TEXAS SMALL GRAIN CROPS ARE HARD HIT BY DISEASES

Small grain diseases during the current year have cost Texas producers millions of dollars. A study of the situation made by agronomy and plant pathology research workers of the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station showed the losses to be the greatest for any year since 1949, approximately 18 million dollars.

Harlan Smith, extension plant pathologist, said the loss in bushels of grain was actually only a part of the accumulated loss to farmers. Disease caused severe lodging in many fields and this in combination with other diseases greatly increased the harvesting costs. Test weights were lowered with a reduction in selling prices, and much of the grain had a low germination. Oats which were damaged by Helminthosporium were especially low in germination tests.

Smith pointed out that an estimated 10.5 percent of the state's wheat crop was lost to diseases. Taken as a group, leaf, stem and stripe rusts accounted for 5.6 percent of the losses. The planting of resistant varieties will materially aid in curbing these losses, he said. An estimated 4.8 percent of the losses were charged to Septoria tritici, a fungus disease, for which no controls are known. Recommended seed treatments, added Smith, should be used.

Oat growers lost an estimated 28.2 percent of their crops to diseases. Seed treatment, resistant varieties and crop rotation could have materially cut the 13.6 percent loss to Helminthosporium, a seed borne disease. The loss in bushels amounted to over 7,000,000. Crown and stem rust together caused losses estimated at 13.2 percent. Once resistant varieties are available, Smith said losses could be controlled. Seed treatment is recommended for controlling smut which caused a loss of about 134,000 bushels.

Barley losses were estimated at just under 6.5 percent with Helminthosporium the worst offender. Seed treatment and crop

Heating Equipment Should Be Checked, Gas Manager Says

Now is the time for homemakers to have their gas heating equipment inspected and adjusted for winter use, it was pointed out today by Gordon Goldston, Lone Star Gas Company manager. He urged people not to depend on the first cold day to remind them to call for such service.

"Local plumbers and Lone Star," he said, "receive hundreds of calls for service within a period of a few hours on the day cold weather makes its first appearance. This means considerable delay in filling many individual service orders."

He suggested that users of gas floor furnaces, wall heaters, unit heaters, central heating plants and other gas heating equipment arrange now to have them inspected and adjusted. "In this way," he added, "the comfort of the entire family will be assured during the cold weather that is sure to come. And the homemaker will have this important service completed and out of the way."
