Malcolm T. Reinhardt, Formerly of Margaret, Tells Story of the Fall of Corregidor and Subsequent Treatment

Malcolm T. Reinhardt, formerly of Margaret, but now a business- man of Cross Plains, who was captured by the Japanese at the fall of Corregidor, gives the high- lights of the terrible experience to the Cross Plains Review on May 17, which is reproduced below:

Having entered the army on September 4, 1940, and being shipped immediately to the Philip- pines, Reinhardt was on Corregidor with the American garrison when war broke out. He was at that time with the 59th Coast Ar- tillery Corps, assigned to the band. However, instruments of music were soon laid aside for the more important tools of war, and Rein- hardt joined the besieged Infantry regiment for his heroic stand against invading Japanese hordes.

Sgt. Reinhardt remained with the infantry outfit, manning a gun in the firetraps and "drumming" up a little music during lulls as a means of boosting morale. When the fall of Bataan became immi- nent he was ordered to Corregidor to join in the resistance there, last American stronghold in the western Pacific. The oft-told tale of the last days of Corregidor is well known to all young men who listen; however, the young man's account of the siege describes it simply as a living hell, in which everyone felt that the present moment might be the last. Casualties from battle wounds, malaria and malnutrition far outnumbered those able to fight, however, everyone who could performed some duty.

"Those little Army Nurses," said Reinhardt, "deserve a full share of glory; they ministered to the suffering through endless days without sleep and with little food and often when sick and wounded themselves."

With endless air raids and 8- inch guns firing broadside across the narrow strip of water from Bataan, Corregidor's fate was sealed. Each day increased the dead and dying and food stores melted to virtually nothing. When the Japs loaded in barges and launched their final assault, the gallant little American band fired everything they had, killing an estimated 18 to 1, but these odds were meaningless for the enemy swarmed the besieged garrison in seemingly unnumbered throngs. Corregidor fell.

The arrogant Japanese herded their captives into a tunnel full of strips, stripping them of all valu- ables. Rings which were difficult to take from American fingers were secured by pocketknife and bayonet amputation. American nurses were victims of torture and unbelievable savagery. Through it all, though, American gallantry prevailed and the high traditions of our military service were never lowered.

Fire Department Reorganized; New Officers Elected

A few weeks ago the Crowell Volunteer Fire Department was reorganized with Leon Speer as Chief and Ernest Breedlove as Assistant Chief.

The department meets for drill on the second and fourth Wednes- days of each month. Two drills have been conducted so far. All the members have learned to operate the pumper and have had instructions in pumper hook-up, hose connections and directing a fire stream. The location of fire plugs and their capacity has also been studied.

An organized training program has been worked out and set up so that the men will receive in- structions in the use of the tools and equipment that the department has. They will be instructed in handling the types of fires and fire hazards to be found in Crowell.

The department is open for new members. Anyone interested in becoming a member of this civic organization should contact any of the members.

The purpose of the department is to protect lives and property, extinguish fire, and eliminate fire hazards. Elimination of a fire hazard extinguishes the fire before it starts.

It is the aim of the Fire Department to make the Crowell Volunteer Fire Department the best in Texas for the size of the city.

Foard County 4-H Rifle Club Under New Management

In February, 1946, a Foard County 4-H Rifle Club was organized by D. F. Eaton, county agent at that time. The club is now under the direction of Joe Burkett, present county agent, and A. V. Sheppard, AAA administra- tive officer.

The club meets every second Wednesday of each month, in the afternoon and goes out to the rifle range for practice.

The following boys are members of the club: John H. Teague, Bobbie and Jimmie Stinebaugh, Victor Christian, Blackie White, Don Wilkins, Rouse Todd, Charles Wishon, Jimmie Tom Cates, Ginger Johnson, Gordon W. Bell and Kenneth Polk.

The club owns one .22 rifle and some of the boys have their own rifles.

Charles Wishon was the first boy to qualify for promarksman- ship medal and bassard. In order to qualify for this a boy has to shoot a score of 20 or above on 10 targets at a 50 foot range.

County Federation Library is Moved to More Commodious Quarters on the Third Floor of County Court House

The Foard County Federation Library has been moved to much larger, convenient, lighter and cooler quarters, in the southeast corner room of the third floor of the Court House, the room recently occupied by the Ration Board.

The library committee is composed of Mrs. M. S. Henry and Mrs. John S. Ray, both of whom have been active in its organization and up-keep through the nineteen years of its history. Mrs. M. N. Kenner, who has been librarian for several years, will continue to serve in that capacity. The new location will provide room for enlargement and development of the library and also is much better adapted to serving the subscribers than formerly. New furniture has been purchased and placed in the new room, two large tables, one a reading table and the other a table for magazines. A chest of drawers has been provided for the care of clippings, special booklets, programs, etc.

Another addition is a large reading table with chairs, for the use of those desiring to read or to take notes. This feature has hitherto been impossible on account of lack of space. It is especially hoped that school pupils take advantage of this feature, since the school library is closed for the summer.

The library committee plans to add, in the very near future, a new post-war dictionary and a post-war encyclopedia. The subscription fee for the use of the library is still $1.00 per year per family, the same as when the library was organized. Though books have become very much higher in price, the fee has remained the same.

An invitation is extended to all Foard County residents to visit the library in its new home, whether members or not. Everyone should know just what is available from a library standpoint and a welcome is given to each person to become acquainted with the library and to use it whenever they may see fit.

Drive for Food for Hungry Nations is Well Under Way

Miss Bertha Womack, president of the B. & P. W. Club, sponsors of the Emergency Food Collection in Foard County, states that the drive is progressing satisfactorily. She says that very little canned food has been donated and feels that there are many people who would yet like to have a part in the drive, and, if so, they may bring or leave the canned goods at the Womack Furniture Store.

Only food canned in tins is acceptable, for transportation safety. Meats, baby foods, vegetables, in fact, anything that is nourishing and good, will be gladly accepted. The drive will continue to give others an opportunity to contribute to it.

The Foard County News Has Completed Arrangements to Publish Pictorial World War II Service Book for County

Pictures of Every Man and Woman of County Who Served in Armed Forces During War Needed for Book

Arrangements have been completed by The Foard County News for publishing a pictorial World War II Service book for Foard County. It is planned to have the book include a picture of every service man and woman who served in the armed forces in World War II, and there will be no cost whatsoever for placing the picture in the book. The newspaper earnestly solicits a picture of every service man and woman.

The book will be very similar to school annuals in appearance and composition. The best picture of each veteran is solicited, and this picture will be returned undamaged. Bring the pictures to this newspaper at your earliest convenience. Remember, there is no charge for having the picture included in the book.

The World War II Service Book will become a valuable memento, and an important record as well.

It will be something to which veterans and their children and relatives can turn with pleasure in the years to come.

All that is required for anyone to have a picture included is to bring in the picture, and fill out a questionnaire giving information to be published along with the picture. Pictures may be brought in either by veterans or relatives. Everyone is urged to bring the pictures in as soon as possible.

The News wants this book to be completely representative of the service of the men and women of this county in World War II, something that will serve as a valuable record for all time to come, as well as a highly prized memento for every man and woman who served. The co-operation of service men and women and their relatives is needed to make the book a success.

J. M. Marr of the Vivian community this week closed a deal with the Lanier Finance Co. whereby he became owner of a 6-room house, three blocks northeast of the square. The house was formerly owned by Fred Wehba.

Mr. Marr and family will move to Crowell within the near future to make their home here.

On account of the railroad strike, the elevators were filled up by Saturday of last week and harvesting came to a standstill. However, this situation cleared up and they began taking wheat again Monday.

About one-half inch of rain fell over the county Tuesday morning and harvesting of grain was delayed until Wednesday afternoon. It is expected that most of the crop will be harvested by the end of the week.

Approximately 225 cars of wheat have been shipped from Crowell, Margaret and Foard City.

Japanese Police Are Taught Art of Peacemaking

(By Sgt. Robert L. Debo Marine Corps Correspondent) Nagasaki, Japan (Delayed)—Classes for Japan's new policemen have opened here under the supervision of Furuya Yasuji, schoolmaster of the Nagasaki prefecture. The classes, part of a nationwide program, are designed to modernize the country's public safety units and to discourage the brutality which marked the Japanese policeman of the past.

Rigid Requirements Present members of the police forces are required to attend the classes. Nearly all the recruits are former non-commissioned officers of the defeated Jap army and navy. Applicants must pass intelligence tests and must prove that they were not members of secret militaristic societies before the war.

Recruits are required to attend classes for four months, while present members of the police forces must take a two-month course. Civilians and veteran policemen serve as instructors.

Courses cover basic police regulations, fingerprinting, self defense and English, the latter to help the Japanese understand members of the occupation forces with whom they are frequently required to work. Lectures are also given on American police methods.

Many Applicants Fail The courses, difficult according to Japanese standards, keep the men hard at work six days a week. When examinations were held recently, 60 per cent of the applicants failed.

Each graduate may look forward to a monthly wage of approximately five dollars, possible promotion in three years and sole responsibility for the protection of up to 2,000 citizens.

Quarter Horse Show to Be Held with Rodeo at Stamford

The American Quarter Horse Association again accepted the invitation of officials of the Texas Cowboy Reunion to hold an "Official" American Quarter Horse Show at Stamford, Texas, in connection with the Rodeo on July 2, 3 and 4.

Jno. C. Burns, Executive Secretary of the American Quarter Horse Association, and R. A. Brown, Director of the organization met with officers of the Texas Cowboy Reunion to work out the prize list and other details of the show last week. Mr. Burns stated that in addition to the regular cash prizes offered, the association would offer, for the first time, a trophy to each of the first place winners of the open Calf Roping Contest, and the Cutting Horse Contest, provided the stallion, mare, or gelding winning the contest is registered in the Stud Book or Registry of the American Quarter Horse Association.

Roy Arledge, chairman of the Quarter Horse Committee mailed entry blanks and prize lists to breeders in the Association last week. A record entry is expected from breeders over the nation.

Grand Champion Stallion of the 1945 show was "Star Deck" owned by A. I. Hunt of Tulsa, Okla. Grand Champion Mare was "Punkin" owned by Mrs. Helen Michaelis of Eagle Pass, Texas.

"Wild Bill" Elliott, popular cowboy movie star is expected to attend the Texas Cowboy Reunion again this year. Elliott is a quarter horse enthusiast, and last year purchased "Smockey" Waggoner from Carl Smith of Stamford.

Several entries have already been received, according to the chairman, Roy Arledge, and he reminds breeders that June 20th is the closing date for accepting entries.

Air Show to Be Held at Ft. Worth A. A. F. Sunday, June 2nd

For the first time in Texas, the public will have the opportunity to view the Army's huge new four-motored C-97 cargo plane, proto-type of the Boeing Stratocruiser, at Fort Worth Army Air Field's Air Show, Sunday, June 2.

The C-97 is the big brother of the B-29 Superfortress, the main difference in the two being in the size of the C-97 fuselage, which is nearly three times larger than that of the B-29. Carrying 5,400 gallons of fuel, and a maximum payload of 30,000 pounds, the C-97 cruises at 250 miles per hour.

The C-97 will be on display throughout the afternoon, and may be inspected by the public both inside and out. Although this plane will not participate with the many others that will perform in the air, other C-46 and C-47 cargo planes from Greenville, S. C., will take the air in demonstrations of glider pick-up and release, and will drop dummy parachutes in a simulated air-borne invasion.

Gates of Fort Worth Army Air Field will be thrown open to the public at noon, and the afternoon's program begins at 1 o'clock. Ample bleacher seats have been erected, and the public is invited to take photographs anywhere on the field.

There is no admission charge of any kind.

We have read all the plans proposed for increasing housing in this country. We still think the simplest plan is to see to it that the local lumber yards get a supply of the lumber and building materials. Local carpenters will see to it that houses are built. If it is desired that the veterans be given preference in the matter of homes, priorities can easily be arranged limiting the sale of building materials to veterans as long as there is any application from a veteran on file with the lumber dealer. This, it appears to us, would be vastly more simple than setting up a complicated system in Washington to bungle and blunder through a simple matter.

Prison walls are not built to scale.

Final Return to Homeland

The government plan to bring back to this country the bodies of the veterans who died in World War II is a fine expression of affection and sympathy for the families of these heroes who perished on our behalf. The bodies of about 328,000 of these men are buried in European and Pacific cemeteries. The American people are glad to do this thing as an expression of their profound sympathy with the families of these men.

The next of kin will be asked as to what disposition shall be made of these bodies, whether they shall be sent to their home towns, or interred in national cemeteries, or be left in the cemeteries in the warring countries. Any one of these choices expresses a noble sentiment, and the country desires to satisfy whatever preference the families have in this sacred matter.

It would be interesting to ask if any foreign country had ever done anything similar to this action, in offering to bring home the bodies of its soldiers who fell on foreign soil. It is a noble action, and a sincere expression of the country's desire to comfort those who suffered this great and terrible loss.

The country will always mourn the memory of these men who died so grandly. It will wish with all its heart that they could have come back alive and well, to rejoin their beloved families and to re-enter their customary pursuits. But that was not to be. They went out at the call of their country, they did their full duty, and did it nobly.

The noble attitude of their families at home will always be remembered. They have taken their great loss with splendid fortitude. They wanted their boy to do his full duty. Their suffering and sorrow will never be forgotten. The support they gave their men and the country were a great factor in the victory won for our country.

HISTORY

Children's Day—June 9: Children's Day as it is now known, was first observed as Rose Sunday, later the name was changed to Flower Sunday and in the course of several years to Children's Day, by which name it is now observed by most of the Protestant churches. Observance of the day began about a hundred years ago and has continued with growing interest each year since. The church organizations have prepared programs for the use of the churches and each year the day is observed with exercises that feature the children and appropriate decorations of flowers. The plan to set aside one day on which the children of the church would be given special recognition met with almost instant approval by all of the churches.

Father's Day—June 16: The third Sunday in June has been designated as Father's Day. The day was set apart some time after the establishment of Mother's Day but has never been accorded an equal degree of notice or attention. Credit for setting apart a day on which Dad might be honored is generally accorded to Mrs. John Bruce Dodd of Spokane, Washington. In 1909 Mrs. Dodd, who desired to honor her father, who had reared a fine family of children, wrote to the Spokane Ministerial Association suggesting that the third Sunday in June be set aside to honor the fathers. The suggestion met with approval and the first observance was held in Spokane in June, 1910. The idea grew slowly throughout the country, several towns claiming the credit for origination of the day. In 1920 Mrs. Walter Hamlet Burgess, of Cheltenham, Pennsylvania, took out a charter for National Father's Day incorporated and registered the name in the United States Patent office. She had not previous to that heard of any day being observed as Father's Day. When she later learned of Mrs. Dodd's efforts to gain recognition for such a day she withdrew her claims to priority for establishing the day. Several efforts to get a resolution through Congress establishing the day have failed. Father's Day is featured by tobacconists and haberdashers who use it as an occasion to promote the sale of their merchandise as gifts to fathers.

Washington News

By Congressman Ed Gossett, 13 District of Texas.

Washington, D. C., May 24.—Again, we write about strikes. All honest Americans want our workers to have good wages and high standards of living. But it cannot be done by killing the geese that lay the golden eggs. Most of the strikers are now drawing the highest wages in all history. In 1945 the average weekly earnings of passenger engineers were $95, that of local and freight engineers $105.67 and $85.95 respectively. This is an average income of about $5,000 per year. Many of these engineers earn their weekly salaries with 24 hours or less actual working time.

In 1944 the average income of the General Motors workers was approximately $3,000. In the same period the average income of U. S. Steel employees was $2,219. Since 1939 the average weekly income of iron and steel workers has risen 57 per cent, textile workers 101 per cent, and bituminous coal miners 139 per cent. So in the mines, in the railroads, in the steel industry, in the automobile industry, all of which have struck or are on strike, their average incomes before striking were reasonably good. This far exceeds the income of the average farmer or clerk or school teacher.

Even some unions of federal employees are now insisting they have a right to strike. In June, 1943, members of the United Federal Workers of America-CIO, in the City of Washington mailed circulars which stated in part, "Are you fighting for democracy on the home front? Write your Congressman to protest the Smith-Connally bill." At that time on the House floor I condemned this circular, and predicted that "if this sort of thing continues we may one day have federal employees themselves striking against the government that employs them." I believe I was the first member of Congress to condemn this practice, and predict sinister developments.

Today on the House floor I made the following speech: "Mr. Speaker, democracy is in danger. Our government is in danger. Six months before Pearl Harbor I stood on the floor of this House and predicted that our failure to establish a firm, consistent labor policy would get us into serious trouble. Now we have the miners and the railroads on strike against the government. Recently a union of federal employees have insisted they have a similar right."

"The very least we can now do is to write immediately into law two things: (1) that to strike against the government at any time, under any circumstances, is a crime; (2) that industrial disputes in which the public health, safety, or welfare is seriously involved shall be submitted to compulsory arbitration. To say that such laws cannot be enforced is a stupid admission of futility. A government that can draft men to die for the safety of its people can force men to work for the same reasons."

"The American people have a right to be alarmed. They are asking: 'Will the big labor bosses supply. Few, if any reserve stocks of coal are carried and a work stoppage such as General Motors has just gone through would stagnate and paralyze practically every activity in the nation. In other words the United States is now at the mercy of Mr. Lewis. We do not presume to say whether the demands made by Mr. Lewis are justified by the facts or not. We do not know. We do not have access to the facts upon which a true conclusion should be based. The coal miners may be entitled to more pay and some privileges they do not now have. We are not prepared to say. The point we do wish to make, however, is that in a Democracy it is not safe to lodge in any one man the autocratic power that has been placed in the hands of John Lewis. Human nature is too far from being infallible to permit its being given such unhampered and unrestricted right of way. The time is coming, if it is not already at hand, when the government should step in and say to such individuals, this far you can go and no farther."

What We Think
(By Frank Dixon)

The big issue before the American people today is the strike of the coal miners sponsored by John Lewis. The strike becomes the big issue for the reason that the whole economy of the nation is tied up in the fuel, coal. Without it the steel mills cannot operate, the railroads cannot move their trains, and power plants cannot produce power. As soon as the small reserves of fuel are used up one by one the steel plants must close, the trains be run into the sheds and the power plants shut down. Then if it is not already under way a creeping paralysis will come over the nation and an industrial stagnation will ensue the like of which none of the previous strikes has approached.

The demands made by Lewis according to the coal mine operators, constitute a virtual surrender of the coal mines to Mr. Lewis and his organization. The only function left for the operators it appears from their statements will be that of keeping the books, paying the salaries of the miners, and selling the coal.

A new note in the strike demands is the demand for royalty on each ton of coal to be turned over to Mr. Lewis to spend under the rather all inclusive and ambiguous head of Welfare. This demand by Mr. Lewis is patterned after a similar demand by James Caesar Petrillo, head of the American Musicians Organization. The administration at the time the Petrillo demands were made because of its attitude toward labor demands, offered weak resistance to the demand and as a result established a precedent which is now being invoked in the coal strike.

Incidentally it is not clear to this writer how the government is going to deny the right to levy its own excise tax to the coal miners and at the same time permit an identical type of excise tax to be levied by Petrillo, presumably for the same purpose for which Lewis desires to levy his excise tax.

For the first time there is presented to the government the matter of private organizations usurping the power of the government in the matter of levying excise taxes or their own profit or their own use. In the past the levying of all excise taxes has been a prerogative of the United States government.

The peril in the present situation is not that the coal miners are not as much, if not more, entitled to such a tax as are Petrillo's musicians as is the possibility that the granting of a similar right to the coal miners will open up the granting of a similar right to all other lines of endeavor where such a tax could be made to fit in. Once the right to levy a tax is granted, from then on is the probability of its periodical increase.

It is perilous that this would create may be easily visualized when we assemble the elements of the picture and realize that we have given to one man the power—the unlimited power that we have given Mr. Lewis and a vast sum of many millions of dollars. Mr. Lewis' power lies in the fact that the whole economy of the nation is completely bound up in its fuel continue to vie with each other in seeing who can squeeze the most out of a defenseless people? Can big industries and big labor unions defy with impunity the government of the United States? To answer these questions affirmatively is to insult the character and the intelligence of the American people.

THINGS ONE REMEMBERS

(By R. M. Hofer)
I have just talked to an Oregon farmer who milks about 40 cows, who did raise about 100 head of beef annually, who did raise chickens and sell eggs, and who did raise 40 or 50 hogs a year as a by-product. He no longer raises the chickens or the hogs, and he is selling off all his beef cattle because the cost of feed and the price at which they are not worth bothering with. This same farmer or raised 100 acres of barley for stock and for food for the past three years and could not afford to feed it to his animals because it was worth more as grain.

When I saw him at his ranch on this trip, he was almost in tears. His deep well electric pump had broken down and he had been held up for several days getting parts. It being asked questions as to whether it was essential, he told the questioners that he had already lost a ton of milk which the public was clamoring for, and if that wasn't essential he didn't know what was. His milking machine was broken down and the dealer could not furnish him the bearings because he could not get them. So they had rustled up a couple of worn-out automobile bearings and got them into the machine to make it run temporarily. He said: "I wouldn't quit delivering milk to deprive the public of it, but if I could close down and shut milk off from the strikers, I'd do it in a minute."

This farmer is typical of thousands of small farmers over the nation. Their machinery and equipment is worn out; their automobiles are worn out; they can not hire labor except at wages beyond the prices they are allowed for their products, and yet they are expected to produce and keep the food rolling in while politics and labor warfare deprive the nation of a stable economy and the tools for production. We are going to pay dearly for such a policy before we are done.—Industrial News Review.

Food, Home Notes

(By Miss Elizabeth Elliott, County Home Demonstration Agent.)

FIGHT FAMINE BY USING ABUNDANT FOODS

One of the most effective ways of conserving wheat and wheat products for shipment to starving countries is to make every possible use of the foods now abundant. There are numerous foods on the plentiful list.

One small serving of potatoes can replace a slice of bread nutritionally, and the potato offers some vitamin C, besides. Let potatoes replace wheat cereal, toast or biscuit at breakfast. Use leftover potatoes as potato cakes or in hash.

Use potato salad instead of a sandwich or serve creamed meat, chicken or fish on mashed potato instead of on toast.

An average serving of oatmeal without sugar and cream equals approximately two slices of bread in food value. Use it to replace part of the wheat flour in baking. Use it as thickening, as a binder in meat loaf, or in puddings.

Where corn meal is plentiful, use it in cornbread, muffins, griddle cakes, or in stuffings for meat and poultry. Use pearl barley, when available, to give body to soups and chowders, and don't overlook buckwheat cakes as cereal food for breakfast.

Use potatoes and hominy grits in place of rice so that it can be sent to the Far East. Avoid throwing rice at weddings. And, of course, be as thrifty as possible with wheat bread and flour that you do use.

CHECKING UP ON ELECTRIC LAMPS

Since electric lamps should be arranged in homes for the best service and for attractiveness, housewives need to make check-ups in their own homes for possible improvements.

Be sure there is enough light when and where it is needed. A table lamp should be equipped with a bulb or bulbs totalling at least 100 watts. And a floor lamp with reflector should have a minimum of 150 watts. Lamps should always be bright enough for tasks for which they are used.

Lamp shades should all be flared to spread light over a wide area. Any lamp shades with dark-colored linings should be removed as they soak up as much as 50 per cent of the light that would otherwise be reflected for use.

Height of table lamps is important. They should be tall enough to spread light over the intended area. Glare, also, should be checked on. An unshaded bulb should be used only in storage rooms, clothes closets, or similar places.

Lamps should be arranged to avoid shadows. For close work, the light should come from the left for right-handed persons and vice-versa for those who are left-handed. Sharp contrasts of light and dark within a room are hard on eyes, as they must keep adjusting to different amounts of light. Lamps with glass or plastic reflectors under the shade will do away with these contrasts.

Lamps properly arranged will bring less eye strain and more beauty. They bring attractive furnishings and color combinations to life.

USE FOODS ON HAND

One way that American families can help now in the fight against famine is to take inventory of pantry shelves and cupboards, and bring out food supplies that may have been pushed aside or forgotten. Particularly canned and preserved foods, and packaged grain products should not be overlooked.

If families will use up foods on hand before buying new supplies, they will be helping this country respond to the desperate appeals for food overseas. Buying less of the grain products—cereals, flour, crackers—is an obvious step toward using 40 per cent less of these foods, as Americans are urged to do by the President's Famine Emergency Committee. Home stocks of fruits and vegetables—canned, frozen or dried—can be used to avoid buying, thus helping to lighten transportation loads and leave more foods on the market.

MUCH FRUIT, LITTLE WOOD GROWTH

Prospects for a bumper fruit crop are good over all parts of Texas, according to C. R. Heaton, horticulturist of the Texas A. & M. College Extension Service.

But, like the farmer who was saddened by his wonderful potato crop because there were no culls for the hogs, Heaton says the heavy load of fruit is using up so much plant food that there is a slow growth of limbs and twigs.

Next year's fruit crop, he points out, will be borne on the new wood now forming.

Since there will be lots of fruit on the market anyhow, Heaton recommends that fruit be thinned out from 4 to 6 inches. He suggests leaving the better quality fruit, removing the fruit that has been damaged by hail, however rot, peach scab, or curculio. This will throw some strength to the new growth of limbs and twigs and will result in a high percentage of large, quality fruit.

The orchard should be cultivated at a shallow depth as often as necessary to protect the busy and placed on a work detail, whereas most all other Americans were evacuated to Bataan or Luzon. Food became so scarce that Reinhardt and an American lieutenant were assigned to fish in a small damaged craft to supply the Japanese and the captive Americans. They were given other prisoners to help and a very small amount of ammunition to blast the water and kill marine life. There was such a scarcity of fuses that several members of the fishing detail were blown to bits by premature explosions, nevertheless, the work went on until Corregidor was finally emptied of all prisoners by the Japanese and Reinhardt was sent to Cabanatuan prison on Northern Luzon. There, prison conditions were terrible. Food was scarce and disease, particularly pellagra, beri-beri and malnutrition maladies, beset most every man.

"Several of us decided to escape or die," says Reinhardt, "and to better accomplish it, I began to enlarge upon my knowledge of the Japanese language, listening, learning at every hand." This knowledge of the Nip language proved its worth on many occasions and is probably responsible for the young man's now being at home with his wife, family and friends.

When escape plans were finally formulated, four Americans slugged a Japanese guard and crawled through a sewer drain to a nearby river. Once in the water, they became the target of Japanese riflemen and one of the quartet was fatally wounded. The other three, moving under cover of darkness and taking advantage of Japanese confusion, grabbed three horses and were off to the hills before their captors had an opportunity to give chase. In the hills they killed one horse, ate heartily, then split up, taking refuge with guerrillas and friendly Filipinos. However, another was soon killed and Reinhardt and the other remaining escapee became the object of incessant Japanese searching. Filipinos were warned under the threat of death to report the whereabouts of the Americans and further induced by a reward of 300 pesos and a sack of rice for the knowledge leading to the capture of either.

Finally, Reinhardt's buddy, whose name he did not choose to mention, became critically ill for the need of quinine and Reinhardt decided to get it for him or die in the attempt. He hopped astride a caribou, a species of water buffalo, and started a fifty night ride down jungle trails to Manila. The journey to the Philippine capital was possible only because of divine assistance, for, on several occasions, Japanese soldiers almost stumbled over the hiding American.

In Manila, Reinhardt chose to get word into the prison compound and have some inmate steal a quantity of the medicine from the Japanese for they controlled it all. This was attempted by leaving notes under shovels and tools for the Americans to find, however it is believed they thought it a Japanese trick. One day he decided to hide in a hay field where the prisoners were working and attempt a personal contact.

While under a huge pile of two Japanese officers, Reinhardt sat down on the hay stack. Here again his knowledge of the Nipponese tongue proved valuable. He heard one of them order the other to start burning the piles of hay. The order was carried out and smoke began to warn the hiding American that his place of refuge would soon be a furnace of death. However, as though by divine will, a strong wind came up and the superior officer ordered that the fires be extinguished before they got out of control. So it was, the hay pile which offered concealment was never fired but the close call prompted Reinhardt to get out at the first opportunity and leave the Manila area for good. This he did as soon as darkness came, not even deviating from the shorter route to get the caribou which he had ridden into Manila, barefooted and dressed like a native.

Sgt. Reinhardt contacted a Filipino whom he believed to be loyal to the American cause and related to him his need for quinine. The native agreed to get 12 capsules of the medicine for $300 American money, all of which he had. The deal was arranged; however, instead of returning with the drug, the Filipino came back with six guards who again took Reinhardt into the capture of the Japanese.

Only by giving a different name, declaring he had been with a different unit and never been captured did the young man avoid immediate death, for such was the fate of any who defied Japanese orders. Even with a different name, infallible story, "doctored" serial number, etc., Reinhardt figured that he was marked for execution but that an unexplainable change in Japanese commanders spared him along with several others.

He was taken to the Santiago prison in Manila, where food was far below the quantity necessary for survival. Although a man of normally 210 pounds, his weight dropped to 107 and he is of the opinion that it was at times below 100, although there was no opportunity to weigh for many months at a time. Decayed teeth were filled by an American dentist, himself a captive, using melted coins. Other medical attention was virtually nonexistent.

The Japs began to move all American prisoners to Nippon. Reinhardt chanced to be on the last boat loaded to leave Manila. Aboard were 1,800 American officers and 90 enlisted men. The trip to Japan, normally a trip of eight to ten days required 50 days and of the 1,800 who started, 300 finally reached their destination. They survived two ship sinkings, unbelievable filth, a diet of one tablespoon of uncooked rice daily, intermittent strafing and bombing by American planes, and, then, freezing weather in a near naked condition. Reinhardt's entire wardrobe consisted of a pair of G I socks and one sock.

Herded like beasts, the Americans were taken to Fukuoka prison camp on Honshu Island in the Japanese homeland. Later they were removed to Korea. There Reinhardt rejoined General Wainwright, whom he had known intimately at Corregidor, as well as several Americans, some of whom had survived the death march on Bataan. Sgt. Reinhardt relates that many, many times he ate from the same rice pile with Gen. Wainwright and that, although the famous American soldier was far better known, there seemed to be little difference between him and the others. He has since visited in the general's home at Ft. Sam Houston, together with a few others who survived the ordeal.

Again death seemed certain for the Americans held in the Korea camp. The Russians were pushing in their direction and Japanese guards had been instructed to murder inmates of the compound before fleeing themselves. Again Providence intervened, for at this juncture, the second atomic bomb fell on the Japanese homeland and the Japs petitioned for peace.

Reinhardt was liberated shortly thereafter—about the middle of September, 1945—and boarded a boat for Manila, en route home. The ship struck a mine and suffered severe damage but the sheltering hand of Providence once more brought him safely through. At Manila, he was given medical attention and a convalescent diet which began to rebuild his abused body. In a few weeks he seemed sufficiently recovered for a trip into the city itself which he had visited many times in peace. En route he was run down by a C I driver and seriously hurt by an American army truck. This necessitated several weeks more in a hospital and all this time, he was living for just one thing—to come home.

When authorities seemed slow in arranging his evacuation, he left the hospital and went down to Manila harbor. A ship was loading for the States and, without further ado, the man who had endured every hardship of the jungle, the worst the Japs had to give and the worst that war has to offer, walked aboard and simply announced himself a passenger. For some unexplainable reason, understandable only to those who have been prisoners, the skipper permitted him to sail with the ship without orders, something peculiarly uncommon in war routine.

At San Francisco, he reported to a re-distribution center and began the long process of separation required of those who have been prisoners of war. Looking back over the ordeal, Reinhardt says that only a better than average constitution, an irresistible desire to live and the help of divine Providence brought him through the gruesome experience.

Reinhardt's military decorations include the combat infantryman's badge, the Presidential citation with two oak-leaf clusters, the Purple Heart, Asiatic-Pacific theater ribbon with two bronze stars, the Philippine Liberation ribbon with one bronze star, the American theater ribbon with one star, the good conduct ribbon and the Victory medal.

"Fallen Angel," New Otto Preminger Hit

Thrill-created by Otto Preminger, the man who brought "Laura" to the screen, and acclaimed as being even greater in dramatic excitement and suspense, 20th Century-Fox's new hit, "Fallen Angel," starring Alice Faye, Dana Andrews and Linda Darnell, opens Sunday at the Rialto Theatre.

Produced and directed by Preminger, "Fallen Angel," a gripping drama of desire and murder, presents Alice Faye in her first momentous dramatic role. Dana Andrews, star of "Laura," plays a hard-boiled "confidence" man in a more desperate man-and-woman-hunt, while Linda Darnell is seen in a role even more fascinating than the one that brought her such acclaim in "Hangover Square."

Charles Bickford heads the outstanding supporting cast which includes Anne Revere, Bruce Cabot, John Carradine and Percy Kilbride.

Mrs. Bill Stoker, the hostess, served refreshments to eleven members and three visitors.

The next meeting of the club will be on June 13, with Mrs. J. E. Stover as hostess.

Texas Needs General Clean-Up Program to Promote Good Health

Austin.—A food old fashioned spring house cleaning in every city and community in Texas would do a great deal toward furthering good health in this state, according to Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer, who said in Austin recently, "From a practical standpoint the old adage that 'Cleanliness is next to Godliness' is still well worth emphasizing."

A general clean-up program of state-wide proportions with the objective of bettering health conditions for our citizenship should include surface cleaning, drainage, the graveling of streets and alleys, the cleaning of all parks and playgrounds and the clearing of weeds and rubbish off of vacant lots.

Mrs. Arthur Sandlin discussed "Do's and Don'ts" about cut flowers. Roses should be cut about midday or late afternoon to last longer as they store up more sugar by being exposed to the bright sunlight. Do not add sugar, however, as that only increases bacterial action and causes the blooms to fade more quickly. Four-thirty in the afternoon is the best time to cut roses.

Mrs. T. W. Cooper conducted a quiz on flowers and Miss Myrtle Fish demonstrated fun with flowers by adding 4 teaspoons of baking soda and five mothballs to a quart of water in a glass container after which she placed several blossoms minus the stems, in the container. The chemical reaction makes the vase of flowers much more interesting. A few drops of food coloring, also adds to the interest.

Among those present were six visitors: Misses Lilly Faye and Theima Beatty of Paducah, Misses Bessie and Bernita Fish, Norma Jean Matthews and Mrs. J. W. Carroll.

The club will meet with Mrs. Egbert Fish on Thursday, June 13, and each member is to bring a jar of spoiled, or poor quality of food and a jar of good quality food and Miss Elliott will discuss the causes of spoilage and compare the poor quality with the good quality. She will also test pressure cookers if there are any in the community needing testing.
