Opposite Direction A sweet young thing upon parting from a young man at the railroad station was observed to go into tears. I'm crying because I'm going back to him.

Confession Tell me—have you been true to your wife all your life? I haven't lived all my life yet. Don't evade the issue. Tell me the truth. Have you ever kissed another man's wife? Yes, I'll confess I've kissed the wife of another man. Who was she? My grandmother.

She said: Why, Mary, you know—my girl friend — dropped in to leave her regards. Well, Mary left her pipe on the piano.

CIVILIAN AIRLIFT

World's First Civilian 'Airlift' Supplies Huge Ore Development

The world's first civilian "airlift" of major proportions is now taking place in the barren wastelands of northern Quebec and western Labrador, where aircraft have really come into their own in the transportation of heavy industrial equipment.

The above map shows the territory in which the world's first major civilian "airlift" is supporting construction of railroad to fabulously rich iron ore discovery.

by air over the barren, trackless wilderness. The "airlift" is the only possible solution, according to mine officials.

Largest aircraft in the lift is a Fairchild C-119 "Flying Boxcar." This big twin-engine cargo carrier has already flown fifteen big red International TD-14A crawler tractors from Seven Islands to Knob Lake. The tractors were shipped complete minus only their drawbars and track shoes and were driven on and off the plane under their own power. A capacity load for the "Flying Boxcar" is 16,000 lbs. on this trip, just a shade more than the weight of the tractors.

Even rubber-tired earthmoving scrapers of eight cubic-yard capacity for use with the tractors have been carried by the "Boxcar" without dismantling—with one inch to spare on each side.

The Knob Lake airstrip was started in 1947 by a small international crawler tractor, flown in, piece by piece, in a flying boat which was able to land on Knob Lake itself. Now about 5,000 feet long, the gravel airstrip easily handles Douglas C-47s and the Fairchild "Flying Boxcar." The little International TD-6 tractor first brought in is still working on road construction in the area.

TWO YEARS FROM now, the 350-mile railroad now under construction will reach Knob Lake from Seven Islands. In the meantime, the airlift supplies the mine development work at Knob Lake and supplies the construction camps building the railroad by means of two other airstrips along the line.

Hydro-electric power will be developed at two dams to supply power to the mines, railroad, town sites, and terminals. Scheduled for first construction is a dam at the rapids of Lake Menihik, which will be of the earth-fill type and will act as a bridge for the railroad. Generating capacity of the power plant at this dam will be 30,000 hp., scheduled for delivery in 1953. The second dam, also of 30,000 hp., will supply power to the ore docks and rail terminal at the town of Seven Islands.

When operations are in full swing, I.O.C. expects to produce 10 million tons a year, with production, transportation, and dock facilities designed for twice that tonnage. But before a ton of ore is moved, close to 200 million dollars will have been invested in the project by that time, about half of the money going for railroad construction.

Russia Lurks in Background of Iran Oil Dispute

By Wright A. Patterson

AN EFFORT to settle the difficulty between the Iranian government and the Iran-Anglo Oil Company, an English corporation, 54 per cent of the stock of which is owned by the English government, the government of Iran has asked President Truman to act in the capacity of mediator.

He accepted, but it means that the job will be performed by our British born and British sympathizing secretary of state, Dean Acheson. Small chance to get an unprejudiced effort to get a settlement on its merits.

And what is the heated argument all about?

A number of years ago, a group of English capitalists, including the English government, organized the Iran-Anglo Oil Company for the purpose of producing the tremendous amount of oil in the Iran field. After making an agreement with the Iranian government, the English company invested more than a billion dollars for a plant that would take the oil from the ground, refine it and market it.

Under the terms of the agreement with Iran, the English company was to pay the government of Iran 20 cents a barrel on all of the oil secured.

That agreement was satisfactory until American oil companies entered the Arabian fields and arranged to extract the oil of those Arabian countries and pay to the governments of those near East nations one half of the profits derived from their operations. Iran demanded a new deal, with a division of the profits on the oil taken from Iran wells. The English company refused to make a new arrangement, but did advance to 26 cents a barrel paid to the Iranian government.

The present controversy is over a renewed demand of Iran for a new agreement on a profit-division basis. When that was refused, Iran seized and nationalized the oil fields and the plants of the English company, but because of a lack of trained technicians, Iran cannot operate the enormous plant, and the English government will not permit its citizens to work for Iran, and is taking all of them out of the country.

The only other available source of supply of technicians is Russia. With Russians in charge of that mammoth oil plant, Russia would get the product.

For Russia that represents one of the vital essentials for waging war against the free nations. Without an assured supply of oil, she could not long operate either her planes or her transport.

For the Iranian oil to fall into Russian hands would be a serious blow for the nations of the Atlantic Pact, including especially the United States and England.

The Iran government has announced that all the force that is available will be used to prevent

England from sending a force into Iran to protect English interests which England would probably do if any effort is made to operate the mammoth plant.

The President and Secretary Acheson have a real problem to solve, a problem in which we all have an interest because of the danger of Iranian oil falling into the hands of Russia and being used against us, should that threatened war materialize.

But England can be assured of the very best our British-born secretary of state can render his native country.

The one thing in the way of preparedness that has not lagged is the demand for more appropriations and more taxes.

If, as has so often been said, Stalin's hope is to see a bankrupt America, he has active assistants in both the congress and the president.

The civilian employees of the department of defense, the army of bureaucrats commanded by General Marshall, outnumber by better than two to one the fighting forces commanded by General Ridgway in Korea, and the compensation paid those in the bureaucratic army is far greater than that paid to our fighting forces. The difference is that those in the bureaucratic army and their relatives can who gave them a job.

PINKY

By Paschal LaPadula

JULIA WARREN looked up from her pie-baking suddenly, and thought it had happened.

"Bud," she called. "Please try to keep Pinky by your side. He'll get hurt if he keeps chasing cars the way he does."

She watched Bud through her kitchen window as he scolded Pinky by waving a fat finger at him. "M u s t n ' t do, Pinky! Mom says you're a bad dog!"

Then he pushed along the sidewalk in his wagon, Pinky at his side.

Julia went back to baking her apple pie, a worried look on her face. Pinky was lovable, but his habit of chasing cars through the streets of Collinsville made Julia dread the event which must inevitably occur. Julia had urged her husband Mark to persuade Bud to give up the dog, but Mark was too soft-hearted.

"It will break the boy's heart," he would say.

Not nearly as badly as it would if something dreadful happened to Pinky, Julia always thought. That could be something Bud might never get over. That might be something he would always remember like a sharp continuous pain. Julia knew well it would be that way.

She tried to cast thoughts from her mind that were like jagged glass. She opened the oven door, saw that the pie was almost brown enough to take out.

Then she heard it—heard it like she knew she would, like she had heard it once before in the recesses of her mind. Bud's scream, a car's futile brakes, Pinky's agonizing bark.

They buried Pinky in a small wooden box in a corner of the back yard among the flowers. Julia put a marker with Pinky's name into the ground while Bud just watched and said nothing.

"Musr't do, Pinky! Mom says you're a bad dog!"

Julia did not know whether there was more sorrow than relief in her heart. Maybe it was better that it happened now instead of five or six years from now when Bud's love for Pinky would have been too hard for the boy to forget. Bud could forget Pinky now as she had learned to forget . . .

AT dinner that night there were not many words spoken. Mark patted his son's curly head, and tried to console him. "Pinky wouldn't like to see you so sad, son. He'd want you to remember him with a smile on your face, and forget what happened today."

Forget . . . forget. Julia looked at Bud's face and knew he would never forget. Young minds don't forget easily. They don't forget the most important things. Julia knew.

After dinner when the family was in the living room, Mark reading his paper, Bud playing listlessly with his blocks, Julia suddenly put down the sweater she was knitting. She got up from her chair and went towards the door.

"What's wrong, Julia?" Mark asked alarmed.

"Nothing, dear. I must get some air. I think I'll see Helen Reynolds for a few minutes."

It did not take more than a few minutes. Julia was surprised how little time it actually took. If only other people had realized what little time it took.

It was not until Julia had stepped into the living room that Mark realized what Julia had done. He rose to meet her, proud of his wife.

Julia knelt down beside Bud and showed him what her hands held. Bud's eyes brightened. It was a tiny bundle of fur. A month old cockerspaniel with sleepy eyes, and pink ears.

"Pinky the Second," Julia said with a smile. Bud reached out chubby fingers for a new Pinky, a new hope.

Julia was glad she had remembered Helen Reynolds telling her about the litter of pups. She was glad she had remembered one day many years ago when she herself was young with important things in her life.

Julia watched the sadness melt from Bud's eyes as he fondled the pup. She remembered herself as a little girl on the day her own dog had been hit by a car. They thought she would forget. They had not understood . . . for she never forgot.

Big Pile

If all the ingots of copper, lead and zinc which the state of Nevada has produced were brought together, the pile would be the size of a 10 to 15-story office building.

Cost of Common Cold

When all factors involved are considered, it is estimated that the cost of the common cold to the American people is well over a billion dollars a year.

Bricks of Babylon

Bricks have been used for building from the most ancient times. The walls of Babylon were built of bricks. The Israelites were employed in brick-making during their bondage in Egypt.

Douglas Fir Region

The western halves of Washington and northern California are often termed the Douglas fir region after the principal lumber species growing there.

Plenty of Feed

Producers of beef cattle who have plenty of feed usually can benefit by feeding their market cattle to slaughter weights and grades.

Good Repair Lumber

A farmer who doesn't keep a stack of home-grown, custom-sawn boards often pays a high price for good repair lumber. Usually cheaper boards would serve the purpose and save him money. The man who cuts his low grade logs and hauls them to the mill for custom sawing gets his repair lumber for about one-third of the cash cost of the same lumber purchased outright. He adds that there are few wet weather jobs around the farm that will pay more money.

Valentine State

Arizona has been dubbed the Valentine State by some historians. It was admitted to the union on February 14, 1912.

Old Timetable

In the archives of the Boston & Maine railroad there is an 1850 timetable which lists the operation of a Sunday train. This special announcement solemnly warned Sunday riders: "Persons purchasing tickets will be required to sign a pledge that they will use the tickets for no other purpose than attending church."

Ni-Hard

In the field of alloy cast irons an upward trend of use was observed in specialty products such as Ni-Hard in mining equipment. Following successful trials, Ni-Hard is being increasingly adopted for mill liners and grinding balls in the cement industry in Great Britain and elsewhere abroad.

Female Turtles

Female sea turtles lay their eggs at night in holes they scoop out in sunwarmed sand a short distance inland from high tides. They may deposit 200 or more eggs of golf-ball size with leathery shells. With the laying their responsibility ends. Man is but one of many predators that hunt out the eggs for food, or feast on the newly hatched young.

Save Flashlight Batteries

Here's a way to extend the life of your flashlight batteries, at least until it is convenient to replace them. When the light starts to die, polish the ends of each battery with fine sandpaper. This removes corrosion and improves contact.

No. One Problem

The control of fire is the No. 1 problem under any forest management.

Largest Island

By far the largest island in the continental United States is Long Island, New York, with a land area of 1,401 square miles and a total area of 1,723 square miles.

Farmers of Tomorrow

By and for farm boys studying vocational agriculture in public secondary schools, the "Future Farmers of America" was organized in November, 1928.

Carbonly Iron Powders

The extension of television service and reorganization of telephone systems on the European continent are providing opportunities for the further application of appropriate grades of iron powder.

Wood for Pencils

Incense cedar which grows in southern and southwestern Oregon as a minor species is probably the principal wood used today in the manufacture of pencils.

Newsprint Source

Most of the low-grade logs of Sitka spruce are used in the manufacture of newsprint, sulphite and kraft pulp.

X-Ray Findings

U. S. public health service experiences with mass x-rays shows that about 1.5 per cent of the 20,500,000 examined annually—or 307,500 persons—would be found in each of the first five years to have reinfection-type tuberculosis requiring further diagnosis.

Wood Shingles

The state of Washington has produced about 90 per cent of the nation's wood shingles during the past 50 years.

Long Time to Grow

It takes 300 to 400 years to grow western Red cedar suitable for the present-day uses as lumber and shingles.

Iron Ores

In the past decade, according to the New York State department of commerce, New York state has risen to fourth place nationally in the production of iron ores, with nearly 8,600,000 long tons in 1948, and has become the leading producer of titanium. More than a billion miles of thread, millions of belts, buckles, buttons, hooks, eyes, zippers, and snaps, are used each year by the dress industry in New York City, according to the New York state department of commerce.

Record for Tunnels

On the San Diego & Arizona railroad, through the Carrizo gorge, there are seventeen tunnels in eleven miles. This is most likely a world's record for a plurality of tunnels in a short distance. Another unusual feature of these tunnels is the fact that they are completely free of smoke and fumes because the natural action of air suction in the canyon acts as an air conditioner.

Indian Brooms

Early American housewives used brooms made and sold by the Indians. The broom handles were usually sticks of birch, ash or similar material. The brush part was made up of thin strips cut into a block of wood. Softer than such "splinter brooms" were those of husks, twigs, and rushes.

Cellophane Tape Use

Postage stamps which have lost their glue can be put on envelopes with transparent cellophane tape. Fasten the stamp with a narrow strip of the tape at the top and bottom, but do not cover stamp completely.

Farmer Says Pond Keeps Kids at Home Increases Livability Of Modern Farm Home

C. H. Drew reasons that improving the livability of his farm and keeping the kids at home is just as important as building up the soil's fertility. He pays close attention to both.
Drew says one of the best investments he ever made was the 2 1/2-acre pond on his 160-acre farm near Huntington, Indiana. He hired a man with a bulldozer to dig it out. The pond is 8 to 12 feet deep at the deepest point and is fed by water draining off an 80-acre field.
"The pond is entirely for recreation", he said. "It pays off in making a better family life. It increases the number of activities my wife and I and the youngsters can enjoy together. It encourages our children to stay at home."
Every spare moment during the summer, the children are swimming, boating or fishing. Their friends like the pond, too. Some times as many as 30 kids from the neighborhood come over to join in the fun. In the winter the pond is fine for skating.
Drew stocked the pond with bass and blue gills. Members of the family and their friends often pull out good catches.

Fringed by trees, the shore of the pond makes a beautiful picnic site. The family uses a big stump for a table for Sunday night suppers. The area around the pond is a wildlife preserve.

4-H Canning, Freezing Important Club Projects
Two important 4-H club projects emphasizing home preservation of food are being carried out this year in 47 states. They are the 4-H canning and frozen foods programs, in which more than 217,000 4-H members throughout the nation participated in 1950. The programs are supervised by the cooperative extension service.
Putting up homegrown products to provide well-balanced diets throughout the whole year is one of the objectives of these projects. Another is to help cut food costs.
As incentives for outstanding records of achievement, county canning winners receive medals of honor. State 4-H champions get an educational trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago in November. These awards and six national college scholarships are provided by Kerr Glass company.

THE READER'S DATE BOOK:
Hunting Season Will Stimulate
Business in Many Communities

October is to the hunter what May is to the fisherman. And to the small towns and Main Streets across the nation it means big business.

As the month approaches guns are taken from cases and oiled, hunting clothes are aired and repaired, training of hunting dogs is intensified, and the local sporting goods store and the hardware store begin to notice an increase in business.

October is "Let's Go Hunting!" The sportsman wants to know and read about the latest guns and equipment. It's a subject he won't tire of quickly. And it's a local merchant and newspaper advertiser that realizes the fact.

There are approximately 12,000,000 men and women in the United States who hunt during the season. Last season various states sold 12,626,349 licenses, producing $37,641,049 revenue. This does not include 84,735 migratory-bird hunting stamps, commonly called duck stamps, at $2 each.

Some years ago it was estimated that each hunter spent $41.88 a year on his sport, of which 31.1 per cent went for hunting clothing, 11.7 per cent for guns and 11.7 per cent for ammunition.

The remaining 28.4 per cent was spent for licenses, transportation, meals, lodging and various miscellaneous items, all provided in the home towns of the nation.

On that basis, the nation's annual hunting bill exceeds a half-billion dollars.

Millinery Promotions
Begin in September

Beginning September 16 retail millinery groups in many communities in the United States will stage fall millinery promotions. At the same time previews of all that's new in millinery fashions will be released to national magazines and large and small newspapers.

The promotion is timely because women in the United States are more fashion conscious than any in the world. Although primarily staged to promote the sale of hats, the event fills the need of telling women what is new and fashionable. It is an educational and entertaining program as well as a sales promotion.

Unfortunately, there are still many millinery retailers who prefer to be rugged individuals. They fail to realize that the creation of an active market for millinery in the community means added sales for everybody. And conversely, in a stagnant market, business is bad for all.

There is no better way to inform the women in an area of what is new in fashions than for every merchant in the community to get together and announce the opening of the new season simultaneously with dramatic newspaper ads and window displays. It doesn't matter whether the town itself has a large or small population.

The psychological effect of such simultaneous community-wide promotion is tremendous. It turns the merchant's attention to the new season's fashions in an important way, something which could never be achieved by individual stores and windows appearing at sporadic intervals.

And speaking of fashions, here's a note of interest to the women of every community. Next to a hat, every woman wants a fur coat.

CRIME IN THE U.S.
Home Towns Have Less Crime
Than Big Cities, FBI Reports

Life and property are much safer in a small town than a big city, according to a recent report on nationwide crime statistics by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The FBI report shows that the murder rate last year in the nation's 37 largest cities (populations of 250,000 or more) was more than twice as high as that in 1,197 towns having populations under 10,000. The large cities had almost seven murders per 100,000 population, while small towns had less than three. The balance sheet on other crimes shows a similar tendency.

But there is one exception to the rule. Levittown, N. Y., the nation's fastest-growing city, had even less crime than the typical American small town.

Returning Lost Children Biggest Job

By contrast, crime in Levittown was practically non-existent. Besides having no murders, robberies or auto thefts, the community had only one rape case, two cases of aggravated assault, and 120 cases of larceny. That gives the community a ratio of 1.6 rapes, 3.3 assaults and 200 larcenies per 100,000 population.

Only three of the larceny cases involved property worth more than $100, according to Commissioner

Beckmann. On the other hand, over a third of the total involved children's toys, such as bicycles and tricycles.

"As a matter of fact," the commissioner said, "the biggest single police job in Levittown has nothing to do with crime. Hardly a day goes by without a call from at least one Levittown mother. Our biggest job there is finding and returning lost children. We seem to have a lot of them."

But such names as mink dyed muskrat, Hudson seal, caracul and Australian chinchilla may disappear from furs and the American vocabulary under the new fur products labeling act which became law this month.

The new names to appear on labels of next year's furs will be determined by public hearings in the near future and then listed in a fur products name guide to be issued by the federal trade commission. Under the law, this list is ordered published by February 8. Approved names must be used on all furs sold after August 8, 1952.

The new laws states that the labels must show the true English names of the animals bearing the fur, hair or fleece, or the names by which the animals may be properly identified in the United States. The label must also show the country of origin and identify the manufacturer.

Expensive sounding foreign names will fall under the scrutiny of the commission. It may determine that Persian lamb, which is produced in Russia, Tibet or other nearby areas, will be required to carry that country's name. This might produce such a label as Tibetan Persian lamb. Another possible ruling is that a fur called Russian sable, not raised in Russia, will have to declare its independence from Stalin and the USSR on its label.

The commission's hearings are expected to be enlivened by arguments over whether rabbit fur must be called by that plain English name. Other spirited arguments may be expected over whether mouton must be identified by the unglamorous term, South American lamb, and whether American raised furs of the genus marmot must be labeled merely as groundhog, woodchuck or prairie dog.

"Rabbit is rabbit, and sable is sable. You needn't know furs now; just look at the label."

Camp Fire Girls Conduct
1951 Membership Drive

Beginning on September 15 and continuing through November 30 Camp Fire Girls will conduct its annual membership drive. In every community where there is a Camp Fire Girls organization the local newspaper will carry numerous stories of their activities.

And the civic minded merchants of many home towns will aid the organization through its newspaper advertising and window displays.

The organization was founded in 1910 by Dr. Luther Halsey Gulick, New York educator, on the theory that character and citizenship are formed predominantly during leisure hours and that children learn by doing. Since the youth agency was incorporated more than 3,000,000 girls have enjoyed membership.

What this organization means to the local community depends greatly upon what the individual community wants to make of it. It is a great opportunity for the teaching of skills, development of personality, and building citizenship of girls in every community.

ping centers, nine swimming pools and a $250,000 community hall. Levittown was created by Levitt and Sons, Inc., world's largest home-builders. It now consists of over 16,000 homes and more than 60,030 people.

In every major crime category, according to FBI figures, small cities have a much better record than large metropolitan centers.

For instance, the big cities last year had 88 robberies per 100,000 population, 195 auto thefts, 17 rapes, 108 cases of aggravated assault and 995 cases of larceny.

On the same population basis the small cities had only one fifth as many robberies, one third as many auto thefts, less than half as many rapes, about one fourth as many cases of aggravated assault and barely more than half as many cases of larceny.

Beckmann. On the other hand, over a third of the total involved children's toys, such as bicycles and tricycles.

"As a matter of fact," the commissioner said, "the biggest single police job in Levittown has nothing to do with crime. Hardly a day goes by without a call from at least one Levittown mother. Our biggest job there is finding and returning lost children. We seem to have a lot of them."

Churches Unite

Lesson for September 16, 1951

MORE THAN 200 different denominations of the Christian church exist in the United States alone. Several of these claim to be the one and only "true" church, but even those that do not make this claim are sufficiently pleased with themselves to stay on as separate denominations. Some Christians find this division of Christendom a scandal and a sin. Others find it the glory of Protestant Christianity that it has freedom and room for so many varieties of Christian faith. Has the Bible anything to say about this?

The Mother of All Churches
You will not find such words as "denomination" in the New Testament. Such words as Episcopalian, Lutheran, Baptist (referring to a church), Presbyterian, Mennonite, Roman Catholic, or other modern terms, are not to be found in the Scriptures.

All the same, our lesson passages give us some important suggestions. Luke tells how horrified the disciples were at discovering some one not of their own organization, doing good work in Jesus' name. They would have stopped him; but Jesus said, "He that is not against us is for us."

That is a good way to think about other Christian churches. The story in Acts 11 tells how churches in the earliest times helped one another in various ways. II Cor. 9 shows how the good example of one church can be a challenge to others to do still better.

As that Jerusalem meeting handed down a decision affecting many congregations and persons, so now the findings and decisions of great bodies of churches have a weight and an importance far beyond what might be said by single congregations. That council was the mother of all councils as the New Testament church was the mother of all churches.

All Christians Are Brothers
IN HIS first letter to that problem church of Corinth, their first pastor Paul urges the different parties in the church to remember above all that they are Christ's people rather than any one's else. The name of Christ is far more important than any of our denominational labels.

In his letter to the Philippians Paul says an even more striking thing. "I know that some are preaching Christ out of jealousy, to annoy me... but what does it matter? The fact remains that Christ is being preached, whether sincerely or not, and that fact makes me very happy."

In America today we are beginning to catch the New Testament spirit. Taking the situation as a whole, there is more get-togetherness than fly-apartness among the churches. Cooperation is taking many forms. Locally in communities, or in state-wide interdenominational associations, or on a national scale, churches are doing together what separate churches or denominations would find difficult or impossible.

Besides recent large mergers of denominations such as the union of Methodists north and south, the Evangelical United Brethren, the Evangelical and Reformed, and Congregational-Christian, there are many other groupings of like-minded churches, pooling their resources for evangelism, education, missionary work and many other purposes.

Message to the People
THE largest and most impressive get-togethers are the National Council of Churches of Christ in America which includes every large American denomination but two; and the great World Council of Churches with member-churches in every Christian land.

These words from the first message of the National Council to the people of America ring out the spirit of unity growing today: "This council has been constituted by 29 churches for the glory of God and the well-being of humanity. It manifests our oneness in Jesus Christ as divine Lord and Savior; his is the mandate we obey and his the power on which we rely. Our hope is in him. In him we see the solution of the world's ills. The Council itself is a demonstration of his power to unite his followers in joyous cooperation."

MIRROR Of Your MIND
Why People Like You
By Lawrence Gould

Can you figure out why people like you?

Answer: Never positively, and it is usually unwise to try. The essential reason, anyhow, is that they believe you like them and are interested in them, and wondering "what they see in you" is a form of self-centeredness that tends to make you less attractive. Actually, all normal men and women are looking for people to like because friendly feelings are as pleasurable as unfriendly ones are painful, so most of the people whom you meet will like you if you give them a chance. But conversely, feeling that you do not deserve to be liked is a step toward feeling you are disliked, and toward making the idea come true.

retical and practical training, and the only way to grasp dynamic psychiatry is to be psychoanalyzed yourself. The clinical psychologist must recognize his dependence on the medical profession for much of his training, and be willing to invest years of his own time in preparing himself to be able to help others.

Is preferring money to love "realistic"?
Answer: No, if only because love is real and money, a symbol. It may symbolize for you the pleasures which you think it can buy, and which, being largely childish, will eventually bore you. It may symbolize a sense of power over your neighbors which is likely in the end to make them hate you and want to destroy you. But most often of all, money is a symbol of security against essentially unreal dangers such as that of being rejected, ignored or perhaps even literally starved by your neighbors. The only abiding pleasure, power or security comes from the good will and affection of your fellow men and women.

Can you learn psychology in college?
Answer: There are many aspects of the science which are best learned in the classroom or the laboratory. But as Dr. Robert A. Young of the Judge Baker Guidance Center, Boston says, the psychologist who plans to do psychotherapy must turn to dynamic psychiatry for the ground work of his theory.

KEEPING HEALTHY
ACTH, Wonder Drug, Now In Supply

By Dr. James W. Barton

PATIENTS with arthritis throughout the world have been waiting for the day when the wonder drug, ACTH, would be available to all physicians. However, many of them, and physicians also, feared that the arthritis would make such a headway that by the time the drug was available, the patient could be permanently crippled.

What everybody has turned out to be a blessing. Faithful laboratory workers and hospital and research physicians who obtained this drug from Armour and Company, Chicago, to investigate its merits have been able to try ACTH on various other diseases besides arthritis with brilliant results. Fortunately, while these investigations were going on, ACTH manufacture was so greatly increased that physicians can now prescribe it for these new diseases and defects.

In December 1949, the first ACTH clinical conference was held in the Palmer House, Chicago, when ACTH was scarce and little was known

- The only food considered a must before an athletic contest is some form of sugar.
- Sugar begins to be absorbed into the blood before it leaves the mouth, which is a short cut compared with other foods.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Children's books take hard punishment. To preserve the hard covers, coat with thin shellac. This method is used in libraries and is good for any books you want protected.

Keep an ironing board and iron set up while sewing and press each seam as it is finished. This produces neater, more tailored results, and makes the final pressing a simple matter.

After you've oiled up your electric fan, slip a large paper bag over the blade guard. Now turn the fan on and let it run for several minutes before removing the bag. This is an effective way to catch those spatterings that might otherwise have landed on your walls, furniture, and draperies.

Here is a carpenter's trick that will help you avoid splitting when you are nailing near the end of a thin board or through small blocks. Turn the nail over and blunt the point slightly, resting it on a hard object or on the spot where it will be driven.

It is better to select closely woven fabrics for slip covers because they give greater protection against dust, hold their shape better, wear longer and tailor more easily than do loosely woven materials.

O'Donnell's "Nut"

Those of you who have dogs cats, and, yes, even young children are urged to exercise caution as O'Donnell's only "black mark" THE POISONER is loose again and throwing poison bait into yards. An estimated dozen dogs and cats died Saturday from poison in the south and east part of town and their painful death was n't nice to watch.

This man or woman, twisted mentally in such a manner that a normal person cannot understand, takes a big chance on killing a baby in order to satisfy a blood lust to kill. This person, probably a woman, has been here for years and has done the same stunt every year. It will be a pleasure to print his or HER name when and if arrested and convicted, which carries a jail sentence.

But to be fair there are countless "wild" dogs and cats with no rabies owners. The Index feels that a rabies safety point of view officers should be advised to have later kill all dogs and cats which are not penned at night and cared for by day. Folks with dogs and lawns dislike "foreign" dogs. We know we do and we try to keep our pup at home. But POISONER reflects no credit on our town.
