"My God!" he will roar. "Look who's learning who how to do sohat! My God! The blind leading the blind!"

It was once said, Sergeant Goldsmith, by the eminent vegetarian George Bernard Shaw that he who can, does; he who can't, teaches.

This, dear sergeant, is my contribution to the army and to posterity. Please go away and leave w young people to our studies.

If I were giving advice to the boys who have already been called into the Army and will go away in a few days, I'd sum it all up in this: "Paint the town red for the rest of your civilian week. Pay no attention to the advice that is being poured into your defenseless ears for twenty-four hours a day. Form an idea of what Army life is going to be like. Leave your mind open.

Two weeks from now, you will be thoroughly disgusted with your new tob. You will have been herded from place to place, you will have wandered in nakedness and bewilderment through miles of physical examination, you will look upon privacy and individuality as things you left behind you in a golden civilian society.

Probably you will have developed a murderous hatred for at least one sergeant and two corporals. You will writhe and fume under what you consider brutality and sadism, and you will wonder how an enlightened netton can permit such atrocity in ! the army. Take it easy, brother; take it easy.

Keep this one beam of radiant hope constantly before you: The first three weeks are the hardest.

For those first three-or possibly four-weeks, you will bear the greatnew routine. In those first three weeks you will get almost the full required dose of confusion and misery. You will be afraid to leave your barracks lest the full wrath of the war department fall upon you.

"You don't get anywhere by buying soda pop or beer for your ser-

You will find yourself unbelievably awkward and clumsy when you try to learn the drills and the knowledge of this awkwardness will make you even more awkward. Unless you relax you can be very unhappy during those first three weeks.

When you are assigned to your basic training center you'll really get into it. You'll drill and drill, a little more each day, and when the sergeant tries to correct or advise you, you'll want to tear his throat out with your bare hands. You'll be sick of the sound of his voice before an hour has passed. The only comfort I can give you is the knowledge that the poor sergeant is having a heliuva time too. He knows what you're thinking and he can't do anything about it,

You'll be inoculated against smallpox, typhoid, tetanus, yellow fever, eneumonia, and practically all the other ills that flesh is heir to. You'll be taught foot drill, the handling of a rifle, the use of the gas mask, the peculiarities of military vehicles, and the intricacies of military cour-

Most of what you are taught will impress you as utterly useless nonsense, but you'll learn it.

You'll be initiated into the mysteries of the kitchen police, probably before you've been in the Army for a week. Possibly two days later, you'll be sent on a ration detail to handle huge bundles of groceries. You'll haul coal and trash and ancient green eyeshade and began neuvers, with my hay fever! Oy!" "Just look at it," he said on the way to the bus station, "maybe a eigarette, "it beats the hell out of posthumous medal my grandchilme what fate did mean for you, Dr. dren will get. Private Melvin Piel, Garinger down at the high school who gave his life valiantly and through the nose from hay fever yet. Sneezing to glory."

The bus station on that morning weren't destined to be worth a hoot in July was a pathetic picture. Four large groups of boys, reconciled to the grim and gruesome life ahead of them, were bade farewell by wailing mothers and nobly suffering girl friends who had come down to see their loved ones off in a blaze of pathos. It was pretty terrible.

The buses swung out of the terminal, through midtown, and out toward the road to Fayetteville. The boys began to feel better, shouted farewells to startled girls on the street and finally broke into raucous song. Four flowers of the nation started a blackjack game on a suitcase in the back of the bus.

Brother Piel's spirits brightened a little. His smooth voice found its way through the hay fever and emerged in song. "It's a lovely day tomorrow," he sang. "Tomorrow is a lovely day.

"Look at me tomorrow," he said. breaking off suddenly, "Hay foot, Private Piel. Straw foot, Private Piel. Hay and straw and look at what I've got. Hay fever yet! Oy.

"Maybe what I'd better do when I get there, I'd better tell them I'd like to go north. They could use a good man in Alaska."

"The South Pole is your meat," "That's it! The South Pole! Boy

I'm going to love the Army!" The tumult and the shouting died about halfway to Fayetteville. The boys became quiet and thoughtful.

CHAPTER II

A soldier stuck his head through the door of our new dormitory and gave a sharp whistle. "Nine o'clock!" he yelled. "Lights out and no more noise! Go to sleep!"

"It has been, withal, a very busy day," I said to Piel, who was buried with his hay fever in the next "It sure withal has," he said.

'What a day! What a place! What a life! With my eyes wide open I'm dreaming!" "It's been a little hellish out to day," I agreed, "although it could have been worse. We actually saw a corporal and he didn't cuss us. We have eaten Army food twice, and, except for the haphazard way the pineapple was thrown toward the peas, it wasn't horrifying."

"I am broken and bleeding." moaned Piel. "Classification tests, typing tests, medical examinations. I think I walked eighteen miles through those medical examinations. It's a good thing this is July. I would have frozen in my treks with all that walking and exposure. Nothing I had on, except a thin little lodine number on my chest."

"Funny thing about the medical examination," a voice broke in from you're afraid you'll pass. When you go through the examinations, you're afraid you won't." "I noticed that," I said. "I don't have any special hankering for a soldier's life, but I thought when I was going through the hoops this morning that this would be a helluva time for them to back out." "The little fellow who slept down at the end got sent back," said a loud whisper from across the room. "One of his legs was shorter than the other. He's a lucky dog." "I'll bet he doesn't think so," said

Piel. "At this stage of the game. I'm glad it was him instead of me." A dark form showed itself in the doorway. "I told you guys to shaddap and go to sleep. Do it!" A respectful silence filled the room for three minutes. "Look at me," said Piel, "Won't the folks in Atlanta be proud when they get my letter! Me, Melvin Piel, I'm a perfect physical specimen." Big Jim Hart, the football star whom I had known in high school, spoke up. "Don't go Hollywood about it, Piel. Just remember, Hargrove's a perfect specimen too. And just two weeks ago, when we were waiting out in front of the armory for the draft board examiners to get there, he had one foot in the grave."

"And the other foot?" "That's the one he keeps in his

"Yessir," said Piel, "the Army makes men.'

The discussion was interrupted by the reappearance of the soldier. "If youse blankety-blanked little dashdashes don't shut your cuss-cuss yaps and get the blankety-blank to sleep, I'm gonna come back up here and make yez scrub the whole blankety-blanked dash-dash cusscuss floor with a blankety-blank toothbrush. Now shaddap!"

So we quietly went to sleep. This morning we took the Oath. One of the boys was telling me later that when his brother was inducted in Alabama, there was a tough old sergeant who was having an awful time keeping the men quiet. "Gentlemen," he would beseech them, "Quiet, please!" They were quiet

This morning—our first morning in the Recruit Reception Center—began when we finished breakfast and started cleaning up our squadroom. A gray-haired, fatherly old private, who swore that he had been demoted from master sergeant four times, lined us up in front of the barracks and took us to the dispensary.

If the line in front of the mess hall dwindled as rapidly as the one at the dispensary, life would have loveliness to sell above its private consumption stock. First you're fifteen feet from the door, then (whiff) you're inside. Then you're standing between two orderlies and the show is on.

The one on my left scratched my arm and applied the smallpox virus. The only thing that kept me from keeling over was the hypodermic needle loaded with typhoid germs, which propped up my right arm.

From the dispensary we went to a huge warehouse of a building by the railroad tracks. The place measured necks, waists, inseams, hends, and feet.

My shoe size, the clerk yelled down the line, was ten and a half. "I beg your pardon," I prompted, "I wear a size nine."

"Forgive me," he said, a triffe weary, "the expression is 'I wore a size nine.' These shoes are to walk in, not to make you look like Cinderella. You say size nine; your foot says ten and a half."

We filed down a long counter picking up our allotted khaki and denims, barrack bags and raincoats, mess kits and tent halves. Then we were led into a large room, where we laid aside the vestments of civil life and donned our new garments.

While I stood there, wondering what I was supposed to do next, an attendant caught me from the rear and strapped to my shoulders what felt like the Old Man of the Mountain after forty days.

"Straighten up, soldier," the at-tendant said, "and git off the floor. That's nothing but a full field pack, such as you will tote many miles before you leave this man's army. Now I want you to walk over to that ramp and over it. That's just to see if your shoes are comfortable.' "With these Oregon boots and this burden of misery," I told him firmly, "I couldn't even walk over to the thing. As for climbing over it, not even an alpenstock, a burro train, and two St. Bernard dogs complete with brandy could get me There was something in his quiet, steady answering glance that reassured me. I went over the ramp in short order. On the double, think the Army calls it. From there we went to the theater, where we were given intelligence tests, and to the classification office, where we were interviewed by patient and considerate "And what did you do in civil life?" my corporal asked me. "I was feature editor of the Charlotte News."

"And just what sort of work did you do, Private Hargrove? Just give me a brief idea." Seven minutes later, I had finished answering that question. "Let's just put down here, 'Editorial worker.' " He sighed compassionately. "And what did you do before all that?"

I told him. I brought in the publicity work, the soda-jerking, the theater ushering, and the printer's deviling.

"Private Hargrove," he said, "the army is just what you have needed to ease the burdens of your existence. Look no farther, Private Hargrove, you have found a home."

This was a lovely morning. We began at daybreak and devoted all the time until noon to enjoying the beauties of nature. We had a drill sergeant to point them out to us. We marched a full twenty miles without leaving the drill field. Lunch, needless to say, was deli-

We fell into bed, after lunch, determined to spend the afternoon in dreamland. Two minutes later, that infernal whistle blew. Melvin Piel, guardhouse lawyer for Company A. explained it all on the way downstairs. We were going to be assigned to our permanent stations. I fell in and a corporal led us off down the street. I could feel the California palm trees fanning my face. We stopped at Barracks 17 and the corporal led us inside.

"Do we go to California, corporal?" I asked. "Naah," he said. "Where do we go?" I asked him, "To the garbage rack," he said. "Double quick." He thumbed Johnny Lisk and me to the back of the barracks.

little disappointed.

At the garbage rack we found three extremely fragrant garbage cans. Outside, we found more. Lisk and I, citizen-soldiers, stared at them. The overcheerful private to whom we were assigned told us. When you finish cleaning those, I want to be able to see my face in

"There's no accounting for tastes," Lisk whispered. Nevertheless, we cleaned them and polished them and left them spick and span. "Now take 'em outside and paint 'em," said the private. "White. Git the black paint and paint 'HGCO-RRC' on both sides of all of them!"

"Wouldn't something pastel look better?" The sun was affecting the private "I think you're right," he said. Se we painted them cream and lettered them in brilliant orange.

The straw-boss private woke up, yawned and went away, telling us what would happen if we did likewise. He returned soon in a truck. He motioned peremptorily to us and we loaded the cans into the truck. Away we went to headquarters company-and painted more garbage ans. It was definitely suppertime

"Now can we go home, Private Dooley, sir?" asked Lisk. I looked at Lisk every time the blindness was tired. The private sighed wearily, "Git in the truck," he said. Away we went back to our street. We stopped in front of our barracks and Private Dooley dismounted. "The truck driver," he said, "would appreciate it if you boys would go and help him wash the truck."

We sat in the back of the truck and watched the mess hall fade away behind us. Two, three, four miles we left it behind us. We had to wait ten minutes before we could get the wash-pit. It took us fifteen minutes to wash the truck. By the time we got back to the mess hall, we were too tired to eat. But we

On the way to our barracks we met Yardbird Fred McPhail, neat and cool, on his way to the recreation hall. "Good news, soldiers," said Yardbird McPhail. "We don't

Award Marksman Medal

CAMP SANTA ANITA, Calif. The medal of Marksman in rifle shooling is now being worn by Pvt. Fred D. Morgan, formerly of Haskell, because of his accuracy on the range at the West Coast Ordnance Training Center.

Ordnance soldiers are classified as noncombatants, but the nature of modern warfare demands that every man know to defend himself against attack. And even though Pvt. Morgan has as his main job the servicing of The Line with the weapons, ammunition, and the vehicles of war, he will now be able to fight the enemy wherever he will be met.

In compiling the score that enables him to wear the medal of Marksman, Pvt. Morgan fired for record from four positions, standing, kitting, kneeling, and prone Half of Pvt. Morgan's record shooting was done, at slow fire ,half at rapid fire.

Pvt. Morgan was employed in civilian life by the Arcadia News Co., Brownwood, Texas. He attended school at Haskell High School. He is the son of W. T. Morgan living on Rt 3, Haskell,

You Are Buying Future Freedom When You Buy to Bomb Tokyo!

WAR BONDS and STAMPS are now building the mystery ship, "Shangri-la" to Bomb Tokio again. From its flat topped decks, Amercan planes will fly over Tokio, and when their mission is fulfilled - the city will lie in smouldering ruins. Then the whole world will know that the extra change from our pockets avenged murder and saved countless other men from the tortures of barbarism. The world will feel the power of democracy crushing the forces of treachery with the money of a free people. Every man, woman and child has a job to do . . . to help build the "Shangri-la" that will re-bomb the Japs.

DO YOUR PART NOW . . . BUY ANOTHER WAR BOND, AND PLACE IT IN A SAFETY DEPOSIT BOX . . . WE HAVE THEM TO RENT AT A NOMINAL COST.

tell you that jelly and jam are far more delicious when freshly made than at any other time.

Blackberries, blueberries, boysenberries, raspberries, elderberriescan them all and others, too, with little or no sugar. Sugar gives them better flavor and more calories, but If you prefer cold packing, fill a jar about half full with raw berhas nothing to do with keeping quali-

Berries are too precious to waste and none will be wasted if you will see to it that every step taken is the right one. First of all, wash, rinse and examine your jars. Be sure to inspect the top edges of those to be sealed with glass top seal or two-piece vacuum seal clo sures because top seals refuse to work unless tops of the jars are perfect. Cover jars, glass lids, and rinc caps with luke-warm water, heat to boiling and keep hot until needed. Wash and rinse rubbers and vacuum seal lids and drop them in boiling water—they don't need boiling unless you plan to do old-fashioned open kettle canning—then they must be boiled a few minutes to Every berry must be fresh, sound, ripe, and firm. Wash them carefully and then take your choice of canning methods.

Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director of Ball Brothers Company, prefers to hot-pack berries. This is how it is done. Place berries in a wide, shallow pan; add one-half cup sugar, or less, for each quart of berries; set the pan over low heat and simmer until the berries heat through and the sugar dissolves (remember you don't have to use any sugar); pour the hot berries into clean, hot jars and process five minstes in hot water-bath canner.

IF YOU HAVE NO CANNER, MAKE ONE

'All authorities on home canning advise that non-acid vegetables be canned by processing (cooking in jars) in a steam pressure cooker because a pressure cooker is the only household utensil that can retain a much hotter than boiling temperature. High temperatures are desirable when canning beans, peas, corn, greens, etc., because they insure more certain destruction of bacteria and * because the canning can be done more quickly. But," says Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director of Ball Brothers Company, who heartily approves using a pressure cooker whenever possible, "the time is at hand when we must be practical. Don't worry if you can't buy a pressure cooker for surely you can find a wash boiler, lard can, baby bath tub or some deep container in which water can be boiled. Tack a few strips of wood together to make a rack or platform to hold the jars about one-half inch from the bottom of the container. Find something, even if it has to be a board, to use as a lid. Then you will have a waterbath canner for those Victory garden vegetables.

"You are afraid to eat vegetables canned that way? Nonsense! A lot of folks who say a water bath can't be used were raised on vegetables canned by that method. But let's get three things clear before we go any further: first, there have been a few instances of poisoning from eating canned vegetables; second, all such danger can be avoided by boiling the canned vegetables; second, all such danger can be avoided by boiling the canned vegetables 15 minutes before tasting or serving—they should be re-boiled before serving if left from one meal to the next; third, a pressure cooker is not a guarantee against spoilage. There will be spoilage if the pressure gauge registers too low or if poor judgment is used in the selection, preparation, and packing of food into the jars. And don't let anybody tell you charate.

"Now, back to the water bath. The water should be steaming but not boiling when the jars are lowered into it and deep want to cover the tops of the jars for or more inches. No, water want into the jars if directions are being to the part of the jars for or more inches. No, water want into the jars if directions are being to the part of the jars if directions are being the part of the jars if directions are being the part of the jars if directions are being the part of the jars if directions are being the jars the jars into the jars if directions are being the part of the jars into the jars if directions are being the part of the jars into the jars if directions are being the part of the part of the jars into the jars if directions are being the part of the

to boiling as quickly as possible and kept boiling steadily throughout the canning period

"Any jar suitable for use in home canning (and only those with names lettered on them are suitable) may be used for water-bath processing. Mason jars may be sealed with onepiece zinc cap and rubber-if you can find the caps-with glass top seal, or with two-piece vacuum seal caps. Glass top seal closures and vacuum caps seal on the top edge of the jar, therefore it is necessary vacuum caps seal on the top edge of the jar, therefore it is necessary to make sure the top edges of the jars are even, smooth, and perfect in every respect. The bands are screwed down tight on the vacuum seals as soon as the jars are filled to within from one to one-half inch of the top, and should not be tightened again. Zinc caps are screwed down on the rubber and then loosened alightly. Bands for glass top seals are screwed down and then loosened. This tightening and loosening is called 'partly sealing' and should always be done before jurs are placed in a canner. Seals are completed by tightening caps or bands immediately after processing.

"Then there is the jar with a glass lid and rubber ring held in place with wires—it is ideal for canning, especially when atted with high - tension, stretch - proof, steel wire. It is partly sealed before and completely sealed after processing.

GEMS OF THOUGHT

Desire is prayer; and no loss can occur from trusting God with our desires, that they may be moulded and exalted before they take form in words and in deeds,-Mary Baker Eddy,

Another Sneak Attack

The well planned closing of the nation's coal mines while United Mine Workers' demands were in process of negotiation, is on a par with the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

Words cannot express the contempt of the American people for individuals who are parties to such treachery, and who refuse to work while our soldiers die,

Let us hope that Congress will at least assert its authority and enact legislation providing controls for organized mutiny which endangers public safety for personal gain.

If the enemy had bombed our coal mines, the work stoppage would not have been as complete as when the United Mine Workers deserted their posts. Therefore their action is the equivalent of an enemy attack on this nation.

How many persons know that the island of Puerto Rico, a guardian for the Panama Canal and our eastern seacoast is a territory of the United States, represented in Congress by Hon. This is no time to neglect our territories or to countenance political policies therein contrary to the best interests of our republic. Instead, every endeavor should be made to develop such territories and help them become our Union.

The Doctor Goes Aloft

A few years ago the dreams of men who pro-posed four-hundred-mile-an-hour combat planes which functioned efficiently at 40,000 feet, would have been scoffed at as impossible. Even if the planes were devised capable of such performance, what of the human element? It was thought no person could stand the strain. No person could, then. But medical science managed to keep abreast of aircraft development. Planes and men fight today in the stratosphere at earsplitting speeds. They fight at altitudes where the air is so rare exposure means death in a matter of seconds.

It was recently pointed out in Hygeia that, "An airman-this applies to men on the ground staff as much as to flying crews—who is obviously suf-fering from strain finds in the medical officer a personal friend anxious to assist him in every respect. The doctor usually knows most of the flying men of his squadron by name. By studying their records, documents and flying logs, he can always keep himself informed of their progress."

It is no idle assertion that modern airpower is dependent upon modern medicine.

The Fuse Is Burning

During recent years while the pendulum of political strategy was swinging in favor of beneficent labor increased regulation of business, vote-seeking politicians have time and again stepped across the line in their capacity of lawmakers to show openarmed favortism to certain groups, principally la-

Out of the weller came such laws as the Wagner Act, the National Labor Relations Act, the Guffey Coal Act, and others. These laws were drawn to appeal to the votes of organized labor. Justice and the national welfare were ignored, Labor racketeering and strikes increased. Evil as these are, especially in wartime, something worse has come of the class-conscious legislative thinking that has ruled Washington-a frightening admiration for personal government has sprung up within the groups which the politicians have pa's ronized. If this admiration prevails indefinitely, our republic will perish, for it was founded on a government of laws, not of men-and its laws must be just if it is to survive. Government seizure of the nation's coal mines is only superficially attributable to the war. Under constant politically-inspired labor strife, it would have come eventually anyway. A last and important segment of the private enterprise system has been engulfed. As long as the coal mines remain under the total control of government, their former owners together with the mineworkers are operating under a system of state socialism. If we want the system to expand and become a permanent substitute for capitalism, we have only to sit back and continue along the path we have been following. At its end there is neither private enterprise nor labor unions.

Congress should move immediately to amend or remove every law which deliberately favors labor

AUSTIN, Texas. - Over half the citizens of Texas have fullcording to the figures just re-leased by Dr. George W. Cox, State Health Officer. This is accomplished through service rendered by county health units covering 59 counties and our four largest cities. The personnel which a county health unit employs depends upon the local need for service. The minimum staff of a unit consists of a physician. We're left here to breathe nurse, sanitarian, and clerk.

SOME VICTORY RULES-FOR CANNING VICTORY VEGETABLES

Canning without rules is like driving in a strange country without a road map—one is likely to go in the wrong direction. The wrong direction in canning leads to spoiled food—loss of canned food through spoilage is deplorable and unnecessary in time of peace, and inexcusable in time of war. Gladys Kimbrough, Home Service Director of Ball Brothers Company, gives the following sure-fire rule for * successful home-canning:

1. Use jars intended for homecanning. Every one of them has a name lettered on the side.

2. Examine every jar to make sure that it is in good condition. Give special attention to the top edges of Mason jars. Most of them must be sealed with glass top seale closures or two-piece metal vacuum seals, because the zinc that used to go into the one-piece Mason caps has gone to the battle front. The glass top and vacuum seals can take the zinc cap's place on the home front only when used on jars with perfect top edges.

3. Do not stretch rubbers to test. 4. Wash and rinse jars, lids and rubbers. Then cover jars, zinc caps, and glass lids with lukewarm water, to boiling, and keep hot. Jars and lids to be used for old-fashioned open-kettle canning must be boiled 20 to 30 minutes. Wash rubbers and vacuum-seal lids, drop into boiling water, and keep hot until needed if to be used for processing (cooking food in jars). They must be boiled to sterilize for open-kettle canning. 5. Get canners and jars ready be fore starting to prepare vegetables. 6. Use vegetables that are fresh from the garden. The alien enemies, mould, yeast and bacteria, stand ready to sabotage any and all vegetables left standing over night or all through a long, hot morning. 7. Be sure that everything to be canned is at the right stage for canning. Shelled beans and peas should be young and tender-a few over-size or over-mature ones can cause the loss of the whole batch. The pods of string beans should be crisp and meaty-corn in full milk stage-and tomatoes red-ripe, firm, and sound. Wash all fruits and vegetables before breaking the skins.

8. Hot pack all vegetables except tomatoes. Hot pack means to cook the food a few minutes, then pour it into hot jars for processing. This is also the best way to can most fruits. 9. Fill no more jars at a time than your canner will hold.

10. Leave ample head space and plenty of room for liquid to circulate between pieces of food when filling jars for processing. 11. Tighten metal bands on two-piece metal vacuum scal caps before processing. Do not tighten again

12. Partly seal for processing, all jars on which a jar rubber is used. 13 Place jars in the canner imme diately after packing and process the time called for in the recipe. Remember, time guessing has no place in canning.

14. Take jars out of canner as promptly as possible after the processing time is up and complete the seal on all that are partly sealed for processing (see Rule 12). 15. Set hot jars as far apart as possible so they will cool quickly, but do not place in a draft.

16. Be sure every jar of canned food is sealed before it is put away.

a. Take the bands off glass top seals after the jars have stood over night and test the seal by pulling gently on lid with finger tips. Don't put the bands back on the jars. b. Remove bands from vacuum seals 12 or 15 hours after canning and test the seal by pressing on the lid with the finger. If tightly sealed, there will be no "give" to the lid. Don't put the bands back on the jars c. One-piece zinc caps are drawn down flat when sealed. Do not turn Mason jars upside down—this rule applies when using glass top seals, vacuum seals, and zinc caps, d. Test "lightning" jars after they are cold by holding them upside down and examining for leaks. 17. Be finicky when it comes to cleanliness. Get rid of house flies, Remember, they prefer food to foot tub for foot washing.

18. Don't ask your neighbor how to can. She may not be as up-to date as she thinks she is. It is far better to get a good recipe book and follow directions to the letter.
As good a one as can be bought

"Where Friend Meets Friend"

What boy wouldn't like to just sit in a flying fortress! And to fly it . . . well, this pilot ranks with Superman!

One look at the instrument panel and you feel the same way. It's hard to believe that ordinary mortals could ever master the maze of dials, buttons, levers and switches required to fly and fight a 30-ton bomber.

But a lot of West Texas boys are doing it with deadly efficiency. (Ask Adolf, Panito or Tojo.) And they don't learn their jobs just by reading a book. It takes intensive training and practical experience to produce the bomber teams who risk their lives together.

The electric business is like that. You can't make kilowatt-hours with theories. You've got to learn how -the hard way.

That's the way most of the men and women with us

-and you get better jobs to do.

It's the system of free enterprise. It's simple-but it It works so well that America's big peacetime indus-

They're doing the job without rationing—and without increased cost to you!

It works so well that we're winning the war in spite of socialistic bureaucracies. But to hasten the day of victory, the bureaucrats must concentrate on the war and desist from their plans to permanently change our system of government by which America stands to lose its freedom at home.

"Because of These Things" The Headlines Tell of Victor

Yes, our fighting forces, are on the offensive-their power has been tested and found equal to task of insuring victory. True, they have superb equipment - true, they are in superb conditiontrue, that they have a superb ideal for which to fight-asd it is also true that they have superb for in adequate quantities. Of the latter we think again and again as we view the vast production acres of Texas and Oklahoma at harvest time-we think of the tremendous efforts of the me who plant and reap-we think of the handicaps under which they have labored-and we thin of their enjoyment (as depicted by the illustration above) when the headlines tell of victorious complishment on the fighting fronts for no contribution to the war effort surpasses that of produc ing food, without which we would soon perish. Yes, the men who produce from the soil at home can well be proud of their achievement and the world applauds their efforts!
