

All Around The Town

By Mary Ann Sarchet

We were in Lubbock Wednesday afternoon, and met a man from Roswell who said that he had known a man from the Silverton-Turkey area. He said the man was a barber, but he couldn't think of his name. When he asked his wife, she offered a name, and he told her "Not that one." She asked him if he was thinking of the "tall, skinny" fellow, and he told her he was. Finally, he said the man's name was "George Wayne Rampley." Isn't it funny what a small world it is?

Noticed the engagement announcement of Coach Roger Whipkey and Miss Muffin Davis in the Lubbock newspaper Thursday. She teaches at Springlake-Earth School, and he coaches at New Deal where he went after he left Silverton. They plan to be married August 3 at Sudan.

James Davis delivered the first load of new-crop wheat to South Plains Gin, Inc. Monday, June 3. The test weight was 60.5.

Trail Day event winners at Quitaque included some Silverton residents. Ziegler Pump/Jerry Miller won first place in the antique vehicles division with a 1972 Cheyenne pickup.

Dwight Ramsey won third place in the Poker Run.

Tom Justice had the Best of Show in the bikes.

Mike Pigg participated in the Race Car Burnout.

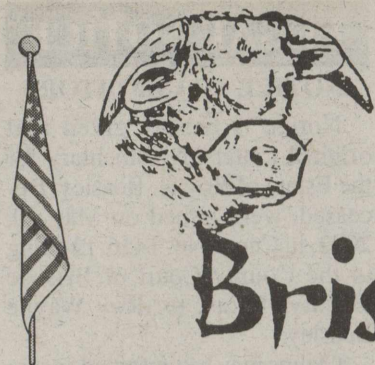

TABC agents assessed graduation parties in Tulia recently and nearly 40 young people were cited for minor in possession and some adults who were chaperoning received Class A misdemeanor citations.

The TABC officials saw a minor in possession in the front yard of a home where a large party was in progress, giving them probable cause to enter the premises.

The law says a minor commits an offense if he is in the same area as an alcoholic beverage without a parent present.

Can watermelon combat cancer and heart disease?

Studies show that the vegetable has even more health benefits than previously known. Lycopene is a naturally occurring antioxidant found in the red pulp of watermelons. It is known to combat heart disease, cancer, and other health problems.

USDA scientists have found that lycopene levels in watermelons are similar to those in raw tomatoes. Scientists test bioavailability, which tells how well the body digests, uses, and stores the lycopene.

Raw tomato has low bioavailability, but this increases through heat-processing products such as tomato juices and sauces.

But, watermelons don't need to be heat-treated to increase the available lycopene. In fact, some watermelons are good for you and without sacrificing variety in your

The Sin Of Omission

Periodically, it is a good thing for everyone to examine their conscience and to reflect on their faults and wrongdoings. The Bible tells us that we all have sinned and have come short of the glory of God. Calling to mind our shortcomings, and asking for God's forgiveness, are necessary in order to become a better person and to receive God's blessing.

Although it usually is quite easy to remember the tangible wrongs that we have done, we often forget about the sin of neglecting to do the good things that we know we should do. God's Golden Rule, "to do unto others as we would want them to do unto us", involves our helping others whenever we are able. Being a good friend means getting involved, and the old adage that "actions speak louder than words," is good advice in helping us to avoid the sin of omission.

Therefore to him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin.

The High Plains Typical mix of "haves and have-nots" are once again trying to figure out just where the 2002 crop stands as the area arrives at the end of its traditional planting period June 10, which marks the Federal Crop Insurance Corp final planting date for cotton in most of the region's southern counties. Northern counties have final cotton planting dates of May 31 or June 5.

The "have-nots" are mostly non-irrigated producers in the southern-most counties of the High Plains. It should be noted, however, that there are still some non-irrigated acres north of Lubbock in the same boat as their brethren to the south.

As a group, they are wondering if they will have a chance to tap into relatively good sub-soil moisture that could help establish a crop. So far the lack of timely "planting" rains to occur over a large part of the region during April and May continues to be a serious problem.

With weather forecasts not predicting an increased chance of rainfall over the near term, most of West Texas' non-irrigated crop is on the verge of being denied another chance at establishing a crop and utilizing the tantalizingly close sub-soil moisture that lies underneath powdery dry seedbeds.

With no alternative but to take a chance on catching an isolated rain event adequate to germinate and sprout their seed, dryland cotton producers across the region have been busting beds and planting into dry dirt in an effort to give themselves the chance at a 2002 cotton crop and to meet requirements of Federal Crop Insurance policies that require seed to be in the ground by the final planting date for their county.

On the other side of the spectrum are the "haves" who have been on the receiving end of recently sparked thunderstorms that rumbled across the central section of the region in the past two weeks. These "haves" in some instances may not be much better off than the "have-nots" since the storms brought a pretty fair amount of hail, wind and flooding along with them.

Damage reports have been slow in coming, however. The first storm, which came shortly on the heels of the Memorial Day weekend may not have been quite as problematic as first thought due to a quick return of warm weather and no wind immediately afterward.

Also, a pretty large part of acreage that was lost was probably replanted to take advantage of the moisture and the fact that the calendar was still somewhat favorable to cotton.

This week's storm, however, may be another story with damaged cotton less likely to get replanted due to the passage of the final planting date for crop insurance and the fact that producers probably will opt to switch to a shorter season crop like grain sorghum.

Estimates of crop damage from a variety of sources, including Texas Cooperative Extension and the Texas Boll Weevil Eradication Foundation, indicate somewhere between 100,000 and 125,000 acres of cotton were lost in the two storms.

Additional losses due to disease or other causes are not available at this time. Also, the potential loss of a significant number of dryland cotton acres still looms large for the region.

CROP INSURANCE RULES FOR APPRAISALS

The bottom line for producers whose crops are emerged and growing is that the rules have not changed in regard to Federal Crop Insurance and the timing of appraisals after the crop has sustained damage.

For emerged crops the normal rules apply in regard to asking for and receiving an adjustment. Producers can begin receiving adjustments seven days after crop damage occurs.

However, a good bit of confusion has been created due to a new Crop Insurance rule covering how non-emerged crops are treated this year. This new rule adds a 15-day waiting period after the late planting period, which runs for 15 days after the final planting date.

Producers who plant into dry soil and do not receive enough moisture to achieve a stand by the end of the late planting period have to wait an additional 15 days before adjustments can be made.

In a nutshell, a producer whose dry planted crop has not achieved a stand by the end of the late planting period (15 days after the final planting date) will not be able to receive an adjustment at that time. For 2002 they will have to wait an additional 15 days before any adjustment will be made.

Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. and the National Cotton Council are in the process of seeking the repeal of the additional waiting period.

Water gardens have become increasingly popular in home landscapes. But, in order to ensure long-term enjoyment, the proper design and management are essential.

Location, size and type are the first things to consider. People might also consider locating the water garden so that it can be seen from the house. Proper construction and water quality are important considerations as are fish and plant selection.

Plants will add beauty to the pond, but they are also effective fillers and nutrient absorbers. Therefore, if both fish and plants are used then selections should be made to work with both.

Once built, water quality must be maintained. Poor quality water not only looks less attractive, but it can harm the animals and plants as well.

Continued enjoyment depends on how much the owner commits to understanding the inner workings of the water garden's ecosystem.

More information about creating a water garden ecosystem can be found on the web or by consulting a landscape professional.

Thought makes the whole dignity of man; therefore endeavor to think well, that is the only morality.

Cotton Market weekly

A Service Provided by Plains Cotton Cooperative Association

Cotton futures on the New York Cotton Exchange remained well supported this week by consistent buying patterns recently shown by trade players in the new crop months as well as by the weakening U.S. currency which attracts potential foreign buyers.

"Because it makes our cotton exports cheaper to foreign buyers and because the weaker dollar encourages foreign consumption of cotton, the strength of the U.S. dollar is the single driving factor for higher cotton futures prices," one analyst explained.

In other news, market observers were somewhat surprised by a lower export sales report released by USDA May 24. According to the department, net export sales of 49,600 bales of 2001-02 U.S. cotton in the week ended then, were 23% below the previous week's sales and 67% less than the four-week average. Featured buyers included India, China and Thailand.

Export shipments for the same week totaled 170,200 bales, a 3% fall from the previous week and 14% less than the four-week average. Major destinations include Mexico, Taiwan and Turkey.

Although the trading week was shortened to four days due to a long weekend in observance of Memorial Day, cotton buyers and sellers still were active on the spot cotton scene on the week ended May 30. Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas producers sold 11,185 bales of cotton online, an increase from the previous week's sales that totaled 10,185 bales. Prices received by growers selling their cotton online ranged from 30.63 to 33.35 cents per pound compared to a range of 26.74 to 31.57 cents per pound the prior week.

Meanwhile, most of the states in the U.S. Cotton Belt reported 86% or more completion of planting for the current season's crop. Texas lags behind the country with 66% of the crop planted. Now with the majority of the nation's cotton in the ground, the market's attention is consumed by weather concerns.

In late May, Oklahoma cotton producers reported cotton producers reported better moisture conditions than they had seen in several years, but unseasonably cold weather had slowed crop progress. Although more acres were planted to cotton this season, a larger cotton crop in the state will depend heavily on warmer weather and timely rain.

Most growers in South Texas still are battling drought conditions. Acres planted to cotton in the Texas Lower Rio Grande Valley (LRGV) have plummeted this season as moisture conditions were not favorable due to a serious lack of rain in the region. Therefore, traders have only a marginal crop outlook for LRGV cotton.

Welcome rains of between 1.0 and 4.0 inches fell May 29 in South Texas with the heaviest amounts recorded in the LRGV, according to Cotton Outlook. Although the precipitation will improve plant health in irrigated fields, it arrived too late to benefit the dryland crop. Many irrigated stands have been stunted by excessive salt in the ground, and the rainfall will help leach the salt out of the soils.

Scattered showers remain in the near-term forecast which may ease drought-like conditions. Water supplies in some LRGV irrigation districts are expected to be depleted soon, and the rainfall will reduce the need to water. Timely rains, however, will be required during the remainder of the growing season to ensure average yields on ir-

Camp Alphonie is Seeking Campers

Camp Alphonie, an overnight summer camp for children with cancer and cancer survivors, is accepting reservations. The camp will be held August 4-9 at Ceta Canyon Methodist Camp south of Amarillo near Canyon, Texas.

Children ages seven through fourteen who have cancer or have had cancer are welcome to attend Camp Alphonie, and a sibling may accompany each camper. Camp Alphonie is free to campers, thanks to individual, business and civic sponsors who underwrite expenses. Sponsoring a camper costs $250.

Established in 1988, Camp Alphonie offers all the normal activities of summer camp including indoor and outdoor sports and recreation, arts and crafts, swimming and much more. The camp provides special facilities, diets and trained staff to accommodate the needs of cancer patients.

The parents of Camp Alphonie residents also receive a much-needed dose of relaxation and fun as they attend a free, concurrent parents' camp. While the children enjoy the outdoors, parents spend a week at an Amarillo hotel being treated to a variety of diversions such as special dinners and visits to area attractions. Parents also benefit from guest speakers and activities that can assist the family in coping with their situation.

"We plan Camp Alphonie and Parents' Camp to give everyone in the family a break," says Camp Alphonie President Robin Johnson. "This fun has a serious purpose in that it helps redirect attention back to the fam-iligated land. The Corpus Christi area also is experiencing dry conditions; however, with timely rain, farmers could expect a fair cotton crop. Cotton producers in the Texas Upper Coastal Bend Region were late in planting their crop, but adequate moisture has been received and prospects for the cotton crop are excellent, according to area analysts.

ily. It's important for families to establish a quality of life that can be maintained through the time of treatment and beyond."

Camp Alphonie is not limited to children from the Amarillo area. In fact, campers come from all over Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma. Volunteer board members, on-site camp directors and counselors and generous community volunteers conduct Camp Alphonie. Camp counselors are high school graduates or college students--some are even cancer survivors.

Because of laws governing the confidentiality of cancer patients, Camp Alphonie cannot contact eligible campers without their permission. Parents of eligible campers are encouraged to contact Camp Alphonie by writing to P. O. Box 3819, Amarillo, TX 79116-3819.

Preregistration is encouraged prior to June 30.
