Reagan warns Soviet leader about Poland

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, led by a sharp protest from the nation's wounded chief executive to the Kremlin, is waging its war of words against the possibility of Soviet military intervention in strike-torn Poland on three continents.

"There was a message sent from President Reagan to President (Leonid) Brezhnev on Friday evening," White House spokesman Larry

Speakes said Sunday.

Speakes refused to elaborate on the contents of the message, but NBC news reported it predicted long and wide-ranging consequences if the Red Army tries to quell Polish labor unrest.

Various reports said a Soviet move into Poland would further delay renewed arms control negotiations and end the possibility of a U.S.-Soviet summit anytime soon.

The New York Times today quoted one unidentified American official as saying the message used "strong language," although the newspaper said both White House and State Department officials asserted it was not a threat or warning.

Also sounding a note of urgency was U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, who said in a broadcast interview that she understood new military preparations were under way

"that would be consistent with an invasion of Poland."

"A Soviet move on Poland would be regarded as a really grave, deeply serious act and would profoundly upset relations between this country and the Soviet Union and prospects for peace and harmonious relations," she said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Other high-level administration officials spread similar messages in their travels across the Atlantic to meet with U.S. allies.

In Jerusalem, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said the situation in Poland "remains more tense than it has been. We've been watching Soviet military steps with growing concern."

"We have been following this situation minute by minute," he told reporters Sunday.

U.S. sources said the secretary of state remained in close touch with Washington throughout the day on the events in Poland, and Haig himself said over the weekend he was prepared to cut short his trip if the crisis deepened.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said it was "bad judgment" for both Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger to be out of the country while Reagan is recovering from last Monday's assassination attempt.

Capital murder charges readied in prison deaths

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 30-year-old convicted armed robber is recovering in a prison hospital from a gunshot wound to the foot and is facing capital murder charges in the deaths of a prison warden and a guard, investigators say.

Eroy Edward Brown, 30, who is serving a 12-year sentence for armed robbery, was under heavy guard Sunday and in good condition in the Texas Department of Corrections prison hospital here, according to Walker County Sheriff's Deputy Rick Burger.

Brown, of Waco, was arrested Saturday about 1 p.m. when officials at the TDC's maximum security Ellis Unit found the bodies of warden Wallace M. Pack, 54, and Maj. Billy Max Moore, 49, supervisor of the unit's farm.

Peace Justice Walter Cooksey ruled that Moore died after being shot once in the head and Pack was beaten and then drowned in about two feet of water.

The Harris County Medical Examiner's office completed autopsies on the two men Sunday, but declined to release any information.

Investigators from the Walker County Sheriff's Department said Sunday capital murder charges were being prepared against Brown, who came to the unit in October 1977 and has served two previous prison sentences.

Texas Ranger Wesley Styles said Brown was "sitting on top of" Pack when guards responded to a call from another inmate who said Moore "was in trouble."

TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said Brown was a trusty with permission to work outside the prison walls and was assigned to a farm shop near a TDC-managed farm area known as "the bottoms."

Hartley said the incident apparently occurred shortly after noon Saturday as Brown was being taken by Moore to another part of the prison.

"The inmate had been taken from the farm shop of the unit to the garden shop because he had violated a disciplinary rule," Hartley said. "He was in the truck with Mr. Moore."

Cooksey would not say what rule Brown broke, but said Brown was "high on marijuana."

Hartley said Brown was taken to "the bottoms" where Moore called for Pack to join them. Two law enforcement officers who asked that their names not be used said Pack was carrying a .38-caliber pistol in his belt when he left to join Moore.

"The warden drove up and apparently, the inmate bolted out of the truck and that's when the scuffle took place," said Hartley.

The warden and the inmate rolled into a nearby ditch where Pack was beaten and drowned, Hartley said.

Reagan not homebound yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, his damaged left lung clearing slowly of particles that doctors say are responsible for his fluctuating temperature, may have to stay in the hospital at least until the end of the week, aides say.

Reagan, who conferred for 10 minutes Sunday with Vice President George Bush about the Polish crisis and other foreign policy matters, has no specific medical program for the rest of the week. Doctors are deciding what to do day by day.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, spokesman for George Washington University Hospital, said Reagan "may be here for several more days, but I'm just speculating."

"We are working on a day-by-day basis of assessing his course," O'Leary said. "I don't see how to predict where we're going to be."

White House aides, however, said they expected the 70-year-old president would be far enough along the road to recovery from the assassination attempt a week ago today to return home by the end of the week. That conforms to a timetable originally mentioned by senior White House officials last Wednesday, although they later said Reagan might be released early this week.

Over the weekend, Reagan ran a fever that reached what was described as a "moderate" level between 101 and 103 degrees Fahrenheit. The normal body temperature is 98.6 degrees, and periodic checks were performed to make sure no infection had set in. None had, doctors said.

A White House medical bulletin said X-rays taken Sunday of Reagan "show persistent lung infiltrates along the bullet track, findings which would be expected to resolve quite slowly."

O'Leary said the particles were probably dried blood or damaged tissue related to normal scarring and debris from the gunshot wound in Reagan's left lung and his subsequent surgery.

"We don't believe this is out of the ordinary," O'Leary said, but he added, "We'd rather it was clearing."

Mayoral elections draw interest

By The Associated Press

A Hispanic mayoral candidate made history, a 25 percent property tax reduction proposal fell by the wayside and a city manager's job is in jeopardy after voters went to the polls over the weekend in a series of municipal elections.

Henry Cisneros, a 33-year-old college professor, says he will work for all the people of San Antonio after claiming the mayor's job of the nation's ninth-largest city Saturday and becoming the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city.

He took almost 63 percent of the vote in an election that drew national interest and saw a record voter turnout.

In El Paso, residents resoundingly rejected a proposal that would have cut city taxes by 25 percent. But lawyer Raymond Pearson and mortgage banker Jonathan Rogers will face each other in a runoff for the

Illegal alien raids leave Permian Basin employers angry

EDITOR'S NOTE: Border Patrol raids on illegal aliens have had a tremendous impact on the labor market in the Permian Basin. This is the second of a six-part series.

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

R.W. is an angry man.

A Midland general contractor, he has just stood by helplessly and watched as the Border Patrol raided his construction yard and apprehended two of his best hands, who happened to be illegal aliens.

"There's two people in jail right now that are very upset because of the Border Patrol," he snaps in a telephone call to The Reporter-Telegram shortly afterward. "It bothers me they don't have anything better to do than drag...good workers and good persons who are just over here looking for work...off their jobs."

Patrick Dearen Staff Writer

R.W.'s is just one case of an angry employer in an ever-increasing file, following the Jan. 15 lifting of the ban prohibiting raids by the Border Patrol on private businesses without a search warrant. And the impact is being felt on the labor market throughout the Permian Basin, where construction company owners and oilfield executives alike say they depend on illegal aliens for labor.

"MY BASIC feeling is this — all they (the Border Patrol) do is just make it harder on these people," says R.W., whose Midland business never before has been inspected by immigration officials. "The lifting of the ban doesn't stop the influx, it just makes it harder for these people to get work."

R.W., whose two apprehended laborers had worked side-by-side with him for months, even during rain and cold, says he found them "very dependable...and capable workers. There's a bad apple in every crate, but by and large I find (illegal aliens) willing and honest."

R.W. says whether or not his two laborers were citizens had no bearing on his decision to hire them. "What we're after is honest people who want to do honest work for an honest wage," he states adamantly. "I don't care what their skin color is or their national origin; I just want somebody who does a good job — and most of them do."

In stressing that he has great sympathy for the plight of the illegal alien, R.W. says he paid one undocumented worker more than $13,000 last year. "So I didn't hire them because they were cheap labor," he explains, "I hired them because they worked hard."

THEY'RE GONE now. R.W. doesn't even know how to pay their back wages, much less replace them. For they were persons, friends, not just statistics on his payroll.

And like him, other employers and persons knowledgeable in the employment field are saying that the reimposed raids — if carried out extensively — will have an effect, perhaps a devastating one, on the Permian Basin labor market and possibly even result in an increase in construction costs.

R.W. puts it bluntly. "As far as the construction industry in Midland, Texas, if we couldn't use Mexican (national) laborers, we'd be in bad shape and the cost factor would go up at least 2 percent," he claims.

While some authorities feel "wet-backs" take away jobs that rightfully belong to American citizens, many employers and others in labor-related positions feel that illegal aliens are a necessity to the work force.

"I think (illegal alien labor) is very important," says Ed Miller, manager of Texas Employment Commission in Midland, "especially in the outlying areas, on farms and ranches where legal citizens are hard to find for the work."

MILLER SAYS illegal aliens take jobs which citizens generally don't solicit, or stay with long even if they do. "They'll take the low-paying, entry-level jobs in all phases of industry, especially the service industry...dead-end jobs that the citizens don't want," he explains. "The work force here is very tight, and with the oil industry coming on very strong right now, it's very difficult to keep anyone (who is a citizen) on low-entry income level jobs."

Miller notes that the West Texas area, and especially Midland, is faced with a severe labor shortage. "It's very difficult to find someone to work in the minimum wage jobs in Midland...when the average hourly wage is somewhere around $7 an hour," he says. "If you get someone you can't keep them. This is where aliens are filling some jobs right now."

Miller, while explaining that TEC is not allowed by law to serve illegal aliens, believes the increase in oil production and drilling in the Permian Basin will only worsen the labor deficit.

"It's really going to be more and more where we have to use what workers are available," he notes. "The employer — and I symphatize with him — is at the point where he's going to hire whoever's going to work."

THAT, SAYS R.W., is his dilemma.

"I have offered these jobs to local people and they won't take them," he claims. "There's literally hundreds of (undocumented workers) throughout the city wanting to make money, and the sad part of it is, if you'd bring in 200 Anglo-Americans out of Chicago, they could get a job all right, but they wouldn't take it — because they don't want to work that hard. So consequently we use the labor market that's available."

While understandably reluctant to discuss illegal alien labor, other Midland construction company executives echo his sentiments in stating that apprehension of undocumented workers will have an adverse effect on their businesses.

"We are in a position, because of the type of labor my husband uses, to be affected by this," a spokeswoman for Permian Basin Builders states. "So far, we haven't been. A time or two recently we have un-

Daniel child custody trial in fourth week

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — The lengthy, often sensational custody suit involving two children of slain former Texas House Speaker Price Daniel Jr. opens its fourth week today.

Daniel's wife Vickie, 33, who is charged with his Jan. 19 shooting death, is battling her late husband's sister, Jean Daniel Murph, for custody of two sons she bore Daniel during their tempestuous four-year marriage.

A jury of nine men and two women is being asked to decide if Mrs. Daniel is a fit mother capable of providing for her children's physical and emotional needs.

Attorneys for Mrs. Daniel and Mrs. Murph have said privately they don't know when testimony in the suit might end.

Personal histories offered by Dr. Kenneth Wetcher, a Nassau Bay psychiatrist who examined both women, reveal different backgrounds and different personalities.

Wetcher is the only witness in three weeks of testimony to suggested that the jury should take Mrs. Daniel's children away from her.

And no one has offered testimony thus far that indicates that they ever saw Mrs. Daniel abuse any of her children — Franklin Baldwin Daniel, 3, Marion Price Daniel, 1, or her children by a previous marriage, Kimberly Moore, 12, and Jonathan Moore, 10.

Wetcher, who was paid by attorneys for Mrs. Murph, said Mrs. Murph was "perfectly normal" and capable of raising both small and larger children.

After a 1 1/2-hour examination of Mrs. Daniel, he said she had a histrionic personality disorder and was capable of harming her children in times of stress.

Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, Mrs. Daniel's attorney, has questioned Wetcher about the effects of taking the two small children away from their natural mother.

Television cameras recorded a tearful scene two weeks ago when Mrs. Murph picked up the children for a court-ordered visit. The children were shown sobbing, clutching their mother and saying they didn't want to leave her.

Attorneys for Mrs. Murph have suggested that the incident was orchestrated and that Mrs. Daniel purposely held the children back and caused them to cry.

San Antonio Mayoral candidate Henry Cisneros gives a victory salute at his campaign headquarters Saturday night.

Hispanic mayor pledges to work for entire city of San Antonio

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Henry Cisneros, swept into office on the strength of his support among wealthy whites and working-class Hispanics, says he'll work for all the people now that he's been elected the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city.

Complete but unofficial returns gave Cisneros — who campaigned in English and Spanish — 96,356 votes, 61.8 percent of the total, while Steen gained 56,789, or 36.4 percent.

"I received support from every part of the city," Cisneros said Sunday following his landslide victory in the nation's ninth largest city.

The combined total for the other six candidates, plus write-ins, was 2,671.

Ruben Bonilla, national chairman of the League of United Latin American Citizens, called Cisneros' election "a tremendous victory."

The 156,263 votes cast represented a record turnout, 43 percent of those registered in the city.

"This will show that Hispanics can run successfully for major offices and will open the door for many changes we want to make," Bonilla said in Corpus Christi.

In a sidelight to the mayoral race, convicted San Antonio brothel madam Theresa Brown claimed less than 2 percent of the vote in her write-in bid for a city council seat.

Boys will be boys — at any age

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — "Yeah, war is hell all right," grinned the grimy soldier as he hustled off to his armored personnel carrier for another skirmish in the war games along the Texas-New Mexico border. The carrier and the tanks it accompanied threw up plumes of sand as they roared over and around the brush-covered dunes of the south New Mexico desert. Helicopters and jets performed an aerial ballet overhead.

Nearby, Capt. Kirk C. Durante barked orders into a radio: "Watch yourself there, Charley. Watch that aircraft at the intersection. OK, Here they come. Fire 'em up."

More scrambling around and then, as quickly as it had begun, it's over. No shots were fired.

"Well, we whipped them again," said Sgt. Harvey Frank of the Montana National Guard. "That's about eight times in the past 24 hours."

Frank is one of 21,000 Army, Marine, Air Force, Navy and National Guard troops participating in Border Star '81, major war games being conducted by the United States Readiness Command to test the preparedness of the nation's military.

The games have brought tanks, armored personnel carriers, jet fighters, helicopters, Jeeps and soldiers all together in the desert country north of El Paso.

"This is one of the biggest operations we've ever conducted," said Lt. Col. Dick Beaudry, a public affairs officer for Readiness Command. "It's so complicated you wouldn't believe it."

But for the soldiers who have spent up to a week piloting tanks and armored personnel carriers around the New Mexico desert, it's much simpler.

"Remember when you were a kid and you'd play with those little soldiers in your sandbox?" said Spec. 4 Kerry Wallace. "Well, this is just bigger soldiers and a bigger sandbox."

"You're out here to see action and you see it, but then again you don't see it," agreed Spec. 4 Roger Ayers. "Most of it's done over the radio. It's all on paper."

"Just the same, we take what we're doing seriously," he said. "They ought to do more of this. When you're just assigned to one base all the time, you don't get the kind of experience you'd need in a real combat situation."

That's exactly the purpose of the desert exercises, Beaudry said.

"Generally, desert is desert," he said. "The desert here is like the desert in Afghanistan or the Persian Gulf. Those are obvious areas that we're concerned about. Our guys need that kind of training."

"The only other thing you can do with these troops to make it more real is to shoot them," he said.

While most of the soldiers interviewed emphasized the value of the training, they said the real war was against the terrain and the climate.

"It's been seven days since I had a bath," Ayers said, looking at his hands, which were covered with grease and grit.

"It's kind of dangerous taking reporters out here after the guys have been out in the desert this long because you don't know how they'll react," said Maj. Don Patterson. "They look at you and they know that you've had a shower and you get to go home and sleep in a bed tonight."

"Those kids get out there for a few days and probably wonder why they ever signed up," he said.

Sgt. Jerry Embry, who heads up a tank unit, said his crew had operated "all night last night and the night before."

"It's rough driving these babies around these dunes at night," he said. "One minute you're inside your tank and the next minute, you're on the outside trying to hang on."

"Most people really get a kick out of all this when the weather's good," he said. "The weather has been lousy this time."

Besides the dirt, Ayers' main complaint was lack of sleep. He and other members of his crew were cramped inside their armored personnel carrier in the heat of the afternoon, napping.

"It's been three days since I got any real sleep," he said. "What a way to get a paycheck."

"I threw my sleeping bag on a dune the other night and I said to myself, 'If a snake gets in this sleeping bag, he'd better be quiet,'" Wallace said.

Monahans man to speak at UTPB

ODESSA — Monahans businessman J. Conrad Dunagan will speak at the fifth annual Honors Convocation at 2 p.m. April 22 in The University of Texas of the Permian Basin student lounge.

The ceremony will honor top students in the class of 1981, as well as the university's outstanding faculty member.

Dunagan founded the Permian Honor Scholarship Foundation, which awards scholarships annually to Permian Basin high school students who plan to attend area community colleges.

Finalists for the $1,000 cash award for outstanding teaching are Dr. Yonina Smith Cooper, Dr. Sean Kelleher and Dr. Edwin B. Kurtz.

The family of W.R. (Bob) Smith, Jr. extends heartfelt gratitude for the numerous acts of kindness and messages of sympathy and support since his passing March 31, 1981.

Friends wishing to make memorial gifts may send them to the Greek Peak Ski Patrol in Virgil, New York or the United Way of Midland, Midland, Texas. Those who wish to make memorial prayers are asked to do so individually according to their religious preference.

Interment will be at Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia at the convenience of the family.

Haig, Begin agree on need for cease-fire

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Prime Minister Menachem Begin agreed that the fighting in Lebanon created a grave situation and a lasting cease-fire is urgently needed, aides of the Israeli leader reported.

Haig also told reporters that the Soviet threat to Poland is growing steadily more ominous and the United States is following the situation on a "minute by minute" basis.

He said Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's decision to attend the meeting of the Czechoslovak Communist Party in Prague today may mean it is "an important occasion with respect to Soviet action affecting the Polish situation."

The fighting in Lebanon between Syrian troops and Lebanese Christians was the only subject Haig and Begin discussed at length in their first meeting Sunday following Haig's arrival from Cairo, an aide to the prime minister reported.

Haig came to Israel after winning the apparent approval of President Anwar Sadat of Egypt for U.S. participation in the peacekeeping force for the Sinai peninsula to be established next year.

Sadat's approval was qualified. But he said following their meeting in Cairo Sunday morning that if the Soviet Union prevents creation of a United Nations force, as it is expected to do, then U.S. participation would be considered.

"It will depend on what will come out from the position of the Soviet Union," Sadat said.

The Egyptian president said there was no discussion of establishing U.S. bases in Egypt.

"There was no need to raise it because it is not a matter to be discussed," he declared.

However, U.S. officials said privately that they were encouraged because the United States and Egypt would be able to work out an informal understanding for U.S. use of Egyptian military installations in times of crisis, and would be able to store military equipment at such bases as Ras Banas on the Red Sea.

The Egyptians have said they would favor such a U.S. presence as long as it did not require a formal agreement that could be interpreted as providing a permanent U.S. base.

On his arrival in Israel, Haig reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to Israel in an obvious effort to calm concern over the Reagan Administration's decision to sell sophisticated military equipment to Saudi Arabia.

Haig was in a relaxed mood at a banquet for him Sunday night, even joking about some of his recent problems within the Reagan Administration.

Natural gas leak blamed for Missouri blast, fire

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — A natural gas leak apparently was to blame for an explosion and fire that demolished three businesses, da-amaged at least 13 others, and blew out windows in a two-square-block area, officials say.

No deaths or injuries were reported after the Sunday night blast.

Fire investigators were unable to pinpoint the site of the explosion immediately. Independence, a city of 112,000, is the home of the late President Harry S. Truman.

No immediate damage estimate was available, but Independence Fire Chief Norman Birch said damage would "no doubt be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars."

The explosion destroyed the Calico Cat, a tavern; Cary's Barber Shop; and the Fairmount Speed Queen Coin Laundry. Businesses which sustained damages included hardware and discount stores and automobile dealerships.

Birch said if the explosion had not occurred on a Sunday night when the businesses were closed and the tavern deserted, "there would have been some lives lost. There's no doubt about it."

Jerry Dahmer, who owns Dahmer Chevrolet, agreed. Every window was blown out of the dealership, he said.

"I'm just thankful it was on a Sunday and nobody was here working," he said. "We could have lost 50 people."

Independence police said they received reports from residents who heard the explosion more than six miles away.

Police cordoned off the area of the explosion and hundreds of spectators jammed side streets, as smoke and ash settled over the area.

Twenty-five police officers were sent to control crowds, direct traffic and protect the damaged businesses.

...Epilepsy, and the misunderstanding surrounding it, are the subjects of an episode of "Happy Days" to be broadcast Tuesday on the ABC-TV network.

The popular show stars Henry Winkler as Arthur Fonzarelli ("Fonzie"). Winkler currently serves as national honorary youth chairman for the Epilepsy Foundation of America and was instrumental in the decision of the "Happy Days" producers to do the show. Also appearing will be special guest star and former Los Angeles Laker basketball great Happy Hairston.

Locally, the program will be aired at 7 p.m. on Channel 9, KTPX.

The story, entitled "Tall Story", is about one person's efforts to overcome his epilepsy to play basketball for the high school team.

"This program tells the rest of America what people with epilepsy have known for years," commented Thomas A. O'Neil, EFA resident. "With proper medication, there is no reason why a young person can't take his or her rightful place as a contributing member of society."

The local Epilepsy Foundation of America is located at 3610 W. Wall in Midland. Phone number is 697-7901...

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Microwave cooking cues

DEAR FOLKS: Microwave ovens are being used more and more in our homes today and more and more I am receiving your letters telling me various hints pertaining to these ovens.

While I feel you know how much I love and appreciate hearing from you, I also feel I must warn you that one of the things some of you are doing, namely using various containers that aren't microwave safe, is considered hazardous by knowledgeable people in the industry.

I don't want you to feel that a microwave oven is the least bit dangerous — those of you who have one know what a convenience it is and what fun to use.

But, as with all appliances, one should follow manufacturer's guidelines and recommendations when using these ovens as they are the experts in the field.

Here's what Wes Snyder, a factory representative of one of the best-selling microwaves on the market, recently had to say about containers.

Many of his comments cover some of your letters and your questions. Maybe we can all listen and hopefully learn something new!

"Some people think that any container which is not metal may safely be used in the microwave oven," Wes says. "This is simply not true."

"Generally, ovenware-type glass or ceramic dishes of all kinds may safely be used and those made of a plastic material specifically for microwave ovens, but regular plastic dishes as are commonly used in households today should not be used as they get too hot. Nor should glass dishes with any kind of metal trim or those made of thin, fragile glass be put in a microwave."

"Glass jars, such as mayonnaise, pickles, etc., should never be used to heat food, etc., as there is a real danger of their breaking due to the curved edge at the top of the jar."

"Also, do not heat baby food in baby food jars. They could explode! You might be fortunate and get by with it a time or two but the danger is always there."

DEAR ABBY

Herpes simplex no laughing matter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I laughed at the letters in your column many times, thinking that people just made up stories to tell you. Now I find I'm one of those people, and believe me, I'm not laughing.

Some time ago I had relations with a girl I had known for a while, never anticipating the consequences. Well, a year and two penicillin shots later, my doctor tells me I have herpes, and that this virus comes and goes and cannot be cured. He also stated that there is a good chance that I may pass it on to whomever I were to have sexual contact with. Knowing this makes me feel like a leper, and I have not had relations with anyone since — except prostitutes, which is all I deserve.

I am 22, Abby, and I'm ashamed of putting my foot into my mother's house. If anyone knew, well, I just couldn't handle it.

Please research this and tell me what to do as soon as you can. It's driving me crazy. — SECOND-CLASS CITIZEN FOR LIFE

DEAR CITIZEN: Unfortunately there is no known cure for Herpes Simplex 2, which is the type you have. For more information on this subject, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: HELP, P.O. Box 100, Palo Alto, Calif. 94302.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are presently drawing up our wills, and one of the toughest decisions we have to make is the placement of our children if my husband and I were both to go at the same time. Our children are 8, 6 and 4 — boy, girl, girl.

We want very much for all three children to be placed in the home of a relative. I have sisters and brothers and so has my husband, all of whom would be willing to take one or more of the children. But it seems such an unfair burden to place all three children in one family. Yet, we can't see splitting them up to go to

two or three families. Can you or any of your readers help us? — NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: Discuss this with the relatives you would want to raise your children. And don't be too concerned about burdening one family with all three children. The chances of you and your husband going at the same time are very slim.

DEAR ABBY: Lately you have fallen into a terrible rut. You tell everyone who has a problem to see a psychiatrist or some kind of therapist.

Abby, if these people could afford to go to psychiatrists, they wouldn't be writing to you. I know what I'm talking about, because my husband would never go anywhere if he had a problem, but if he saw something in your column that really shook him up he'd pay attention to it.

As a matter of fact, a couple of years back you had something in your column about how unpleasant it was to go to bed with a husband who didn't shower regularly. Right after that, my husband started showering nearly every day, which made me very happy. And I'm sure his co-workers were a lot happier, too. Now, if you will just print something about husbands under 50 who have lost all interest in sex... — MILLIE

DEAR MILLIE: Sorry, but I send men under 75 who've lost all interest in sex to their urologists. And if they're physically sound, then I send them to PSYCHIATRISTS.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Full and flowing fashions featured

By SUZY PATTERSON AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) — The trend to fullness and flowing fabrics in fall fashions continues, a preview of the Paris ready-to-wear line that opens Saturday shows.

Designers are turning their backs on the mini, the slim line and the lithe leg in favor of wide and long skirts and pants or full culottes.

It's good news for weight watchers and mothers-to-be and those who haven't packed away the yards and yards of fabric of the fashion hits of just a few seasons ago.

Popy Moreni, a popular new designer whose big ponchos and dolman sleeves won applause, capped her showing with long coats, double-caped full coats and navy wool toppers.

She also showed some knickers in brightly colored knits with floppy Pierrot collars — tied with knit strings that substituted flower shapes for the traditional pom-poms.

There was some leather in this collection — the latest Paris rage. Moreni teamed her suits with frilly collars for a feminine effect. But her biggest show-stoppers were soft dresses with blousy tops and paneled, pleated skirts in bright or subdued colors and chiffon.

Lame, in metal gray, and lace on clown suits or evening dresses was also a favorite of this new designer.

Anne-Marie Beretta used the fall hues of southwest France's wine country, her native region, in her line.

Always one for bold, big shapes, she unveiled a line of huge, flannel ponchos, calf-piped suede jackets with dolman sleeves and raincoats with enormous capes and collars.

Needless to say, the fall and winter look is long.

Survivors include two stepdaughters, Edna Frances Booker of Dallas and Shirley Robinson of Midland; and a niece.

Search not expected to last long

Volunteers thought police would find killer

By NANCY KENNEY Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — The volunteers who gather each week to scour Atlanta's kudzu-draped forests, creeks and alleyways for traces of slain and missing children never dreamed their hunts would last this long.

"Most of us thought the police would catch the killer in a few weeks, and maybe we'd be able to help with some clues," said an Army major who refused to be identified. "We get pretty discouraged, but now we're hooked. How could we give up now?"

Toting sticks festooned with green ribbons, they troop into a gymnasium at a West End church every Saturday, shouting greetings to those they met at the first search last October.

Never before, contends City Councilman Arthur Langford, have citizens in any American city banded together so tightly to help police solve a series of crimes. Langford heads the United Youth-Adult Conference, which sponsors the searches.

A special police task force is investigating the slayings of 22 young blacks and the disappearances of two others since July 1979. Authorities say not all of the cases are related.

On Saturday, the searchers' faces were tense as they joined in their morning prayer. Two victims had been pulled from the swollen waters of the Chattahoochee River since they last met.

One of the victims was 13-year-old Timothy Hill, whose family had joined the hunt the previous weekend. Hill and his friend, Eddie "Bubba" Duncan, were buried Saturday as the volunteers searched an 81-square-mile area embracing the river areas where their bodies were found.

Duncan, a 21-year-old mentally retarded man, is the first adult whose death is being investigated by the special police task force.

In the first search last October, about 2,000 volunteers scoured a southwest Atlanta neighborhood and discovered the remains of 7-year-old LaTonya Wilson.

Since then, the turnout has varied from about 150 to 1,000, and most of the volunteers' discoveries have been false alarms, with dog remains frequently mistaken for the bodies of dead children.

The volunteers stream in from several sectors of the city, but the vast majority are black. Some are friends of the deceased.

Some of the searchers, like the Army major, are military men who feel their survival training will be of use when leading searchers through muddy creek areas in outlying sections of the city.

Some are white suburbanites anxious to share in the crisis of the city's black parents.

"I have children of my own," said Sue Mickle. "And I could never stop now. There are people who count on you every week, and it would be like leaving a job unfinished."

Police officers man command posts at every Saturday search and suggest areas the searchers might comb. Just as they have videotaped slain children's funerals, plainclothes officers are joining in the searches to observe individuals who may be considered suspicious.

Officials have theorized that a killer is keeping a close watch on the citizen activities sparked by his murder rampage.

Meanwhile, the missing persons' unit of the Atlanta Police Bureau was searching for a retarded black man who last was seen a week ago today climbing into a station wagon with a lone black man.

Police spokesman Ben Sims said Sunday 20-year-old Larry Rogers is a slight young man who resembles a teen-ager more than an adult.

His case had not been assigned to the special police task force, Sims said. Rogers was not reported missing until Thursday because his foster father, George W. Hood, said he "didn't want to make a false alarm."

Sims said a friend saw Rogers get into the station wagon with a black man with long hair and a "thick, false-looking" moustache.

Crime boss is released from hospital

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Reputed New England crime boss Raymond L.S. Patriarca was back home today, one week after he lay on a stretcher in a New Bedford, Mass., courtroom to plead innocent to a charge of accessory to murder.

Nurse supervisor Amelia Lato said Patriarca was in satisfactory condition when he was released Sunday from Miriam Hospital under the supervision of his physician, Dr. Barbara Roberts.

State police said Patriarca, 73, returned to his Johnston home after his release from the hospital, where he had been under treatment for a heart ailment.

Last Monday, Patriarca traveled 40 miles by ambulance to New Bedford, where he was arraigned in Bristol County Superior Court on a charge of ordering the 1968 gangland-style slaying of alleged bank robber Robert Candos.

Patriarca lay motionless with his eyes closed, a towel wrapped around his head, when his attorney entered the plea of innocent.

His lawyer, John F. Cicilline, told Judge Robert S. Prince that Patriarca was "in the last days of his life," and unlikely to flee prosecution.

Patriarca's lawyers posted $50,000 cash bail on $50,000 bond for his release.

He faces a hearing Thursday on whether he is physically fit to stand trial.

Rhode Island State Police Lt. Anthony Mancuso has said investigators believe Patriarca allegedly ordered Candos' death for fear he was about to cooperate with federal authorities in an investigation of mob activities.

Candos' skeletal remains were discovered in North

Attleboro, Mass.

The confessed trigger man in the killing, Nicholas Palmigiano, was granted immunity in exchange for testimony to a Bristol County grand jury, prosecutor Robert Kane has said.

Patriarca has also pleaded innocent to a Rhode Island charge of ordering the 1965 slaying of Raymond Curcio. State Police have alleged that Curcio was killed for burglarizing the home of Patriarca's older brother.

Patriarca entered the hospital complaining of chest pains hours after he was arrested by state police last year on that charge.

His lawyers and son, Raymond J. Patriarca, have denied allegations he entered the hospital to avoid court appearances.

The chief state's witness in the Curcio case is Palmigiano.

Soviet summit considered to decide on intervention

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Parliament on Saturday postponed the start of its spring session on grounds Premier Wojciech Jaruzelski was "temporarily indisposed," and leaders of the Soviet-led Warsaw Pact were reported considering a summit that could decide whether to intervene in Poland.

Talks with Polish farmers hoping to form an independent union also were adjourned.

A Western diplomatic observer in Warsaw said there were signs of increased communications installations in the Polish capital and some indication that "things are not absolutely normal." But the observer, who requested anonymity, said he did not foresee a Soviet intervention.

The official PAP news agency said Poland's parliamentary session was postponed from Monday to Friday. It did not explain why Jaruzelski was "temporarily indisposed," but some Polish reporters said he had an eye problem.

Jaruzelski was scheduled to give a major speech before Parliament outlining the situation in Poland, which is more than $23 billion in debt to the West following nine months of sporadic strikes led by the independent union Solidarity.

Communist and Western sources in Moscow said leaders of Warsaw Pact nations might convene soon to discuss the Polish situation, possibly at the 16th congress of the Czechoslovak Communist Party which opens in Prague on Monday.

They said that Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev might travel to Prague for the congress, but the report could not be confirmed. Moscow-led Warsaw Pact forces have been conducting maneuvers in and around Poland for more than two weeks.

The Soviet government newspaper Izvestia accused Solidarity leaders of provoking a political crisis in order to bring down the socialist system.

The statement, accompanied by criticism of the Polish Communist Party for not stemming the tide of "counter-revolution," came as the Reagan administration warned that Soviet forces were in an advanced stage of readiness for possible intervention.

Real estate session set Benny McMahan, president of the Texas Association of Realtors (TAR), will be among real estate executives who will head up a creative financing-legal update session on Tuesday in the Midland Hilton.

McMahan will meet with the board officers at 9 a.m. Tuesday, and the general session begins at 10 a.m. and concludes at 4 p.m. McMahan is past president of the Dallas Board of Realtors and is past chairman of the Texas Real Estate Research Center's advisory committee.

San Antonio Realtor Jerry Starr will speak on "Mortgage Financing for the '80s" at 1:30 p.m., said McMahan.

"Starr's ideas can't solve all housing problems," McMahan noted, "but can surely help in getting at what financing resources are available."

Fred C. Gage, an Odessa Realtor who is TAR vice president, will preside over the meeting. Fort Worth attorney Bob Carter will review legislative developments affecting real estate business.

Lee student wins at VOE meet

AUSTIN — Sharon Williams, a Lee High School junior, will represent LHS at the national Vocational Office Education meet in San Antonio May 9-12 after placing first in the state meet held here Saturday.

Miss Williams, 17, won the Records Management I competition in the state meet.

She qualified for state by winning the regional VOE title in Abilene. She is a VOE lab student at Lee.

New York melting pot simmers tasty stew

NEW YORK (AP) — Take a melting pot and stir in waves of refugees. Simmer over a more global outlook until xenophobia evaporates. Sprinkle with hordes of foreign tourists attracted by a cheap dollar.

Voilà: a culinary capital that can please any palate from Afghani to Zambian.

At Little Afghanistan, near the theater district, former mujahedeen swap imprecations against the Soviet occupiers over aushak and boolaune — dumplings and turnovers stuffed with scallions, meat and yogurt.

Zia Jaghori says Afghans account for about a third of the patrons of his family-run restaurant, which also serves as an ersatz community center for newly arrived exiles and refugees.

U.S. veterans who fought in Vietnam can reminisce about their soldier days at Le Saigon Pavilion, which opened four months ago. The lone Vietnamese restaurant in New York, it serves such classics as Cha gio (spring roll) and Pho Ga (Hanoi chicken soup).

Owner Tran Q Thinh says most of his customers are American. "Vietnamese don't have a tradition of eating out. Each one is proud of the way he cooks. Most are too critical of restaurants."

Thinh, who arrived in New York with $13 in his pocket after the fall of Saigon in 1975, says he was an officer in Vietnam's force but refuses to elaborate on his past life. "It's a new country, you've got to start all over. I started from the bottom."

And after several years at the bottom, as a busboy and waiter, he saved $8,000 and borrowed the rest from friends to begin his new life as a restaurateur. He says he puts in 14 hours of work a day at his restaurant and also attends graduate school where he hopes to earn a business degree.

Andree Abramoff, a French Jew who owns a restaurant named after herself specializing in Mediterranean cuisine, fled Egypt during the 1956 Suez War. Penniless, she landed first in France, then emigrated to New York.

She attributes the growing interest in foreign food to the preoccupation with fresh ingredients among younger people.

"It's the canned, frozen and prepared stuff that's given American food a bad name," says Andree.

"When I first came to this country, people didn't know what an artichoke was. A woman once explained to me it was part of an engine."

Her restaurant specializes in dishes that she says appear with slight variations throughout the Mediterranean — Spain, the French Provinces, Greece and Turkey, Egypt, Syria and Lebanon.

Popular with New York's Latin community is La Victoria China, which serves up Cuban-Chinese-Dominican food, an increasingly common hybrid here.

The partnership began in 1962, when Tommy Tong and Chop Fung met in Santo Domingo and found they had both left China and emigrated first to Hong Kong and then to the Dominican Republic at roughly the same time.

Their restaurant in the capital of Santo Domingo prospered for three years until 1965 when civil violence swept the small Caribbean nation. Tong says he took the occasion to fly to the United States on a visitors' visa with no intention of returning, and Fung took refuge from the street fighting in the U.S. ambassador's residence and was airlifted to the United States.

Once in New York, the pair became friends with two Chinese whose route differed only in that their next-to-last stop was Cuba, from where they escaped via the "Freedom Airlift" that operated during the mid-60s.

Hair cuticle

DARIEN, Conn. (AP) — The outermost layer of the human hair shaft is called the cuticle.

When that layer is flat and smooth, it reflects light and gives hair luster. When it becomes worn by too much brushing or too much heat during blow drying, hair tends to become dull and to split at the ends.

Aerosol spray lusterizers are designed specifically to protect the cuticle layer, says the Aerosol Packaging Council.

Bids are expected on traffic signals

AUSTIN — Bids for installation and modification of various traffic signals in Midland, Odessa and Andrews are expected to be received April 15 by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Odessa District Engineer Bill Lancaster said traffic signals will be installed or existing signals modernized at the following intersections:

Midland — Wadley Avenue and A Street, Neely Avenue at Garfield Street, and S.H. 349 at S.H. 158.

Odessa — U.S. 80 at West County Road; Spur 492 at Dawn Avenue, Parkway Boulevard at Oakwood Drive, and 52nd Street at U.S. 385.

Andrews — U.S. 385 at Mustang Drive north of the city, and U.S. 385 at Mustang Drive south.

Non-smoking areas used internationally

Dear Dr. Solomon: Whenever I have occasion to fly anywhere, I've become accustomed to being asked whether I prefer a seat in the smoking or nonsmoking section. Do foreign airlines follow the practice of segregating smokers from nonsmokers on their flights? — Thelma

Dear Thelma: Separating smokers from nonsmokers on airlines is not unique to the United States. Almost all of the major international airlines follow the same practice, even though they are not required to do so.

Incidentally, an increasing proportion of airline passengers are asking to be placed in the no-smoking sections.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I suffer from an extremely embarrassing condition — I pass urine when I reach orgasm. Have you ever heard of this? Do you know what causes it and whether it is subject to treatment? — Mrs. T.M.

Dear Mrs. M.: Enuresis at time of orgasm is unusual, but it does occur. The cause is not known. Emptying the bladder before intercourse sometimes proves helpful, as does the use of certain medicines. I suggest you contact your physician and arrange for a complete physical examination. He or she will then be in a much better position to decide on an appropriate course of treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've always considered my mother a practical, intelligent woman, but a bout with arthritis seems to be warping her ability to think. I can sympathize with her because I know the condition is chronic and painful, but I can barely hide my annoyance when she shows me a copper bracelet she now wears to counter the effects of the disease. Is this search for a miracle cure typical of arthritis patients? If my mother falls for such an obviously ridiculous scheme, I can see how an unscrupulous person can get rich catering to the needs of some desperate people. — Mrs. M.C.

Dear Mrs. C.: Unfortunately your mother is not alone in her search for a cure for her arthritis; in fact, one study has shown that more than 90 percent of arthritis patients try at least one unproved treatment for their condition at some time during the course of their illness. While their motivation in doing so — that is, their desperate search for relief if not a cure — is understandable, the danger is that it often delays their obtaining more orthodox forms of treatment.

Dr. Cody K. Wasner, of the University of Alabama School of Medicine, has reported that interviews with 98 patients with arthritis showed that 92 had tried at least one unorthodox form of treatment. The most common such remedy involved the use of lotions, creams, and ointments. Others included special diets, the use of copper bracelets and trips to a variety of places believed to offer the possibility of relief.

Whether or not your mother continues to wear the copper bracelet, try to convince her of the importance of continuing with the more conventional forms of treatment.

Possible link is reported between wood shop fumes and cancer rate

DETROIT (AP) — Fumes produced by work on a synthetic substance used in automotive wood model shops could be linked to the shop employees' higher cancer rate, the Detroit News reported Friday.

Tests by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health indicated high-speed machine work on a tough synthetic used as "wood" to make full-scale models of cars — could create toxic fumes, the News said in a copyright story.

The synthetic is treated with laminated layers of plastic resins which contain formaldehyde, the News said. A recent NIOSH document, based on epidemiological studies and animal tests recommended "formaldehyde be handled in the workplace as a potential occupational carcinogen."

The evidence turned up by the federal investigators is "borderline positive, but it gives us our first real clue as to what to really look for," said Charles McCammon, a NIOSH industrial hygienist.

Three studies have verified that workers in the wood model shops have a higher cancer rate than other auto workers. The NIOSH study, which involves 2,400 workers from three shops in the Detroit area since 1940, is scheduled for completion at the end of 1982.

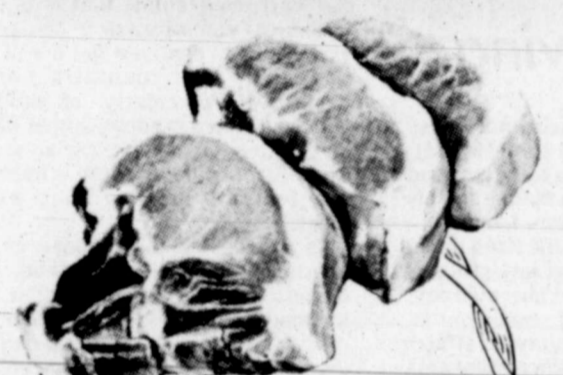

"We are not privileged to the information you have uncovered, but it is something that cannot be ignored," Dr. Robert G. Wiencek, General Motors Corp.'s director of occupational safety and health told the News. "There may be some derivative of formaldehyde being formed in the high-speed machining because we do use a urea formaldehyde resin."

Wiencek said he would order more air and dust tests for chemicals around high-speed machinery.

Responsibility fulfilled

Midlanders have once again performed that most cherished part of a free society — electing the individuals who will represent them during coming months on local governmental bodies.

Congratulations are in order for all the winners, Place 1 City Council electee Jesse Hatfield, Place 3 City Council incumbent Carroll Thomas, Midland Independent School District trustees Ann Page and Gary Hopper, and Midland County Hospital District directors Ed Magruder, Dr. Henrie Mast and Wanda Mohr. These winners worked diligently to gain the positions they were elected to and now have the duty and the responsibility to carry out their duties to the best of their abilities.

Success of $5.6 million in bonds to finance the construction of two new and much-needed elementary schools in the city and $1.05 million to finance the remodeling of Midland High School's office area, increasing the size of that facility's band hall and construction of a new library. Those bonds also will finance the renovation and increase the size of the Lee High School office area.

These improvements to the Midland Independent School District's facilities were necessary and voters indicated their commitment to the school system by their vote.

Midlanders were fortunate in that a full slate of candidates ran this time around. That's good, as we have pointed out many times in the past. We all have the obligation as citizens in the society to make a contribution in some way to the successful continuation of that society.

Our system of government works. We can be proud of that fact and rest confident in the knowledge that our participation in the electoral process keeps our freedom strong and the system viable.

Midlanders owe a debt of gratitude to all the individuals who participated in this year's city, school and hospital district elections — the losers as well as the winners. It takes the participation of all to make the system successful.

'Law-away' plan for oil

The Reagan administration is making reasonable efforts to get the vital strategic petroleum reserve moving at a steady pace.

The stockpiling program, which would play a crucial role in the event of another disruption in crude oil imports, is woefully behind its one billion barrel goal by 1985. At present the southern salt mine domes hold only about 120 million barrels, or enough to replace the loss of foreign oil imports for 20 days.

That adds up to an insignificant margin of security since a major curtailment would likely be counted in months, not a few weeks. The young administration deserves credit. It is coming up with some novel ideas, one of which may strike pay dirt.

Under consideration is a "lay-away" proposal whereby the U.S. government would deal directly with Saudi Arabia for oil to be pumped into the reserve. The Saudis would not be paid until the oil was needed in an emergency. Compensation would be at the going rate, assuring Saudis that they and not the U.S. would reap the benefit — the benefit from higher prices.

In the past, opposition to stockpiling was based partly on the fear that the purchases would lead to higher prices. This development would be avoided with deferred payments.

Earlier, the Department of Energy considered selling oil bonds to private investors to purchase crude for the reserve, thereby allowing the public to finance the stockpiling. Investors would be paid when stockpiles were sold to private oil companies in a crisis, with the proceeds paying off the outstanding securities.

Although there was considerable support in Congress for that plan, it was rejected because of "too much uncertainty and not enough return on investment," according to DOE Secretary James Edwards.

At current market prices it would cost more than $30 billion to reach the billion-barrel goal. That's why stockpiling proposals which avoid draining government funds would be an especially attractive solution in this budget-cutting period.

CHARLEY REESE

Essence of abortion issue concerns the taking of life

When a human sperm unites with a human egg and the process of cell multiplication begins, what you have is a human being. At that stage the human being is not yet able to survive without the support system of the mother's body, just as a 12-month-old human being is not able to survive without outside support.

But no human conception, allowed to continue, has ever produced anything other than a human being. The life in the womb is a human life and when it is "aborted," it is a human life which is destroyed.

I am compelled by my vision of reality to recognize the necessity, under certain circumstances, of destroying human life. Those circumstances are essentially two in number: in the defense of other human life and in exchange for another human life. These circumstances require value judgments as when you have to decide if you value the life of the innocent intended victim more than the life of the aggressor or when a choice must be made between the life of the mother and the life of the unborn.

I am willing to make those judgments, however painful, but I am not willing to evade the issue by declaring an embryonic human being to be a "thing" or by, as the courts have done, making a legalistic distinction between human beings and "persons."

I believe that a society which does not value life, each and every individual life, is morally sick. To justify death for any other reason than the protection of another, more valued life, is to turn one's back toward all that is valuable and sacred in the human experience.

To kill a human being simply because one does not wish to care for him; to kill a human being simply because one believes the state will have to expend tax money to care for him; to kill a human being simply because one believes he may not turn out to meet one's expectations in terms of productivity, is to place a higher value on one's personal comfort, on money, or on efficiency, than on a human life.

Such an attitude is to me heinous and disgusting and if it becomes widely accepted, I cannot see how it can be contained and prevented from sliding the society toward a Holocaust.

Life is justified by its existence alone. Once you depart from that and begin to construct legal tests which life must meet to justify continuation, then you open the door to hell. One can easily argue with equal logic as did the Nazi intellectuals that it is uneconomical and injurious to the group as a whole to continue the life of the physically and mentally handicapped, of the elderly, of children with less than a predetermined IQ, or of children of certain racial stock. There are, in fact, some American intellectuals making such arguments.

To me this is the essence of the abortion issue. The arguments that the fetus is not a human being or that the mother "owns" her body are specious. If a mother may kill a child in the womb because it is inconvenient, then why can she not kill a two-year-old child if that child becomes inconvenient? One can certainly locate evidence that the burden of child-rearing sometimes causes tremendous hardship on the parents.

Nor is it an issue of pro-life versus pro-choice. It is pre-life or pro-death. What goes out the back door of abortion clinics in plastic bags are not choices, but dead babies. The service provided by the abortionist is killing, removal and disposal of a human being in its early stage of development.

The men who made the decision as to who would die and who would live at Auschwitz and the other death camps were doctors. They too believed in "healing" by killing and they, too, acted with the legal sanctions of the state and of public opinion.

As tax time approaches, try to remember that when reporting your gambling winnings you may not deduct the cost of doping the horse.

Alimony is deductible if you pay it. However, it is taxable if you receive it. Uncle Sam wants you to have a happy marriage, but he's going to get his nose matter what happens.

The $1 checkoff for presidential campaigns may not seem like much but it could keep some future candidate from taking a $1 bribe from a very, very timid influence peddler.

He could also take your dollar and purchase one-half second of radio time in East Gopher Tail, Vermont.

The term "adjusted gross income" applies mainly to rock stars and major league baseball players — as does the term "adjusted obscene income."

When paying your taxes think of Uncle Sam as a pen pal. Think of yourself as a tiny cog in the flywheel of democracy — a tiny speck on the flypaper of freedom.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Taxpayers footing-the-bill for high living

WASHINGTON — Nearly $54 billion will be lopped from the federal budget over the next two years if the White House has its way. Some worthwhile projects have been consigned to the chopping block. But the budget cutters haven't begun to eliminate all the government waste.

At the Education Department, for example, academicians cook up pretentious programs and get government grants that are often squandered on their pet boondoggles.

To start with, the president's waste watchers might take a closer look at the quasi-public educational "laboratories" which get continuous, non-competitive, sole-source contracts from the National Institute of Education. Their ostensible purpose is to improve the quality of classroom teaching and to promote educational research.

My associate Indy Badhwar investigated one of the largest of these labs — a Missouri-based non-profit corporation called CEMREL Inc., which serves 10 Midwestern states. The results were shocking.

Whatever else CEMREL may have accomplished over the years, government audits and the laboratory's own records show that it certainly improved the quality of life for the corporation's executives and promoted their taste for travel and expensive meals, which were charged off to the taxpayers.

In the past decade, federal grants to CEMREL have totaled about $26 million — more than 96 percent of the laboratory's entire income. Here are some examples of the way the taxpayers' money was spent, taken from CEMREL's own internal documents and audit reports:

— CEMREL President Wade Robinson was also president of the

Jack Anderson

Dance Concert Society, a dance booking agency in dire financial straits. He let the society move into CEMREL's St. Louis headquarters. CEMREL employees, being paid by federal funds, were required to do work for the booking agency as well. The laboratory also bought memberships in the dance society for all its employees — with federal funds.

— To accommodate a husband-wife team who wanted to work in Chicago, CEMREL set up a 10-member research office there. Office space was rented in the plush John Hancock Center because the couple lived there, although space was available a few blocks away for far lower rent. For three years, the rent was $12,000 a year; then it doubled. The husband-wife team's salaries did almost as well: In three years, from $24,000 a year for the husband and $17,000 for the wife, the salaries went up to $39,000 apiece. Auditors were told the reason for paying so much to the co-directors of such a small research group: CEMREL needed them both, and the wife insisted on equal rank and salary.

— CEMREL President Robinson's $50,000-plus salary "may not be reasonable in comparison with salaries paid to other educational administrators," government auditors reported.

Robinson was being paid more than the presidents of seven state-supported four-year colleges in Missouri, and was also given an automobile for his personal use, the auditors found.

CEMREL officials wined and dined business associates and key officials of the federal education bureaucracy, using corporate-owned credit cards. The dinners were often lavish affairs at such fancy Washington restaurants as the Lion D'Or and Rive Gauche. Nearly half of 125 restaurant tabs studied by auditors contained little information about the purpose of the meals.

CEMREL made substantial payments to members of its board for inadequately documented services — and failed to disclose the payments on federal tax returns. When George Parry, a financial consultant and board member, demanded an explanation at a board meeting, he said he was told by treasurer Charles Duffy, "George, just shut up." Parry is now cooperating with government investigators.

— CEMREL's top officials routinely received large travel advances which, federal investigators said, amounted to interest-free loans.

— CEMREL executives used corporate funds for foreign travel, including trips to Egypt on "official" business.

Footnote: CEMREL's basic response to many of the auditors' findings is that the government has no business snooping into the laboratory's corporate finances. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, doesn't agree. I turned the documents over to Hatch, who has begun an investigation. The Education Department's inspector general's office is also reopening its investigation of CEMREL.

UNDER THE DOME — March 19 was Warren Magnuson Day in Seattle, and many of the former senator's colleagues on Capitol Hill planned to attend. But when the press learned that Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., had arranged for an Air Force jet to take the senators out, the plane was abruptly canceled. A dozen senators then changed their minds about going. But the taxpayers may lose anyway. Sens. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, are planning to bill the trip as a stopover en route to their home states, and Sen. Jennings Randolph, D-W.Va., has his staff studying the possibilities of writing it off somehow.

— After much soul-searching, Rep. Larry McDonald, D-Ga., inserted Rev. Jerry Falwell's Penthouse magazine interview in the Congressional Record, with a prefatory remark that Penthouse is a "pornographic, vulgar and salacious magazine." The bill for printing the interview: $1,920.

— Sen. Harrison Schmitt, R-N.M., a former astronaut and the Senate's only geologist, recently asked a first-grade class if anyone knew what gravity was. "Sure," piped up one kid, "pebbles and rocks." As in gravity.

INSIDE REPORT:

Nixon called Al Haig 'tops' for crisis management role

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Richard M. Nixon told a senior White House aide that Ronald Reagan should make whatever arrangement for crisis management best fits his needs, but that in Nixon's book, "Secretary of State Alexander Haig is 'tops.'"

That word was sent indirectly to Reagan over the weekend of March 14 when the president was in New York to see his son dance and take his wife to the theater. But there was an unplanned aftermath. Nixon telephoned Haig several days later and reported the conversation to him, leaving the secretary of state with the impression that the senior White House aide had been undermining Haig. That partly explains the animosity between Haig and the White House. Presidential aides have since tried to clear the air and, on the surface at least, Haig has changed his mind about being undermined.

OLD TROUPER REAGAN — The ham actor in Ronald Reagan is still regaling nurses and doctors at George Washington University Hospital with jokes and anecdotes flashing back to his career under the lights.

When tubes were removed from the president after the operation that extracted the bullet, he sent intensive care unit nurses into uncontrollable laughter with this request: "All right, let's play this whole scene over from scratch, starting at the hotel."

Regan humor, for decades a stock in trade among his intimate friends in California, is now sweeping the land and adding to his popular appeal — a new factor that might help pass his economic program. Whether it does or not, the doctors and nurses at GW Hospital won't soon forget their famous patient.

Evans

GOLDWATER VS. NAVY

Any expectations by defense contractors that they would be on Easy Street with a conservative Republican administration and Senate were shattered April 1 by one of their most faithful friends on Capitol Hill for a generation: Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona.

Presiding over the tactical air subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee, Goldwater cut back President Reagan's request of 60 new Northrop F-18 jet combat planes for the Navy in fiscal year 1981 and 63 in fiscal year 1982 to 53 and 58, respectively, for the two years. Northrop's lobbyists were stunned.

Although the Navy never has considered Goldwater (a reserve Air Force general) as overly friendly, even such staunch Navy backers as Armed Services Committee Chairman John Tower of Texas agreed with him. F-18 program costs have soared from $12.9 billion six years ago to $14 billion, partly because of constant design changes. Goldwater, an aviator himself, was set to pilot the F-18 April 3 at the Navy's invitation.

SUPPLY-SIDE PITCH — The attempted assassination cancelled what had shaped up as a fascinating dinner meeting in Washington the evening of March 30 between two ardent supply-siders and the two toughest tax cut skeptics in the White House: James A. Baker III, chief of staff, and David Gergen, staff director.

Baker and Gergen, both backers of Vice President George Bush for the presidential nomination, have not been enthusiastic about President Reagan's embrace of the Kemp-Roth tax bill. As a Bush campaign speechwriter, Gergen was credited with labeling Reagan's tax policy as "voodoo economics."

They were scheduled to dine with two of Rep. Jack Kemp's key backers: economic consultant Jude Wanniski and New Jersey Republican politician Jeffrey Bell. These two supply-siders would have tried to sell Baker and Gergen on their doctrine as well as urge greater flexibility in approaching Democratic tax cut initiatives. The shooting of the president cancelled the meeting, with no new date set so far.

THE GERMAN PERIL

The neutralism sweeping West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's

Social Democratic Party now has targeted moderate-foreigner Hans Apel for replacement as foreign minister with soft-liner Horst Emhke, a leader of the party's left-wing faction that puts its future in close relations with Moscow.

Apel himself has often come down on what Reagan administration officials regard as the anti-U.S. side of major East-West and NATO issues. But compared to Professor Emhke, now deputy chief of Schmidt's party in the Bundestag, Apel is a hard-liner.

The trend toward the left inside the party has been worrying the U.S. since long before Reagan came to power. But news that Apel might be scuttled at the Foreign Ministry to put an all-out dentist at Schmidt's left elbow is causing consternation at high levels of the Reagan administration.

Illegal alien raids leave Permian Basin employers angry

nowing hired an illegal alien, because sometimes when we ask for a social security card they either say they have lost it or they present a metal card."

"NINETY PERCENT of my (workers) are Mexican...so (the possibility of raids) does affect us out here, it hurts us," says Bill Allen, president of Allen Construction Company, which builds residences. "No one here in this country works except the Mexican people."

While noting that the lifting of the ban has had no direct effect so far on Ed Kirkpatrick Contractors, Gloria Kirkpatrick feels on-site solicitations of illegal aliens by the Border Patrol are counterproductive. "I don't feel it's good for construction sites for them to come in (searching for aliens)," she said, citing disruptive factors. "At different times we have had more illegal aliens working for us. They do work cheap, and they work better. But we don't hire them because they're cheaper, because they're paid the same as a legal."

"We treat them like people. It wouldn't matter if they're legal or not, our payroll would remain the same."

However, not all employers contacted by The Reporter-Telegram feel the lifting of the ban will have a drastic effect on their labor.

"From my point of view, I see no effect whatsoever," says a spokesman for one Midland construction firm. "We have a very small turnover, and have had no problem obtaining labor if illegal aliens (are apprehended)...We have a great influx of people here from all over the country, a large work force, so we haven't had to take illegal aliens to fill our labor situation."

FURTHERMORE, there are those who feel deportation of illegal aliens is beneficial in that it rightfully restores certain jobs to citizens.

"(Illegal alien labor) is hurting us to a certain extent on skilled jobs," notes business agent for Carpenters Union Local 1428 John Clenney, who is adamant in his belief that laws should be passed prohibiting employers from hiring undocumented workers. "I don't think it's right to have people here on welfare and unemployment compensation...when there's people coming over here and taking jobs away from them. (Employers) should exhaust all sources here...before hiring illegals."

The controversy as to the effect of removal of illegal alien labor also reigns throughout the oil industry in the Permian Basin.

"We can't operate the whole oil patch without them," Bob Madison, an assistant at Permian Basin Petroleum Association, says bluntly.

Illegal aliens generally find jobs in the less-skilled positions relating to the oil business, such as in pipe supply yards, pipeline construction, well servicing and drilling operations. The language barrier generally is prohibitive in many of the more technical tasks, however.

Again, employers were reluctant to discuss illegal alien labor, and only a few companies contacted by The Reporter-Telegram admitted they employ wetbacks.

"WE DO HAVE workers with Hispanic names," says Lowell Branum of Tri-Service Drilling Company. "I assume all are citizens. As far as I know we don't have any illegal aliens employed...we don't hire our field people through the office. The custom is for the driller to hire his own crew."

Branum discussed the problems a Mexican national encounters in oil-related jobs.

"The job of a floorman (on a drilling rig) is a skilled job, and there is a time when unskilled people are hired as trainees," he explains, "but I don't see us as hiring any illegal aliens, because of the language limitation, which of course would be a barrier in helping them learn oilfield trades."

However, Mark Price, secretary-treasurer of Diamond Oil Well Drilling Company, definitely sees an adverse effect on the oilfield labor market.

"If (the Border Patrol) is able to enforce it, I'd probably say there would be a shortage," he notes. "As far as ourselves here, we don't use any of that type of labor. But I imagine for other servicing companies...it will create a shortage of manpower."

One pipe supply company official, while noting the raids "would be beneficial more than anything else" in upholding existing immigration laws, admitted that "our customers work them by the hundreds" and would suffer the affects.

AREA RANCHES ALSO could be the target of Border Patrol "detail," but the effect on ranchers probably will be minimal.

"We don't do work on ranches generally," notes Charles Hensley, supervisor of the Big Spring Border Patrol Station. "They're so widespread and employ so few illegal aliens that because of gasoline and the distances it doesn't make it worthwhile for us."

Despite the anger of employers like R.W. — as well as the hope by persons like Clenney that benefits will result — the "detail" work by the United States Border Patrol is likely to continue throughout the Permian Basin, and perhaps even increase. Its ultimate effect, from strictly personal viewpoints of those involved, is a subject studied, debated, even argued, but most probably not fully realized by anyone. The only thing certain is, as Hensley bluntly puts it, "we've made in the neighborhood of 300 job vacancies in the last month. Now what they're filled with, I don't know."

Payroll numbers can be replaced, believes R.W., but not persons. He will remain an angry man.

Have Soviets found Atlantis?

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet oceanographers say they may have discovered the lost continent of Atlantis on the seabed several hundred miles west of Portugal.

Andrei Monin, director of research aboard the Soviet vessel Akademichan Kurchatov, said scientists based their hypothesis on "mysterious structures" seen in 460 photographs taken of sunken Ampere Mountain, 450 miles west of the Straits of Gibraltar, between Portugal and Madeira Island.

"In a number of pictures of the northeastern part of the summit, (researchers) discerned rectangular structures. On one of the photos, we can see rectangular plates (one yard wide rising from bottom)," the Tass news agency quoted Monin as writing in the Soviet magazine Earth and Universe.

"The position of plates, individual blocks, as well the regular shape of the plates photographed...may testify to their artificial origin," Monin said.

Mugabe raps political system

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe today attacked the multiparty parliamentary system his country inherited from Britain, the country's former colonial overlord, claiming it leads to "the politics of negativism."

Opening a four-nation seminar of the British Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Mugabe said, "The politics of negativism as contrasted to constructive criticism has no place in a young country such as ours."

"Opposition for the sake of opposition is negation...of the positive, making for a negative trend in our debates and politics. This is my indictment of the multiparty political order and its sponsorship of negative forces," he told delegates from Britain, India, Tanzania and his own nation.

Despite his criticism, Mugabe said his government is "committed to upholding the constitution. Its imperfections will no doubt be redressed as we consolidate the people's power in the new order."

Clute residents decide to keep name of town

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — Like it or not, Clute is on the map to stay. After several humorous and some not-so-humorous suggestions, folks have decided for a second time to leave the name of this Southeast Texas community of 9,500 alone. Some citizens believed the name just didn't have the right ring. A few even suggested the sound was so abrasive to the ears it drove away prospective businesses from the area. "Some have made light of the name and didn't really believe a city could be called Clute. They thought it was a hick-town or something," said City

Councilman Gene McDaniel. "I just can't put my finger on it. Maybe Clute just sounds backward." But voters disagreed 577 to 76 Saturday, turning thumbs down on a city charter review committee's proposal to change the town's name to Brazoswood. In 1970, citizens overwhelmingly rejected the same proposal. "Hopefully, this lays it all to rest," said City Manager Bill Pennington. Clute was incorporated in 1957 and named after a prominent Brazoria County landowner. "It's a single syllable word and it seems to have some sort of evil connotation to it that I don't understand myself," said Eugene Bright Jr., chairman of the review committee. Published reports of the community's dissatisfaction prompted a flurry of suggestions from coast to coast. Among the more humorous names were Cute, Clout, Ameslan, Sweet, Honey Bun and John Wayne City. The review committee said it appreciated the suggestions but considered Brazoswood the only alternative. But it also drew some negative reaction, according to Jean Jacobs, wife of Mayor Bobby Jacobs. One irate Hingham, Mass., family named Clute wrote the mayor, saying they had been planning to visit the coastal community for six years but cancelled the trip after hearing the town's name might be changed. "We got letters from all over the country — even some as far away as Germany — from people named Clute. They weren't related to the original first family, but they just wanted to say they had lived with the name for many years and it wasn't any bother to them," Mrs. Jacobs said. Meanwhile, Pennington breathed a sigh of relief. He would have been faced with the task of changing the city limit signs and city stationary.

Budget backers seek momentum

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's backers in Congress, having won this year's first legislative battles over spending cuts, are seeking to maintain the momentum of their campaign to develop a federal budget along the lines of his recommendations. Here is the status of major legislation:

Federal Budget
Budget committees in the Democrat-controlled House and the Republican-dominated Senate are set to work this week on comprehensive budget resolutions setting total figures for federal spending and revenue programs in fiscal 1982, which opens Oct. 1.

In a key congressional victory for Reagan's economic program, the Senate voted 88-10 last week to support a package of spending cuts including $36.9 billion in fiscal 1982.

Vice President George Bush says Reagan appreciates the Senate action and "we hope it will serve ... as an example to members of the House of Representatives, who now have the same responsibility ahead of them."

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, says the panel will "improve on those parts that need improving." Rep. Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, the panel's senior GOP member, says the committee's Republicans are "definitely and completely committed" to Reagan's economic package.

Farm-Food
The president signed into law last week legislation to scrap a scheduled increase in dairy price supports as part of his effort to restrain federal spending. White House aides said Reagan signed the bill at a

Washington hospital where he is recovering from a gunshot wound suffered in an assassination attempt.

Income Taxes
As Congress continues to study proposals for reducing taxes, Reagan's budget director, David A. Stockman, said last week that the administration still favors a three-year, $250 billion cut in individual income taxes.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, has called the president's multi-year plan all but dead and has said the panel is likely to approve a one-year bill.

Clean Air
The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee approved legislation last week which would give the steel industry a three-year extension for meeting clean-air standards. It would extend the deadline for steel industry compliance with federal air quality standards.

Democrats stepping up budget criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking their cue from White House statements that it's "business as usual" for the administration, Democrats are stepping up public criticism of President Reagan's budget-cutting program and moving ahead with attempts to derail it in the House.

The chairman of the House Budget Committee, Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., prepared today to unveil his alternatives to Reagan's program.

Jones has said his panel will "improve on" parts of the Reagan program but "certainly over half" the administration recommendations will be accepted.

While the president was convealing from his bullet wound last week, Republicans in charge of the Senate were whipping through $36.9 billion in cuts from former President Carter's proposed budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, generally along the lines of the president's proposals. The Senate voted 88-10 to endorse $87 billion in budget cuts over three years.

Many Democrats were careful to avoid statements that could be taken as unseemly partisan attacks on a hospitalized president.

But the attitude of many party stalwarts was perhaps characterized by Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the assistant Democratic leader of the Senate, who called the Reagan cuts a "cruel abandonment of America's commitment — indeed, America's obligation — to help those most in need."

There has been much speculation that the president would gain sympathy votes in Congress. But interviewed on CBS'

"Face the Nation" program Sunday, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said he did not think so.

"I don't think that this sympathy will translate into votes," Byrd said. "We must be objective when it comes to determining the issues."

A number of Democrats have indicated they hope to force cuts in the overall amount Reagan has recommended for defense spending while restoring some money for social programs.

The week's lineup goes like this:

—The full Budget Committee, beginning work on the package late this afternoon, planned daily sessions until a two-week congressional Easter recess begins Friday.

—On Tuesday, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., plans to begin speaking more forcefully on opposition to the Reagan program, sources say. O'Neill has been counseling caution in approaching the Reagan program on the grounds that the party must not appear obstructionist.

—Also Tuesday, Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt plans to address a National Press Club luncheon, a speech expected to focus on opposition to parts of the Reagan program.

—On Wednesday, the House Democratic Caucus will try to reach a consensus on alternative proposals to be submitted by its steering and policy committee.

—On Thursday, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, is expected to outline a counterproposal to the Reagan program for cutting personal income tax rates an average of 10 percent a year for three years. Democrats oppose a three-year tax bill and are expected to propose a one-year plan targeted to specific business incentives.

Back in the Senate, the Budget Committee begins work Tuesday on legislation embodying an overall spending ceiling for 1982 and a spending blueprint for the next three years.

Committee members will be reminded they must come up with an additional $74 billion in cuts to meet the president's goal of a balanced budget in 1984.

One Republican source said it would be politically difficult for the GOP members on the Senate panel to plan for a deficit in 1984 after the budget-cutting votes the Senate had last week.

Suffering continues in Zahle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two Christian women gave birth Sunday in the basement of the Red Cross Clinic in Zahle and named their new sons Peace and Victory.

"Thank God it's a boy," said Victory's mother. "Now Zahle has one more fighter."

To escape Syrian shelling that has killed 54 people and wounded 110 others, the 200,000 residents of the Roman Catholic city 30 miles east of Beirut were spending their fifth day Sunday huddled in their basements.

"There is no water, no electricity, no bread and no heating," one woman reported by telephone. "The shelling has been so bad there is not even a bird in the sky. I have enough milk to feed the baby today but not tomorrow."

Officials at the Red Cross Clinic said the city's two main hospitals were not functioning after receiving direct hits. A rescue worker said an estimated 260 people, some of them wounded, were trapped in the hospitals.

"The Syrians keep shelling the same house until it is completely demolished," said the head of the clinic. "There is not a single house in Zahle which has not been hit."

Shellbursts could be heard as he spoke. "Hear that?" he asked.

He said there was not enough medicine or food for all the casualties, and electric power and water had been cut off since the shelling started Wednesday.

The Voice of Lebanon, the Christian-Phatange Party's radio station, reported the Red Cross rescued a 7-year-old boy from the rubble of one building. It said he was crying for food as he clutched the bodies of his mother and sister.

Pierre Gubran, a spokesman for the International Red Cross in Beirut, said his teams were allowed to take food and blood plasma into Zahle.

"Our routes of access are limited, and we can't go around as we please," he said. "We would like to clear the rubble to see if there are any victims under the debris, but the shelling has been very intense."

Zahle is the main Christian stronghold in the Bekaa Valley. The city is built on a wide gorge in the foothills of the Mount Lebanon range, with stores and offices lining a main street along a mountain stream and residences clinging to the steep slopes. The Syrian troops who moved into Lebanon to stop the civil war in 1976 have positions in the mountains around the city and in the valley to the east.

One-hour service at Davis

The professionals at Davis Fast Photo Service Inc. in the Town & Country Shopping Center can get you your color pictures in a hurry — with quality to last a lifetime.

Troy Davis, owner of Davis Fast Photo, has been a professional photographer in West Texas a number of years. In December, Davis opened Midland's first true "quick prints" shop featuring film developing and printing with one-hour service.

How can he do it so fast?

Davis owns one of 12 brand new, complete photo finishing machines called a C-41 Processor. This new machine can develop color negatives and process a roll of prints in less than one hour's time — at no extra cost.

The most modern processing equipment available, the C-41 Processor is commanding so much attention from photo professionals Davis says there is a three-year waiting list on orders.

A completely color-balanced machine, the C-41 Processor is checked for accuracy daily. Able to develop 35mm film, as well as 126 and 110, the processor produces quality glossy prints that you will want to keep for a lifetime.

Davis Fast Photo is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Stop by and see them at the Town & Country Shopping Center, across from Furr's Cafeteria.

Tony Rogers, Acme Marketing, Inc. at 3103 E. 31st St. in Odessa, shows above how simple and easy it is to transform city or well water into odor-free, sparkling mountain spring without electricity of plumbing. The activated charcoal filter removes chlorine, sulphates, rust, algae and other pollutants giving you natures pure, healthful water for less than two cents a gallon. Call Tony at Acme Marketing, Inc. at 3103 E. 31st St. in Odessa for more information or free home delivery.

Home Spa quite economical

The Home Spa water purifier is one of the simplest, easy-to-use, most efficient, trouble-free, economical water purifiers on the market today.

The Home Spa is portable. No electricity, no expensive plumbing. You can take it with you wherever you go. If you have a water cooler with a five-gallon jug on top, you can fill it in about 10 minutes with Home Spa filtered water for less than 10 cents. If you are now buying bottled water, you can save up to $20 a month and more with the Home Spa.

House plants, pets and goldfish will thrive on Home Spa filtered water. Beans will cook up in much less time with water filtered through the activated charcoal filter in the Home Spa. Nature's water that comes through your faucet with the impurities and chlorine removed is much more healthful than distilled water with a few minerals added.

The Home Spa water purifier has been on the market now for a little over three years. It is made of durable polyethylene and will last for many, many years without showing wear. If it should crack, chip, leak or break within a five-year period, it will be replaced free of charge. This guarantee is in writing. Anyone not 100 percent satisfied with the performance of the Home Spa can return it for a full refund of the purchase price.

The Home Spa dispenser retails for only $24.95 and replacement filters are $8.95. The charcoal filters will purify approximately 500 gallons of ordinary tap water, depending on the pollutants in your home area. Water heavily chlorinated will use up the effectiveness of the filter faster. In this area we recommend that filters be replaced about every six to nine months, depending on the amount of water used.

Acme Marketing, Inc., has over 5,000 satisfied Home Spa purchasers here in the Permian Basin, and has dealers in many other states.

Home Spa owners and new purchasers can purchase additional filters for the Home Spa for a special price of three for $19.95. Now is the time to stock up as the cost could double in the next two years.

Acme Marketing, Inc., at 3103 E. 31st St. in Odessa, also has filters for automatic ice makers on home refrigerators, commercial ice making machines and drinking water fountains. They not only purify ice cubes, they will also keep your ice maker from clogging up, saving huge plumbing bills.

Acme Marketing is also the local distributor for DMSO, a chemical solvent Dimethyl Sulfoxide (99.9 percent undiluted) as seen on "60 Minutes" and the "Merv Griffin Show." Call Tony at 367-8988 for free delivery or more information.

Ban on women sparks group

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Representatives of dissatisfied Jaycees chapters say they have agreed to form an alternative organization because of the national organization's ban on women members.

"We simply believe that each chapter should have the right to decide whether or not it wants to allow female members," Norman Belt, former president of the defunct Pittsburgh Jaycees, said Sunday at the conclusion of a two-day organizational meeting.

The national leadership revoked the Pittsburgh group's charter Jan. 15 after 42 years of Jaycees activity here. The chapter, which began admitting women six years ago, recently dropped a lawsuit against the national organization over the ban.

The Jaycees offer young people experience in business practices.

Children decide not to divorce themselves from situation

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — What's a child to do when his divorced mother has her boyfriend sleep over? How should a son or daughter react upon discovering that dad, divorced, is a homosexual?

A group of students from the private Fayerweather Street School, mostly from broken homes themselves, decided that children need answers to those questions in language they can understand.

So they wrote "The Kids' Book of Divorce," a volume to help children — and adults — cope with life in a home torn by divorce.

The book has just been published by The Lewis Publishing Co. of Lexington after more than a year's search for a publisher and several rejections.

The 20 young authors wrote a chapter on the law. There's another on step-parents, and one called "Weekend Santa."

Parts of the book are controversial.

"Children use words that are traditionally called curse words," said Eric Rofes, their 26-year-old teacher and the editor of the book. "Children talk about things like their parents' boyfriends and girlfriends sleeping over. And there is a section on gay parents which has also inspired some controversy. But in general, there hasn't been a whole lot."

The children, 14 of whom have divorced parents, were part of The Unit, a class made up of the oldest children at the Fayerweather Street School, which runs through the eighth grade. Since the book was begun in the winter of 1978, most of the children have graduated.

They interviewed psychiatrists, therapists, priests, rabbis, ministers, judges, lawyers, social workers, teachers, other children and parents. They drew the illustrations and took the photographs that are included in the book.

"It's from a kids' point of view, so it really does give a broader, a different side of the story," said one 15-year-old student-author.

"We read books in the very beginning from the points of view of psychiatrists and other people looking at divorce from an older point of view,"

he said. "We thought of some of the books as absolutely ridiculous. It just didn't seem like what people were experiencing. So it was our point of view."

A student who contributed to a chapter called, "War in the Household" explained that he drew on his own experience: his mother's friendship with another man after her divorce.

"It was sort of every breakfast that we were at his house," the boy said. "He had two kids. My mother and I like flimsy bacon and they like crisp bacon. And they would scream and yell. My mother did not like that. We were different families, and the fighting was caused by that. I think it's important for parents to keep fighting away from kids because it is scary."

A 13-year-old girl whose parents were separated for a year but are now back together said she thought it would be good to let other children know about divorce and understand it.

"But it also kind of felt good to be able to sort of get a whole lot of the feelings I had when I was younger, when my parents were separated, off my chest. To talk to people about it. It was really very confusing," she said.

"I just remember a lot of screaming. I don't really know what the fights were about. It just seemed so scary to me that I didn't really want to understand it. They argued for a long time before they got separated so

I heard an awful lot."

Based on her own experiences and interviews with a marriage counselor and a judge, this girl helped write two chapters, "War in the Household," and "The Legal Issues."

Another 13-year-old, who lives with her mother, wrote the chapter called "Weekend Santa" with two other kids. It deals with visiting arrangements for children of divorced parents.

"It puts a lot of pressure on the kids to go back and forth on holidays," she said. "That's always kind of a strain for me. I think that sometimes the parent that I'm not with misses us at the holidays and I feel kind of sad about leaving one of them all by themselves."

Foreign newspapers say it's time to give up guns

LONDON (AP) — European newspapers say it is time Americans gave up their guns.

"How many more presidents (and ordinary people) must be shot down before America hangs up its gun belt?" asked Britain's pro-Labor tabloid Daily Mirror. "President Reagan showed great personal courage in the face of death. Does he now have the political courage to turn his back on America's powerful gun lobby?"

The right-wing British tabloid The Sun agreed. "We hope that the United States will now look again at the laws which make it so easy for a man with evil in his heart to acquire that gun," it said.

"The possibilities for obtaining and using weapons must be reduced," said the conservative Oslo newspaper Morgenbladet. "The free world's leading state must realize that its internal violence problem, and the handling of it, concerns the entire democratic world and its confidence in the United States."

Oslo's Arbeiderbladet, which supports Norway's ruling Labor Party, said: "It is beyond doubt that tens of thousands of Americans who are dead today would still have been alive if the United States had stricter weapon control — for instance, regulations on the European pattern."

Strict gun-licensing laws in most European countries virtually ban civilians from carrying weapons. In Britain and France, for example, police almost never issue licenses to civilians to carry handguns. Licenses for rifles and shotguns are also required. British officials estimate only a few thousand civilians have firearms licenses, mainly for rifle or shotguns issued to members of sporting clubs and farmers.

Frankfurt's left-center Frankfurter Rundschau wrote: "Violence as a result of unrestricted availability of handguns is an awful problem for the American society. The Americans should promptly revise laws and regulations on the sale and possession of handguns."

This paper pointed out that Reagan's safety is not purely an American affair. "If successful, such attacks ... make international politics incalculable," it said. "The confusion that temporarily prevailed in Washington made that quite evident."

Milan's conservative daily Il Giornale suggested that if Reagan had not recovered, "we would have seen a Washington paralyzed by panic and by a civil war between the new President Bush and Secretary of State Haig; Warsaw would have found itself at the mercy of the worst kind of Soviet decision, in the same position as Afghanistan at a time when American public opinion and its government were hypnotized by the hostages in Tehran. ... For Russia, it would have been almost as good as a victory in battle."

Munich's liberal-independent Sueddeutsche Zeitung thought the squabbling in Washington might continue despite Reagan's recovery. "Although the President may gain the image of a hero, his capacity for taking action will be limited for some time to come. ... That may give rise to increasing jockeying for positions at the expense of the effectiveness of U.S. policies at home and abroad."

Stuttgart's independent Stuttgarter Zeitung thought Reagan's authority might increase because of the assassination bid: "Having barely escaped death, he may appear to Americans close to messianic glory. That in turn may make them deaf to any criticism of Reagan's policy from within and without."

Sweden's Aftonbladet, a Social Democratic paper, thought Reagan should hand over power despite his recovery. "The fact that Reagan fortunately survived the assassination attempt ... cannot hide the remarkable fact that the President is ruling not only the United States but important parts of world politics in a situation where a wounded 70-year-old should transfer responsibility to his unhurt aides," it said.

Some papers worried that the assassination attempt would harm America's self-confidence. "What effect will this latest assassination attempt have on a people that believed themselves on the point of regaining their self-confidence after a series of national humiliations?" asked Sweden's conservative Svenska Dagbladet.

"I'm More satisfied."

More. For that extra measure of satisfaction.

Reagan warns Soviet leader about Poland

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, led by a sharp protest from the nation's wounded chief executive to the Kremlin, is waging its war of words against the possibility of Soviet military intervention in strike-torn Poland on three continents.

"There was a message sent from President Reagan to President (Leonid) Brezhnev on Friday evening," White House spokesman Larry

Speakes said Sunday.

Speakes refused to elaborate on the contents of the message, but NBC news reported it predicted long and wide-ranging consequences if the Red Army tries to quell Polish labor unrest.

Various reports said a Soviet move into Poland would further delay renewed arms control negotiations and end the possibility of a U.S.-Soviet summit anytime soon.

The New York Times today quoted one unidentified American official as saying the message used "strong language," although the newspaper said both White House and State Department officials asserted it was not a threat or warning.

Also sounding a note of urgency was U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, who said in a broadcast interview that she understood new military preparations were under way

"that would be consistent with an invasion of Poland."

"A Soviet move on Poland would be regarded as a really grave, deeply serious act and would profoundly upset relations between this country and the Soviet Union and prospects for peace and harmonious relations," she said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Other high-level administration officials spread similar messages in their travels across the Atlantic to meet with U.S. allies.

In Jerusalem, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. said the situation in Poland "remains more tense than it has been. We've been watching Soviet military steps with growing concern."

"We have been following this situation minute by minute," he told reporters Sunday.

U.S. sources said the secretary of state remained in close touch with Washington throughout the day on the events in Poland, and Haig himself said over the weekend he was prepared to cut short his trip if the crisis deepened.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said it was "bad judgment" for both Haig and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger to be out of the country while Reagan is recovering from last Monday's assassination attempt.

Capital murder charges readied in prison deaths

HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — A 30-year-old convicted armed robber is recovering in a prison hospital from a gunshot wound to the foot and is facing capital murder charges in the deaths of a prison warden and a guard, investigators say.

Eroy Edward Brown, 30, who is serving a 12-year sentence for armed robbery, was under heavy guard Sunday and in good condition in the Texas Department of Corrections prison hospital here, according to Walker County Sheriff's Deputy Rick Burger.

Brown, of Waco, was arrested Saturday about 1 p.m. when officials at the TDC's maximum security Ellis Unit found the bodies of warden Wallace M. Pack, 54, and Maj. Billy Max Moore, 49, supervisor of the unit's farm.

Peace Justice Walter Cooksey ruled that Moore died after being shot once in the head and Pack was beaten and then drowned in about two feet of water.

The Harris County Medical Examiner's office completed autopsies on the two men Sunday, but declined to release any information.

Investigators from the Walker County Sheriff's Department said Sunday capital murder charges were being prepared against Brown, who came to the unit in October 1977 and has served two previous prison sentences.

Texas Ranger Wesley Styles said Brown was "sitting on top of" Pack when guards responded to a call from another inmate who said Moore "was in trouble."

TDC spokesman Rick Hartley said Brown was a trusty with permission to work outside the prison walls and was assigned to a farm shop near a TDC-managed farm area known as "the bottoms."

Hartley said the incident apparently occurred shortly after noon Saturday as Brown was being taken by Moore to another part of the prison.

"The inmate had been taken from the farm shop of the unit to the garden shop because he had violated a disciplinary rule," Hartley said. "He was in the truck with Mr. Moore."

Cooksey would not say what rule Brown broke, but said Brown was "high on marijuana."

Hartley said Brown was taken to "the bottoms" where Moore called for Pack to join them. Two law enforcement officers who asked that their names not be used said Pack was carrying a .38-caliber pistol in his belt when he left to join Moore.

"The warden drove up and apparently, the inmate bolted out of the truck and that's when the scuffle took place," said Hartley.

The warden and the inmate rolled into a nearby ditch where Pack was beaten and drowned, Hartley said.

Reagan not homebound yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, his damaged left lung clearing slowly of particles that doctors say are responsible for his fluctuating temperature, may have to stay in the hospital at least until the end of the week, aides say.

Reagan, who conferred for 10 minutes Sunday with Vice President George Bush about the Polish crisis and other foreign policy matters, has no specific medical program for the rest of the week. Doctors are deciding what to do day by day.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, spokesman for George Washington University Hospital, said Reagan "may be here for several more days, but I'm just speculating."

"We are working on a day-by-day basis of assessing his course," O'Leary said. "I don't see how to predict where we're going to be."

White House aides, however, said they expected the 70-year-old president would be far enough along the road to recovery from the assassination attempt a week ago today to return home by the end of the week. That conforms to a timetable originally mentioned by senior White House officials last Wednesday, although they later said Reagan might be released early this week.

Over the weekend, Reagan ran a fever that reached what was described as a "moderate" level between 101 and 103 degrees Fahrenheit. The normal body temperature is 98.6 degrees, and periodic checks were performed to make sure no infection had set in. None had, doctors said.

Mayoral elections draw interest

By The Associated Press

A Hispanic mayoral candidate made history, a 25 percent property tax reduction proposal fell by the wayside and a city manager's job is in jeopardy after voters went to the polls over the weekend in a series of municipal elections.

Henry Cisneros, a 33-year-old college professor, says he will work for all the people of San Antonio after claiming the mayor's job of the nation's ninth-largest city Saturday and becoming the first Hispanic mayor of a major U.S. city.

He took almost 63 percent of the vote in an election that drew national interest and saw a record voter turnout.

In El Paso, residents resoundingly rejected a proposal that would have cut city taxes by 25 percent. But lawyer Raymond Pearson and mortgage banker Jonathan Rogers will face each other in a runoff for the

Illegal alien raids leave Permian Basin employers angry

EDITOR'S NOTE: Border Patrol raids on illegal aliens have had a tremendous impact on the labor market in the Permian Basin. This is the second of a six-part series.

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

R.W. is an angry man. A Midland general contractor, he has just stood by helplessly and watched as the Border Patrol raided his construction yard and apprehended two of his best hands, who happened to be illegal aliens.

"There's two people in jail right now that are very upset because of the Border Patrol," he snaps in a telephone call to The Reporter-Telegram shortly afterward. "It bothers me they don't have anything better to do than drag...good workers and good persons who are just over here looking for work...off their jobs."

R.W.'s is just one case of an angry employer in an ever-increasing file, following the Jan. 15 lifting of the ban prohibiting raids by the Border Patrol on private businesses without a search warrant. And the impact is being felt on the labor market throughout the Permian Basin, where construction company owners and oilfield executives alike say they depend on illegal aliens for labor.

"MY BASIC feeling is this — all they (the Border Patrol) do is just make it harder on these people," says R.W., whose Midland business never before has been inspected by immigration officials. "The lifting of the ban doesn't stop the influx, it just makes it harder for these people to get work."

R.W., whose two apprehended laborers had worked side-by-side with him for months, even during rain and cold, says he found them "very dependable...and capable workers. There's a bad apple in every crate, but by and large I find (illegal aliens) willing and honest."

R.W. says whether or not his two laborers were citizens had no bearing on his decision to hire them. "What we're after is honest people who want to do honest work for an honest wage," he states adamantly. "I don't care what their skin color is or their national origin. I just want somebody who does a good job — and most of them do."

In stressing that he has great sympathy for the plight of the illegal alien, R.W. says he paid one undocumented worker more than $13,000 last year. "So I didn't hire them because they were cheap labor," he explains. "I hired them because they worked hard."

THEY'RE GONE now. R.W. doesn't even know how to pay their back wages, much less replace them. For they were persons, friends, not just statistics on his payroll.

And like him, other employers and persons knowledgeable in the employment field are saying that the reimposed raids — if carried out extensively — will have an effect, perhaps a devastating one, on the Permian Basin labor market and possibly even result in an increase in construction costs.

R.W. puts it bluntly. "As far as the construction industry in Midland, Texas, if we couldn't use Mexican (national) laborers, we'd be in bad shape and the cost factor would go up at least 2 percent," he claims.

While some authorities feel "wet-backs" take away jobs that rightfully belong to American citizens, many employers and others in labor-related positions feel that illegal aliens are a necessity to the work force.

"I think (illegal alien labor) is very important," says Ed Miller, manager of Texas Employment Commission in Midland, "especially in the outlying areas, on farms and ranches where legal citizens are hard to find for the work."

MILLER SAYS illegal aliens take jobs which citizens generally don't solicit, or stay with long even if they do. "They'll take the low-paying, entry-level jobs in all phases of industry, especially the service industry...dead-end jobs that the citizens don't want," he explains. "The work force here is very tight, and with the oil industry coming on very strong right now, it's very difficult to keep anyone (who is a citizen) on low-entry income level jobs."

Miller notes that the West Texas area, and especially Midland, is faced with a severe labor shortage. "It's very difficult to find someone to work in the minimum wage jobs in Midland...when the average hourly wage is somewhere around $7 an hour," he says. "If you get someone you can't keep them. This is where aliens are filling some jobs right now."

Miller, while explaining that TEC is not allowed by law to serve illegal aliens, believes the increase in oil production and drilling in the Permian Basin will only worsen the labor deficit.

"It's really going to be more and more where we have to use what workers are available," he notes. "The employer — and I sym-phathize with him — is at the point where he's going to hire whoever's going to work."

THAT, SAYS R.W., is his dilemma.

"I have offered these jobs to local people and they won't take them," he claims. "There's literally hundreds of (undocumented workers) throughout the city wanting to make money, and the sad part of it is, if you'd bring in 200 Anglo-Americans out of Chicago, they could get a job all right, but they wouldn't take it — because they don't want to work that hard. So consequently we use the labor market that's available."

While understandably reluctant to discuss illegal alien labor, other Midland construction company executives echo his sentiments in stating that apprehension of undocumented workers will have an adverse effect on their businesses.

"We are in a position, because of the type of labor my husband uses, to be affected by this," a spokeswoman for Permian Basin Builders states. "So far, we haven't been. A time or two recently we have unk-

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — "Yeah, war is hell all right," grinned the grimy soldier as he hustled off to his armored personnel carrier for another skirmish in the war games along the Texas-New Mexico border.

The carrier and the tanks it accompanied threw up plumes of sand as they roared over and around the brush-covered dunes of the south New Mexico desert. Helicopters and jets performed an aerial ballet overhead.

Nearby, Capt. Kirk C. Durante barked orders into a radio: "Watch yourself there, Charley. Watch that aircraft at the intersection. OK, Here they come. Fire 'em up."

More scrambling around and then, as quickly as it had begun, it's over. No shots were fired.

"Well, we whipped them again," said Sgt. Harvey Frank of the Montana National Guard. "That's about eight times in the past 24 hours."

Frank is one of 21,000 Army, Marine, Air Force, Navy and National Guard troops participating in Border Star '81, major war games being conducted by the United States Readiness Command to test the preparedness of the nation's military.

The games have brought tanks, armored personnel carriers, jet fighters, helicopters, Jeeps and soldiers all together in the desert country north of El Paso.

"This is one of the biggest operations we've ever conducted," said Lt. Col. Dick Beaudry, a public affairs officer for Readiness Command. "It's so complicated you wouldn't believe it."

But for the soldiers who have spent up to a week piloting tanks and armored personnel carriers around the New Mexico desert, it's much simpler.

"Remember when you were a kid and you'd play with those little soldiers in your sandbox?" said Spec. 4 Kerry Wallace. "Well, this is just bigger soldiers and a bigger sandbox."

"You're out here to see action and you see it, but then again you don't see it," agreed Spec. 4 Roger Ayers. "Most of it's done over the radio. It's all on paper."

"Just the same, we take what we're doing seriously," he said. "They ought to do more of this. When you're just assigned to one base all the time, you don't get the kind of experience you'd need in a real combat situation."

That's exactly the purpose of the desert exercises, Beaudry said.

"Generally, desert is desert," he said. "The desert here is like the desert in Afghanistan or the Persian Gulf. Those are obvious areas that we're concerned about. Our guys need that kind of training."

"The only other thing you can do with these troops to make it more real is to shoot them," he said.

While most of the soldiers interviewed emphasized the value of the training, they said the real war was against the terrain and the climate.

"It's been seven days since I had a bath," Ayers said, looking at his hands, which were covered with grease and dirt.

"It's kind of dangerous taking reporters out here after the guys have been out in the desert this long because you don't know how they'll react," said Maj. Don Patterson. "They look at you and they know that you've had a shower and you get to go home and sleep in a bed tonight."

"Those kids get out there for a few days and probably wonder why they ever signed up," he said.

Sgt. Jerry Embry, who heads up a tank unit, said his crew had operated "all night last night and the night before."

"It's rough driving these babies around these dunes at night," he said. "One minute you're inside your tank and the next minute, you're on the outside trying to hang on."

"Most people really get a kick out of all this when the weather's good," he said. "The weather has been lousy this time."

Besides the dirt, Ayers' main complaint was lack of sleep. He and other members of his crew were cramped inside their armored personnel carrier in the heat of the afternoon, napping. "It's been three days since I got any real sleep," he said. "What a way to get a paycheck."

"I threw my sleeping bag on a dune the other night and I said to myself, 'If a snake gets in this sleeping bag, he'd better be quiet,'" Wallace said.

Monahans man to speak at UTPB

ODESSA — Monahans businessman J. Conrad Dunagan will speak at the fifth annual Honors Convocation at 2 p.m. April 22 in The University of Texas at the Permian Basin student lounge.

The ceremony will honor top students in the class of 1981, as well as the university's outstanding faculty member.

Dunagan founded the Permian Honor Scholarship Foundation, which awards scholarships annually to Permian Basin high school students who plan to attend area community colleges.

Finalists for the $1,000 cash award for outstanding teaching are Dr. Yonina Smith Cooper, Dr. Sean Kelleher and Dr. Edwin B. Kurtz.

The family of W.R. (Bob) Smith, Jr. extends heartfelt gratitude for the numerous acts of kindness and messages of sympathy and support since his passing March 31, 1981

Friends wishing to make memorial gifts may send them to the Greek Peak Ski Patrol in Virgil, New York or the United Way of Midland, Midland, Texas. Those who wish to make memorial prayers are asked to do so individually according to their religious preference.

Interment will be at Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia at the convenience of the family.

Haig, Begin agree on need for cease-fire

JERUSALEM (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Prime Minister Menachem Begin agreed that the fighting in Lebanon created a grave situation and a lasting cease-fire is urgently needed, aides of the Israeli leader reported.

Haig also told reporters that the Soviet threat to Poland is growing steadily more ominous and the United States is following the situation on a "minute by minute" basis.

He said Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev's decision to attend the meeting of the Czechoslovak Communist Party in Prague today may mean it is "an important occasion with respect to Soviet action affecting the Polish situation."

The fighting in Lebanon between Syrian troops and Lebanese Christians was the only subject Haig and Begin discussed at length in their first meeting Sunday following Haig's arrival from Cairo, an aide to the prime minister reported.

Haig came to Israel after winning the apparent approval of President Anwar Sadat of Egypt for U.S. participation in the peacekeeping force for the Sinai peninsula to be established next year.

Sadat's approval was qualified. But he said following their meeting in Cairo Sunday morning that if the Soviet Union prevents creation of a United Nations force, as it is expected to do, then U.S. participation would be considered.

"It will depend on what will come out from the position of the Soviet Union," Sadat said.

The Egyptian president said there was no discussion of establishing U.S. bases in Egypt.

"There was no need to raise it because it is not a matter to be discussed," he declared.

However, U.S. officials said privately that they were encouraged because the United States and Egypt would be able to work out an informal understanding for U.S. use of Egyptian military installations in times of crisis, and would be able to store military equipment at such bases as Ras Banas on the Red Sea.

The Egyptians have said they would favor such a U.S. presence as long as it did not require a formal agreement that could be interpreted as providing a permanent U.S. base.

On his arrival in Israel, Haig reaffirmed the U.S. commitment to Israel in an obvious effort to calm concern over the Reagan Administration's decision to sell sophisticated military equipment to Saudi Arabia.

Haig was in a relaxed mood at a banquet for him Sunday night, even joking about some of his recent problems within the Reagan Administration.

Natural gas leak blamed for Missouri blast, fire

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — A natural gas leak apparently was to blame for an explosion and fire that demolished three businesses, damaged at least 13 others, and blew out windows in a two-square-block area, officials say.

No deaths or injuries were reported after the Sunday night blast.

Fire investigators were unable to pinpoint the site of the explosion immediately. Independence, a city of 112,000, is the home of the late President Harry S. Truman.

No immediate damage estimate was available, but Independence Fire Chief Norman Birch said damage would "no doubt be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars."

The explosion destroyed the Calico Cat, a tavern; Cary's Barber Shop; and the Fairmount Speed Queen Coin Laundry. Businesses which sustained damages included hardware and discount stores and automobile dealerships.

Birch said if the explosion had not occurred on a Sunday night when the businesses were closed and the tavern deserted, "there would have been some lives lost. There's no doubt about it."

Jerry Dahmer, who owns Dahmer Chevrolet, agreed. Every window was blown out of the dealership, he said.

"I'm just thankful it was on a Sunday and nobody was here working," he said. "We could have lost 50 people."

Independence police said they received reports from residents who heard the explosion more than six miles away.

Police cordoned off the area of the explosion and hundreds of spectators jammed side streets as smoke and ash settled over the area.

Twenty-five police officers were sent to control crowds, direct traffic and protect the damaged businesses.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Microwave cooking cues

DEAR FOLKS:

Microwave ovens are being used more and more in our homes today and more and more I am receiving your letters telling me various hints pertaining to these ovens.

While I feel you know how much I love and appreciate hearing from you, I also feel I must warn you that one of the things some of you are doing, namely using various containers that aren't microwave safe, is considered hazardous by knowledgeable people in the industry.

I don't want you to feel that a microwave oven is the least bit dangerous — those of you who have one know what a convenience it is and what fun to use.

But, as with all appliances, one should follow manufacturer's guidelines and recommendations when using these ovens as they are the experts in the field.

Here's what Wes Snyder, a factory representative of one of the best-selling microwaves on the market, recently had to say about containers.

Many of his comments cover some of your letters and your questions. Maybe we can all listen and hopefully learn something new!

"Some people think that any container which is not metal may safely be used in the microwave oven," Wes says. "This is simply not true."

"Generally, ovenware-type glass or ceramic dishes of all kinds may safely be used and those made of a plastic material specifically for microwave ovens, but regular plastic dishes as are commonly used in households today should not be used as they get too hot. Nor should glass dishes with any kind of metal trim or those made of thin, fragile glass be put in a microwave."

"Glass jars, such as mayonnaise, pickles, etc., should never be used to heat food, etc., as there is a real danger of their breaking due to the curved edge at the top of the jar."

"Also, do not heat baby food in baby food jars. They could explode! You might be fortunate and get by with it a time or two but the danger is always there."

DEAR ABBY

Herpes simplex no laughing matter

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I laughed at the letters in your column many times, thinking that people just made up stories to tell you. Now I find I'm one of those people, and believe me, I'm not laughing.

Some time ago I had relations with a girl I had known for a while, never anticipating the consequences. Well, a year and two penicillin shots later, my doctor tells me I have herpes, and that this virus comes and goes and cannot be cured. He also stated that there is a good chance that I may pass it on to whomever I were to have sexual contact with. Knowing this makes me feel like a leper, and I have not had relations with anyone since — except prostitutes, which is all I deserve.

I am 22, Abby, and I'm ashamed of putting my foot into my mother's house. If anyone knew, well, I just couldn't handle it.

Please research this and tell me what to do as soon as you can. It's driving me crazy. — SECOND-CLASS CITIZEN FOR LIFE

DEAR CITIZEN: Unfortunately there is no known cure for Herpes Simplex 2, which is the type you have. For more information on this subject, please send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: HELP, P.O. Box 100, Palo Alto, Calif. 94302.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are presently drawing up our wills, and one of the toughest decisions we have to make is the placement of our children if my husband and I were both to go at the same time. Our children are 8, 6 and 4 — boy, girl, girl.

We want very much for all three children to be placed in the home of a relative. I have sisters and brothers and so has my husband, all of whom would be willing to take one or more of the children. But it seems such an unfair burden to place all three children in one family. Yet, we can't see splitting them up to go to

DEAR NO NAMES: Discuss this with the relatives you would want to raise your children. And don't be too concerned about burdening one family with all three children. The chances of you and your husband going at the same time are very slim.

DEAR ABBY: Lately you have fallen into a terrible rut. You tell everyone who has a problem to see a psychiatrist or some kind of therapist.

Abby, if these people could afford to go to psychiatrists, they wouldn't be writing to you. I know what I'm talking about, because my husband would never go anywhere if he had a problem, but if he saw something in your column that really shook him up he'd pay attention to it.

As a matter of fact, a couple of years back you had something in your column about how unpleasant it was to go to bed with a husband who didn't shower regularly. Right after that, my husband started showering nearly every day, which made me very happy. And I'm sure his co-workers were a lot happier, too. Now, if you will just print something about husbands under 50 who have lost all interest in sex... — MILLIE

DEAR MILLIE: Sorry, but I send men under 75 who've lost all interest in sex to their urologists. And if they're physically sound, then I send them to PSYCHIATRISTS.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (28 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.)

Full and flowing fashions featured

By SUZY PATTERSON AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) — The trend to fullness and flowing fabrics in fall fashions continues, a preview of the Paris ready-to-wear line that opens Saturday shows.

Designers are turning their backs on the mini, the slim line and the lithe leg in favor of wide and long skirts and pants or full culottes.

It's good news for weight watchers and mothers-to-be and those who haven't packed away the yards and yards of fabric of the fashion hits of just a few seasons ago.

Popy Moreni, a popular new designer whose big ponchos and dolman sleeves won applause, capped her showing with long coats, double-caped full coats and navy wool toppers.

She also showed some knickers in brightly colored knits with floppy Pierrot collars — tied with knit strings that substituted flower shapes for the traditional pom-poms.

There was some leather in this collection — the latest Paris rage. Moreni teamed her suits with frilly collars, for a feminine effect. But her biggest show-stoppers were soft dresses with blousy tops and paneled, pleated skirts in bright or subdued colors and chiffon.

Lame, in metal gray, and lace on clown suits or evening dresses was also a favorite of this new designer.

Anne-Marie Beretta used the fall hues of southwest France's wine country, her native region, in her line.

Always one for bold, big shapes, she unveiled a line of huge, flannel ponchos, calf-piped suede jackets with dolman sleeves and raincoats with enormous capes and collars.

Needless to say, the fall and winter look is long.

LOSING 51 1/4 lbs. & 65"

Dear Pat Walker:

I started the Pat Walker program hoping I could lose my weight by Christmas. In just 6 months I lost 51 1/4 pounds and 65 inches. I now weigh 110 pounds thanks to your wonderful counselors and their support.

My favorite past-time is dancing. Before Pat Walker's I watched a lot — now I dance every dance. Thank you, Pat Walker, for my thin figure. It will be wonderful to wear pretty clothes at Christmas this year.

New York melting pot simmers tasty stew

NEW YORK (AP) — Take a melting pot and stir in waves of refugees. Simmer over a more global outlook until xenophobia evaporates. Sprinkle with hordes of foreign tourists attracted by a cheap dollar.

Voila: a culinary capital that can please any palate from Afghani to Zambian.

At Little Afghanistan, near the theater district, former mujahedeen swap imprecations against the Soviet occupiers over aushak and boolaunee — dumplings and turnovers stuffed with scallions, meat and yogurt.

Zia Jaghori says Afghans account for about a third of the patrons of his family-run restaurant, which also serves as an ersatz community center for newly arrived exiles and refugees.

U.S. veterans who fought in Vietnam can reminisce about their soldier days at Le Saigon Pavilion, which opened four months ago. The lone Vietnamese restaurant in New York, it serves such classics as Cha gio (spring roll) and Pho Ga (Hanoi chicken soup).

Owner Tran Q Thinh says most of his customers are American. "Vietnamese don't have a tradition of eating out. Each one is proud of the way he cooks. Most are too critical of restaurants."

Thinh, who arrived in New York with $13 in his pocket after the fall of Saigon in 1975, says he was an officer in Vietnam's force but refuses to elaborate on his past life. "It's a new country, you've got to start all over. I started from the bottom."

And after several years at the bottom, as a busboy and waiter, he saved $8,000 and borrowed the rest from friends to begin his new life as a restaurateur. He says he puts in 14 hours of work a day at his restaurant and also attends graduate school where he hopes to earn a business degree.

Andree Abramoff, a French Jew who owns a restaurant named after herself specializing in Mediterranean cuisine, fled Egypt during the 1956 Suez War. Penniless, she landed first in France, then emigrated to New York.

She attributes the growing interest in foreign food to the preoccupation with fresh ingredients among younger people.

"It's the canned, frozen and prepared stuff that's given American food a bad name," says Andree.

"When I first came to this country, people didn't know what an artichoke was. A woman once explained to me it was part of an engine."

Her restaurant specializes in dishes that she says appear with slight variations throughout the Mediteranean — Spain, the French Provinces, Greece and Turkey, Egypt, Syria and Lebanon.

Popular with New York's Latin community is La Victoria China, which serves up Cuban-Chinese-Dominican food, an increasingly common hybrid here.

The partnership began in 1962, when Tommy Tong and Chop Fung met in Santo Domingo and found they had both left China and emigrated first to Hong Kong and then to the Dominican Republic at roughly the same time.

Their restaurant in the capital of Santo Domingo prospered for three years until 1965 when civil violence swept the small Caribbean nation. Tong says he took the occasion to fly to the United States on a visitors' visa with no intention of returning, and Fung took refuge from the street fighting in the U.S. ambassador's residence and was airlifted to the United States.

Once in New York, the pair became friends with two Chinese whose route differed only in that their next-to-last stop was Cuba, from where they escaped via the "Freedom Airlift" that operated during the mid-60s.

Hair cuticle

DARIEN, Conn. (AP) — The outermost layer of the human hair shaft is called the cuticle.

When that layer is flat and smooth, it reflects light and gives hair luster. When it becomes worn by too much brushing or too much heat during blow drying, hair tends to become dull and to split at the ends.

Aerosol spray lusterizers are designed specifically to protect the cuticle layer, says the Aerosol Packaging Council.

Bids are expected on traffic signals

AUSTIN — Bids for installation and modification of various traffic signals in Midland, Odessa and Andrews are expected to be received April 15 by the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Odessa District Engineer Bill Lancaster said traffic signals will be installed or existing signals modernized at the following intersections:

Midland — Wadley Avenue and A Street, Neely Avenue at Garfield Street, and S.H. 349 at S.H. 158.

Odessa — U.S. 80 at West County Road; Spur 492 at Dawn Avenue, Parkway Boulevard at Oakwood Drive, and 52nd Street at U.S. 385.

Andrews — U.S. 385 at Mustang Drive north of the city, and U.S. 385 at Mustang Drive south.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Non-smoking areas used internationally

Dear Dr. Solomon: Whenever I have occasion to fly anywhere, I've become accustomed to being asked whether I prefer a seat in the smoking or nonsmoking section. Do foreign airlines follow the practice of segregating smokers from nonsmokers on their flights? — Thelma

Dear Thelma: Separating smokers from nonsmokers on airlines is not unique to the United States. Almost all of the major international airlines follow the same practice, even though they are not required to do so.

Incidentally, an increasing proportion of airline passengers are asking to be placed in the no-smoking sections.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I suffer from an extremely embarrassing condition — I pass urine when I reach orgasm. Have you ever heard of this? Do you know what causes it and whether it is subject to treatment? — Mrs. T.M.

Dear Mrs. M.: Enuresis at time of orgasm is unusual, but it does occur. The cause is not known. Emptying the bladder before intercourse sometimes proves helpful, as does the use of certain medicines. I suggest you contact your physician and arrange for a complete physical examination. He or she will then be in a much better position to decide on an appropriate course of treatment.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've always considered my mother a practical, intelligent woman, but a bout with arthritis seems to be warping her ability to think. I can sympathize with her because I know the condition is chronic and painful, but I can barely hide my annoyance when she shows me a copper bracelet she now wears to counter the effects of the disease. Is this search for a miracle cure typical of arthritis patients? If my mother falls for such an obviously ridiculous scheme, I can see how an unscrupulous person can get rich catering to the needs of some desperate people. — Mrs. M.C.

Dear Mrs. C.: Unfortunately your mother is not alone in her search for a cure for her arthritis; in fact, one study has shown that more than 90 percent of arthritis patients try at least one unproved treatment for their condition at some time during the course of their illness. While their motivation in doing so — that is, their desperate search for relief if not a cure — is understandable, the danger is that it often delays their obtaining more orthodox forms of treatment.

Dr. Cody K. Wasner, of the University of Alabama School of Medicine, has reported that interviews with 98 patients with arthritis showed that 92 had tried at least one unorthodox form of treatment. The most common such remedy involved the use of lotions, creams, and ointments. Others included special diets, the use of copper bracelets and trips to a variety of places believed to offer the possibility of relief.

Whether or not your mother continues to wear the copper bracelet, try to convince her of the importance of continuing with the more conventional forms of treatment.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Possible link is reported between wood shop fumes and cancer rate

DETROIT (AP) — Fumes produced by work on a synthetic substance used in automotive wood model shops could be linked to the shop employees' higher cancer rate, the Detroit News reported Friday.

Tests by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health indicated high-speed machine work on a tough synthetic used as "wood" to make full-scale models of cars — could create toxic fumes, the News said in a copyright story.

The synthetic is treated with laminated layers of plastic resins which contain formaldehyde, the News said. A recent NIOSH document, based on epidemiological studies and animal tests recommended "formaldehyde be handled in the workplace as a potential occupational carcinogen."

The evidence turned up by the federal investigators is "borderline positive, but it gives us our first real clue

as to what to really look for," said Charles McCammon, a NIOSH industrial hygienist.

Three studies have verified that workers in the wood model shops have a higher cancer rate than other auto workers. The NIOSH study, which involves 2,400 workers from three shops in the Detroit area since 1940, is scheduled for completion at the end of 1982.

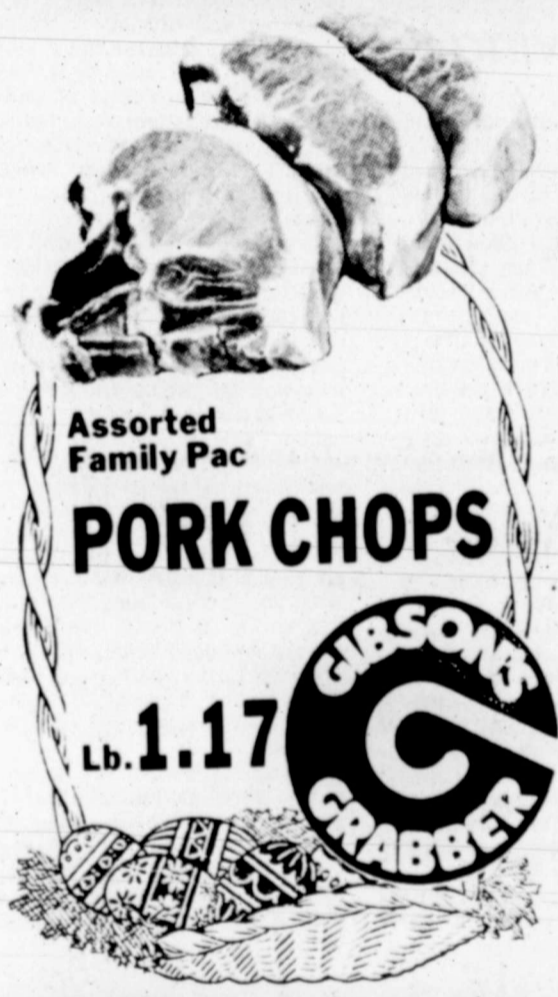

"We are not privileged to the information you have uncovered, but it is something that cannot be ignored," Dr. Robert G. Wiencek, General Motors Corp.'s director of occupational safety and health told the News. "There may be some derivative of formaldehyde being formed in the high-speed machining because we do use a urea formaldehyde resin."

Wiencek said he would order more air and dust tests for chemicals around high-speed machinery.

Illegal alien raids leave Permian Basin employers angry

knowingly hired an illegal alien, because sometimes when we ask for a social security card they either say they have lost it or they present a metal card."

"NINETY PERCENT of my (workers) are Mexican...so (the possibility of raids) does affect us out here, it hurts us," says Bill Allen, president of Allen Construction Company, which builds residences. "No one here in this country works except the Mexican people."

While noting that the lifting of the ban has had no direct effect so far on Ed Kirkpatrick Contractors, Gloria Kirkpatrick feels on-site solicitations of illegal aliens by the Border Patrol are counterproductive. "I don't feel it's good for construction sites for them to come in (searching for aliens)," she said, citing disruptive factors. "At different times we have had more illegal aliens working for us. They do work cheap, and they work better. But we don't hire them because they're cheaper, because they're paid the same as a legal."

"We treat them like people. It wouldn't matter if they're legal or not, our payroll would remain the same." However, not all employers contacted by The Reporter-Telegram feel the lifting of the ban will have a drastic effect on their labor.

"From my point of view, I see no effect whatsoever," says a spokesman for one Midland construction firm. "We have a very small turnover, and have had no problem obtaining labor if illegal aliens (are apprehended)...We have a great influx of people here from all over the country, a large work force, so we haven't had to take illegal aliens to fill our labor situation."

FURTHERMORE, there are those who feel deportation of illegal aliens is beneficial in that it rightfully restores certain jobs to citizens.

"(Illegal alien labor) is hurting us to a certain extent on skilled jobs," notes business agent for Carpenters Union Local 1428 John Clenney, who is adamant in his belief that laws should be passed prohibiting employers from hiring undocumented workers. "I don't think it's right to have people here on welfare and unemployment compensation...when there's people coming over here and taking jobs away from them. (Employers) should exhaust all sources here...before hiring illegals."

The controversy as to the effect of removal of illegal alien labor also reigns throughout the oil industry in the Permian Basin.

"We can't operate the whole oil patch without them," Bob Madison, an assistant at Permian Basin Petroleum Association, says bluntly.

Illegal aliens generally find jobs in the less-skilled positions relating to the oil business, such as in pipe supply yards, pipeline construction, well servicing and drilling operations. The language barrier generally is prohibitive in many of the more technical tasks, however.

Again, employers were reluctant to discuss illegal alien labor, and only a few companies contacted by The Reporter-Telegram admitted they employ workbacks.

"WE DO HAVE workers with Hispanic names," says Lowell Branum of Tri-Service Drilling Company. "I assume all are citizens. As far as I know we don't have any illegal aliens employed...we don't hire our field people through the office. The custom is for the driller to hire his own crew."

Branum discussed the problems a Mexican national encounters in oil-related jobs. "The job of a floorman (on a drilling rig) is a skilled job, and there is a time when unskilled people are hired as trainees," he explains, "but I don't see us as hiring any illegal aliens, because of the language limitation, which of course would be a barrier in helping them learn oilfield trades."

However, Mark Price, secretary-treasurer of Diamond Oil Well Drilling Company, definitely sees an adverse effect on the oilfield labor market.

"If (the Border Patrol) is able to enforce it, I'd probably say there would be a shortage," he notes. "As far as ourselves here, we don't use any of that type of labor. But I imagine for other servicing companies...it will create a shortage of manpower."

One pipe supply company official, while noting the raids "would be beneficial more than anything else" in upholding existing immigration laws, admitted that "our customers work them by the hundreds" and would suffer the affects.

AREA RANCHES ALSO could be the target of Border Patrol "detail," but the effect on ranchers probably will be minimal.

"We don't do work on ranches generally," notes Charles Hensley, supervisor of the Big Spring Border Patrol Station. "They're so widespread and employ so few illegal aliens that because of gasoline and the distances it doesn't make it worthwhile for us."

Despite the anger of employers like R.W. — as well as the hope by persons like Clenney that benefits will result — the "detail" work by the United States Border Patrol is likely to continue throughout the Permian Basin, and perhaps even increase. Its ultimate effect, from strictly personal viewpoints of those involved, is a subject studied, debated, even argued, but most probably not fully realized by anyone. The only thing certain is, as Hensley bluntly puts it, "we've made in the neighborhood of 300 job vacancies in the last month. Now what they're filled with, I don't know."

Payroll numbers can be replaced, believes R.W., but not persons. He will remain an angry man.

Tuesday: A life in hiding.

PEKING (AP) — Jin Rui is nearly three years old and he's no small fry. The barrel-chested youngster already weighs 89 pounds and polishes off more than two pounds of food a day. China's official Xinhua news agency reported today.

Jin weighed nearly 15 pounds when he was born on May 23, 1978, in central China's Hubei province. One month later he weighed 26 pounds and was eating four meals of porridge a day, Xinhua said.

Despite his size, his intelligence is similar to that of most kids his age.

Have Soviets found Atlantis?

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet oceanographers say they may have discovered the lost continent of Atlantis on the seabed several hundred miles west of Portugal.

Andrei Monin, director of research aboard the Soviet vessel Akademichan Kurchatov, said scientists based their hypothesis on "mysterious structures" seen in 460 photographs taken of sunken Ampere Mountain, 450 miles west of the Straits of Gibraltar, between Portugal and Madeira Island.

"In a number of pictures of the northeastern part of the summit, (researchers) discerned rectangular structures. On one of the photos, we can see rectangular plates (one yard wide rising from bottom," the Tass news agency quoted Monin as writing in the Soviet magazine Earth and Universe.

"The position of plates, individual blocks, as well the regular shape of the plates photographed...may testify to their artificial origin," Monin said.

Mugabe raps political system

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe today attacked the multiparty parliamentary system his country inherited from Britain, the country's former colonial overlord, claiming it leads to "the politics of negativism."

Opening a four-nation seminar of the British Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, Mugabe said, "The politics of negativism as contrasted to constructive criticism has no place in a young country such as ours."

"Opposition for the sake of opposition is negation...of the positive, making for a negative trend in our debates and politics. This is my indictment of the multiparty political order and its sponsorship of negative forces," he told delegates from Britain, India, Tanzania and his own nation.

Despite his criticism, Mugabe said his government is "committed to upholding the constitution. Its imperfections will no doubt be redressed as we consolidate the people's power in the new order."

Clute residents decide to keep name of town

CLUTE, Texas (AP) — Like it or not, Clute is on the map to stay. After several humorous and some not-so-humorous suggestions, folks have decided for a second time to leave the name of this Southeast Texas community of 9,500 alone.

Councilman Gene McDaniel. "I just can't put my finger on it. Maybe Clute just sounds backward." But voters disagreed 577 to 76 Saturday, turning thumbs down on a city charter review committee's proposal to change the town's name to Brazoswood.

Budget backers seek momentum

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's backers in Congress, having won this year's first legislative battles over spending cuts, are seeking to maintain the momentum of their campaign to develop a federal budget along the lines of his recommendations.

Washington hospital where he is recovering from a gunshot wound suffered in an assassination attempt.

Income Taxes

As Congress continues to study proposals for reducing taxes, Reagan's budget director, David A. Stockman, said last week that the administration still favors a three-year, $250 billion cut in individual income taxes.

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee, has called the president's multi-year plan all but dead and has said the panel is likely to approve a one-year bill.

Clean Air

The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee approved legislation last week which would give the steel industry a three-year extension for meeting clean-air standards.

It would extend the deadline for steel industry compliance with federal air quality standards.

Here is the status of major legislation:

Federal Budget

Budget committees in the Democrat-controlled House and the Republican-dominated Senate are set to work this week on comprehensive budget resolutions setting total figures for federal spending and revenue programs in fiscal 1982, which opens Oct. 1.

In a key congressional victory for Reagan's economic program, the Senate voted 88-10 last week to support a package of spending cuts including $36.9 billion in fiscal 1982.

Vice President George Bush says Reagan appreciates the Senate action and "we hope it will serve ... as an example to members of the House of Representatives, who now have the same responsibility ahead of them."

Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., chairman of the House Budget Committee, says the panel will "improve on those parts that need improving."

The president signed into law last week legislation to scrap a scheduled increase in dairy price supports as part of his effort to restrain federal spending.

Democrats stepping up budget criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Taking their cue from White House statements that it's "business as usual" for the administration, Democrats are stepping up public criticism of President Reagan's budget-cutting program and moving ahead with attempts to derail it in the House.

President Carter's proposed budget for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, generally along the lines of the president's proposals. The Senate voted 88-10 to endorse $87 billion in budget cuts over three years.

"Face the Nation" program Sunday, Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said he did not think so.

out more forcefully on opposition to the Reagan program, sources say. O'Neill has been counseling caution in approaching the Reagan program on the grounds that the party must not appear obstructionist.

personal income tax rates an average of 10 percent a year for three years. Democrats oppose a three-year tax bill and are expected to propose a one-year plan targeted to specific business incentives.

The chairman of the House Budget Committee, Rep. James R. Jones, D-Okla., prepared today to unveil his alternatives to Reagan's program.

Many Democrats were careful to avoid statements that could be taken as unseemly partisan attacks on a hospitalized president.

"I don't think that this sympathy will translate into votes," Byrd said. "We must be objective when it comes to determining the issues."

—Also Tuesday, Democratic National Chairman Charles T. Manatt plans to address a National Press Club luncheon, a speech expected to focus on opposition to parts of the Reagan program.

Back in the Senate, the Budget Committee begins work Tuesday on legislation embodying an overall spending ceiling for 1982 and a spending blueprint for the next three years.

Jones has said his panel will "improve on" parts of the Reagan program but "certainly over half" the administration recommendations will be accepted.

But the attitude of many party stalwarts was perhaps characterized by Sen. Alan Cranston of California, the assistant Democratic leader of the Senate, who called the Reagan cuts a "cruel abandonment of America's commitment — indeed, America's obligation — to help those most in need."

A number of Democrats have indicated they hope to force cuts in the overall amount Reagan has recommended for defense spending while restoring some money for social programs.

—On Wednesday, the House Democratic Caucus will try to reach a consensus on alternative proposals to be submitted by its steering and policy committee.

Committee members will be reminded they must come up with an additional $74 billion in cuts to meet the president's goal of a balanced budget in 1984.

While the president was convalescing from his bullet wound last week, Republicans in charge of the Senate were whipping through $36.9 billion in cuts from former

There has been much speculation that the president would gain sympathy votes in Congress. But interviewed on CBS'

The full Budget Committee, beginning work on the package late this afternoon, planned daily sessions until a two-week congressional Easter recess begins Friday.

Suffering continues in Zahle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two Christian women gave birth Sunday in the basement of the Red Cross Clinic in Zahle and named their new sons Peace and Victory.

scued a 7-year-old boy from the rubble of one building. It said he was crying for food as he clutched the bodies of his mother and sister.

"Thank God it's a boy," said Victory's mother. "Now Zahle has one more fighter." To escape Syrian shelling that has killed 54 people and wounded 110 others, the 200,000 residents of the Roman Catholic city 30 miles east of Beirut were spending their fifth day Sunday huddled in their basements.

Pierre Gubran, a spokesman for the International Red Cross in Beirut, said his teams were allowed to take food and blood plasma into Zahle.

"There is no water, no electricity, no bread and no heating," one woman reported by telephone. "The shelling has been so bad there is not even a bird in the sky. I have enough milk to feed the baby today but not tomorrow."

"Our routes of access are limited, and we can't go around as we please," he said. "We would like to clear the rubble to see if there are any victims under the debris, but the shelling has been very intense."

Officials at the Red Cross Clinic said the city's two main hospitals were not functioning after receiving direct hits. A rescue worker said an estimated 260 people, some of them wounded, were trapped in the hospitals.

Zahle is the main Christian stronghold in the Bekaa Valley. The city is built on a wide gorge in the foothills of the Mount Lebanon range, with stores and offices lining a main street along a mountain stream and residences clinging to the steep slopes. The Syrian troops who moved into Lebanon to stop the civil war in 1976 have positions in the mountains around the city and in the valley to the east.

"The Syrians keep shelling the same house until it is completely demolished," said the head of the clinic. "There is not a single house in Zahle which has not been hit."

Shellbursts could be heard as he spoke. "Hear that?" he asked.

He said there was not enough medicine or food for all the casualties, and electric power and water had been cut off since the shelling started Wednesday. The Voice of Lebanon, the Christian Phalange Party's radio station, reported the Red Cross re-

Tony Rogers, Acme Marketing, Inc. at 3103 E. 31st St. in Odessa, shows above how simple and easy it is to transform city or well water into odor-free, sparkling mountain spring without electricity of plumbing. The activated charcoal filter removes chlorine, sulphates, rust, algae and other pollutants giving you nature's pure, healthful water for less than two cents a gallon. Call Tony at Acme Marketing, Inc. at 3103 E. 31st St. in Odessa for more information or free home delivery.

Paul Keele, co-owner; Wilbur Stewart, deliveryman; and Wes Graham, co-owner, are some of the ones who make Graham Pharmacy at 319 Dodson the favorite pharmacy of many Midlanders. Paul and Wes dispense your prescriptions with skill and care, and Wilbur makes free deliveries with courtesy and speed. Phone in your prescriptions at 684-0569, for the special care given at Graham Pharmacy.

One-hour service at Davis

The professionals at Davis Fast Photo Service Inc. in the Town & Country Shopping Center can get you your color pictures in a hurry — with quality to last a lifetime.

Troy Davis, owner of Davis Fast Photo, has been a professional photographer in West Texas a number of years. In December, Davis opened Midland's first true "quick prints" shop featuring film developing and printing with one-hour service.

How can he do it so fast? Davis owns one of 12 brand new, complete photo finishing machines called a C-41 Processor. This new machine can develop color negatives and process a roll of prints in less than one hour's time — at no extra cost.

The most modern processing equipment available, the C-41 Processor is commanding so much attention from photo professionals Davis says there is a three-year waiting list on orders.

A completely color-balanced machine, the C-41 Processor is checked for accuracy daily. Able to develop 35mm film, as well as 126 and 110, the processor produces quality glossy prints that you will want to keep for a lifetime.

Davis Fast Photo is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and on Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Stop by and see them at the Town & Country Shopping Center, across from Furr's Cafeteria.

Home Spa quite economical

The Home Spa water purifier is one of the simplest, easy-to-use, most efficient, trouble-free, economical water purifiers on the market today.

The Home Spa is portable. No electricity, no expensive plumbing. You can take it with you wherever you go. If you have a water cooler with a five-gallon jug on top, you can fill it in about 10 minutes with Home Spa filtered water for less than 10 cents. If you are now buying bottled water, you can save up to $20 a month and more with the Home Spa.

House plants, pets and goldfish will thrive on Home Spa filtered water. Beans will cook up in much less time with water filtered through the activated charcoal filter in the Home Spa. Nature's water that comes through your faucet with the impurities and chlorine removed is much more healthful than distilled water with a few minerals added.

The Home Spa water purifier has been on the market now for a little over three years. It is made of durable polyethylene and will last for many, many years without showing wear. If it should crack, chip, leak or break within a five-year period, it will be replaced free of charge. This guarantee is in writing. Anyone not 100 percent satisfied with the performance of the Home Spa can return it for a full refund of the purchase price.

The Home Spa dispenser retails for only $24.95 and replacement filters are $8.95. The charcoal filters will purify approximately 500 gallons of ordinary tap water, depending on the pollutants in your home area. Water heavily chlorinated will use up the effectiveness of the filter faster. In this area we recommend that filters be replaced about every six to nine months, depending on the amount of water used.

Acme Marketing, Inc., has over 5,000 satisfied Home Spa purchasers here in the Permian Basin, and has dealers in many other states.

Home Spa owners and new purchasers can purchase additional filters for the Home Spa for a special price of three for $19.95. Now is the time to stock up as the cost could double in the next two years.

Acme Marketing, Inc., at 3103 E. 31st St. in Odessa, also has filters for automatic ice makers on home refrigerators, commercial ice making machines and drinking water fountains. They not only purify ice cubes, they will also keep your ice maker from clogging up, saving huge plumbing bills.

Acme Marketing is also the local distributor for DMSO, a chemical solvent Dimethyl Sulfoxide (99.9 percent undiluted) as seen on "60 Minutes" and the "Merv Griffin Show." Call Tony at 367-6988 for free delivery or more information.

Ban on women sparks group

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Representatives of dissatisfied Jaycees chapters say they have agreed to form an alternative organization because of the national organization's ban on women members.

"We simply believe that each chapter should have the right to decide whether or not it wants to allow female members," Norman Belt, former president of the defunct Pittsburgh Jaycees, said Sunday at the conclusion of a two-day organizational meeting.

The national leadership revoked the Pittsburgh group's charter Jan. 15 after 42 years of Jaycees activity here. The chapter, which began admitting women six years ago, recently dropped a lawsuit against the national organization over the ban.

The Jaycees offer young people experience in business practices.

Children decide not to divorce themselves from situation

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — What's a child to do when his divorced mother has her boyfriend sleep over? How should a son or daughter react upon discovering that dad, divorced, is a homosexual?

A group of students from the private Fayerweather Street School, mostly from broken homes themselves, decided that children need answers to those questions in language they can understand.

So they wrote "The Kids' Book of Divorce," a volume to help children — and adults — cope with life in a home torn by divorce.

The book has just been published by The Lewis Publishing Co. of Lexington after more than a year's search for a publisher and several rejections.

The 20 young authors wrote a chapter on the law. There's another on step-parents, and one called "Weekend Santa."

Parts of the book are controversial.

"Children use words that are traditionally called curse words," said Eric Rofes, their 26-year-old teacher and the editor of the book. "Children talk about things like their parents' boyfriends and girlfriends sleeping over. And there is a section on gay parents which has also inspired some controversy. But in general, there hasn't been a whole lot."

The children, 14 of whom have divorced parents, were part of The Unit, a class made up of the oldest children at the Fayerweather Street School, which runs through the eighth grade. Since the book was begun in the winter of 1978, most of the children have graduated.

They interviewed psychiatrists, therapists, priests, rabbis, ministers, judges, lawyers, social workers, teachers, other children and parents. They drew the illustrations and took the photographs that are included in the book.

"It's from a kids' point of view, so it really does give a broader, a different side of the story," said one 15-year-old student-author.

"We read books in the very beginning from the points of view of psychiatrists and other people looking at divorce from an older point of view,"

he said. "We thought of some of the books as absolutely ridiculous. It just didn't seem like what people were experiencing. So it was our point of view."

A student who contributed to a chapter called, "War in the Household" explained that he drew on his own experience: his mother's friendship with another man after her divorce.

"It was sort of every breakfast that we were at his house," the boy said. "He had two kids. My mother and I like flimsy bacon and they like crisp bacon. And they would scream and yell. My mother did not like that. We were different families, and the fighting was caused by that. I think it's important for parents to keep fighting away from kids because it is scary."

A 13-year-old girl whose parents were separated for a year but are now back together said she thought it would be good to let other children know about divorce and understand it.

"But it also kind of felt good to be able to sort of get a whole lot of the feelings I had when I was younger, when my parents were separated, off my chest. To talk to people about it. It was really very confusing," she said.

"I just remember a lot of screaming. I don't really know what the fights were about. It just seemed so scary to me that I didn't really want to understand it. They argued for a long time before they got separated so

I heard an awful lot."

Based on her own experiences and interviews with a marriage counselor and a judge, this girl helped write two chapters, "War in the Household," and "The Legal Issues."

Another 13-year-old, who lives with her mother, wrote the chapter called "Weekend Santa" with two other kids. It deals with visiting arrangements for children of divorced parents.

"It puts a lot of pressure on the kids to go back and forth on holidays," she said. "That's always kind of a strain for me. I think that sometimes the parent that I'm not with misses us at the holidays and I feel kind of sad about leaving one of them all by themselves."

Foreign newspapers say it's time to give up guns

LONDON (AP) — European newspapers say it is time Americans gave up their guns.

"How many more presidents (and ordinary people) must be shot down before America hangs up its gun belt?" asked Britain's pro-Labor tabloid Daily Mirror. "President Reagan showed great personal courage in the face of death. Does he now have the political courage to turn his back on America's powerful gun lobby?"

The right-wing British tabloid The Sun agreed. "We hope that the United States will now look again at the laws which make it so easy for a man with evil in his heart to acquire that gun," it said.

"The possibilities for obtaining and using weapons must be reduced," said the conservative Oslo newspaper Morgenbladet. "The free world's leading state must realize that its internal violence problem, and the handling of it, concerns the entire democratic world and its confidence in the United States."

Oslo's Arbeiderbladet, which supports Norway's ruling Labor Party, said: "It is beyond doubt that tens of thousands of Americans who are dead today would still have been alive if the United States had stricter weapon control — for instance, regulations on the European pattern."

Strict gun-licensing laws in most European countries virtually ban civilians from carrying weapons. In Britain and France, for example, police almost never issue licenses to civilians to carry handguns. Licenses for rifles and shotguns are also required. British officials estimate only a few thousand civilians have firearms licenses, mainly for rifle or shotguns issued to members of sporting clubs and farmers.

Frankfurt's left-center Frankfurter Rundschau wrote: "Violence as a result of unrestricted availability of handguns is an awful problem for the American society. The Americans should promptly revise laws and regulations on the sale and possession of handguns."

This paper pointed out that Reagan's safety is not purely an American affair. "If successful, such attacks ... make international politics

incalculable," it said. "The confusion that temporarily prevailed in Washington made that quite evident."

Milan's conservative daily Il Giornale suggested that if Reagan had not recovered, "we would have seen a Washington paralyzed by panic and by a civil war between the new President Bush and Secretary of State Haig. Warsaw would have found itself at the mercy of the worst kind of Soviet decision, in the same position as Afghanistan at a time when American public opinion and its government were hypnotized by the hostages in Tehran. ... For Russia, it would have been almost as good as a victory in battle."

Munich's liberal-independent Sueddeutsche Zeitung thought the squabbling in Washington might continue despite Reagan's recovery. "Although the President may gain the image of a hero, his capacity for taking action will be limited for some time to come. ... That may give rise to increasing jockeying for positions at the expense of the effectiveness of U.S. policies at home and abroad."

Stuttgart's independent Stuttgarter Zeitung thought Reagan's authority might increase because of the assassination bid: "Having barely escaped death, he may appear to Americans close to messianic glory. That in turn may make them deaf to any criticism of Reagan's policy from within and without."

Sweden's Aftonbladet, a Social Democratic paper, thought Reagan should hand over power despite his recovery. "The fact that Reagan fortunately survived the assassination attempt ... cannot hide the remarkable fact that the President is ruling not only the United States but important parts of world politics in a situation where a wounded 70-year-old should transfer responsibility to his unhurt aides," it said.

Some papers worried that the assassination attempt would harm America's self-confidence. "What effect will this latest assassination attempt have on a people that believed themselves on the point of regaining their self-confidence after a series of national humiliations?" asked Sweden's conservative Svenska Dagbladet.

More. For that extra measure of satisfaction.

"I'm More satisfied."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, April 7, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor James Garner, who recently abandoned his popular role on TV's "The Rockford Files," celebrates a birthday today. Both of you should go on to new successes and even higher ratings in the coming year. Work harmoniously with others and the sky will be the limit! Only your desire for total independence could stand in the way of great progress where business, finance are concerned.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A great day for negotiating contracts, agreements. Pay greater attention to your appearance. The domestic scene is happy. Certain dreams become clearer. If single, you could form a new romantic alliance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A minor change can have a major effect on your future happiness. Take time to carefully think things through. A surprise announcement will free you. Someone shares a joyous secret.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A good day to take care of business, get things done.

Financial concerns or property matters may come up for discussion. Make do with what you have. Ambition propels you forward.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Heavier responsibilities may mean both more overtime and a fatter paycheck. Do not depend on co-workers. Self-reliance is essential. Let loved one see your sentimental side. It will promote romance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Postpone making a major decision until you have absolute proof. The domestic scene can be somewhat trying now. Exercise as much tact, patience as you can muster.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep everything open and aboveboard. The emphasis is on preventing the spread of gossip. Romance flourishes where there is trust. A long walk later today will walk the cobwebs away.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Obscure information may be key to puzzle. Use this knowledge discriminately. You will be rewarded in a surprising manner. Former teacher or colleague could reappear. Romance may be rekindled.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Financial situation is not what it appears to be on the surface. Obtain more facts, figures. A steady cash flow is very important now. Forego a luxury purchase.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Search for ways to beautify your surroundings. Decorative changes will cheer you and inspire someone else to do something. Financial picture deserves further study. Cater to needs of loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You should be able to move forward now. Call on co-workers to give you a helping hand. Be careful not to get in over your head. Love relationship, marriage may undergo change.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can open doors now with a combination of charm and patience. Get-rich-quick schemes will only have an adverse effect on your fortunes. Act fast where a new job opportunity is concerned.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentration can pay rich dividends now. Work to clear any obstacles from your path. Seek the cooperation of others to eliminate financial roadblocks.

GOREN BRIDGE

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AQJ72 ♠AK1093 ♦83 ♣7
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ 2 ♦ 3 ♦ Pass
3 ♥ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?

What action do you take?
A.—In the light of partner's free bid at the three-level and jump raise of spades, you should have more than enough material to produce at least twelve tricks. However, there is the possibility that you might have two fast losers in diamonds. Bid five spades. That asks partner to go on to slam only if he has a control in the enemy suit.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ93 ♥872 ♦J105 ♣A9
The bidding has proceeded:
North East South West
1 ♦ Pass 1 ♦ Pass
2 ♣ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—The lazy bid is four spades, but your hand offers very real slam possibilities. If partner has a good diamond suit and some control in hearts, either shortness or the ace or king, you could easily come to twelve tricks. It cannot hurt to cue-bid three clubs en route to four spades. This sequence will tell partner about your slam interest without getting your side out of its depth.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South, with 80 on score, you hold:
♠AQJ10943 ♥Q ♦AJ72 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—With your excellent trick-taking ability and self-sufficient spade suit, a simple bid of two spades, which could easily get passed because of your partial, does not express the value of your hand. Despite the low point count, we would jump to three spades to tell partner that we don't need spade support from him, but wish to encourage him to look for slam if he is rich in high cards.

you hold:
♦73 ♥6 ♦AJ98 ♠AQ10764
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
1 ♦ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
3 ♣ Pass 3 ♥ Pass ?

What do you bid now?
A.—What for a moment appeared to be a promising hand has deteriorated because of the misfit. There is no point in showing your diamonds now because it is almost impossible for North to have four-card support. Advise partner about the misfit by bidding three no trump—that must show good diamonds.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AKQ9 ♥AK10962 ♦85 ♣K
The bidding has proceeded:
West North East South
3 ♣ Pass Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—This is close. You could jump to four hearts—but that seems too unilateral; you might go down in that contract yet be cold for a slam in spades. We opt for a double as being most flexible because of one additional possibility. Partner might have a hand where he wants to convert for penalties and we can't make game in either major. Incidentally, that's why we reject four clubs.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQJ872 ♥KQ ♦AQ5 ♣AK
The bidding has proceeded:
South West North East
2 ♣ Pass 3 NT Pass ?
What action do you take?
A.—What a perfect hand for an ace-asking convention. Since the last bid was no trump, we use Gerber in this situation. Four clubs asks for aces. If partner shows only one, we will try six no trump. If he shows two, we will bid five clubs, asking for kings, in the hope of reaching a laydown grand slam.
