House Democrats want DOE explanation

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats, charging that the Reagan administration is gutting government efforts to police the oil industry under the guise of saving money, are demanding that the Energy Department explain itself.

One House subcommittee voted Wednesday to subpoena a high-level administration nominee to justify an 80 percent budget cut for department lawyers who are trying to collect $7 billion in alleged oil company overcharges.

Rep. Toby Moffett, D-Conn., said the decision amounted to "a $7 billion giveaway to the oil companies."

A second subcommittee planned hearings today on budget cuts in Energy Department efforts to prosecute alleged criminal violations of oil pricing regulations.

"They've gone a long way on some of these criminal cases," said an aide to the House Energy subcommittee on investigations. "They've got a lot of cases that were just about ready to go to Justice (Department prosecutors), and suddenly their staff is gone."

At issue is the administration's proposal to cut the budget of the department's Office of the Special Counsel from $35 million to $6 million during the coming fiscal year. The office was set up to investigate oil company violations of price controls.

On Wednesday, the House Government Operations subcommittee on energy voted 6-2 along party lines to order R. Tenney Johnson, now a special consultant to Energy Secretary James B. Edwards, to appear before the panel.

The subpoena may now be issued upon the signature of the full committee chairman, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas.

Moffett, the subcommittee's chairman, said congressmen want to question Johnson on his role in the budget decision. He had been scheduled to testify Wednesday, but was ordered by Edwards not to appear.

The energy secretary said such an appearance would be inappropriate because of Johnson's pending nomination to become the department's general counsel. Edwards' letter prompted the panel to issue the subpoena.

Paul Bloom, who served as special counsel during the Carter administration, testified last month that a severe budget cut would destroy any effort to prosecute the oil companies.

Bloom said the major oil companies have been eager to settle cases out of court to avoid lengthy and expensive court cases. The budget cuts signal the oil companies they needn't bother settling because the department will not press the civil cases, he argued.

In testimony Wednesday, the acting administrator of the department's Economic Regulatory Administration argued that the $6 million in the Reagan budget would be sufficient to pursue a few of the most important cases still pending, while the others could be deferred until later.

"The department has no intention of ignoring violations...and they will be pursued — if not sooner, later," said Barton R. House.

Moffett, however, produced two internal memos written by House last month pleading with his superiors for more money.

Singing out the prices and trying to get a little more money, auctioneer Blake Moore, above, conducts The University of Texas Lease Auction held Wednesday in The Midland Hilton. Bidders filled the ballroom and watched as a new record of $52 million for 249 tracts was set. Previous record for leases was $44 million set during the September bidding.

Lease auction again sets bonus record

By JOHN BANKER
Oil Staff Writer

Nobody probably understood a word the auctioneer said, but everyone knew the numbers, as The University of Texas lease auction held Wednesday in the Midland Hilton rolled up another record in bonus payments of more than $52 million.

Last September's auction set the previous high mark, with slightly more than $44 million collected. Only four years ago, when the auction moved to Midland from Austin the record total was a comparatively pale $17 million.

Deregulation of the oil industry was cited as the factor behind the tripling of bonus payments in the last four years, a fact highlighted by the almost $9 million increase in bonuses, despite 47,000 less acres being sold.

Seven tracts sold for $1 million or more, with Supron Oil Co., of Dallas, taking the highest priced tract at $2.7 million for 320 acres in Winkler County, the western half of section 27, block 20.

Getty Oil Co., of Midland, paid $1 million or more, per tract, for four leases, the most expensive being the eastern half of the tract bought by Supron. Getty paid $1.7 million for the drilling rights.

The second most expensive tract was sold to Nortex Gas & Oil and HNG Oil Co., both of Midland, who combined to pay $2.1 million for 320 acres of land in Ward County, the eastern half of section 4, block 18.

The Supron purchase figured out to $8,437 per acre.

The total for the sale was 83,328 acres leased for $52,882,000, an average of $634 an acre.

For the second auction in a row, every tract was leased. The 249 tracts leased Wednesday, combined with the tracts from the last auction, gives the university auction 590 consecutive tracts leased.

Texas land commissioner Bob Armstrong, who attended the six-hour auction, said the deregulation of oil prices has affected lease prices in two ways.

"Not only has the value of the land increased with oil prices, but with the higher prices the producers now have more money, to re-invest," Armstrong said.

Proceeds from the leases go to the Permanent University Fund which is divided between The University of Texas and Texas A&M University with a two thirds, one third split. The permanent fund is currently worth about $1.32 billion.

Another major influence on the rising cost of leases, Armstrong said, has been the deregulation of deep gas wells. To encourage drilling, the federal government has exempted from regulation gas produced from wells 15,000 feet or deeper.

Because the price is not regulated, producers can sell gas at prices closer to the international market, rather than the regulated domestic prices.

According to Armstrong, Mexican and Canadian gas imported into the United States sells for $4.94 per cubic foot, while domestic prices are kept at around $2.50 a cubic foot.

By being able to price their product closer to international levels, it becomes economically feasible to incur the costs of deep well drilling, which can cost as much as $10 million a project, Armstrong said.

For the immediate future, Armstrong sees oil, and university lease prices increasing. With $40 a barrel oil seemingly in the future, the value of the university lands should continue to rise.

Armstrong also noted that if the Reagan administration is successful in its attempt to deregulate all gas prices, domestic gas could conceivably hit the $5 mark, again, adding to the value of the lease lands.

He admits that there are political problems involved in returning gas prices to the open market. A rise in the gas price would mean substantial increases in utility costs, particularly in the north-

U.S. will bolster interests in Mideast, Persian Gulf

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has decided to sell four sophisticated radar planes to Saudi Arabia and to build up an Egyptian air base near the Red Sea to bolster Western security interests in the Middle East and the Persian Gulf, sources say.

The plan, sources said, calls for American civilians and Air Force personnel to be stationed in Saudi Arabia to help maintain, support and operate the complicated jets. And while it is unclear whether Americans would be aboard during flights, that is considered likely in view of the sophisticated equipment involved.

The moves would increase the American military presence in both Arab countries and extend military facilities available in the region to the United States.

They also would strengthen ties with Egypt and Saudi Arabia, considered friendly and pro-Western, and could cause concern in Israel because of a possible impact on the Arab-Israeli military balance.

Sale of the four Airborne Warning and Command System (AWACS) planes to Saudi Arabia, for about $400 million apiece, could enable the Saudis to monitor Israeli air movement up to 500 miles away.

The presence of American personnel is regarded as a safeguard against use of the planes against Israel, sources say. The theory is the United States would not allow that because it could expose Americans to Israeli fire.

The sources who asked not to be identified, said the decision was final except that Congress, which could veto the AWACS sales, has yet to be notified.

State Department officials, however said Wednesday no final decision has been made.

Building up Egypt's Ras Banas base near the Red Sea would make it easier for the United States to use the Rapid Deployment Force created last year to protect the Persian Gulf oil lanes.

While the Ras Banas agreement is secret, it eventually would have to be disclosed publicly to Congress because movement of American forces is involved. Because of that, one U.S. official said, the deal could fall apart.

The official said the Pentagon also has some reservations about the security value of Ras Banas.

Opening it to U.S. forces would extend the web of U.S. military installations formed since the the 1978 revolution in Iran and the Soviet intervention into Afghanistan. Others are in Kenya, Oman, Somalia and Diego Garcia Island in the Indian Ocean.

The main purpose is to protect the Persian Gulf oil fields, which provide about 40 percent of the total petroleum imported by the United States, Western Europe and Japan.

Repeal of amendment on Angola aid possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is signaling Congress it may seek repeal of legislation banning covert U.S. military aid to rebel forces in Marxist Angola.

One Democratic congressman said the administration appears committed to finding the votes for the repeal.

He called it "a screwball idea" which would set back American goals in southern Africa and prolong the presence of Cuban combat troops in Angola. The congressman asked not to be identified.

State Department spokesman William Dyess said no decision has been made on whether to seek to eliminate the 1976 amendment barring aid to Angolan insurgents. He said the eventual thrust of administration policy will emphasize a search for diplomatic rather than military solutions to the region's conflict.

The amendment was sponsored by Sen. Dick Clark, D-Iowa, to head off deeper U.S. involvement in Angola after Cuban soldiers had tipped the balance of power in the country to Marxist forces.

Congressional sources said State Department officials in recent Capitol Hill briefings mentioned repeal of the Clark amendment "as a real possibility and one which State Department bureaucrats have approved."

"Since they are willing to discuss this as a recommendation of the department, it's hard to see how they could go back on it," said one source who asked not to be identified. "It's not set in concrete, but almost."

An attempt to repeal the Clark amendment succeeded in the Senate last year but failed in the House.

Grocery store owner found shot to death

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

"We don't know what we've got yet," said a Midland police officer on the shooting death early this morning of Bill Dennis, owner of Bill's Drive In Grocery at 1200 N. Lamesa Road.

Dennis, in his 50s, was found lying behind the counter of the store shortly after 9 a.m. today. He had been shot once in the chest with a small caliber weapon, according to Justice of the Peace Charlie Sprayberry.

No gun was immediately located, and police were uncertain as to a motive in the shooting. Robbery was tentatively ruled out, as large stacks of money were found next to the cash register.

"The money was in plain view," said Sprayberry, who pronounced Dennis dead at the scene. "We don't know if it's accidental, self-inflicted or homicide. It looked like either a .22 or .32 caliber wound. They're (police) still trying to find the gun."

Dennis had owned the store about 10 years and was known simply as "Mr. Bill" to residents of the neighborhood.

Dennis and his wife Eva lived at 3523 Seaboard. Mrs. Dennis is a special education teacher at Alamo Junior High.

His body was taken to Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home, where services are pending.

Question is how much to cut budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — In less than two months in office, President Reagan has succeeded in enforcing a dramatic change in one of Congress' longest-running debates. For Democrats and Republicans alike, the question is no longer whether to cut the budget, but by how much.

"The effect of the president's package has been dramatic," Sen. Peter Domenici, the Republican chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said Wednesday, one day after Reagan formally recommended $48.6 billion in cuts for 1982.

"Last year or the year before no one (in special interest groups) wanted even a 5 percent cut. Now they're saying 20 percent or 25 percent is too dramatic. But we can accept 10."

Less than an hour earlier, Congressional Budget Office Director Alice Rivlin, a Democratic appointee, suggested that to really control spending, Congress must do something about the system of automatic increases in Social Security benefits to counteract inflation.

That would be a step beyond what Reagan has recommended, and could mean poking holes in the "safety net" the administration says it has preserved for the needy.

Shortly after Domenici spoke, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia delivered another in a series of pledges of cooperation with the president. "In general, we support the president's program, reducing federal spending," he said.

In part, Reagan appears to be headed for success on his pending program because of the very scope of the cuts he has proposed.

Budget director David A. Stockman told one meeting of congressional aides earlier this year that he was deliberately proposing cuts in as many programs as possible.

In the resulting howl of protests, he said, no single voice would stand out. It hasn't worked out exactly that way, but almost.

That approach also has enabled some powerful members of Congress to take steps that would be politically unenforceable in other circumstances — saying they accept cuts in programs that affect their home states directly.

Senate Republican leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, for example, has already conceded that the Tennessee Valley Authority should not be saved from at least a nick of the budget tax.

In addition, some of Congress' most liberal Democrats have been forced into positions of trying to enact small cuts in their favorite programs in a move to prevent larger ones.

One example surfaced in the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, when Reagan and the GOP majority called for cuts of 25 percent in the government's vast array of health programs.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., tried to reduce the cut to 8.4 percent. He failed, but even so signaled he was willing to propose cuts of $70 million dollars below 1981 spending for programs he nurtured for a decade as chairman of the Senate's health subcommittee.

Republicans and Democrats alike agree that Reagan's overwhelming victory last fall gave him the advantage when he set out to cut the budget, something their recent presidents talked about with little success.

And Reagan isn't bashful about publicly interpreting the election results.

"I urge the members of Congress to remember that last November the American people's message was loud and clear," the president said Tuesday as he submitted his revised 1982 budget.

"The mandate for change... was not my mandate, it was our mandate."

"The real political risk this time is in not supporting the budget cuts," says Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., a conservative Republican who has served four years in Congress.

"The judgment of the country right now is pro-Reagan," concedes House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., a liberal Democrat who has voted for years for the type of social programs the president is bent on pruning.

In the old, 96th Congress, O'Neill used all the powers at his disposal to pass a new program giving poor people more than $1 billion to pay rapidly rising fuel bills.

Spring-like days due for weekend

While cloudy, wet skies may have dampened the week, the overhead environment should be clearing by Friday for a spring-like weekend.

The National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport is calling for partly cloudy skies and warmer on Friday.

After an overnight low in the low 40s, the mercury should warm up to the middle 60s on Friday, said the weatherman.

Southwest winds should blow at 10 to 15 mph. After a drizzly week, the weatherman is dropping any chance of precipitation for Friday.

High on Wednesday was 48 degrees, a cool reading compared to the record high of 89 degrees set in 1967. Overnight low today was 44 degrees, a sizzler compared to the record low of 15 degrees set in 1948.

Precipitation for the last 24 hours measured .10 of an inch. For the month, the reading was up to .55 of an inch and for the year it was 1.78 inches.

Andrews reported the largest amount of precipitation in the last 24 hours with .09 of an inch. Other area towns reported mist this morning.

Study says eastern tornadoes more destructive

CHICAGO (AP) — Tornadoes near the Mississippi River and eastward travel farther at ground level and wreak more destruction than twisters to the west, a study of tornado patterns indicates.

And that means more attention should be directed to warning people in the eastern Mississippi and Ohio valleys of the dangers of tornadoes, said Dr. T. Theodore Fujita, a University of Chicago professor of geophysical sciences who headed the study.

"The longer a moving tornado remains on the ground, the more damaging to property and deadly to people it can be," Fujita said Wednesday. "I want to establish that the duration of tornadoes is the most important clue as to the risk of buildings — homes, schools, hospitals, even nuclear power plants in certain regions."

Fujita took 10 years to study all tornadoes in the U.S. since 1916 and found that tornadoes west of a line from eastern Texas to Michigan's Upper Peninsula are more numerous, but the eastern variety travel on average — twice as far on the ground.

University researchers are still calculating the average length in miles of tornado paths in the two zones.

He said the higher population density east of the Mississippi makes his findings important.

"There are fewer tornadoes in the east," Fujita said, "so people may not be as aware of their danger as they are in, say, Oklahoma in the western zone."

"But one large tornado moving 100 miles on the ground is the same as 10,000 little tornadoes that last a few seconds and travel one city block."

The study found that eastern tornadoes develop in Mississippi and Alabama in February, spread northward rapidly and become more numerous in March, peaking in early April.

Western tornadoes, Fujita said, start in and around Oklahoma in late March. They increase in number but spread north only gradually.

"Western tornadoes start around noon and peak at 4 to 6 p.m.," the professor said. "But their eastern counterparts work much longer hours — they occur at almost any time of the day, although they peak between 4 and 7 p.m."

Eastern twisters tend to develop in "super outbreaks," the study concluded. Four outbreaks between mid-February and early April in 1884, 1925, 1965 and 1974 killed a total of 2,062 people, Fujita said.

He said he had no explanation for the different behavior of tornadoes in the two zones.

Hijackers' demands met by Pakistan

DAMASCUS, Syria (P) — Only minutes before the threatened execution of three American hostages, Pakistan agreed today to a demand by three plane hijackers to release 55 political prisoners — the Syrian news agency said.

The hijackers, who seized the Pakistani airliner 11 days ago and flew it first to Afghanistan and then to Damascus, had also threatened to blow up the plane, themselves and more than 100 hostages unless their demands were met by 11 a. EST.

They set a new deadline of 7 p. m. EST for fulfillment of their request, diplomatic sources said.

The sources, who refused to be identified, said that after the Pakistan agreement negotiations began to establish the identity of six of the 55 whose release was demanded by the three hijackers.

Earlier in the day, the hijackers had labeled the three Americans CIA agents and said "be prepared to collect their bodies." They made the threat in a letter dictated to Pakistani authorities from the plane at Damascus airport. The letter was released by the official Syrian news agency, SANA.

The Americans have been identified as Frederick Hubbell of Des Moines, Iowa, a lawyer, and businessmen Craig Richard Clymore of California and Lawrence Clifton Mangum of New York City, who reportedly lives in Spain. A U. S. Embassy official in Islamabad, Pakistan, said "we have no idea how they (the hijackers) could have come up with the deduction that they're CIA agents."

In Washington, the White House refused to discuss the threatened executions.

The hijackers already killed one hostage — a Pakistani diplomat last Friday.

Pakistan President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq sent an "important, urgent" message to Syrian President Hafez Assad after the threat to shoot the Americans was issued, a Pakistani spokesman said. The contents were not disclosed.

Immediately after the hijackers' treat, Syrian troops and police moved closer to the green and white Boeing 720. Some crouched in the bushes on both sides of the auxiliary runway where the plane was parked. A half dozen dashed under the fuselage of the plane. Later all were pulled back to foxholes.

Observers said the Americans were singled out apparently in an effort to get the Reagan administration to put pressure on Pakistani authorities to meet the demand.

The letter was written by the chief hijacker, identified as Moujir Ghulam, deputy commander of Al Zulfikar. The organization is believed to be made up of supporter of Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, the prime minister hanged in April 1979 by the current Pakistani regime of Zia. The trio hijacked the plane 11 days ago over Pakistan and flew it first to Kabul, Afghanistan.

The letter was handed to Syrian mediators six hours before the deadline was to expire.

"Only six ours are left and there is still no answer from the Pakistani government to our requests," the letter said. "If our demands are not met the result will be hard and full responsibility will fall upon the Pakistan authorities," it said.

"We want the whole world to know that this tragedy is because Zia is an American-Zionist agent and a traitor to Pakistan," the letter continued.

Sayin the Americans would be shot if the demands were not met, the letter added: "They are CIA agents. I know everything about them. Be prepared to collect their bodies."

"Zia is not interested in the fate of the passengers. All he wants is to score political advantages," the letter said. "We are not extending the deadline. If our demands are not met after six hours, we shall take violent action."

Pakistan's ambassador to Syria expressed optimism earlier about getting the hostages freed and said he hoped to get the air pirates to extend their "final" deadline for blowing up the plane.

And that means more attention should be directed to warning people in the eastern Mississippi and Ohio valleys of the dangers of tornadoes, said Dr. T. Theodore Fujita, a University of Chicago professor of geophysical sciences who headed the study.

"The longer a moving tornado remains on the ground, the more damaging to property and deadly to people it can be," Fujita said Wednesday. "I want to establish that the duration of tornadoes is the most important clue as to the risk of buildings — homes, schools, hospitals, even nuclear power plants in certain regions."

Police seeking bandit of Rainbo Bread Store

Police today were still searching for a man who took $135 in a holdup of the Rainbo Bread Store at 2401 N. Big Spring St. late Wednesday morning.

Described as a slender black male, the man entered the store about 11:15 a.m. Wednesday and indicated he had a weapon. He was wearing a dark windbreaker and dark trousers. He was last seen driving north on Big Spring in a large, older model car.

In other police activity during the past 24 hours, John Mikula of 1241 N. Marienfeld told officers a box of Army manuals worth $500 and assorted dishes valued at $30 were taken in a burglary of his residence. Entry was gained through an unlocked front door.

A $1,400 microphone was reported missing from the Threshold Development Co. in Ghils Tower West, and Alvin Selmon of 506 E. Cowden said a color TV set worth $300 was taken in a burglary of his residence.

Assorted items valued at $340 were reported taken in a burglary of the Wolfe Nursery, 127 Northland Center, while Sylvia Sanchez of 1605 Butter-nut Lane told police her car was burglarized and a $250 eight-track tape was stolen.

Sheriff's deputies today were investigating the reported burglary of the Jack Abbott residence in northwest Midland County.

Taken were a TV set, tape player and a revolver. Total loss was placed at $400.

And city firemen used some 75 gallons of water to flush gasoline from in front of the Colonial Food Store at Andrews Highway and Midland Drive after a car ran into a gas pump at the establishment about 4:20 p.m. Wednesday.

Woman released by terrorists recounts hijacking experience

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Carlote Hubbell, whose trip to Pakistan became embroiled in an 11-day hijack, says conditions on the plane were "abominable" and she had to be forced to leave her husband behind with three gunmen.

Mrs. Hubbell whose husband, Frederick, is still aboard the plane in Syria along with 10 other passengers, said in a copyright interview with The Des Moines Tribune that one of the hijackers walked to her seat, pointed a gun in her face and said, "You will go."

The couple parted with a kiss and a reassuring glance, Mrs. Hubbell said in a telephone interview from New Delhi, India.

"I refused to go, but Fred said he had to know that somebody out there understands and is working in our interest," she said.

She said she would never forget the ordeal, which included the fatal shooting of another passenger.

The Hubbells, members of a wealthy Des Moines family, were on a vacation when the Pakistan jetliner was hijacked by Pakistan terrorists. Ms. Hubbell was one of two American women to remain aboard the plane when 27 other women and children were evacuated. After six days, Mrs. Hubbell was released.

Mrs. Hubbell, 31, said conditions aboard the foul-smelling airplane were intolerable. Temperatures inside were high in the afternoon.

"We were allowed to mingle periodically. Not too many people did leave their chairs. Occasionally, we would leave our seats to talk to the other Americans," she said. "But there was too much activity on the plane. They (hijackers) would come through the plan and say 'take your seats.'"

Mrs. Hubbell said she and her husband, 30, first got word of the hijacking when the first-class passengers and the crew filed into the coach area and the men followed behind waving guns announcing it was a hijacking.

"And then 15 or 20 minute later, the pilot came over the loudspeaker and said, unfortunately we had gotten ourselves into this situation and were being diverted to Kabul (Afghanistan)," she said.

Meanwhile, Frederick's father, James W. Hubbell Jr. said the pain of waiting for new developments is being eased by an outpouring of public support.

He said he has received messages of support from around the country. "They say they're concerned and they share our concern," he added.

Calf wins prize

A 1,095-pound Shorthorn calf exhibited by Marty Kirby of Midland won the reserve championship in its class and brought the youngster $20 a pound from the Big Four of Houston at the Houston Livestock Show.

The 10-year-old is a student at Burnett Elementary School and is a member of the Future Farmers of America.

The calf, tabbed "Jim," is a Nebraska-bred steer and was adjudged a winner by Marty's father, Milton, long before the steer filled out.

"He (Milton Kirby) knew we were going to win. He knew it for nine months," his wife, Nancy, said this morning. "I wish I could be that confident."

Mrs. Kirby said that Marty would re-invest some of the $21,900 in prize money in another calf, pay expenses incurred in raising and showing Jim, and would set aside much of the money in a college fund.

British civil servant's strike crippling Thatcher's programs

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A series of strikes by British civil servants could cost the Conservative government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher $110 million a day in uncollected taxes, leaders of the nine unions warned today.

They said the walkouts already have delayed collection of a tax increase on gasoline and diesel fuel that was to have gone into force Tuesday after Mrs. Thatcher's austerity budget was read in the House of Commons.

The situation remained chaotic for gas buyers because in some areas the increase did not come into force because striking local civil servants failed to issue necessary notification to garages.

But in other areas it did for one of two reasons. Either non-striking civil servants issued notification or unscrupulous garage owners hiked price anyway and pocketed the difference.

Tax increases on tobacco and liquor are scheduled to come into force when shops and taverns open Friday morning and the same confusion is expected.

The strikes began Monday with a nationwide one-day stoppage by 7 percent of the country's 530,000 civil servants.

Now it has developed into a series of hit-and-run strikes around the country with the government not knowing where it will be hit next.

Some civil servants have walked off indefinitely. Some strike for only few hours one day and go back the next. Others stay on the job but refuse to handle certain types of work.

Workers threaten strike

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Workers in the Radom district south of Warsaw today stepped up their threat to shatter Poland's uneasy labor truce with a strike.

Union delegates from nearly 340 factories were meeting to endorse a list of 17 demands, some of the stemming from grudges left over from the 1976 riots there over government price hikes.

A spokesman for the Solidarity labor federation said its Radom chapter, which has been on strike alert since Monday, would draw up strike plans unless the government negotiated its demands.

Riots ripped through Radom, 50 miles south of Warsaw, five years ago in response to one of the communist government's periodic futile attempts to reduce expenses by raising the subsidized price of meat.

The union is now demanding the firing of local officials it blames for attacks on the workers then, a memorial to workers who were beaten in jail after the riots, the release of political prisoners now in jail, the conversion of police buildings to hospitals and pay increases for local metal workers to compensate for rising food prices.

Tempers were heightened in Radom by the reported beating Wednesday of four high school students by a squad of four anti-unionists who were seen tearing down union posters.

The Solidarity spokesman said the students recognized a local policeman among the four. He said the union appealed to the police to purge their ranks of anti-unionists.

Carlos' secretary charged in coup

MADRID, Spain (AP) — King Juan Carlos' former military instructor and onetime secretary to the royal household, Maj. Gen. Alfonso Armada, has been indicted in connection with the abortive military coup against the Spanish government, the Defense Ministry said today.

Neither the ministry nor the army would give details of the indictment and it was not immediately clear when the general would face a court martial.

Armada, 61, is the second senior army officer indicted in the Feb. 23 coup attempt. He was fired as deputy army chief of staff two days after he attempted coup and was arrested pending an investigation by a special army prosecutor.

The Madrid newspaper Diaio 16 said Armada was indicted for participating in a military rebellion. It said he was informed of the charge late Wednesday at the Getafe air base outside Madrid where he is in army custody.

The Defense Ministry said it was investigating news leaks of the indictment to Diaio 16 and two other newspapers.

Two other generals remain under arrest in connection with the plot but have not been indicted.

Directors to meet

The directors of the Midland County Hospital District will convene in a special meeting Friday at 12:30 p.m. to discuss plans for implementation of the Tribrock study on the governing leadership at Midland Memorial Hospital.

Time is allocated on the special agenda for a long executive session, while action will be taken on the matter after the session.

The Tribrock study was undertaken as a continuation of the overall efficiency study of the hospital at a cost of $18,500 last fall. The study included examination of the administrative positions, the board of trustees, the board of directors and the board of governors.

Currently the directors are the elected body of decision-makers at the hospital which has a management agreement with the trustees to operate the day-to-day activities at the hospital.

Blood Pressure and Hearing tests Set For Midland Area

Free Screening tests for high blood pressure and hearing loss will be given at the Beltone Hearing Aid Center 104 North O Street, Midland Texas. High blood pressure, the leading cause of stroke, heart, and kidney failure, can usually be controlled through medical supervision. It has no symptoms, however, and because of this, periodic testing is advisable. Both tests will be performed by trained personnel using modern electronic equipment.

Everyone should have a hearing test at least once a year if there is any trouble at all hearing clearly. Even people now wearing a hearing aid or those who have been told nothing could be done for them should have a test to keep track of how their hearing is changing and to find out if they are one of the many a hearing aid can help.

The FREE tests will be given Thursday & Friday from 9:00 am to 5:00 pm, & Saturday from 9:00 am to 1:00 pm. To avoid waiting, call for an appointment.

Governing responsibly

The Public Utility Commission deserves a vote of thanks from every Texan who appreciates responsible governmental action in the public interest.

The PUC evidently had the public interest in mind on Feb. 25 when commissioners ordered a public hearing on Southwestern Bell Telephone Co.'s proposal to test its "electronic information service" in Austin homes and businesses.

We wouldn't be completely honest if we didn't indicate that most newspapers opposed the Bell test partly because if it were allowed, eventually newspapers could suffer from a loss of advertising revenue and many could even go out of business.

On a broader scope, however, Bell's proposal poses a potential threat to the public's right to know because — if approved — the service could evolve into a system under which the telephone company would become a competing business with the news media. The only difference is that in this case the phone company would be both the carrier of information and the generator of information.

It is in such an arrangement that the danger lies because of the possibility for manipulation of the news.

All newspapers were seeking on the Bell request was a public hearing before the PUC. We got that and we feel confident that we can now substantiate our claims of the danger that would be posed by the Bell test.

Now Bell has filed for a temporary restraining order on the PUC's orders to conduct a public hearing on the test, to stop operations connected with the test until the hearing and that a new examiner be appointed.

We don't see how any judge could grant Bell's request. After all, justice is contingent on knowledge and all that will be accomplished by the public hearing before the PUC is that commissioners will become more knowledgeable about the potential impact of the test. A ruling against the public hearing, in effect, would be a ruling against knowledge.

The rulings by the PUC were commendable because they truly upheld the responsibility of the commissioners to see that the interests of the public are protected. That is what government is really all about.

The cult of survival

There is something profoundly saddening in the fear of a growing number of persons that society is about to collapse and they must barricade themselves against their neighbors.

The times are uncertain, it is true. Crime is rising, the economy is flagging, the very cement of society seems to be crumbling. Many among us find too little that is familiar and too much that is troubling in the outlines of the future. It is understandable that some should take alarm at these omens and act to protect their families.

It may be prudent to provide food supplies and emergency shelter against nuclear disaster, earthquake and famine, if one's fears dictate this precaution. But the cult of survival foresees not only the worst from nature, but from man, as well. Along with the cult of survival goes the law of the gun. The families that lay in an arsenal along with emergency rations and turn their survival shelters into bunkers appear to believe that kindness and decency will be the first casualties of disaster. How Americans would react to nuclear holocaust, great natural calamity, or collapse of the economy cannot be foretold. Most people have responded with courage and fortitude when they have been faced with an emergency. Indeed, adversity has often brought out the best, rather than the worst, in human nature.

Survivalists, however, have refused in advance to share adversity on even terms with their fellow men. By expecting the worst, and arming to repel others seeking help, the survivalists must beware lest their own actions invoke the law of the very jungle against which they have prepared.

'Son of ABM' appears to be looming beyond the horizon

By ERNEST CONINE
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

Don't look now, but son of ABM may be just over the horizon.

ABM means anti-ballistic missile. It's the shorthand way of describing weapons that are capable of intercepting and destroying incoming nuclear missiles before they have a chance to hit their targets on terra firma.

Anyone pushing 30 is old enough to recall the bruising, extremely divisive national debate over the ABM that took place during the late 1960s and early 1970s.

The Army proved 20 years ago that it was possible to destroy a ballistic missile with another missile. In 1967 the Johnson administration announced plans to build a "light" missile-defense system designed primarily to protect U.S. cities from an irrational Chinese nuclear attack.

But sensible people pointed out that even one big nuclear warhead was enough to destroy a city, and that building a leakproof ABM umbrella was a practical impossibility.

In 1969 the Nixon administration adjusted to this reality by abandoning the city-protection scheme and reorienting the program toward the much easier job of shielding U.S. missile silos from Soviet attack.

Many scientists claimed that ABM technology was not up to even this more-limited task. Besides, they pointed out, the Soviet Union was working on an ABM system of its own. To the degree that either side developed a missile system in which it had faith, it might come to think that it could launch a nuclear first strike without suffering devastating destruction in return.

In the end, the Senate approved the so-called Safeguard system by one vote. But neither the United States nor the Soviet Union had the stomach for an ABM race; the 1972 SALT I treaty limited each side to 200 ABM missiles, split between two sites.

Later, Moscow and Washington agreed to permit each other only one site. The Soviets deployed their ABM system near Moscow. The United States chose to defend the Grand Forks, N.D., Minuteman ICBM complex, but even that effort was abandoned five years ago.

Arms-control advocates have generally applauded the anti-ABM agreement as one of the few genuine accomplishments of the SALT process. As long as neither side has an effective defense against nuclear attack, neither can attack the other without committing national suicide in the process. Or so it has been argued until lately.

The U.S. Army, however, has continued to spend about $250 million a year on ABM research and development. The Soviets, by most accounts, have pursued a much more vigorous program.

In the last two years, more and more strategic analysts have concluded that this country may need an ABM after all — SALT I or no SALT I.

The change of heart is the result of two factors: advances in ABM technology, and the realization that the American Minuteman missile force, the heart of the U.S. nuclear deterrent, is becoming dangerously vulnerable to a massive first strike by the now-superior Soviet missile fleet.

Enter the MX, the proposed big new American missile that would gain survivability by being shuffled around to different launching sites in a kind of giant shell game.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Legislation blocked by conservatives' feud

WASHINGTON — Archaic regulations have generated reams of unnecessary paperwork that have overrun the filing system and piled up in cardboard boxes at the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

But legislation to clear out the tangled red tape got caught in a crossfire between two crusty conservatives during the last session of Congress. They were Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and then-Rep. Robert Bauman, R-Md., both viewers-with-alarm who have loudly decried the soaring public debt. Yet their petty feud blocked critical legislation, which would have saved money and improved governmental efficiency.

The bales of extra paperwork at the Immigration Service have been matched by a similar increase on Capitol Hill. Roughly one private bill out of every five introduced in Congress is a request for special exemption from one or another of Immigration's inflexible regulations.

So House Bill 7273, introduced to take care of this recurring problem and save the taxpayers a few million bucks, was considered uncontroversial and headed for easy passage. In fact, it got through the House on a voice vote.

In the Senate, the legislation had bipartisan support ranging from conservative Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., to liberal Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. It looked like smooth sailing.

Then, like two grumpy bullfrogs, Thurmond and Bauman began quarreling across the marble corridors that separate the Senate and House. Thurmond refused to support the immigration legislation until the House cleared a number of private bills he had sent over for its approval. But a "unanimous consent" was needed in the House.

With equal stubbornness if slightly more rationality, Bauman withheld his consent from the Thurmond bills. He noted with some exasperation that almost all of the private bills involved immigration matters that would be taken care of automatically under the new omnibus legislation.

Neither man would back down, and the immigration bill died with the 96th Congress. Legislative insiders told my reporter Julie Kosterlitz that the legislative squabble will probably delay passage of a similar bill by at least a year — wasting thousands of dollars and uncounted congressional hours.

The feud, meanwhile, was broken up by the November election. Bauman was defeated as a result of his arrest on a morals charge. The Republican takeover of the Senate has elevated Thurmond to the chairmanship of the Judiciary Committee.

'Hush money's' a help for president's program

"Mr. Flick of the 'Support President Reagan or Else' committee wishes to see you, Mr. Ellis."

"Send him in."
"Ellis, the name's Flick, and a few of the boys in the back kitchen have gotten together to put up a little fund for Ronnie to see that he gets his economic program through. We thought since you're the president of Dynamite Aerospace you might put a couple of bucks in the pot."

"What did you say the fund was for?"

"To advertise Ronnie's program to the American people. Congress is starting to give Ronnie a hard time on some of his proposals, so we thought we ought to use a little hard sell with the public."

"How much are you hoping to raise?"

"One or two million dollars. We figure every businessman has a stake in Ronnie's program, particularly those in the defense industry, and they wouldn't want to let Ronnie down."

"Does the president know about the fund?"

"Of course not. He couldn't be a part of anything like this. But there is nothing to stop concerned citizens like you and I from publicizing what he's trying to do."

"I'd be happy to give you $10,000."

"We had you down for $100,000. Of course, you know better than we do how much Dynamite can afford. I didn't know the company was doing so poorly."

"We're not doing poorly. As a matter of fact, we're hoping to get a $500 million contract for our new air-to-air missile."

"Yes, we know about that. Apparently Cheshire Robots is bidding for the same contract. They gave us $100,000 for our fund and didn't ask any questions."

"I'm not asking any questions! I was just curious how you people have managed to keep this a secret from the president."

"It hasn't been easy. We see him all the time, and we have to be very careful we don't spill the beans, because he'd get very mad if he heard we were soliciting funds from businessmen doing work with the government. But once we put Ronnie in the White House, we made a vow he'd get all the support we could give him. We expect the business community to do more than pay lip service to Ronnie's programs."

"Mr. Flick, I'm writing the check as fast as I can."

"Take your time. There's no rush. I'm on my way to see the Queeg Boat Company. They're hoping to get a big submarine contract from the Navy."

"I'm sure they'll come across."

"I wish you wouldn't put it that way, Mr. Ellis. This is purely a voluntary fund drive. If someone wants to give, fine. If he doesn't, we can always find another boat company to build our submarines."

"Mr. Flick, would you get angry if I gave you $150,000 instead of $100,000?"

"I don't think so. But I want it clearly understood that whatever you donate will have no effect on whether you get the $500 million contract for your superb air-to-air missile."

"I understand that. This check is only to show my faith in the Reagan administration."

"You're a great American, Mr. Ellis. I wish there were a hundred more like you."

"Aren't there?"

"Yes, but we haven't hit them all up yet."

"Here's your check, Mr. Flick. I have only one request. Please don't tell the president I made this generous contribution to support him, because I want our missile to stand or fall on its merits."

"I assure you my lips are sealed. And my request to you is that the president never finds out what we've been doing. He considers himself a great communicator, and he would never understand why we had to raise a war chest to sell his program."

Oldest aquarium may be drowning

WASHINGTON (AP) — The future looks bleak for the nation's oldest aquarium, chopped out of the new federal budget and likely to have to close by next year.

Alan Levitt of the Fish and Wildlife Service, which operates the National Aquarium, said the operation was considered expendable.

Under President Reagan's proposed budget, the money will run out on Oct. 1, 1982, aquarium officials said. The Carter administration had budgeted $289,000 for the aquarium.

Located in the basement of the Commerce Department in downtown Washington, the aquarium hosts between 500,000 and a million visitors each year, mostly school children.

Asked what would happen to the hundreds of fish located there, an aquarium spokesman who asked not to be identified by name responded, "No idea, I have no idea. I'm mad."

However, Levitt said the fish probably would be transferred to other aquariums across the country.

Rep. Sidney R. Yates, D-Ill., chairman of the House Interior Committee, said he had not been officially informed of the plan to close the aquarium.

He said there have been discussions of having the Smithsonian Institution take over the operation and move it to the National Zoo.

Levitt also noted those discussion, but said they have not progressed beyond the talking stage.

The aquarium staff member who asked not to be identified complained that converting the area where it is located to other uses would probably cost several million dollars.

Tanya, a domesticated chimpanzee, has made animal history by giving birth to a healthy 3-pound son. Researchers say Tanya is the first of her species to give birth after living with a human family, isolated from other chimps.

Chimp gives birth

CONROE, Texas (AP) — June Cook had already been a grandmother 18 times, but the 19th, she said, was special — even if it was a baby chimpanzee.

Mrs. Cook helped Tanya, the chimp, write a new page in medical history when Tanya gave birth to a three-pound male. Mrs. Cook has raised Tanya since birth, as though she were a human child.

Animal researchers say Tanya is the first chimp raised under such conditions to give birth.

Mrs. Cook, a Conroe homemaker, reared Tanya under a study done by the University of Oklahoma Institute of Primate Studies in Norman.

She provided Tanya a bedroom of her own until September 1979 when a cage was built with the arrival of Meshache, a 9-year-old male chimp. Tanya became pregnant eight months ago.

"I raised her like a daughter," Mrs. Cook said. "I think everything went beautifully. It couldn't have gone any better."

Researchers say chimpanzee infants normally are dependent upon their mothers about four years.

On hand to supervise video-taping of the birth was William Lemmon, director of the primate studies.

Lemmon said chimpanzees are psychologically similar to man and studying the behaviors of the species assists psychologists in understanding the behavior of early man.

Studying Tanya's maternal behavior, he said, will be very important the next few days because "we still don't know how she will respond to the infant."

Researchers, he said, want to determine how much of her behavior results from her training of the past nine years and how much is instinct.

Lemmon said Tanya is particularly important to the studies because no other chimpanzee has ever given birth after being separated from its own species. Eight other chimp infants from the same colony as Tanya, he said, died after they were removed from their mothers.

Hypnosis can be valuable tool

Dear Dr. Solomon: I know many people who want to lose weight or stop smoking or break any one of a number of other habits, but who are unable to do so. The other day while in a shopping center, I was handed a circular which claimed that hypnosis could accomplish all these things. If smoking and overeating are so harmful to health, wouldn't hypnosis be worth a try for people who have tried other forms of treatment without success? — Alice

Dear Alice: Hypnosis can be a valuable therapeutic tool when used by a competent, well-trained person under appropriate circumstances; but it is also the type of approach that may be subject to abuse and cause a great deal of harm without doing any good. Dr. Presley Reed, a Colorado psychiatrist, notes, for example, that it may be difficult at times to bring a subject completely out of a hypnotic trance. This, in turn, could very well lead to an automobile accident. In addition, some problems may grow worse as a result of hypnosis, while others simply are not amenable to the technique.

Hypnosis may provide nightclub audiences with a few laughs, but there is nothing funny about some of its more harmful and potentially dangerous consequences.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A neighbor of mine tells me she had laser beam treatment for rheumatoid arthritis. I've heard of laser treatments for other conditions, but not for arthritis. Does it work? And is it painful? — Leslie

Dear Leslie: Lasers do appear to be effective in the treatment of patients with rheumatoid arthritis. At a meeting of the Arthritis Foundation, Dr. John A. Goldman, of Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta, reported on a study of 30 patients, 25 men and five women. They had had arthritis for periods ranging from one to 26 years.

Laser beam treatment of their hands resulted in significant improvement in erythema (redness of the skin) and pain, as well as in grasp and tip pressure. As for the pain of the treatment itself, all patients reported a stinging sensation from the laser beam.

Dear Dr. Solomon: An aunt of mine is receiving chemotherapy for cancer. Although she has not been suffering from nausea to any great, she complains that the odor of certain foods are offensive to her. Can this be the result of the treatment she is receiving? — Donna

Dear Donna: It is possible that your aunt may be reacting to the odors of the foods being served her. Dr. Zata M. Vickers, professor of food sciences and nutrition at the University of Minnesota, conducted a study in which cancer patients and healthy persons were exposed to a variety of foods they could smell, but could not see. Some of the patients showed an aversion to such foods as chocolate, pork, beef, and chicken. However, there was no relationship between aversion to food and the use of anticancer drugs.

Ted Jones is a luthier

AUSTIN (AP) — In a cluttered downtown warehouse, surrounded by wood, knives, drills, presses and other carpenter-like paraphernalia, Ted Newman Jones is carving out his new career.

Jones, 31, a native of Tennessee, is a luthier — he makes guitars. His instruments have gained a reputation among music professionals for precise sound, intricate electronics and quality decorative woodwork.

Among the better-known musicians Jones lists among his custom-guitar customers are Mick Jagger and Keith Richards of the Rolling Stones, Jerry Jeff Walker, Tom Petty and Willie Nelson's guitarist, Jody Payne.

And Bob Dylan owns a heart-and-cross-inlaid "Newman" guitar. Jones uses his middle name as his trade name. "After all," he said, "who ever heard of Jones Guitars?"

For 12 years, starting when he was 14, Jones toured with several jazz and rock bands — including Isaac Hayes — as a sound technician and "go-fer." He also played guitar with some other groups and, in his spare time, rebuilt old guitars he salvaged from pawn shops.

During a break from his itinerant musician chores in 1968, Jones met an author who had written a book on the Rolling Stones. The writer gave him telephone numbers for several of the group's associates.

On a visit to Europe, he dialed a few of those numbers and his guitar sales career was under way.

"I had rebuilt an old Rickenbacker electric guitar that I thought Richards would really like. So I went to see him," he said. "We became friends right off the bat."

Jones said he spent several years working with the Stones and other groups, then in 1978 he quit the road, moved to Austin, opened his shop in partnership with a Houston man and started making guitars fulltime. He said it takes about a month to make a custom-built guitar, which he sells for between $1,600 and $3,000. It contains Jones' ideas on design and electronics but is built to the customer's specifications.

The Newspaper BIBLE

WHAT CAN I DO TO GET TO HEAVEN?

One day some mothers brought their babies to Jesus to touch and bless. But the disciples told them to go away.

Then Jesus called the children over to Him and said to the disciples, "Let the little children to come to Me! Never send them away! For the Kingdom of God belongs to men who have hearts as trusting as these little children's. And anyone who doesn't have their kind of faith will never get within the Kingdom's gates."

Once a Jewish religious leader asked Him this question: "God sir, what shall I do to get to heaven?"

"Do you realize what you are saying when you call me 'good'?" Jesus asked him. "Only God is truly good, and no one else. But as to your question, you know what the ten commandments say—don't commit adultery, don't murder, don't steal, don't lie, honor your parents, and so on."

The man replied, "I've obeyed every one of these laws since I was a small child."

"There is one thing you lack," Jesus said, "Sell all you have and give the money to the poor—it will become treasure for you in heaven—and come, follow Me."

But when the man heard this he went sadly away, for he was very rich.

Jesus watched him go and then said to His disciples, "How hard it is for the rich to enter the Kingdom of God! It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter the Kingdom of God!"

Those who heard Him say this exclaimed, "If it is that hard, how can anyone be saved?"

He replied, "God can do what men can't!"

Abused children often harassed by families

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Sexually abused children who report their problems but are left in the home, without protection from authorities, are often harassed by their families, a Dallas lawyer said.

Dee Miller, head of the juvenile section of the Dallas district attorney's office, told the House Judiciary Committee late Tuesday night that the children need protection but can't get it under current law.

The committee is considering a bill by Rep. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, that would let officials take custody of the child without a hearing if they thought he or she had been sexually abused within the preceding year.

The bill was sent to a subcommittee.

At present, Ms. Miller said, only "immediate danger of physical harm" is grounds for emergency removal of the child from the home.

"With very young children who have to be taken to the hospital, or in the case of rape, this is no problem. But the child who's been sexually abused over a period of years is not being physically hurt," Ms. Miller said.

"She won't require medical attention, because the harm is emotional. But it will be continuing."

Ms. Miller outlined cases that she said were "common," in which police arrested abusers but the child was left at home.

"The abuser is bonded out, returns home, and the family corners the child," she said. "They hound her, tell her it's all her fault, that daddy's going to be humiliated if she doesn't take it back."

"By the time we get the case, the child is saying it never happened at all. The family has closed, the child won't open up to anyone — but the abuse goes on."

"We know this because many, many times after three or four years we get her younger sister," Ms. Miller said.

A recent Department of Human Resources study of sexual child abuse showed that slightly more than three-fourths of sexual abuse cases are incestuous, and two-thirds involve the child's father or stepfather.

The child's mother knows what is going on but does nothing to stop it in most cases, the study said.

Ethics proposals issued

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — House Speaker Bill Clayton, recalling his Brilab experiences, joined forces with Common Cause to advocate portions of an ethics bill that would clearly define campaign contribution reporting requirements.

"I came in touch with the reality of what happens when you don't have clear and distinct guidelines to go by," Clayton said at a news conference with Common Cause and sponsors of the legislation.

Clayton said he had doubts about one part of the program, a bill to place a $3,000 limit on donations to statewide political campaigns and a $1,000 ceiling on contributions to races that are less than statewide.

The speaker said chances of passing the bills through the House are "relatively good," and he will embrace some of them in an "omnibus" ethics bill of his own.

Common Cause's program includes bills that would: — Prohibit the use of officeholder accounts, consisting of leftover campaign contributions and other donations, for personal expenses. There have been reports of legislators buying cars and other personal items with their accounts.

Clayton paid his Brilab legal bills with his officeholder account but said that was legitimate and probably would be legitimate under the bill.

"If it had not been for holding the office, those legal fees would never have come about," he said.

Clayton was acquitted in October of FBI charges he took a $5,000 cash pay-off in exchange for a promise to help get a lucrative state insurance contract for a man posing as an insurance agent. — Require political action committees (PACs) to disclose fully their identities and purposes. Many PACs register only as a set of initials and a post office box.

— Require PACs to identify their contributors by occupation so the composition of a PAC can be more readily ascertained.

— Create a six-member, non-partisan State Ethics Commission to administer political campaign finance disclosure, officeholder reporting and lobby control laws.

The laws, mostly passed during the 1973 "Reform Session" of the Legislature, are administered by the secretary of state.

Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, a sponsor of the Common Cause bill, said a citizen commission could more readily get district attorneys to prosecute violators of the reporting laws.

— Prohibit political contributions to lawmakers during legislative sessions as well as 30 days before and after them.

— Require lobbyists to report how much they spend on each legislator.

Rep. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, sponsor or co-sponsor of most of the Common Cause bills, said he at first doubted they would pass but "I have changed 110 percent." He said the mood of the House is "overwhelmingly" in favor of many of the bills.

Bob Dahlquist, Common Cause's state issues chairman, said his organization had found that many candidates fail to report their contributions and spending "while other candidates file reports reflecting large contributions which were impossible to trace."

WASHINGTON TODAY

Press having to watch manners at White House

By JAMES GERSTENZANG Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Ronald Reagan was out on the campaign trail, his traveling press secretary, Lyn Nofziger, developed a sixth sense about when the candidate's chatter with reporters might cause some political problems.

So, when Nofziger found Reagan on a hot water course in such conversations, he placed his bulky body between the candidate and the press and cut off the talk with a couple of shouts of "thank you, fellas."

But Nofziger is no longer the press secretary, having moved into the Reagan political operation. So, other ways of "protecting" the president from the inquiring reporters had to be found.

Rather than use James S. Brady, the White House press secretary, in this task, the president's top two deputies, counselor Edwin Meese III and White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker III, took on the job the other day.

Reagan visited an auditorium in the Old Executive Office Building next door to the White House where reporters were being given a briefing on the administration's economic package.

The president made some short comments — similar to those he had been delivering in public for several days — and invited questions.

But instead of focusing on the economy, reporters chose to ask the president about U.S.-Soviet relations and the fighting in El Salvador.

That, apparently, was not part of the White House plan. For almost as soon as the president's responses turned to foreign policy, Meese and Baker left their seats in the back of the auditorium, edged forward, and made it clear that it was time for them, and the president, to leave.

He made his exit within minutes.

The Reagan White House has become particularly concerned about the decorum of reporters covering the president.

When Margaret Thatcher, the prime minister of Great Britain, visited Washington, there were no ifs, ands, or buts about whether those assigned to cover the state dinner in her honor would have to wear formal attire. They did.

When it appeared that one correspondent, assigned at the last minute to the event, would not be properly dressed — and a dark business suit just would not do, he was informed by first lady Nancy Reagan's staff — a solution had to be found.

Sheila Patton, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, who Mobilization times reduced by half

WASHINGTON (AP) — Peacetime registration of young men and improvements in the Selective Service system have cut in half the time it would take to provide 100,000 draftees in a war emergency, the Pentagon says.

The Selective Service system can now produce this number of inductees by about 30 days after a mobilization order, the Pentagon reports. Last year, the Pentagon has told Congress, Selective Service "couldn't deliver 100,000 inductees by two months after mobilization."

"This accelerated schedule will enable us to meet a larger part of our total wartime manpower requirements with inductees and reduces the need for an even larger pool of pre-trained individuals" from the military reserves and the National Guard, it said.

The report was delivered to Congress by acting manpower chief Robert A. Stone as the Reagan administration considered whether to stop draft registration, which former President Carter began last June. President Reagan strongly criticized peacetime registration during the election campaign.

Gen. David Jones, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, has said that the nation's military leaders "continue to strongly advocate registration" and have recommended its continuance to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Stone said that more than 3.2 million young men born in 1960 and 1961 already have registered and that Selective Service is now processing registration cards of youths born in 1962.

In addition, Stone said, Selective Service is taking a number of steps to improve its readiness, including meshing its computers with the military computer system "so that the induction of individuals can begin smoothly should the need arise."

According to Stone, the Selective Service system's ability to meet the speeded-up production schedule was demonstrated last November during a mobilization command post exercise called Proud Spirit.

inisted on the formal wear, offered to have a tuxedo waiting at the White House for the reporter. He managed, at the last minute, to come up with one on his own, and did not have to take advantage of her generosity.

Another reporter had a run-in with the White House staff when he got carried away in his enthusiasm during the formal welcome for Mrs. Thatcher. Moments before the prime minister and her husband arrived at the diplomatic entrance of the White House, the president and first lady walked out to a fanfare and "Hail to the Chief."

When the last notes died away, there was a moment of silence before the heraldic trumpets blared their announcement of the guests' arrival in a black limousine.

In that moment, the reporter called out in a stage whisper that carried across the White House South

Lawn and turned hundreds of pairs of eyes in his direction: "OK. Bring'er on."

The reporter's bosses at a major television network were informed by White House staff members that if such behavior continued, he would not be welcome inside the White House gates.

Tim Murphy, a photographer for U.S. News & World Report, was summoned the other day by a White House aide and as the two began walking through a corridor, the photographer realized he was being escorted to the Oval Office.

And he was not carrying his cameras. He asked to go back to the press room to grab his gear, but his escort told him that would not be necessary.

When he arrived in the Oval Office, he found the president waiting to offer him happy birthday wishes.

Bill would extend paternity suits

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Unwed mothers and the welfare department will have 18 years to prove the identity of an illegitimate child's father if a bill being considered by the House passes.

Supporters say taxpayers will be the chief beneficiaries of the measure by Rep. Bill Messer, D-Belton, that extends the time limit for bringing paternity suits from one to 18 years. Bell County Assistant Attorney Tom Morgan told the House Judiciary Committee late Tuesday night the bill could save taxpayers millions of dollars.

Mothers must give the welfare department the right to sue fathers for reimbursement in order to qualify for Aid for Families with Dependent Children, he said, and "almost all of the time, the child is over one year old."

"Two-thirds of these (paternity) cases are welfare related," he said.

Coffee's link to cancer denied

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The multibillion-dollar coffee industry says its studies show no link between coffee and cancer, but a Harvard study indicates that people who drink a cup or two a day are nearly twice as likely as non-drinkers to get cancer of the pancreas.

Cancer of the pancreas is the fourth most common fatal malignancy in the United States.

The Harvard researchers cautioned that although they found a strong link between coffee drinking and the cancer, there was no proof coffee causes the disease. They stopped short of advising people not to drink it.

The researchers found no association between tea drinking and pancreatic cancer, suggesting that caffeine — the stimulant in coffee, tea and some colas — was not a factor.

The pancreas, a gland located behind the stomach, produces digestive juices and contains cells that make insulin. Because cancer in the pancreas is often advanced by the time it is spotted, the chances of survival often are poor.

About 20,000 Americans die of the disease each year, and the American Cancer Society says that less than 1 percent of the victims survive for five years.

The Harvard researchers found that people who drink up to two cups of coffee daily have 1.8 times the risk of pancreatic cancer as non-drinkers. Those who drink three cups or more face a risk 2.7 times greater than non-drinkers.

The coffee association estimates that the average American over age 10 drinks two cups of coffee a day.

Dr. Brian MacMahon, the study's director and head of the epidemiology department at the Harvard School of Public Health, said researchers felt that if people were concerned about a possible link between coffee and pancreas cancer, "they should know there is at least a suspicion of this."

"But I don't think it's time to put on the missionary role yet," he said.

The study was published in today's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"The National Coffee Association has sponsored numerous research projects on possible adverse effects of coffee in humans and none have been established to date," said David Kuhnert, a spokesman for the trade organization.

MacMahon said, "The association with coffee should be confirmed in other studies before too much effort is put into identifying a specific causative agent or ingredients."

In addition, the researchers wrote that the association "should be evaluated with other data. If it reflects a causal relation between coffee drinking and pancreatic cancer, coffee use might account for a substantial portion of the cases of this disease in the United States."

Teen-ager 'lives on' in transplant patient

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — When doctors told Ofelia Jones they wanted to take her son's heart and lungs, she told them to "go for it." Now, "a little part" of the teen-ager is helping keep Mary Gohlke alive.

Robert Jones, 15, was killed Friday night in bicycle-car accident near his Chula Vista home. But his heart and lungs were flown to Stanford University Medical Center, where on Monday surgeons transplanted them into Mrs. Gohlke, 45.

The Mesa, Ariz., woman became the world's only living double-transplant recipient and was in critical but stable condition Wednesday night.

"I've always been a realistic person," said Mrs. Jones. "Once you're dead, the soul leaves the body. So if you can help humanity, great."

"My little guy isn't here anymore, but his heart is still here," she said.

The surgery marked the end of a 10-year gap in heart-lung transplants. Three previous attempts, between 1968 and 1971, ended in the recipients' deaths. The longest-living of the three survived only 23 days. None of the operations was performed at Stanford.

But doctors are more hopeful in Mrs. Gohlke's case. The newspaper advertising executive has been receiving an experimental drug, cyclosporin-A, that fights rejection of the new organs without knocking out the body's ability to combat infections, said Dr.

Bruce Reitz, head of the transplant team. The windpipe is especially vulnerable to infections.

On Tuesday, physicians removed Mrs. Gohlke's respirator, forcing the new organs to function on their own.

Health-building practices urged

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Americans could nearly double their lifespans if they followed health-building practices, says Dr. William D. Kelley, the controversial dentist who treated the late actor Steve McQueen for cancer.

Kelley, who gained national attention for his unorthodox treatment of McQueen, said Wednesday that if people followed his healthful practices, they would live much longer.

While on tour at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, new docents learn the pattern an oil drill-bit makes at one exhibit. Docent Chairman Eloise Elgin, left, and Docent Shirley Hodges, third from left, show Judy Hungerford and Dorothy Campbell how the bit works. Part of a docent training program, the tours help acquaint volunteers from the Santa Rita Club and the Junior League with the area history, geology, oil exploration, drilling and production. With 44 docents on staff, the museum hosted tours for 7,500 school children in 1980.

Judy's foster mother, victim's ex-husband are on talk show

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — As she prepared to bury the executed killer, the foster mother of Steven T. Judy said she sometimes wishes an auto accident he had claimed his life so Judy could never have murdered a woman and three children.

"Sometimes wish he wouldn't have lived through that," said Mary Carr during an appearance early today on NBC's Tomorrow Show. "Four lives would have been spared, and his death wouldn't have been so tragic for us."

Judy, 24, was executed Monday in Indiana's electric chair.

Mrs. Carr was followed on the late-night talk show by Mark Chasteen, the father of the children Judy was convicted of murdering.

Chasteen said he considered killing Judy himself.

"The thought entered my mind," he said. "Many crazy thoughts entered my mind."

Judy admitted raping and strangling Terry L. Chasteen, 21 of Indianapolis and drowning her three small children in 1979. He resisted efforts to block his electrocution and became the fourth person executed in the United States since 1977, after the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated the death penalty.

Judy was being buried today in an Indianapolis cemetery. Only family members and close friends were asked to attend the funeral.

Judy's body, dressed in a gray suit, was in an open casket Wednesday at an Indianapolis mortuary, where a private wake was attended by about 200 friends and relatives. Nearby was a bouquet of flowers from Jeanne Timms, who contacted Judy less than an hour before he was executed and who, according to Mrs. Carr, was "the only girl he truly loved."

Ms. Timms and her 7-year-old daughter live in Texas. Her parents, Jack and Dorothy Timms of Indianapolis, attended the wake.

"My daughter and her child mean more than anything in life to me, and I trusted him (Judy) with them completely," Timms said outside the wake.

"He was better with them than anyone I know," Mrs. Timms added.

Mrs. Carr said her family wouldn't have accepted Judy as a foster child if they had been aware of his history.

During Judy's trial, it was revealed that Judy had attacked a woman with an axe at age 13, nearly killing her. Mrs. Carr said state authorities didn't explain the offense to them when Judy came to the Carr home shortly afterward. Even Judy didn't realize the gravity of his actions, Mrs. Carr said.

With a counselor present, Judy told the Carrs he had attempted to rape a woman and struck her with a hatchet, Mrs. Carr said.

"He didn't know he almost killed her," she said.

Mrs. Carr, who appeared through a remote connection from here, said Judy was involved in an auto accident after she caught him making an obscene telephone call and he ran away, taking the Carrs' automobile.

Chasteen, who was divorced from his wife, was in New York for his appearance on the show with attorney Ross Stovall, who heads a pro-death-penalty group known as Protect The Innocent, of which Chasteen is a member.

Chasteen, who said he supported the death penalty even before the murders, admitted "a feeling of relief" when Judy was executed.

When asked if he would have felt the same relief had Judy been sentenced to life imprisonment without parole, Chasteen responded: "I don't believe so. My family didn't ask to die."

House votes to ban deductions

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A bill that would create a major roadblock to further unionizing of state employees is expected to gain final House approval and head for the governor's desk on Thursday.

The bill prohibits automatic deduction —

"check-off" — from state employee paychecks for union dues or any other purpose not specifically authorized by the legislature.

Under existing law, deductions for health insurance, savings bonds and retirement are authorized, but no union dues.

Attorney General Mark White has held that Comptroller Bob Bullock may honor employee requests for payroll deductions for union dues, charities or any other purpose.

"This is not an anti-charity bill and it is not an anti-union bill," said Rep. Stan Schlueter, D-

Salado, the sponsor. Union organizers contend dues check-off is almost essential because of the expense and difficulty of collecting by hand.

Schlueter said the issue wasn't the two state employee unions that are trying to gain a foothold in Texas but a public policy question of the Legislature keeping control.

"State employees are people of great intellect and should have freedom of choice to decide if they want to have money deducted from their paychecks," said Rep. Matt Garcia, D-San Antonio.

Schlueter said that unless the Legislature imposes restrictions, "I would make it very difficult for the comptroller to handle the payroll."

Garcia replied that Bullock, rather than unionization of state employees — and wants to check off union dues for members.

Bullock's plan to check off state employee union dues was blocked by the filing of a lawsuit, still unresolved, to prohibit such payroll deductions.

Schlueter said the bill would not affect school districts, many of which make payroll deductions of dues to teacher associations.

Demjanjuk's trial ends

CLEVELAND (AP) — A federal judge is expected to decide within a month whether an autoworker, accused of concealing Nazi death camp activities, lied about his past to enter the United States. "All we have to do now is wait to hear that he's innocent," 14-year-old John Demjanjuk said as his father, accused of brutalizing Jews during World War II, left Judge Frank Battisti's court at the end of a five-week trial.

Battisti gave attorneys 10 days to submit briefs. A ruling is expected a few weeks later, a court official said.

The trial of the Ukrainian-born auto worker ended Wednesday with lengthy closing arguments that drew crowds of spectators to U.S. District Court and prompted anti-Soviet demonstrations by Ukrainian-Americans.

Prosecutor Norman Moscovitz argued Wednesday that Battisti must denaturalize Demjanjuk if he finds that the defendant lied to cover up activities that would have barred him from entry to the United States.

Moscovitz, a Justice Department attorney, said government evidence and Demjanjuk's testimony proved the defendant was trained by the Nazis at Trawnki, Poland, worked at the Treblinka and Sobibor death camps and served in a Ukrainian military unit for the Germans.

"All the evidence in this case ... indicates, without a doubt, that this man, John Demjanjuk, served the Nazis at Treblinka and for that reason must be denaturalized," Moscovitz said.

Five Treblinka survivors identified a 1952 picture of Demjanjuk as that of a guard they knew as Ivan the Terrible because of his excessive cruelty.

Demjanjuk, of suburban Seen Hills, denies ever having aided the Nazis or having worked as a death-camp guard.

He said he lied about his whereabouts during the war, but he did so out of fear of being repatriated to the Soviet Union. He also testified he was involuntarily put in a Ukrainian military unit by the Germans, but never fought in it.

Defense attorney John W. Martin said stripping Demjanjuk of his citizenship would set a dangerous precedent for all Eastern European immigrants who fear the Soviet Union.

"If we write off John Demjanjuk on this kind of evidence, a blank check will be issued in which any name may be inserted," Martin said.

The trial sparked demonstrations by Ukrainian-Americans who protested the use of evidence provided by the Soviet Union.

Soviet authorities provided what prosecutors claimed was an identification card issued to a Ukrainian named Iwan Demjanjuk at Trawniki that proves Demjanjuk was trained by the Nazis.

Martin said Demjanjuk was a Soviet soldier captured by the Germans in 1942 and held prisoner until 1945. In his original applications, Demjanjuk said he was a farmer in Sobibor, Poland, and in northern Germany from 1934 to 1945.

Comedienne Carol Burnett meets the press outside a Los Angeles courtroom Wednesday prior to the start of jury selection in her $10 million lawsuit against the National Enquirer. The trial is scheduled to begin Friday. (AP Laserphoto)

Burnett's libel trial finally to court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although fans and the TV crews are gathering around, Carol Burnett's latest appearance is aimed at a tiny audience: the jury in her $10 million libel suit against the National Enquirer.

"I waited five years for this trial," the comedienne told reporters before entering Superior Court on Wednesday as her lawsuit moved into the courtroom. "It's been like a five-year-old toothache. ... I feel like 'Rocky' in the movie. I've stayed the course."

Attorneys for Miss Burnett said they expected selection of 12 jurors and two alternates would be completed today. Miss Burnett has said she will attend every court session of the trial.

Fans called out "We hope you win," "We're behind you," and "We love you" Wednesday as TV lights gave the event a movie-premiere atmosphere.

The lawsuit stems from a March 2, 1976, Enquirer report that Miss Burnett had a drunken run in with former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger in a Washington, D.C. restaurant.

Miss Burnett found the story particularly objectionable because she is a non-drinker and has worked to combat alcoholism, which afflicted both her parents, her attorneys said.

It is the first time an entertainer's lawsuit against the Enquirer has gone to trial in the publication's 28-year history. But a growing number of celebrities — including Phil Silvers, Paul Lynde, Shirley Jones, Marty Ingels, Ed McMahon and Rudy Vallee have suits pending.

The weekly tabloid printed a retraction of the report about Miss Burnett, and the Enquirer's attorneys say the issue is a First Amendment battle for freedom of press.

"Carol Burnett did not suffer from the story," Enquirer attorney William Masterson said.

Prospective jurors were asked by Ed Bronson, an attorney for Miss Burnett, whether they had ever seen the entertainer in a television special or whether they had ever seen her do anything in bad taste.

The panelists were asked whether they would feel qualms about giving a large award and whether they believe celebrities have to put up with a certain amount of gossip because of their positions.

MHS CHATTER

By JULIE GUYTON, VICKI MADDEN and KATHY WOOD

Welcome back to the final 12 weeks left in the 1980-81 school year! Senioritis has already been reported plaguing many while others have been stricken by spring fever. Regardless of the dreary weather, spirits at MHS are "flying high" as the semester's end draws near.

To add to that spirit, the mighty MHS Roundballers are ready to go all the way to state! Monday night in Abilene they defeated the Denton Broncos for the bi-district championship. This Friday and Saturday, the team will play at Chap Center for the regional title. The first game will begin at 6:30 p.m. Friday against Fort Worth Dunbar. Come out and watch the excitement.

The girls golf team is working hard in preparing to defend their district championship of last year. Senior Ann Coombs once again leads the pack and has won several awards already this year. Janice Littlefield and Kelly Mobley also are playing exceptionally well. With the excellent coaching of Mary Baird, this season ought to be successful. Good luck!

Baseball season also has begun. Doug McClean is doing a fantastic job as pitcher and showed his talent Monday as they stomped Snyder. Unfortunately, they could not quite get it together against Lubbock Coronado Tuesday night and lost by a score of 8-5. Pick up a baseball schedule from the school and get in on the excitement.

The JETS (Junior Engineering Technological Society) left this morning for Texas A&M where they will participate in an annual statewide convention. The students will be tested in various engineering fields.

Congratulations Band! They have been chosen as one band out of four states to play in the 1982 Tournament of Roses.

RASCO'S NEWS: Saturday night the Y.C. will hold a dance from 9 until 1. Members are admitted free, non-members $2. Dress is casual, so there's no excuse for not coming.

Marine getting discharge

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Rodney V. "Rocky" Sickmann was becoming a civilian again today, seven weeks after the Marine sergeant and 51 other Americans held captive in Iran gained their long-awaited freedom.

"We just want to get back to a normal life," said Sickmann after returning to Missouri late Wednesday with fiancée Jill Ditch, 19, on his arm. "We're getting married soon. We have plans to make."

Sickmann, who had been in the Marines for four years and five months, said he made his decision during two weeks spent with eight other Marines, all former hostages, at Quantico, Va. "I'm 23. I told my mother and father I'm going out on my own," said the former Krakow, Mo., high school football star, who became engaged last month.

"I love the Marines. I'll always be a Marine. It's really made something out of me."

Sickmann said he is considering several business offers in the St. Louis area but declined to identify them. He said he and Miss Ditch may also decide on a wedding date soon.

A family spokesman, William Kimme, said Sickmann and the eight other Marines had each been given an option of remaining in the service or seeking discharges.

M SQUARES of Midland, a square dance group, will meet at M-Squarena at 8 p.m. Friday. Tommy White will do the calling.

MR. AND MRS. RAY BARRETT JR. and Mr. and Mrs. Son Jackson of Midkiff have returned from a three-week agricultural convention and tour of Australia and New Zealand. There were 183 from across the U.S. on the Powers in Agriculture program, some 44 of these from Texas.

After the convention, the couples were guests of host stations. The Barrett's were near Orange and the Jackson traveled farther west to Parks, some 350 miles west of Sydney. The "Mulguthrie" station is 50 miles west of Parks in New South Wales and they run Santa Gertrudis cattle, whose blood lines have come from the King Ranch.

According to the travelers, Australia is experiencing its worst drought in history. After spending three days in the "bush country," the group met back in Sydney. There, they flew on to New Zealand where they visited the Waitomo Glow-Worm Cave, the thermal area of Rotorua, and ate a "Hagi" dinner with a local Maori tribe who cooks their food in underground ovens.

Local farms were visited to view first-hand farming operations. They also visited the Agrodome to see all 19 breeds of sheep raised in New Zealand.

"New Zealand has 63 million sheep on the North and South Islands, so we saw a lot of them," said Mrs. Jackson.

The 118 members of the group who had planned to return to the States from the North Island ahead were caught in an "Industrial Unrest" strike in Auckland, and didn't arrive home until 12 days later.

"Our week in the South Island was fabulous," said Mrs. Jackson. "Perfect weather everywhere we went. We had a short visit to Invercargill, southernmost city in the world, traveled by coach to Te Anau and took a launch cruise on Milford Sound."

They also ate a barbecue lunch at Walter Peak Sheep Station and watched sheep dogs work under the control of their masters.

Another visit to Mount Cook, at 12,349 feet New Zealand's highest peak, was another highlight. The group took a ski plane ride and landed on the Tasman Glacier.

The trip closed with a coach ride to Christchurch.

WEST TEXAS APPALOOSA HORSE CLUB will have an open-all-breed schooling show Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. at the arena located 2.2 miles south of Interstate Highway 20.

The arena is behind Adobe Wells Trading Post.

DEAR ABBY

Talk about weather will break the ice

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: There is this interesting-looking gentleman I see on the train on my way to work every morning. I have a feeling that we share a mutual interest in each other, but I don't know how to break the ice. I keep waiting for him to say something to me, but what if he doesn't? I'm afraid this man will walk out of my life without my having met him, and I will have missed a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

Please advise me in your column, as I'm sure a lot of other people face this problem daily. — J.B. FROM BROOKLYN

DEAR J.B.: For openers, smile pleasantly, and say, "Good morning. Isn't it cold (or windy, or slippery, or beautiful) out?"

And if your interesting-looking fellow traveler has a mutual interest in you, he will take it from there. And if he doesn't — well, at least you tried.

DEAR ABBY: For the last two years I've been dating the sweetest girl in the world. We've talked of marriage, and I believe she's the kind of woman I want to be the mother of my children. I'm approaching 30 and have never been married. My problem is this: I still find myself very much attracted to other women — not emotionally, but physically.

I have had a variety of women in the last two years, and must admit that I still enjoy the adventure and excitement of the hunt.

Of all my married friends, not one has said he wouldn't cheat on his wife if the right opportunity presented itself. So should I marry this girl because I love her, or refrain from marrying her because I love her and don't want to tie her down to a possible philanderer? — LOVINGLY RELUCTANT

DEAR RELUCTANT: If you consider yourself a "possible philanderer," you're not ready to make a commitment to forsake all others. Give her a break and break it up.

DEAR ABBY: I am 32 years old, never been married, but I have been living with a 51-year-old man for four years. (I'll call him Frank.) Frank gave me an engagement ring and promised to marry me, but he finds one excuse after another to avoid it. He is married but has been legally separated from his wife for 15 years. Since he probably will never marry me, I want to make something of myself, so I started back to school to get my high school diploma. Frank hides the car keys so I can't get to school. He's even locked up my clothes and shoes so I can't go.

He is a college graduate himself and makes $55,000 a year. He's given me a wonderful home, I've never had to work, and he buys me whatever I want. But, Abby, I want a high school diploma so I can get a decent job and leave him. Living with a man is not what I want. I want a husband — which reminds me, he rations sex. It's Saturday night only, and I want more than that. What should I do? — TRAPPED

DEAR TRAPPED: The longer you stay with Frank, the more difficult it will be to break away. (You're almost a prisoner now.) Inquire about getting a high school diploma by mail. It's possible.

AT WIT'S END

The death of the home-cooked meal

By ERMA BOMBECK
If you are under ten years old, there are three things you cannot relate to:

A day without denim.

Real money.

A home-cooked meal.

Last year, in a typical household in this country, everyone in it ate out 6.4 times a week (mainly the main meal) at a cost of $25.86 per week per household.

It should be obvious to everyone that Moms have not kept pace with the competition. While fast-food emporiums were developing secret sauces, mopping floors to music, hiding prize-winning numbers under the saw your mother standing under Golden Arches — singing about hamburgers? When was the last time she wore a derby hat and tap-danced with a cane while serving you pizza? Or cooked Chinese food at your table while juggling two meat cleavers?

I don't excuse myself. I was one of the mothers who thought home-cooked meals would go on forever. I became sloppy, careless and took the family for granted. Then I realized we were eating out all the time.

I said to my children one night, "How would you like to stay in this evening and have a home-cooked meal?"

"What's a home-cooked meal?" they asked.

"It's where we stay at home and Mommy cooks dinner."

My son propped my mouth open with a fork and said, "I'll have two burgers, three fries and a chocolate malted."

"No, no, dear," I said, removing the fork. "You don't understand. Mommy cooks whatever she wants and serves it."

Later as I spooned beef stew generously on their plates, I saw them heading toward the car. "Where are you going?" I asked.

"To the car, and how do you eat this stuff with your fingers?"

"You don't. You use silverware and you eat at the kitchen table."

"What's silverware and where's the little flag on the table that we raise for more catsup and more to drink and seconds on the chips?"

"You get up and get the stuff yourself."

Afterward, as I washed and dried dishes into the night, I couldn't help but wonder if the home-cooked meal didn't deserve to die.

Older couple joyfully enters a new world of parenthood

By JIJDEE KELLY
LOS ANGELES — Diane and Joe Rey were avid sailors when they met more than five years ago.

"We married and decided we'd just sail into the sunset," said Mrs. Rey.

There was little talk of beginning a family. The Reys were in their 40s. He already had a teenage daughter by a previous marriage, and Diane had been told she could never have children.

During the last two years, the Reys have barely touched their boat, and they are in the process of selling their split-level home perched on a bluff overlooking the ocean.

About two years after their marriage, Mrs. Rey went to her doctor for a diagnosis of the pain and swelling she feared was a tumor. She was six months pregnant.

The house, which has no back yard for a child, and boat the Reys no longer have time for, are casualties of parenthood, sacrifices the Reys say they are more than willing to make, even after their years of independence.

"This baby was a dream come true," said Mrs. Rey. "I didn't feel I would really be fulfilled unless I had children."

New parents over 30, whose numbers are increasing every year, generally seem to gladly accept the responsibility, and often do a better job of child rearing despite the obstacles they face as older parents, counselors say.

Those who teach and advise parents believe couples who wait and make a conscious decision to have children are more emotionally prepared for parenthood.

Bill and Sylvia Coates waited eight years before they felt ready to become parents.

"Before this little guy, I had hated children," said Coates, 37.

During his wife's pregnancy, Coates said, he had qualms about relinquishing the den, his favorite room, to the baby.

"After he was born, I felt isn't it great to give him our favorite room," Coates said. "There was such a big change in our attitude, but it doesn't seem like a change. It seems normal."

It was, the Coateses said, just a feeling that a spontaneous weekend vacation or a career was no longer enough that changed their attitude about parenthood.

"The joy of having all those things when we were younger, it's immaterial now," said Coates.

Although older parents interviewed said they made the transition gladly, most agreed it was a difficult challenge. Depression and guilt, some counselors say, accompany the new lifestyle.

The Reys said they felt isolated at first.

"Most of our friends were single or people with older children," said Rey, an aerospace engineer. "No one was worried about getting home early to relieve the sitter."

At 43 and 48 respectively, Diane and Joe Rey also were concerned their new daughter, Elizabeth, might grow up not knowing her grandparents, and perhaps spending some of her youth without her parents, should they die in 10 or 20 years.

Then the birth of their second child, Patricia, seven months ago reassured the Reys their girls at least will have each other.

Above all, the couple believes they can live up to the rigors of parenthood because their daughters will keep them young.

Still, age can be a sensitive issue.

Rey recalled a recent visit to a local swap meet. They were pushing Elizabeth in a stroller when a huckster tried to convince their daughter to ask "grandma" to buy one of his wind-up toys.

"Mister, you just lost a sale," Rey told him.

The Reys and other couples like them said they were grateful for their years of experience, which helped them accept the responsibilities and restrictions of parenthood they would have struggled with 10 years ago.

Marilyn Fitzgerald, who had her daughter when she was 38, said, "As a young parent, I would have felt I could not have had the vacation or the extra dress because we needed the money for the baby. But now I've had and done all that. There is nothing that I feel I'm missing. Sharon isn't in competition with anything else."

Mrs. Fitzgerald said she believes parents often overestimate the restrictions of parenthood. "At two and one-half weeks, Sharon was riding down a river in a raft," she said. "We take her camping all the time."

While most older parents said they delight in caring for their long-awaited children, they disagree on whether mothers should return to their careers.

Mrs. Rey, who worked 13 years in personnel, said she did not hesitate to stay home with her children.

"I believe the problems with children today come from them not getting the attention they need from parents," she said. "Some are being raised by baby sitters and child care agencies. I worry about those children."

But for many women, accustomed to contact with co-workers and the challenges of their professions, becoming a full-time mother is something they neither want to do nor can do well, say counselors. Others have no choice, it's a matter of paying the bills.

Down says acting is 'quite an easy job'

By FRED YAGER
NEW YORK (AP) — "Being an actress is quite an easy job," said the glamorous Leslie-Anne Down. "It's certainly easier than what most people do and a lot easier than working in a factory."

In her latest film, "Sphinx," Ms. Down has it anything but easy. Playing a young Egyptologist, she stumbles upon a black-market ring in Cairo, becomes a target for murder and gets attacked by bats.

"It's an adventure film and I do get chased through tombs and pyramids, but come through it all," she disclosed, smiling. "I liked the part because it wasn't like anything I'd done before and it wasn't one-dimensional."

"Although I read about 40 scripts last year, I only did one movie in that time," said the 25-year-old British actress, "so you can imagine what the quality of most of them are like."

Although she has made dozens of films, Ms. Down received most of her recognition in this country when she appeared on television in "Upstairs, Downstairs" as the lovely Miss Georgina.

Film critics have panned most of her movies and even she admits she rarely sees herself on the screen.

Trials of Dr. Coppolino

By PAT LEISNER
Associated Press Writer

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The iron prison gate swung open 17 months ago and Dr. Carl Coppolino walked out a free man.

Outside, he has found an unforgiving society that offers no escape from the stigma of one of the nation's most celebrated murder cases.

"There are people who will never be satisfied — even after the 12 years I spent in prison," he says. "To those who believe me guilty, my debt to society is not paid. And it never will be."

The years of incarceration don't seem to show on the 49-year-old grandfather, who has written a book about the case entitled "The Crime That Never Was." But his glamorous, fast-paced lifestyle and circle of well-to-do friends are gone.

As a condition of parole, he's barred from practicing medicine.

In 1967, the nation's newspapers and magazines were filled with Coppolino, just as they were recently with reports of another high-society love triangle murder case — the conviction of former headmistress Jean Harris in the slaying of "Scarsdale Diet" doctor Herman Tarnower.

Twice in 1967, Coppolino, then 34, went on trial for his life — first charged with murdering his lover's husband, then accused of killing his wife.

He hired attorney F. Lee Bailey and was acquitted in the July 1963, death of Ret. Army Col. William E. Farber, 52, in Monmouth County, N.J.

Five months later, a jury in Naples, Fla., found the Brooklyn-born anesthesiologist guilty of second-degree murder in the death of his wife, Carmela, a 32-year-old physician. The government said he murdered her with an injection of a paralyzing muscle relaxant. He was sentenced a life in prison.

Key testimony came from Coppolino's spurned mistress, Marge Farber, 18 years his senior. After Coppolino married someone else, she went to police and claimed her ex-lover killed her husband in New Jersey and his wife in Sarasota.

Mrs. Farber testified she was a hypnotic "love slave" in the throes of Coppolino's trance when she tried to kill her husband. She said Coppolino finished the job by smothering him with a pillow.

An autopsy on Farber's exhumed body showed a heart attack didn't cause his death, the state said, attributing death instead to suffocation caused by a fractured neck bone.

Bailey argued that happened when the coffin collapsed during exhumation.

In the second trial, prosecution witnesses painted a picture of a playboy doctor, used to the good life, who had the drug, the motive and the opportunity.

The defense branded the testimony the vendetta of a woman scorned.

But in the end it came down to a battle of experts.

New York City Medical Examiner Dr. Milton Helper and his chief poison expert, Dr. Charles Umberger, testified they found enough succinylcholine, the muscle relaxant, in Carmela's body to cause her death.

Defense experts said the drug was untraceable. The jury believed Helper.

The conviction cost Coppolino 12½ years of his life, his plush lifestyle on fashionable Longboat Key, and his medical license.

"But it probably made me stronger," he says. "I changed my whole sense of priorities radically."

Mary and Carl Coppolino

"The puff set, the country club crowd, the frills of high-flying living that were important were of absolutely no value where I went."

"You carry nothing with you. Prison even takes your name away and gives you a number. All you have is you. And you learn that you become important."

Coppolino says his strength through those years came from his second wife, Mary Gibson, a former bridge partner and wealthy Southern divorcee five years his senior. He married her six weeks after Carmela's death.

An independent, strong-willed and articulate woman, she raised her two children and Coppolino's two daughters, worked, drove 500 miles every weekend for five years to visit him in the state prison at Raiford, and personally led the campaign to free him.

"He's all the family I've got," she says flatly. "And if hope is all you have, you never let go." Friends and family abandoned them. But she pushed on, knocking on doors, talking to anyone who might help.

Ironically, it was Umberger's conflicting testimony in a case 10 years later that paved the way for Coppolino's freedom. Umberger said tests were still being developed to trace succinylcholine.

And not long after that, Dr. Franco Fiorese, a toxicologist, said he was sworn to secrecy when his tests didn't confirm the Helper findings. Both Umberger and Helper are now dead.

With that new information, Mary Coppolino found an ally in State Rep. Arnett Girardeau of Jacksonville, then-chairman of the committee on correction, parole and probation.

There's a brief foreword by Girardeau in the book Coppolino just published about his experience—the years he served; his battle against the system, and allegations of neglect, brutality and inhumanity he claims he witnessed within Florida's criminal justice system.

Writes Girardeau: "After a year and a half of collecting information and scientific studies, I had the irrefutable proof that Dr. Helper and Dr. Umberger had intentionally fabricated the facts ..."

"Dr. Coppolino was paroled in October 1979 after losing 12 years of his life on a conviction for a crime that never was."

Braniff's employees OK pay cut

DALLAS (AP) — Braniff International Corp.'s employees have agreed to take a pay cut, a move the airline's officers insist is the first step toward returning the airline to profitability.

Braniff's machinists joined the company's other union employees Wednesday in approving the 10-percent pay reduction and profit-sharing proposal.

"This now means that all of our employees will participate in this plan, which will help Braniff over bad periods and help them (employees) when we reach profitability," said company spokesman Raymond J. Chanauad.

Braniff workers represented by the International Association of Machinists were the last of five unions to approve the program designed to help the financially troubled airline get back in the black.

Braniff and union officials jointly announced to a news conference that 56 percent of the union members had voted for the program.

Braniff's 39 major creditors demanded the employee pay package as a condition for agreeing to defer until July 1 repayment of about $40 million in loans.

Braniff, which is trying to rebound from last year's $128.5 million loss, estimates the pay package will save the airline $2.5 million a month.

The machinists' support was the most doubtful of all the employee groups. Some union members had claimed Braniff violated several terms of the machinists' contract, principally concerning vacation pay for laid-off machinists.

In the competitive world of business, the people of Texas start with one major disadvantage.

People in 47 states can use UPS to send packages into Texas.

But people in Texas can't. The reason is that UPS does not have what's known as intrastate authority here. We're not permitted to pick up a package in Texas and deliver it in Texas.

This is a major disadvantage for Texans who make their living by sending goods to customers in Texas. In effect, it prevents them from supplying their customers as promptly or as economically as their competitors in other states can.

To overcome this handicap, several Texas firms actually spend extra time and money trucking their parcels to UPS facilities in other states. UPS is then permitted to take the parcels back into Texas for distribution.

The Texas Legislature is now discussing a bill which would clarify the authority of the Texas Railroad Commission (the agency that regulates transportation matters) to consider requests such as ours to provide service from and to all points in Texas.

We feel this bill would be a step forward. We'd like to see it pass, and we'd appreciate your support. If you agree with us, a note to your Senator and Representative in the Texas Legislature could be very helpful.

Trailers will be new cell space

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — New Jersey's crowded prisons will be getting some new cell space — trailers. But correction officials, concerned about possibly explosive tensions in the prisons, are warning the 334 new beds likely will be filled before the end of the year.

The $1.35 million purchase of 52 trailers, approved Wednesday by Gov. Brendan T. Byrne without the need of a legislative appropriation, will create almost as much space as the 400-bed medium-security prison that Corrections Commissioner William H. Fauver asked the Legislature to approve two years ago.

However, Fauver cautioned, the trailers are only a temporary measure and probably will be filled by the end of the summer.

"I cannot stress too strongly the urgency of this situation," Fauver said in a letter to Byrne.

"Morale is low and tensions are high, a combination which, historically, has culminated in devastating consequences," Fauver wrote. "I would not wish this state to stand beside New Mexico where, in the bloody aftermath, the shameful discovery was made that many knew, but none acted."

Fauver was referring to last year's prison riot in New Mexico in which 33 inmates were killed.

"The one theme that has run through every prison disturbance throughout the country has been overcrowding," Fauver said. There are about 7,000 juvenile and adult inmates in the state prison system, which is designed for a maximum capacity of 6,700, Fauver said.

He said he intended to increase bed space without taking away prisoners' recreation and work areas. Locking up inmates without providing such facilities is "really the key to the disturbances" in other states, he said.

The trailers could be installed by April at state prisons in Rahway, Leesburg, Jamesburg, Yardville and Bordentown, he said.

Last November, voters approved a bond issue for prison improvements, but the Legislature must decide how to appropriate the money and has not been able to choose a prison site.

Fauver's proposals to build the prison in Newark, Monroe Township, Hopewell Township, Camden and Kearny have all been rejected by the Legislature because area residents complained of dangers from prisoners and drops in property values.

Similar arguments are being made now on Fauver's latest proposed site, at the Clinton Correctional Institution for Women.

Byrne took a swipe at the Legislature for delaying a decision on a prison site while recently enacting a law that will require minimum three-year sentences for people convicted of possessing a gun during the commission of a violent crime.

"We have reached the point when state legislators must recognize that it is callous and hypocritical to pass tough sentencing laws if they are not going to provide the prisons needed to keep criminals off the street," Byrne said.

In a memo to Fauver, Byrne said the rate of incarceration in state prisons has risen by 20 percent since a tough new criminal code requiring longer jail terms went into effect Sept. 1, 1979.

URW chief to step down

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The 50,000-member United Rubber Workers union apparently will be getting a new leader this year.

Peter Bommarito 65, president of the union for nearly 15 years says in a speech prepared for delivery Friday to the URW's District 5 Council in Fresno, Calif., that he will not seek re-election in October.

"Bommarito is saying he'll abide by the rules of the URW that you don't run for re-election again after reaching age 65," union spokesman Curt Brown said Wednesday.

The URW chief would "like to relax and go hunting," Brown said.

Brown said Bommarito's term runs until the union's annual meeting in Bal Harbour, Fla.

Interior design class to begin soon

If you were a student in Ellen Hinson's beginning course in interior decoration at Midland College, then you'll be pleased to know there is more to come.

The second phase of study, Interior Decorating II, is scheduled to begin March 19 at MC.

"Many of our students are in their mid- to late-30s and already have their homes," Mrs. Hinson noted. "There comes a time when a home not only needs to be freshened, but needs an entirely new outlook."

Mrs. Hinson noted that her course has been designed for that purpose and for the do-it-yourselfer who needs to redecorate within the confines of a budget.

"Students who were in my beginning course now are ready to start their projects," Mrs. Hinson stated. "The advanced course provides the opportunity for them to put their ideas into practice while remaining under the guidance of an instructor."

At press time, guest speakers were being recruited to discuss such things as fabrics, types of furniture, accessories, designs and themes, lighting arrangements and their effects, and the use of color.

Classes are limited to 25 students and meet 7 to 9 p.m. Thursdays for six weeks. The course fee is $15.

Pre-registration may be completed now in room 156 of the MC Administration Building

Classical League winners announced

The Midland High School chapter of the Texas State Junior Classical League travelled to Houston recently to compete in the annual state convention of the league.

Winners of awards in academic events from MHS were Melissa Baldrige, seventh place in third-year derivatives; Julie Griffith, sixth place in first-year dramatic interpretation; Craig Harris, seventh place in second-year Latin literature; Gina Wilcox, third place in second-year sight recitation; and Norman Yee, seventh place in second-year vocabulary.

Other MHS students attending were Valtón Acree, Jimmye Sue Brusenhan, Dodd Griffith, Doris Nash, Susanne O'Leary, Keith Ralston, David Spaugh, Rolli Jo Taylor and sponsors Mr. and Mrs. Dale Tervooren.

The Junior Classical League is a national organization that promotes the classical language of Latin. The League sponsors annual state and area conventions for member schools.

This year's state convention was held in Rosenberg, where academic and Olympic events were scheduled for more than 2,000 students from across the state of Texas by Lamar Consolidated High School.

Senator wants shoe quotas reinstated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal import quotas have failed to prevent millions of pairs of low-priced foreign shoes from flooding the U.S. market since 1977, but the limits should be renewed and strictly enforced this year, Sen. John Heinz says.

Heinz, R-Pa., said Tuesday that producers in countries like Korea, Taiwan and the Philippines sell tens of millions of shoes in the United States by taking advantage of technicalities in the quota agreement, which expires June 30.

The senator told the International Trade Commission the import system could work if revised to tighten loopholes.

"The industry has spent considerable time and effort in the past four years modernizing and finding new markets and marketing techniques. Exports, for example, have nearly tripled," said Heinz, whose state is the nation's top shoe producer.

"But the favorable impact of these efforts has been negated by the incomplete nature of the import relief program. . . . The only conclusion, it seems to me, is that the government should continue the program and this time get it right," Heinz said.

The Pennsylvania lawmaker spoke just before critics of the restrictions said consumers would have better, more affordable footwear choices if import quotas are lifted.

John F. Ward, a spokesman for the K Mart Corp., said the current rules make it difficult for buyers to obtain inexpensive shoes to sell.

Eliminating the restrictions would allow consumers a wider choice of both prices and products, said James C. Tuttle, also of K Mart.

The time is right to end the quotas and encourage competition, Tuttle said.

Michael Bradford, speaking for the Korean Footwear Exporters Association, said the U.S. shoe industry has stabilized under controls. In addition, he argued, Korean manufacturers now concentrate mainly on athletic shoes and are no longer major competition to American firms, which primarily make leather dress and casual footwear.

The domestic shoe industry shares about half its American market with foreign manufacturers.

'Brighter' students use drugs more

CHICAGO (AP) — First-graders judged to be "bright" have a greater tendency to use alcohol and marijuana by the time they enter high school than other students, according to a recent study by the Illinois Institute of Technology.

Meanwhile, a separate study released Tuesday by the City Club of Chicago revealed that alcohol and drug abuse are the chief causes of death among 15- to 18-year-olds.

The study, based on police statistics and surveys of drug treatment centers, also said drug abuse by city teen-agers has climbed 30 percent in five years.

Illinois Institute of Technology sociologist Margaret Ensminger said traits that result in children being judged bright in first grade readiness tests may account for the tendency toward drug use in their teens. She said those traits include a willingness to take risks and an interest in impressing their peers.

She said the results were based on a study of first-graders at a South Side school during the 1966 and 1967 school years who were re-interviewed 12 years later when they turned 17.

The study also found that boys who show signs of aggressiveness in first grade are more likely to use drugs in high school, according to Ms. Ensminger.

The City Club of Chicago study concluded that about 20 percent of all accidental deaths and suicides of adolescents in 1976-1980 resulted from alcohol and drug abuse.

It said about 60,000 Chicago teen-agers — 12 percent of the city's teen population — abuse alcohol and drugs. It cited alcohol and drugs as factors in nearly half of all teen-age arrests in Chicago.

The civic group concluded that drugs or alcohol were involved in 30 percent of teen arrests for murder, 37 percent for rapes and 38 percent for assaults.

Manda Evans and Lieske Van Kessel

'Aunt Lieske' reunited with Jewish daughter

CHICAGO (AP) — For nearly a year, "Aunt Lieske" shared her home in the Netherlands with 10-year-old Manda Evans, all the while hiding from the Nazis a secret that could have meant death. Thirty-seven years later, they are together again.

Mrs. Evans and her "Aunt Lieske" have embarked on a cross-country tour of the United States, with Chicago as their first official stop.

The trip actually is a prize for Mrs. Evans, who was selected as the winner in a "dream" contest sponsored by a radio talk show.

Mrs. Evans, who lives in South Haven, Mich., wrote in her contest letter to WGN that her dream would be for Lieske Van Kessel to visit and see some of the sights in the United States.

It is a tiny repayment for the Dutch woman who kept the secret of Manda's Jewish heritage — a secret that could have cost their lives.

Mrs. Van Kessel, said Mrs. Evans, "has never had any kids of her own and always considered me as a daughter."

The women now will have a month to share their memories and renew a friendship that developed in a war-torn Europe.

In 1943, Manda was taken in by Kees Zwaans and his wife, Lieske, members of the underground movement who hid Jews in their houseboat during the Nazi occupation of the Netherlands.

"They treated me like I was their daughter," Mrs. Evans said in a telephone interview. "It was all pure love."

"Aunt Lieske," who became Lieske Van Kessel when she remarried, sewed clothes for Manda, starched her hair ribbons and taught her manners. "She taught me a lot of things during those years that parents would teach you," Mrs. Evans said.

Living with the couple was so comforting, Mrs. Evans added, "I sometimes wondered if I ever wanted to go back home."

And all during those months, "Aunt Lieske" and her husband kept Manda's secret. The little girl attended school, using a different name and posing as a Catholic whose parents died in an air raid.

But, Mrs. Evans said, the principal and the priest knew her secret, too.

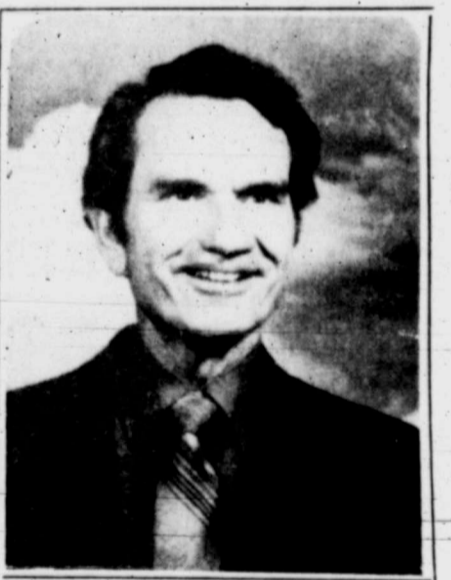

The couple helped other Jews and aided several American pilots who crashed in the vicinity.

Mrs. Evans said she was forced to find another hiding place in the Netherlands when the Germans raided the houseboat and interrogated her one day in town.

"Aunt Lieske" and her husband had to go underground for three months after they aroused the Germans' suspicions, Mrs. Evans said.

But before the war was over, Kees helped reunite her younger sister with the family. Shortly after, Kees died when he was run over by a tank.

DA says police think that 10 killers could be responsible

ATLANTA (A) — Police are speculating that at least 10 different killers could be responsible for the slayings and disappearances of 21 black children in and around Atlanta, according to the county district attorney.

Fulton County District Attorney Lewis Slayton is also quoted as saying that the killings of the "last six or seven" children could be connected because of the similar cause of death in each case.

His comments came in a copyright story in today's Atlanta Constitution.

Meanwhile, members of the special police task force in charge of the cases were given unprecedented authority to cross into other police jurisdictions to conduct their investigations.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee P. Brown announced Wednesday that officials of Cobb, DeKalb and Rockdale counties agreed to 19 guidelines proposed by Atlanta police to give the task force more power to investigate the cases, no matter where they occur.

Police in the three suburban counties were drawn into the investigation when bodies of some victims were found in their jurisdictions. All three departments have officers among the more than 80 members of the task force, Brown said.

Most of Atlanta lies in Fulton County, through the metropolis spills over into DeKalb County.

The cases under investigation began in 1979. According to Slayton, the last seven of the 20 children found dead were strangled or suffocated.

The district attorney said police also believe the slayings of three children found dead in the same area of suburban East Point, may be treated. But he said the other cases may be individual or unrelated homicides.

Some of the other victims also were asphyxiated, but some were stabbed, beaten, or shot, and the remains of some were too decomposed for authorities to determine how they died.

"It is surprising that they haven't solved even one" of the slayings if there are at least 10 killers, Slayton said.

Under the guidelines increasing the task force's powers, the group's commander has "the responsibility of coordinating all aspects of the investigation ... regardless of the law enforcement jurisdiction in which the body or evidence is located," Brown said. Police in DeKalb County, where three bodies have been found, had resisted the proposed guidelines, saying they did not want to give up their right to investigate cases within their jurisdiction.

"Everybody is concerned with new objective, and that is solving the case—the right way," Brown said. "We must never lose sight of the objective to solve these cases."

In other developments Wednesday: —The latest victim, 13-year-old Curtis Walker, was buried at the Rev. J.H. Henderson urged Atlantans not to take matters into their own hands. Walker's body was found Friday in the South River in suburban DeKalb County. A medical examiner said Walker, who had been missing since Feb. 16, had been asphyxiated.

—A group of young adults who patrol the subways of New York City got a chilly reception from city officials when they arrived here to help in the cases. The group, which calls itself Guardian Angels, will teach children how to protect themselves, said spokeswoman Lisa Evers. Said Brown, "We don't have any subways in Atlanta."

Meanwhile, with 165 journalists and 20 television crews here to report the latest developments in the cases, city officials say they are concerned about the role of press coverage.

Mayor Maynard Jackson said police have been close-mouthed because they are fearful too much publicity could jeopardize the investigation, which has resulted in no arrests. Jackson said critics were "presuming incorrectly that we're not doing enough, or anything. We're doing a thousand times more than we can say, or should say."

Members of New York's Guardian Angels arrive at the Atlanta Amtrak rail station to assist in the city's investigation of murdered and missing children. In center, Kirk Parker ties a commemorative green ribbon to the T-shirt of Lawrence Thompson.

Road to Philadelphia starts tonight

By The Associated Press

The road to Philadelphia begins tonight when the National Collegiate Athletic Association's 43rd annual basketball tournament gets underway in such far-flung outposts as Providence, R.I. and Los Angeles, with in-between stops at Dayton, Ohio, and Austin, Texas.

Four members of The Associated Press Top Twenty will see first-round action tonight — No. 16 Brigham Young, No. 17 Wyoming, No. 18 Maryland and No. 20 Arkansas — while the other 16, led by top-rated DePaul drew opening-round byes and swing into action over the weekend.

TONIGHT'S LINEUP sends BYU (22-6) against Princeton's Ivy League kings (18-9) and Georgetown (20-1) against James Madison (20-8) in the East regional at Providence and Wyoming's Western Athletic Conference co-champs (23-5) against Howard (16-11) and Kansas State (21-8) against West Coast Athletic Conference winner San Francisco (24-6) at Los Angeles in the West regional.

The other half of the 8-team draw pits Maryland (20-9) against Tennessee-Chattanooga (21-8), the Southern Conference representative, and Crighton (21-8), winner of the Missouri Valley Conference tournament, against St. Joseph's, Pa., (22-7) of the East Coast Conference in the Midwest regional at Dayton.

In the Midwest regional at Austin, Arkansas' regular-season Southwest Conference champs (22-7) meet Mercer (17-12), the Trans-America Conference tourney survivor, while Southland Conference titlist Lamar (24-4) faces Missouri (22-9), the regular-season Big Eight winner.

Kan., Wichita State plays Southern and Kansas tackles Mississippi.

Second-round action is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday with the regional championships March 19-22 at Atlanta, Salt Lake City, Bloomington, Ind., and New Orleans. The final four is March 28-31 at the Spectrum in Philadelphia.

Georgetown Coach John Thompson insists his club is not looking past James Madison to a possible meeting with Notre Dame.

"If we lose, it'll have nothing to do with Notre Dame," he said. "It'll have to do with James Madison. We're not foolish enough to look ahead of this team because if you've gotten into the tournament, you've got to be pretty good."

THOMPSON'S HOYAS are led by guard Eric "Sleepy" Flyd, a second-team All-America.

First-teamer Danny Ainge leads BYU against Princeton's deliberate attack and tenacious man-to-man defense. The Tigers, under Pete Carril, have been known to knock off big-time teams who take them lightly.

In the West, Wyoming, a team on the upswing, makes its first NCAA appearance since 1967. The Cowboys are seeded fifth in the region while Howard, led by 6-foot-9 James Ratleff, is 12th and last.

Cincinnati's veteran catcher Johnny Bench leaves the clubhouse for workouts loaded down with several gloves. Bench is working out at catcher, firstbase, thirdbase and in the outfield after stating his desire to catch only a few games this season.

Lee, MHS go own way this weekend

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The Midland Lee and Midland High track teams go separate ways this weekend as the Rebels enter Odessa's West Texas Relays and the Bulldogs head for the outer reaches of the state to enter the Amarillo Invitational.

The West Texas Relays begin at 2:30 p.m. Friday at W. T. Barrett Stadium and run through an all-day marathon on Saturday with four divisions of competition. The Amarillo meet is a one-day meet Saturday.

Both teams are off to a big start as Sam Volpe's Rebels recorded five new records at the Comanche Relays in Fort Stockton two weeks ago. Coach Johnny Williams' Bulldogs also turned in a new record at Fort Stockton and showed some strength in the 800 meters, hurdles and sprints.

Lee's Robert Schooler won both the 3200 and 1600 meter races two weeks ago in record setting time with a 9:55.19 in the 3200 and a 4:28.98 in the 1600. It appears that Schooler is off and running for a state title bid in at least one of those events. Despite setting two records, Schooler may not have given his best effort at Fort Stockton because he missed three days of school that week and was sick at the meet.

Midland High sophomore James Beverley also rocketed into the 5A scene in the 800 meters with a 1:55.50 in his first competitive high school race. He could become one of the all-time greats in the 800, an event that has had many Midland stars in the past.

Defending 5-5A 300 hurdle champion David Piccolo of Lee appears to be headed back to the throne room in that event after a record setting 40.04. He was under 40 seconds only once last year and is already near his best after one meet this season. He is also good in the highs, but admits to needing improvement in that event.

Lee's Arthur Williams may be on the verge of making a name for himself in the 200 meters where he had a record 21.02, his fastest time ever, at Fort Stockton. He also is a force on both of Lee's relay teams. Lee's sprint relay team was a winner in its first outing and the mile relay team was second.

Darrin Williams, also on both relays, won his first 100 meters championship at Fort Stockton with an 11.04.

Beverley was the only event winner for the Bulldogs at Fort Stockton, but Williams thinks his squad will be vastly improved as a competitive team this year.

The Bulldogs are strong in the hurdles where Scott Yocham gained a second in the highs with a 15.07 and Elston Montgomery had a second in the 300 hurdles with a 40.7. Senior sprinter Billy Taylor, who was a power to be reckoned with last year, placed third in the 100 meters with an 11.21 and fourth in the 200 meters. But he is being brought along slowly by Williams and Taylor had not run the sprints in practice prior to the Fort Stockton meet.

The Midland High and Lee girls will also get into the swing of things this weekend with both teams entered in the West Texas Relays. No times have been reported on the girls this spring but they did compete in Plainview last weekend.

Monterey bidding for third Champions title

Lubbock Monterey will be bidding for an unprecedented third straight Tall City Tournament of Champions baseball title when the marathon two-day event begins at 10 a.m. Friday at Cubs Stadium.

The Plainsmen bring an undefeated record into the tournament with four of six victories coming at the expense of the host Midland schools and will kickoff the 10-game meet against Midland High, 2-3, at 10 a.m. Friday. Midland Lee, 1-4, faces Carrollton R.L. Turner, a finalist last year, at 12:30 p.m. Friday and the fifth team, Amarillo Tascosa, meets the Midland-Monterey winner at 3 p.m. Other first day games are scheduled for 5:30 and 8 p.m.

Saturday's play will begin at 10 a.m. with games scheduled at 12:30 p.m., 3 p.m., 5:30 p.m. and 8 p.m., if necessary.

Last year, Monterey needed that extra game when Turner handed the Plainsmen their first tournament defeat, 6-5, to force that extra game. Monterey left no doubt, winning 9-2 on a five-hitter by Nathan Swindle, who is back with the Plainsmen again this year.

The tournament began back in 1975 and Moore, Okla., was the winner. Monterey won in 1976, posting a 3-1 tournament record and then Duncanville won in 1977 and 1978 with 4-0 records. Monterey then began its present string in 1979 with a 3-0 tournament record.

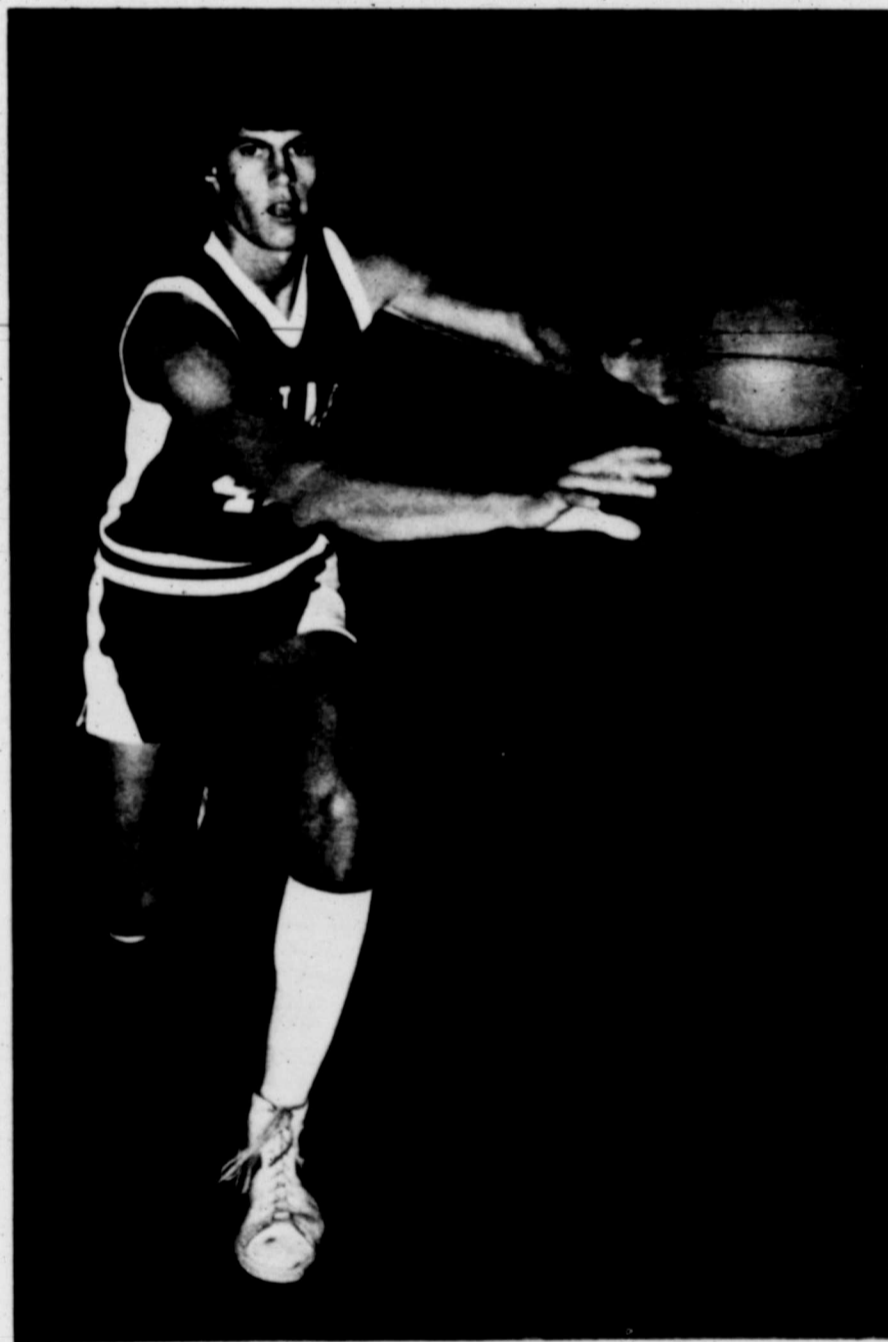

Coach Ernie Johnson's Rebels own a victory over Lubbock Coronado, the only loss suffered by the Ponies this year, but have lost a pair to both Monterey and Monahans.

Coach Tim Whalen's Bulldogs own two wins over Snyder, but have suffered defeats at the hands Monterey, twice, and Coronado.

Although Monterey didn't win its district title, Coach Bobby Moegle's team posted a 28-5 record last year.

Coach Bob Rombach's Turner nine figures to be the biggest obstacle in Monterey's bid for a third straight. Turner has gone to the state meet the last two years and returns four starters from the 1980 club.

Stan Moore looks for his Amarillo Tascosa team to be improved over last year's 8-14 record. This is Moore's third year in a rebuilding program and the Rebels return five starters. Going into the tournament, the big question mark is the pitching staff.

Midland High's Don Sharnowski ...size 16 shoes and 20-foot bombs

Midland High's Horace Brown ...The Bulldogs' other guy

What is the formula for producing winners

What is the formula for producing a winning team personality?

It is a question that coaches have pondered over the days of time, and no one has come up with the right answer. A certain amount of talent is required to be sure, but it is not the answer to a final product.

Some teams have won with rigid discipline like the Philadelphia Eagles or Phillies. Others have loose lockers and few restrictions like the 1979 Pittsburgh Pirates or the world champion Oakland Raiders. Some even said that the 1978 Philadelphia 76ers had too much talent on the team.

It's easy to see that the road to victory has different paths. The only thing we know for sure is that every team seems to develop a distinct personality with distinct individuals. How teams develop that winning edge has too many factors to consider.

The Midland High basketball team is a proven winner as its 32-4 record would indicate, but trying to assess why they are winners is much more than laying all the success on players like 6-9 Herbert Johnson and 6-5 Horace Brown. They are supported by a cast that seems to understand its destiny.

So, if we can't determine all the reasons why MHS has been so successful this season, we can only look at the individuals for some type of composite picture. The following is some glimpses I have gleaned during the past 36 games as the Bulldogs gear to meet Fort Worth Dunbar at 6:30 p.m. Friday at Chaparral Center in the Region I playoffs.

Herbert Johnson: Known as "Magic", "Dr. Dunkenstein", "All-America" and just plain "Mr. Good". There is no doubt what a player of Johnson's talent means to any team. He's the big man who can do everything so well. College coaches would like to find the magic to make him say yes one time, and the only people in Midland who are glad that this is his senior year are postal employees. When he makes a decision on college, there may not be a need for Midland to be a regional postal center.

Horace Brown: "Downtown" would be the ultimate star at most 5A high schools, but at MHS he has been the other guy. A classy dresser and likeable off the court. He presents opponents with a big problem because if you concentrate on Johnson, he's bound to hurt you.

Mike Velasco: The player every coach wants on his team. A dead-eye shot from 20-feet and is almost the ultimate defensive player with the press. Can be found sitting alone before every ball game so he can go over his responsibilities. He is never quite satisfied with his performance. If he doesn't play well, the Bulldogs usually have trouble winning.

Michael Feldt: "The Legend" comes by that name as a football player who is headed for greater things in Austin. He is the athlete who can play anything, anywhere. He brings leadership to the Bulldogs and lives in the passing lanes of all opponents. Smart, aggressive and by one MHS female observer "very good looking". The "All-America" ideal.

Don Sharnowski: "Feet" has the good understanding and the 20-foot baseline bomb. The Shark wears size 16 shoes (15 in some models). Physical and aggressive. A junior who should come into his own next year. And he doesn't like sports writers.

Steve Miller: Has the rainbow jumper that brings rain. He can hit from the outer limits and his shot may be the most pleasing to watch from a fan's point of view. A blonde with a good sense of humor. He tried to sell $1 tickets for a glimpse of Johnson to college coaches at the bi-district game.

Booker Mackey: "The Book" makes so many steals off the press that opponents become totally frustrated. He is lightning quick and is a 100 percent better player than a year ago. If he was 6-9, basketball would never be the same.

Preston Robertson: With Johnson and Brown in the middle there is not much room for Preston to work in his playing time. But he is going to be a good middle man next year for the Bulldogs. At least, he is getting to see how the game is supposed to be played. He is the team cheerleader and seems to understand his role. Probably could start on just about any District 5-5A team.

Justin Morrett: Has had several big games coming off the bench. Is capable of lighting up the scoreboard when some of the big guns fall silent. Has been a vital force of "The Wave".

Raymond Parker: A solid player who coach Jack Stephenson would like to find more playing time for. Parker is another junior who should find himself next year.

Jim Gunnels: Stephenson doesn't lose much when he goes to the bench with "The Gunner". Can be physical and is a great bluffer in a poker game.

Ted Bartley: A guard with good ball control. Has really produced when the Bulldogs face foul problems. Stephenson doesn't hesitate to use him in key situations.

Scott Louderback: Another whose fame comes from football. Gets a lot of playing time and could be MHS' enforcer. He never gets cheated on a foul.

Barr Bolger: A good man to have at the free throw line anytime. Another guard Stephenson can call on.

Brian Dunn: Gives Stephenson more depth to work with. Hasn't had a great deal of playing time, but gives his all. Still needs work on his poker face.

Kevin Griffin: Another who doesn't get a great deal of playing time, but is a good shooter. At 5-4, you have to be a good shooter to make this team.

These are the Bulldogs. The combination has clicked 32 times this year. If they click 36 times they will reign supreme.

LA's Vince Ferragamo may play in Montreal

TORONTO (AP) — Quarterback Vince Ferragamo may play in Montreal this year although his Canadian Football League rights belong to the Hamilton Tiger-Cats and his contract is being discussed with a man not yet officially connected with the Alouettes.

David Fishoff, agent for the Los Angeles Rams' starting quarterback the last two years, said Wednesday the signing of Ferragamo, which Fishoff said would come in a few days, would be "the greatest marriage in the history of sports."

It will take place even though Ferragamo's CFL rights belong to Hamilton, said Fishoff. Talks between the agent and Hamilton ended several weeks ago because of the high financial demands of Fishoff.

Fishoff was reported to have said that Vancouver sports entrepreneur Nelson Skalbania has made Ferragamo the best offer yet — even though Skalbania's pending purchase of the Alouettes has yet to be approved by the CFL.

The player's agent said Skalbania, who also owns two Calgary-based professional teams — the Flames of the National Hockey League and the Bombers of the North American Soccer League — visited Ferragamo in the United States and offered the quarterback a high-salary contract, business opportunities in Montreal and clearance for him to attend medical school during the football season.

Fishoff admitted the snag is Hamilton, which owns Ferragamo's CFL rights.

"But Skalbania has assured us he will take care of that," said Fishoff. "I absolutely love the man. So does Vince. And you can take my word for it we'll likely sign with Montreal within the next few days. We wrote out a contract and we're pretty sure he (Skalbania) will okay it. It'll be the greatest marriage in the history of sports."

Reached in Calgary, Skalbania refused to comment on Fishoff's suggestions he had talked with Ferragamo and the player signing with the Alouettes was merely a formality.

"I just can't say anything on it. You won't get me to talk about it. I'm in enough trouble as it is."

Fishoff said the offer was far more than Ferragamo had received from the Rams where he has played since 1978 on a $50,000-a-year salary, or offered by the Ticats.

Fight matches funny says SI

NEW YORK (AP) — A Sports Illustrated investigation has determined that the World Boxing Council, one of two organizations that administers fight rankings, has produced some of the most dubious boxer ratings and bizarre mismatches in the history of the sport.

In its March 16 issue, the magazine has the first installment of a two-part special report. Part one, written by Pat Putnam, deals with the WBC. Putnam says the other sanctioning body, the World Boxing Association, "has displayed similar tendencies."

In next week's edition, SI will examine the WBA.

In addition to the questionable rankings, the magazine contends that President Jose Sulaiman's WBC also favors WBC-ranked fighters, referees who will vote for the WBC-ranked fighters and meaningless weight classifications.

Some of the strongest evidence is in the area of rankings. Bob Busse of the North American Boxing Federation is the WBC's ratings chairman. He says Sulaiman makes 90 percent of the rankings. "How some of the people get into our ratings, I couldn't tell you," Sports Illustrated quoted Busse.

Midland High, Lee host rugged Invitational field

Midland High's Richey Houde will be back to defend the boys' A singles crown he won last year when the Midland High-Midland Lee hosted Midland Invitational tennis tournament begins a two-day run Friday at 8:30 a.m.

Over 20 schools and 350 individual tennis players are expected to converge on Midland when play opens. According to Lee coach Bobby Connell, the event will be played at three locations — the Lee courts, Midland High courts and Midland College Courts.

Saturday's action is also scheduled to start at 8:30 a.m.

Among the Class AAAAA schools set to participate in the event are Amarillo Tascosa, Amarillo Palo Duro, Amarillo Caprock, Abilene Cooper, Odessa Permian, Odessa High, Big Spring, Midland High and Midland Lee.

According to Connell, Cooper and Permian should be the teams to beat for the team title. Connell added that all the Amarillo schools have some good individual talent and if things went just right for them they could be in the thick of the chase for the team crown.

Midland Lee will be sparked by Mike McFadden, Mark Miller and David Dunton in the boys competition. Lee's girls are led by Joni Brittain, Cindy Engleman and Karen Mann.

Midland High's boys were paced by Rickey Houdek, John Martin and Lance Armstrong (if he has recovered from an arm injury). VeAnn Atnipp and Caroline Kirwan are strong contenders for individual honors for the Purple Pack.

Tiant rips Red Sox for penny-pinching stupidity

According to veteran pitcher Luis Tiant, the Boston Red Sox have thrown away the "guts" of their ballclub with utter disregard for the fans. "It's stupid. They will be sorry. Boston has the best baseball fans in the game. They're loyal and they're understanding. But they won't swallow the losing of guys like Burleson, Lynn and Fisk. They won't stand for a losing team. You can bet on it. In basketball, maybe yes. In baseball, no. They will stay away... Burleson is the best shortstop in the American League, maybe in both leagues. Where can you get a better center fielder than Lynn? And Fisk — the greatest! He was always the team anchor..."

Region V tournament future hangs in balance

The next Region V basketball tournament will be held in Big Spring, if they have one.

The Northern Conference is in favor of doing away with the annual tournament against the Western Conference and adopting a champion-vs.-champion shootout as the other junior college conferences in east and south Texas do.

The WJCC, on the other hand, would like to see the post-season tournament between conferences continued.

As a result, the regional meeting resulted in an 10-10 impasse and the matter will be settled at a future meeting.

The Northern Conference contends the cost of feeding and housing five teams for a four-day tournament is too expensive a burden to bear.

The NC took a protest step this year when it decided not to send an all-star basketball game to Brownwood for the scheduled meeting with the WJCC all-stars prior to the Region V finals Saturday night.

The idea of the game is to give players who did not play on teams making the playoffs an opportunity to perform before the crowd of college coaches who annually make this and other similar tournaments in search of quick help.

"We offered to put up $4,000," said Midland's Bill Williams, "if they would bring the tournament here. No one else who has bid for the tournament ever made that kind of offer."

Williams is convinced the fan response here would make it a worthwhile venture.

"Our guarantee to the teams would just about take care of any expenses incurred for the tournament, but even that didn't sway them. They just say, 'We don't want to play the tournament on Midland's home court every year.' There will be other discussions and perhaps an arm or two twisted, in a reasonable way, of course, but if that doesn't sway the Northern Conference representatives, the tournament system would be dropped for the play-off.

Of course, the WJCC could conduct its own tournament, much as the ACC, SWC and others, to pick its representative, but then that defeats the purpose of the regular season race. All the teams would be playing for a tournament bye, and you saw how much good that did Arkansas and Virginia this year.

SPORTS QUICKIES—Former Midland College Coach Chester Story was more or less the host for the Region V tournament, since he is head coach at Howard Payne College in Brownwood. Chester could sympathize with the Chaps and Jerry Stone on their loss in the finals to Cooke. HPC missed out on a trip to the NAIA in Kansas City in a two-point loss to St. Mary's... Ex-Midland High cager Dale Pond was scouting talent for Hardin-Simmons, where he is an assistant...

The Lewis Lloyd named on the second team AP All-America for Drake is the same one who played at NMMI a couple of years ago... Most observers feel Tulsa University, coached by Nolan Richardson, who led Western Texas College to the national juco title a year ago, should have been picked in the NCAA tournament. The Hurricane finished 21-7. It the first time Tulsa had won 21 in a season since 1954-55. In the process, Tulsa set an all-time attendance mark. As consolation, Tulsa got an NIT bid.

NBC reconsiders and will carry regular season contests

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — When the NCAA took the postseason basketball tournament away from NBC and gave it to CBS, there were fears that college hoops would get less exposure. Well, the NCAA probably didn't plan it this way, but both CBS and NBC apparently will broadcast regular season college basketball next year.

NBC, which will end its tournament contract with the playoffs later this month, has been doing regular season games on Saturday and Sunday for some time. It was NBC's interest and tradition in the regular season that was seen as a big advantage to retaining rights to the prestigious tournament.

CBS, with its contract to the National Basketball Association next year, didn't want college basketball's regular season. But, as in any negotiations, CBS had to give in order to take. So CBS won the tournament rights with a three-year bid of $48 million and a promise to do 14 regular season games in 1982 and 17 each of the next two years. During its negotiations, NBC had taken the posture that it probably would not continue to do the regular season, without having the playoffs. NBC didn't want to promote a sport, then have somebody else televise the major championship.

But sources now indicate that NBC has apparently had a change of heart. NBC looked at its programming cupboard for next winter and saw it was bare without weekend basketball, a network money-maker. Since the tournament was awarded to CBS one week ago, NBC has quietly been attempting to buy regular season rights.

TVS, which has been selling regular season basketball to NBC for some time, has seven major conferences locked up for the next two years — the Big Ten, Big Eight, Pacific-10, WAC, ECAC, SEC and SWC. In the past week, both NBC and CBS have bid for the TVS games.

If NBC gets them, and sources indicate that NBC has the inside track, it will be doing national games next year. After all, Al McGire has three more years on his contract, and he just wouldn't work as a golf commentator.

The TVS connection covers the bulk of college basketball, but there are other attraction, owned by other outfits, like the ACC and everybody's favorite alma mater, Notre Dame. The network rights to these games are up for grabs, and the current rights holders are in an enviable position of being courted by two rich suitors.

"We're going ahead right now and making regular season schedule plans," said Kevin O'Malley, vice president, program planning and development, for CBS Sports. "There's quite a bit out there. We're confident of putting together very good schedule."

NBC's bid for the tournament was reportedly close to $48 million, which was 60 percent more than its current $10 million-a-year deal. Since NBC didn't get the playoffs, it appears the network will spend some of that found money on the regular season.

And college basketball, which generally gets beaten in the ratings by ABC's "Superstars," will have two network homes next year.

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Moments after Roland Martin won the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society $75,000 Louisiana Invitational at Toledo Bend Reservoir, somebody asked him if he was still the victory-hungry angler that first appeared on the tournament trail 10 years ago.

Martin, posing for pictures and signing autographs, paused a second and said, "I don't like to lose."

It was a simple reply to a penetrating question. After all, the 40-year-old Broken Arrow, Okla., pro had just won his second B.A.S.S. tour event in a row, the first time he had ever earned back-to-back paychecks. The title is his 13th career victory, far more than anyone else on the tour. The $5,000 cash and the $6,700 Ranger bass boat brings his all-time leading money winnings to $150,000 and change.

HE IS the biggest name in pro tournament bass fishing, financially secure and highly visible as host of his own nationally syndicated TV show. So how does he keep the competitive edge it took to outlast the likes of Larry Nixon and Tommy Martin, a pair of talented anglers who have guided professionally on Toledo Bend and still live on its shores at Hemphill, Texas? This drive must come from somewhere.

"No, I haven't gotten complacent," Martin said. "I thought about nothing all day except winning. Every tournament is as hard to win as the next. There aren't any easy ones. These guys are getting so good you have to be at your best every day."

This will to win pushed Martin to an all-time high total stringer for a seven-fish a day B.A.S.S. tournament—84 pounds, 11 ounces of largemouth bass in three days.

MARTIN came in behind Nixon the first day, moved into the lead in the second round, then pulled away on the final day to win convincingly. In his record-setting wake sprawled top contenders Nixon, Tommy Martin and the rest of the 250-angler field.

All Nixon did was catch 74-1, well over 60-9 that won a tournament for him here last season. Tommy Martin, meanwhile, brought a single-day, seven-fish record stringer to the weigh-in scales at Pleasure Points Park that weighed 33-3. Still, it was not enough. Nixon finished second and Tommy Martin, after surging to fourth with his big catch, faded to seventh. Afterwards, Roland Martin credited his chief competitors for pushing him to the limit.

FOR NIXON, the outcome was particularly disappointing, in spite of the $4,000 cash for second place.

"I wanted to repeat on my home lake, so this leaves me dejected," he said. "I catch 19-6 and I might as well not caught anything."

Nixon, 30, said Roland Martin's relentless pressure forced him to make a decision. Nixon had been catching numerous schooling-size bass on a Cordell Rattlin' Hot Spot. His larger fish, however, were coming on a brown jig-and-frog combination in heavy cover. What do you do on the last day when you are trying to catch the leader? Play it safe with limits of small fish or go after larger fish, chancing a total strikeout.

"It was a $4,000 decision," Nixon said. "I decided to go back to my old water where I had been catching the school fish. It was a case of either going for broke or protecting what I had. I went conservative. I don't have any regrets about the choice, just that I didn't win."

Less disappointed was Bo Dowden of Natachitoches, La., who surged into third on the final day with a catch of 26-10. His total left him ahead of fourth place George Cochran of North Little Rock, Ark., a 62-12. Young John Torian, 22, also of Hemphill, was fifth with 58-14.

MOST of the fish came from shallow water, five to 10 feet deep in most cases. Dowden, however, said he found fish at 15 to 20.

Thanks to air temperatures ranging in the low 80s, water temperatures on the 118-mile-long lake on the Louisiana-Texas border rose to 60 degrees.

Limits of bass were not uncommon. The champ limited out each day, twice by 9:30 in the morning. Nixon had 21 fish, catching his seven fish early, so that he could work on catching larger fish. All told, the tournament field brought in 71 limits, 31 on the last day alone.

The anglers caught 5,310 pounds of bass in all, releasing alive all but five of the 2,080 fish.

Next stop on the $590,000 B.A.S.S. tournament trail is the $75,000 Alabama Invitational March 18-20 on Lake Eufaula.

CHUCK DAVIS OUTDOORS

Don't overspeed that rundown motor

We have all heard stories of the hunters who only exercise once a year and that is when they are out in deer season. And we all know the hunters who kill their deer, begin dragging it back to their car, and are later found lying dead beside their deer. The cause of death is usually a heart attack. These cardiac arrests are usually the result of the excitement of the moment and over-exertion.

What happens is akin to an automobile that has 100,000 miles on it and when the motorist asks it to perform in an overloaded or overspeed situation—it blows up. It was rundown, worn out and couldn't handle the extra work.

The boiler system for the human body is the cardiovascular system—the heart and blood system with the lungs included. If the cardiovascular system isn't conditioned—exercised if you will—so it can handle situations beyond what is normal it may blow when stressed. When it blows it can leave you lying beside your dead deer and just as lifeless.

THE HUMAN body wasn't built to withstand prolonged physical inactivity. If it is subjected to a sedentary lifestyle with extra food poured in it is really in a state of deterioration and is not fit to perform as it should be able to. It is to use popular jargon—subject to recall by the manufacturer at any moment.

I've spent some time—not as a patient—in an extended care facility for veterans of the United States military. I have been amazed to see what neglect has done to the physical being of many veterans. It is not true in every case but in many instances the combination of the normal aging process multiplies by extended abuse and overindulgence in alcoholic beverages, tobacco, too much of the wrong kinds of food and what has become the American way of life—physical inactivity.

Many diseases are complicated by or are the result of inactivity and abuse. Clinical conditions such as heart disease, lung disease, high blood pressure, varicose veins, stomach ulcers, diabetes, obesity, back aches, arthritis, glaucoma and psychological problems have a definite relationship to diet, abuse and lack of physical conditioning.

THE POINT is that the outdoorsman—hunter, fisherman, hiker, camper—should be in better than average condition if he is to perform well at his choice of recreational activities. It is not pleasurable to chase a wounded buck or fight a powerful salt water fish, when with just the least bit of exercise your lungs feel as though they may burst and black spots float before your eyes. Your arms ache and are so weak you can't perform. Another discomforting feeling is having such a protuberant abdomen that to bend over and light a campfire or tie your shoes there is enough pressure on your diaphragm that you can't get a proper breath.

Do I sound like a 41-year-old reformed, out-of-condition, fat boy? If you have me pegged that that way, you're right! I do 20 pushups a day, 50 situps a day and run three miles four to six times a week. I don't mind telling you that I feel better for it.

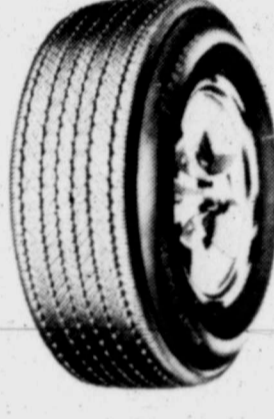

ONE FAMED experiment by Dr. Hardin Jones of the University of California has shown that the average sedentary American man is, in terms of muscle circulation, middle-aged by the time he is 28. Using Geiger counter tests to follow blood flow through the muscles in teen-agers and in 500 industrial workers, Dr. Jones established that between the ages of 18 and 35, the flow drops to 40 percent; by the age of 35 it's down 60 percent, at which point, in the sense of physical vigor, the average sedentary man is less than half the man he used to be.

The goal for each person should be to keep his weight at an acceptable level, lay off the obvious abusive activities that we are spoiled into enjoying and undertake an active conditioning program as approved by your personal physician.

Libya buys nuclear missiles

RABAT, Morocco (A) — The Libyan government has contracted with a West German firm to buy medium-range missiles capable of carrying nuclear warheads to any target in the Middle East or southern Europe by early 1986, official Moroccan sources said today.

The sources claimed Libya is developing a nuclear weapon in a separate program.

They said the first missile trials were carried out in the Libyan desert recently by the West Germany company Orbital Transport und Raketen Company, or OTRAG, which was involved in an East-West controversy when it conducted similar missile trials in Zaire in 1978.

Moroccan officials are usually well-informed through diplomatic and intelligence sources on events in Libya. The report of the contract was carried by the official Moroccan news agency.

There was no immediate Libyan comment on the Moroccan account.

In Bonn, OTRAG officials announced that the tests conducted in the Libyan oasis of Sbha, 350 miles south of Tripoli, on March 1 were of a missile intended for "launching communications satellites."

OTRAG as forced to close down its test station in the remote bush of eastern Zaire in 1978 after the Soviet Bloc and a number of African countries accused the United States and West Germany of planning to give Zaire a nuclear potential.

The West German company then moved its operation to Libya under secret agreements signed with Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy. Libya has spent billions of dollars on the purchase of sophisticated weaponry in recent years, most of it from the Soviet Bloc and France.

The Moroccan news agency, citing unidentified "well informed sources" in the Moroccan capital, said Khadafy has launched "a nuclear five-year plan intended to give him possession of a nuclear weapon toward the beginning of 1986."

The missile system, said to be under development by TRAG in Libya, is to give the Libyan armed forces a medium range surface-to-surface missile equipped with a conventional warhead by 1983, the sources said.

Canada visit 'heart-warming'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, describing his first state visit as a "very heart-warming experience," says he and Canadian Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau established "a basis for further working together" even though differences remain between the two North American neighbors.

The Canadians said Reagan, without giving guarantee, eased their fears that his proposed budget cuts and policy changes would hurt projects important to their country. Friction over U.S. involvement in El Salvador and Reagan's withdrawal of a fishing treaty also seemed to have been lessened.

In a televised speech Wednesday to the Canadian Parliament, Reagan pledged to revitalize the U.S. economy and said that would restore the confidence of allies and produce millions of jobs, many of them in Canada.

The speech was repeatedly interrupted by applause, ending Reagan's two-day trip on a high note. He had been dogged by hecklers earlier in Ottawa.

After returning to the White House, Reagan said he and Trudeau had "a very fine meeting, really. I think we established the basis for further working together. We were very pleased and I think they were, too — a very heart-warming experience."

Today, at a meeting with congressional Republicans, Reagan gave the same appraisal of the outcome of his trip, and said: "We all came away feeling very good."

Earlier, on the return flight to Washington, presidential aide Michael Deaver was asked whether the trip had been hampered by several U.S. actions opposed by the Canadians, such as withdrawal of a fishing treaty. He replied: "While some of the rough edges showed, by and large it was a successful trip."

Lions nominate new officers

Members of the Downtown Lions Club nominated officers and directors for 1981-82 and witnessed a slide presentation on the construction of Texas Electric Service Co.'s Comanche Peak nuclear plant at their Wednesday noon meeting in Midland Center.

TESCO representative Sara St. Clair remarked briefly about the nuclear power plant at Glen Rose and showed the slide series, "People Working for People." She said the plant, started in 1975, should produce its first electricity in 1982.

Officer and director nominations include Jerry Speck, president; Jack Darden, first vice president; Jim Chapman, second vice president; Tom Blase and George Loudamy, third vice president; Kirby Dawkins and Tom Sawyer, Lion Tamers; Chris Dellings, secretary-treasurer; and Amy Stewart, club sweetheart.

Five directors will be elected from the following list of nominees: Dick Buckland, Ed Darnell, Copper Daugherty, Bob Faris, Dan Foreman, Jack Hilliard, Wayne Martin, Paul Murray, Bill Shaner and Bill Sherman.

Nominations for tail twisters will come at next week's meeting with the annual election scheduled March 25.

It was announced that receipts from the advance sale of tickets to the club's annual Pancake Jamboree scheduled Saturday in Dellwood Mall totaled $14,286 at noon Wednesday.

Gas Air Conditioning is also very dependable. It's built to last and last with no loss of cooling capacity. Hand-crafted of sturdy stainless steel components, Gas Air Conditioning has fewer moving parts and no compressor to wear out or break down. That means less wear and lower maintenance costs. And to prove its dependability, Gas Air Conditioning gives you the longest warranty — the 10-year "No Sweat" limited warranty — twice as long as all others.

Gas Air Conditioning. It's energy efficient. It's designed to lower maintenance costs, to lower operating costs. Gas Air Conditioning will save energy and that will save you money. And when you combine Gas Air Conditioning with adequate conservation measures, like caulking, insulation, storm doors and windows, you'll save even more.

Haley's 'Palmerstown' improved

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) - These days Alex Haley can be found not at his home typewriter but in a cluttered office on the movie lot where David O. Selznick filmed "Gone with the Wind" 42 years ago.

The author of "Roots" is executive co-producer of "Palmerstown," a television series which is returning to CBS Tuesday, March 7-10. The show had a trial run last year, drawing critical acclaim and respectable ratings, though not strong enough to make the network's fall schedule.

"We've made 10 new shows, and I think they're much stronger than the first seven," said Haley. "You learn so much by doing these shows. We started from scratch, and it's hard to get everything right the first time."

"When Norman (Lear) and I first worked on the concept for 'Palmerstown,' we talked about portraying two families — one white, one black — in a small Southern town 45 years ago, centering on the two boys of the families. The thrust of the first shows were the boys.

"This is not to criticize those shows, but I do believe that focusing on the boys may have revealed an inherent weakness. Boys can only do so much. They can't go slugging people or have a car chase — not that we would do those things, anyway."

"The emphasis of the new season has been more on the adults and on the boys' teen-age siblings. I think this has given us more powerful shows emotionally as well as physically. I believe the show is now ready to give across-the-board competition to the most successful shows in television."

Jermain H. Johnson and Brian G. Wilson return as the boys of Palmerstown, with Jonelle Allen, Beeson Carroll, Bill Duke and Janice St. John as their parents.

After writing for most of his life, Haley turned producer as the result of a party conversation with Norman Lear, the TV dynamo.

"We mutually liked each other at the start," recalled Haley, 59, "and we started talking about the possibility of doing something together. I admitted that comedy was foreign to me, but he mentioned that he would like to be associated with a dramatic series."

"We talked about our respective boyhoods and how much we enjoyed being boys. I said I felt that the South as a region had been slim pickings on television; most of the things had been caricatures of both races. Both Norman and I agreed that the culture of a small town and the relationship between the races could sustain a show."

For Haley the relationship was epitomized by his friendship with Kermit Anthony, a white boy who lived across the street in Henning, Tenn.

"We could not have been closer, Kermit and I," the author recalled. "Every Southern town, no matter how segregated, had this kind of couple. And always about the time of puberty, society draws them apart."

"When Kermit was 11, he and I were sitting in the persimmon tree behind my grandmother's house. He said to me, 'Pretty soon I'm going to be old enough so you'll have to call me 'Mister.' Within two weeks our friendship had been reduced to no more than an embarrassed nod when we met on the street. President Carter told me the same thing happened to him when he was a boy."

Haley has high hopes for the second running of "Palmerstown," which is reported to be CBS' successor to the fading "Waltons." He admitted that being a producer has cut into his literary output. He has long labored over "Search," the saga of his pursuit of "Roots."

"I wrote most of 'Roots' on ships, and now I'm carving out my nights to finish 'Search,'" he reported. "I eat an early dinner and sleep until 10:30, then take a long hot shower and write until 5. Then I go back to bed and get up again at 8 or 9. I think I will finish 'Search' fairly soon, and it will be published in the fall of 1982."

Documentaries evolved with Hill

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Pamela Hill took charge of ABC News' "Closeup" unit just over three years ago, and since then has helped puncture a couple of old myths about TV documentaries. Notably:

—That they had to be narrated, perhaps even anchored, by a correspondent who would appear on screen several times to convey information not particularly adaptable to film. "Youth Terror: View from Behind the Gun," was broadcast June 28, 1978, without narration.

—That dramatization, with actors playing real people in history-making, or at least socially significant, events — the so-called docudrama, was not acceptable network news fare.

"Invasion," a British-made documentary on the 1968 Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, broadcast Jan. 1, 1981, used actors to portray leading characters in the international confrontation.

In addition, Ms. Hill took an intriguing step away from convention last fall by hiring Marshall Fray, the well-known author and journalist — and a man with no television experience — as a "Closeup" correspondent. Fray's first documentary for ABC, "The Apocalypse Game" on the nuclear weapons race, was broadcast Oct. 17.

Fray's second "Closeup," "Soldiers of the Twilight" on mercenaries and their motivations, will be broadcast 10-11 p.m. EST tonight. "I'm not sure how much is possible within the network documentary form as it now exists," says Ms. Hill, who is vice president and executive producer of ABC News Television Documentaries. "I do know I'm always looking for new ideas. I just got back from England and France, where I was looking at things they are doing that we are not."

"I think one of the areas we have not really touched on is the artists insight — and I think here of the work of some of the European directors," Ms Hill says. "For example, I'd love to bring Alain Resnais from France to do a piece on the South Bronx, though I've never spoken to him about it. You would get a very singular point of view of that very troubled community."

Resnais directed the film "Mon Oncle d'Amérique," now being shown in this country.

"And I think we haven't done much, really, with non-fiction storytelling," Ms. Hill says. "I'd like to use real people in real situations in a sort of short-story form. We're looking now at a film from Houston on the shooting of a policeman that uses the actual people. It's fascinating, almost as if it had been cast, but it was not."

"Youth Terror" sparked controversy when critics complained to the Federal Communications Commission that some fight scenes had been staged, and that some participants in the program on youth violence had been given scripts in advance.

The FCC investigated the charges, and said it found conflicting evidence. But the commission ruled in ABC's favor.

Ms. Hill's "Closeup" unit has not, in the meantime, ignored the traditional. Indeed, "This Shattered Land," on the plight of Cambodia and its people, was cited by jurors in the duPont-Columbia University Awards program as one of the more accomplished documentaries broadcast in the 1979-80 season.

Another 1979 "Closeup" production, "The Killing Ground" on hazardous waste disposal, was nominated for an Academy Award in the feature documentary category.

"We do 12 hours a year, and I look for a variety," Ms. Hill says. "A lot of time is spent waiting for the right airdate."

"I think one area where we haven't done as much as we could is with quick turnaround, like CBS did with 'The Boat People.' That was on the air as the story was developing," she says, referring to the January '79 "CBS Reports" documentary on refugee relocation in Southeast Asia.

Pamela Hill went to work at ABC News in 1973, after eight years at NBC, part of that time as director of the network's "White Paper" documentary series. Her first assignment at ABC was to produce, direct and help write "Fire" — which eventually won two Emmy awards.

A native of Indiana and a graduate of Bennington College, Ms. Hill is an accomplished photographer as well as writer — she is author of "United States Foreign Policy: 1945-1965."

After taking responsibility for ABC News' documentary production, Ms. Hill says she had several months to try to determine "what was wrong with the way we were doing things — why so little had been done to develop the form that had been introduced at CBS.

"I think lot of the people responsible for developing the documentary form were oriented toward the printed word," she says, explaining her approach to her work. "A lot of them came out of print journalism."

"That's fine, but writing is only one component of the documentary. So I've put a lot of emphasis on experimentation. Different kinds of stories lend themselves to different kinds of treatments."

"I try to make the craft of filmmaking as important as the written form."

Carson rejects plan

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Carson has rejected a request from NBC to extend his "Tonight Show" to 30 minutes to counter the growing success of ABC's "Fridays," network sources say.

NBC's request was an attempt to rebuild its competitive standing in the lucrative late-night programming arena. Carson's refusal, not entirely unexpected, led NBC to develop a new late-Friday program to compete with "Fridays."

"Midnight Special," in its eighth year on NBC, will be canceled.

The new NBC program, designed to attract the coveted 18-to-34-year-old crowd now going to "Fridays," probably will be unveiled for NBC affiliates over the weekend, said the sources, who asked not to be identified. Affiliates will be in New York for the National Association of Television Programming Executives convention. Ironically, the show NBC is launching will counter an ABC program that was invented to siphon off some of the popularity of an NBC show, "Saturday Night Live."

Six Flags now open

ARLINGTON — Six Flags Over Texas has opened its gates for this season with a special new ride — the Conquistador, the flying ship of Spain.

The ride, which cost $500,000 to build, is the focal point of an extensive revamping of the park's Spanish section. The 16,000-pound replica of a sailing ship swings like a pendulum in an arc which carries its passengers more than 50-feet into the air, creating the sensations of both weightlessness and free-fall.

Six Flags will be open Saturdays and Sundays only during the spring, with the exception of next week when it will be open daily for Arlington's spring break.

Theatre Midland now featuring 'absurd' British one-act play

By GEORGIA TEMPLE
Staff Writer

Re-opening tonight at Theatre Midland is the one-act play "After Magritte" that Midland Community Theatre entered in the bi-annual Texas Festival of the Festival of the American Community Theatre, Inc. which was held in Denton in February.

Although the play did not win, it received a good oral review from Mona Poehling, one of the three adjudicators for the event.

Miss Poehling, actress, director and community theater administrator, is former director of the Oklahoma Community Theatre Association. Currently, she is on the national American Community Theatre board and serves as a theater consultant for community theaters.

The other two adjudicators were Jerome Lawrence, playwright, lecturer and educator, and Edward Wright, educator, actor and author. All were eminently qualified to be judging the event.

The festival itself involved nine plays, each of which had to be presented within an hour. A five minute intermission followed each play and then one of the judges gave a 15-minute oral critique.

Miss Poehling began her critique by saying, "I really enjoy theater of the absurd, especially when it's well done."

"It's nice to be able to see community theater doing this type of work," she added.

Miss Poehling was also pleased to see a one-act play chosen because "you don't have to worry about cutting; it's already within an hour."

The play, which revels in the absurd where reality is not what it appears to be, drew from her the comment, "I think that truth is chaos and this was chaotic."

"Immediately, when the curtain went up, people knew they were not in for a realistic play."

"I enjoyed the music. It was well cast and an excellent choice for contest material because it's challenging and difficult to do."

Although she felt that the group had worked well as an ensemble, she pointed out a few weaknesses in the stage portrayals.

Cast members in this British play, written by Tom Stoppard, include Mike Wilson as Harris, Mavis Murphy as Thelma; Mary Lou Cassidy as Mother, Len Caryl as Inspector Foot and David Wills as Holmes.

Miss Poehling stated that all did an admirable job, however the timing was off just a little at times. As she pointed out, in this type of play the timing is crucial and it must be perfect.

She was concerned that Ms. Murphy was not comfortable in her costume.

"If a costume gets in your way, it doesn't work with you," she said.

She praised Ms. Murphy on her professional British accent, which she said made the others sound "not as good." Ms. Murphy is British.

She said that Caryl, although quite effective in his role, was at times "not listening to his laugh lines," which means that some of his funny lines were buried. "We (referring to the audience) want to share a joke," she added.

This is, of course, a matter of timing.

"The mother was great," she said. "I never would have dreamed she is as young as she is or that she is the woman I saw last night at the reception."

And Ms. Cassidy had indeed turned in a stellar role in her portrayal of Mother.

She complimented the staging and the director. This play is the first one Ken Strickland has directed since joining MCT.

And then she related what many may decide after they have seen the play. "I almost think we need to see the show two or three times" to really understand all of what's happening onstage.

Showing with "After Magritte" will be another British one-act play, "The Collection," written by Harold Pinter. Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

One thing's certain, whether the audience understands everything that's happening in "After Magritte" or not, laughter will fill Theatre II. It is, in all it's absurdity, a funny play.

Country Squire now serving 'Murder at Howard Johnsons'

Currently playing at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre, east of Odessa on Highway 80, is the comedy "Murder at the Howard Johnsons," starring James MacArthur, Patti Heider and Ray Stewart.

Although MacArthur has starred in a number of motion pictures, he is perhaps best known for his role of Dano in the television series "Hawaii Five-O."

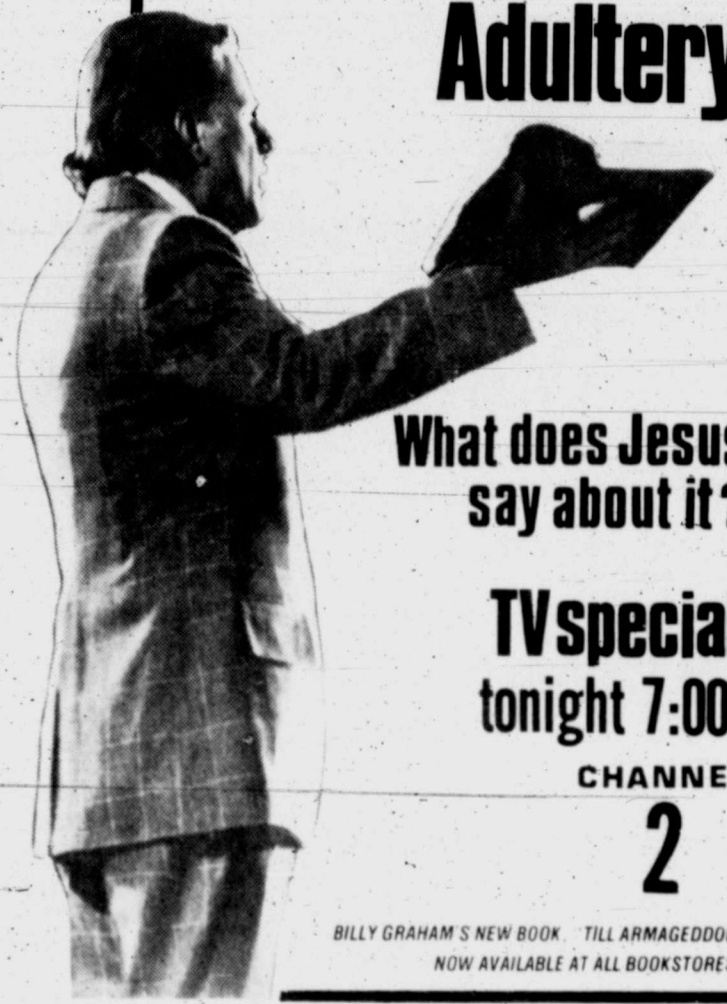

Stewart, who was born and raised in the Rio Grande Valley, has played in many Broadway and Off-Broadway productions, such as "The Fantasticks," plus guest-starring in various television series.

Ms. Heider, who has guest-starred on a number of television series, also had a featured role in, among others, the film "They Shoot Horses, Don't They."

The play closes March 15. Reservations may be made for dinner and the play by calling 563-4111.

Enrollment stuns officials

DALLAS (AP)—Almost 8,000 students — far more than expected — have enrolled in the Dallas Independent School District's special after-school program for those who otherwise might fail under the district's tough new promotion policy. Superintendent Linus Wright announced that 7,935 children in grades 1-3 enrolled in the program, which began Monday, after they were identified as students likely to fail because they had not met minimum basic skills requirements. "That's almost 3,000 more than we anticipated in January," Wright said. The DIS has about 30,000 students enrolled in the three grades. In January, Wright revealed that almost 5,000 children in the first three grades would fail.

Soviets importing record grain crop

WASHINGTON (AP) — New figures described by the Agriculture Department as "minor changes" show the Soviet Union is expected to import a record 35 million metric tons of grain this year. That would be 500,000 metric tons more than the 34.5 million U.S. exports had been predicting since last December and 5 million metric tons more than the Soviets imported last year.

The figures, released Wednesday, are for the international marketing year that will end on June 30.

A partial embargo on U.S. grain sales to the Soviet Union has been in effect since Jan. 4, 1980, imposed by President Carter in response to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan.

The order exempted 8 million metric tons of corn and wheat annually which had been specified by a 1975 U.S.-Soviet agreement. But the embargo prevented the shipment of about 17 million metric tons of grain which the Soviets had been expected to buy last year and, according to many authorities, were likely to purchase again in 1980-81.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 367 bushels of wheat or 39.4 bushels of corn.

Although President Reagan spoke against the embargo during his campaign last fall and has been under strong pressure from farm groups to lift it, no such action appears imminent.

The latest analysis by the Agriculture Department's task force on Soviet grain said the increase in import estimates was due mainly to "large recent purchases of wheat flour from Western Europe."

So far in 1980-81, the Soviets are believed to have imported or arranged shipments for about 32 million metric tons of grain, the report said.

"Additional purchases for shipment during the balance of the marketing year are expected, particularly from the Southern Hemisphere coarse grain suppliers," particularly Argentina, it said.

In a related report, the department said U.S. corn and soybean exports have lagged this winter, contributing to weaker prices than had been expected.

Corn exports were shaved by 50 million bushels to a new estimate of about 2.55 billion bushels in the marketing year that began last Oct. 1. Farm prices now are expected to average $3.15 to $3.40 a bushel this season, down 10 cents from the outlook a month ago. Even so, that would be up sharply from last year's average of $2.52 a bushel.

"The reduction (in exports) reflects continued favorable crop prospects in Southern Hemisphere countries, primarily Argentina, and points to increased exportable supplies in those countries during the last half of the U.S. marketing year," the report said.

Projected soybean exports were reduced by 15 million bushels from last month to about 85 million bushels in 1980-81. Estimated farm prices of soybeans were reduced 10 cents to an average of $7.65 a bushel, still higher than last season's average of $6.28.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says smokers in Poland are experiencing a cigarette shortage, partly because the nation's tobacco industry can't afford paper to make them.

A report Wednesday by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service said the shortage "is particularly acute in Silesia and on the Baltic coast."

Poland's output this year is expected to total 87.5 billion cigarettes, compared with an expected demand for 95 billion, the report said. Through February, production was 2.4 billion cigarettes less than last year's pace.

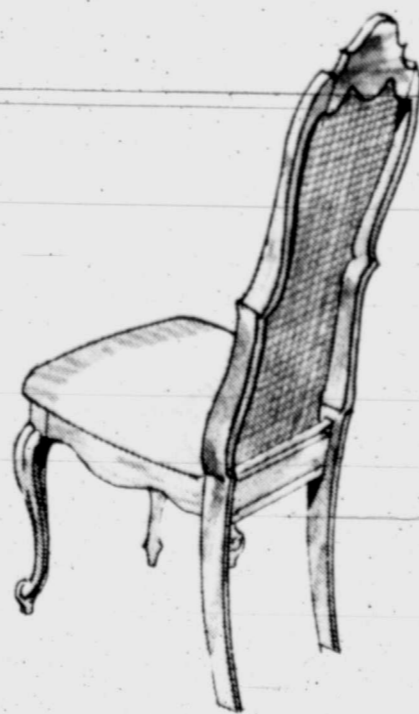

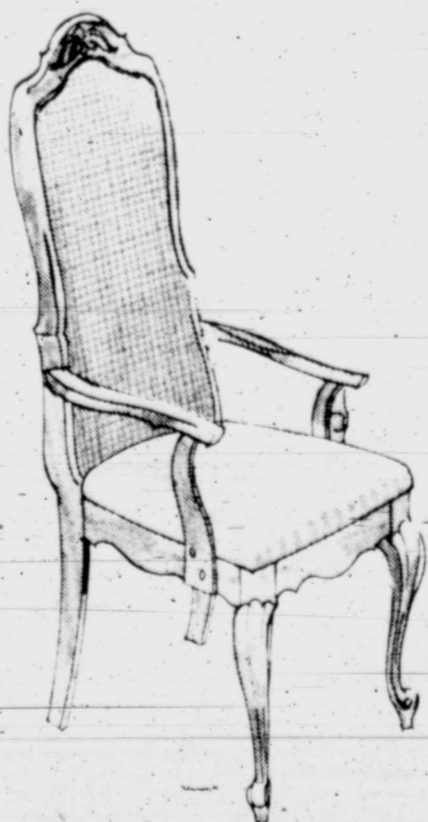

"The Polish tobacco industry attributes the decline to a lack of materials and fewer working hours," the report said. "Because of a severe shortage of foreign exchange, the tobacco industry has been unable to import cigarette paper, packing materials and filters."

Former ambassador says aid may strengthen left

By ROBERT PARRY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sending U.S. military advisers to El Salvador could boomerang by helping a faltering left-wing insurgency rally support in the name of driving the Americans out, the ousted U.S. ambassador to that war-torn country says.

Former Ambassador Robert E. White, 54, also asserted Wednesday that the Reagan administration was firing him from the career foreign service for disagreeing with its "ready-made doctrine" on El Salvador.

"As in China or in Vietnam, the message to the career foreign service could not be more bell-like in its clarity," he said. "Do not send in reports that conflict with preconceived theories, and tailor your recommendations to what Washington policymakers want to hear."

In testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee, the 25-year State Department veteran stepped up his criticism of President Reagan's decision to increase military aid to El Salvador and send 20 additional U.S. non-combat military advisers.

White said that aid and the presence of about 55 American advisers in the Central American country could even help the left-wing guerrillas who are fighting for control of El Salvador.

"The left can now appeal to the youth on this basis: 'Join us,' they will say, 'and drive the United States military from El Salvador,'" White said.

"The guerrilla is now 10 feet high. He is no longer losing the battle to the ill-trained, ill-equipped Salvadoran military. He is now confronting the yanqui invader." White also said he was being removed from the State Department because he disagreed with what he called "misleading" administration statements that El Salvador's government is investigating the murder of three American nuns and a church worker last December.

"If the price of keeping a job is to participate in the continuing cover-up of those responsible for this barbaric act, that price is too high for me to pay," he said.

A State Department spokesman said White was "being retired" from the foreign service under regulations which mandate that career officers not be reassigned within three months of completing a presidential assignment must be separated from the service.

The spokesman said several possible assignments were discussed with White, who was recalled as ambassador to El Salvador on Jan. 28, but that he considered them unsatisfactory. White's retirement will become effective May 3.

In congressional testimony two weeks ago, White criticized Reagan's then-anticipated decision to send more military aid to El Salvador.

White said the aid was unnecessary in view of the government's success in containing a guerrilla offensive in January and would only encourage the army's right wing to stage a coup against the current civilian-military junta.

On Wednesday, White also argued that the United States was "piling" military supplies and advisers into El Salvador against the will of the country's civilian president, Jose Napoleon Duarte.

Junta tells neighbors to mind own business

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — El Salvador's junta told the other Latin American governments not to meddle in its war against the leftist guerrillas, and the United States supported it stand.

"The revolutionary government of El Salvador does not desire the intervention of the Organization of American States in the search for solution to the internal problems in El Salvador," the junta said.

The message, delivered Wednesday by El Salvador's ambassador in Washington, Ernesto Peralta, called an OAS mediation offer "completely unacceptable" and rejected "any ad hoc action by the OAS."

The United States boycotted the session on grounds that El Salvador rejected any OAS role, said Ambassador Jose Rafael Echeverria of Costa Rica, whose government suggested mediation last week and sponsored the meeting.

Chile, Uruguay and Argentina also were absent due a "lack of instruction," Echeverria said.

Those attending were Barbados, Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Granada, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Surinam, Trinidad and Venezuela.

Salvadoran troops battled the guerrillas to the north and east of San Salvador and in and around the capital Wednesday.

One of the battles was in San Nicolas Lempa.

Nuclear waste bill advanced

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A bill to permit dumping of nuclear wastes on state-owned property has been given tentative House approval...

That would return the measure to the Senate, which already has approved the bill but would be required to OK amendments added by the House.

The bill would permit permanent disposal sites in Texas, but only on land the state owns.

Rep. Bennie Bock II, D-New Braunfels, the sponsor, said Texas is the 13th largest producer of nuclear waste in the nation...

Permanent disposal sites in Washington, South Carolina and Nevada are shutting down or restricting the amounts of out-of-state waste materials they will accept.

The bill would require operators of disposal sites to chip into a "perpetual care fund" to guarantee the sites would be maintained safely after they are filled in and covered.

More legislation might be needed because the bill says only "public entities" specifically designated by law can be licensed to operate waste disposal sites.

The House adopted an amendment by Agnich, 77-63, that says a person must prove he or she definitely will be harmed by a disposal site before suing the site's operator.

Agnich said the amendment was needed to prevent "all kinds of harassment suits."

The House rejected three amendments by Rep. Bob Ware, R-Fort Worth, that would have kept the act from applying to oil well service companies such as the Western Co. of North America...

Bock said of Ware's second amendment, "This is another Western Co. amendment, and I'm mad, and I move to table."

Bock said oil well servicing companies that use nuclear materials already were "taken care of" by the bill.

House members also tabled, 82-59, an amendment by Rep. Mary Polk, D-El Paso, requiring the Texas Department of Health to inspect all shipments of nuclear waste before they head for the disposal sites.

"All you are doing is telling the Health Department to do something they are doing anyway," Bock said.

"I do not believe the agency on their own will do this," Ms. Polk said.

Bock said of Ware's second amendment, "This is another Western Co. amendment, and I'm mad, and I move to table."

Bock said oil well servicing companies that use nuclear materials already were "taken care of" by the bill.

House members also tabled, 82-59, an amendment by Rep. Mary Polk, D-El Paso, requiring the Texas Department of Health to inspect all shipments of nuclear waste before they head for the disposal sites.

"All you are doing is telling the Health Department to do something they are doing anyway," Bock said.

"I do not believe the agency on their own will do this," Ms. Polk said.

The House adopted an amendment by Agnich, 77-63, that says a person must prove he or she definitely will be harmed by a disposal site before suing the site's operator.

Say it with a 'Strip-a-gram'

NEW YORK (AP) — The executive was flustered when the applicant who said she'd "do anything" for a job began unbuttoning her blouse in his office. It got worse when he told her to leave.

She turned on a portable tape recorder and to the sound of striptease music, peeled down to her G-string and bikini top and read him a "Happy Birthday" message.

New Yorkers have begun saying it with "Strip-A-Grams," the newest alternative to singing telegrams, as the entrepreneurs who started the company four months ago say franchisees are expected to open within a few months in Boston, Los Angeles, Chicago and even London.

For $80, Strip-A-Gram will send a man or woman dressed as an office worker, party guest or some other character to deliver a surprise greeting. "Gay-Grams" for homosexual customers also are available, says Gregory Fibble, who owns the service with Gary Blumsack.

For $150, customers can get a male-female combination or two strippers of the same sex. A "full burlesque routine" of three to five strippers can be had for an undisclosed price.

The six women and four men who deliver the Strip-A-Grams — actors and dancers earning some extra money — show no full nudity and offer no sexual services, the owners say.
