Girls Win Game from Lamesa

The colors of the O'Donnell High School basket ball team are still flying high, having not trailed in the dust of defeat this season. The latest honors were won in a spirited game with Lamesa high team last Friday on the latter's grounds, the score being 10 for O'Donnell and 8 for Lamesa. The work of the home team was superb throughout the game, the girls showing a masterly knowledge of the rules and playing them in a manner that was amazing to the opponents as well as the large number of spectators who witnessed the game.

About ten cars loaded with rooters accompanied the team from O'Donnell, and it is stated that the game was well attended by the people of Lamesa.

This team now has a cinch on the county championship and they will be heard from in the playoff for the district championship at the Inter-scholastic meet in the spring.

The following members of the team participated in the game.

Allie Line Guards Oma Fairley
Mildred Wyatt Centers Alta Rogers
Ettie Wyatt Forwards Lois Pugh

Another game is scheduled to be played with Wilson school team this afternoon on the latter's grounds. The girls plan to take their lunch and spend the day with their neighbors.

C. W. McLendon, a prosperous farmer living about six miles south of town, was shopping in town Tuesday.

J. B. Miles for Commissioner

The Index is authorized to announce the candidacy of J. B. Miles for re-election to the office of County Commissioner of Precinct No. 3, subject to the action of the Democratic Primary. Mr. Miles has been in Lynn county since its organization and has ever been a factor in the advancement of the county's affairs. He is serving his first regular term, but by appointment filled out the unexpired term of his predecessor. During the time he has been commissioner he has been active to advance the county's interests in general, and his precinct in particular, and the results of his untiring efforts will live for years to come. Especially is this noticeable in the great amount of good roads he has had built for the precinct. The Tahoka road, the road to Draw, the road to Pride, T Bar, Wells road, Six Mile Tank road, are all monuments to his service to the people. He is now engaged in building the Payne-Griffin road and putting in culverts on the Pride and T Bar roads. Mr. Miles has made a success of his own business affairs and will make a success of the county's affairs if re-elected.

Arm Broken

W. C. Lankford, who lived about five miles southwest of town, had his arm broken Monday, by being kicked by a horse. He will be laid up for several days. The arm was set by Dr. Tate, who reports the patient getting along nicely!

Letter to Voters of Lynn County

To the Voters of Lynn county:

I take this method of presenting for your consideration my candidacy for the office of County Judge and County School Superintendent of Lynn county and in connection with my announcement in this paper I wish to state my views pertaining to the office to which I aspire.

First, if I am nominated and elected to this position of trust, I promise as far as lies within my power to give the people an economical administration. It seems to me that for the past few years there has been a reckless expenditure of money which has been taken from the people in the form of taxes and this extravagance extends from the highest positions in our Government to the lowest and almost every candidate that announces for public office today is condemning this extravagance.

One other thing I wish to say in connection with the office of County School Superintendent. It seems to me that the School Superintendent should spend more time with the rural schools. I do not offer this suggestion in a spirit of criticism of the past superintendent. Possibly they devoted as much time as they thought necessary for the good of the schools but I fear that we often fail to realize the great importance of the free public schools of the state as one of the foundation stones of a free people. To train the mind to think aright and to reach right conclusions (through reasoning) on questions of life is a work that all good citizens should assist in and I promise if given this position of trust to continually work for the upbuilding of the schools.

The readers of this paper are aware of the fact that an announcement of this nature is necessarily limited as to length but permit me to say in conclusion, as the campaign progresses I shall endeavor to see the voters and shall be ever ready to state at any time my position on any public question asked.

Thanking one and all for any assistance in the campaign you may render. I remain,

Yours truly,
H. W. CALAWAY.

"The Way of a Man" Commencing Thurs.

The State Theatre has secured the "Way of a Man," a Phtheserial from the novel written by Emerson Hough. The opening chapter will be shown next Thursday night. This is a strong picture, stirring in events, educational, historic and blood-tingling. Don't miss the opening number. To see the first Chapter is to see all of them.

Veterinarian Here

R. M. Harkey, veterinarian, of Lubbock has located temporarily in O'Donnell and is assisting the farmers and ranchmen in vaccinating stock against influenza and hemorrhagic septicemia, which is now raging and killing a great many horses and mules.

Dr. Harkey states that the only control of this disease is to prevent it by vaccination. He has secured a large amount of the serum and is making his headquarters at the Christopher drug store where he is at the service of anyone desiring to have their stock treated.

Court Appoints County Agents

It was a great step forward that the Commissioners' Court made at a regular session, convening Monday, when it unanimously voted to provide Lynn county with a county agent and a home demonstration agent. This puts this county in a class of 86 other counties that are striving to better the conditions of the citizens by having the services of trained men and women to show the better way of farming, fruit growing, poultry raising, stock raising, better marketing systems and matters pertaining to home economics. The services of a county agent and a home demonstration agent are considered indispensable in the counties that are making the greatest progress, and when once tried and the people learn the value of these specialists, they become permanent fixtures and the people will not think of letting them go.

A representatives of A. & M. College met with the court and told of the values of these agents, stating that only those who had passed a rigid examination and had the endorsement of the State and of the Federal government were eligible to serve, and in case satisfaction is not given, another man or woman would be sent to take their place. He explained that the Federal government would pay more than half the expenses of this service and the county would be required to pay the remainder.

A contract was entered into with the representative of A. & M. College whereby the county agent and a home demonstration agent would be sent here to begin work on March 1st. Each will furnish their own car and pay their own expenses out of their salaries, and will be at the services of any citizen of the county asking for it.

Sam Primer returned from a two weeks business trip to Knox City Saturday.

H. W. Calaway for County Judge

H. W. Calaway places his candidacy for election to the office of county judge and county school superintendent in this issue of the Index, and in doing so, freely states his views on questions pertaining to the offices he seeks, which appear in another column. Mr. Calaway is no stranger to the old-timers in the county, having lived here for the past eight years on his farm eight miles east of O'Donnell. He has always been on the right side of law and order working for the advancement of the county's interests. He is not trying to ride in office "straddle of the fence," but states his platform in his letter and further says that he is ready at any time to state his views on any question that pertains to the office. He is ably qualified to fill the positions and if elected will serve the people to the best of his ability. Read his letter to the voters.

Big Sale of Cotton

Four hundred bales of cotton were sold to Neil P. Anderson Company of Dallas, by the O'Donnell Cotton Co. and the cotton was loaded and shipped out the same day. It is not known the price per pound paid, but the total sum involved in the transaction amounted to $53,000.

The removal of this cotton only leaves a few more bales on the local yard, and it will only be a few days until the 1923 cotton crop will pass into history.

So far as is known, this is the largest single transaction ever made in cotton on the South Plains.

T Bar Entertainment

The people of the T Bar school are planning a big time on Washington's birthday, next Friday night. Besides the literary program, a play will be given. They especially invite O'Donnell folks to attend. Music will be one of the features of the entertainment. Let's all go.

RENTS OVER NATION SHOW INCREASES

BETWEEN JULY AND NOVEMBER AVERAGE RAISE WAS 3 PER CENT.

CUTS IN THE SOUTHWEST

New York Emergency Rent Laws React Only Slightly to Advantage of Tenants.

New York.—Rents for low and medium-priced houses and apartments throughout the United States now average approximately 80 per cent higher than before the World War, according to a statement issued by the National Industrial Board. Within the last year rents have increased an average of 8 per cent, but between July and November, 1923, this dropped to 3 per cent.

The board's estimates, the result of a survey made in connection with its investigation of living costs, are based on reports from 181 cities, including most of the municipalities having a population of 50,000 or more. In 96 cities rents did not change between July and November last; in 63 there were increases, while in 22 rents went down. With only one exception, eastern cities reported an increase in the July-November interval.

Tenants of Springfield, Mass., benefited to the extent of a small cut, but in Boston, Buffalo, Jersey City, Newark, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Washington there was slight increase. No change was reported in Rochester or Baltimore.

In Flint, Mich., Oklahoma City, Toledo, and Waterloo, Iowa, the average increase was between 11 and 20 per cent; in Omaha between 21 and 30 per cent; in Clinton, Iowa, and Danville, Ill., between 31 and 40 per cent. Slight decreases were noted in Kansas City, Mo., and Minneapolis, while in Cincinnati, Detroit, Milwaukee and St. Louis rents dropped. Chicago, Cleveland and Indianapolis reported no change.

Two-fifths of the decreases for the four-month period were in Southern cities, the board's survey revealed. Rents increased in Birmingham, Memphis and San Antonio, but declined in Atlanta, Fort Worth and New Orleans.

Among the larger cities of the Pacific States there were small increases, in Portland, Ore., San Francisco and Seattle.

The board's statement said that New York's emergency rent laws, which expire next Friday, but which are expected to be renewed for two years, have "reacted only slightly to the advantage of tenants in this State."

"Although the largest rent increases reported within the closing quarter of 1923 were in Middle Western cities," it continued, "the relative greatest number of rent boosts were in the East. Binghamton showed increases of from 11 to 20 per cent between July and November, while the average of 29 Eastern cities covered in the survey was 10 per cent or less."

WILSON'S CHURCH PAYS HIM HIGH TRIBUTE

"A Great Man Has Fallen" is Subject of Sermon by Taylor.

Washington.—Tribute was paid Sunday to the memory of Woodrow Wilson in the Presbyterian Church here, where he had worshipped in his vigorous days. President and Mrs. Coolidge, and many high government officials were present to hear the Rev. Dr. James H. Taylor, deliver his sermon: "A Great Man Has Fallen" and to listen to those hymns the dead President loved. They sat near Mr. Wilson's flag-draped pew, which is to be in mourning for thirty days.

Intimate glimpses into the life of the war President were given by Dr. Taylor.

"He has paid the price of greatness by his devotion and loyalty to the vision of peace," he said, "but this great sacrifice will not be in vain. The generations that are to come will rise up and call him blessed."

"We can say of him in all due reverence that God sent a man into the world; a man of great spirit and purpose; a man of great intellectual power and moral idealism; a man who was a seer and a prophet of peace; to be a leader of his people and a friend of the world, whose name is Woodrow Wilson."

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN

Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they want to now and it does not bother me. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. JOSEPH LEMERE, 34 South Street, Lowell, Mass.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20

Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over to one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 436 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Felt Like A New Woman

Springfield, Missouri.—"For four or five months I was run-down, nervous, my back ached and I did not feel like doing a thing. Sometimes my legs ached and felt like they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in al-

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

Laxatives do not overcome constipation

"More Important to Internal Cleanliness"

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only, at the expense of permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like. Some laxatives, according to an intestinal specialist, contain poisons which affect the stomach and intestines, resulting in grave disorders. Certain laxatives are a direct cause of piles.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science, through knowledge of the intestinal tract gained by X-ray observation, has found at last in Lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Not a Medicine

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water it is harmless.

Get rid of constipation and avoid disease by adopting the habit of internal cleanliness. Take Nujol as regularly as you brush your teeth or wash your face. For sale by all druggists.

An Amazing Fact

TO many people it may seem incredible that a habit so common as coffee-drinking can be harmful. Yet if your doctor were to enumerate the common causes of indigestion, headache, and run-down condition, he would be likely to mention coffee.

If you are troubled with insomnia, nervousness, or are inclined to be high-strung, try Postum in place of coffee for thirty days, and note the difference in the way you feel, and how much better you sleep.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage, absolutely free from caffeine, or any harmful drug.

"THE WAY OF A MAN"

By EMERSON HOUGH, Author of the "Covered Wagon"
 A Great Novel :-: A Greater Serial. Ten Chapters of Wild West Thrills
 February 21 - Beginning Thursday Night - February 21

Educational Historic

This great Serial contains Ten Chapters of epic-making drama, pioneer perils! Red Skins! Action!

Leads

ALLENE RAY
HAROLD MILLER

Location

Frontier America
Gold Rush Land
Western Trails

Follow the trail of your pioneer forefathers across the Great American Desert.

See portrayed in its true setting the hardships, trials and tribulations they encountered in trekking across the unchartered Plains.

It is a romance of early America in the West

You see pioneer perils; Indian fights; danger; daring and courageous deeds of frontier life

You see strong men and brave women

You live and feel the loves, fears, hates and tears of those who blazed a trail from east to west in their covered wagons!

Don't Miss Seeing It, and by all means let your children see it

Chapter One: 'Into the Unknown'

After the mysterious murder of John Cowles' father, the estate was found to be heavily involved. John goes West to borrow money from Colonel Meriwether, his father's partner in the ownership of coal fields. At Ft. McDowell he finds the Colonel has gone further West. He stops there long enough to attend a military masked ball, and nearly engages in a duel with a masked man who proves to be Gordon Orme, a recent acquaintance who professes great friendship for John.

Chapter Two: 'Redskin and White'

John rescues Ellen from the Indian, but the girl still snubs him. Orme, for a mysterious reason of his own, follows John. He has a narrow escape from Indians before joining the little band of pioneers, who have made camp. Through his treachery, the Indians go on the warpath and attack the camp. Outnumbered, the whites are losing. An arrow stabs John in the neck and, while protecting him, Ellen is attacked. A hand-to-hand encounter now between redskins and whites.

Chapter Three: 'In the Toils of the Torrent'

U.S. Cavalry arrive and drive off the Indians. John's wound is serious and only an operation, which Orme says he can perform will remove the arrow. Ellen, suspicious of Orme's treachery, denounces him, but he operates as carefully as though he were the friend he pretends to be. The settlers move on. A sudden cloudburst traps John and Ellen in a canyon.

Chapter Four: 'Lost in the Wilds'

The rain stops and the water subsides, but Ellen and John are lost from the convoy. Due to his wound and the weeks of privation, John becomes ill. In the madness of his fever he nearly kills Ellen who, with herbs, nurses him back to sanity. He is then captured by the Indians, who bind him to a stake and torture him before burning.

Chapter Five: 'White Medicine'

Ellen's miraculous appearance in the Indian camp amazes and frightens the Indians and they permit her to release John from the stake. But getting him out of the camp requires further proof that she is a wonder-working medicine woman. Auberry, out of sight of the Indians, helps her in their carefully rehearsed plan, but they reach a point where they can no longer work miracles for the Indians and their lives are in danger.

Chapter Six: 'The Firing Squad'

Auberry saves John and Ellen by another "miracle," and the Indians decide that their white wonder-workers must not be lost to the tribe and they must be united by Indian marriage. John declares to Ellen the love he has been unable to suppress, but says nothing of Grace. They effect an escape and at the military post Ellen finds her father, who has been apprised by Orme that John is engaged to a girl in Virginia. Meriwether is furious that John should be false to one girl and deceive another, and refuses to lend him money. That night Meriwether is murdered and John is found guilty. At daybreak he faces the firing squad.

Chapter Seven: 'Gold! Gold'

Ellen finds evidence that prove John innocent and Orme guilty, and she is in time to save the man she loved, in spite of his deception. Orme, accused of the crime, makes a get-away. John starts back East, but in Independence find his mother, who has journeyed West with his fiancée, Grace. Orme is also there and secretly makes an appointment with Grace.

Chapter Eight: 'The Fugitive'

White John is searching Independence for Orme he is revealing to Grace the reason for his mysterious action. He represents a syndicate that is trying to control all the valuable coal lands of the South. Grace is suspicious that he killed both Meriwether and John's father, but working on her infatuation for him, he prevails upon her to elope with him after a terrific fight with John makes flight imperative. Pursued by soldiers, they race away in a covered wagon, which falls over a cliff.

Chapter Nine: 'California'

Grace jumped before the wagon plunged into space, but Orme is believed drowned. He is hiding under bushes, his leg broken. Gypsies find him, and when he is restored to health, he accompanies them to California in search of gold. John and his mother desire to try their luck in California. Ellen also goes, and, when she overhears certain plans of Orme's, her life is in danger.

Chapter Ten: 'Trail's End'

With the help of a gypsy girl who hates Orme and seeks vengeance, he is trapped. In a fight he is wounded and dies, confessing that he killed John's father, as well as Meriwether. Grace is also mortally wounded, and her last act is to clasp the hands of Ellen and John and wish them happiness.

EMERSON HOUGH Author

The name of Emerson Hough spells spectacular Western American drama, epics of the of the pioneer and pathfinders who blazed the trails of civilization from Maine to California.

Hough was born in Iowa, and practiced law in New Mexico, but turned from law to the cattle range and the hunting field. He soon became familiar with every aspect of outdoor life in the West and actually saw the Old West give way to the New.

This story by Emerson Hough is charged with vivid and virile vitality. It is speedy and full of heart appeal.

The locations are that unplumbed country where the historo-making pioneer wagons passed

The thrills equal in intensity any hair-raising, spine tingling action ever seen on the screen

O'DONNELL, TEXAS

John East of Plainview, was a business visitor here Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Sanders and little daughter visited relatives in Big Spring Sunday and Monday.

W. W. Wilcox of Hopkins county, is a new arrival, and has engaged in the lumber business, establishing his yard on the south of the square.

A. F. Cause of the Wells community, was a visitor in town Wednesday. He stated that his father, F. W. Cause, of Henrietta, had been visiting him but had returned home Monday. Mr. Cause said the Wells school was progressing nicely, but on account so many newcomers coming in, the school building was taxed to its capacity to take care of the pupils.

W. C. Wasson, who has traded and trafficked from the Atlantic to the Pacific, munched his way over the snow-covered mountains of Alaska and fought mosquitoes in Tampico says that little old O'Donnell is good enough for him to locate in, and right here he is going to stay and grow up with the town. In order to keep busy until the cotton season opens, he states that he will engage in the handling of planting seed and feedstuffs for the farmers.

The many O'Donnell friends of Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Estes will be pleased to learn that they have moved to town this week. They have built a cottage in the southeast part of town. A hearty welcome is extended these good people.

Mrs. B. O. Ballow and children are visiting her mother at Athens, Texas.

T Bar Topics

This interesting letter from T Bar came in too late for last week's Index—Editor.

T Bar is still moving right along. Everybody busy and more interest than ever before is being taken in school and community affairs.

The basket ball teams, both boys and girls, played Wells school last Friday afternoon. The boys tied in their game and the girls made a score of 10 to 20 in favor of Wells.

Friday night Wells came over and spelled against T Bars, honors going to T Bar. Of course, we are always glad to win.

Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Estes are moving to O'Donnell. We are sorry to see them leave us as they have been so much help in our community.

Mrs. John McMillan has been quite ill the past week.

Little Hazel Moore has developed a case of the measles.

L. H. Moore is smiling all the while since he has his new teeth.

Bob Terry, one of our enthusiastic farmers, has so much faith in Lynn county that he brakes land all day and digs in a cellar at night.

Miss Velma Slaughter, Mr. and Mrs. Shaw, from O'Donnell, were out at our spelling bee Friday night. We are always glad to have our old neighbors back with us.

Services held at T Bar school house Saturday night and Sunday morning. Although the weather was disagreeable, there were a large number out. Mr. Estes announced to have singing at R. E. Townson's Sunday night.

Mr. Stobbs, who is breaking sod for Mr. Davis, had a long distance call from Stamford, stating that his baby was very ill.

G. W. Short is contemplating moving back to his farm. We will be glad to see this family back at T Bar.

Miss Roberta Waldrip, who broke her arm recently cranking a car, is in school again. We are glad to have her back at school.

Miss Dell Walker, who was sick, is better at this writing.

Our girls were very blue Monday morning when they came to school and found one of their goals blown down by that gentle west wind of Sunday night. The trustees were right on the job and fixed it up and the girls are playing ball again. Wells tells us that we don't have any ball team. Never mind, Wells, we are practicing and he hope to make the next game interesting at least.

Some of our newcomers are blue over that awful sand storm Sunday and Monday. Some of the pioneers will tell you that was only a sample.

The Young People's Class will have a business meeting immediately after Sunday School on Sunday, February 17. All members are requested to be present.

J. H. Smoot, mostly known in West Texas as "John Henry,"

Smoot, was a visitor here last week, coming over from Borden county where he has been living since 1890.

Mr. Smoot was surprised to see the great improvements going on here and like many others at once got the fever and began to talk trade with the real estate men.

He helped organize Borden county and only for a measly trick played on him, the county seat would have been built on his section.

He had the land cut up in town lots, butchered a beef and made it into mulligan, hauled up some creek water to make coffee and to quench the thirst of those who did not drink the beverage and invited all the people of the county to enjoy the feast, promising to give each head of a family a deed to three lots, not to buy their votes but to show his heart was in the right place.

It was seen by a promoter of one of the rival towns that something had to be done or Mr. Smoot's "Texas City" would be the future county seat, so they polluted his barrels of water with a very liberal quantity of a viscid vegetable oil expressed from the seeds of a tropical plant.

The meeting broke up right away and the news spread all over the county that the "water at Texas City was pizen," and lost the county seat.

Duds for Spring and Winter Wear

There are evening gowns of splendid brocades, metal and silk; handsome embroidered fur-trimmed gowns for afternoon; wraps, furs, sport suits, tea gowns, lingerie. In contrast with these, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, are the summery frocks and trappings for the Southern seashore—bathing suits, sunshades, frilly muslin frocks and floppy hats. Just around the corner from this touch of spring are the gorgeous fur wraps, the heavy wool sport suits and overcoats with bushy fur collars, and all the things that go with sleds and skates, snowshoes and hockey sticks.

An exhibit always interesting to womanhood is the lingerie. Front windows and whole cases are given over to it, and within, counters are piled with a stock of new and beautiful things in all the colors of the rainbow and a great many more.

By the old-time standards, no woman of refinement wore anything but white lingerie, and that of cotton or cotton or linen. The annual or semi-annual "occasion" was announced as a "white" sale. But the new idea is quite otherwise as to both fabric and color. White is the exception, and the fine linen lawns and sheer batiste are largely worn by the woman of old-fashioned or at least thoroughly conservative taste.

Muslin lingerie, except only the exquisitely embroidered and lace-trimmed undergarments of the most delicate quality, has a homespun, almost plebeian look. It must be admitted, and certainly the younger generation will have none of it. For them are the gossamer chiffons and georgettes, the clinging crepes and satins, and in almost every shade but white.

In the lovely nightgowns, pajamas, chemises, "step-ins" and shirts there is never a hint of warmth. They are for beauty and the delicious feeling that comes in the contact with soft, fine materials, though some of the crepes and satins are washable and practical and are of longer life than the white garments that stand the tests of bleach and starch.

The actual goods of which today's lingerie is fashioned are crepe de chine, wash satin, pussy willow, georgette, crepe chiffon and chiffon. Some extravagances, of course, appear to gratify the fancy of those so minded; for example, gayly colored satins printed in Oriental and batik patterns. But these are the freak features that usually are presented in contrast to the conventional article.

A palette of all the most enchanting colors known is suggested in the lingerie one finds piled in order in the tables in the best shops. It is no longer a matter of pink, blue, yellow or white, for these have been shaded in many degrees, and countless other colors, poetic and lovely, have been added. Nightgowns in orchid, jade, coral, rose, peach, apricot, hydrangea, hyacinth, lilac, lavender, pearl, oyster and ivory are matched in the other garments to form complete sets. In the deeper shades these are duplicated—purple, emerald, orange, flame, gendarme blue, and some of the most bizarre in black-and-white or all black.

In other words, lingerie in the present mode is no longer a secondary matter in the toilet, but is one of its most important features. The style of trimming the newest things is ordinarily simple, and of necessity, like the things themselves, dainty and fine. The materials are so sheer and soft that little more is required than a trimming of lace about the neck and armholes—in lieu of sleeves—with, perhaps, entre deux in the front. But this is invariably of the finest lace, Irish, filet or valenciennes.

Exceptional sets of lingerie are much more elaborate, with lace inserted to the waist, alternating with strips of the finest needlework on the material, and here and there a tiny nosegay of silk flowers. One gown of this description shown in an exclusive lingerie shop is made of peach-colored georgette. At the decollete neck is a rather deep yoke of pointe applique lace, long strips of which are inserted horizontally to a point below the waistline. Alternating with the lace is a delicate trailing design of needlework, and lace finishes the armholes and the bottom of the gown, which is cut in deep scallops. The front of the gown, skirt length, is laid in tiny plaits, and at the sides of the lower part is gathered to the blouse, as in a dress. This is one of the types of robes-de-nuit which might easily be mistaken for an elaborate negligee or tea gown.

More radical than the new fashions in fabric and color is the cut of the garment. The chemise in its original form is passe. It adds too much in bulky dry goods about the figure, which should be slim. The substitute answers the purpose of two articles worn hitherto, and often is the one garment beneath the lined dress or slip.

Discarding the Corset.
The discarding of the corset is so universal that some of the fashionable modistes predict an absolutely corsetless idyl within a very few years.

For the night, pajamas and gowns are about equal in popularity. Some women resist the more masculine innovation, however chic, and cling to the soft, rosy clouds of gentle stuffs that are so graceful. The opposite type prefers the Chinese coat and trousers, and for these some exceedingly smart suits are shown. Two styles are to be had, the tailored and the fancy, dresser kind. By "tailored" is meant a plain coat of Chinese cut, the edge of double silk—sometimes of a different color, and hemstitched about. It is usually fastened with "frogs" or other stiff little ornaments and flat buttons.

In the fancy night outfit of the same title, the "coat" is a little decollete, sleeveless affair, very short and trimmed with lace edging. The other half of this pajama suit is gathered Turkish fashion at the ankle and finished with the same lace as that on the coat. All of these are made of the loveliest crepes, chiffons, georgettes and satins, in most delicious colors, with now and then an extreme novelty in something Egyptian, batik, Chinese or otherwise.

Lingerie Gowns Liked by Women

Passing the fresh and alluring supply of lingerie, there are attractions that are worth the while of women who desire to dress well at the most reasonable price. In all of the larger shops are offered racks full of gowns and wraps that are really truly bargains. There are serviceable modish one-piece gowns and coat dresses of Poiret twill, flannel, kasha, or any of the lightweight woollens, many of them trimmed with fancy braid and buttons, some with worsted needlework in bright colors. There are, also, smart crepe and satin frocks with the new plaited skirt and a touch of embroidery or other artistic feature. And foulards, crepe de chine, Roshanara and voile gowns for morning and afternoon wear that will answer for the early spring season.

One especial opportunity is the lingerie gown. This is the dainty, essentially feminine dress made of fine net and muslin, French embroidery and lace, that is ever a treasure in the wardrobe of a smartly dressed woman. It has the advantage of being as fait for daytime or evening, and it possesses unlimited possibilities.

Slipper buckles are as ornamental and often as valuable as jewels for the hand or neck, and stockings are elaborated to something quite other than they have ever been before. In the fine wool stockings the latest thing is large plaids, checks and stripes. Some of the Scotch plaids recall the gaudy things in which the small fry of long ago delighted.

A Tale of the Flatwoods

"How picturesquely that cabin nestles there in the pocket of the hills."
"A man named Belden, and his sister, lives there," the girl said, following the direction of his upraised arm. "They're Kentucky mountain folks that jst moved in—they say the sister's quite pretty."

The preacher seemed to be studying the place, with its wild wealth of nature about it, his eyes straying at length from the cabin to its tumbled setting of cliffs and down along the opposite bluffs, mantled with half-sprung leaves, abloom with haw and dogwood and wild apple, until, as he twisted around in the saddle, the whole beautiful panorama of the narrow valley had passed in review before him back to the winding road by which they had entered.

As the girl followed his roving eyes, a black dead limb at the top of Eagle Oak, towering high above the quaking foliage, came into view. She raised her arm and pointed up and away to the lofty landmark.

"That's where the big gray eagle's be'n comin' every summer—sence white men first come t' the Flatwoods, I guess. Look—jst over the top o' that scrub poplar, stickin' up ag'nst that white cloud."

"I see it!" the man of books exclaimed, the simple gesture of pointing out to the distant landmark revealing the native grace that might still have been his but for the stooped and studious air that life had imposed upon him. "It stands out against the fluffy whiteness plain as a flagstaff."

"Nobody in the Flatwoods would think of harmin'—"

She stopped, with a low exclamation, for the woodsman had suddenly straightened in his saddle and had jerked his hand toward the cabin squatting against the bluffs up the hollow. The others followed the motion of his hand and sat staring.

Loge Belden's sister had appeared from behind the cabin and was running toward them. She had nearly reached the bushes that fringed what might be called the front of the yard, when Belden appeared in the open door. He threw up his hand and called out a word or two, which did not quite carry to the three riders.

The mountain girl stopped and hesitated; turned and went slowly back. Belden stood aside; she entered the door; Belden closed it.

Jack was watching the preacher. He saw his quick grip on the bridle rein; saw him stiffen in the saddle and glance uneasily about.

"Astonishing! Quite extraordinary!" escaped him as the tense brief drama closed.

"Mercy!" Textie exclaimed. "I never knowed she was—crazy."
"She ain't," the woodsman muttered.

The preacher glanced around at him; threw up his head and exploded his blaree laugh. It was a queer moment for a laugh, and a queer laugh for the moment.

"Not bad philosophy, that," he said. "People are not always as crazy as they—act."

That the preacher was acting, the woodsman fully believed, but the acting was just a shade overdone—a circumstance that could hardly escape such a man as Jack Warhope, particularly after the chance clues that had first set his suspicions going. Why he was acting and what part, the woodsman was not missing any chances to find out.

The three riders sat for some time looking toward the cabin in the pocket, Textie and the preacher discussing the astonishing drama that had flared up for its tense moment in the elbow of the hills.

But the drama evidently had but one act, and that act was closed. It seemed to the woodsman, as he covertly watched the preacher, lolling with overdone awkwardness in his saddle, that he showed just a shade of relief that it was closed.

The sun, a red warrior on the homeward trail, had journeyed far down the palling fastnesses of the sky; had ducked behind a huge cloud bank piled like a breastworks across the west. Presently, finding a loop-hole in the turreted cumuli, he gazed back at the pursuing shadows; launched a shaft that fell spent and quivering upon Eagle run and shivered into glittering splinters upon the rifle.

Glum at the missed shaft, the red warrior took his eye from the loop-hole; drew farther back behind the massed fortifications; unstrung his bow. The pursuing shadows stole down the bluffs; dulled the water; dimmed the woods; waked the breeze and shook the wild apple twigs till the white blossoms snowed the grass—symbol of the hopes of men, that bloom, promise fruit, die.

The girl noticed the shadows. Her eyes left the cabin; glanced up and down the opposite bluff, where, under the brow of the wooded escarpment, objects were already beginning to dim.

The girl's roving glance stopped at a black walnut tree ten or fifteen yards away, where some frost-blasted walnuts of the season before still clung to a blighted limb. She swept a finger toward them, dropped her hand to the revolver at her belt and looked around at the woodsman. He caught the challenge in her eye, grinned and nodded.

With a quickness and skill that showed her mastery of the weapon, she plucked the revolver from its holster, raised it and fired. The first bullet cut a twig close to a walnut, the second brought one down.

Every horse there had been trained to stand under gun-fire. Rex merely pointed his ears sharply forward and stood to his tracks, but, even with such a firm saddle under him, the preacher flinched so at the first shot that he almost lost his balance. The second brought an effusive exclamation from him.

The slow eyes of the woodsman livened.

"Good!" he cried. "Ther ain't another girl in the Flatwoods can do that."

With a little wisp of a smile in her eyes she glanced around at him, and turned to the preacher.

"Now, Mr. Hopkins, you can try y'ur new six-gun."

The preacher almost set up a breeze in the little valley with the gesticulations of his expressive hands; made a heavy draft on his ample stock of effusive exclamations, and finally fumbled the ivory-handled six-gun out of its holster.

He committed the blunder of cocking it with both thumbs—a bit of overacting that did not escape the man backing Graylock in apparent stolidness.

After a deal of coaching from Textie, the preacher poked the revolver forward and pulled the trigger. There was nothing to indicate that the bullet even came near the target. He threw his head back and exploded his raucous laugh. Rex had stood firm under the shot; he shied at the laugh.

The preacher brought the horse back alongside of Brownie and fired again—the bullet smacked somewhere against the opposite bluff, but apparently did not even fan a walnut. He studied the revolver a moment, fixed his spectacles tighter on his nose, and settled seriously to the task; held the weapon in both hands, and aimed a long time—result the same.

Then the girl threw up her revolver and fired again. The bullet cut a nick in the rotted outer hull of a walnut, and she turned to the woodsman.

"Now, Jack, it's your turn."
"Aw, I couldn't hit one of 'em."
"Come on," she coaxed. "I ain't seen y'u shoot none since—let's see—way b'fore corn plantin'."

He looked at her curiously, and shifted in his saddle. The preacher had half turned and watched him narrowly.

Suddenly the revolver leaped from the woodsman's side and darted about over the blighted limb. Three shots rang out; three walnuts flew into fragments and crumbled down upon the leaves.

The preacher had straightened in the saddle and sat watching the wonderful marksmanship with an eye that suddenly kindled to flint and flame; but as the third walnut shattered to dust and crumbs, the stoop came back to his shoulders, the air of tired studiousness to his face.

The girl turned to the woodsman, her fine eyes alive.

"You could 'a' got three more!"
The light in the brown eyes kindled a response in the gray; a slow smile crawled across his bold features.

"It's ag'in the law o' woods t' be caught with an empty gun," he said, with a seriousness that set her wondering, as he felt for the powder flask and bullets in his pouch.

In the dusk of the evening, as they rode back to the village, the girl stopped her horse in front of the old cabin, deserted and gloomy, that squatted against the side-hill a few yards back from the Eagle Hollow road—the uncanny hovel that the woodsman had gazed down upon from the top of the bluff that morning while watching the swallows dart in and out of its ruined chimney.

"That place is enough to give one the—creeps," was the preacher's comment as he reined in Rex beside Brownie.

The girl turned in her saddle and sat for some time looking the place over—the gate now long unused, its hinges black with rust; the rank weeds and sprouts growing close up to the sagging door; the single small front window now yellow with clay that the rains had washed from between the logs; the rude clapboards of the roof warped, loosened, displaced—the crumbling remnants of what had once been a home, now desolate and forsaken under its somber canopy of trees.

"It's the cabin of dead Henry Spencer," she said, "where he murdered his wife and infant daughter with 'is ax one bitter cold night when 'e was drunk, and then wandered out and froze t' death in the snow."

"I've heard the story—from your—ah—brother—and so this is the place?"

"This is the place."

"But not all the story—"

He glanced around at her quickly.

"No, not all"—she spoke slowly; her words half a question—"they say he—comes back."

The preacher's teeth gleamed white through his heavily bearded lips; his sarcastic exclamation point of a laugh jarred the silence of the placid valley.

"Why, Miss Textie, this is the Nineteenth century, not the Fourteenth."

"Yes,—in red embarrassment—"

"but that's what they say."

He looked around at her again, with that same half-cynical expression that came so easily to his face, as he gathered up the reins.

With the mountain girl's hurried warning still fresh in his mind, the woodsman glanced covertly about him as they rode on—something he had been constantly doing since first entering the hollow. As he did so, the uncanny cabin happened to come again under his eyes. A slight met them that for the instant shook even his iron composure—a face at the window was peering at them through the clay-smudged pane.

The face ducked out of sight, and, without so much as a flick of the bridle rein—precisely as if he had seen nothing at all—the woodsman rode on. He glanced at the preacher, but apparently he had not seen the face. If he had he gave no sign.

CHAPTER XIV

The Scrape of a Match.

While grooming Graylock in his stall that evening Jack Warhope thought of the face that had appeared for its startling instant at the smudged window of Henry Spencer's unhallowed cabin. As a matter of fact, he had been thinking of it ever since riding out of the jaws of the hollow.

He hung up the curry comb and stepped to the barn door. The sun glared red through a slit in the cloud-bank, and still cleared the trees on the distant foothills by a yard—enough for the purpose he contemplated.

A moment later he was climbing the rough path that led to the uplands. Pausing, to search critically the woods in every direction, he then stole away, toward the ill-reputed cabin of the dead woodchopper.

The sun just edged the tree-tops when he came opposite the place. Down in the bottom of the hollow the shadows lay heavy, but the light still touched the uncanny hovel squatted against the hillside.

Stealing through the bushes and brambles, he crept up to the place under cover of the fallen oak, with its festoons of wild cucumber vines. Near the corner most densely hidden by the vines a chink had dropped out from between the logs, leaving a narrow crevice. Shading his eyes, he peeped within. The cabin was empty.

Hugging the wall closely, he crept around to the sagging door; softly pushed it open. His eyes lifted at what he saw—an old box on end near what had once been the fireplace, an empty whisky bottle on the box, with a lamp standing beside it ready to light; a blanket ready to hang over the smudged window.

The dusty floor was covered with tracks—man tracks—one man's. Stepping so as carefully to set his feet in the tracks, he entered the cabin and closed the door.

DASHEEN REPORTED GAINING IN FAVOR

Vegetable Contains More Food Than Potatoes.

It took the French Faculty of Medicine, the controller general of finance in France and the pope to convince the people of Europe in 1771 that the potato was good to eat and would sustain life instead of utterly destroying it, as so many feared. Now, as nearly everybody knows, the potato is not feared at all. This bit of history is added to a statement of the Department of Agriculture to encourage those engaged in promoting the dasheen industry.

The dasheen is a vegetable with food qualities similar to those of the potato, but because it is drier it contains about 50 per cent more actual food than an equal weight of potato. It has a nutty flavor and is so mealy that even the worst of cooks can serve it without sogginess.

According to the department, there are many growers of the dasheen in Florida and because the vegetable was introduced here by explorers of the department, the growers of the plant are getting all possible aid from the government.

The dasheen first appeared here about fifteen years ago, but instead of being hailed as a wonderful new crop plant it was jeered at, ridiculed, condemned and damned with faint praise. But neither the government nor the farmer engaged in raising it have become discouraged and the dasheen, it is confidently predicted, will before long come to be considered as an indispensable article and as a most tempting part of a meal no matter whether it appears baked, fried, in a salad, as chips a la Saratoga, or in any of many other forms.

The statement of the department says of the dasheen:

"Experimental work has proved the value of the dasheen and the possibility of producing it on a commercial scale. Farmers who recognized its high potential value since its introduction have kept on growing it, eating it and marketing it when they could, and the Oriental populations of our large cities kept on eating it when they could get it. Thus the high production and consumption of dasheens gradually increased until the equivalent of ten carloads found its way to northern markets each season.

"However, some of these forward-looking farmers, finding that they could grow dasheens more successfully than most other crops, decided the vegetable ought to be introduced to our people more generally. They consequently formed in Nassau county, Fla., a Dasheen Growers' association, two of the principal objects of which were to market a more uniformly high-grade product and to keep this on the market steadily wherever a demand was found.

"With the co-operation of a system of local chain stores and other friendly interests in the near-by city of Jacksonville, this farmers' organization is meeting with considerable success in making the dasheen a familiar food product in that city. Housewives are learning how best to prepare it for their families and are forming the habit of providing it occasionally."

Using a Hard One

Waldo's teacher had asked him to write a sentence containing the word "amphibious," and as Waldo is only twelve he had some trouble spelling the word, but after several calls on teacher for aid, evidently got it written to his satisfaction. Then ensued a long period of concentration and wriggling. It was broken when Waldo asked how to spell "containing."

At last he laid the results of his labor on the teacher's desk and this is what she read:

"My teacher has asked me to write a sentence containing the word amphibious."

That's the Main Trick.

Don't Blame the Hen!

Whose fault is it if your hens don't lay eggs? Before you blame the hen, ask yourself these questions:

1. Am I feeding a proper egg-making ration?
2. Is it manufactured by scientific authorities?
3. Am I sure the feed is always uniform?
4. Has it been proved by others in practical tests?

The way to answer "yes" to all four questions is to feed PURINA CHICKEN CHOWDER and PURINA HEN CHOW—made and guaranteed by feeding authorities, proved by millions of poultry raisers. Sold in checkerboard bags by
