Oil outlook is generally brighter

Oil drilling has slumped in the last few months all across Texas. It has had its effects upon Texas economy and the economies of dozens of Texas towns.

What's the trouble?

That's no secret. The low number of production days now allowed in Texas has drastically cut into oil profits. New wells are not now as profitable as they once were, so oilmen aren't risking nearly as much capital in new starts.

The best guess we hear from oil men is that a new spurt in drilling can be expected along about February.

What's more oil men here are saying that if the number of production days per month can the oil production business.

Oilmen only a year or two ago didn't think that new wells could be drilled profitably on a 12-day production schedule each month. But since then they've been trimming out any "fat" they can find in their operations.

ahead at a good drilling pace on a 12-day production schedule.

To the average citizen, this production day business has been looking pretty glum. But the oil folks are looking ahead and saying that there are signs that it may be possible to get the monthly production day schedule fixed, instead of coming up for change each month. Take out the fluctuations and oil producers would have a better chance to look and plan ahead, they point

The slowdown in Texas oil production has hurt on all fronts-from the state treasury, down through the school district budgets, to the business man on Main street.

Now it looks like the oil drilling business is starting upward again. And oil men, see a measure of hope for the immediate future if production days can be boosted two or three a month Now, they say, that the industry can move next year and leveled off for a steady pull -JC

Truck drivers show it can be done

We once heard a chronic town-knocker, miffus up on his itinerary, remark that about the only thing that ever comes through Post are big trucks and freight trains.

The knocker was, of course, stretching the point, but all of us at one time or another have had our sleep disturbed by the rumble and roar of big trucks, or have been slowed by them as we decrease in accidents. But it is not attributable drove along the highway or even on downtown to skill alone.

But we've just read something that would make us think twice before speaking out as brashly against the trucking industry as did the

A survey of the commercial truck fleets of the nation-which included government operations -recently showed a 320 per cent improvement in the accident rate involving the movement of these big vehicles on the highways over a 10-year period. Ten years ago, for example, trucking averaged 22,000 miles without an accident. Today the average is up to nearly 72,000 miles without an accident. Put another way, the statistics record -- CD showed the accident rate was 45 for every 1,000,ed because a top political candidate had passed 000 miles of travel in 1948 while the 1958 figures showed 14 accidents for every 1,000,000 miles.

This is a remarkably good record. It is a tribute to the skill of the men who maneuver these behemoths on the highways that, in the face of ever-increasing traffic, they have been able not only to hold their own but to achieve a notable

Truck operators have been increasingly emphatic in drilling into their employes the need for courtesy on the highway-and for their own good. Hogging the highway breeds antipathy against cllowing use of the highways to the huge vans and truck-tractors. It also causes accidents, Anyone who drives extensively on the highways today must be impressed by the unfailing courtesy of these drivers. If those who operate the passenger cars-including town-knockers-would take a tip from their burly companions on the road they, too, might achieve a better driving

With the city's merchants displaying gifts of every nature, toys, fancy foods, etc., the town of Post will be like a big Christmas department store from now until Dec. 25. This represents a

There's some catching up o do

A successful moon shot Thursday instead of do. another in a long line of fizzles would have been something for which to have been thankful on Thanksgiving Day

It's a matter of conjecture just how far this failure puts Russia ahead of us in the space program, but there is no doubt that they are way out in front, what with one moon hit and one of their Luniks now in orbit around the moon.

We feel sure this nation will catch up with the Soviet Union in the race to probe the mysteries of outer space, but it sometimes leaves us cold to think how much catching up we have to

One thought that consoles us is that there is no telling how many times the Russians shot at the moon before they hit it or how many times they tried to put a Lunik in orbit before they succeeded. Over there they have an effective way of keeping the press silent on such things, whereas in this country we know all about the failures the same as we do the successes. We'd rather have it that way, but at the same time we'd like to see this nation gain a little ground on the Russians in these outer space endeavors-CD

Our Christmas Seal dollars pay for some of the needed research into better means of prevention and cure; help educate people to the need for early detection of TB through tuberculin tests and chest X-days; make treatment and follow-up possible, and provide funds for the myriad

What our contemporaries are saying

We feel better about the future of America now that it's been revealed that disc jockeys have been bribed to play that stuff they play. If they had been playing it because they liked it, the country really would have been in sad shape .-The Lorenzo Tribune.

As a man grows in years, he values the voice experience more, and the voice of prophecy less; he finds more of life's wealth in the common pleasures-home, health, children; he thinks more about the worth of men and less about their wealth; he begins to appreciate his own father more; he boasts less and boosts more; he hurries less, and usually makes more progress; and he esteems the friendship of God more.-The Hamlin

This is not very cheering news, but come Jan. I another bite will come out of the old pay check. Social Security is going up again. THURSDAY to THURSDAY

By CHARLES DIDWAY

YOU LIVE AND learn in this newspaper business and many of the things you learn are surprisingly surprising. For several years now, we've labored under the impression that about the only thing we had to be real careful of in writing news was to use a capital "C" when we wrote about someone serving Cokes at a party. Now comes the Nissen Trampoline Company of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, to inform us through their attorneys at law, Ooms, Welsh and Bradway of Chicago that it's Trampoline with a capital "T".

Like Kodak, Coke, Frigidaire, Amana's Deepfreeze and other private trade names, Trampoline has become such a popular word in its field that the Nissen Co. is fighting to protect it. The company has gone to court, in fact, in an attempt to force a competitor to drop the word from its company name. Because the Nissen firm has trade-marked Trampoline, and Trampolining, there's no such common noun as trampoline or trampolining. Gymnasts, as a result, call the sport "rebound-tumbling.

WE CAN'T RECALL many instances in which we've had occasion to use the word. One instance was a few years ago when they installed a "rebound-tumbler" the junior high school gym. We distinctly remember that we used "trampoline" in writing our story. If the rebound-tumbler wasn't bought from the Nissen Co., then we "goofed", but that's been long enough ago that the statute of limitations probably will protect us if the Nissen Co. decides to make a case out of it.

To make sure that we don't make the same mistake again. we're going to refer to all Trampolines as rebound-tumblers, just as we refer to all Cokes as cold drinks or soda pops when we're telling about what the hostess served. We started doing that two or three years ago after getting a wrist-slapping letter from the Coca-Cola company for not putting a capital "C" on coke.

ALSO, THE NEXT time some one calls our Speed Graphic a Kodak, we're going to warn them about such things.

Radio Russia says that America is a hysterical topsy-turvy country where people eat upsidedown cake, doors go round in circles and everybody has an inside out-

SINCE WE TOOK a couple of days off for Thanksgiving so we could go down state for a visit with our daughter and son-in-law, we're a little behind . . . and that gives us a good excuse for calling on one of our "brother editors" to help us round out this week's col-

We were interested to learn recently of the fate of the 12 Disciples. Most of us stopped with events soon after Christ died, and the later lives of those 12 men have been somewhat a mystery.

(Continued From Front Page) see them-because they're in the back, not the front. Our newspaper press is all decked out in tinsel this week. Maybe it's unusual. but we've found from experience it takes a lot of the static electricity out of the papers when the press is in operation-enough anyway to make them manageable in this too-dry weather.

With the cotton ginning total for the county now well over 16,000 bales it looks as if Garza County is going to come up with a betterthan-expected harvest. A lot were guessing only 10 days ago the total wouldn't hit 15,000 bales. Another good week should see the harvest virtually complete and by that time the bales may be a lot closer to that 20,000 mark than the 15,000 one.

The Dispatch welcomes a new merchant this week-or rather an old one back. He's Leon Ray who has opened his new Ray's Drive-In at 615 South Broadway, Leor formerly operated another drivein here until deciding to "go fishing" a year or so ago. You'll find Ray's announcement of his new drive-in over on page 9.

The recent local accident victim and Dispatch printer may be progressing fast enough to be released to his home over the weekend. We only wish he were coming back to work that soon, but we expect Corkey to be back in harness a whole lot faster than it was originally thought.
