Rescuers struggle toward trapped miners

REDSTONE, Colo. (AP) — Rescuers inched their way along a 7,200-foot sloping mine shaft today in an effort to reach 15 coal miners trapped by an explosion in a western Colorado coal mine, but a company spokesman termed their miners' chances for survival "remote."

Robert Delaney, a lawyer for Mid Continent Resources Co. which operates the mine, said, "I wouldn't place odds on them (being rescued alive) one way or the other. I'd say they are remote."

The explosion swept through the lower limits of the Dutch Creek No. 1 mine Wednesday afternoon when 22 workers were in the mine. Seven men emerged in two groups after the blast, and three were hospitalized for treatment of burns, bruises and shock.

Because the powerful blast knocked down the "stoppings" that separate sections of the mine, rescuers were unlikely to reach the trapped men before mid-afternoon, Delaney said. The explosion also damaged the mine's ventilation system, forcing rescuers to wear oxygen masks, Delaney said.

The cause of the blast was not known.

One of those who escaped unhurt, David Chiarello, said that when the explosion occurred, "air came at a sort of like a hurricane. It didn't knock me over but there was so much dust I turned around and tucked my head in."

Company rescue teams making their way toward the 15 men, estimated to be as far as 7,000 feet into the mine, were forced to stop repeatedly to test the mine's air for deadly gases, a spokesman said.

They were less than 1,000 feet from where the miners were believed trapped, officials said.

After keeping vigil near the mine for more than 17 hours, most of the miners' families went home at daybreak.

"We're praying that there will be 15 men coming out today," one miner who declined to give his name said early today. "There's a bunch of good men down there and a lot of good friends."

"We're like a family up here.... At times like this, everybody bands together. There are about 400 people waiting at home to hear what's happened."

One mining official, who asked not to be identified, said there appeared to be no methane in the chambers where rescue teams were working. But that could mean a buildup of the gas on the other side of the rubble that trapped the miners, he speculated.

Methane is a colorless, odorless, toxic and highly explosive gas similar to propane and natural gas. It occurs naturally underground and tends to form in pockets.

Five people identified as relatives of the trapped men sat in parked cars at the foot of the 4½-mile entrance road to the mine. They avoided reporters, but rushed to hear any scraps of news from officials coming from the mine.

"We tell them to go home," said a mine security guard. "We tell them there's no use staying here. But when something like this happens, and it's someone in your family, you don't stop to think about things. You just get in your car and drive up here."

One woman, in her 20s, who asked not to be named, spent the night in a lonely vigil in the lounge of the nearby Redstone Inn.

"They keep telling me to go home," she said, "But I can't go home. I'll stay here until we get word on whether they are all right."

The U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration sent a two-man team to the mine, and Lamar Bishop, a subdistrict administrator for the federal agency, was en route.

"We will conduct an investigation after the rescue," a spokesman in Washington said.

Coal from the mine is shipped to U.S. Steel and Kaiser Steel corporations, Delaney said.

Not fit for man nor beast

This stray, wet pooch seemed to be looking for a home as he wandered through the rainy streets and sidewalks of downtown Midland Wednesday afternoon.

The rainfall (1.07 inches of it in the last three days) is expected to taper off tonight, with warming temperatures and clearing skies expected for Friday.

'Tax Day' talks lead sessions on economy

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Political Writer

WASHINGTON — The battle plan was obvious. It was Tax Day 1981 — the annual nail-biting and wall-pounding event that sends many Americans into hysterical fits as Uncle Sam pulls out what he thinks is due him.

On this one day out of 365 in which taxes seem to be foremost on Americans' minds, President Reagan's planners initiated the first in a series of meetings with regional print and broadcast representatives to send the message that Tax Day need not always be that painful — that is, if the president's proposed economic plan makes it through Congress in one piece.

About 55 media representatives from Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma, Georgia, Alabama and Florida answered Vice President George Bush's mailgram to attend a "briefing at the White House" in which "key administration officials will join me to brief you on President Reagan's economic recovery program."

Throughout the five-hour session, the emphasis was placed on those final three words — "economic recovery program." And it was as if all forces had been gathered in one spot to fight off opposing troops that had announced alternative plans last week, primarily those put forth by U.S. Rep. Jim Jones of Oklahoma.

SPEAKERS INCLUDED Larry Speakes, deputy press secretary, substituting for James Brady, who is still recovering from a gunshot wound to the head suffered on March 30; Vice President Bush; Murray Wiedenbaum, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisors; Norman Ture, undersecretary of the Treasury; David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget; and Donald Regan, secretary of the Treasury.

Regan was the surprise of the day. He popped into the briefing room, normally used by the national media when President Reagan holds a news conference, to read a prepared statement from the president. This, too, reminded the taxpayer that they "pay too much of their earnings to the federal government. And Americans will continue to pay too much money...until the Congress acts on our proposals to reduce tax rates across the board. It's time to stop stripping bare the productive citizens of America and funneling their hard-earned income into the federal bureaucracy."

The battle plan for the day featured David Gurgen, assistant to the president and staff director, setting up the attack; Bush mustering all the forces together for a head-on attack which he directed; and Wiedenbaum, Stockman and Regan fighting the minor skirmishes and completing a clean-sweep of the battleground.

GURGEN OPENED his comments by saying, "Happy Tax Day," and went on to explain that "Reagan Revolution is trying to change the direction of the country."

But a critical time will hit Capitol Hill after the Easter recess, which will come about April 28, he said. At this point, congressmen will have returned from talking to their constituents and will begin to solidify their votes on the proposed budget and tax

Testimony for THFC completed

By SUE FAHLGREN
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — Testimony at the third and final day of the Texas Health Facilities Commission hearing here was anti-climactic compared to the previous testimony for Medical Center Hospital's application for a 6 Million Electron Volt Linear Accelerator.

Although testimony wrapped up just before 2 p.m. Wednesday, a decision on the application may be months in coming.

Kevin A. Reed, hearing officer for the THFC, said there would be "a month's delay between today and when I could look at this again." Reed explained that because of other postponed hearings, the THFC is behind in its decisions by at least a month.

After Reed goes through testimony again, he will send materials on to a three-member board of commissioners, along with his recommendation. After that, the commissioners have an unlimited amount of time in which to make their decision.

ATTORNEYS FOR BOTH sides chose May 8 as the date to submit their final proposed findings of fact on the case and Reed said he would submit his recommendation to the committee by mid-May. However, commissioners could take up to mid-summer for their decision.

Dr. James W. McGee, radiologist for Midland Memorial Hospital, said "time becomes the ally of the Allison Center." He explained the delay would allow the Allison Center to open and begin operation before any decision would be rendered.

Forcing a delay of delivery to Odessa of the already ordered Atomic Energy of Canada Limited 6MEV linear accelerator, the delayed decision would seem to improve the Allison Center's standing, whether it would be for or against Odessa's application.

According to Mickey Cappadonna, MMH trustee who also is president of the Regional Advisory Council for the Allison Center, the commission's finding may not be the final word on whether or not Odessa gets its cancer machine. After the final ruling is announced, it can be appealed in district court, Cappadonna pointed out before the hearings.

Both sides seemed to be optimistic about the outcome, however, in off-the-record comments.

Attorneys for both parties opted to discontinue questioning of H.L. McKenzie, facilities planning consultant for the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Therapy Center, who became the object of lengthy questioning at the completion of Tuesday's hearing.

TESTIFYING IN Wednesday's proceedings were Medical Consultant Jack Massimino of Salt Lake City, Utah, Dr. McGee and Cappadonna.

Massimino, who is vice president of health services with John Short and Associates, Inc., presented a study he had completed for MMH in February on the financial impact of Odessa's receiving the 6MEV.

Under cross-examination by Odessa attorney Joe Webber, Massimino said he was not hired merely to substantiate Midland's case. "They assumed there would be some financial impact and they hired me to determine whether there would," Massimino said.

According to his findings, Massimino said the facility (Allison Center) could lose $261,000. Massimino said he based his findings on "the financial impact that would be due to additional loss from 1,000, 2,000 or 3,000 procedures" at the Allison Center because of a second 6MEV in the area.

In a heated exchange, Webber accused Massimino, who has a bachelor's degree in psychology and master's degree in hospital administration, of not being an expert witness and spent time looking through Webster's Dictionary for the name of the college (California Western University) from which Massimino received

Rancher, 76, indicted in deaths of fishermen

MERTZON — A 76-year-old rancher, described by sources as rich and eccentric, has been indicted in the shooting deaths of two fishermen on Spring Creek March 22.

Mortimer "Bubba" Hall was arrested on a warrant signed by State District Judge Earl Smith, following a lengthy special session of the Irion County grand jury Wednesday. Bonds of $50,000 were set on each of the murder charges.

Hall was under guard at a San Angelo hospital this morning. He had checked into the hospital Wednesday afternoon for treatment of high blood pressure and alcoholism, according to Sheriff Delmon West.

The two fishermen were 34-year-old John Bernardon of Midland and David Adams, 32, of Rollin Acres. Their bodies were discovered about 8 p.m. March 22. Bernardon was found sprawled in a rowboat, while Adams was found in four or five feet of water. They had been fishing since early that morning and had been shot numerous times with a small caliber weapon.

Several small caliber weapons were found near the scene, which was on a portion of the creek that wound through Hall's property.

Sources say Hall was a wealthy Mertzson rancher "with odd ways." Several complaints had been made about him to local authorities over the years, but only one of them resulted in court action, according to West.

In 1976 he was fined $200 on a disorderly conduct charge. The other complaints were either dropped by the complaining parties or ignored by local officials, according to sources. The complaints stemmed from similar shooting incidents which, however, did not injure anyone.

El Salvador characterized by confusion

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

El Salvador, the troubled Central America republic beset by a teeming population and the classic wealth vs. poor struggle, is "one of the most confused populations anywhere in the world," said a Baptist missionary who recently returned from the so-called "Banana Republic" that produces no bananas.

The country is controlled "by the wealthy and by the military...and the others just sort of stand around," said the preacher, E. Hoyt Eudaly, who first visited the country of volcanic plateaus and political turmoil in 1956 and returned for a 2½-year tour in 1979.

"Why did the lid blow off?" the 68-year-old minister asked rhetorically.

He responded: "They (revolutionaries) wanted to improve the lot of the extremely poor people," he said. "It (the war) is not political. It's economic, psychological and (then) political."

After the insurrection, land was taken from the wealthy landowners and re-distributed to the workers — to those who had tilled and toiled over the land," the missionary told the Midland Downtown Lions Club on Wednesday noon in the Midland Center.

Banks were nationalized, and so were plantations and the coffee, cattle, cane, corn and cotton industries. Eudaly said that the reported 10,000 to 15,000 people killed by the new leftists most likely is a low count; an accurate one may never be made.

The massacres might be considered warring among so-called Christians. "Nearly everyone considers himself a Christian," said the minister, whose principal duty was distributing Spanish-language literature in the country of 5 million mostly-hungry people who are starving for a direction in life, a new spirituality and for physical sustenance.

"It's just teeming with people," the preacher said.

And most Salvadorans claim allegiance to the Roman Catholic Church, although they are increasingly skeptical of the church's leadership and intentions.

"When you hear of 'Christians fighting Christians,' that doesn't mean anything," Eudaly said. "It's people fighting people."

Eudaly, who now is a missionary-in-residence at The First Baptist Church of Midland, said that the United States "talk about military advisers" in El Salvador certainly is not novel. Military "advisers" from throughout the world have been in this small (about the size of Massachusetts) nation of 5 million people. He said that 53 countries are represented by military advisers in the weary nation.

While living in San Salvador, the country's capital, Eudaly said he and his wife, Marie, "lived as low a profile as possible."

"We were very careful," he said, and honored the curfew, which ordered people off the streets between 7 p.m. and 5 a.m.

The guerrillas are the leftists, who make up 10 to 20 percent of the population.

The rich, very much in the minority, are far from popular.

"Who loves a rich man?" he posed.

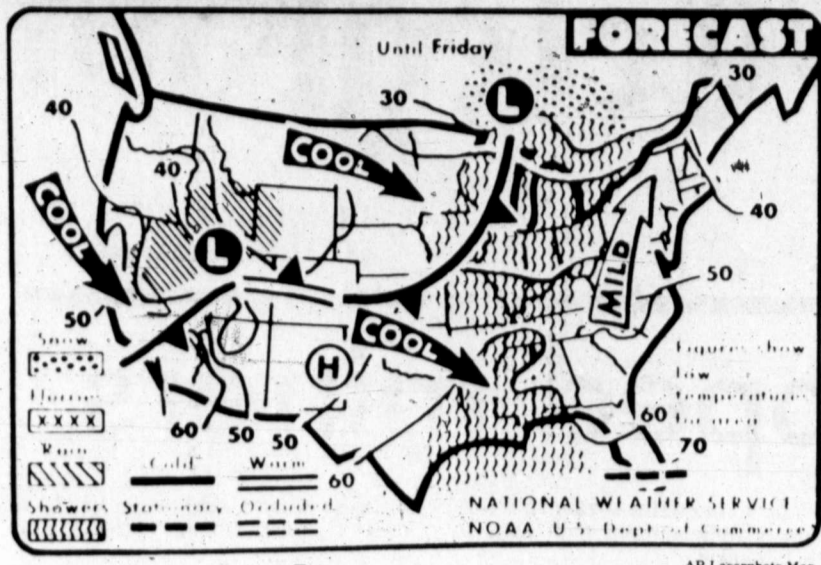

The spiritually adrift majority just stands around and waits for change.

"Most of the people are spectators," he said. "They don't talk about 'we,' " Eudaly said. "They talk about 'them.' "

"There's an aspect of resignation among the helpless majority," he surmised. "There's a revolution going

WEATHER SUMMARY

Showers are expected today until Friday morning, from the Gulf to the Great Lakes. Rain is expected for the central Rockies. Mild weather is forecast in the East but most of the nation is expected to be cooler.

Midland statistics

Table with 2 columns: Time (6 a.m. to 6 p.m.) and Temperature (High/Low). Includes 'NATIONAL WEATHER SERVICE READINGS' and 'LOCAL TEMPERATURES'.

The weather elsewhere

Table with 2 columns: City and Temperature (High/Low). Lists various cities including Albany, Amarillo, Anchorage, etc.

Table with 3 columns: City, High, Low, Precip. Lists cities like Abilene, Alice, Alpine, Amarillo, Austin, etc.

Texas area forecasts

West Texas: Decreasing cloudiness north today, becoming partly cloudy tonight and Friday. Mostly cloudy south with widely scattered showers or thundershowers through tonight. Highs 65 to 78. Lows 45 to 58. Highs Friday 75 to 88.

Border state forecasts

Oklahoma: Considerable cloudiness central and east with widely scattered showers and thundershowers through tonight, otherwise partly cloudy and warmer through Friday. Highs 70s. Lows 40s and 50s. Highs Friday 80s.

Probability of more rain to drop to 20 percent tonight

Portions of the Permian Basin continued to receive long-awaited spring rains early this morning, although by tonight the probability for additional precipitation will drop to only 20 percent. Midland received an official .42 inch in a 24-hour period beginning early Wednesday, while a location near Garfield and Neely recorded .21 during the night. Midland's three-day total stood at 1.07 inch, while the 1981 precipitation rose to 3.51.

Big Spring, .70; and Lomax, .75. Overall totals noted include Lamesa, 1.5; Stanton, 2.0; and Big Lake, 2.0. Decreasing cloudiness and warming conditions are expected to prevail Friday, with the National Weather Service predicting a high in the upper 70s. Cloudy skies, rain and thundershowers were forecast today for all of Texas except for Northwest Texas. Northwest Texas was to have clearing skies.

Daniel, sister relationship called 'weird'

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Jean Daniel Murph, accused of having a "weird" relationship with her brother, Price Daniel Jr., said those accusations are the product of an overactive imagination and a "sick mind." Daniel's widow, Vickie Daniel, took the witness stand again Wednesday at a child custody hearing Mrs. Murph filed to wrest custody of the Daniels' two youngest sons. Asked by Mrs. Murph's attorney, J.C. "Zeke" Zbrank, if she thought the brother-sister relationship was weird, Mrs. Daniel replied that she did. "He (Daniel) pushed his knee between her legs and would push up and kiss her," Mrs. Daniel said. Mrs. Murph, who filed the custody suit after Mrs. Daniel was charged murder in the Jan. 19 shooting death of her husband, hotly denied there was anything abnormal about her relationship with her brother. "... that is insanity," she said outside the courtroom. "It never occurred. It's just indicative of all the other stories she told. It's just imaginative ... it's indicative of a sick mind." Mrs. Daniel's accusatory testimony — in a hearing that already has produced sensational claims of child molesting, drug abuse, alcoholism and sexual deviancy — was followed by a shouting match between her attorney, Richard "Racehorse" Haynes, and Zbrank over the admissibility of a bag reported to contain some marijuana Daniel owned. Haynes and a colleague in Mrs. Daniel's defense, Andrew Lannie, both testified they found the bag in a cuts. Meanwhile, during this break, the alternate plan offered by Rep. Jones will be publicized widely, according to Gergen. Gergen was the first in the long line of Wednesday's speakers to deny that the president is willing to even think of a compromise on his economic package, and primarily the tax cuts of 30 percent. Bush, formerly of Midland, said the public "has a tendency to hyperanalyze every decision of this process." He pointed out that Reagan has made progress in that "no one has said that taxes shouldn't be cut at all." Reagan's four-part package calls for budget cuts, tax cuts, reduction in excessive regulation and accelerated capital recovery.

calls for $650 billion in tax levels for 1982, $778 billion in 1983 and $865 billion in 1984, Jones proposes $689 billion in 1982, $778 billion the following year and $865 billion the year after that. According to Reagan's staff, by 1984, that would mean an additional $94 billion in taxes over what Reagan is wanting. Weidenbaum, an economist, criticized former President Jimmy Carter's economic policy, calling it a "stop and go" plan with inflation highlighted one year and unemployment the next. Reagan's plan, he stated, "will fight both simultaneously. It's not a quick fix."

more competition from American industries and an increase in exports. "We're trying to fine-tune the economy. What we've done in the past is inhibit growth. The name of the game here is to turn the economy back to the people," said the undersecretary of the Treasury. The current depreciation policy of businesses, he charged, is antiquated, and Reagan's proposal changes that. "Expansion of productivity in the manufacturing sector is slowing" as a result of that current depreciation factor. The man who is called the "architect" of the president's economic plan, David Stockman, dug into the proposal deeper than preceding speakers, with figures flowing off his tongue as easily as the alphabet. In battling with Jones' plan, Stockman accused the congressman of "using gimmicks to make his totals look good. We believe the budget is a pretty darn serious matter. Savings won't materialize under Jones' plan."

QUESTIONED ABOUT the negative effects of the plan on already-strapped Americans, Bush replied, "When conditions are not rosy, people hurt. They're already hurting today. Yes, it's possible to hear more squealing when programs are cut." However, if passed in its current form, Bush predicted the country would be seeing an upswing in the economy by the end of the year. A packet given to each media representative contained a fact sheet showing the differences between the budget proposed by Reagan and the recent proposal by Rep. Jones. According to that fact sheet, Reagan calls for spending to hit $695 billion by fiscal year 1982, $732 billion by fiscal year 1983 and $770 billion by fiscal year 1984. Jones' budget, however, has spending at $714 billion in 1982, $778 billion in 1983 and $837 billion in 1984. Tax levels in Jones' budget also run higher, according to the fact sheet. While the Administration

FOLLOWING REAGAN'S plan and referring to the current Administration as having a life of eight years, Weidenbaum predicted that by 1986 the U.S. would have a low inflation rate and a high growth economy. The effect of this program, he claimed, would "reduce the role of government in our daily lives. Small businesses will be a special beneficiary of it. It's small business that has been hurt by big government." Hopefully, he added, inflation will drop to 8 percent by 1982 and 6 percent by 1983. Looking at Jones' suggestions for the budget, Weidenbaum chortled that "he is a fine gentleman. We'll be glad to explain this program to him again, and I think he'll come closer to agreeing with us." Shortcomings in his budget, said Weidenbaum, are in the defense area. Reagan's proposal would eliminate double taxation of dividends, he said. And, if history repeats itself, tax cuts should stimulate savings, thus increasing jobs in the private sector by 12 million. On the international level, these effects within the U.S. will translate into increased productivity,

And while Jones defers his tax cut until 1982, Stockman claimed, "We feel the economy needs a boost and stimulus today" with Reagan's program. "The purpose of this economic program is to change the course of the country. We wouldn't go to all this trouble if by 1982 inflation is the same as it is today, or the interest rates were only 1/2 of 1 percent lower. "This policy is designed to produce results," Stockman said. And that's just what the White House staff hopes the Wednesday briefing will achieve — results on the local front.

House tentatively OKs bill on teacher insurance

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A group insurance bill for school teachers, which one legislator said would "subsidize" insurance companies, has gained tentative House approval. Final action, which would send the measure to the Senate, was expected today. The Texas State Teachers Association, which backed the bill, said 555 of the state's 1,000 school districts do not provide group insurance for their teachers. Group life and health insurance generally is cheaper than individual policies. If the bill passes, there would be both local group insurance plans and a statewide plan. Teachers in school districts without a local plan could belong to the state plan. The state would be authorized to pay part of each teacher's premium, at a cost that could run as high as $64 million next year and over $200 million annually if teachers get the same $40 a month for insurance as state employees. Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, objected to the bill, saying many teachers already are covered by their spouses' group insurance. He said that when a claim is filed, it probably would be paid by the spouse's insurer rather than the teachers'. "You are going to be subsidizing the insurance companies," Whaley said. "The insurance companies are going to be the beneficiaries of this plan."

on-for-people who are spectators." Eudaly said that the increasing disillusionment with the Roman Catholic Church in the predominantly "rural" country is due to the church's favoritism with the wealthy and the government. And he perceives that more and more Salvadoreans are seeking a spiritual life outside of the traditional church. "How can I find out about Jesus?" Eudaly said more and more people are asking. "How can I get Christ in my soul?" Answers to those questions may be gleaned in literature published by the Baptist Spanish Publishing House in El Paso and distributed by the missionary in El Salvador. "There's a spiritual gap of people looking for something," Eudaly said. "Death is not the answer."

"It (the war in El Salvador) is not political. It's economic, psychological and (then) political." — E. Hoyt Eudaly

Judge refuses to reduce bail

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — A Municipal Court judge refused to reduce a $10 million bail for a Texas man suspected of dealing cocaine and pointing a gun at a car repossessor last week. "It looks like the defendant is prepared to flee ... in fact I'm not convinced that with $10 million he will appear," said Judge Joseph Lodge at the conclusion of a bail hearing that lasted about one hour. Lodge had set the bail at $10 million for Michael Bickers, 40, of Dallas, in an informal hearing Sunday after speaking with jail personnel on the telephone.

his bachelor's degree. Spending at least 15 minutes on the matter, Webber finally challenged Massimino to compute an additional loss statement while on the stand. MASSIMINO FOUND that if the Allison Center were to lose 6,137 radiation procedures and 75 chemotherapy procedures to MCH, the center would have an additional loss of $59,144 before depreciation and contractual agreements. Dr. McGee gave a brief summary of the history of the Allison Center's development. "Initial studies at the HSA (Health Systems Agency) level showed that there could be two viable centers in the area. However, that was based on a no-growth level in Odessa at the time the Allison Center was a viable entity," McGee said. He admitted that there was an opportunity for Odessa to upgrade its services to include a linear accelerator. However, he pointed out, it should be after "the Allison Center has been in operation and develops a track record." McGee continued, "I don't believe there is any need for them (Odessa) to change those services. Right now, the Allison Center is a fledgling operation. He explained two 6MEVs in the area would "hurt both institutions. However, it will do more damage to the fledgling Allison Center." McGee said later "the whole point is that the Allison Center needs to be established. (Right now) it doesn't have any past history." He said the Center had no way of knowing what a second 6MEV would do to its operation financially.

have to leave the area," McGee said. Without the Odessa machine, the closest cobalt radiation machine for superficial or palliative radiation treatment would be in San Angelo, he said. The most contested testimony of the day came when Cappeladonna took the stand. Cappeladonna, who has been involved with the Allison Center project since its inception, explained that from the outset "we have had a lot of cooperation of good people from Odessa to get our center. This was a regional effort and not the Midland-Odessa conflict you've been hearing for the last few days." However, Webber challenged Cappeladonna, reading earlier testimony at the THFC during the Allison Center application hearing in late 1979. Quoting MMH Board of Directors President Ed Magruder, Webber read that "even if the Allison Center did not get a penny of income, the hospital district would only have a "13 to 16 percent increase in taxes." WEBBER ASKED Cappeladonna how Midlanders could be upset about funding the center with taxes if Magruder had testified of the triviality of the matter in an earlier hearing. "That may have been Mr. Magruder's feeling," Cappeladonna said, "however, he is certainly not in the same economic strata as the rest of us. I am concerned about what this will cost." Cappeladonna testified that he had no idea MCH would seek to upgrade its radiation services when an application was made for the Allison Center. "What we didn't realize was that they (MCH) would be putting in a 6MEV before we could even get our feet wet at the Allison Center," Cappeladonna said. Again reading from earlier testimony, MMH attorney Fred Davis cited a statement from MCH administrator Sam Glenney, who said the cobalt unit in 1979 was "considered the workhorse of many radiation centers." "That's what had been represented to us," Cappeladonna said. "The machine only got bad in the last few days," he added sarcastically. Webber had pointed out earlier in Glenney's statement at that haring MCH had agreed to keep its cobalt machine and would be upgrading its services.

'Macho Bandit' is a real steal

HOUSTON (AP) — A polite, good-looking robber authorities have nicknamed the "Macho Bandit" has teamed with two other men and struck eight Houston savings and loan offices since mid-March, police say. "We call him the Macho Bandit because the tellers say he is so polite and so good-looking and apparently isn't concerned he might get caught," said robbery detective O.G. King. The three gunmen held up the Fort Bend Savings and Loan Association on Wednesday and fled with an undetermined amount of money. No one was injured, King said. Authorities suspect the "Macho Bandit" is a 27-year-old convict who escaped March 18 from the federal prison at Bastrop where he was serving time for a conviction connected with a 1976 bank robbery in Arkansas.

King says the bandit dresses in a suit and carries a pistol and a shoulder holster. "He comes into the savings and loans, always talks politely to the girls and tells them to go ahead and take his picture while he is there," King said. Police have described the "Macho Bandit" as 6-foot-4, weighing 220 pounds, with brown hair and a "good tan."

Crime reported in city continues to be light

Reported criminal activity was very light for the second day in a row. In a burglary complaint, Winston Blackman of 1505 E. Front St. said a .22-caliber pistol was removed from his vehicle. In two theft reports, Tressa Cunningham of 1701 W. Washington Ave. told officers $45 was stolen from a purse in the band hall of Midland High School, while Marilyn Johnson, 303 Oxford St., said $1,000 in cash was missing from a lock box in storage at the Rocky Ford Moving Van Co., 3811 W. Industrial Ave.

When aid dries up, so may Sahel

By LEON DASH
The Washington Post

SADEIZE-KOUARA, Niger — American aid has reached into this village nestled in a parched hollow of Africa's semiarid Sahelian zone, which is struggling to sustain human life even as, paradoxically, its population is burgeoning.

The Sahel, fending off the Sahara Desert to the north, inadequately supports some 60 million people today with the help of food from abroad. That number is expected to double in 30 years. But within half that time, the estimated 3 percent annual population growth of families that survived a devastating 1968-74 drought will have vastly outstripped the region's capacity to support them.

The lifeline for the 783 villagers here may be the U.S. aid program trying to change traditional farming methods and improve yields. In turn, thousands of similar villages may benefit from similar international efforts.

The question for the Sahel's people and their poor governments is what will happen when the funds necessary to subsidize these programs dry up. The outlook improved last week when the Reagan administration pledged a 30 percent increase in U.S. aid programs to Africa, but the international funding still remains precarious.

Experts estimate that it could take 25 years to achieve self-sustaining food production in the Sahel.

Ironically, part of the Sahel's problem results from the international food aid and health programs.

The population growth has accelerated the cutting of the Sahel's essential, scarce forest cover as people seek fuel for cooking. Vital top soil, without tree roots to hold it, is blown away by the harmattan, or Saharan dry-season wind, that expands the patches of desert where crops once grew in the rainy season.

The amount of cultivable land, always limited, is shrinking.

Before the drought began in 1968, farmer Yacouba Oumarou — one of the first participants in the training program — gathered firewood with his brother during the six-month dry seasons. They took it by camel 50 miles to Niger's capital to sell. They then bought food to supplement their own crops.

"Even back then," Oumarou said, "it was very difficult to find firewood concentrated in an area. We had to go farther and farther away ... A lot of land was killed."

Sahel, an Arabic word meaning border, defines the stretch of trees and seasonal vegetation up to 600 miles wide, running 2,600 miles from Senegal to central Chad. It includes land of Cape Verde, Gambia, Mauritania, Mali, Upper Volta and Niger.

Of the eight Sahelian countries, Niger has been most successful in restoring farm output since the drought. In grain production, it has surpassed the 1.5 million tons needed annually. This grain self-sufficiency was accomplished despite large population growth: from 3.5 million in 1964 to 5.5 million today.

But Niger's 900,000 farmers are still dependent on the rain. One of the Sahel's prolonged cyclical drought could wipe out their recent gains. While Niger is sustaining life, much remains to do in improving it.

The life expectancy of a child born in Sadeize-Kouara, for example, is 42 years, if he lives past age 5. Of some 250,000 babies born in Niger in 1980, 40,000 died in their first 12 months. Of those that lived, 50,000 will die before the age of 5 from curable diarrheal diseases and chronic malnutrition.

Many Niger adults suffer from untreated festering sores, respiratory diseases, chronic diarrhea and eye infections that lead to blindness.

Niger earns foreign exchange by exporting uranium and uses the revenue to finance food development, health and education projects.

When uranium prices were high, Niger went $750 million in debt to finance a five-year development plan. But last year, the world price for uranium plummeted and left the financing of Niger's plans in question.

The loans "may have very negative effects on our economy" when they begin coming due in the mid-1980s, the military head of state, Col. Seyni Kountche, said in an interview.

"But this is an effort without a price tag for us," said Kountche, whose government's annual budget is $336 million. "We do have to carry these things out whatever the debt is we run into."

Only 12 percent of Niger's 490,000 square miles is considered cultivable. All of that is under cultivation and population pressure is pushing farmers onto marginal land.

Development experts say most of the sandy Sahelian soil is fragile because of low water-holding capacity, limited ability to retain soluble chemical fertilizers and high susceptibility to wind and water erosion.

In 1979, the U.S. Agency for International Development office in Niamey, the capital of Niger, began a $19 million five-year program to train 2,000 farmers in growing more grain while strengthening the fertility of their farmlands.

During a six-month growing season, the farmers and their wives live at a training center learning — most for the first time — to use animal droppings as fertilizer, to mix it with chemical fertilizers and plow it all into a field with an ox-drawn plow. The farmers are also taught row planting, for better yields through easier weeding, and use of high-quality hybrid seeds.

Auditors say Braniff may not survive

DALLAS (AP) — Independent auditors say Braniff International Corp., which reported an airline-industry record $131 million loss for 1980, may not be able to survive.

"There are conditions which indicate that the company may be unable to continue as a going concern," said the report prepared by Deloitte Haskins and Sells. A "going concern" is defined as a company expected to continue in business indefinitely.

On Dec. 31, 1980, Braniff's current liabilities exceeded current assets by $143 million and long-term debt was $517 million larger than stockholder equity.

Braniff spokesman Ray Chanaud said the auditors' "going concern" opinion was required by federal law in view of Braniff's huge losses since July 1979.

"Any company that has had 18 months of sustained losses is required to state an opinion as to the company's ability to continue in light of those losses," he said.

Trading in Braniff stock was halted temporarily after the auditor's announcement Wednesday. The stock closed at 4 1/2, down $1 a share from the Tuesday closing price.

The company has announced several plans designed to get it out of its financial hole, the most-publicized of which was the agreement by union employees last month to voluntarily accept a 10-percent pay reduction.

However, many union members expressed anger earlier this week when they learned that non-union, middle management workers had received pay raises averaging about 10 percent.

Braniff Chairman John Casey has promised a series of meetings with the company's rank-and-file workers this week to explain the need for those raises.

Senate OKs proposal to hike interest rate ceiling

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans who borrow money—whether from a pillar-of-the-community bank or a street corner lender—probably would pay higher interest rates under a bill approved by the Senate.

The Senate climaxed seven hours of debate Wednesday night by passing a proposal that would raise the interest rate ceiling on most loans, including credit card purchases, to 24 percent.

Home mortgages would be excluded. The vote to return the amended bill to the House was 24-4, with Sen. Ray Farabee not voting.

The ceiling would go to 28 percent on business loans of $250,000 or more. Farm loans were exempted from the higher commercial rate in an apparent attempt to attract the vote of rural senators.

"We're not sticking it to anybody except those who borrow money to make a purchase," said Sen. Betty Andujar, R-Fort Worth.

"We're not sticking it to anybody," responded the bill sponsor, Sen. Grant Jones. "We are raising the maximum rate a person has to pay if he feels he must borrow money."

The bill establishes a ceiling that would be tied to the six-month U.S. Treasury bill rate. When the rate is as low as 9 percent, the ceiling would be 18 percent. But when the T-bill rate is higher—as it is now—the ceiling would be twice the T-bill rate, up to a limit of 24 percent on personal loans.

Of 15 proposed amendments, only one that Jones opposed cleared the Senate and that one survived by a single vote. It would enable the holder of a charge or credit card such as VISA or Mastercard to pay off his balance in the first billing cycle without also having to pay interest from the date of purchase.

Jones, D-Abilene, accepted an amendment to prohibit a lender from discriminating on the basis of sex, race, color, religion or national origin.

The Senate, however, rejected Sen. Carl Parker's "a deal's a deal" amendment which would prohibit a store or financial institution from charging a new and higher interest rate on a charge account or credit card balance compiled when a lower rate was in effect.

Parker, D-Port Arthur, said Jones' bill reminded him of a childhood neighbor "who had the only basketball in town. The only way we could play with it was if we played by his rules, and he made them up as we went along—and he usually won."

A proposal requiring loan agreements to be presented in "easily understood sentences" failed, 26-3.

Rates for loans offered by consumer finance companies would remain as they are, but Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said the changing of brackets would cause the rates on small loans to become the highest in the nation.

As an example, he said, the rate on a $250 loan for one year would be 85 percent.

Parker said by setting

FBI begins investigation into Texas welfare fraud

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Federal authorities say they are trying to clean their own house with an FBI investigation looking for welfare cheats among 44,000 state and federal civil service workers in eight South Texas counties.

The investigation is called "Project Match" and entails checking payroll records for the civil service workers in Bexar, Atascosa, Bandera, Comal, Guadalupe, Kendall, Medina and Wilson Counties against the welfare rolls to detect any flagrant cases of fraud.

"We're not going after the poor devil who through accident or design got an extra $100 check," FBI Agent-in-Charge Jack Lawn said. "It'll be a question of whether we want the person who got $10,000 a year or $50,000. We'll go after the big offenders."

Offenders could be prosecuted on charges of filing false statements to receive federal funds or mail fraud, a federal prosecutor said.

A federal grand jury has issued subpoenas for the welfare rolls for 1978-80 in the eight counties in an effort to identify any federal or state workers receiving welfare benefits illegally through the Food Stamp or Aid to Families with Dependent Children programs, according to FBI Agent Albert R. Robinson who is heading the investigation.

The Texas Department of Human Resources was ordered to give the records to the grand jury by May 5. Subpoenas also were issued for civilian employee payroll records at Kelly Air Force Base, the San Antonio FBI office and the U.S. Attorney's office to be delivered to the grand jury by June 2.

Robinson said the investigation is expected to take several months and is intended to pinpoint aggravated cases of welfare fraud.

He said tapes of the requested records will be processed through Justice Department computers to produce a printout of names that appear on both federal and state payrolls and welfare rolls.

Project Match is believed to be the first such federal investigation conducted in Texas and is patterned after successful investigations in New York, Baltimore, Chicago and other cities, federal officials said.

About $92 million is paid out in welfare benefits each year in the eight affected counties, state officials said, including about $74.8 million in food stamps and $17.5 million in AFDC funds.

The eight counties have 9,494 state employees and 34,639 federal workers, personnel officials reported.

As of January, 147,920 people were on the food stamp rolls and 43,425 were receiving aid through the AFDC program.

Robinson, who supervises the FBI's white collar crime section, said the investigation will include his office and the U.S. Attorney's office because, "we're going to start off looking at ourselves."

"We want to make sure our own houses are clean," he said.

The grand jury also will look at other agency records as the investigation continues, Robinson said.

Salesman gets 30-year term

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 22-year-old door-to-door magazine subscription salesman has been meted a 30-year prison term after an eight-man, four-woman jury in Midland's 142nd State District Court convicted him of the aggravated rape of a 20-year-old Midland woman in her north-west apartment on Dec. 9.

The defendant, Danny Neal Allen, wept after the jury returned its verdict, and then begged for mercy.

The victim, too, had cried and was so visibly shaken in her testimony that Judge Pat Baskin recessed court for her to regain her composure.

The petite woman testified that she was raped at knifepoint minutes after she allowed the man into her apartment to sell magazine subscriptions in a contest for him to win a trip to Hawaii or to the Caribbean.

The attack came after the woman said she had just stepped out of the bathtub, put her panties and a full-length navy-blue robe to answer a knock on the door. She was getting ready for the evening shift at an exclusive Midland restaurant, where she was a waitress.

She responded to the knock at the door.

After checking over the list of magazines offered by Allen through Dixie Reader Service of Jackson, Miss., the woman indicated an interest in "Cosmopolitan," which the magazine service apparently did not offer. "Esquire" magazine is "just like" the periodical she preferred, Allen supposedly had told the woman.

Before the attack on that Tuesday afternoon in December, the woman said Allen asked her "If I 'fooled around,' and I said 'no.' Then, he asked me if I was 'gay,' and again I told him 'no.' " "And I got upset, and I got up and opened the door for him to leave...."

Testimony and statements by the victim indicated that while her assailant was having sexual intercourse with her on the woman's couch, he talked about his mother being raped and about other girls he had known.

After the assault, court records indicated, the defendant handed a pocketknife to the woman and begged forgiveness for his deed.

"He told me several times to kill him," she had said. She refused, and he took the knife from her and left.

On the witness stand, Allen denied raping the woman but said he could not remember if he had offered to sell her magazine subscriptions, since he had been calling on so many people in soliciting sales.

Dr. B.J. Youngblood, a Midland psychiatrist who evaluated the defendant, said that Allen's attitude toward women was demeaning.

The defendant displayed "somehat of a belittling and derogatory attitude toward women," Youngblood said under examination by co-prosecutor David Joers.

The psychiatrist also said that Allen wondered why a woman would "yell rape" and then speculated that she would yell "rape" to get attention from her husband.

"It (Allen's comment) was more in regard to a woman who might claim to be raped," Youngblood said.

The woman's 30-year-old live-in fiancé, who was at work at time of the offense, testified that she was "crying and embarrassed" when he first saw her on the afternoon of the rape.

Defense attorney Vernon Reichle, who had draped a mannequin with the woman's blue robe and displayed the figure for benefit of the jurors, summoned the victim's boyfriend on the witness stand.

"Did you ever talk (to her) about opening the door to strangers?" Reichle asked.

"No, sir," he replied.

The victim's boyfriend said he and his fiancée had never talked about the rape, because she was too disturbed, he testified under examination by co-prosecutor Rob Sutphen.

"She'd become more reserved... start crying" if the assault were mentioned. "She'd get real depressed (in thinking about the trial)," the boyfriend said.

"We're planning on getting married," said the man, now divorced, "and (were) afraid how it (the rape) might affect our future."

The best things are close to home.

Buildings burn as firefighters strike

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — As striking firefighters looked on, a few civilians and the mayor tried to contain fires that destroyed at least six buildings and damaged several others in this industrial city early today, officials say.

Scores of people were driven from burning apartment buildings into the chill night. There were no reports of injuries.

Some firefighters and equipment coming from other Westchester County cities and towns under a mutual aid agreement were stopped by strikers, according to authorities.

Yonkers, the state's fourth largest city with a population of 204,000, was left without fire protection Wednesday when the city's 300 firefighters and 127 uniformed fire officers walked off their jobs.

The strikers firefighters are members of United Firefighters Association Local 628. The striking officers belong to the Fire Officers Association.

Those unions and two others — Teamsters Local 456, representing public works and parks workers, and the Captains, Lieutenants and Sergeants Association, representing ranking police officers — have been bargaining with the city over fringe benefits to be included in new contracts retroactive to last July.

A tentative agreement on a wage package was reached last September, but failure to agree on the fringe benefits prevented the contracts from being ratified.

Meanwhile, the unions representing the 85 police officers and 420 Department of Public Works and Department of Parks workers scheduled membership meetings today, presumably to decide whether to join the firefighters' walk-out.

Police Lt. Joseph Messina said he had no reports of arson in the blazes, which destroyed four apartment buildings, a furniture warehouse with a bar on the ground floor and an appliance store.

Initially, firefighters from Dobbs Ferry and Hastings refused to answer alarms in Yonkers. Later, trucks arriving from Dobbs Ferry and Mount Vernon were surrounded by pickets who convinced the firemen to return home, officials said.

A fire company coming from Ardsley was turned back by Yonkers Fire Commissioner Richard Smith who apparently feared for their safety.

Earlier, Mayor Gerald Loehr had said firefighters from other towns would be willing to help out in Yonkers and would be allowed to help.

"We have indications they will not be interfered with if they do respond," Loehr had said, several hours before he and other civilians tried to help stem the spread of the fires.

Suit filed against firm for patent infringement

A Canadian mining equipment and pipe-manufacturing company has filed a suit for damages against Midland's B&M Oil Tool Co. for alleged infringement on a patent owned by the plaintiff, Drill Systems Inc. of Calgary, Alberta, Canada.

The suit, which seeks treble damages and an injunction to enjoin B&M from manufacturing and selling "double-walled pipe structures," was filed this week in federal court in Midland. Midland attorneys Bob Freeman and John Hyde represent Drill Systems.

In contention is Drill Systems' allegations that B&M has been "manufacturing and selling...double-walled pipe structures" used in reverse-circulation drilling.

The double-walled pipe construction was invented by Floyd W. Becker, who is a consultant to Drill Systems.

Virgil Keith Morgan of Midland is president of B&M Oil Tool Co.

A unifying flight

When the space shuttle Columbia touched down on Rogers Dry Lake in California Tuesday, a feeling like a charge of electricity raced the length and breadth of the United States. The flight of Columbia was important for the American people because of what it represented.

Battered and tossed by the increasing waves of anti-American sentiment in recent years, Americans have seen their technological "hedge" undermined, their hard-earned glory tarnished. There was a need for reassurance.

The success of Columbia provided a unifying force for Americans much akin to the emotions experienced when Ronald Reagan was elected president and when, just after he was inaugurated, the 52 Americans held illegally by Iran for 444 days were released and returned to the nation.

That feeling of unity is a mixture of joy, confidence, self-assurance, pride and infallibility. It is the reawakening of our confidence in ourselves and our technological abilities; that feeling that surely must have surged through the Wright brothers when their fragile aircraft initiated flight. It is the feeling generated by doing the impossible or the unbelievable.

The future of the nation's space program may not be assured by the success of Columbia, but at the very least it is greatly enhanced. The United States once again has assumed the leadership role in the exploration of space, a role that had been questioned in recent years.

But the space shots by the Soviet Union and the other nations around the globe take a back seat when viewed after the excitement of the world's first shuttle flight.

The race for space is no longer a race; it really never has been. With only one virtually perfect flight the United States assumed the commanding role. It will remain in that role as long as the people of the nation are willing to devote the financial and scientific emphasis necessary to keep it there.

In this time of economic belt-tightening Americans are weighing each expenditure on a cost-benefit yardstick. That doesn't mean we should not continue to have a space program; rather, it means we should spend our dollars earmarked for space research carefully. We should get the most for our money.

Shuttle flight is one means of stretching our dollars committed to space research. We are confident that future flights will reinforce that view.

Judging from the technological advances experienced following the commitment given the space program in years gone by, it would be unwise to fail to give it a reasonable priority.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Thursday, April 16, the 106th day of 1981. There are 259 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On April 16, 1917, the Communist leader Lenin returned to Russia after years of exile to assume leadership of the Russian revolutionary movement.

On this date: In 1906, the Pacific cable was completed between the United States and China.

In 1945, U.S. troops entered Nuremberg, Germany, during World War II.

In 1947, more than 500 people died in fires and explosions at Texas City, Texas, when a French freighter loaded with nitrate blew up.

In 1972, the Apollo 16 astronauts were launched toward the moon from Cape Kennedy, Fla.

Ten years ago: President Richard Nixon said the United States would not halt air raids in Vietnam until North Vietnam released all American prisoners of war.

Five years ago: India announced a new birth control plan to slow the nation's population growth.

One year ago: Iran announced the formation of an "Islamic Revolutionary Army" and called for a Holy War to overthrow the secular government of Iraq.

Today's birthdays: Conductor-composer Henry Mancini is 57 years old. Singer Dusty Springfield is 42. And entertainer Bobby Vinton is 46.

Thought for today: One great use of words is to hide our thoughts — Voltaire, French writer (1694-1778)

HEMISPHERE REPORT

Promise of triumph seen in Central American countries

ST. PHILIP, Barbados — Central America depends on one's point of view.

Visitors from the United States mostly seem to see Central America through dark glasses and to take a dim view of the area's future.

Central Americans themselves readily acknowledge the problems they face but generally are much less pessimistic, even hopeful.

From north and west to south and east, which is the way Central America runs, the panorama varies considerably.

As Rodrigo Madrigal of the newspaper La Nacion, San Jose, Costa Rica, told the recent Inter American Press Association meeting here, Guatemala is politically and socially the most unstable of the Central American countries.

Although Guatemalans are hard-working, social and class distinctions there are the greatest in Central America. Sixty percent of the people have no access to education.

That favors subversion, and long has.

President Romeo Lucas, an army general elected in 1978, and his government have been fighting Marxist guerrillas all the way, just as the military and civilian presidents before him have had to do since the overthrow of the left-leaning regime of President Jacobo Arbenz in 1954.

In Honduras, a junta headed by Gen. Policarpo Paz Garcia runs the country. His administration is taking steps to return Honduras to constitutional government with free elections expected to be held. According to Madrigal, Honduras enjoys considerable stability but the country borders on both troubled El Salvador, with which it now enjoys relatively good relations, and on Nicaragua, with which it has had some border encounters. Sooner or later, Marxist violence can be expected to erupt there, too.

Costa Rica is, as it has been for three decades, the oasis of democracy in Central America. Politically and socially, Costa Rica is the most stable of the countries in the region.

According to Madrigal, the only cloud on its horizon would seem to be the "economic crisis" through which the nation is passing. But, because of Costa Rica's otherwise good record, the World Bank is helping the country correct its economic problems so that it can resume paying its foreign debts.

The Costa Rican newsman said Panama, which generally prefers not to be numbered among the Central American countries, is moving toward a "pseudo-democracy." Although Panama is nominally headed by a civilian president, Aristides Royo, Gen. Omar Torrijos, head of the National Guard, the man with whom President Carter negotiated the treaties that will return the Canal to Panama at the end of this century, has actually run the country most of the time since the coup of 1968. Nevertheless, Panama enjoys economic stability and the confidence of international bankers who have made it an important financial center.

The two Central American countries that are the focus of most tension are El Salvador and Nicaragua. Nicaragua has been under the rule of the Marxists who head the Sandinista National Liberation Front since the ouster of Gen. Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

The struggle against Somoza united virtually the whole Nicaraguan people — priests, laymen, students, peasants, everyone. But after Somoza was forced into exile, the Marxists ended up in control and have tightened their grip on political power since then to the exclusion of the non-Marxists.

Madrigal voiced the opinion that the Sandinistas "know they cannot go far."

Although he did not say so, the Sandinistas obviously recognize that they can count on Cuba and the Soviet Union only for moral support, but that they must rely on the United States for food to feed their people and dollars to finance their reconstruction.

President's 'safety net' won't catch all who fall

Distributed by L.A. Times Syndicate

When the new administration first came into office, they put bids out on a safety net that would take care of the really underprivileged, and disadvantaged, when David Stockman and his budget cutters pushed most of the government social programs out the window.

Originally, the specifications called for the safety net to be large enough to save all the needy in the United States.

It has not been constructed yet, and I went over to the contractor to find out why.

The vice president of the project said it wasn't his fault. "We had the thing built," he said. "But every time we were ready to deliver it, we got a call from the Stockman people saying we had to make it smaller. Originally, the safety net was designed to save needy people on welfare, those suffering from hunger, lack of shelter, as well as the unemployed, Vietnam veterans, minority youths and senior citizens. It was a pretty good net, if I must say so myself."

"But then someone from OMB came over to look at it and said, 'We're going to have to make some changes. We've decided the safety net will catch too many people. Could you make it lighter and narrower?'"

"I told him we could, but I wasn't too sure how safe it would be."

"If we cut out school lunches, education benefits, and public housing, you won't need such heavy rope will you?" he asked me. I said, "No we won't. But what happens if the people who benefited from those programs fall?"

"He said, 'They'll just have to pick themselves up from the sidewalk and walk away.'"

"So we went back to the drawing boards, and came up with a net that would only be able to catch the absolutely down and out, who had no other place to go but in the net."

"We were testing it when we got a call from the budget cutters, who said they had miscalculated on their figures and wanted us to reduce the size of the safety net by another 20 percent. 'We can no longer catch the people on food stamps, and we've eliminated the legal-aid programs for the poor, and we're cutting out mass transportation grants, day care centers, and job employment training projects, as well as veterans benefits,' they told us. 'By doing this we can cut down on the number of people holding the net. It has to be done if we want to get government spending in line.'"

The project vice president said, "I told them I'd make any net they wanted, but I wouldn't take the responsibility for what happened when the people walking a tight rope in America realized there was nothing underneath them. They said it wasn't my responsibility."

"I thought I had it just the right size, when I got another call from the OMB asking me if I could make the net slightly bigger. I asked them 'How big?' and they said, 'Big enough to catch all the tobacco farmers.' It seemed that Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina, who has a lot to say about what the administration does, wanted to make sure the tobacco interests had a place to jump if they had to."

"So we made the net large enough to catch the tobacco farmers, but small enough so no other farmers would be able to use it. I've made a lot of safety nets in my time, but this one really was a lulu."

"Well, we had it all ready to ship over to Stockman when the phone rang again, and the voice on the other end said, 'By the way, is your safety net strong enough to catch the military industrial complex?' I said, 'Are you crazy? It can hardly hold six ghetto people in Chicago.'"

"Well, we have to have a net that will catch the contractors who are making all the new weapons for the Pentagon."

"What for?" I wanted to know. And he replied, "We think we've given them enough rope but they insist on a net to protect them against inflation, cost overruns and stuff that doesn't work. They say they won't build military hardware unless they have a safety-net under them, so they won't get hurt!"

"I told them, 'Do you realize how big a net you're going to need for that?' and all the guy said was 'Don't worry about it. Money is no object.'"

MARK RUSSELL SAYS

In an unemotional spirit of non-combative compromise, I propose that since the gun laws probably won't change, the least the National Rifle Association could do is to pay for the get-well and sympathy cards.

The NRA could work out a deal with a greeting card company. Whenever you purchase a card to send to a friend winged by a handgun, the company could validate the card like a parking-lot ticket and send the bill to the Rifle Association.

I know this won't stop the daily shootout, but at least the NRA will demonstrate that it "cares enough to send the very best."

Compared to the profits from handgun sales, the cost of greeting cards is a mere pittance. Perhaps if we ease up on them, the NRA might even go for the flowers.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Old men in Kremlin hold mankind's fate

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — A small, super-secret group of old men — seven or eight at most — bear responsibility for the Kremlin's decision on military intervention in Poland.

This gray-haired, gray-clad inner circle of Communist Party elders is known simply as the Defense Council. Its deliberations in the Byzantine elegance of the czarist council chambers produce decisions that affect the peace and well being of the whole world.

Little is known about the Defense Council. In fact, its very existence was not officially acknowledged until 1976, in a passing reference to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's role as council chairman. The Soviet constitution published the following year includes a brief mention of the Defense Council, stating that it is "formed" by the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet.

A special Defense Intelligence Agency appraisal, titled "USSR: Defense Council's Role in Decision Making," contains everything our experts know about the secret group. The appraisal, which was shown to my associate Dale Van Atta, is just four pages long.

Here's a summary of what our intelligence experts have been able to learn about the council:

—It is "the main coordinator of defense-related activities of all government bodies, providing key recommendations on defense policy to the Politburo and ensuring that party policy is correctly executed by state organs."

—The members of the Defense Council, as near as the DIA has been able to determine, include Brezhnev; Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov, a civilian technocrat; Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko; Premier Nikolai Tikhonov, replacing the late Alexei Kosygin, his longtime boss; KGB boss Yuri Andropov; Nikolai Ogarkov, military chief of staff, and Leonid Smirnov, chief of the Military Industrial Command. Yakov Ryabov was believed to have been a member, until he was dumped from his post as Communist Party secretary for defense affairs.

—With that lineup, the Defense Council has undeniable clout. As the DIA report puts it, "Since key Defense Council members are also the top Politburo personalities most concerned with military-political issues, (its) recommendations are probably almost assured of party approval." In fact, sources said, there is no known instance of the Politburo overturning a major decision by the Defense Council.

—The Defense Council occupies an intermediary role between the highest party and government organizations involved in national security affairs," the DIA concluded. "It provides top-level coordination for all government activities relating to defense, establishing the general guidelines for Soviet military development."

—"The council probably reviews

Military Industrial Commission decisions that authorize the design, development and production of major weapons systems. Defense Council approval may also be necessary for any program revisions."

—The Defense Council also has a key role in overseeing the way Communist Party policy is actually carried out by the military — and in the formulation of that policy.

What it all boils down to is that the Soviet Defense Council apparently combines the functions of our National Security Council, defense secretary and Joint Chiefs of Staff. But the repeated use of such fudge words as "probably" and "implies" and "may" in the DIA analysis betrays the basic uncertainty that surrounds our Kremlinologists' assessment of the secret group. Our intelligence experts can make educated guesses, but, in the end, they are still only guesses.

One thing emerges clearly from the DIA report, however: Seven or eight old men in the murky depths of the Kremlin hold the fate of mankind in their hands. An error of judgment by the Soviet Defense Council could blow up the world.

WATCH ON WASTE — The budget-slashing atmosphere in Washington may defang the meanest junkyard dog of all: the General Accounting Office. Congress is seriously considering the idea of keeping the auditors at their current $210 million budget, instead of the $244 million GAO asked for. According to the GAO's figures, every dollar provided to the agency brings a $20 return to the taxpayers.

—A GAO study of 21 government agencies ranks them in vulnerability to waste and fraud. The still-unreleased report awards this unenviable Oscar to the U.S. Navy. From January 1977, to March 1979, the Navy had 17,799 reported cases of fraud and associated illegal acts.

—In 1976, Congress gave the Immigration and Naturalization Service $1 million to find out how many illegal aliens were living in the United States. Now, five years later, according to Justice Department auditors, the project has never been completed. Other government experts have estimated that the alien population varies between half a million and 12 million.

—The Federal Supply Service, a branch of the General Services Administration, has decided to be Mr. Nice Guy in dealing with government contractors. First it did away with the one-year warranty that is standard in federal contracts, and now it is thinking of allowing contractors more than one price increase during the life of a supply contract. GSA poobahs figure the kid-glove treatment will make contractors more willing to bargain during initial price negotiations, though a spokesman acknowledged that no studies have been done to support this theory. Insiders say the nice-guy attitude will cost the taxpayers as much as $200 million a year.

with having slowed the attempt "to insert a Marxist wedge in the heart of our America," Madrigal said.

He also said that recent U.S. military assistance to El Salvador, which had been denied the country and its government since 1977, was decisive.

Nevertheless, Madrigal, like most other observers of the Central American scene, insisted that "the solution in El Salvador, as eventually in Guatemala and also Honduras, is not military."

"The solution is economic."

At the moment, Central America appears to be the weakest link in the chain of Latin American countries. But if the vicious circle of underdevelopment can be broken, and the middle-class stands firm against Marxist subversion, Madrigal seemed to be saying, democracy in the Western world and in the Americas will triumph.

Polish urged to purge Politburo hard-liners

By THOMAS W. NETTER
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — An unofficial grassroots congress of the Polish Communist Party has called on party leaders to purge the ruling Politburo and the party's central committee of hard-liners and pay more attention to the voice of the people.

Poland's state-controlled news media termed the meeting Wednesday in Torun, 160 miles northwest of Warsaw, "an important phenomenon in the life of the party." The extraordinary all-day conference, dubbed the All-Polish Forum of Party Reconciliation, attracted some 500 delegates from local party organizations throughout the country. Several delegates insisted to reporters that they were not challenging the communist system or the Soviet Union. But the resolutions they adopted called for opening up the central committee's deliberations to the public and establishing a principle of responsibility to demand from below.

The meeting had dwindled to about 200 delegates by the time resolutions were voted Wednesday night. By a voice vote, those remaining urged the party's central committee at a meeting it has scheduled next week to oust members of the committee and the Politburo who "lack popular support," a reference to those opposing the reforms demanded by the independent Solidarity labor federation.

A second resolution called for admission to the committee meeting of observers representing the situation" in Poland. This apparently was aimed at Soviet, East German and Czechoslovak charges that the reforms being made in response to labor unrest are anti-socialist. The official Polish party newspaper Trybuna Ludu, said "the new structures which emerged" from the meeting "are a form of permanent cooperation of party organizations on the local level."

U.S. will sell artillery to Saudis

WASHINGTON (AP)

The Reagan administration has decided to sell Saudi Arabia ground radar stations and 10,000 more anti-tank missiles in a concerted effort to build the oil-rich kingdom into an anti-Soviet bulwark, sources say.

That's enough missiles "to knock out every tank in the Russian arsenal, certainly all the tanks Israel has," a highly placed source said with some exaggeration. Actually, the Pentagon estimates the Soviets have about 45,000 tanks and the Israelis about 3,000.

The size of the up-to-now secret missile deal and another secret plan to provide Saudi Arabia with a dozen highly sensitive ground radar stations for controlling interceptor planes surprised diplomatic and other seasoned observers.

"Maybe they want to use some for target practice," one source commented wryly.

Although arms requests are frequently scaled down, the Saudis are to get all the TOW wire-guided anti-tank weapons they asked for. They already have 4,000.

When the Army asked why the Saudis needed so many more, according to a source who asked not to be identified, the Saudis said one reason was "they wanted to shoot some up for training."

The administration's arming of Saudi Arabia is designed to stem Soviet adventurism toward the Persian Gulf, but it has worried Israel. The Saudis are one of Israel's most implacable foes and a heavy financial backer of another foe of Israel, the Palestine Liberation Organization.

"We're feeding the crocodile, thinking they'll be nice to us later," a key congressional source said. "We're deluding ourselves."

Other critics say the United States, which receives its biggest share of oil imports from the Saudis, is foolishly banking on a backward anarchy.

They charge that Saudi Arabia is being turned into another well-equipped military power, similar to Iran, at the risk of modern weapons falling into hostile hands.

Administration defenders demur, saying the arms sales are part of the new U.S. strategy to build up U.S. allies in the Persian Gulf as a shield against the Soviets.

The deal to supply the anti-tank missiles was put together even while opposition grew on Capitol Hill to two other arms sales to the Saudis.

One would deliver, beginning in 1985, five of the world's best radar command planes. The other would enhance the range and firepower of the 60 U.S. F-15 jets, best fighter in the skies, which the Saudis will get beginning next year.

Congress has yet to approve any of the three deals.

Almost 50 senators and 100 House members have expressed concern over the proposed sales, raising such issues as a threat to Israel, the stability of Saudi Arabia and the danger of U.S. technology being taken over by enemies.

Survivors include his wife, Lucille Garner of Frisco; four sons, John Garner of Allen, and Leon Garner, Gene Garner and Alton Garner, all of Frisco; a daughter, Mary Sawyers of Abilene; 16 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Another picket staged at airport

Local members of the Professional Air Traffic Controllers will stage another "informational picketing" Friday from noon to 7:30 p.m. at Midland Regional Airport, according to Ronnie Williamson, a spokesman for the PATC.

The picketing is not a walkout, Williamson emphasized, and there will be no air traffic slowdown as a result of the picketing.

The PATC's contract expired in February and the group has been working without a contract since that time.

"We're still in contract negotiations and we're trying to settle this thing without disrupting the air traffic for the public," Williamson said.

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer

SALISBURY, Zimbabwe (AP) — A wholesale exodus of whites didn't materialize, as predicted. Farmers are growing so much food that they may soon be exporting to neighboring black countries. The economy is picking up.

As Zimbabwe observes its first year as an independent, black-governed nation Saturday, the country is a bigger success than many predicted. But it still has a way to go before it can sever all its trading links with South Africa, the last country on the continent to be run by a white minority.

Robert Mugabe, the former guerrilla leader who is now prime minister, watched proudly last April 18 as the multicolor flag of the new nation of Zimbabwe rose over a Salisbury soccer stadium for the first time, symbolizing the end of white rule.

Former Prime Minister Ian Smith's white supporters were saying that Mugabe was a Marxist terrorist who would seize their land, homes, jobs and bank accounts. They said the more than 200,000 whites would be forced to flee, and the economy would founder.

They predicted civil war between the guerrilla armies that, although rivals, were allied in the seven-year guerrilla war to end white rule — the Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army (ZANLA), drawn from Mugabe's dominant Shona Tribe, and the Zimbabwe People's Revolutionary Army (ZIPRA), made up mostly of Joshua Nkomo's Matabele tribesmen.

A year later, the whites still have their houses, savings and jobs. The economy, still mainly in private hands, is enjoying a modest boom.

A record 17,240 people, mostly whites, did emigrate in 1980, but 6,407 new settlers arrived. Most of the 36,000 guerrillas who fought the war and might have posed a threat to peace have been disarmed and integrated into a new national army. And Nkomo is still the junior partner in Mugabe's coalition government.

"Peace and reconciliation have replaced war, racial hatred and confrontation," President Canaan Banana said in an interview to mark the first anniversary of independence.

"All our people, notwithstanding the racial and ethnic heterogeneity, have accepted to live together as Zimbabweans, united by the common desire to rebuild and develop our beautiful country."

Much of the rebuilding has been done.

Exports of minerals, cotton, tobacco, corn, sugar and other commodities have increased from $1 billion in the last year of the war, 1979, to $1.4 billion.

Terrorist dies after long hunger strike

HAMBURG, West Germany (AP) — Convicted West German terrorist Sigurd Debus has died in a local hospital after a two-month hunger strike, authorities and Debus' attorney said today.

The 38-year-old Debus was serving a 12-year prison term for bank robbery. He was one of 26 jailed members of the leftist Red Army Faction or the affiliated Second of June Movement who joined in a hunger strike to protest prison conditions and to demand treatment as prisoners of war.

Debus, who had been in prison since February 1975, was kept alive by force feeding and a respirator for several days.

His attorney, Ranier Koch, said Wednesday that Debus was "clinically" dead, although his brain waves were still registering on a hospital monitor.

Debus had been refusing food since Feb. 9, authorities said. Debus was the second member of the Red Army Faction, also known as the Baader-Meinhof Gang, to die in a prison hunger strike. Holger Meins, one of the first members of the gang, died November 9, 1974 after a two-month fast.

Police have blamed the strikers' sympathizers for more than a score of firebombings, street disturbances and vandalism across West Germany in recent weeks as the hunger strike continued.

Authorities in several cities had prepared for even more violent disturbances in the event of Debus' death. Rumors that he and Andreas Vogel, another jailed terrorist, had died set off a riot in West Berlin last Sunday.

Vogel, reported to be in "continually improving condition," was moved Wednesday from a university hospital into West Berlin's Steglitz Prison Clinic, a spokesman for the Berlin Justice Department said.

Balloon-borne guerrillas shot down

EDITOR'S NOTE: Israel's military censor ordered some material deleted from this report.

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli anti-aircraft gunners shot down a hot-air balloon carrying two Palestinian guerrillas on a cross-border raid into Israel today, the Israeli military command said.

The raiders survived a crash from several hundred feet and landed inside Lebanon, but Israeli ground troops pursued them and killed them in a firefight, a military spokesman said. No Israeli casualties were reported.

Witnesses said the guerrillas appeared to be about 17 years old and wore green fatigue jackets. One wore a flower-print shirt under his jacket, a witness said.

The military said they carried submachine guns, grenades, maps and leaflets.

Israeli Radio said without elaboration that the guerrilla-balloonists were on a hostage-taking mission.

The infiltration attempt came as Israel was filling with Christian and Jewish pilgrims coming to commemorate this weekend's Easter and Passover holidays. Israeli forces traditionally step up security precautions to head off any guerrilla effort to sabotage holiday celebrations.

The balloon drifted into the border area of the Upper Galilee panhandle just before dawn and was spotted by an army patrol, the spokesman said, adding, anti-aircraft guns opened fire and the balloon crashed near Manara, a frontier kibbutz, or collective farm.

Israeli deputy Defense Minister Mordechai Zippori claimed Syria was behind the operation. He specu-lated it may have been timed to impress representatives of the Palestine National Council, the Palestinian Parliament-in-exile, now meeting in the Syrian capital.

In Beirut, the Palestinian Liberation Front, a small guerrilla group in the radical wing of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization, claimed responsibility for the infiltration attempt and said it would "release details in a communique later in the day."

It was the second Palestinian attempt in nine months to cross the border by balloon and the second try in five weeks to infiltrate by unconventional aerial means.

The wreckage of a helium balloon was found in southern Lebanon last July, and investigators concluded the guerrillas were resorting to this unusual tactic to try to get past U.N. peacekeeping forces in southern Lebanon and Israeli border defenses.

A guerrilla flew a flimsy, motor-equipped glider across the frontier on March 7 and was captured by Israeli police. Another glider pilot came down on the Lebanese side of the border and was captured by Lebanese Christian militiamen.

Reagan insists alternatives are tax-cut problems

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, beginning to re-emerge as chief fighter for his economic program, insists that congressional alternatives to his embattled three-year tax cut plan "are not the answer, they are the problem."

"Taxes are much too high to deal in half-measures," a convalescing president said in a written statement issued Wednesday, the deadline for filing personal income tax returns.

Reagan said Americans "are victims of inflation which pushes them into higher tax brackets."

"I ask all Americans to join me in changing our tax system so that next April 15 we shall begin to celebrate tax reductions instead of simply one more predictable and painful tax increase," he said.

The one-page statement was issued as Reagan continued his recuperation in the White House living quarters from a bullet wound inflicted in an assassination attempt March 30.

White House officials say Reagan is the administration's most effective salesman for its economic program.

And in the weeks before the shooting, the president spoke out frequently in defense of his plan of budget and tax cuts.

But Reagan has been seen in public only once since the shooting — when he returned home from the hospital last weekend.

Other administration officials, primarily Vice President George Bush, have been substituting for Reagan at appearances he might ordinarily be making to pitch for his economic program.

Aides say Reagan almost certainly will focus on his economic program when he delivers his first broadcast message since the assassination attempt.

A radio or television broadcast is possible, perhaps as early as the end of next week, the aides say. Another possibility is a nationally televised appeal for his economic program on April 27, a date that would coincide with the end of a two-week congressional recess.

Reagan's written statement Wednesday appeared designed to prod Congress into approving his tax cut plan, which has run into strong opposition in the Democratic-controlled House.

The budget office said it was unable to estimate the effect of $10.1 billion in proposed cuts in Medicaid, Social Security and other programs.

The 20 million to 24 million people are 51 percent of an estimated 16.5 million families with incomes below 150 percent of the government's official poverty line, $6,570 for a family of three and $8,410 for a family of four. Most would lose only a little, but 4 percent of the total would lose as much as 16 percent of their incomes, the report said.

The CBO said 14 percent of the 16.5 million families would gain slightly.

The study was commissioned by two prominent Democratic opponents of the president's plans, House Budget Committee Chairman James Jones of Oklahoma and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

...4-H AND YOUTH PROGRAMS of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System, help young people know the "when, how and why of decision-making." And the 4-H meeting is a key part of the decision-making process.

By involving young people in the planning and evaluation stages of 4-H meetings, they learn to become better decision makers, believes Cindy Mann, Midland County Extension agent in home economics.

Discussions and programs are planned by officers and volunteers before a meeting begins. Materials such as films, speakers, brochures, reports, panel discussions and trips are also planned before meetings.

Each member of the club should have a part in program planning. And special attention should be given to provide for different age interests within a club.

All 4-H activities are open to youth ages 9 to 19, regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion or national origin. For further information about the 4-H program in Midland County, contact Ms. Mann at 682-9481, ext. 433.

...MIDLAND PARK MALL will host some 65 professional artists and craftspeople in the first "Spring Festival of Art" today, Friday and Saturday.

The exhibits will be interspersed throughout the mall and will be open during regular mall hours.

Pamela Leach, marketing director, says the mall merchants are pleased to be able to present this group of outstanding artisans for the public's viewing pleasure.

Art in all media, oil paintings, watercolors, acrylics, pen & ink and a portrait artist who will be doing "on the spot" portraits will be featured along with the many outstanding crafts, such as lapidary, macrame, ceramics, metal and bronze sculpture, shell crafts, handmade puppets, handblown glass, woodcraft, weaving, stuffed animals, porcelain and pottery.

Artists are from throughout the states of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Tennessee.

Fair hours will be from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Heading a finance drive by the League of Women Voters are, from left, Nancy Stafford, finance chairperson; Janet Pritchett, publications chairperson; and Kathy Gilluly, voter services chairperson. "The Midland League needs the support of this community to carry on its work of voter service and action based upon study and consensus," said Charleen Rosebery, president. For information on contributions or membership, contact her at 683-8928; or membership chairman Cookie Wetendorf at 684-7898.

League winds down annual finance drive

League of Women Voters of Midland will be ending its finance drive by the end of the month, according to Finance Chairperson Nancy Stafford.

The League tries to keep membership dues at a minimum so that membership remains viable to all interested persons, male and female, according to Charleen Rosebery, president. Therefore, each year, the League goes to the Midland community for support of its activities, she added.

League activities include helping with voter registration; compiling the Voters Guide published by The Midland Reporter-Telegram; sponsoring candidates' forums; providing a telephone information line—685-0564; distribution of pertinent material to the schools; and many other locally-directed projects.

"The Midland League needs the support of this community to carry on its work of voter service and action based upon study and consensus," said Nancy Stafford, finance drive chairperson.

This year, many contributors will be receiving current and informative pamphlets such as "Tell It to Washington" and "A Nuclear Waste Primer."

So far the League has received some generous contributions, according to Ms. Stafford, but the total falls short of meeting the League's needs.

Contributions may be sent to The League of Women Voters, P.O. Box 7437, Midland, TX 79703.

For membership information, call Ms. Rosebery at 683-8928 or membership chairperson Cookie Wetendorf at 684-7898.

DEAR ABBY

Natural childbirth raises natural fears in father-to-be

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in our early 20s and plan to have at least one child in the future. We are curious about "natural childbirth," where the mother is fully conscious and is given nothing for pain. Also, the father is present to coach her breathing and stays to witness the actual birth.

Personally, I wouldn't care to be present in the delivery room, yet I've heard that the father who witnesses the birth of his child feels much closer to the child as well as to his wife.

Abby, my parents and my wife's had a total of 11 children between them. Neither her father nor mine was present when any of his children were born, and none of us seems to have suffered any deprivation of love.

Our friends who have experienced natural childbirth praise it highly. The whole idea of natural childbirth — the mother's being conscious without taking anything for pain, and the father's witnessing the entire procedure — seems repugnant to both my wife and me. Although my wife has a fairly high tolerance for pain, she would prefer to have some type of anesthetic, and I really don't think I would love my child less if I sat in the waiting room during the delivery.

Our friends can't believe that we still prefer the old-fashioned private-type delivery. Is there something wrong with our thinking? — CURI- OUS IN N.H.

DEAR CURIOUS: There is nothing "wrong" with your thinking, but since you are curious about natural childbirth, you should learn more about it. Your doctor, or friends who have praised it, can provide you with some illuminating literature on the subject.

DEAR ABBY: A couple with whom my husband and I had been very close recently separated. (They weren't married, just living together.) The four of us had spent many wonderful times together. To make a long story short, Lisa has been using my husband's shoulder to cry on. Doug (my husband) has taken Lisa's side of it, and he is no longer friendly to Lisa's former boyfriend.

I always had the feeling that Doug had more than just a brotherly feeling about Lisa, although in the 10 years we have been married, he hasn't given me any reason to be jealous.

Doug visits Lisa frequently at her apartment and she calls him on the phone at home and at work, but she always includes both of us when she entertains. Should I be worried? — M.A. FROM MASS.

DEAR M.A.: Worrying is non-productive. But do keep your eyes open. It may not be your husband's SHOULD- ER Lisa is after.

DEAR ABBY: RICHARD, a divorced-U.S. Army officer, said he was shocked at the number of women who expect sex on the first date in repayment for a lovely evening. It's true. And these women spoil it for the rest of us.

Many men expect women to "put out" or get out on the first date. I'm talking about professionals — doctors, lawyers, college students, etc. — who come from good families.

There are a lot of men who refuse to date a woman unless they get to know her sexually. Who needs this kind of garbage and abuse? Sex devoid of love is a form of prostitution; women are using their bodies for trade and in the process they're degrading themselves.

Don't worry, RICHARD, there are still plenty of women out there who believe in romantic love and are real ladies.

I'm happy to see that real gentlemen exist, too. — ONE OF A FEW

A natural trend in birth control

By GRACE-MARIE ARNETT
Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — "I don't think I could go through another pregnancy and babyhood again," says Linda Thompson, a mother of three here who has been married 14 years. "But I just can't take the pill any longer, and I'm scared of the IUD."

The weight gain and nausea of the pill seemed preferable to another pregnancy, Thompson said, until she learned she was also increasing her risk of cancer and heart attacks.

The fears of the other most popular contraceptives led her to enroll in one of 400 "natural family planning" courses being taught nationwide where women learn to monitor their temperature and body secretions in order to chart their fertility cycles and plan sexual intercourse.

While the basic concepts are familiar and used by many Catholics, new evidence showing this method can be as high as 98 percent effective with proper usage — and is definitely in the running with birth control pills, intrauterine devices and diaphragms — is leading to heightened interest in the process throughout the country.

Scientific research and better teacher and student training methods also reportedly are increasing the effectiveness of natural family planning.

The Office of Population Affairs in the federal government's Center for Disease Control in Atlanta recently reported a tripling of natural family planning users over the past three years. In 1978, the agency estimated, 1 to 3 percent of those using any birth control methods were NFP users. The numbers jumped to 7 to 10 percent by 1980.

AT WIT'S END

Tales of precocious children

By ERMA BOMBECK

Stories about children who are geniuses absolutely intrigue me. I read about a little girl recently who, at the age of seven months, was reading off the diaper box. At age three, she read an instruction booklet out loud covering the 1040 tax forms, and one night when she was two, she met her Daddy at the door by reciting Shakespeare with a childish lisp.

That's putting it on the line. I read of another child who was 2 1/2 years old, spoke five languages, played the guitar and built his own computer out of the telephone in his mother's kitchen.

In fact, there are 2.5 million youngsters in this country who are certifiably gifted. Thirty-five of them lived on our block.

It was very intimidating and I played the game as long as I could. Whenever all the mothers got together, the first liar didn't stand a chance.

If I said my child had "slept dry" for three nights, another mother said her child had not only stayed dry, but had sat up with two bedwetters who needed help to get through the night.

If my child played "Theme From Dr. Zhivago" on his nose, the next mother informed the group that her toddler was guest conductor for the Cincinnati Symphony next season.

After awhile, I just couldn't keep up. They discovered my child couldn't speed-read when he was busily tracing his finger back and forth across six or seven books a minute — and the books were upside down.

They discovered he had indeed mixed his own formula for his bottle — but he was seven years old at the time. Things really came to a head one day when I was in the supermarket and asked my child to put a loaf of bread in my basket. He said he couldn't remember which one was mine and a mother of a genius said, "You can't miss it. It's the one with your brother in it."

Did you know that Einstein failed his entrance exams at Polytechnic Institute in Zurich? At times like that, it's nice to think about.

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I want to use a drywall material for the ceiling in our garage. I worked with the same kind of material a few years ago, but that was for a wall. I remember that I finished the joints with tape and a kind of compound. Can I do the same thing with the ceiling joints or won't that work?

A. — Yes, you can finish the joints the same way with the same kind of tape and compound. Whatever kind of drywall material you use, be sure that it is solidly attached, even more so than to a wall. If it isn't, the weight of the material may pull it downward after a few months or a year or two.

Q. — We recently moved into a new house. The siding is a light gray color which we like very much, but the contractor painted the garage door a bright red. This door is at the front of the house and, because of the bright color, can be seen a block away before you even realize what the color of the house is. What color should we paint the door to make it less conspicuous and can we use regular house paint?

A. — Painting a garage door a completely different color than the color of the house is a mistake many persons make. It should be done only when, for some reason, you want to make the garage door stand out. You can use house paint, but if there is a gloss on the previous paint, it will have to be dulled before you apply a new coat. Whether a second coat is necessary will have to be determined after the first coat dries. As for color, the simplest way to prevent the door from being conspicuous is to paint it the same color as the house. If you want to get away from the house color a bit, use a shade not too different.

Persian rugs becoming scarce

By HELEN L. CALL
Copley News Service

Since the Ayatollah took over, Persia isn't what it used to be, and neither are the Persian rugs coming out of that country.

All of which makes for a scarcity of fine rugs and accordingly, a vertical trend in their prices.

The interest in rugs is intense but information about them is hard to come by, says the British author of a book on rug basics commissioned by Random House.

The author is broker to the world market for Oriental rugs, situated in the London warehouses where she represents the British government along with her private position of middleman between buyers and sellers.

Caroline Bosly's book, "Rugs to Riches," is filled with the expertise she has acquired in many years of dealing with an international roster of customers and London's 28 importing companies.

In an interview, she discussed the investment aspects of owning Oriental rugs. She talked particularly about the rugs from Iran, which she sees as having great investment importance at this point.

Bosly displayed an antique prayer rug more than 100 years old made by members of the nomadic Baluchi tribe.

"The eight tribes who make these rugs live on the border of Afghanistan and Iran. They are being bombed and penned up in camps rather than being allowed to wander free. Once they do that to nomadic weavers, their work changes. All the spontaneity goes out of it. And instead of these beautiful subtle colors you get harsh bright colors."

"Baluchi's are 'it' for investment," Bosly said. "There won't be any more after awhile. They are still affordable — even at retail, you should be able to get a beautiful antique Baluchi for under $1,000."

Bosly displayed an Isfahan — a "city" rug as opposed to nomadic weaving. It is made of lamb's wool woven on silk, in a medallion design, with about 800 knots per square inch.

"This Isfahan silk rug is another I recommend for investment," said Bosly. "It is made in Qum, the town where the Ayatollah lives. The Ayatollah much disapproves of the soft life and what could be more luxurious than pure silk rugs."

"So very few are being made and few are likely to be made in the foreseeable future."

Bosly said, "For sure-fire investment you choose something everyone wants where the supply has stopped. You can be sure of these."

In acquiring any Oriental rug, said Bosly, "be sure to bargain. There is a 100 percent markup, minimum, in the retail trade."

"If you are buying for investment you need to buy as close to the trade price as possible — so bargain."

In her book, Bosly tells how to bargain. "The secret is to be brave." Rugs in a store should have prices on tags hanging on them. "Otherwise, the car you drive up in — that may change the price." She advises working through a reputable dealer — "one who has been in business a long time and whose reputation is more important to him than the sale of a single rug."

Lois Carpenter, left, newly elected program vice president of the League of Women Voters of Texas, and Terri Trentham, who has been nominated for president of the Midland chapter of the organization, recently attended the State League Convention in Beaumont. Mrs. Carpenter was also one of two selected delegates to the National Council of the League of Women Voters U.S. in Washington, D.C. in May.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Thrifty leftover trick

DEAR HELOISE:

I used to have a case of chronic guilt about throwing away leftovers. Now, I can't afford to be that guilty!

I even save that last teaspoon of corn that's inevitably left in the serving bowl. After a few days, I make "leftover hot dish" from the accumulated vegetables, etc. My kids love it for lunch.

Just use whatever you have — a combination of vegetables or macaroni, that last Weiner or a slice of meat. Put it all in a pan and add a can of beef vegetable soup. Or, if your leftovers contain chicken, use chicken gumbo soup.

If you are using a lot of leftovers, you may want to add a bouillon cube and thickener to the water.

Or, if you prefer to make soup, make it as usual then add your leftovers a few minutes before it's done. Either way, you'll have a hot, nourishing meal.

Thanks for all the help and encouragement you give us young homemakers. Your tips are handy problem-solvers and have come to my rescue more than once. — Pam.

***
You're a luv for being so kind... I appreciate your words of encouragement more than you will ever know. — Hugs, Heloise

MAKING JEANS FIT

Dear Heloise: A quick remedy for jeans which are too large in the waist for lanky kids is to stretch elastic tightly as you sew it to the inside of the waistband of the jeans.

It quickly gathers in the waist to fit and the elastic can be easily removed later if need be.

'LOCKING' CUPBOARDS

Dear Heloise: I have cupboards with round knobs on them for pulls and my year-old baby was forever opening the doors and pulling things out of the cabinets.

So, I carefully stretched a set of plastic rings (the kind which come on a six-pack of canned drinks) over the knobs of the two doors. (You may need to trim some of the circles off for a better fit.)

Sure keeps the baby out of the cupboards and the rings are almost invisible.

Of course, these rings aren't meant to make a cupboard totally safe if toxic or poisonous substances are stored there. As usual, dangerous items should be under lock and key or stored completely out of a child's reach. — Mrs. S. Lawrence

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: When staying with my grandchildren while their parents were out of town, I thought it would help me in meal preparation if all of us sat down and made out a menu.

Each child mentioned things he or she would like to have and the youngest popped up and said, "Grandma, can we have some automatic potatoes?"

"What on earth are they?" I asked him.

"You know — the kind you put in milk and you get potatoes!"

Kids hear so much about automation these days, guess he thought that was the proper word for instant potatoes. — Proud Grandma

Tofu gaining popularity as versatile dish

BY CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

Tofu has been an all-natural part of Far Eastern diets for centuries. Now this inexpensive and versatile food made from soybeans is gaining well-deserved popularity among Americans, too.

There is lots of curiosity about tofu, as evidenced by booming sales nationwide, letters from readers, and even requests for tofu cooking classes by gourmet cooking schools.

People who have walked by the containers of water-packed tofu stacked neatly in the produce case so many times are now starting to pick it up, as news about the possibilities of this bland white bean curd filters in through the mass media, or natural foods stores and restaurants, or perhaps an excited friend. Chinese restaurants in this country have been serving tofu in soups and stir-frys for many years, and that is how most people begin to incorporate tofu into their diets.

Because of its bland taste and endless versatility, tofu is as at home in dips and desserts as it is in vegetable stir-frys. As you use it you'll find that it's easy to generate your own ideas—substituting tofu for meat in your favorite recipes, and adding it as a protein boost to salad dressings, vegetable and grain dishes, soups, and so on.

Tofu is high in nutrients while low in saturated fat and sodium, and entirely free of cholesterol. Your heart will be glad!

TOFU SPINACH PIE

1 9-inch pie shell, partially pre-baked
3 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
2 cups milk
1 onion, chopped
1 cup mushrooms,

chopped
1 tsp. of salt
Freshly ground black pepper to taste
One-half tsp. grated nutmeg
Three-fourths lb. washed fresh spinach leaves
1 lb. tofu, drained and crumbled
1 cup grated Swiss cheese (optional)

Melt the butter in a fairly large saucepan. Add the chopped onion and saute it for about three minutes, then add the mushrooms and cook a few minutes more. Now sprinkle in the flour, while stirring with a wooden spoon or whisk. Cook the roux for a few minutes, then add the milk (at room temperature) slowly, stirring with a whisk all the while. Cook and stir until the sauce thickens, then add the seasonings and cook a few minutes more. Finally, add the spinach and tofu, and cook until the spinach is bright green and wilted. Remove from heat and taste for seasoning. Spoon the mixture into the partially pre-baked crust and sprinkle with grated cheeses, if desired. Bake in a preheated 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. Serve hot.

SCRAMBED TOFU

Tastier than scrambled eggs, and minus the cholesterol!
1 tsp. oil
1 clove garlic, minced
1 small onion, minced
One-half green pepper, chopped
4 large mushrooms, sliced
About 12 oz. tofu, drained
1 tsp. or more of turmeric
Cayenne pepper to taste
Tamari or natural soy sauce to taste
Heat oil in a medium cast-iron skillet and saute onion and garlic together for a few minutes. Add peppers and mushrooms, and cook a few minutes more. Add tofu, mashing it in the pan with a wooden spoon while frying. Cook for about 10 minutes, or until tofu is fluffy and nearly dry. Sprinkle on turmeric until tofu has a pale yellow color similar to scrambled eggs. Season to taste with black or cayenne pepper and salt or tamari sauce. Serve hot.

TOFU GAUCAMOLE

8 oz. tofu
3 ripe avocados
1 tomato, diced
2 cloves garlic, put through a press
1 tsp. mayonnaise
2 tbsps. fresh lemon juice
Dash of each, to taste: Tabasco sauce, Worcestershire sauce, tamari sauce or salt

Whirl the tofu in a blender for about two minutes, until it is smooth, stopping if necessary to scrape down the sides with a spatula. In a mixing bowl, mash the avocados with a fork until almost smooth. Add the tofu, then the remaining ingredients in the order given. Stir well and taste. Chill until serving time. Serve with crisp corn chips. Makes about three cups.

Store still a 'carriage trade'

By DICK BRAUDE
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — George Ellis would be pleased to know Boston's "carriage trade" hasn't whispered its last hurrah.

At one of New England's oldest grocery stores, some customers still think Belgian endive is worth $5 a pound and tenderloin is a bargain at $8.

"In the old days, my father sent written notes 'inviting' new clients to the store," says William Roger Warwick, 32, the current owner of George Ellis & Co. groceries, established in 1837.

In fact, until two years ago, when William Roger bought out his father, William Wallace Warwick, the store still had a ging clerks—who climbed ladders to fill orders and an elderly bookkeeper who made change from a tray of cash in a tiny office.

Roger Warwick ordered a big change; he installed cash registers.

Edwin Harry Warwick, Roger's great uncle, bought out George Ellis a century ago and insisted on a personal reference from each new "client."

"The basic idea was to give them absolutely the best of everything," Roger says.

Edwin Warwick had another store bearing his own name nearby, so he continued to use the Ellis designation for his new acquisition.

Roger Warwick, a stockbroker who got "fed up" and went into the grocery business, continues the family tradition, although he has made concessions to modern times.

He started a deli in the front of the store to lure lunch customers. They supply the cash that helps carry oldtime clients who charge their accounts.

"We still have some customers in Maine and Nova Scotia we ship meat to," he says. "Sometimes they send their chauffeurs to pick it up. Some of these people are 85 or 90, you know."

A "good" customer will register a monthly tab of $1,500 or $2,000, Warwick says. The more typical $50-a-month client "isn't worth it, but I keep them to be nice."

And what do these people buy — besides crabmeat for $10 a can? "Everything," Warwick says.

George Ellis & Co. still delivers to anyone who calls in an order — for a fee of $2. Non-regulars pay cash on delivery.

For all of them, choice meat and produce are the main attraction.

"Most people don't want the quality they used to," Warwick says. "They don't want to eat; they'd rather do something else than sit around a table."

Things not being what they once were is a refrain at George Ellis.

"The prime beef we have is not what it was five years ago," Warwick says. "It gets worse and worse, less and less tender. They grow cows for profit, not quality."

William Wallace got discouraged and was going to shut the store down until his son moved in.

The oldtime customers in Boston, and the neighborhoods of suburban Newton and Brookline, are giving way to the trendy set.

The prosperous newcomers buy up posh condominiums near the cramped Ellis store on fashionable Newbury Street.

To serve the newcomers, the store — which once closed daily at 5 p.m. — is now open until 8 weeknights.

"We still do some selling on the phone," he says. "Some of our best customers, for 30 or 40 years, have never been in here."

If a customer wants something special, Warwick gets it. Often, for loyal clients, a deliveryman will let himself into the apartment with a key the customer provided, and put perishable foods in the refrigerator.

"They trust us. Some of these clients go back a couple of generations with George Ellis."

Unfortunately, Warwick adds, "people just don't entertain the way they used to."

Chocolate may ease the pain of a broken heart, according to "Modern Medicine" magazine.

A chemical present in chocolate, as well as in the human brain, is directly related to the emotional ups and downs of being in love. Preliminary findings by New York State researchers suggest that people who suffer extreme depression (such as victims of unrequited love) have a decreased production of that chemical, phenylethylamine. Such individuals often go on a chocolate binge during depression, which may be an unconscious effort at self-medication.

A day-by-day guide to meat shopping

By MERLE ELLIS

We all have different habits when it comes to shopping. Some people do all of their meat-buying one day a week. Many of those wait for the newspaper ads to break and take advantage of weekly specials to stock up. Others shop for meat on an almost daily basis in order to get what they perceive to be the best or freshest available for their table. Still others shop without any rhyme or reason whenever the need or the urge strikes.

However you shop for meat, it may help to know a little about how a meat market operates on a weekly basis. There are some best-buy-times for many different types of meat. There are also some don't-buy-times. Knowing how a market organizes its meat display on a Monday-through-Saturday basis can help you know when to buy.

Monday is generally the worst day to buy any kind of meat. With the possible exception of ground meat, which most markets try to grind fresh two or three times each day, most of what little you find in the display case on Monday is "reworked" from Saturday's leftovers.

The stew you buy on Monday is very likely cut from a pot roast left in the case on Saturday. The poultry in the case on Monday is probably left over from the week before, and the same is certain to apply to whatever fish there is. By late Monday afternoon, there probably will be a light spread of freshly cut meat — but not enough to change Monday's character as essentially a day of leftovers. Tuesday is a good day, in most supermarkets, to buy table-ready meats such as bologna, salami, hot dogs, etc. These have a longer shelf life than fresh meats, so the butcher puts in a big display on Tuesday to avoid having to do it later in the week when he's busy with his fresh meat display.

It's a good day, also, and for the same reason, to buy smoked meats and bulk cheese. Most butchers like to get those things in the case and out of the way before the heavy fresh meat cutting days later in the week.

Wednesday usually is a good day to buy fresh meat. In many markets the ad breaks on Wednesday so the market is stocked by then with all of the items that are needed for the ad. Your selection is apt to be best for those items on Wednesday afternoon.

By far the best day for buying almost any fresh meat, fish or poultry is Thursday. By Thursday all of the products left from the week before have been reworked and disposed of. The week's supply of beef, lamb, pork and veal is in and has been made ready for the case, so the selection should be good. The poultry order for the week very likely came in Wednesday afternoon, so that is likely to be at its best for the week.

While fish is no longer a Friday-only food, Friday remains a good fish day in most stores and butchers order accordingly. They usually get their fresh fish on Thursday for Friday's display. All in all, the meat case in most markets is apt to be better stocked with more variety and generally better quality meat, fish and poultry — including sale items — on Thursday.

Fridays and Saturdays are traditionally the busiest days in most markets in terms of the number of people shopping. They are not, however, the best days to buy. The fish in the meat case is probably already a day old; the poultry, probably two. Most of the butcher's time on those days is spent reworking displays, adjusting them to help speed the movement of slow-moving items so they won't be left to work over on Monday.

By Saturday afternoon in most markets, the cutting of fresh meat for the week is done and it's time to take inventory of what didn't sell and clean the cooler.

Menu success

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The success of a restaurant depends in large part on how well its menu is thought out, plus the quality and imagination of its recipes.

Barbara Kafka, noted restaurant consultant, has been applying these principles to a number of New York eating places with marked success.

"You must start with a clear idea of what role the recipe will play and how well it reflects the cuisine of the restaurant you are working with," she said. "Also keep in mind what kind of taste sensation you are looking for."

The consultant, who has been working on the menu of New York's Cattleman Restaurant, started out by making a careful study of the character of this food house, which specializes in the cuisine of the American West. There's a romance about Western cookery which extends back to the era of the 19th-century cattle barons who produced some of the world's finest beef.

"Beef, of course, is still the base of Western-style cooking, since this is America's great cattle-raising region," she said. "But when you make up the menu, beef must be set off by the right vegetables, and also there are the salads. These have come more and more into the spotlight, as can be witnessed by the number of restaurants featuring salad bars today."

"And, last but not least, there are the desserts," she said. "This is a vital part of any lunch or dinner."

Miss Kafka has sought to dramatize the restaurant's Western cuisine with a month-long bourbon festival. Bourbon has long been a popular drink in the West and also plays a key role in many dishes.

Fish chowder preserves flavors, cuts calories

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP FOOD EDITOR

Current interest in preserving natural flavors and cutting calories encouraged me to evolve a new recipe for fish chowder.

First I looked into my vast reservoir of fish chowder recipes. There were dozens and dozens made with both potatoes and a flour-thickened broth; an equal number of recipes called for potatoes but omitted the flour thickening. I wanted neither formula. What I did want to offer you was a fish chowder made with vegetables other than potatoes and an unthickened broth.

Only one usual ingredient did I feel I could not omit: all the recipes for fish chowders called for salt pork or bacon. I knew for flavor's sake one of them should go in; I opted for the bacon.

My new fish chowder needs an overnight stay in the refrigerator to allow flavors to blend and develop. Believe me, when my recipe tester and I tasted it immediately after it was made, its flavor was unexciting. But after its overnight stop, we were delighted. That time in the refrigerator did so much for the chowder that by the time I reheated it (in my microwave oven) its flavor was irresistible.

Webster defines a chowder in part as a "thick stew of seafood," and that's what this chowder is. There's lots more seafood (in this case haddock fillets) and vegetables than liquid in it. I like to serve it in wide-rimmed soup plates as a main course, with crusty bread, for Sunday night supper. A salad and perhaps cheese may follow. Then a hearty dessert is in order.

NEW HADDOCK CHOWDER

- 3 strips thinly sliced lean bacon, diced
- 1 medium onion, chopped
- medium-fine (about 1/2 cup)
- large ribs celery, thinly sliced (about 1 cup)
- medium carrots, pared
- thinly sliced (about 1 cup)
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 pound haddock fillets (thawed if frozen), cut in 1-inch pieces
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon (or more) salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon dried crushed thyme leaves

In a medium saucepan gently fry the bacon, stirring often, until crisp; remove with a slotted spoon. To the bacon fat add the onion and cook gently, stirring several times, until golden; add the celery and carrots and stir for a few minutes. Add the water and haddock; cover and simmer until fish is opaque and vegetables are tender — about 20 minutes. Stir in the milk, salt, pepper, thyme and bacon. Refrigerate tightly covered overnight. Reheat over boiling water or in a microwave oven because chowder has little liquid. Serve in wide-rimmed soup plates. Makes about 1 quart.

The versatile onion

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

People may complain that a raw onion makes their eyes water and does things to their breath. But of all the vegetables cultivated around the world, it is one of the most widely consumed.

It is also one of the most versatile. Onions are eaten raw, fried, boiled and creamed, to mention a few ways. And they are a key ingredient and seasoner in soups, salads, stews and other dishes too numerous to mention.

From the loudly assertive garlic clove to the delicate chive shoot, various members of the onion clan are usually within reach of chefs when they are preparing a meal.

Uncooked, the onion gives a lift to a wide range of foods from the robust hamburger to that most precious of delicacies, beluga caviar. Any onion can be eaten raw, but the most popular are the mellow Spanish and Italian varieties.

From ancient times the onion, a member of the lily family despite its pungent aroma, has been popular for many reasons, medicinal included.

In the 4th millennium B.C., Egyptian slaves building the Great Pyramid at Giza, are reported to have subsisted largely on onions, garlic and radishes. And as the years passed, the Egyptians came to worship the onion and believe it warded off the plague. The onion has long been believed to have medicinal properties. The ancient Greek physician, Hippocrates, declared that the vegetable was good for the sight but not too beneficial for the body.

By the time the Middle Ages rolled around, onions were used to cure dog bites and the sting of "venomous" worms. During that era, people used garlic as a charm to ward off spirits, disease and vampires.

To this day, some scientists believe onions help keep down our cholesterol level and the danger of heart disease.

The yellow or white globe onions, most popular in the United States, make a fine ingredient in main course dishes, such as this onion pie.

- 3 cups thinly sliced onions
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 1/2 cups plain yogurt
- 1/2 cup heavy cream
- 2 eggs, beaten
- 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon each ground nutmeg and ginger
- 9-inch pie shell, baked

Saute onions in butter till soft and golden. Add all other ingredients to onions after mixing well. Turn into pie shell and bake in preheated 450-degree oven for 10 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake 30 minutes longer, or till knife blade inserted comes out clean. Serves 6. Good with dry white wine, well chilled.

Train trip can be worth the time

NEW YORK (AP) — It may not be possible for long if the proposed cutbacks of rail service go through, but right now you can still see America, from sea to shining sea, through a train window.

Why would anyone want to spend three days and three nights traveling from coast to coast by train when you can make the trip in six hours by plane?

Passengers on a recent Amtrak run between New York and Los Angeles might answer that question with another one: Why would anyone want to make the trip in six hours by plane when you can spend three days and three nights traveling from coast to coast by train?

Our enthusiasm stemmed from a trip that started in New York City's Penn Station on a Thursday afternoon aboard the Broadway Limited and, after a seven-hour stopover in Chicago on Friday, ended Sunday morning when the Southwest Limited pulled into Los Angeles.

Those whose last experience with train travel was aboard a troop train during World War II would find things vastly different today, especially on the brand-new Superliners that have just started rolling along routes west of Chicago.

The bi-level cars, which cannot be used in the East because they are too high for some tunnels, are the first all-new, long-distance passenger cars to be manufactured in this country in more than 20 years.

From coach to dining cars to sleepers to the lounge-cafe car with windows extending from near the floor into the roof, they provide luxury travel with dramatic views of the scenic West.

While most of those going all the way across the country had sleeping accommodations, Roz Eth was returning to her Los Angeles home by coach, having made the trip east to New York the same way.

"I came equipped with a radio and a crossword puzzle book, some mystery paperbacks and some note paper, but I haven't written any letters," said Ms. Eth, who had spent her Chicago layover at the Art Institute.

"The coaches are comfortable," she said, pointing to the leg rests which stretch out the reclining seats into almost bed-like proportions.

Frank Miller, headed from his home in Arlington Heights, Ill., to Los Angeles on a combined business and pleasure trip, was taking a train for the first time in 18 years.

"I looked at the itinerary," he explained of his decision to take to the rails rather than to the air, "and saw we'd be going through 12 states, eight of which I'd never been in before."

"And for the size I am, I like the 6-foot-9-inch bed," added the 6-foot-2 Miller, who planned to make the return trip on the Desert Wind, connecting in Ogden, Utah, with the San Francisco Zephyr.

He was in an economy bedroom, with two facing seats which form the lower berth. There is also an upper berth which folds down from the wall, a closet, a folding table, a mirror and storage space for two suitcases.

But the real luxury is in the deluxe bedrooms which have a long sofa, swivel chair, vanity with sink and triple mirror, pull-down table, enclosed toilet, closet, full-length mirror, carpets, and drapes across the wide picture windows. The sofa becomes a 41-inch-wide bed at night and there is also an upper berth.

Each Superliner sleeping car has five deluxe bedrooms and 14 economy rooms, 10 of them on the upper level and four on the lower level, which also has a larger economy family room, a bedroom for handicapped travelers and a series of restrooms, each with toilet, sink, and pull-down diaper-changing table.

In the dining car, with soft seats upholstered in bright colors and linen cloths and fresh flowers on every table, the menu prices read like something out of the '60s. A dinner that includes appetizer, salad, rolls and drink runs from $4.95 for roast turkey breast and "all the fixin's" to $9.95 for a New York strip steak.

For the youngsters there are choices such as the Gandy Dancer at $2.35 — spaghetti and meat balls, roll and butter, milk and ice cream.

By the last night out, the long-distance travelers had become chummy, sharing drinks, confidences and exclamations over the magnificent mountain scenery. Many were train buffs, just enjoying the ride.

Shawn Darby, a 33-year-old aerospace engineer from Los Angeles, was having dinner with new friends in one of the deluxe bedrooms, relaxing after a month of touring the country by Amtrak, traveling in coaches and economy rooms.

"I went from Oakland to Salt Lake to Denver to Chicago to Washington, D.C., to Orlando, Jacksonville, back to D.C., Chicago, Albuquerque and now I'm on my way back to Los Angeles," she said, ticking off her travels with one suitcase of clothing, another of shoes and a backpack with necessities.

"Originally it was because I got tired of flying, but once I started with the train it's got to be the most exciting thing I've ever done. I met all sorts of people, especially in the dining car."

As the train reached its Los Angeles terminus the passengers scattered, some looking forward to a homeward train trip. For us it was on a Friday. It began with the coaches and lounge car jammed with people headed for Reno, keeping two bartenders busy and getting an early start on their weekend fun.

After their departure about 8 p.m. the lounge car was quiet again, but soon the passengers began providing entertainment of their own. In addition to a snack and beverage area with tables for eating or playing cards, the downstairs level has an electric piano. There's sure to be a piano-player aboard, often augmented by someone with a guitar, and the passengers gather around for a singalong.

The Zephyr arrived in Chicago at 1:05 p.m. Sunday and we left on the last leg of our journey at 7:30 p.m. on the Broadway Limited, though an earlier train, the Lake Shore Limited, leaves Chicago for New York at 3:25 p.m. In addition to the regular crew a train manager, Sherman Jennings, was along to make sure all went well and to announce the sights along the way.

The train arrived at Penn Station Monday at 4:07 p.m., 13 minutes ahead of schedule. We considered the $1,400 for fare and accommodations for two for about 7,000 miles of rail travel well spent, but were sorry the trip had ended so soon.

Demolition of homes defies preservation pact

DETROIT (AP) — A federal council on historic preservation says the city of Detroit violated a preservation agreement by demolishing homes to make way for a new General Motors Corp. assembly plant.

The National Advisory Council on Historic Preservation on Tuesday asked the city to halt all demolition in residential sections of the Poletown neighborhood, which will house the $500 million Cadillac assembly plant.

Patrick Steele, Midwest coordinator for the council, said the city failed to develop a long-term plan to preserve Poletown's "historic and cultural integrity" as mandated in an agreement between the council and the city.

Population growth triggers range war

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Rancher Jim Breithaupt has dug in his booted heels and is waging a modern-day range war against a proposed 50,000-acre reservoir that would swallow up a hefty chunk of his land.

It's land his family has worked since the turn of the century. His father is buried on it. Breithaupt wants it for himself, his grandchildren and their grandchildren.

Let the new Texans streaming into the Sun Belt quench their thirst, sprinkle their lawns and water ski someplace else, he and other landowners are saying.

Breithaupt isn't just battling to stop a reservoir. He's trying to lasso progress.

"I'm not going to leave if I can help it," Breithaupt said. "I hate the darn thing coming."

Tarrant County water officials say the rapidly growing population in Fort Worth and suburban Arlington and Mansfield will be left with parched throats when the water supply is depleted as early as the 1990s.

Their $342.7 million project, which would create the Richland-Chambers reservoir straddling the Central Texas counties of Navarro and Freestone, has been snagged by two court appeals and valuable mineral discoveries.

The court roadblocks were thrown up by a group called Tehuacana-Richland Enemies of the Dam, or TRED — as in "Don't Tread On Me," a motto of their colonial forefathers.

"They're stealing our land and ruining our entire lives," says TRED president Verna Bonner of Streetman, who has been battling to turn off the billion-gallon tap for more than two years.

"We have allotted the power to control the lives of people through water projects and the like to a commission in Austin that is totally deaf to anything the people have to say," Mrs. Bonner said.

"The water district has so much power," said Breithaupt, also one of TRED's 200 members and owner of a 3,800-acre spread between Navarro and Streetman. "They can do things to you that the government can't do."

Bill Hilliard, of the Tarrant County Water Control and Improvement District 1, has been coordinating the Richland-Chambers project.

"I know several of TRED's members," he said. "We are doing everything we can to show them we're not the villains they think we are."

Pending court appeals aside, the water district has continued the laborious process of translating its reservoir into reality.

Hilliard said the project would serve as a boon to the Central Texas area's economy by raising property evaluations and triggering a wave of speculative buying — and provide water for Tarrant County residents at the same time.

"The Dallas-Fort Worth area is growing faster than everyone expected it to grow. It will grow and need more water," he said. "Droughts are cyclical, but this is not a new norm we're experiencing. It can happen, and if it continues, we're going to be in serious trouble."

"I think for the most part, the TRED members are sincere in their desires to just not have the area disturbed at all, to keep the rural agribusiness-oriented lifestyle and low density of residential units — everything that goes along with rural lifestyle. And they have the typical concerns of probably running taxes up, and lots of new people and cars on the highway, and having to worry about their kids."

Seven houses would be submerged when the waters immerse the two-county area, and more than 700,000 Tarrant County-area water-users would be digging deep into their pockets for the project.

"My mother's house will get to stay," Breithaupt said, "but water will be within 100 feet of her door. If she had wanted a house on a lake, she would have built it. But now they're bringing it to her."

Hilliard said the water district has satisfactorily worked out relocation processes with those who would be forced to move.

But Breithaupt said that even though his family wouldn't be uprooted, the fair market value he receives for his land couldn't hope to match the intrinsic value it holds for a rancher.

"What I have left will be split up in about seven pieces and I'll only have one sizeable block of 1,200 acres left," he said. "It's hard to make 1,200 acres economically self-sufficient. But ranching has been by sole support and it was my father's."

About 40 TRED members caravaned to Austin to present evidence to the Texas Water Commission during a two-day hearing on the reservoir. Breithaupt said, but the commission refused to listen to most of it.

"They didn't want to hear it," he said. "Those people are on a first name basis. They all know each other and it's hard to get your foot in the door. I'm not saying anything illegal is going on. I just mean they don't want to hear what we have to say."

The water commission ruled in May 1980 that construction must start by Nov. 16, 1983 and be completed by November 1987.

The history of how the puddle grew to a pool dates back to 1957, when Tarrant County officials asked for water rights to Richland-Chambers-Tehuacana.

However, the discovery of massive amounts of lignite on the Tehuacana site has knocked that area out of proposed construction and into limbo.

The Army Corps of Engineers currently is compiling the reservoir's required Environmental Impact Statement that should be completed by June or July to be presented to the public for a 45-day review period, said Jim Chandler of the corps' Fort Worth office.

The $342.7 million estimated cost of Richland-Chambers has been assailed by TRED attorney Stuart Henry of Austin as impossibly low, but Hilliard said it should stand.

"To those of us who are losing practically everything," Mrs. Bonner said, "the money doesn't mean anything."

The engine section of the Columbia, America's first space shuttle, sticks out from the mate-demate device at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., Wednesday. The matedemate device will rematch the shuttle with its 747 carrier, which will return the spacecraft to Cape Kennedy for refurbishing and future use.

Pilots recall historic flight

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — With specialists firing questions and tape recorders spinning, Columbia's astronauts are going over all the technical details of their historic flight, hoping their answers will speed the day when the shuttle can start operations as a space-faring cargo ship.

John Young and Robert Crippen were to conclude the first phase of the week-long debriefing today with discussions on the performance of Columbia's steering jets, electronics, computers and other systems.

They returned to Earth on Tuesday — a perfect landing on a desert runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif. — concluding a near-flawless 2½-day flight of the 80-ton reusable spaceship.

What the astronauts tell the experts about the flight could help accelerate Columbia's switch from a test vehicle to an operation-

China sees shuttle landing as new phase in arms race

PEKING (AP) — The successful landing of the U.S. space shuttle Columbia marks a new phase in the arms race between the United States and the Soviet Union, China's official Xinhua news agency said today.

"The successful experiment of the U.S. space shuttle has marked a major breakthrough in space technology," the news agency said.

This success, it continued, "has aroused the worries of the Soviet Union, and the Soviet propaganda machine has protested that this is a new military and chauvinist activity of the U.S. to use superweapons to blackmail the world."

"The arms race between the Soviet Union and the United States has entered a new period."

The Washington correspondent of the People's Daily, the voice of the Communist Party, reported that some U.S. congressmen and officials fear the U.S. Soviet arms race in space could reach new and dangerous levels, while others think it is an extreme waste of the taxpayers' money to experiment with a spacecraft when the U.S. economy is in trouble.

Small plane chased from launch area

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A small plane piloted by a man determined to photograph the launching of the space shuttle was chased away from the launch pad just 90 seconds before the Columbia blasted off Sunday, space agency officials have revealed.

"That was really stupid," said National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Hugh Harris. "He could have cost the nation $10 billion and the astronauts their lives."

Kennedy Space Center security helicopters twice had to chase the single engine Cessna 150 away from the shuttle launch pad, and a Federal Aviation Administration chase pilot later forced the plane down at a local airport.

NASA officials said the plane was piloted by a Brevard County man. They did not release his name.

With only 10 minutes to launching Sunday, an air traffic controller at Patrick Air Force Base spotted a blip on his radar screen. The blip was hovering at an altitude of about 1,000 to 1,500 feet, near the launch pad, long after aircraft had been cleared from a large restricted area.

"They scrambled one of our security helicopters and a DOD (Department of Defense) helicopter," Harris told the newspaper Cocoa Today on Tuesday. He said the helicopters caught up with the plane over Launch Complex 39B, about a mile from where the shuttle was poised for lift off.

al space freighter, carrying satellites and experiments into orbit for industry, scientists and the Pentagon.

The present schedule calls for three more Columbia test flights, each longer and more demanding on its systems. Because of the success of the maiden flight, National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials said they are considering cutting the last one.

That could move ahead by several months the first operational mission, a communications satellite now set for launching in September 1982. NASA and the Pentagon plan eventually to operate a fleet of at least four shuttles, each capable of carrying up to seven people and 65,000 pounds of cargo. Each would make 100 or more round trips into orbit.

Officials said the pinpoint landing Tuesday has them thinking about landing the spaceship sooner than planned on a 15,000-foot runway at Cape Canaveral, Fla. That currently is set for the fifth flight.

Rogers Dry Lake, the lake-bed strip at Edwards, was selected as the prime landing site for the test flights because it is long and wide, leaving margin for error if touchdown is not perfect. But Young and Crippen set Columbia down "right on the money" according to NASA officials.

Technicians today were continuing their extensive inspection of the spaceship at Edwards. It is to leave there Tuesday strapped atop a special Boeing 747 jetliner. After an overnight stop at Tinker Air Force Base, Okla., the Columbia will return to its launch site Wednesday — the first spacecraft ever to make such a trip.

The craft will be refurbished for its second test flight, a four-day mission set for September. The astronauts picked to fly the test, Joe Engle and Richard Truly, have been training for several months.

Young and Crippen are to receive physical examinations Friday. They'll take the weekend off, then return for three more days of debriefings and to write their pilot reports. They will tell the story of their flight at a news conference April 23.

Families, too, felt strain of long months of captivity

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — Television camera crews camped in his living room and followed him to school. A teacher warned the rest of his Spanish class never to mention Iran. Tension would stretch his family taut, then pull it closer together.

All that's over now. Over, but not gone and never far away.

Steven Morefield, son of ex-hostage Richard Morefield, is 16, going on 60.

The slender, bespectacled teen-ager was born in Oslo, Norway. He has lived in Montevideo, Uruguay, and in Annandale, Va.; in Bogota, Colombia, and San Diego. It was in California that he took a giant step toward maturity.

"We'd just lived there a few months when the hostage situation began," says the dark-haired youth, whose father was the consul-general at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran when the Iranian militants came storming through the gate.

During the next 14 months of Morefield's captivity, Dorothea Morefield and her five children found themselves under intense pressure. They had an unsolicited crash course in how to live with recurring depression, with continually dashed dreams and with the constant eyes of journalists upon them.

Looking back at a collage of memories from those hectic, heart-breaking months, Steven says he feels the members of his family emerged stronger people for the tension and trauma they experienced.

"It's strange, but I think we changed more than my dad did," he says, sipping a Coke in the coffee shop at The Greenbrier, where 31 of the former hostages and their families gathered this week for a reunion and physical and mental tests. "The psychiatrists kept telling us to be prepared for changes in him, for depression when he came home, but he was just the same as before."

The family treated Morefield with kid gloves at first, Steven said, recalling his father's homecoming three months ago.

"The first couple of days we didn't want to let him out of our sight. It took us a couple of days to realize that we could go away and he'd still be there when we came back."

They were careful to the point of granting his father a brief reprieve from family needling sessions, Steven said.

"Our family's famous for picking on each other at dinner, but at first we were afraid to get on him about the weight he'd gained back, or the chocolate chip cookies he was sneaking. We were afraid he might have lost his sense of humor, but we soon found out that he still had it."

Depression was only one of the problems Steven faced during the 14 months his father was a captive halfway around the world.

"I'd only been in school a few months when it happened and I didn't know too many people," Steven said. When the Spanish teacher urged classmates to keep silent about Iran for Steven's sake, "I got really angry, because she was putting a wall between me and them."

Things have "calmed down quite a bit at home, but I don't think we'll be back to normal until my dad goes back to work in July," Steven said.

The ordeal forced his family to grow, Steven said, to handle situations they otherwise might not ever have had to face.

For hostages, fear remains

By STRAT DOUTHAT
Associated Press Writer

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. (AP) — Freedom is nearly three months old now, but fears, doubts and hatred still plague some of the Americans who were held hostage in Iran.

Thirty-one of the former prisoners have been discussing these feelings with physicians and psychologists, and with each other, during their stay at The Greenbrier, a secluded resort in the Allegheny Mountains.

They met in groups Tuesday and Wednesday and were meeting individually with the doctors today, the final day of their official reunion.

No medical statement has been released thus far. In announcing the reunion earlier this month, the State Department said the checkups and discussion sessions were designed to reveal how well the former hostages were adjusting to freedom after their 444-day ordeal in Iran.

"Most people don't understand what we went through," said former hostage Donald Hohman, 39, of West Sacramento, Calif. The U.S. Army sergeant said Wednesday's workshops for the returnees allowed him to "ventilate" his feelings, which sometimes surprise even him.

"I hate those people (the Iranian captors) and I've never hated before in my life," he admitted. "I don't want it rubbing off on my children."

Sharing those feelings with his colleagues at the three-day reunion has helped him "to understand it."

Besides the anger and hatred, Hohman said he still gets a "boxed in" feeling in crowds. He also said he has visited a psychiatrist about four times since his return.

"I would assume that you would have psychological problems; it's normal," he said.

Other former hostages said they were worried about their marriages and were having other problems making the adjustment from captivity to freedom.

Some of them also said the very word — freedom — had taken on a new meaning for them.

For Jerry Plotkin, freedom is "sensational." The 47-year-old Sherman Oaks, Calif., businessman said he had expected to be killed by his Iranian tormentors.

Paul Needham, 30, of Bellevue, Neb., said he now has a better understanding about the inspiration behind patriotic declarations such as Patrick Henry's famous, "Give me liberty or give me death."

However, the former hostages have been doing more than just discussing their problems. They also have been pursuing such carefree pastimes as golf, tennis and horseback riding at The Greenbrier, which is picking up the tab and has invited the former hostages and their families to stay at the plush hotel through the Easter weekend.

Hoax puts Pulitzer in spotlight

By CAROLE FELDMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Washington Post, calling itself "the victim of a hoax," publicly apologized today for printing a fabricated story about an 8-year-old heroin addict that won a Pulitzer Prize, journalism's highest honor.

Reporter Janet Cooke relinquished her $1,000 Pulitzer Prize for feature writing and resigned from the newspaper Wednesday after admitting to her editors that her story was a composite and the child addict she described and quoted did not exist.

"The (article) was a serious misrepresentation which I deeply regret. I apologize to my newspaper, my profession, the Pulitzer board and all seekers of the truth," Miss Cooke said in a statement in a front-page story in today's Post.

Post executive editor Benjamin Bradlee advised the Pulitzer board Wednesday that Miss Cooke would not accept the award, which was bestowed two days earlier.

The episode triggered concerns about news media credibility and the way Pulitzer Prize winners are selected.

"The credibility of a newspaper is its most precious asset, and it depends almost entirely on the integrity of its reporters," Bradlee said.

He continued, "When that integrity is questioned and found wanting, the wounds are grievous and there is nothing to do but come clean with our readers, apologize to the Advisory Board of the Pulitzer Prizes and begin immediately on the uphill task of regaining our credibility. This we are doing."

Columbia University, which issues the Pulitzers, accepted the Post's decision to surrender the award and, after a telephone poll of board members, gave it instead to Teresa Carpenter of the Village Voice for her story about a man who killed his wife while on leave from a mental institution.

The Post has won 14 other Pulitzers, including one for meritorious public service in 1973, when its reporting was instrumental in the unraveling of the Watergate coverup that later drove President Richard M. Nixon from office.

The Post said today that its ombudsman will investigate the circumstances surrounding Miss Cooke's article and his findings will be published.

"We apologize," the Post said today in an unsigned editorial. "This newspaper... was itself the victim of a hoax — which we then passed along in a prominent page-one story, taking in the readers as we ourselves had been taken in."

In the story, "Jimmy's World," published last September, Miss Cooke told of watching the boyfriend of the child's mother inject heroin into the boy's arm and described his addiction to drugs. The story was published at a time when an influx of cheap, high-quality heroin into Washington led to a surge in use of the drug.

Those at the Post, the editorial said, feel "at once angry, chagrined, misused ourselves, determined to continue the kind of aggressive reporting Miss Cooke's story only purported to be and determined also to maintain and honor the highest standards of straight and fair reporting."

Miss Cooke, 26, joined the Post in December 1979 after working for The Toledo (Ohio) Blade. The Post expressed "enormous sorrow" for the burden she has "created for herself and deep hope that she will find her way out of trouble."

The newspaper noted, however, that it would be "an error and a shame" if media critics use the "episode as the model of what's wrong with us or as evidence that stories are largely fabrications."

It also would be a mistake, the editorial continued, if the incident were used to discredit the First Amendment guarantees of freedom of the press, which "were activated and called into service when the conflict sharpened between the paper and the authorities on the question of identification of sources and the rest."

"Those protections and the constitutional values they embody and reflect were abused by Miss Cooke in the reporting and aftermath of her story, but they are no less vital today than they were before for that," the newspaper said.

City officials, publicly expressing doubts about the story when it was first published, tried to subpoena Miss Cooke and editors at the Post in an effort to get the identity of the child described in the article. The newspaper refused to cooperate, citing the First Amendment.

Washington Mayor Marion Barry, who received an apology from Bradlee, said in a statement, "I am concerned and will continue to be concerned about the accuracy of information disseminated to our residents from the news media."

Miss Cooke's story originally was entered in the Pulitzer's local reporting competition but was moved to the feature category at the board's April 3 meeting. "It was thought that it was more a feature piece and should be considered with the other feature nominees," said Fred Knobel, a board spokesman.

Robert C. Maynard, editor of the Oakland (Calif.) Tribune and a member of the Pulitzer jury that considered feature articles, said Miss Cooke's story was not among the 164 entries he reviewed.

"As a juror," he said, "I find it frustrating and dismaying that five very busy editors spent three days carefully reviewing 164 submissions only to have the feature-writing prize given to a submission the jury has never reviewed."

The jury had recommended that the feature prize be awarded to Miss Carpenter but was overruled by the board, which has the final say, said Maynard, a former national reporter and ombudsman for the Post.

Jean Otto of the Milwaukee Journal said the local reporting jury nominated the Cooke story, but it wasn't its first choice. The jury's first choice was the Longview (Wash.) Daily News for its coverage of the eruption of Mount St. Helen. The Daily News won the prize in that category.

Edward K. Shanahan, editor of the Daily Hampshire Gazette in Northampton, Mass., who served on the feature-writing jury, said the incident "certainly raised some questions about the integrity of the whole process" of selecting prize winners.

Soft drinks lead in consumption

Dear Dr. Solomon: As a coffee drinker, I've been following the news of the possible adverse effects of caffeine with some interest. I can imagine the extent of the problem since coffee must be the national drink in this country. Are there any figures showing how much the average person consumes each year? — Della nasal congestion; however, too much salt in the water can have serious results.

A salt solution to unclog a stuffy nose should consist of one-quarter teaspoon salt in an eight-ounce glass of water. Just make certain you don't make the solution any stronger when preparing it at home. And, of course, don't use it at all without first checking with your doctor.

practice this routinely. What I'm wondering about is whether it does any good. Are there any figures that show that breast self-examination is of any value? — Mary

Dear Della: Although the morning cup of coffee and coffee breaks in general have become American institutions, beverage industry sources report that coffee takes second place to soft drinks in terms of consumption in the United States — an average of 33.6 gallons per person of soft drinks each year compared with an average of 27.8 gallons per person of coffee per year. What many people don't realize, however, is that they are probably consuming more caffeine than they think; both cola and pepper-type drinks have caffeine in them.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor strongly recommends breast self-examination, and I know that many of my friends early detection means early treatment and, therefore, a better prognosis, breast self-examination should be a part of every woman's routine.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My local newspaper has been running a series of articles condemning the practice of testing drugs and medical devices on prisoners. I can understand and appreciate that the paper does not want the prisoners to be exploited, but if they aren't used for this purpose, how can new drugs and devices be tested? — Anne

Don't Be Misled

There are few things in life more important and of a more personal nature than providing life insurance for the protection of one's family. Because of the almost sacred nature that is usually associated with a family's life insurance program, it would only seem logical that a family would proceed very cautiously if anyone suggests that their insurance program be abandoned, in favor of something new. We have all learned that new is not necessarily better.

In recent weeks our local association has received notice that a sales force, mostly out-of-town people, is working in West Texas with a "new" way to provide a life insurance program. Whatever else their suggestions might be, the main thrust of their approach seems to be based on replacing policies that are already in force. Be very careful if someone approaches you with such a suggestion. In fact, the following guidelines might prove to be helpful:

(1) Contact your local insurance agent and get his opinion. Closely compare the benefits of both your present policy or policies with those you are being offered. It may surprise you to find out what benefits you may lose if the change is made. A comparison of this type should either confirm that you ought to make a change or that you might be making a mistake.

(2) If the salesperson represents himself as a Financial Planner, Consultant, etc., find out if he has a permanent license. Depending on individual circumstances, the person with a temporary license might not be around long enough to service what he sells. Since you are contemplating doing business with him, you owe it to yourself to find out.

Pardoned chief owes one to Gipper

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of two former FBI officials pardoned by President Reagan for authorizing illegal break-ins during a probe of anti-war radicals in the early 1970s says he owes one to the Gipper. And, he says, so does the entire U.S. intelligence community.

Reagan announced unconditional pardons Wednesday for W. Mark Felt, 67, once the FBI's No. 2 official, and Edward S. Miller, 57, onetime head of the bureau's intelligence division. Both men said they felt vindicated.

Felt and Miller were convicted in U.S. District Court in Washington last November — two days after Reagan's election — of conspiring to violate individual civil rights by authorizing secret searches, without warrants, of homes of friends and relatives of radical Weather Underground fugitives in 1972 and 1973.

The pardons wipe out fines of $5,000 against Felt and $3,000 against Miller. Neither man was sentenced to prison.

"America was generous to those who refused to serve their country in the Vietnam War," Reagan said Wednesday. "We can be no less generous to two men who acted on high principle to bring an end to the terrorism that was threatening our nation."

A jubilant Miller told a news conference: "My first thought when I got the call was that I certainly owe the Gipper."

But Miller, who referred to Reagan's film portrayal of legendary Notre Dame football player George Gipp, said the pardons also give the intelligence community its "biggest shot in the arm ... in a long time."

Miller said that after he and Felt were prosecuted, other FBI agents might have been reluctant "to do the job 100 percent." The pardon may change that, he said.

Felt, describing himself as relieved that a "heavy burden" had been lifted from his shoulders, said he could not understand why prosecutors referred to the victims of the break-ins as "friends and relatives" of Weather Underground fugitives.

With one exception, he said, "I refer to them as members and supporters." He did not explain why or specify the exception.

Reagan signed the pardons March 26, but presidential counsel Fred Fielding said public announcement was delayed when Reagan was shot March 30 in an assassination attempt.

The president said in a statement that Felt and Miller acted without criminal intent to preserve national security and both men deserved the same pardons that draft evaders received from his predecessor, Jimmy Carter.

Reagan said "America was at war in 1972," and Felt and Miller "followed procedures they believed essential to keep the director of the FBI, the attorney general and the president of the United States advised of the activities of hostile foreign powers and their collaborators in this country."

"They have never denied their actions but, in fact, came forward to acknowledge them publicly in order to relieve their subordinate agents from criminal actions," Reagan said.

Felt and Miller admitted during their two-month trial here that they authorized warrantless searches of homes in New York City and New Jersey during the Nixon administration as part of the FBI's search for Weather Underground fugitives.

But they claimed that L. Patrick Gray III, the former acting director of the FBI, authorized the break-ins. Gray also was indicted in the case, but the government decided not to prosecute him, saying the "evidence is unconvincing." Gray sued the government last week for $5.5 million, claiming violation of his constitutional rights to due process and indictment by a "fair and impartial grand jury."

Atheists meet amid family difference

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Led by Madalyn Murray O'Hair and prayed for by her son William J. Murray, the American Atheists held their 11th annual convention here Friday through Easter Sunday.

While the atheists hear speeches and conduct "de-baptisms," Murray plans a 72-hour prayer vigil and newspaper ads offering to bring the atheists to Christ.

A request by the chapter to picket Temple Square, site of the Mormon Church's Salt Lake Temple and Tabernacle, was turned down for insufficient detail, but police said the request could be resubmitted.

"I like to do dramatic things," Mrs. O'Hair said in a telephone interview. "One thing I wanted to do was picket the Mormon church carrying crosses with Easter bunnies," but she doubted the others would go along.

Mrs. O'Hair, speaking from the American Atheist Center at Austin, Tex., run by her son Jon Garth Murray, declined to estimate attendance at the convention.

She said attendance is proportional to the courage of the atheists — for which she gives them low marks.

"There are entirely too many who are closet atheists," said Mrs. O'Hair, who has waged many a legal battle over church-state issues.

It was her 1963 suit in behalf of son William, then 14, that led to the U.S. Supreme Court ruling prohibiting public schools from conducting prayers.

Scientist gets teeth into subject

FARMINGTON, Conn. (AP) — A University of Connecticut scientist's success in producing chicken teeth by combining cells from both chicken and mouse embryos may sound like just one more esoteric, ivory-tower project.

Edward J. Kollar's experiment didn't even produce live chickens with teeth. It produced just the teeth — grown on mice.

However, the professor of oral biology at the University of Connecticut School of Dental Medicine was recently awarded one of the highest international honors in dental research for his work. Furthermore, his success in creating the teeth may have an impact on the theory of evolution and eventually lead to significant advances in dentistry.

"A chicken can make teeth, it just forgot how," said Kollar, who holds a Ph.D. in biology from Syracuse University.

Kollar said he had first become interested in growing chicken teeth as a means of studying the development of malformed teeth, and, by extension, other birth defects such as cleft palates.

He said no laboratory animal was good for the study, as animals with badly defective or malformed teeth do not exist — they would not survive in the evolutionary process.

But chickens, although toothless, still have the gene for making teeth, he said. "Tooth development starts, but then regresses (in chicken embryos)," he said.

So Kollar combined dental pulp from mice embryos with tooth cells from chicken embryos, and then implanted the grafts in laboratory mice.

The result was complete teeth, with the enamel layer provided by the chicken cells. Kollar said they did not look like mouse molars but resembled reptile teeth.

For his research, Kollar received the 1980-81 Isaac Schour Memorial Science Award at the annual meeting of the International Associates for Dental Research. The award recognizes Kollar's 15 years of research of embryonic factors on teeth growth.

His successful growing of chicken teeth, Kollar said, supports the theory that evolution can occur very suddenly, and that changes in species can happen very quickly.

Visitin' folks feel right at home in Texas war

By The Associated Press

In Texas, the visitin' folks still feel right at home. Wednesday night, for the fourth time in six National Basketball Association playoff games between Houston and San Antonio, the hosts were most gracious. This time it was the Rockets, who allowed the Spurs to win 101-96.

That sends their Western Division semifinal series back to San Antonio for Friday night's decisive seventh game — and the Spurs hope the home-court hex will finally vanish.

"We've had such a strong home record all season, and now I hope it comes back to us," said George Gervin, who led the Spurs with 26 points. "It's time now for us to take advantage of our fans screaming at us to put it away."

In the NBA's other Western semifinal, Kansas City failed to wrap things up, losing 101-89 to Phoenix. The Kings lead the series 3-2. And in the remaining Eastern semifinal (the Boston Celtics won their series from Chicago in four straight), Philadelphia took a 3-2 lead with a 116-99 triumph over Milwaukee.

Moses Malone, who had 36 points and 10 rebounds for the Rockets, saw the game as "an opportunity to jump and strut and celebrate tonight. Things just didn't go our way. It seems like we've just got to do things the hard way."

That's the way it's been all year for the Rockets, trying to become the first team in 13 years to reach an NBA conference final with a losing record (40-42) in the regular season.

Calvin Murphy, who had 20 points, put Houston ahead 90-87 with 7 minutes to play, but Gervin, Paul Griffin and Mark Olberding hit successive baskets to put San Antonio in front to stay. Griffin and Olberding finished with 12 points apiece.

"Our middle name must be the Houston 'Struggle' Rockets," mused Rockets Coach Del Harris, whose team could have won the best-of-seven series with a victory. "We have to struggle for everything we get and we will be struggling Friday night to win the seventh game."

The Spurs and the Rockets, who have built a reputation for bruising contests in their rivalry, have each won two of three games on the opposing team's home court in the topsy-turvy playoff series.

That should give the Rockets an edge when the final game is played Friday night in San Antonio, but Spurs sharpshooter George Gervin thinks the Spurs should start a new trend.

"We've got to sit back tomorrow and think what we've got to do," said Malone, who played the full 48 minutes of the game. "If we want it bad enough we'll take it."

Malone was alternately harrassed by San Antonio's Mark Olberding, Dave Corine and Paul Griffin, just as he had been in the previous five games of the brutal series.

"He (Malone) seemed awfully tired," said Olberding, "mentally too. We did a good job on him down the stretch and played good defense."

Suns 101, Kings 89

Truck Robinson scored 15 points and grabbed 20 rebounds to keep Phoenix's hopes alive. "We had to have that type of effort," he said. "There was no other alternative."

Walter Davis scored 16 of his 20 points in the first half, including six in a 19-2 Suns burst that gave them a 47-31 lead with 3:42 remaining in the second period. Kansas City cut the margin to 10 points in the fourth period before Robinson led a late charge that widened it to 20 with barely three minutes to play.

76ers 116, Bucks 99

Lionel Hollins and Maurice Cheeks scored 20 points apiece and Julius Erving had 19 as Philadelphia moved within one game of eliminating the Bucks and setting up yet another 76ers-Celtics confrontation.

Sidney Moncrief and Mickey Johnson each had 20 points for Milwaukee, which shaved a 15-point Philly lead to six points with about 8 minutes to play but couldn't get any closer.

Cleveland Indians' catcher Ron Hassey gets leveled by a hard sliding Bump Wills of the Texas Rangers during Wednesday action at Arlington

A's pitching goes distance

By The Associated Press

The Oakland A's pitchers are starting this season where they left off last year. And so are the Oakland hitters, particularly Tony Armas.

The A's, who set a major-league record last year for complete games with 94, got another complete game out of a starter when Rick Langford went the distance Wednesday night in a 5-3 victory over the California Angels. That's the sixth time in seven games this year that a starter has completed a game for the undefeated A's.

Meanwhile, Armas, hoping to match last season's home-run total of 35, slugged his fourth of the season.

"If 7-0 isn't rolling, nothing is," said Manager Billy Martin. "It's just great. The kids are excited and we're going home Friday to a sold-out crowd. I'd take 7-0 any time of the year."

Armas obviously has been one of the catalysts of the best-ever start in Oakland history.

"He threw me a fastball down the middle and I just was swinging hard," said Armas of his three-run shot off Andy Hassler in the eighth inning that capped a four-run rally after the A's had been down 3-0. "I couldn't believe he would pitch to me so late in the game with a right hander up in the bullpen. Actually, I haven't had much luck against him before. He usually gets me out with his sinker."

Coach fired for treating players with DMSO

BAKER, Ore. (AP) — The Baker School Board says it fired the high school physical education teacher from his head football coaching duties, partly because he treated players with DMSO.

Coach Tom Doud used the substance, dimethyl sulfoxide, to treat football injuries. That was one of about 20 complaints considered by the school board before it voted unanimously to remove him from coaching Tuesday night, said school board member Harold Britton.

DMSO is a byproduct of the paper-making industry that researchers say has a range of medical uses, including suppression of pain and inflammation.

Armas had a poor spring training, but Martin never lost confidence in the native Venezuelan.

"I wasn't concerned at all," said Martin. "I had him in the No. 4 spot in my opening day lineup, didn't I? He's just been doing great, but so has everyone. It's been a team effort. I don't want to put any added pressure on him."

Armas' towering drive to center field at Anaheim Stadium came after three walks and a ground ball broke up a shutout bid by Angel starter Jesse Jefferson.

Rick Burleson had four hits for California. He singled home the first run of the game in the third and tripled to lead off the sixth, scoring on a sacrifice fly by Fred Lynn. Singles by Tom Brunansky and Butch Hobson and a groundout extended the Angels' lead to 3-0 in the seventh.

Rangers 8, Indians 0

Al Oliver knocked in three runs with a homer, a double and a fielder's choice grounder to back the solid pitching of Doc Medich and help Texas beat Cleveland. Medich, making his first start of the year, scattered five hits in 7½ innings before he tired in the eighth inning and yielded to reliever John Henry Johnson.

The game was costly for the Indians, who lost catcher Ron Hassey in a home-plate collision with Bump Wills in the seventh inning. Hassey suffered an injury to his left leg and was carried off on a stretcher and taken to a local hospital.

It is readily available as an industrial solvent and veterinary medicine. Its legal medical use on humans is restricted by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration to treatment for a rare bladder inflammation.

Britton said the five-member board dismissed Doud from coaching after a routine annual evaluation. Doud's contract as a physical education instructor was renewed earlier this year.

"I'm a school teacher, but my heart and soul are in coaching," Doud said. "I love working with young people. If I have to, I will go somewhere where I can work with young people and watch them grow the way I want to."

Mariners 6, Twins 5

Richie Zisk and Joe Simpson each knocked in two runs and Jerry Don Gleaton pitched four-hit ball for seven innings as Seattle beat Minnesota. Trailing 2-0 in the third inning, the Mariners scored four times to take the lead for good as Zisk's RBI double keyed the rally.

Red Sox 7, Orioles 2

Carl Yastrzemski drove in three runs in his 1981 debut and Tony Perez hit a two-run homer to lead Boston over Baltimore. Yastrzemski, who missed his first season opener in 21 years because of back-muscle spasms last week, drove in Boston's first run with a groundout in the first inning, then lined a two-run single in the fourth for his 3,110th major league hit.

Perez hit his first homer of the season in a four-run first inning.

White Sox 5, Brewers 4

Bob Molinaro's pinch sacrifice fly in the eighth scored Harold Baines to carry Chicago over Milwaukee. Baines opened the eighth with his third single of the game, went to second on a sacrifice by Jim Morrison and took third on Tony Bernazard's bunt single.

Before his sacrifice fly, Molinaro had worked Rollie Fingers for a 3-0 pitch, but it was called a strike. "I thought it was ball four," said Molinaro.

Yankees 6, Blue Jays 3

Oscar Gamble's solo homer and Dave Winfield's two-run single keyed a five-run fourth inning that carried New York over Toronto.

Rudy May recorded his second victory in as many starts for the Yankees this season and 10th regular-season triumph in a row since July 22, 1980, when he lost to the Milwaukee Brewers. The big left-hander pitched seven innings, striking out four and allowing no walks.

Tigers 4, Royals 0

Dave Rozema fired a six-hitter in his 1981 debut and Al Cowens tripled home a run and scored another to lead Detroit over Kansas City. Larry Gura gave up only seven hits as the defending American League champions suffered a two-game sweep by the Tigers.

Steve Kemp's first-inning sacrifice fly gave the Tigers a 1-0 lead and all the margin they needed. They added two insurance runs in the second on Cowens' RBI triple Mick Kelleher's single.

Just how cold was it? Expos defeat Cubs, but only the cold is remembered

By The Associated Press

All baseball players dream of swinging a hot bat. On Wednesday in Montreal, even that didn't help them make it through the frosty day.

The record books will show that the Montreal Expos beat the Chicago Cubs 5-4 in their home opener, but the chill in the players' bones will be remembered long after the score is forgotten.

"I prayed we weren't going to play 13 or 14 innings out there," said Gary Carter, whose eighth-inning single capped a two-run rally that won the game for Montreal.

"I couldn't feel my hands, I couldn't feel my ears and my nose was running," Carter said. "I can't wait to get into the sauna. It was the coldest game I ever played in."

"I've seen it colder in the minor leagues when I was playing," said Cubs Manager Joe Amalfitano, "but this is the coldest weather I've ever experienced in a major-league game."

The game-time temperature was announced as 39 degrees, but third baseman Larry Parrish said the chewing tobacco in his back pocket froze and he found ice patches on the field. A biting wind made it feel 20 degrees colder.

Some of the players tried to warm up their bats in the sauna room, but said it didn't help because they got cold again immediately after going outside again. Pitchers usually try to save all their energy for when they are on the mound, but Expos starter Steve Rogers tried to keep warm by riding a stationary bicycle between innings.

"It was so cold that you'd get to the plate and wouldn't be able to feel the bat in your hand," said Andre Dawson, who singled home the tying run in the eighth and scored the winner on Carter's hit.

Chicago had a 4-3 lead going into the eighth inning and Cubs reliever Bill Caudill had retired 10 batters in a row before walking Rodney Scott with one out.

Scott stole second and Dawson then singled off reliever Dick Tidrow, 1-1, to score Scott and tie the game 4-4. An error on an attempted pickoff throw by Tidrow sent Dawson to third before Carter blooped a single to right-center field.

"I was choking up on the bat, just hoping to make contact," he said. "I ended up breaking the bat, but the end result was good anyway."

Astros 2, Braves 0

Nolan Ryan struck out nine to pass Bob Gibson for third place on the all-time strikeout list and gave up only three hits in seven innings to outlast hard-luck Atlanta pitcher Tommy Boggs.

Boggs had a no-hitter for six innings, but he gave up a hit to Craig Reynolds in the seventh and surrendered two runs with a throwing error and a wild pitch.

Mets 5, Cardinals 3

New York also won its home opener, getting a two-run single from Doug Flynn and a two-run triple from rookie Mookie Wilson, both in the second inning.

Right-hander Pat Zachry went 5-13 in his second straight victory. He was bailed out of a jam in the sixth when reliever Tom Hausman threw one pitch and coaxed a double-play grounder.

Neil Allen, who has two saves and a victory in New York's three wins, pitched hitless ball the last three innings.

Rain beats Cubs, Gold Sox, but Dodgers defeat Diablos

By The Associated Press

The San Antonio Dodgers used home runs and the Jackson Mets used bunts, but the results were the same as both teams captured Texas League baseball victories Wednesday night.

San Antonio had four homers in a 12-3 victory over El Paso and Jackson used three bunts in the 10th inning for a 1-0 10-inning victory over Shreveport. Midland's scheduled game at Amarillo was postponed because of rain.

The Dodgers spotted the Diablos a 3-0 lead in the first inning and then took over. Dale Holman had a three-run homer in the eighth inning and Greg Brock had a solo homer in the

Phillies 4, Pirates 3

Matthews, obtained late in spring training from the Atlanta Braves for Bob Walk, smacked a 2-0 pitch from Enrique Romo deep over the left-center field fence for his first homer of the year.

Jim Bibby took a seven-hitter and a 3-1 lead into the last of the ninth inning for the Pirates, but the Phillies tied it on a two-run single by Keith Moreland.

Driessen slammed a three-run homer in the sixth and Foster added a two-run shot in the seventh. Dave Collins scored three times for Cincinnati, which won its ninth straight game in San Diego Stadium.

Hooton doubled in two runs in the fourth to help his cause and raise the Dodgers' record to 6-0.

Charlie Jones, who struck out four batters and allowed nine hits, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Rick Kranitz.

Shake Moore and Al Pedrique opened the 10th inning for the Mets with back-to-back bunts. Marvel Wynne sacrificed them to second and third, setting the stage for Rusty Tillman's game winning bunt that drove Moore home with the game's only run.

Mark Daley, 1-0, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Jim Dunn, 0-1.

Ron Cey of the Los Angeles Dodgers scores through San Francisco catcher Milt May on a squeeze play as the Dodgers ran their winning streak to six games.

Pay and cable TV may be the saving future of baseball

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Baseball has a superstar more important than George Brett or Dave Winfield. A whole wing could be reserved at the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown for this star performer. Many feel baseball's financial future is resting on its square shoulders.

Baseball's owners, concerned about escalating salaries and expenses, have been looking for a financial savior, and the savior is looking right back at them. It is television, pay and cable.

Cable, already widely available, provides a package of programming. You pay one fee and take what you get. Pay TV will allow the viewer to select programs and pay for them only.

"Pay TV is the future of baseball," said Buzzie Bavasi, executive vice president of the California Angels. "It may not be the network TV bonanza that the NFL has now, but it'll be enough to make us whole."

WHILE THE National Football League has a $656 million network TV contract, the pot of gold in baseball is not in national games but in getting viewers to pay for the locally televised games they're used to seeing for free.

"The bottom line down the road is a pay-for-play kind of thing, an event fee," said Eddie Einhorn, a former executive at CBS who recently became one of the owners of the Chicago White Sox. "You're going to pay $2 a game to stay at home."

If 100,000 fans in the Chicago area pay $2 to watch each of the White Sox' 81 home games, then you're talking $16 million a year. These are the kinds of figures that induced basketball's Seattle SuperSonics to put their games on pay TV (more than half the homes in Seattle are outfitted with cable) and charge a $120 subscription fee per season.

That breaks down to $1.33 per game.

Tom Villante, baseball's director of broadcasting, says the big payoff will come when a collection system can be devised by which viewers would pay only for the events they want, rather than by the season. "This is the purest form of expanding your box office. Potentially, everybody in the market place could be tuning in."

MANY OFFICIALS in baseball and broadcasting feel that pay TV, as a revenue-producer, is the answer to rising salaries and costs. They feel free TV has gone about as far as it can go as a money-maker.

Local broadcast packages range from Kansas City's $500,000 to Montreal's $6.3 million. The champion Phillies, whose rights sold for $4 million this year, once received $600,000 from their broadcaster, WPHL, to help them sign Pete Rose. But the cost of these local rights hinge on advertising revenues, which fluctuate little and will never make the quantum jump that pay TV is expected to provide immediately. Network TV isn't the answer. Each baseball team receives $1.8 million annually from network deals with ABC and NBC. National baseball just doesn't create the interest and revenue that network football does.

There is no local TV in the NFL, but each club receives $5.2 million a year from the networks before the opening kickoff. The TV revenues are shared equally, whether the club is the Super Bowl champion Oakland Raiders or the New Orleans Saints, who were 1-15 last year. It also doesn't matter if the team lives under the bright lights of New York or in the snow drifts of Green Bay.

The have-nots in baseball want revenue sharing, but don't count on it. George Steinbrenner gets some $5 million from local TV because he owns the Yankees, who happen to play in media-land in New York. It's unlikely he'll want to share it with his competitors just because they have the misfortune of playing in smaller broadcast markets.

"We in management are united by our problems and divided by our solutions," said Frank Cashen, general manager of the New York Mets. "Each club sees itself as a special case."

CASHEN POINTS out that the Mets and Baltimore Orioles were both sold recently. The Mets changed hands for $21.1 million, while the Orioles went for $10 million.

"Obviously, the worth of the franchise is largely determined by what market you're in," said Cashen. "Why would we want to share TV revenues or gate revenues when it's been proven in the past that our market has far greater potential than a city like Baltimore?"

However, one enterprising owner has turned his local market into the entire United States, from sea to shining sea, including Alaska. Ted Turner, owner of the Atlanta Braves, rescued the floundering franchise in 1976 for the expressed purpose of putting the Braves games on his Atlanta TV station, WTBS.

WTBS was the first of the superstations, which have their programming beamed by satellite and picked up by cable systems across America. Other superstations are WGN in Chicago, carriers of the Cubs and the White Sox, and WOR in New York, TV home of the Mets.

WTBS doesn't get paid by the cable systems that pick up the Braves' games, but Turner doesn't care. He can charge his WTBS advertisers four times the going local rate because their products are being pitched far beyond Atlanta, potentially reaching 11 million homes.

William C. Bevins, vice president of finance for Turner Broadcasting, said the team has recouped some of its $8 million-plus losses over the last three years through the Braves' TV revenues. Bevins calls the team "a very valuable piece of programming."

Chet Simmons, president of ESPN, the all-sports cable network, points out that cable systems may attract subscribers because they're carrying Atlanta baseball, and more subscribers mean more potential viewers for WTBS' programs and commercials.

"Whether it's going into Turner's right pocket or left pocket doesn't matter," said Simmons. "The money accruing back to him is exceptional. When people hear that Turner has signed Claudell Washington for $3.5 million, they'll tune in everywhere to see if he's worth the money."

McMurry's Pertile earns TIAA's track MVP title

ABILENE — Former Midland Lee track standout Arthur Pertile has been named as the TIAA's conference MVP in track for the 1981 season while running for McMurry.

Last weekend in the TIAA conference meet at Tarleton State, Pertile, a sophomore, set two conference sprint marks and ran on both winning relay teams. Pertile recorded a 49.0 in the 400 meters and a 21.5 in the 200 meters, both conference records. McMurry also won the sprint relay with a 43.1 with Pertile running the second leg and the 1600 meter relay in 3:23.0 with Pertile running the third leg. Pertile scored 30 points in the meet.

It's quite an achievement for the former Rebel, who was an 800 meter star last year and in high school. "I'm a sprinter now. The 800 was just too hard on me and I asked to change to the sprints this year because I thought I could help the team more," Pertile said.

McMurry's Willie Joe, a former Odessa Ector sprinter, was named Freshman of the Year by the TIAA. Joe won the 100 meters with a 10.63 and was second in the 200 with a 22.0. Joe also ran on both McMurry relays.

Pertile won the Freshman of the Year tag last season as an 800 meter specialist.

Playoff factors shroud NHL outcomes

By The Associated Press

A tired goaltender, an injured right wing, an uncheckable center and four emotionally sky-high teams. Those are just a few of the factors which might determine who survives the National Hockey League quarterfinals, which begin tonight.

St. Louis has the exhausted net-minder in Mike Liut, who was spectacular Tuesday night, making 48 saves as the Blues survived their best-of-five preliminary round series with a 4-3 overtime victory against the gutsy Pittsburgh Penguins. Liut played all five games against the Penguins and is faced with the prospect of four games in the next five nights against the New York Rangers.

Buffalo has the injured winger, Danny Gare, the Sabres' leading scorer with 46 goals and 85 points. Gare had three goals in Buffalo's sweep of Vancouver in the first round but a badly bruised right shoulder might sideline him for at least the opener of the best-of-seven quarterfinals against Minnesota.

Edmonton possesses the game's most dynamic scorer, 20-year-old center Wayne Gretzky. He feels the Oilers can pull the same surprise against the defending champion New York Islanders that they managed against Montreal in the preliminaries, which Edmonton won in three straight.

And, though all eight of the remaining contenders have to be psyched for the next step in the rush to the Stanley Cup, the Oilers, North Stars, Rangers and Calgary Flames have to be floating among the clouds after advancing this far.

"Sure we're tired," noted Liut after he had been put through a wringer by the Penguins, facing 172 shots in the five games. "Sure I'm tired. But we've won when we've had to."

The Blues won all four regular season meetings with the Rangers, who wound up 13th in the overall standings but blitzed the fourth-place Los Angeles Kings in four games in the preliminary round. St. Louis, which ended up second overall, realizes it will have a difficult task in facing the hot Rangers. The task will be even tougher if Liut isn't sharp.

There is, in fact, the possibility that Blues Coach Red Berenson will rest the All-Star goalie tonight and use backup Ed Staniowski, who had a 10-3-3 record this season.

"I expect we'll have our hands full with the Rangers," said Mike Crombeen, the Blues' hero with the winning goal at 5:16 of the second overtime

That they certainly are.

"Mike Liut will be more tired than any of the Blues," said Rangers defenseman Barry Beck, who has been a major reason New York is playing its best hockey of the season at the right time ... playoff time. "We'll pump a lot of shots at him. And, the way we've been going, we can score on anybody."

Both the Sabres and North Stars can score on anyone as well. Minnesota blitzed Boston 5-4, 9-6 and 6-3, with Steve Payne connecting for seven goals, in the opening round.

"I've never seen Steve play better," said Stars Coach Glen Sonmor. "That includes last year when he scored 42 goals. Goal scoring is just a part of it. He's using his size (6-foot-2, 205) to knock people off the puck."

Buffalo hopes it will have Gare around to counter the potent Minnesota attack.

"The bone is bruised," said Gare, the Sabres captain. "The doctor measured it and the shoulder is an inch thicker than the other one because of the swelling."

"Right now, there's no way I could draw the stick back and shoot." The Oilers, 14th in regular season, drew back and belted the Canadiens, humbling third-place Montreal in decisive fashion. Now they'll try to do the same to an Islander squad which overwhelmed Toronto in the preliminary round, outscoring the Maple Leafs 20-4 in a three-game mismatch.

"We were prepared mentally and physically and we beat the best team in hockey," said Gretzky, who led the NHL in scoring with 164 points, including 109 assists, both league records. In fact, only five NHL players scored as many points as Gretzky had assists. "We beat the best organization in the history of hockey."

"We've worked very hard and deserve to enjoy this. Now we're looking to the quarterfinals and saying we can win."

The Islanders, however, feel well-prepared for Gretzky and Company.

"If he considers Montreal the best team in hockey," said New York's Bob Nystrom, "we'll go out there and show him he's wrong."

The big opening round victories for Edmonton, the Rangers and North Stars, all of whom were underdogs, have them on a high emotional pitch. But Calgary, which swept Chicago for the Flames' first postseason series triumph, is floating somewhere in the stratosphere.

Rain delays 5-5A again

The scheduled District 5-5A baseball games today between Odessa Permian-Midland High and Midland Lee-Odessa High have been postponed until next week due to soggy playing fields in both cities.

The local teams will resume action Tuesday when Midland High hosts Big Spring and Lee travels to San Angelo. That leaves Wednesday, Thursday and Friday to make up the two lost 5-5A contests before the regular schedule returns Saturday.

The MHS-Lee game was rained out Tuesday and that day was to end the first half schedule with Cooper needing a win over Abilene High for the first half title. Cooper was supposed to play Abilene High today in their makeup contest.

In effect, both local teams will play four district contests next week and Midland High has a non-conference game in Monahans Monday.

Chaparrals place third in conference tourney

ROSWELL, N.M. — Midland College placed third in a Western Junior College Conference golf tournament here this week with a 310 team score.

Western Texas College won the event with a 302 total while New Mexico Junior College was second with 309, one stroke in front of MC.

David Waszak paced the Chaparrals with a 76 while Bobby Tuttle had a 77. Bruce Carroll followed with a 78 and Doug Dabbs had a 79. Steve Goetzmann produced an 81 and Jeff Lutke had an 83.

WTC's Jeff Segar won medalist honors with a 71. The regional junior college golf tournament will be held Monday and Tuesday in Weatherford.

SMU inks Larry Davis to add SWC muscle

DALLAS (AP) — Larry Davis, a 6-8, 230-pound center from Lufkin High School, who was one of the most sought-after schoolboy basketball recruits in Texas, has signed a national letter of intent with Southern Methodist University.

Davis averaged 19.6 points and 12.9 rebounds in his senior season.

"Larry Davis is one of the top recruits in the Southwest," said SMU Coach Dave Bliss, who signed Davis in Lufkin. "He is somebody we really need at SMU, a power forward whose strong rebounder and excellent shooter. Definitely, he'll play for us next year and will make SMU a very entertaining ball club for the Mustang fans to watch."

The bluechip schoolboy visited Texas A&M, Texas, Texas-El Paso, Baylor and New Mexico before picking SMU.

"I really like SMU and Coach Bliss," said Davis. "He seems the kind of coach you can play for... I feel I can start for SMU right away and really help the ball club."

Davis scored 20 points for the South All-Stars last Saturday in the TABC All-Star game in Waco.

USA hockey team finally wins

GOTEBORG, Sweden (AP) — "I wish we could start the World Championships all over again," said Coach Bob Johnson as the United States hockey team finally got off the ground.

Wednesday's 10-6 victory over West Germany ended a traumatic period for the Americans, who came ill-prepared and got together only a few days before the tournament started. They lost 11-2 to Czechoslovakia and 4-2 to Sweden as they tried to settle down and find their rhythm.

"But I would really love to play Sweden again. We were not ready for them. If we played them this weekend I think we would win."

Johnson doesn't like the like the new formula for the championships, with preliminaries to decide two pools of four. "The last time I was over here every team played everybody else twice, and that's a much better way to do it," he said.

"Meanwhile, the United States cannot expect to do well in these championships unless the date is pushed back. So many of the good players are tied up in the (National Hockey League) playoffs back home that it's difficult to put a team together."

But against West Germany, they showed all the fighting spirit that made the U.S. team Olympic champions at Lake Placid, N.Y., last year. The came back to win after trailing 4-6 in the third period.

"I said from the start we would get better with each match," Johnson said. "We have steadily improved. We scored six beautiful goals in the third period against Germany."

Lieberman paces victory

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Forward Nancy Lieberman shook off an injury and scored 31 points to lead the Dallas Diamonds to a 106-93 victory over the Nebraska Wranglers in the Women's Professional Basketball League championship playoff series Wednesday night.

The decision left the teams tied 1-1 in the best-of-five series, which continues Friday night in Dallas.

Lieberman, who suffered an ankle injury early during a loss to the Wranglers Tuesday night, said it bothered her early in the game as she started toward her game-leading total. She hit on 11 of 22 field goal attempts and 9 of 12 free throws.

The Diamonds, in front 50-33 at the half, led by as many as 20 before Nebraska cut the margin to 5 late in the game. A free-throw space locked it up for the Texas team.

But the win came too late to give the U.S. team more than a minor role in the final stage of the championships, which begin Friday.

The Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Canada and Sweden will play in the world title bracket. The United States will play in a consolation bracket with West Germany, Finland and the Netherlands.

The Americans have a good chance of winning the "B" pool. They trounced Finland 5-0 in an exhibition last week, even though some of their players had not arrived.

"It will be a good game against the Finns," Johnson said. "They are a good team, and we are looking forward to playing them again."

Bill Rodgers seeks fifth Boston title

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Bill Rodgers, seeking his fifth victory in the Boston Marathon and fourth in a row, is approaching the race with his usual trepidation.

"It will be no different than any other time at Boston," said the nation's No. 1 marathoner. "I always get kind of afraid of a marathon. The marathon is such a hard race that you always worry. It's a grueling event."

American record of 2 hours, 9 minutes, 27 seconds, set at Boston in 1979, added that it will take "total concentration" to win again. "It's an all-out effort. You've got to have the will, not just endurance."

Rodgers is concerned about his chances of winning this time because of the strength of the field and a siege of the flu he suffered two weeks ago, which slowed his training program.

"I thought before I got the flu I was fit enough for anywhere from 2:09 to 2:12 on a perfect day," he said after racing a 10-kilometer race last Saturday, his final tuneup for the marathon.

Rodgers, holder of the field and a siege of the flu he suffered two weeks ago, which slowed his training program.

Connors is on net hot track

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Jimmy Connors, who has slipped to the No. 3 slot in the world rankings after holding the top spot for nearly five years, is on a hot streak.

"I don't pay too much attention to the rankings anymore and I can't really say if I think the order of the top three is going to change this year," the 28-year-old American said. "I just try to win."

Win is what Connors did Wednesday in his first round match at the $250,000 Monte Carlo Open tennis tournament, eliminating Italy's Corrado Barazzutti 6-4, 7-6.

Connors is now the favorite to win the tournament, the first major European clay court event of the season, after top seed Bjorn Borg was ousted in the first round Tuesday by Victor Pecci of Paraguay.

Pecci, however, failed to make it into the quarterfinals when Italy's Adriano Panatta beat him 6-3, 6-2 Wednesday.

Connors came into the tournament after a victory in February in La Quinta, Calif.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, April 17, 1981
YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actor William Holden and news commentator Harry Reasoner celebrate birthdays today, and all three of you can expect a year of continued career success. On this Good Friday, resolve to get along better with co-workers. Reserved and serious-minded, you have few casual friendships and are likely to find your closest companions within the family circle. Yet others admire your silent strength and would like to know you. Go ahead and reach out to them! If single, you are apt to find a likely prospect for lasting romance. Marriage can bring greater financial security along with love, stability.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Follow a conservative course in business, finance. Leave nothing to chance. Do your homework diligently and be prepared to make a long-range decision. Romance is a real possibility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Look on opposition as a constructive challenge. There is a new emphasis on personality, public relations. It is time to come out of your shell. Bargain about if you will actively seek them.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Have greater faith in yourself and your ideas. Others will welcome your suggestions. Tend to legal matters without delay, checking even the most minute details. Someone who is stubborn changes his or her tune.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The actions of others can have a profound effect on your business, financial affairs. Member of the opposite sex makes a special request. Romantic interlude will be part of day's plan.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day for dealing with people higher up on the ladder of success. Be content with small gains in real estate or the stock market. Home life is happier than in recent past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Do not place too much reliance on the promises of others. Greatest gains will be related to regular employment. Devote more time to self-improvement projects that will boost your morale.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Changes at work will improve the office atmosphere. Bankers prove cooperative if you are seeking a loan. A minor gamble could pay off. Devote evening hours to catching up on personal chores.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov.

21): Complete pending paperwork. Contact important clients early in the day. You find romance when you least expect it! Socialize with those individuals who you can help advance your career, business prospects.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Subtlety is the key to success today. Do not try to force your ideas upon others. Personal relationships may be confusing. Watch your spending. Relax with good friends this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Use diplomacy to settle petty disagreements. A compromise is possible. Concentrate on essentials; let less urgent matters wait. Personal letter will bring pleasant news. Share glad tidings with partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A fine day for handling real estate transactions. Influential person will use his or her clout to advance your cause. You could be lucky in love! Avoid co-worker who likes to gossip.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Others may make extra demands today. Influential individuals willing to make a concession, but there could be strings attached. You may want to review the situation before committing yourself. Ask for a postponement.

the diamond suit was above reproach. Nevertheless, it couldn't possibly succeed! In light of West's pass, it was not possible for him to hold both a diamond honor and the ace of spades. Therefore, declarer had to keep West off lead to prevent the spade shift, so the only chance for the contract was that East held both high diamond honors.

After drawing trumps, declarer should lead a diamond from dummy and, if East follows with a low card, insert the jack. When that wins, declarer continues with the ace of diamonds and another. That sets up a long diamond in declarer's hand and saddles East with the lead. The king of spades is safe from attack and declarer will be able to discard one of dummy's spades on the thirteenth diamond. The fortunate lie of the cards prevents the defenders from making more than one spade trick and one diamond.

House against pistol-packing rights for Texas legislators. AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Defying Texas' gun-toting image, the House has voted overwhelmingly against giving legislators the same right policemen have to carry pistols. House members also turned down an effort to let retired Sheriff Jim Flournoy of La Grange — the inspiration for the fictional sheriff in "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas" — carry a gun. Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, speaker pro tem, seized on a routine bill for airport policemen as a vehicle for pistol-packing rights for legislators. Texas law allows only peace officers to carry pistols, and Washington's amendment would have added legislators to the list of peace officers. "I don't know about you, but from time to time I get threats on my life. The speaker has had some threats," Washington told the House. Speaker Bill Clayton later confirmed he has received threats, including one last week, but does not take them seriously or report them to the Department of Public Safety. "What could they do about it?" he said. Rep. Ted Lyon, D-Mesquite, tried to kid Washington's proposal to death, asking the House to imagine Washington "with two six-guns on his hips" in a high noon showdown with Rep. Frank Eikenburg, R-Plano. Washington and Eikenburg had words Monday night over a drug bill. "I'm sorry he thinks the amendment is in jest because I am serious about it," Washington said. Lyon forced a record vote on the amendment, and it failed, 35-105. Rep. Robert Saunders, D-La Grange, tried to designate retired sher-

Russ Tamblyn

Tamblyn to star in dinner theatre production

Actor Russ Tamblyn will appear in the comedy "Here Lies Jeremy Troy" at Country Squire Dinner Theatre, east of Odessa on Highway 80, starting Tuesday and continuing through May 23. Tamblyn was nominated for an Academy Award in 1958 for his performance in "Peyton Place." Other movie roles include "Samson and Delilah," "The Kid from Cleveland," "Retreat Hell," "Father of the Bride" and "Father's Little Dividend." He has acted and danced in the musicals "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" and "West Side Story." His Metro Goldwyn Mayer musicals include "Hit the Deck" opposite Debbie Reynolds, "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm" and the title role in "Tom Thumb." Currently he is co-starring with Dean Stockwell and Dennis Hopper in a musical comedy, "The Human Highway," scheduled to be released this year. "Here Lies Jeremy Troy" will run nightly except Mondays. Buffet food service begins at 6:30 p.m. with performance time at 8 p.m. except for Sundays, when food service starts at 6 p.m. and show time at 7:30 p.m.

Groundbreaking set for museum

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Paintings and sculpture depicting the lives of cowboys and Indians will gain new prominence this week with groundbreaking for a $3.7 million museum. The groundbreaking for the 14,366 square foot Cowboy Artists of America museum is set for 11:30 a.m. Friday. It is expected to be completed by Spring of 1983 and be a major tourist attraction of the scenic Texas Hill Country, housing some of the works of the 24 well known cowboy artist members of the CAA. Robert R. Shelton, co-chairman of the development council, says $2.2 million of the $3.7 million goal already has been raised to fund the project. Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater and former Texas Govs. John Connally and Dolph Briscoe are honorary co-chairmen of the fund-raising effort. Kerrville was chosen as the museum site because of it is situated in ranching country and is easily accessible on Interstate 10. It is an hour's drive west of San Antonio, which recently opened the largest art museum in the Southwest in a converted late 19th Century brewery, according to CAA spokesman Larry McDaniel. The groundbreaking ceremony, expected to attract 150 people including the 24 artists, comes at a time that interest in cowboy art is on the rise throughout the United States and abroad, and when western works are bringing record prices. As an example, 2,000 collectors from 30 states, Mexico and Canada gave a record $1,463,000 for 87 works sold by the 24 CAA members at their annual sale at the Phoenix Art Museum last year. The first sale in 1965 had totaled only $49,000. Christine Mollring, who operates the Trailside Galleries in Scottsdale, Ariz., and Jackson Hole, Wyo., said, "for the last five years, the investment value of Western Art is better than anything I know," noting one bronze sculpture has been sold for $135,000. Increasing acceptance of the art style was emphasized last year when the CAA sent several paintings, by invitation, to the 91st Salon of the Societe des Artistes Independents in Paris. The Cowboy Artists began primarily as a social group in Sedona, Ariz., in 1965 and the first meeting was primarily an informal gathering of five artists at a tavern. The group began an annual trail ride which is taking place this week at the 100-year-old Y.O. Ranch, located at Mountain Home, Texas, northwest of Kerrville. Many of the artists comprising the group are currently cowboys or former cowboys who set out to sculpt and paint slices of "a rough and dirty life," according to longtime member James Reynolds of Sedona. Their code is: "To perpetuate the memory and culture of the Old West as typified by (Frederic) Remington and (Charles) Russell; to insure authentic representation of the life of the West, as it was and is; to maintain standards of quality in contemporary Western painting, drawing and sculptures; and to help guide collectors of Western American Art." Their works are characterized by sweat-streaked but noble ranch hands and colorful titles such as "Packing the Pecos Trail," "I Ain't No Fence Builder," "Trouble on the Rio Del Norte," and "Saturday Night Whiskey, A Bunch of Sunday Morning Hurt." The art form grew out of the romantic illustrations appearing in turn-of-the-century magazines, but has had a difficult time gaining acceptance throughout the art world. "Critics knock us down all the time," Mrs. Molring said in defense of the growing art form. "They will just not recognize Western Art." "They say it's illustrative and blah, blah, blah. But we're really the avant-garde. They (Eastern art establishment) think they're avant-garde, but they're still going for dots and dashes that no one can understand or enjoy." "The Cowboy Artists of America Museum... will be a permanent home for the Cowboy Artists of America's works and memorabilia," said Jim Boren, president of the group. "It will include a Western Art library and a place for the Cowboy Artist members to hold classes and seminars. No other group of artists that I know of has had the wonderful opportunity to have their own museum."

Midland choirs compete in Odessa

ODESSA — The Region VI University Interscholastic League Junior High School Choir Concert and Sightreading Contest was held here recently at Permian High School. Three choirs from Midland schools participated. The Alamo Treble Choir, directed by Jill Williams, sang "Sing to the Lord Harvest" by William, "Buttermilk Hill" by Bacon and "Your Friend Shall be the Tall Wind" by Diemer. The choir received a Division I rating in concert and a Division II in sightreading. The MISD Combined Mixed Choir, composed of students from San Jacinto Junior High and Goddard Junior High, was directed by Marilyn Jones and Diann Berry. This choir presented a concert of "Psallite" by Praetorius and Greyson,

"Six Folk Songs No. 1" by Brahms and "Fa Una Canzona" by Vecchi. The choir received a Division II in concert and in sightreading. The Alamo Mixed Choir, directed by Ms. Williams, presented "An Appalachian Lament" by McCray, "There is a Lady" by Murray and "Never Tell Thy Love" by Bright. The choir was rated II in concert and II in sightreading.

Jews' trials postponed

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities in Kiev have postponed the trials of two Soviet Jews who have been trying to leave the Soviet Union, dissident sources said today. The trial of Vladimir Kislik, who has been seeking permission to emigrate since 1973, was delayed because of difficulties in finding him a lawyer, the sources said. It was not known when the trial would take place. Kislik, a nuclear energy specialist, had been expected to go on trial earlier this month in the Ukrainian capital on a charge of "hooliganism." His supporters have said he was arrested March 19 after leaving a Jewish festival and was accused of being drunk and misbehaving with a woman.

Stars to appear at Odessa mall

ODESSA — Susan Keith and William Gray Epsy of NBC-TV's daytime serial "Another World" will be at Odessa's Permian Mall Friday and Saturday. She plays the role of Cecile and he portrays Mitch.

New TV show strictly for idiots

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — You know what they say about inbreeding? It's true. Meet "Checking In," the idiot grandchild of "All in the Family." This unfortunate CBS homozygote comes to prime time out of "The Jeffersons," which came to prime time out of "All in the Family." "Checking In" is at least the fifth show with roots in "All in the Family" ("Maude," "The Jeffersons," "Good Times" and "Mr. Dooly" were the others.) "All in the Family" was drawn from the British comedy, "Til Death Do Us Part."

Auditions scheduled

Auditions for Midland Community Theatre's upcoming production of "On Golden Pond" will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday in the

The spinning off here is much the same as it was for "The Jeffersons," who moved uptown to a better life (and lesser gags) when they left Archie's Houser Street for their own show. A sassy maid came with the Jeffersons' new life, and it turned out that Marla Gibbs' Florence was the best thing about "The Jeffersons," which continues to be a ratings hit for CBS after seven years.

Thus, "Checking In," Florence's move to a better life (and lesser gags). She has found a job as maid supervisor in a ritzy hotel. Instead of trading insults with George Jefferson, who at least had the routine down, she goes at it with Larry Linville, the "M-A-S-H" drip who's now a mean hotel manager. Some samples of their clever word-duels: Florence: "You'd love it if I quit, wouldn't you?" Linville: "I'd love it so much I think I'd die!" Florence: "Oooh, that sounds so temptin'!" One of Florence's maids, Betty, I think her name is, offers a special treat for viewers who long for minstrel shows. When Florence tells the frightened maid there is no such thing as ghosts, the offensive thing rolls her eyes and replies, "Well, now, ah ain' sayin' they is, and ah ain' sayin' they ain'." Lawdy, where's Stepinfetchit? This is bargain-basement comedy here, created in the arrogant belief that viewers will buy anything that is in some way familiar. The spinoff technique may be a proven CBS method, but the workmanship has never been this sloppy. The jokes are obvious, the characters superficial. Marla Gibbs has a nice comic manner, but she's no faith healer. And this show needs a miracle.

'Masada' wins battle for ABC

NEW YORK (AP) — With a strong showing for "Dallas" and two new series, CBS placed seven shows in prime time's top 10, but ABC swept the week's ratings race with big audiences for its "Masada" miniseries, according to figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co. While the ever-popular "Dallas" led the pack, the concluding installment in the four-part ABC miniseries was the second highest-rated program of the week ending April 12. Part III of "Masada" was fourth in the ratings and Part II placed fifth. The opening installment finished seventh the week before. The showing helped boost ABC to the No. 1 position in the three-way competition for the second straight week, with an average rating of 19.2. CBS, the season's No. 1 network, finished second at 17.5, with NBC third — for the sixth straight week — at 14.9. The networks say that means in an average prime-time minute during the week, 19.2 percent of the nation's TV-equipped homes were tuned to ABC. Despite the high-audiences for "Masada," it came out only in seventh place for miniseries viewing. ABC's "Roots" remains the unchallenged leader. Meanwhile, audiences tuned in to two new series for CBS — "Private Benjamin" in third place, and "The Two of Us" in eighth. The rating for "Dallas," the top-rated show 16 of the last 23 weeks — was 30, three full points ahead of "Masada," Part IV, in second place. Nielsen says that means of all the homes in the country with television, 30 percent saw at least part of the most recent episode of "Dallas." Two other shows introduced this season, both from CBS, finished in the week's Top 20. "Magnum, P.I." in 16th place, and "Checking In" tied for 18th. CBS and ABC each had two programs among the five lowest rated. ABC's "Those Amazing Animals" was No. 60, followed by "That's My Line" and "Riker," both from CBS, an ABC movie, "Crazy Times," and "NBC Magazine."

Parents of missing children denounce agent's statement

Mike Twibell
...Statements denounced

ATLANTA (AP) — The mother of one of 23 young blacks slain here in the past 21 months has condemned an FBI agent's charge that parents killed some of the children saying the parents now are being looked at "like they did something wrong."

Willie Mae Mathis, mother of slain Jeffery Mathis and a member of the Committee to Stop Children's Murders, joined a chorus of denunciations of statements made Tuesday night by Mike Twibell, special agent in charge of the Macon FBI office.

Twibell, who has been among 30 FBI agents working on the missing and murdered children cases, told reporters after a speech to a Macon civic club that "some of those kids were killed by their parents."

None of the 23 slayings and two disappearances of young blacks since July 1979 has been solved, officials say, despite an around-the-clock investigation by a special task force.

Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown called Twibell's statements "unprofessional" and "uncalled for" and said, "We have no information at all to verify what he said, if he said that."

"When I know who committed the murders, I will have ample evidence to put that person in jail... At this point, we do not have sufficient evidence to arrest anyone or indict anyone in any of these cases," Brown said, adding, "We may have good ideas in many directions in several cases."

agent's remark was "very serious, having people looking at the parents like they did something wrong."

Such statements "were misleading the people, for one thing," Mrs. Mathis said. "They (the FBI) are saying they have evidence and suspects. Lee Brown turns around to say, 'No, that's not true.' If they have any information, they are being unfair to the parents. The parents should be the first to know."

FBI officials in Washington and Atlanta refused to comment Wednesday on Twibell's remarks, and Twibell could not be reached for a comment.

Twibell's remark came after a speech in which the agent defended FBI Director William Webster's statement Monday that three or four of the cases have been "substantially solved."

—FBI agents in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., questioned another man resembling a composite drawing of the man with whom 21-year-old Larry Rogers, the most recent victim, was last seen. Atlanta police spokesman Ben Sims said members of the task force had contacted the Florida authorities but were awaiting word from the FBI before deciding whether to dispatch task force members to question the man. —Police Chief George Napper and the United Youth Adult Conference announced an officially sanctioned watch.

Helicopter overturns on volcano

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — Six scientists and a pilot were healthy and "in good spirits" after a powerful gust of wind on Mount St. Helens overturned their helicopter, forcing them to walk three miles through snow to rescuers, officials said.

The wind was the strongest force on the volcanic mountain Wednesday. Earthquake activity dropped and the U.S. Geological Survey and the University of Washington announced that the latest eruption of the volcano "appears to be over."

The lava rock dome that had grown in the crater of the volcano since last Friday had stopped growing, indicating molten rock was no longer flowing up from the mountain, said Susan Russell-Robinson of the USGS.

Scientists were making their daily field studies Wednesday when a heavy gust pushed over their chartered helicopter, leaving them without transportation off the mountain.

Only Eric Heintz, pilot of the chartered helicopter, was on board when the aircraft was blown over. The seven arrived in Vancouver four hours later aboard two rescue helicopters.

Michael Doukas, 34, one of the USGS team, said scientists are always equipped with overnight gear, food and extra clothing.

"We are always prepared for that situation and hoping it won't come," he said. "But we were all pretty calm and joking around as we walked out."

He said the team stopped to have lunch and admire the sights while hiking to a point where helicopters from the 304th Air Rescue Squadron in Portland, Ore., could reach them.

The helicopter was left about a mile downhill of the crater awaiting a mechanical check, he said.

Before the accident, scientists were able to measure the lava dome in the crater. The mound of molten rock is 375 feet high, 1,200 feet wide, east to west, said Ms. Russell-Robinson.

An eruption Friday that sent steam and ash to an altitude of three miles was the sixth since the May 18 blast that left 61 people dead or missing.

Oregon wants country to pay off Civil War claims

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — The state of Oregon, figuring that 100 years is enough of a grace period, is dunning the United States for payment of Civil War claims totaling $1.3 million.

The state Senate voted unanimously Tuesday for a measure urging Congress to reimburse Oregon for "substantial expenses incurred in furnishing troops and aiding the United States in maintaining the common defense of the Oregon Trail, miners and settlers in the Civil War period."

State historian Cecil Edwards said Oregon ran up the bill when it mustered local residents to man garrisons against Indian attacks after federal troops pulled out to help fight the Confederacy.

Democratic Sen. E.D. Potts said the money plus interest comes to about $45 million, but the state is willing to settle for $1.3 million, today's equivalent of its expenses during the Civil War. "We are offering Congress a bargain-basement type of settlement," Potts told the Senate. "Certainly more than 100 years seems to me to be an excessive grace period."

Oregon replaced the withdrawn federal troops during the Civil War with about 1,800 men, including one regiment of infantry, one regiment of cavalry and a detachment of infantry.

The state's efforts to make the federal government pay seemed headed for success at the turn of the century, when the case went to the U.S. Court of Claims. A headline in the Morning Oregonian of June 30, 1906, stated: "Oregon Claims Soon To Be Paid."

In 1908, the court agreed that part of Oregon's claim should be reimbursed. But the court said the state's demands for repayment of bounties and extra wages used to entice men to borne by the federal government. No payment was ever made for any of the claim, Edwards said. Congress never passed an appropriation bill authorizing payment.

And as for help from the 1909 congressional delegation — well, three of its four members were under indictment for land fraud, says the attorney general's office, and that didn't help matters.

The office contends the Oregon troops served a national purpose: "They built forts, occupied posts on Indian reservations and pursued marauding Indians through the largely unexplored and unknown interior."

Oregon made attempts over the years to get the money, but the claim lay forgotten until Edwards found old newspaper clippings referring to the Civil War expenses and renewed the effort.

He said Civil War claims totaling $44 million had been paid by 1892 to other states. He said Oregon is the only state to make a claim that was never reimbursed.

At Edwards' instigation, a bill was introduced in Congress in 1977 seeking payment of Oregon's claim. It never got out of committee.

However, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., supported the bill and is now chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee. Bob Packwood, the state's other U.S. senator, chairs the Commerce Committee.

"The senator has supported that effort and will continue to," said Lon Fendall, field representative for Hatfield. "It may be that a combination of a couple of committee chairmen on the Senate side could help this year. It's worth a try."

Monument commemorates persecution of homosexuals

By BRENDAN BOYLE
The Guardian

THE HAGUE — The pink triangles that homosexuals were forced to wear in the Nazi concentration camps of World War II form the basic design concept of the world's first monument to the victims of homosexual persecution. The monument will be constructed in Amsterdam next year.

"We have checked our claim very carefully and we are certain that this monument will be the first to commemorate the persecution of homosexuals," said Peter Dros of the Homo Monument Foundation in Amsterdam.

"Primarily, it will be a monument to the homosexual victims of the Nazi persecution during Hitler's occupation of the Netherlands," he said, "but it will also be a reminder that homosexuals still face persecution in places like Iran and the United States."

The foundation was established in 1979, after a suggestion of a monument by the "Homo Group" in the Pacifist-Socialist Party. Since then, however, the initiative has been supported by the Labor, Liberal, Communist and Radical parties.

An invitation to join a design competition specified that the monument be "a sign that should inspire the (homosexual) movement of today in its fight against contempt, discrimination and oppression. It must prove that one is not alone as a homosexual man or woman, girl or boy."

The winner of the design competition is 36-year-old lesbian sculptress Karin Daan, who said she was attracted to the project through her own sexuality and by the nature of the selected site outside

"The monument comprises three equilateral triangles of pink marble, each with sides of 10 yards and all mutually connected by strips of the same material set in the ground," she said.

According to Dros, the monument will be a celebration of homosexuality, an inspiration in the current fight for an equal place in society and a reminder of the atrocities of the past.

The plan was approved by the Amsterdam City Council, he said, and some of the estimated $66,000 cost had already been raised. Further subsidies were expected from government funds and from a variety of private institutions.

The monument plan has drawn little criticism in the Netherlands, but Daan said her involvement had caused her first experience of discrimination: her regular printer was rude and angry when he concluded from her design that she was a lesbian, she said. (Distributed by Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service)

Nancy's proud of purple heart

WASHINGTON (AP) — A "clearly touched" Nancy Reagan has hung a purple heart sent to the president on a wall of the second-floor living room in the White House.

Ishmael Franco of Fremont, Calif., sent President Reagan one of his three decorations for wounds received in combat, saying "I believe you deserve this purple heart more than I do."

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Wednesday that both the president and the first lady were "clearly very touched by the gesture."

Franco, 35, was born in Guadalupe, Mexico, and drafted into the Marines in 1965.
