulties and to set up a clear rhythm of work in all branches of industry." The television report was accompanied by films of Poles shopping in Warsaw, apparently to indicate they were unaffected by transport strikes, work stoppages or shortages of food and other goods. The commentary said the "conscious part" of the working class understood this, but there were others who have "come under the influence of certain forces of Solidarity." "Their demands are unrealistic and the character of their demands is demagogic."

JA giving out 40 scholarships

Junior Achievement announced Friday the Dale Carnegie organization will award $21,800 worth of scholarships to Achievers during the next two weeks. Some 40 JA recipients will be selected for the scholarships. The scholarship announcement came at the close of National Junior Achievement Week. Other events of JA Week included a trade fair at Midland Park Mall, the kick-off of the annual fund drive and hiring of a program manager for Project Business. The teen-age membership of Midland's senior high JA company program combined with that of the freshman Project Business program is expected to top 1,200 this year — four times the membership of four years ago. Junior Achievement is the nation's oldest and largest economic education organization.

William Nolan Freeman leads 5-year-old Jesse Sanchez across a residential street in Dallas on the back of Sugar, a 10-year-old Shetland pony. Freeman has been photographing youngsters in the Dallas area since 1935. (AP Laserphoto)

Door-to-door pony photographer still on the road after 45 years

DALLAS (AP) — Somewhere in that old box of family photos on the hall closet shelf, there's probably a picture of you or someone in your family — as a small child — wearing a cowboy hat and sitting proudly on the back of a Shetland pony. That photographer offered to take similar photos of almost every kid on the block as he traveled door-to-door, the pony and a gang of curious youngsters trailing behind him.

If you thought the days of the door-to-door pony photographers were long gone, you're wrong. There's one still around. He's William Nolan Freeman and chances are, if you were a child in Dallas sometime during the past 45 years, he's the man who gave you a leg up into that magical child-sized saddle that instantly transformed you into Roy Rogers, Gene Autry or the Lone Ranger.

"There used to be a bunch of us who did this kind of thing," he said, "but I think I'm the only one left now. There was another guy but he died a few years ago. I can remember when photography studios sent out five or six ponies each in the summertime, but not any more."

Freeman took Sugar, one of his two Shetland ponies, roaming through a residential section of Dallas one recent sunny afternoon. He parked his pickup truck and small horse trailer at the end of the block, and crisscrossed the street, knocking on doors he suspected of harboring children.

Sugar, 10, like an obedient large dog, patiently nibbled grass while Freeman made his sales pitch to a young woman standing at one front door.

Soon, 5-year-old Jesse Sanchez dashed out the door, headed for Sugar. With Freeman's help, Jesse donned red and blue chaps, a red bandana and a red cowboy hat.

"OK, now," Freeman called, "look over here and give me a big smile."

Grin Snap.

"One thing about this job, you've got to love kids," said Freeman.

"I used to do 40 or 50 kids a day in the summer, but I've slowed down some. I'd shoot pictures of kids all day and work in the darkroom at night. Now I send all my film to a lab in Florida."

He also works only when he wants to, only when the weather is good and only where he chooses. He won't take appointments — too much trouble — but his business is always brisk.

"Most people are tickled to death to see me and I seldom miss getting a customer when I knock on a door."

When delivery time comes, he said, not many parents refuse to pay the minimum $17.95.

"If I had 10 cents now for every kid I've photographed I'd be a rich man."

What he has instead is a modest home in Grand Prairie, two horses and a small piece of himself in a lot of family scrapbooks.

U.S. citizens to pay some of hostage release tab

By R. GREGORY NOKE, Associated Press Writer WASHINGTON (AP) — Did the United States pay ransom to Iran for release of the 52 Americans? Apparently not, but U.S. taxpayers will probably end up with some out-of-pocket expense.

Ransom is money of one party demanded in return for a kidnap victim or hostage held by another party, and many Americans feel the Carter administration paid dearly — in pride as well as money — to free the former hostages.

New York Mayor Edward Koch, for one, responded with an explosive, "Baloney!" when a reporter asked whether he agreed with other officials that the agreement was not ransom.

"In effect, we have paid a penalty to terrorists, a penalty to kidnappers," Koch said Tuesday.

Former Vice President Walter Mondale has defended the hostage agreement, saying the United States was not paying "a dime of American money," and Republican Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said "not one cent of ransom" was involved.

To date, that is correct. The money paid to Iran, $2.9 billion, was from Iranian funds on deposit in the United States and in U.S. banks abroad at the time former President Jimmy Carter froze Iranian assets in November 1979. It did include $800 million in interest, but interest would have accumulated anyway.

Another $5.1 billion in frozen funds was used to pay off bank loans made to Iran and to settle future claims. And $3 billion or so may be delivered to Iran later, but that is also to be Iranian money.

The potential liability for the taxpayer falls in three areas:

- Compensation to the hostages for the harm done them.
- Compensation for loss and damage to U.S. property in Iran.
- Compensation for claims from unfulfilled contracts and other debts owed American business.

Here in question-and-answer form is an attempt to answer these and other questions about the agreement:

Q What about compensation for the 52 hostages? How will that be handled?

A The agreement lets Iran off the hook, even though Iran is to blame for their anguish and abuse, the loss of freedom and the 14½ months lost from their normal lives.

Instead, the agreement provides for establishing a presidential commission to decide any compensation. It could easily amount to several million dollars — and taxpayers would pay it.

Q How about damage to the U.S. Embassy and other U.S. property in Iran?

A Iran is absolved of responsibility, despite there being ample precedent for compensation by host countries when damage is done to property of other nations.

Q Doesn't the agreement cover lawsuits against Iran?

A It does. It will take such suits out of U.S.

courts and have them decided by an international arbitration commission. But the Justice Department expects court challenges to the agreement and isn't sure it will be upheld.

At least 300 lawsuits have been filed in U.S. courts against Iranian assets and an additional 3,000 claims are on file with the Treasury Department. Officials say the lawsuits amount to more than $3 billion but won't be more precise because they say many may be exaggerated.

Q Isn't money set aside in the agreement to deal with these claims?

A Yes. The Iranians

have agreed to set up a fund of at least $500 million to settle claims in the United States. Another $1.4 billion has been set aside to handle claims against assets on deposit in U.S. banks abroad.

Burial will be in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers will be Raymond Smith, J.T. Flowers, Elbert Yoes, Tom Rideout Jr., A.C. Pruitt and L.C. "Junior" Shelton of Pampa.

Hebrew Jones

STANTON — Hebrew Jones, 66, of Stanton, died Friday at his home following a brief illness.

Services will be at 1 p.m. Monday in the Church of Christ in Stanton with Don Johnson of Midland officiating and Lucky Randall of Austin assisting.

Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, directed by Gilbreath Funeral Home.

Jones was born Sept. 28, 1914, in Grapeland, moved from there to Stanton in 1948, and was married to Minnie Lee Dickson on April 19, 1941, in Crockett. He was a retired painter.

Survivors include his wife; four sons, L.E. Jones of Fort Worth, Hebrew Jones Jr. of Big Spring, David Jones of Bay City and James Marvin Jones of Stanton; four daughters, Bonnie Jackson of Lawton, Okla., Marva Scurlark of Monahans, Frances Thorns of Big Spring, and Leatrice Melendez of Stanton; a sister, Lavacy Cox of Odessa; three brothers, Robert Jones Sr. and E.I. Jones, both of Stanton, and Kay Jones of Sylvester; and 16 grandchildren.

Minnie Davis

CRANE — Services for Minnie Bell Davis, 79, of McCamey will be at 10 a.m. Monday in the Box Funeral Home chapel at Crane. Graveside services will be at 3 p.m. in Lawn Haven Memorial Gardens at San Angelo.

Mrs. Davis died Friday morning in an Odessa hospital following a brief illness. She was born Feb. 11, 1901, in Sapulpa, Okla., and married Claude R. Davis in 1921. She moved to McCamey in 1944 and was a member of the Baptist Church.

Other survivors include two daughters, Opal Williams of Midland and Claudine Brice of Crane; three sons, Ralph Davis of Brownwood, Haskell Davis of Dell City, Okla., and Sharrell Davis of Albuquerque, N.M.; three sisters, Mary Louise Fowler and Beulah Seward, both of San Angelo, and Bessie Bates of San Diego, Calif.; 14 grandchildren and 18 great grandchildren.

Soviet grain harvest short

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet grain production last year fell well below the official goal and meat and milk output were both down from 1979 levels, according to government figures released Friday.

Oil production was closer to the target and natural gas production reached planned levels, according to the figures. Soviet officials have stressed a need to resolve what they acknowledge as a "food problem" in the country. Specialists had hoped a good grain crop would boost cattle production and improve the Soviet citizens' diet.

Egg production rose to 67.7 billion in 1980 — or 254 eggs per person during the year — against 65.6 billion in 1979.

Western specialists said later Friday that the growth in cattle numbers in 1980 was below the growth rate in 1979, and attributed this in part to a shortage of feed grains.

Western analysts, too, say feed shortages are due to the Soviet Union's own production problems as much as to U.S. grain export restrictions.

In the year that began Oct. 1, 1980, the United States is committed to exporting 8 million tons of grain to the Soviet Union. This amount is covered by a long-term export agreement, and is not affected by the grain embargo imposed by ex-President Carter in 1979.

Moscow has been able to buy grain from other sources since exports of U.S. grain were limited. President Reagan has promised to review the embargo, with an eye to repealing it in the interests of profits for American farmers.

Asked at a news conference Friday if U.S. restrictions on grain exports to the Soviet Union played a role in limiting agricultural production, the official, Igor A. Pogosov, said: "We have successfully passed by the embargo, as you can see from the fact that there are now 400,000 more cattle in the country than there were on Jan. 1, 1980."

Pogosov said that agricultural problems last year were largely due to "climatic conditions," particularly heavy rains. Potato, sugar beet and sunflower seed production also fell well below planned levels.

The Central Statistical Board said oil production was slightly short of target in 1980, while natural gas production reached planned levels. Industrial output grew by 3.6 percent although planners had hoped it would rise by 4.5 percent over 1979.

The 1980 oil production of 603 million tons (12.06 million barrels per day) — about 3 percent better than the previous year — indicates Soviet oil output is growing at a slower rate than it used to. But in contrast to American CIA estimates that predict a decline in Soviet oil production by the mid-1980s, long-term Soviet plans announced last month call for output

Olin 'Tiger' Teague dies

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Olin E. "Tiger" Teague, the champion of war veterans and the space program during his 32 years in Congress, died Friday at Bethesda Naval Hospital after an extended illness.

The 70-year-old Teague had been in poor health since his retirement from the U.S. House in 1977. A former aide said death was due to "several complications" arising from his long-time medical problems.

The funeral will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at the Old Chapel at Fort Meyer, Va., with burial at Arlington National Cemetery.

Former Midlander gets degree from seminary

Phillip Edwards, son of former Midlanders Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Edwards, graduated with a master of divinity degree in December from the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, Ky.

Edwards, a 1972 graduate of Lee High, graduated in 1976 from Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene. He plans to return to Texas where he hopes to work with the Baptist Spanish language ministry.

Edwards is married to Paula Turney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Billy Turney of Midland. She is currently the choral director at the Meade County High School in Brandenburg, Ky.

Roberts to host radio broadcast

Tom R. Roberts, minister of music of First Presbyterian Church, will host a weekly radio broadcast on Sundays at 10:45 a.m. on Radio Station KCRS AM 550.

All of the music heard on each broadcast was performed during worship services at First Presbyterian. The choirs and ensembles are under the direction of Roberts. Judy Congdon is the featured organist.

This Sunday's broadcast is dedicated to the release of the hostages. The Chancel Choir will be singing a series of patriotic hymns for this week's broadcast.

Dallas Holm in concert tonight

The Dallas Holm & Praise gospel-music concert is expected to attract a virtual full-house at 8 p.m. today, when the soloist and his ensemble perform contemporary folk-popular-ish gospel music in Midland College's Chaparral Center.

Tickets to the show are selling "pretty good" and in recent days have really picked up at the Sunshine Corner, Bible & Book House at 4305 W. Illinois Ave. and at the Love Shop in Midland Park Mall. Tickets to the concert also are available at the Odessa Scripture Shop and Joy Shop in Perlman Mall in Odessa.

"I expect a large crowd out there, hopefully," said Brenda Clifton, a gospel-music fan who calls the group's renditions "a little laid-back type of music" that appeals to the different age groups.

Dallas Holm & Praise may or may not perform such oldies as "The Old Rugged Cross," "Rock of Ages," and "Bringing in the Sheaves," but the group is almost sure to sing the popular "Amazing Grace."

Holm's music is contemporary, easy-listening style.

"I think anyone (who attends the concert) is going to get a blessing," said a devoted fan of Holm and his music.

At his concert, Holm has an altar call and Christian counselors to minister to converts of Christianity and to those who dedicate and re-dedicate their lives to Jesus Christ.

Reportedly, 500 people responded to the altar call in a recent Holm concert in Lubbock.

"I hope we have real good turnout for the Lord," said the Holm fan, who views him as "the most dedicated" of the gospel singers who have appeared in concert in Midland.

"He has led many people to the Lord through his music." Between songs, Holms recites Scripture to bolster the effect of his music ministry.

Workshop scheduled at OC

ODESSA — The Enriched Living Workshop, conducted by Verna Birkey, will be held Feb. 6 and 7 at Odessa College.

Ms. Birkey is a former teacher, counselor and Dean of Girls at Ben Lippen School in Asheville, N.C. She has led over 350 such Biblically-oriented series in the United States, Canada and other foreign countries.

The nine hour workshop is open to all women. For more information on registration and fee call Jo Millican in Odessa at 1-367-4128, or Deanna Dunn in Midland at 694-1356.

Alliance to hold fellowship

After enjoying a successful 1980, the Interdenominational Ministerial Alliance will hold its first monthly fellowship service of 1981 at the Greater St. Luke AME Church, 401 S. Adams St., at 8 p.m. Sunday.

The Rev. DeWayne McAlister, pastor of St. Paul CME Methodist Church, will speak. Music will be furnished by the City-Wide Choir. The public is invited to attend.

Ecumenical service to be held

An ecumenical service of "Grateful Praise" for the hostages' safe return will be held in the sanctuary of First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave., at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The worship will be led by ministers of various faiths and a community choir. Statements of faith will be offered by the Rev. Cliff Blackburn of St. Ann's Catholic Church, the Rev. Pat Wilson of Grace Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. Steve Church of First Christian Church.

The community is invited to join in giving thanks for the safe return of the hostages. A nursery will be provided.

Combined service set Sunday

A special combined service of the Unitarian Universalist and Religious Science churches will be held this Sunday at 11 a.m. at 3400 N. A St.

The Rev. John McPhee of the Unitarian Church and the Rev. Tony Chester of the Church of Religious Science will present an informative service on both churches' point of view. The public is invited to attend.

Former Black Panther said studying Mormon Church

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Former Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver, who spent seven years in self-imposed exile and later embraced Christianity, reportedly has been studying the Mormon Church.

Church officials on Thursday confirmed reports that Cleaver has received visits from church missionaries in Menlo Park, Calif., and has spoken privately with Paul Dunn, a member of the church's First Quorum of Seventy.

Cleaver was not immediately available for comment.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints was long criticized for banning black males of African descent from holding its lay priesthood, but changed that policy in 1978. Church President Spencer W. Kimball said the policy change came after he received a revelation from God.

Church spokesman Don LeFevre said Dunn met Cleaver during a regular visit to church members in California. Dunn supervises church activities in the California area.

"On one occasion he (Dunn) did visit with Mr. Cleaver," LeFevre said. "However, it would be inappropriate for us to discuss any interest Mr. Cleaver might have in the church."

Cleaver, 45, rose to prominence in the Black Panthers during the 1960s following publication of his book, "Soul On Ice."

In 1968, he fled the United States to Cuba to avoid prosecution on charges of attempted murder and assault with a deadly weapon in connection with a Black Panther shootout with Oakland Police.

Cleaver went into what he called "political exile" in Cuba and later in Algeria. In 1975 he requested identification papers from U.S. embassy officials in Paris to return to the United States to face prosecution.

He pleaded guilty to assault in the case in January 1980 and was ordered to do community service at the library at De Anza College south of San Francisco.

As recently as 14 months ago, Cleaver showed signs of becoming a supporter of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church. He was quoted in October 1979 at a meeting of the church's Project Volunteer that he would "rather be with the littlest Moonie than with Billy Graham, not because Billy Graham is so bad or the Moonies are so good, but because they do what they say."

Pope urges double efforts

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II today urged members of the Roman Curia, the Vatican's central administration, to redouble their efforts for unity among Christians.

"There cannot be unity among all (Christian) brothers, unless there is a deep union of thoughts and purposes," the pope said. "If genuineness of our union with God in Christ is lacking, our ecumenism merely remains a lip service."

"We must pledge anew to continue our search for those supernatural means which alone can overcome the centuries-old barrier between brothers of different Christian faiths."

Work for Christian reunion faded from limelight

NEW YORK (AP) — Ecumenical specialists say work for Christian reunion has generally faded from the limelight, but the effort still goes on in quiet yet substantial ways.

That was a common assessment this week as churches observed the annual "Week of Prayer for Christian Unity" Jan. 18-25, worshipping together and giving thanks at the release of U.S. hostages from Iran.

"There is a variety of gifts, but the same spirit," goes the joint Catholic-Protestant theme for the week.

Yet despite such mutual celebrations, church historian Robert T. Handy of New York's Union Theological Seminary says "the grip of the denominational system seems largely unbroken."

The Rev. Lewis H. Lancaster Jr. of Atlanta, ecumenical coordinator for the Presbyterian Church U.S. (Southern), says the world usually has "a hard time seeing unity when it looks at the churches."

Citing continued denominational divisions and rivalries, he says that although Christian oneness is "the given" imperative of one Lord, "we don't demonstrate that given unity very well."

The Rev. Charles V. LaFontaine, co-director of the Graymoor Ecumenical Institute of the Catholic Atoneement Friars at Garrison, N.Y., says some observers see a "new turn inward, a kind of neo-denominationalism" that will wreck ecumenical efforts.

But others think the more conservative doctrinal attitudes will make ecumenical relations "more serious" he says, with "more modest but far more substantial gains than in the past."

Despite impressions of waning ecumenical drive and scattered new efforts, several recent initiatives are under way to heal denominational divisions. Other such prospects are in sight.

Among U.S. Protestants, four sets of reunion talks are in progress.

Negotiations between Presbyterians, split North and South since the Civil War, were moving toward a decisive stage, with a plan of union to be completed this year and presented for assembly votes in 1982.

If approved by assemblies of the Presbyterian Church U.S. (Southern) and the larger United Presbyterian Church, the plan would go to regional units for ratification before final approval at a joint 1983 assembly.

At the same time, three branches of Lutheranism have begun a massive, grass-roots study of means for closer ties, possibly a merger, that could come to convention votes in 1982.

Involved are the Lutheran Church in America, the American Lutheran Church and the Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches, with a total of 5.3 million members. Regional meetings this spring are to begin acting on the options.

Taking a somewhat similar but longer approach, congregations of the United Church of Christ and the Christian Church (Disciples of Christ) have launched discussions about whether to enter union negotiations.

About 400 congregations — 200 from each denomination — were paired for joint talks and 300 other congregations were to conduct intensive studies about it. A steering committee member, Beatrice Stanley of Washington, D.C., says:

"We want to make certain that the decision of the two churches about union arises naturally from the people and is not dictated from the national level."

WE BELIEVE

We believe that it is possible for an individual to be a Christian, with no denominational name or attachments. If it is possible for an individual to be a simple Bible Christian, then it is possible for a congregation to be just Christian. And if it is possible for a congregation, then it is possible for all Christians to be united on this basis. Why aren't they?

Help Smokers Quit seminar set in Lubbock

Ex smokers who would like to help "hooked" smokers cast aside their tobacco habit may sign up for an American Cancer Society Help Smokers Quit training seminar Feb. 7 in Lubbock.

The 16-hour course is designed to help smokers kick the habit, according to seasoned facilitator Tom Buford.

The ACS seminar will probe into the psychological reasons for smoking, how and why beginning smokers fall into the habit, as well as examining smoking patterns and the effects of smoking. The seminar also offers suggestions on the means, including group therapy, to quit smoking.

Those interested in volunteering their time and energy in taking the training seminar may contact the ACS Midland office at 601 S. Main St. or dial 563-0204 or 683-6374.

Since Buford completed the seminar, he has conducted two Midland stop-smoking clinics and, along with fellow facilitator Ray Sharbutt, is into his third four-week Help Smokers Quit clinic.

"This program is tremendous," said Buford, a 20-year smoker who quit 16 years ago.

The HSQ clinic is programmed for those who wish to stop smoking and is not for confirmed smokers who have no desire to quit. But the die-hard smokers who examine the program might be challenged to give up cigarettes and other forms of tobacco.

Those who wish to undergo the facilitator training to prepare for conducting HSQ clinics must be ex-smokers.

"Otherwise," said Buford, "you cannot possibly understand it."

Each clinic's program includes lectures, films, guest speakers, rap sessions, and sharing experiences.

"It's a great feeling," Buford said of conducting clinics and realizing that "you may have helped someone or saved lives."

In two clinics last year, 33 completed and graduated from the four-week, eight-session program. Some "kicked the habit." Others returned to their old habits and resumed smoking. Some never stopped long enough to resume.

In the current HSQ clinic, 43 smokers enrolled and 32 showed up for the first sessions in the Flame Room of Pioneer Natural Gas offices at 311 W. Missouri Ave.

Ex-smokers who might consider becoming facilitators may monitor HSQ programs at 7 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday in the Flame Room.

The clinic are free.

Research has proven that smoking is the principal cause of lung cancer," Buford said, "and lung cancer is one of the 'big killers,' and it is preventable." He said that "90 percent of lung cancer could be wiped out" if tobacco smokers quit the habit.

Texan held in death of young boy

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Gregory M. Miley, a Texas teen-ager accused in the Freeway Killer case, has been bound over for trial on charges of strangling a 12-year-old boy who had been waiting for a bus to Disneyland.

Municipal Judge Richard Parslow ruled on Thursday after a three-day, closed-door hearing that he found sufficient evidence to try Miley for the Feb. 3 murder of James Macabe of Garden Grove, Calif.

Macabe disappeared in Huntington Beach, Calif., Feb. 3 while waiting for a bus to Disneyland.

Expert contradicts prosecution murder theory in Harris trial

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y. (AP) — Defense attorneys for a girls' school headmistress called another medical expert Friday to contradict the prosecution's theory that Scarsdale Diet doctor Herman Tarnower was shot as he was trying to ward off an attack.

Chalk in hand at a courtroom blackboard, Dr. Albert Bernard Ackerman, a skin pathologist, said no palm tissue was embedded in Tarnower's chest wound.

Dr. Louis Roh, the prosecution's pathologist, has testified that palm tissue was in the chest wound, supporting the theory that Tarnower had his hand outstretched in front of his chest in a defensive gesture to ward off Jean Harris' weapon.

"In my opinion the fragments of tissue in the skin of the chest did not come from the palm," Ackerman told defense lawyer Joel Aurnou.

It was the most damaging bit of testimony to date to the prosecution's allegation that Mrs. Harris shot her lover of 14 years to death at his Purchase, N.Y., estate last March 10 in a jealous rage over his affair with another woman.

The defense has maintained that Mrs. Harris, 37, former headmistress of the Madeira School for girls in McLean, Va., became depressed over her job and drove to Purchase to kill herself and that Tarnower was shot when he struggled to take her gun away. Ackerman was the fourth defense pathologist to testify.

Pilots call for one-day strike

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A pilots' group that represents most of the nation's major airlines has called for a one-day nationwide strike in March to protest what it claims is a reluctance on the part of federal officials to spend money for improved air safety.

John J. O'Donnell, president of the Air Line Pilots Association, said Thursday the strike, which he said would halt air traffic coast-to-coast, tentatively is planned for March 2. But he said "because of the intricacies of how the crews operate it (air traffic) could well be fouled up several days."

He said a final decision on the date will be made at a Feb. 11 meeting of the association's directors.

Federal Aviation Administration officials could not be reached for comment.

The 33,000 member ALPA represents pilots of all major airlines except American Airlines. Smaller airlines, such as Pacific Southwest and Air Florida, are not represented. It was not known whether American Airlines and the others would join the strike.

O'Donnell accused the FAA of a reluctance to spend a $4 billion surplus in a special fund for air safety the FAA created by assessing the industry. He said the group fears the Reagan administration will dip into the fund for other purposes.

The airline pilots long have been critical of what they say are inadequate safety regulations developed by the FAA.

New Kennedy theory correct in one claim

COOPERSVILLE, Mich. (AP) — A new theory on the assassination of President John F. Kennedy is correct in at least one claim, according to two Navy men on duty when Kennedy's body arrived at Bethesda Naval Hospital near Washington.

A claim by a freelance writer that two caskets were taken to the hospital on Nov. 22, 1963, is correct, according to Donald Rebertisch, 43, a mechanic at a General Motors plant in suburban Grand Rapids.

"For 17 years, I've known something that I thought everybody knew," said Rebertisch, who retired from the U.S. Navy in 1968.

A resident of Coopersville, a small town northwest of Grand Rapids, Rebertisch said Thursday he was surprised when he read a Time magazine article about the theories of David S. Lifton, author of "Best Evidence."

Donald Rebertisch

Lifton, whose 700-page book about the Kennedy assassination is to be introduced later this month, claims the casket that actually contained Kennedy's body was taken into the hospital through a back door. He alleges that someone added head wounds and altered existing wounds to make it appear that the president was shot by Lee Harvey Oswald and not by some unnamed conspirators.

According to the Time magazine, they spent they wouldn't have known that we took the casket in the article, there is no mention of two caskets in either the 26-volume findings of the Warren Commission or subsequent investigations.

"I just assumed all along that the Warren Commission knew about all of this," Rebertisch said. "I couldn't believe with all the thousands of dol-back door."

Rebertisch was a U.S. Navy petty officer studying dental and medical equipment repair at the hospital at the time. He said he and five other officers wheeled the president's coffin through a rear freight entrance, 35 or 40 minutes before another coffin was taken through a mass of reporters and photographers at the front door.

He said his chief petty officer ordered him to join the other officers at the rear entrance at about 4:30 p.m. "The chief said we got all the ghouls and reporters and TV and everybody at the front of the hospital," Rebertisch said. "He said there would be an empty casket in the ambulance. He said the president's body would really come in the back."

Rebertisch said he doubted most of Lifton's claims.

The two-casket statement was also confirmed by Robert Muma, 45, who is treasurer and comptroller for the northern Michigan resort town of Charlevoix.

Midland Camp Fire Girls commemorated the release of the 52 American hostages by planting miniature American flags on the Midland County Courthouse grounds. The gesture was sponsored by the girls and by the Midland Jaycee-ettes, who last year tied yellow ribbons on trees and other movable objects in expressing their heartfelt concern for the hostages. The traditional tying of the yellow ribbon on the Freedom Tree is an old symbol of a nation's concern for its people held captive in foreign lands. (Staff Photo by Paul Gilbert)

Dan Rather fails to show at hearing for cabbie

CHICAGO (AP) — CBS newscaster Dan Rather failed to appear in court on Friday to press a disorderly conduct charge against a Chicago cab driver, and the case was continued over the protests of the driver's attorney.

"There is a double standard of justice here," complained lawyer Robert E. Mann when the case against his client, driver Eugene Phillips, was not dismissed for lack of a complaining witness.

On Nov. 10, Phillips, 38, picked Rather up at O'Hare International Airport. The "60 Minutes" host, who soon is to take over the "CBS Evening News," allegedly told the driver he wanted to be taken to the home of author Studs Terkel.

Terkel lives on a one-block-long street on the city's north side. Phillips said he found the address with difficulty but that Rather refused to pay the $12.55 fare on grounds that Phillips' chauffeur's license was not displayed.

Phillips said he had gotten a ticket, and the license was taken as bond.

Rather claimed Phillips was abusive, refused the fare and took him down Lake Shore Drive along Lake Michigan on a wild ride which ended only when a passing motorist noticed Rather waving for help.

Phillips was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct and spent a night in jail before being freed on $35 bond. Since then, Phillips said Friday, he has been out of work, deep in debt and has applied for welfare.

Associate Circuit Court Judge Richard A. LaCien granted a request by the Cook County state's attorneys' office for a continuance until April 6.

Chicago attorney James Ahern, who was hired by CBS lawyers in New York to represent Rather, said Rather planned to be in Chicago then.

"I feel very put out," Phillips said. "Had (Rather) been just an ordinary citizen, I wouldn't be standing here today." Phillips had said previously he had no idea who Rather was when he picked him up.

Bomb rocks court house

NEW YORK (AP) — A loud explosion rocked the state Supreme Court building in lower Manhattan on Friday, several hours after a Croatian terrorist group warned that a bomb would explode somewhere in New York.

No one was injured in the 12:45 p.m. EST blast, but the building was evacuated and closed for the remainder of the day.

Police said the Puerto Rican terrorist group, FALN, also claimed responsibility, but they said they did not believe it was involved.

Detective James T. Sullivan told reporters at the scene that "a combination of a pipe bomb and a propane tank" exploded in a stairwell between the ceiling and some suspended pipes on the lowest level of the building below the clerk's office. He said fragments of the device were found.

He said 40 to 50 people were in the area, which had "ready public access," at the time of the explosion, but none was hurt.

The pipes burst, spilling three to four inches of water on the floor, he said.

One court officer, Louis Marino, said he was in an information booth in the main lobby when "I saw a flash and smoke" coming from a back staircase.

"I was scared," he said.

Carolyn Jones, a clerk typist in the basement offices, said she saw "all this black smoke, and a door blew open."

At 9:45 a.m., an unidentified caller to United Press International warned that a bomb would go off at 12:30 p.m. but would not disclose the site. He said only, "you'll know," according to a UPI spokesman.

The caller said he belonged to the Croatian Freedom Fighters, who "are protesting the American ignorance and approval of Yugoslavia's persecution of Croatian dissidents."

The UPI spokesman quoted the caller as saying: "This is a time for Americans to celebrate the liberation of American hostages from Iran."

3 Las Vegas men charged with theft of rare squawfish

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Thieves who took 14 fish from a hatchery and probably ate them have frustrated a 10-year effort to restock an endangered species of freshwater salmon, federal officials say.

The squawfish — or Ptychocheilus lucius — were stolen Nov. 26 from the National Fish Hatchery at Willow Beach southwest of Las Vegas, Nev., according to Bob Wright, special agent with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. At the time, the hatchery had only 27 such fish.

Only two of 14 females were left behind — "not enough for a genetically divergent pool from which to develop a hardy population," Wright said Thursday.

Indicted by a federal grand jury in connection with the incident were Steven Alan Runyon, 25, Jeffrey Alan Brown, 20, and Russell Orick Christie, 23, all of Las Vegas. They were charged with theft of government property, interstate transportation of stolen property and possession of an endangered species. Possible penalties range up to a $20,000 fine, a year in prison, or both, for each fish taken. Wire fences surround the hatchery and individual breeding tanks, officials said.

Three men have been indicted by federal game authorities in connection with the theft of 14 squawfish, an endangered species of freshwater salmon. The theft wiped out 10 years of research to restock the fish.

The squawfish, a large game fish, had been an important source of food for Colorado River Indian tribes, but became endangered after giant dams kept the fish from their natural breeding areas.

The stolen fish "were the largest fish in the hatchery, the ones that looked the best to eat," Wright said. The fish grow to a length of 17 to 25 inches. Scientists believe that if the fish bred successfully in the hatchery.

Judge says all generic drugs must have extensive testing

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — In a decision that a drug company says would deprive the public of low-cost drugs, a judge has upheld the government's right to require that generic drugs be tested extensively before being sold.

U.S. District Judge Frederick B. Lacey ruled Wednesday that there may be differences between generic drugs marketed by Premo Pharmaceutical Laboratories Inc. of South Hackensack and more expensive brand-name products. In the case of one drug, the judge ruled, the difference could be serious enough to cause a fatal blood condition. The judge barred Premo from selling untested generic drugs. Testing of drugs can take from five to 10 years.

Premo maintained it had marketed proven drugs after the brand-name manufacturers' patents expired. An attorney for Premo said the company would "almost certainly" appeal the ruling. The marketing of generic drugs has been widely hailed by consumer groups because they often are cheaper than brand-name remedies. New Jersey has a law requiring doctors who prescribe drugs to tell their patients whether generic versions of the drugs are available. Eugene Zoppo, an official with the New Jersey Federation of Senior Citizens, called the judge's decision a setback to the group's efforts.

Christopher knew of hostage abuse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Warren Christopher, chief U.S. negotiator for the release of the American hostages in Iran, said Friday previous knowledge of hostage abuse "caused me to be all the more determined to end this nightmare."

He also urged the Reagan administration to accept the negotiated agreement and indicated he was not interested in a possible appointment to the California Supreme Court. Christopher spoke during an impromptu news conference at the airport following his arrival from Washington.

"I don't intend to stay in the public section in the near future," Christopher, 55, said when asked about a report that Gov. Edmund Brown Jr. had talked to him about a possible appointment to the state's high court.

There are two vacancies on the court following Friday's resignation of state Supreme Court Justice William Clark, 49, who will replace Christopher as deputy secretary of state.

Although the State Department had received previous reports of Iranian mistreatment of the 52 hostages, "we were not anxious to talk about it publicly," Christopher said. "Looking back at the torture, no one can condone or understand the brutality in regard to our people."

"That fact caused me to be all the more determined to end this nightmare."

Considering what the hostages went through, he added, "I was pleased to see what relatively good shape they were in."

Christopher said he was haunted daily by the knowledge that the talks could fail at any time.

"It was always possible that something would come down to make the negotiations fail," he said. "That's why there were such long days and nights."

He downplayed his own role in freeing the hostages by saying, "I have a feeling of thanksgiving that this episode has come to an end," he said. "My own part was small, it was a team effort. It involved four continents. It was an extraordinary piece of luck that it came together."

Christopher urged the new administration to accept the negotiated settlement, saying, "It's a matter of honor. We signed an international agreement that is in the best interest of the United States."

To reject the agreement would "offend the countries helping us, would put our word in doubt and would prevent us from solving comparable crises," he said.

Christopher, an attorney, was in private practice here before being tapped in 1977 by then-Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to become his top deputy.

Hostages spend $15,000 on spree

WIESBADEN, West Germany (AP) — Two busloads of freed American hostages made a pre-dawn shopping raid on an Air Force base exchange Friday, spending $15,000 in 90 minutes on clothes, cameras and calculators.

"There was a big run on underwear," said Air Force press spokesman Lt. Col. Allan V. Cummings.

The ex-hostages were ferried to a small U.S. government shopping complex on the outskirts of Wiesbaden, about 10 minutes' drive from the U.S. Air Force hospital, their first trip outside the complex since arriving from Tehran on Wednesday.

State Department officials said not all the 52 returnees participated in the early morning shopping spree. "We did not take a head count," one said, although officials at first said 51 of the group went.

One of those who stayed away from the store was Army Sgt. 1st Class Donald R. Hohman, who lives in the Frankfurt area and spent the night with his German-born wife.

There was no explanation why the others stayed at the hospital, but doctors said that some of the returnees were so depressed over their experiences that they were not participating in group events.

A State Department spokesman said the shoppers were supplied with U.S. currency as advances on travel expenses accrued during their transfers to the United States.

The sales personnel turned out on the subfreezing morning with yellow ribbons in their hair or pinned on their lapels to open the store at 6 a.m.

It was assumed that the trip was made several hours before the store's normal opening time to avoid the hundreds of reporters who usually have circled the hospital from morning to night since the ex-hostages arrived.

However, several television networks had camera crews stationed at the door of the Hainerberg Base Exchange to film the returnees as they left the buses in their Air Force-issue parkas.

Reporters were not allowed inside to view the shopping spree, but Air Force spokesmen said the former hostages snapped up "mostly personal items: suits, shirts, sport coats, shoes, sweaters, blue jeans, ties, belts and socks."

Later, exchange store personnel were seen delivering charcoal gray pin-striped Botany 500 suits to be tailored. Alteration tags hung on the jackets identified them as belonging to some of the hostages, who paid $215 each for them.

Cummings said many of the hostages, still wearing Iranian sandals, dropped them on the spot after donning new shoes.

"I never want to see those sandals again," he said one told sales personnel.

He said Kathryn Koob and Elizabeth Ann Swift, the two female hostages among the Wiesbaden group, chose cosmetic items, personal clothing and shoes.

He said 30 hostages bought watches. Fifteen chose 35mm cameras, lenses and flash-units along with 200 rolls of film. Nearly everyone bought wallets and hand luggage.

Other items in high demand were attache cases, sunglasses and pocket calculators. Many picked up toilet bags, hair dryers, cigarette lighters, and several men picked out new pipes and electric shavers, he said.

Officials said "very few" souvenir items were purchased.

Former press attache Barry Rosen told the press later in the day he picked out a gold necklace and bracelet as presents for his wife Barbara but that the exchange was so small it had no toys he could buy as presents for his son Alexander and daughter Arianna.

"That's all right," said Rosen. "I'll just give them big kisses when I get home."

'Mentally they are in a bad state': wife

WASHINGTON (AP) — While government officials are busy planning an all-out homecoming for the 52 former American hostages, some members of their families are nervously wondering whether their recently freed relatives are ready for what could be a new ordeal.

Preparations for the homecoming remained in some confusion, partly because of the change in presidents and their administrations that occurred last Tuesday, the day the Americans were freed after 444 days in Iranian captivity.

Some family members privately are expressing irritation at the intrusions of reporters and the failure of government planners to consult them about what kind of homecoming would be best for the released hostages.

Underlying this concern are the tales of the treatment they received in captivity, told in daily transcontinental telephone calls from Wiesbaden, West Germany.

"They are in worse shape than we ever imagined," says the wife of one hostage, who has talked frequently with her husband since he arrived in Germany. "They may look okay, but they are mentally in a very bad state."

The woman, who has kept tight reign on her emotions since the release — and who asked not to be identified — was clearly shaken by the phone conversations that have been her sole contact with her husband since he left Iran.

She said the released hostages are having more trouble adjusting to freedom than had been expected. Even though they've been told the depth of Americans' feelings about their ordeal, she said, they have little idea of what to expect when they return home.

"I'm feeling just awful" said the woman.

Another hostage wife said her husband had expressed some bitterness about the U.S. government and President Carter's visit to Wiesbaden on Wednesday, but that he wasn't really organized his feelings yet.

As of Friday, the released hostages were expected to arrive Sunday at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., where they will spend two days with their families — including wives, parents and children.

Dorothea Morefield, wife of former captive Richard Morefield, said Friday that most of the hostage families would rendezvous in Washington on Saturday. Then they would be flown early Sunday to West Point in a government plane.

Then they all will be flown to Washington for an official welcome, probably early Tuesday afternoon at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., State Department officials said.

U.S. shouldn't honor agreement, says Nixon

ENID, Okla. (AP) — Americans are thankful that Iran has released the hostages, "we are outraged by the treatment they received."

"The Reagan administration is correct in taking time to study the complex terms of the agreement under which they were released," he said, and is correct "in withholding final judgment on the extent to which those terms will be carried out."

He warned, however, that Reagan should seek to "avoid action which might lead to an ever more radical government coming to power in Iran," and to avoid breaking any commitments made to Algeria, "which appears to have acted honorably as an intermediary."

He said the government should make certain no similar situation is allowed in the future.

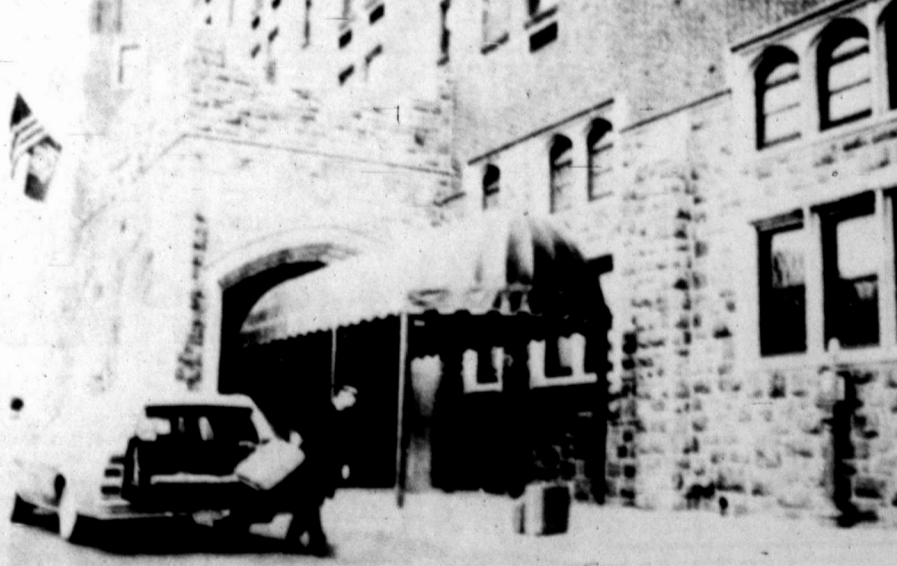

"Americans should not be sent abroad to serve our country unless we're prepared to defend them when they're threatened by terrorists."

He also said it is significant that no Soviet diplomatic personnel have ever been held hostage.

"There is a lesson in this for us. We should not and will not act like the Russians — we will not play dirty, but we will play tough."

"Let the word ring out loud and clear around the world that there is a new administration in Washington. Those who attack our embassies, burn our flag or abuse our people will be condemned as international outlaws and treated as such."

Hundreds of spectators watch as Hereford cattle are judged in the show ring at the 75th National Western Stock Show in Denver, Colo. For cattlemen the National Western is the World Series, World's Fair and national convention rolled into one. Forty-five states and six foreign countries are represented at the show which ends this weekend. (AP Laserphoto)

Cowboy's home remedy days are gone

DENVER (AP) — The days when a rodeo cowboy used to spit on a swollen ankle and pray it wasn't broken are over. Many injured cowboys now limp to the doctor's office instead. As a result, the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association this year hired its first full-time trainer. John Andrews says his job is to make sure rodeo athletes get proper care so they can be back in the saddle as quickly as possible. "The cowboys will benefit since they are a unique group of athletes," Andrews said. "These guys don't get workman's compensation. They have to ride or they don't eat."

Andrews, who has worked in several major sports, says rodeo is rougher than others. "The national finals (where the cowboys perform nine straight days — twice on the last day) is comparable to playing three football games in three days," he said.

75th 'World Series' stock show opens

By TERRY RYAN Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — It's ranchers and cattle, the Old West and designer jeans, weekend cowboys, 4-H and Future Farmers, and big money. For 10 days each January — 11 days this year to mark its 75th anniversary — the National Western Stock Show comes to Denver.

For cattlemen it is the Super Bowl, World's Fair and a national convention rolled into one. They come from 45 states and six foreign countries, and what they do here will affect the quality and price of beef on your table a year or two from now.

It may be possible to live in Denver and be unaware of the National Western, but a person would have to ignore 100,000 visitors in boots, trucks and horse trailers packing city streets, supermarket clerks in cowboy hats, TV weathermen in full cowboy drag and an occasional distinctive aroma.

The show began Jan. 14, with the last shows and sales scheduled for Saturday and the last rodeo performance for Sunday. Before the show ends, more than 330,000 people are expected to ante up the $2 to enter the 40-acre National Western grounds 3 1/2 miles north of downtown Denver.

MORE THAN 80,000 of those visitors will come from out of state.

Racism now part of controversial threat of Cowboy Hall of Fame

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A controversy over the threatened pullout of the National Cowboy Hall of Fame shifted from City Hall to the state Capitol Thursday, amid new charges of that racism is involved in the move.

The state House of Representatives voted 80-11 in favor of a resolution asking the City Council of Oklahoma City to do everything it can to insure that the national shrine remains in the capital city.

The resolution was adopted after some wrangling over its wording and accusations from two black freshman lawmakers that the flap was racial in nature.

One of the black lawmakers, freshman Rep. Kevin Cox, said he hoped the monument would remain in the city, but added: "If racist attitudes permit this great structure to be moved, then let it go."

Dean Krakel, director of the hall, was the target of the criticism over a list of demands he gave the City Council as requirements for keeping the hall.

The Cowboy Hall of Fame rests atop Persimmon Hill on U.S. 66 on the outskirts of the predominantly black northeast quadrant of Oklahoma City.

Krakel, who once gained publicity when he tried to organize a campaign opposing the U.S. going to the metric system, could not be reached for comment.

In a related development, leaders of the black community charged that Krakel's efforts to block the apartment complex are racially motivated.

pumping $32 million into the local economy. Another 20,000 will be Coloradans from outside the Denver area.

The first National Western was held in a circus tent in 1906. There had been cattlemen meetings earlier in Denver, but when the National Livestock Association convened in 1897, the bash became a brawl. It was nine years before anyone tried again.

The National Western added a rodeo 50 years ago, and it is now one of the three biggest and richest on the pro rodeo circuit. The Stock Show (it's capitalized in Denver) includes horse shows and sales, sheep shows and sales, hogs, chickens and even rabbits. In its heart of hearts, however, the National Western is cattle.

George Schlichau, a breeder from Haven, Kan., stood at the back of the auction arena this week as the bids ticked past $18,000 on a Hereford bull. "Denver is recognized by most all the cattle business as the best of the shows," said Schlichau. "This is the World Series."

An hour earlier, half interest in a Hereford breeding bull sold for $301,000. Lean animals with more red meat and less fat are the major concern of cattlemen these days, said Schlichau, and they will pay to get them.

"That is what the consumer wants — less fat," Schlichau explained. "To get that you are looking for animals with long muscles and less back fat. The other thing you are looking for is something that will consume roughage and put it into weight."

Many steers are going to slaughter now at 950 to 1,100 pounds, down from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds a couple of years ago. Much of that additional weight was expensive, corn-produced fat put on in feed lots. Cattlemen now want animals to put on more weight on range grass or roughage from grain fields. Their success will affect how much steaks and hamburger cost at the meat counter.

More than 14,000 animals and $11 million changed hands last year during the National Western. More than 25,000 animals were shipped in this year, and no one is even guessing at the total sales figure.

FOR MANY STOCKMEN, the National Western is a combined family vacation, business trip, shopping outing and fraternal gathering. Hotels in Denver are full, taxis scarce, and the newspapers run special advertising sections. January is the best time of the year for ranchers to get off the ranch.

Steve Simmons and his wife brought a pair of heifers and two bulls from their Angus operation near Williamston, Mich. The animals were for sale, if the right offer was made, Simmons said, but the main reason for the trip was to display the results of his breeding.

"We show all over the country but there is nothing like Denver," Simmons said as he stood at his stall space in the National Western's Beef Palace. "It is social in a way. We see our friends from all over the country here, and see what they are doing."

As Simmons talked, children from a suburban Denver school district were being ushered around the grooming racks two aisles away. Show cattle are washed, sprayed, fluffed, oiled and polished in a way that simply astounds city folks, young and old.

Thomas Watts, a Denver physician, was walking with his wife and three children from the stockyard pens toward the exhibition buildings. A friend had shown some animals that day, and his children just liked being there. "It's a good way for city folk to see how country people live," Watts said.

Man photographs deadly deeds

By JOE FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

PANCHIMALCO, El Salvador (AP) — The slight man in the green shirt watched passively as two gravediggers gulped cheap brandy, stripped off their boots and shirts and reluctantly stuck their shovels into the common grave holding three bodies.

It was part of 27-year-old Armando Paz's daily routine. Every morning he travels a 60-mile route around San Salvador, finding and photographing bodies dumped by rightist and leftist killers.

Hit squads from the right and the left take a heavy toll of their real or imagined enemies almost every night in El Salvador. The bodies show up the next morning, and Paz goes to work with his camera. He seldom finds fewer than seven; he says his record is 47.

"Sometimes people will find bodies and put up crosses made of sticks," said Paz. "We look for those. And we look for packs of dogs or circling vultures."

"It's pretty easy to tell who was killed by the right and who was killed by the left. The left kills its victims quickly. The right usually tortures theirs, first."

Most of the bodies are quickly buried as unknowns, shoveled under the earth where they are found or in the nearest cemetery. Families with relatives missing come to the office of the El Salvador Human Rights Commission, where Paz works, to go through his pile of pictures. Often they find their loved ones.

The commission estimates more than 13,000 civilians, guerrillas and soldiers have been killed in the bloodbath that has been raging in this tiny Central American nation since the beginning of 1980.

"It's a job you do," Paz said with a shrug. "It's tiring ... not tiring physically, but tiring mentally. There are so many bodies."

He said many of the photographs taken before he took the job showed victims face down or not facing the camera and could not be used for identification.

"You needed someone who could get close to the face. Nobody would do it," he said. "I turn all the heads so they face the camera."

The Devil's Door, a popular park on a bluff overlooking this Indian village near the capital, is frequently used as a dumping ground, pockmarked with opened makeshift graves, some still containing bones.

Bodies found here go to the Panchimalco cemetery, where anonymous burials and exhumations by relatives seeking their kin are almost daily happenings.

On Nov. 30 at the Devil's Door, Paz found the bodies of eight people who had been shot. Three of them were buried in a common grave in the local cemetery, a dense cluster of weeds and simple wooden crosses with painted names.

Maria Ercilia identified one of the three as her husband, Mauricio Antonio Gonzalez, from Armando's pictures. She came to the cemetery to claim his remains. She bought a $280 coffin to take him home.

Paz and a rights commission worker talked quietly with the widow as the grave diggers, who had bargained on the spot for $12 each and a bottle of brandy, toiled in the sun.

"What was he wearing?" "Black pants. With stripes," she said. "No, I don't remember what kind of fabric."

Dental work? "He had very small, straight teeth. Very pretty teeth," she said quietly.

One of the gravediggers held up a piece of fabric and a jawbone from the reeking pit. She approached carefully and looked.

"Leave him where he is," she said. She said she could get a refund on the coffin.

Loss of citizenship 'symbolic'

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Author Lev Kopelev said today it was symbolic that he learned about the loss of his Soviet citizenship on the first anniversary of the banishment of dissident Andrei Sakharov from Moscow.

may have been coincidence, "but to us it is symbolic."

He said "as long as people like Sakharov are persecuted in the Soviet Union, no one on our planet can feel safe." Sakharov, a Nobel Peace Prize winner and Soviet dissident leader, was exiled to the Soviet city of Gorky on Jan. 22, 1980.

Kopelev, 68, his wife, Raisa Orlova, and Vasily Aksyonov, who lives in the United States, were stripped of citizenship and barred from returning to their homeland. The three writers were pressured into leaving the Soviet Union last year.

Kopelev, who called the Soviet action "mean and stupid," said it was a blow but that friends in Soviet prisons and psychiatric clinics had a much harder fate to bear.

Kopelev, who arrived in West Germany Nov. 12 as the guest of Nobel prize-winning writer Heinrich Boell, said the notice by the Supreme Soviet stripping them of their citizenship was dated Jan. 12.

He said an appeal against the order was impossible. "We did not anticipate such action, but we were always afraid it would happen," Kopelev said. He said he would heed the order and return his passport.

Contrary to a spontaneous statement made in a television interview Thursday, Kopelev said he was not yet sure whether he would apply for political asylum in West Germany.

Sunday, January 23, 1981
YOUR BIRTHDAY TO-DAY: English author W. Somerset Maugham and Scottish poet Robert Burns were born on this date, and it is highly likely that you also are blessed with considerable literary or artistic potential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Love and romance are growing stronger! Teamwork enables you to accomplish much that is positive, useful. A member of the opposite sex could be the dominant influence in your life right now.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Many of you are entering a period of change affecting residences, partnerships and romance. Show your enthusiasm for mate's accomplishments.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): This is an excellent day to set realistic new goals for yourself, you are expanding your contacts and horizons. Romance adds to a feeling of contentment this weekend.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may decide to go out of town today for a change of scenery or some type of celebration. Romance is enhanced by peaceful setting. Be careful not to ask too much too soon.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This should be a day of romance and happiness. Friends, family members are likely to be out shopping for bargains. Make a careful analysis of where you stand financially.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Geminis of all ages can form lasting friendships and make important contacts today. Be careful not to search for excitement in places you should avoid.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A day for bringing freshness to that which has become stale. Something entirely new may not be the whole answer. You need to choose the very best from a wide range of alternatives.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Everything should go according to plan today. Romance takes a meaningful turn and certain singles move closer to marriage. Do not react impulsively to an unusual suggestion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A good day for planning for the future. Entertaining at home is more enjoyable than going out. Evening favors the revival of an old romantic tie.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The bonds of love could lead you to revise some of your plans. Older relative may need special assistance due to health problem. Be a good listener.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not let your impatience over delays spoil a weekend trip. Soon you will be able to achieve a more rewarding relationship with a member of the opposite sex.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): News could arrive today that will lift your spirits to new heights! Share
