A WORD OF THANKS

This is the last issue of the Index of which I will be the editor, having sold my half interest to my partner, W. H. Ritzenthaler, two weeks ago. In taking my leave I wish to extend to the good people of this community my sincere thanks for the many courtesies shown and the splendid business accorded the paper during my stay in your midst.

It has been a distinct pleasure to have the privilege of living among as fine people as those who live in O'Donnell, and Mrs. Carter joins me in wishing for you all the best that good fortune brings. Again, I say, I thank you.

O. D. CARTER

A WORD TO OUR READERS

As previously announced, with this issue there comes a change in the ownership of the Index.

We are happy indeed that we are to remain in this community, for, while our stay has been short, we have made many acquaintances, all of whom we are happy to have the pleasure of knowing. We like the broad friendly and hearty handshakes of welcome, so characteristic of West Texas and particularly of O'Donnell.

As we take over full management and editorship it is not without a full realization of the big task that confronts us that of giving to O'Donnell, and her trade territory, a newspaper that is hitting a community such as this. However, it is not only our intention to maintain the high standard and policies that have been ours since March of this year, but, rather through our labors to improve the Index that it may gain friends and recognition among our readers.

Our ultimate aim is a paper to which the people of O'Donnell may point with pride, and a paper that may have a part in every constructive program.

Speaking for Mrs. Ritzenthaler and myself, we wish to thank the many friends for the kindnesses extended to us in O'Donnell and to express our deep appreciation for the liberal portion of your retrospectives, and respectfully solicit a continuance in the future.

W. H. RITZENTHALER.

WELCOME, MR. DRAKE

The Lamb County Leader at Littlefield last week passed into the hands of new management, and to celebrate the change a 16-page paper was published. Jess Mitchell who for the past eight years has guided the destinies of the Leader, has sold to Morley B. Drake, Mr. Mitchell has not announced his plans for the future. The Index welcomes Editor Drake into the South Plains newspaper fraternity and wishes him success in his new field.

FARM CLUB WORK

Rural boys and girls are far outstripping their parents in the study of improved practices in farm and home work, according to a recent announcement, by the Department of Agriculture, which shows that more demonstrations had been conducted by young people's clubs than by those of adult membership.

Considerably more than half a million farm boys and girls now participate in these demonstrations, which include the raising of various crops, animal husbandry, handling of poultry, food preparation, designing and making of clothing, home improvement and beautification, and in fact every phase of rural life.

Instruction in these activities, imparted by farm and home demonstration agents, serves to aid these boys and girls in improving rural farm and home practices, thereby fitting them to become efficient farmers and homemakers besides teaching them the fundamentals of public-spirited, useful citizenship.

While the country-wide results obtained in club work are gratifying, considering the circumstances under which the effort has been put forth, the Department points out that only about one rural boy and girl in seventy has the benefit of this training at present.

Here is a field for constructive achievement which should interest all who who have a regard for the importance of improving the conditions of rural living.

Some girls are constantly in love, though not necessarily content.

People will buy anything on installments except a savings account.

After the first 80 years the hardest ordeal are the birthday interviews.

Beautiful girls are more plentiful than intellectual ones, says a grouch who adds that this is in keeping with the demand.

Correct this sentence: "He has been in the legislature three terms and hasn't introduced a single fool."

THE NEW ECONOMIC PRINCIPLE

Food, clothing and fuel are the three vital human necessities.

Due to extreme competition in the lines of business and industry which supply the necessities, drastic price fluctuations occur.

How to eliminate losses that result to producers or consumers by too low or too high prices, has been the eternal problem. How to maintain fair, instead of ruinous competition, or how to permit consolidations and mergers which do not restrict trade and artificially raise prices, are questions of the utmost public interest.

Readiness is being made, however, as is illustrated in the co-operative efforts of the oil industry to prevent waste, the Federal Farm Board to stabilize farm prices and the interconnection of electric facilities to give both urban and rural America uniform power service and rates.

The most difficult field in which these principles may be applied, is food production and distribution. The experiments of the General Food Corporation in consolidating 40 or more noncompetitive food producing concerns to stabilize or reduce production, distribution and retail costs, is being watched with interest. The plan should work out to the advantage of customers, producers and manufacturers alike.

FARM ROADS AND SMALL TOWNS

A nation-wide movement is underway to bring about the construction, on an extensive scale, of secondary or farm-to-market roads. So long as 75 per cent of American farmers are cut off from their markets during several months of each year by impassable roads, we will have an "agricultural problem."

Good secondary roads would benefit many persons besides farmers, stockkeepers in many small towns. They would allow the farmer to go 20 to 50 miles for his necessities or amusements. They would offer tourists the attraction of new territory and freedom from traffic congestion found on main highways. They would bring greater prosperity to the farmer and give him more money to spend.

Brains, rock and a little asphalt can pull the farmer out of the mud for much less cost than the loss now suffered because of bad roads.

Often a man pays a lawyer for advice his wife would give him for nothing.

It isn't wise to assert too much personality at a busy street intersection.

Who remembers when good ladies tried to reform old soaks by getting them to sign the pledge?

If Socrates had practiced a while with moonshine, he hemlock would have acted as a soothing potion.

News Sidelights

Babe Ruth is evidently looking forward to the time when he will be able to earn $80,000 a year on the diamond, so he is going to become a storekeeper. He will this fall open "Babe Ruth's Shop for Men" in New York, featuring haberdashery and hardware. But he will be battling them over the fence for the Yankees next year, as usual.

Anthony Fokker, famed designer and builder of some 40,000 airplanes a few days ago. To celebrate the reunion he took her for a hop and did many fancy stunts while up. Upon landing he was arrested and fined $500 for unlawful stunting, because he had no U. S. license.

Rev. Billy Sunday doesn't believe in mixing politics and religion too much, judging from his recent remark: "Some of our church pillars would not be so noisy in politics and so quiet in religion if God owned their mouths."

Fame takes varied forms, one of which is that attributed to Fred Burke, wanted for alleged participation in the noted Chicago massacre of seven Morgan gangsters on February 14, 1929. In recent dispatches Burke was rated a top-notch being characterized as "the most widely hunted gunman in the United States."

Abraham Lincoln, who reckoned that the Lord loved the common people because he made so many of them, might be surprised to look down from his present supposed eminence to see that two of his granddaughters are millionaires, and therefore no longer common people. Mary Lincoln Isham and Jessie Lincoln Randolph, the granddaughters referred to, have these fortunes through securities in bakery and electrical enterprises, left by their late father, Robert Todd Lincoln.

Most of us envy the fellow who is morally and financially independent enough to stay away from people and places that bore him stiff.

NEW MOORE

Miss Gracie Nelson and Miss Stranier spent Sunday with Miss Kunice and Thelma Pendleton. We had to omit church Saturday night on account of the election.

There was a large crowd at Sunday school Sunday and at church on Sunday night.

Brother Penegrass and wife and son spent the day with J. W. Nelson and family.

Mr. Ray Bevel and Mr. Clarence Green are gone.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Pendleton were visitors in Mr. J. L. Lesters home at O'Donnell.

Mrs. Audre Rogers was visiting in New Moore Wednesday.

Mrs. Beulah Gardenhire has been brought home from the Lubbock Sanitarium and is improving nicely according to the latest reports from her.

Mr. Jesse Gilham and Mr. Roberson came home last week. They have been at Singer, Texas at work.

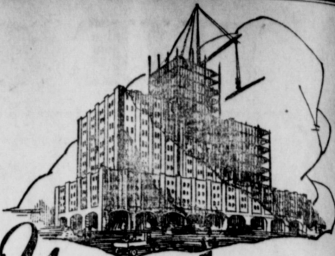

We are missing Mr. Nichols daily on his route, and are hoping he will soon be back on his job.

Mrs. Flora Mae Rodgers has been sick for the past two weeks. She is not doing so well now.

Mr. Light's family is taking a trip to Roscoe.

Mr. Walter Rogers had a severe accident last week. While crossing a railroad track a train hit his truck and completely demolished it. The truck was carried near a half mile down the track. Luckily, however, Mr. Rogers was not seriously injured. Nevertheless, Mr. Rogers is of the opinion that a train cannot be troubled with such a small thing as a truck.

American progress will not last so long as there are enough corners for the filling stations.

Meeting the Needs of Millions of People

The low-priced automobile has brought greater opportunity and added hours of recreation to millions of men and women.

BECAUSE the automobile is such an important factor in the lives and prosperity of so many people, the purpose of the Ford Motor Company is something more than the mere manufacture of a motor car.

There is no service in simply setting up a machine or a plant and letting it turn out goods. The service extends into every detail of the business—design, production, the wages paid and the selling price. All are a part of the plan.

The Ford Motor Company looks upon itself as charged with making an automobile that will meet the needs of millions of people and to provide it at a low price. That is its mission. That is its duty and its obligation to the public.

The search for better ways of doing things is never-ending. There is ceaseless, untiring effort to find new methods and new machines that will save steps and time in manufacturing. The Ford plants are, in reality, a great mechanical university, dedicated to the advancement of industry. Many manufacturers come to see and share the progress made.

The greatest progress comes by never standing still. Today's methods, however successful, can never be taken as wholly right. They represent simply the best efforts of the moment. Tomorrow must bring an improvement in the methods of the day before. Hard work usually finds the way.

Once it was thought impossible to cast gray iron by the endless chain method. All precedent was against it and every previous experiment had failed. But fair prices to the public demanded that wasteful methods be eliminated. Finally the way was found.

A better way of making axle shafts saved thirty-six million dollars in four years. A new method of cutting crankshafts reduced the cost by $500,000 a year. The perfection of a new machine saved a similar amount on such a little thing as one bolt. Then electric welding was developed to make many bolts unnecessary and to increase structural strength.

Just a little while ago, an endless chain conveyor almost four miles long was installed at the Rouge plant. This conveyor has a daily capacity of 300,000 parts weighing more than 2,000,000 pounds. By substituting the tireless, unvarying machine for tasks formerly done by hand it has made the day's work easier for thousands of workers and saved time and money in the manufacture of the car.

All of these things are done in the interest of the public—so that the benefits of reliable, economical transportation may be placed within the means of every one.

MCMILLANS ENTERTAIN WITH FISH FRY TUESDAY

Grandpa and Grandma McMillan, who live just west of town, have the pleasant custom of entertaining their friends on a wholesale scale. Every once in a while they butcher a beef or two and call in the neighbors and friends, but on Tuesday of this week they varied their custom by having a fish fry. The fish came from a lake, their own personal supply. About fifty persons partook of their hospitality. Ice-cold pop and lemonade added to the flavor of the fish.

Among those present were Henry and Luther McMillan, Alvin McMillan and family, Elzo McMillan and wife, Arthur McMillan and family, Pete McMillan and family, Amos McMillan and wife, Leslie and Dewald McMillan, Dr. C. E. Collins and daughter, Mary Jane, Mr. and Mrs. Waldo McLaurin and family, Mmes. Todd, Hayes, and Tucker.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS ENJOYS SWIMMING PARTY WEDNESDAY

Mrs. Boss Johnson and Mrs. J. B. Curtis were in charge of a swimming party and picnic for Mrs. Johnson's Sunday school class Wednesday evening at the Tahoka lake. After a refreshing swim, the guests spread the improvised table with an abundance of sandwiches, cakes, fruit and other appropriate eats, and spent the remainder of the evening in games, stunts, and seeing which one could eat the most pickles.

Those present were the hostesses and Misses Waldeline Reed, Gladys Gibson, Alice Joy Bowling, Kathryn Veazey, Jeanette Thomas, Maudine and Albe Williams; J. R. Curtis, Wilfred Gates, Harold Gibson, Ollie Caddell, and Ralph Beach.

DISCUSS PLANS FOR PALO DURO CAMP

The Y. P. M. S. of the Methodist church met Tuesday afternoon with Kathryn Veazey. No program had been planned, since the meeting was for the purpose of completing plans for attending camp at the Methodist camping grounds at Palo Duro canyon. This is an annual event and one of interest to young people throughout the entire North-west Texas Conference. Bible classes, spiritual development, nature study, and inspirational lectures by religious leaders make the session most worthwhile.

O'Donnell Methodist Church has been well represented for four years, and the ten members who are planning to go this year are well acquainted with regulations and procedure. Their names will be announced later, as there is still some doubt yet as to who will be able to make the trip.

Miss Alice Burns was joint hostess for the afternoon, and the hostesses served banana layer cake and iced tea to the following: Mrs. and Mary Jo Gates, Lebekah Scholer, Allean Mellroy, Jeanette Thomas, Mary V. Shock, Louise Edwards, Kimmie Lee Peares, Albe Williams, Mmes. Johns and Smith.

Y. W. A. ENTERTAINS WITH CLEVER SOCIAL

Members of the Y. P. M. S. of the Methodist church were guests last Thursday at a clever party given by the Baptist Y. W. A. Invitations were sent out several days before the event, and were in the form of a circular of bulletin advertising a Snodgrass School to be conducted at the tabernacle, with pen sketches of pupils before and after taking the course in applied smilology.

Several amusing projects were featured in the course. Mrs. O. D. Carter won the blue ribbon for highest honors, and the students were awarded diplomas in the form of mannikins rolled and tied with green ribbon, after which they dismissed classes for lunch. This was served cafeteria style in the basement of the church, and consisted of a salad course with sandwiches and iced tea. Plate favors were miniature "little red school houses."

McILROY—STORRY WEDDING FRIDAY AT LLOYDSBURG

The marriage on Friday, July 18 of Haskell McIlroy, son of Dr. and Mrs. T. A. McIlroy of this city, to Miss Dorothy Story, daughter of Mrs. E. N. Flynn of El Paso, was solemnized at the office of the justice of peace at Lloydsburg in the presence of close friends of the pair. Immediately after the ceremony the newly-weds came to O'Donnell for a short visit with the groom's parents. Mrs. McIlroy has just returned from Chicago where she has been doing special work in dancing. She is an accomplished and attractive young lady.

Mr. McIlroy is well known to O'Donnell people, having lived here and been in the employ of the O'Donnell Telephone Company. Their plans for the future have not yet been announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Boss Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. O. D. Carter, Miss Jeanette Thomas and little Miss Doris Jo Thomas enjoyed a pleasant evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Moore Wednesday evening when Mrs. Moore served an abundance of delicious appetizer ice cream and cookies. The visitors arrived on the scene about two minutes after Mrs. Moore had finished turning the tables (probably by carefully laid plans), and didn't leave until a late hour.

PARTY FOR GAIL VISITOR TUESDAY EVENING

Little Miss Margaret Lucille Johnson was hostess Tuesday evening at the home of her parents when she entertained in honor of her cousin, Bobbie Johnson of Gail.

"Pirate Party" was the message sent out, and the guests were festively dressed, gay handkerchiefs around their heads and vicious swords everywhere in evidence. Games appropriate for such swagging buccaners were played on the lawn.

Refreshments of punch and cookies were served to the honoree and the following guests: Harold Davidson of Snyder, Doris Nell Gates, Dorothy Miles, Mrs. Evelyn and Walter Parr, Lometa and L. E. Robinson, Ruth and Conner Williams, Roy Elmo and Wanda Zell, Burkhalter, Jr., Weldon, J. W., and Raymond Kelly Curtis, and Bobbie Ramey.

Mrs. C. E. Procter, mother of Mrs. A. C. Hamilton and with whom she makes her home, was guest of honor last Saturday afternoon at a party given by her grand-daughter, Miss Winnie Hamilton, celebrating her seventy-second birthday.

Several close friends called during the afternoon to offer congratulations and wish for her continued health and happiness. Many lovely gifts were brought to express their esteem felt for the honoree.

Mrs. Procter related several anecdotes about old times, especially about the parties she attended with ice cream to the following: Mmes. Beach, Smith, Ray, Heblson, Rodgers, Hamilton, and Veazey.

MRS. EARLES HOSTESS TO THURSDAY YCLUB

SEELY-SAUNDERS

A childhood romance culminated Sunday at 5 o'clock when Miss Gladys Seely became the bride of Mr. Clifford Saunders of Whitesboro, Texas.

The ceremony was performed by Brother J. H. Childress who is now conducting a meeting at the Church of Christ in the presence of a few close relatives and friends.

Miss Seely is the attractive and accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Seely of the Randall community.

She received her early school training at the Whitesboro school but her high school training was completed in the O'Donnell High School as she graduated this past spring with the class of 1934.

Mr. Saunders is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Saunders, well-known farmers of Whitesboro, the son being a very efficient farmer and dairyman himself. All of his school career was completed in the Whitesboro school where they first met.

They left soon after the ceremony for Whitesboro where they will begin their new home.

They have the sincere wish of many friends for much success and happiness in their new home.

We want to stress again the point that the dairyman in this state should milk more and better cows. In other words, adopt the policy of grading your herd to the point where one cow produces what two cows did before.

R E M E M B E R

To be a successful dairyman, one must strive for leadership. Leadership requires initiative, initiative requires getting out of the rut and doing things. You can find outstanding examples of successful dairymen in every community. These dairymen are men who had confidence in the dairy game and who backed up their wish bone with back bone. By re-enforcing your cotton crop with dairying on a large scale and a better scale you can hope to make more money, can afford to spend more money, you can build up your bank account and owe no one a dime.

SUCCESS is spelled $ucce$$ and the proper care of a good herd will make you a $ucce$$.

ARTICLE VII THE NEW A-B-C OF POULTRY RAISING

The Question of Vitamines and Their Value in Poultry Feeding is of Paramount Importance.

Editor's Note—This is another of a series of 52 stories on poultry raising written by the well known national poultry authority, Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., of St. Louis. The entire series will appear in this paper. Our readers are urged to read them carefully and clip them out for future reference.

"Professor," inquired a student in one of our agricultural colleges, "you say we don't know what vitamins are; then, how do you know there are any?" "Do you know what life is?" retaliated the instructor. When the pupil admitted that he did not, the professor immediately retorted, "still you're reasonably sure that you're living, aren't you? In that reply lies the key to a proper understanding of the subject of vitamins by poultry raisers. True, we don't know what they are, but we know what they will accomplish and that is the main thing after all."

Of the four known vitamins, A, B, C, and D, proper understanding of the functions of the first and fourth is of paramount importance to the poultry raiser. The other two may be ignored, as B is present in the outer covering of all grains and chickens do not seem to need vitamin C at all.

If feed is deficient in vitamin A, a disease called nutritional rickets may develop. Mature birds effected in this way will die in from four to twelve months and young chicks in from four to eight weeks. Since feeding the proper ration of vitamin A means very considerable protection against this disease, it may be seen that a proper understanding of the sources of this important vitamin is something worth considering.

Vitamin A is produced in all plants that grow in sunlight and is stored in the part that shows a green or yellow color at maturity. Thus we find it in yellow corn, the outer leaves of cabbage, the leaves of alfalfa and similar plants, in yellow carrots and in sprouted oats, if they are sprouted in the presence of enough sunlight to insure a good green color. Any other kind are valueless. These are not the only sources of vitamin A, but are the ones principally used in poultry feeding. Strangely enough, drying does not affect the vitamin content of vegetable products, a fact which accounts for the value of alfalfa hay feeding.

Another valuable source of vitamin A is Cod Liver Oil. When a sufficient quantity of the products mentioned above cannot be obtained, 2 per cent may be added to the mash to provide the necessary vitamin A contained and also the equally valuable vitamin D. Vitamin D, just mentioned, is important because without it the mineral elements of the fowl's ration intended to supply the bone and egg shell will simply pass through the system unused. If young chicks this appears as "leg weakness" or more properly, rickets. Older fowls show a similar weakness when they are not getting enough vitamin D. They will also lay eggs with soft or extremely thin shells. Their eggs will also prove deficient in hatching qualities.

A peculiarity of vitamin D is that it can be found both in the feed or in the bodies of the birds themselves when exposed to direct sunlight. It must be direct sunlight however, as only the ultra-violet rays produce vitamin D and they cannot pass through ordinary window glass. The part played by ultra-violet rays in developing this necessary vitamin has been definitely established by experiments in the University of Kansas. Hens which were kept away from natural sunlight but exposed 20 minutes daily to artificially produced ultra-violet rays laid a normal number of eggs with satisfactory hatchability.

As previously mentioned, Cod Liver Oil contains vitamin D and if mixed in the same proportion as recommended for supplying vitamin A, it will supply the other one also. The oil is not an altogether dependable source of vitamin D, however. Some grades do not contain enough of it to be of any real value. So, whether you feed oil or not, see that your fowls get as much sunshine as possible. Let them out in the open whenever possible. Shelter them in the open front type of house and keep it open as much as the weather will permit. When the house must be closed totally or in part, instead of glass use the new glass substitutes, which allow the ultra violet rays to pass through. Then your hens will be healthy and strong. They will lay more plentifully; their eggs will hatch better and the chicks will be free from many weaknesses.

Thus it appears that the subject of vitamins is a fairly simple one, after all. Even if nobody does know anything about their chemical make-up, it is easy to see how they work and how to utilize their valuable properties in the proper nourishing of the poultry flock.

LARGEST EXCLUSIVE TIRE HOUSE IN THIS TERRITORY

Here it is!

THE New Kelly
4.75—19 F-C
BIGGER and BETTER

The biggest, handsomest, ruggedest tire ever offered to Ford and Chevrolet owners!

This new Kelly 4.75-19 F.C tire especially designed on Fords and Chevrolets, is one third of an inch larger in cross-section than the regular 4.75-19, and one-third of an inch higher in standing diameter.

It has more air-space, which means easier riding. It has more rubber, which means longer wear. The tread is extended so that it affords more protection against curbscraping and sidewall chafing. It also increases the non-skid qualities of the tire.

Stand one of these new Kelly tires alongside a similarly marked size of a competitive make and you can see the difference at a glance. This is the biggest, handsomest, easiest-riding, longest-lived tire the Ford or Chevrolet owner has ever had a chance to buy.

TERRELL GIVES CROP REPORT

Cotton Acreage Decreased 6 Per Cent
Corn, Grain Sorghums and Other Crops Slightly Increased

This report is based on conditions of July 15th, and includes reports from more than 200 counties.

Texas harvested 17,968,000 acres of cotton last year. A reduction of 6 per cent this year, including abandonment, leaves 16,889,920 acres. Or in round numbers 17,000,000 acres in cultivation.

Forty per cent of the cotton is late, planted since May 15th, and much of it is not blooming, and not of this late crop is assured, and it is impossible to estimate the outcome of the cotton crop.

Hot dry weather is reported in every district, and cotton is falling for lack of moisture. Only a few counties report any rain in July.

Cotton is reported good in only a few counties. Very little insect damage is reported. The Southwestern District reports some damage by boll weevil.

It now looks like the crop may be as short as last year. A short crop would seem to be the only hope for better prices this fall.

Corn is reported from Austin south to the coast, and some counties of central and north Texas report good crops. The average yield per acre of corn and oats is estimated to be 20 bushels per acre.

Wheat is poor, generally, because of the extreme drought in March and April. The estimated yield is eight bushels per acre.

Grain sorghum and hay have been increase in acreage, and the condition is fairly good, but the late hay crops will be short unless general rains come soon.

Market Conditions

Prices of cotton and wheat, the main market crops, are very low, and this destroys the purchasing power of the farmer, and hurts business in general.

There is a world panic, but the economic writers, employed by big business, say that business is improving and unemployment is decreasing. We have not felt the improvement yet. Domestic consumption and exports of cotton have decreased 1,822,193 bales during the last ten months, and may reach two million bales by the close of the cotton year, August 1st. This is one of the causes of the low price of cotton. There may be other contributing causes. The outlook for the farmer and business generally is not very bright.

RECEIVE LETTER FROM MR. AND MRS. R. O. STARK

O'Donnell people will be interested in reading a letter received by the editor Saturday from Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Stark, who are visiting in Santa Ana, California, during the summer. It follows:

Dear Friends:-
How is the city and yourselves? We are feeling fine since our arrival in the land of sunshine and wonderful climate.

We left Plainview at 8:35 Wednesday morning, July 16, the wife stopping off at Canyon to visit friends and I went on into Amarillo to spend the day with friends and to inspect the new Santa Fe general office building. We left on train No. 1 at 6:20 p. m. the wife boarding the train at Canyon and arrived here Friday morning at 6:55. We had a very nice trip all the way out. It had rained the day before crossing New Mexico and most of Arizona, and was nice and cool until we reached Kingman, Arizona, where it began to get hot and by the time we reached Needles, California, it was surely hot. Was 110 at 8:45 p. m. there. The breeze made by the train running felt like it was blowing off furnace. We got off the train for a few moments and got near a truck load of ice and cooled off somewhat.

It was hot after leaving there as you cross the desert until you reach Canyon Pass the top of San Bernardino Mountains. When we reached there we had to hunt cover, and it has been very cool since that time. We are enjoying real cool weather here now. You need a coat every night and one feels comfortable even in day time.

This surely is a wonderful country, and is beyond description on paper, and one can hardly describe it verbally even. It is still growing and improving. I can see wonderful progress since my last visit here seven years ago. I went out yesterday after noon with my brother-in-law to see some parties down near Oceanside, half way between here and San Diego, on the Santa Fe. The highway follows the coast line all the way from Newport beach south of here, and there surely are some wonderful views and pretty beach towns and private beach homes all the way. At Oceanside we turned off inland about 15 miles up the San Luis river, past San Luis Rey Mission, which was erected by the Padres in 1780. We went to Vita, a new town country being improved now. The hillsides are being set out with Avacado orchards, a new fruit now coming into popularity in California. It is a mighty fine place to invest one's money if he had any to invest. This portion of California has not been developed to any great extent as yet and one can buy land with water rights reasonably cheap.

We are having a wonderful vacation and are planning a week-end trip to Tia Juana and a week's vacation trip to the north part of the state to the big tree country in Sequoi National Park. It is an assured fact we will not want to leave here until duty calls.

Give everyone there our best regards and say to them that our only wish is that they too could enjoy a vacation out here as we are. If one ever comes out here once will always want to come back, because it takes several trips, unless one stays several months, to see all the sights. We received last week's issue of the Index and enjoyed reading it very much even if most of the news happened before we left.

With best regards,
Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Stark,
1051 W. 8th St., Santa Ana.

THE EDITOR MAKES VALUABLE DISCOVERY

While out at the E. W. Hester farm Thursday afternoon of last week making a few pictures of some of the fine blooded Jersey cows, the editor discovered, among other things, a nice watermelon patch. On arriving at the place, Mr. Hester said he would go to the Sudan field and drive the cows up, but we volunteered to go with him—he didn't invite us to—and on our way we found the melon vines. Mr. Hester promised to hide a nice melon under our desk just as soon as they get ripe.

Mrs. Hester gave the ed's wife an armful of rhubarb while we were exploring the garden and grape orchard. By the way, the grapes are beginning to ripen, and we are expecting another invitation in about two weeks when pressing time comes.

ATHELETE SOON REGAINS HEALTH BY NEW KONJOLA

Baseball Player Suffering From Rheumatism and Other Ailments Finds Prompt Relief

MR. JACK M. LONG

"For over two years I suffered from rheumatism," said Mr. Jack M. Long, 511 Burnett street, Ft. Worth. "My legs and back were affected so much that I could not carry on my work as a baseball player. Finally I was forced to remain in my home for three months. I had attacks of indigestion and my kidneys gave me no end of trouble; the pains in my back were terrible. I was forced to rise many times nightly and became nervous.

"I tried many remedies without result when a friend recommended Konjola. After taking seven bottles, I was able to resume my work in the K. I. C. League as a ball player. The rheumatism pains have completely vanished and my stomach is in perfect condition. My kidneys are again normal and I do not have to rise at night. The pains have left my back and my nerves are strong. Konjola restored me to perfect health."

Although many men and women state that one or two bottles brought relief, it is recommended that six or eight bottles be taken to obtain the best results.

Konjola is sold in O'Donnell, Texas, at the Whitsett Drug Co., and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

To The Voters of Commissioners Precinct 3

I take this method of expressing my sincere appreciation for the splendid vote given me in the Democratic Primary last Saturday. It is an incentive to go into the office with more determination to make a success of the administration of the offices of the county and precinct. Certainly I will not disappoint those that have expressed their confidence in me by casting their ballot for me. And for those that saw best to support my opponents, I have that same personal feeling that existed before I ever thought of running for office. You, too, voted for good men. And to all alike, I ask your hearty co-operation and support in the performance of my duties as your commissioner if elected in November. I will be glad at any time to counsel with the people of the precinct in regard to the needs of the roads, or other matters pertaining to the office of commissioner. I might not adopt your ideas but we will both be better off by having talked the situation over.

Again thanking you for your support, I am

CHAPTER II

Robert Bailly MacBeth, stretched out on a wicker chaise longue, looked at his island.

When, as a poor young artisan, he had left Scotland to seek a land where he could "rise," there had been before him one ambition—a big place. Yet, curiously enough, great country estates—for as he gradually grew wealthy he had looked west about him—left him unmoved. None of these he Robert MacBeth. He wanted an island. To be surrounded by water; to be absolutely independent; to see his own little slice of the world set apart from the rest by nature's barrier of fast-running water, grained something within him that he found difficult to explain. Probably his nationality accounted for most of it. He, a child born and bred, he had reverted to the ideals of his forefathers, to their love of blue water about a bit of green land.

Robert MacBeth shifted his eyes and moved his head and his short body slightly. Only when he did so did he notice that he was lying in a chaise longue because he must. He gave a slight pain as he slowly moved his leg. Arthritis, that now fashionable name for an old-fashioned disease, had him by the foot. He sank back with a groan, but he could now see Robert's his only child, and the groan changed into a good, round oath.

MacBeth was a short, rather broad, stout with gray eyes that were at once astonishingly lovely in color, with their deep fringes of black lashes, and both friendly and shrewd. He had black brows and a short clipped, red and gray mustache. He was quite evidently a personage, and knew it without openly exhibiting the naive conceit of the self-made Scot; yet he had made his way from day laborer to contractor and builder.

His splendid and varied vocabulary had been one of his greatest helps in that advance. No one could make a team of horses haul as much or so steadily as young Rob MacBeth. No one could manage a gang of Italian laborers as well.

His vocabulary, practically unused at home while gentle Jean MacBeth was alive, was well known and feared at his office. It was only since arthritis had laid him by the heels that it was becoming known on his island, especially when Robert rendered him furious.

He was furious now as he looked at her, and yet Robert Jean MacBeth was a sight to make a father proud. She was small, barely five feet three, but she was beautifully proportioned. A pocket edition of Venus, with her father's eyes and red hair. It was a MacBeth characteristic—this red hair. Robert's own was a reddish fair, with only the faintest admixture of gray. His, however, seemed merely a warm tan when compared with Robert's locks, which rised over her head, a gleaming helmet of red curls, cut and pruned by some French expert in the art of hairdressing.

If his long training as a contractor and builder had given him a wonderful vocabulary, it had also given him wonderful control over his temper. Being an experienced man, he knew that to give way to his temper before Robert, since he could not arbitrarily forbid the thing she was set on doing and see that his ban was carried out, would be futile.

But he had to remind himself that he was Robert MacBeth, a power and a terror to grown men and high in the council of mighty men of business, before he could calm himself. For Robert had flouted him, had ridiculed all his plans for himself and for her as "silly," as "moss-backed," and at the last "d—n tiresome!"

Doubtless, because he was flat on his back for the first time in his active life, she had thought it the strategic hour to carry through her own plans and move the whole establishment bodily from his island. Had he been at fault, himself, in bringing her up to be so modern—so independent? It had always been a tradition in the MacBeth family that their lassies were as "good as any lad." Was it because he had shown too plainly that he loved her beyond everything and could deny her nothing, or was it just because the whole younger generation was quite out of hand?

He leaned back and sighed. He had hoped for peace and comfort at home, and he was evidently not to get it—yet. He sighed again as he looked about him, and saw Robert race along the drive and cross the bridge without a look or a wave of the hand in his direction. Quite evidently, she had decided to keep her appointment, regardless of his request that she stay at home and properly instruct the new servants, who were arriving today. Rank disobedience! Open defiance! MacBeth grinned. He had never minded a little spunk in a lass.

A few minutes later he heard her car tearing along the river road on the mainland. Well, she was deliberately disregarding his wishes, despite all he had said. He must plan how to circumvent her. His eyes became heavy and brooding. The very worst thing of all was that Robert hated his island.

It was the island that Robert had been so fluent about this morning. She had expressed herself as astonished that he had chosen it without consulting her. It was in her opinion a "god-forsaken spot."

MacBeth had not realized how scornful the lady was of his most precious possession, until he heard her say that it was a great mistake that he had not waited until she had finished school, before purchasing this island.

Robert had not been looking at her father, or she would have stopped before she said that. She had been sitting on the edge of the terrace, smoking cigarettes furiously. MacBeth had not known that she smoked.

He Had Opened His Mouth to Tell Her to Stop When She Made Him Forget Everything Else Except His Island.

He had opened his mouth to tell her to stop when she had made him forget everything else except his island.

He heard then, although it was one of the most beautiful spots in a justly famous county, that it was in Robert's opinion a "dead end." Her opinion of her father's financial shrewdness and ability seemed to have suffered a blow since he had sunk so much of his money in the island.

He looked about him. His island was a mile long and from a quarter to half a mile wide. It held all a man might want, a long stretch of garden, a farm and woodland, a beach and fishing rights. It rose to a considerable height above the water level, lovely green and fair, with the red, modeled by nature's farmhouse standing on the southwestern end. There was a long terraced sweep down to a little beach where his boats were moored and a tony suspension bridge connected with the mainland.

He had first seen this island some years ago, and had longed to share it with Robert then, but there were difficulties in the way of acquiring it, and he had decided he could buy it. It would be a delightful surprise to bring her there when she left school. This was his reward!

With a tremendous effort, Robert MacBeth had controlled his temper. He had kept back the profane words that rose to his lips, and said decidedly:

"I didn't know you smoked at that rate and I don't like it. Clear out now and let me think. I'll tell you this much, I have wanted this island for a long time and now that I've got it, I'm going to keep it."

"You won't keep me here long," Robert declared, surprised and angry. "I give you fair warning that I can't stand the place and I don't intend to. It bores me."

"Does it so?" her father said, without looking at her. "Then maybe you'll get from between me and my view of the Delaware. I'm an ill man and I need the air and a little peace."

Then he had done the most effective and abrupt thing she had left him. He knew whether he did it by design or accident. He leaned back in his chair and closed his eyes.

"Well, I'm off where the company's more congenial," Robert announced and abruptly she had left him, although that meant leaving undiscussed and unsettled all those domestic problems about which she had come to consult with him.

Life, Robert felt at that moment, was an extremely turbulent and difficult thing at eighteen plus, despite the fact that one's elders and the posts constantly acclaim it the only perfect time, the springtime of youth. There was so much to be met for the first time, however sophisticated one might strive to appear. Other people, especially older people, were so difficult to understand, and failed so signally to understand one. They insisted on begin reckoned with, on thrusting their standards and wishes upon youth, instead of stepping gracefully and quietly into the background, and acting as Greek chorus only when needed.

As soon as Robert had taken her departure the immediate domestic problems, two robust black women, without consulting the owner of the island, left also and in the station car with the coffee-colored chauffeur. They giggled a great deal, when the island and Mr. MacBeth were a safe distance behind them.

"At high-flyin' Miss Roberta's gonna git quite some s'prise, quite some," the cook told the waitress. "When 'at baby comes back, and see no one round 'ceptin' the ol' man, settin' reproachful in his chair, what she sayin'?"

They laughed gaily. "Ma week's up today, and I hears her tellin' 'e of man she gettin' rid of us for some white pussions today or tomorrow. I makes it today," the waitress added.

"Ah leavin' this beach station car 'at 'a station," the chauffeur coughed them. "At red-headed baby used terms to me this mornin'. Terms!" They laughed all the way to the next roadside refreshment stand, where they all alighted to fortify themselves with sausages and rolls and ice cream in cones.

While they ate, Roberta slackened the speed of her car, and knowing nothing of their departure, looked back from the highway at her father's island. What a place! Lovely enough, she had to admit, lying long and green, high above the river, its tree tops showing a little below the road that, well above both canal and river, ran along the foot of a rocky slope that walled it in on the land side.

It was a charming road, and everywhere Roberta stopped to look it seemed to grow more beautiful. At one side of the road rhododendron, laurel and tall trees climbed high above on the rocky slope. On the other side, the white painted posts marking the highway protected one from a sheer drop of thirty or forty feet to the canal. Between the canal and river was a broad flat space, green and sunny, and then the Delaware, pushing swiftly along, broad and shallow.

Where the island stood in its way, the river separated into two smaller, deeper and more turbulent streams. On the island, gleaming white and gray against the green and blue, was the lovely old house her father had remodeled, and without doubt, thought Roberta angrily, paid a great deal too much for.

If she had only been able to stop him and divert the golden stream, it might have paid for an apartment in New York, on Park Avenue, with a summer place at Bar Harbor or even Watch Hill, where she knew some of the younger crowd. That represented Roberta's idea of a fit and worthy establishment and background for herself, if her father persisted in staying in these United States.

All her school dreams of Monte Carlo, the Riviera, the Tido, floated through her careless little red head. Why had father been so stupid as to select this place? Ye gods! Nothing but a lot of artists and writers, who did not apparently know or care what life looked like outside their hedges. What was the use of having money if that was the way her father meant to spend it, and to tie her down?

Her car swerved and she heard a sharp cry in an agitated foreign voice. She pulled at her emergency brake, for the road was narrow here. It looked for a moment as though she could not avoid a collision between her car and the heavy limousine that Joe Ligor, the stiletto hackman, was driving. Before she shut off her engine, Roberta, quick, calm and cool, as her father's daughter would be in a crisis, swerved her car a little toward the land side of the road. The impact when it came was slight. She saw one of Joe's fenders crumple, and she heard a gasp of relief from the excitable Joe as he called:

"Hey, Mess Macbeth! Why you wanta keel me with these people I brenza to your house, eh? You breaka my car in two at the same a time?"

"Sorry, Joe," Roberta called, in the honeyed voice that made men forgive her anything. She lit a cigarette with trembling fingers. "Send the bill to father if I've hurt your old machine any, and for Heaven's sake look where you're going next time."

"Me looka! That a gooda joke," Joe said, laughing.

NEW WEALTH FROM THE DAIRY COW

IN AN ADVERTISEMENT published several months ago this company gave intensified dairy development as a topic of conversation in its "Texans! let's Talk Texas" program.

Dairying has since become not only a topic of conversation but a field of definite action. New wealth from the dairy cow is being produced by Texans. The cycle of this development is fundamental. From the producer of milk to the making of the finished product the whole process takes place in Texas to supply a Texas Market.

The market is still tremendously out of proportion to the production of dairy products in Texas. Millions of dollars more dairy products are needed here. Few undertakings can be as important to Texas today as dairying for the reason that it so closely and directly affects every class of our population.

Dairy products are used by everyone. Their manufacture brings income to hundreds of people in various lines of business. So that the New Wealth from Dairy Cow industry circulates widely among our people. Dairying is a great source of New Wealth for Texans.

The Texas Electric Service Company is interested in all phases of dairying as one of the basic developments of Texas. This Company has been earnestly fostering these activities which have meant a broader and sounder growth of Texas resources.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY BY VOTING FOR PARKER

Mrs. C. E. Procter celebrated her seventy-second birthday Saturday by going to the polls and casting her vote. Politics, candies and elections can still furnish food for dry remarks for grandma. She remarked, "It didn't make much difference which she voted for, most of them were about alike, except that she came up there to vote for B. L. Parker for sheriff."

She said a few days ago that she had never seen so many candidates. One gentleman was rather taken back when he offered his card to grandma and made his little speech and she answered, "Yes, law me; candidates are thick as bread here these days. We haven't poured out the dishwasher in several days now for fear we'd drown our big step forward."

Another candidate unwittingly made a friend for life when he gave his card to a pretty young miss and said, "Madam, I surely would appreciate your vote and influence."

The young lady, who is just in her teens, declared that if that man ever runs for anything when she can vote, he'll sure get hers. "Most of them," she said disgustedly, "just look at me and say 'little girl, where's your mama?'"

Mr. Shoemaker states that he feels the new Milk Plant to be one of the aids in solving the problem of farm relief, and is glad to step forward in the diversification program of the farmer.
