THE GOLD EXPORTS

Considerable Uneasiness at the Proportions of the Shipments.

BEST AUTHORITIES PUZZLED

Is It a Legitimate Exchange Movement or Sale of a Commodity at a Premium—Confidence that Ill Effects Will Not be Severe Nor Long Continued.

New York, May 2.—The dealers in stocks and bonds have been occupied all the past week almost exclusively with the gold export movement, which has set in, and have manifested considerable uneasiness at the proportions assumed by the shipments.

This opinion was based on the fact that on the previous Monday short sterling had ruled at 3.83 1/2 and had touched 3.83 1/2, without any engagements being made for shipment.

The question involved. This retrospection is necessary to properly estimate the disputes that have arisen as to whether the gold is going abroad as a commodity at a premium or whether it is a legitimate exchange operation.

On the other hand it is claimed that with sterling exchange on the basis of 4.87 1/2 for demand there is no profit in gold shipments, which must be due to the payment of something equivalent to a premium growing out of a demand for special causes.

The Great Silver Victory at Chicago and the General Advance of the Human Race at that Place.

(Written for The Gazette by E. R. R.) The press and some of the people of Colorado are rejoicing with boisterous glee over the glorious victory which was won for the cause of silver in the recent Chicago elections.

In order to head off crooked work and skulking, the mayor called it, and thus secure a square meal for the masses, a whole battalion of saloon-keepers were elected to be aldermen and a squad of seven of those who were the best equipped for serving the public intelligently and honestly were made chairman of the important committee.

Mr. Powers, the keeper of a dramshop, who is chairman of the committee on finance and who it is claimed has been an active member of the lower strata of society for, oh these many years, says that he has handled goods for money in his time, and has time and again made change over his justly-earned bar, and that he knows the difference.

On the other hand it is claimed that with sterling exchange on the basis of 4.87 1/2 for demand there is no profit in gold shipments, which must be due to the payment of something equivalent to a premium growing out of a demand for special causes.

The Royal—White and Pure as the Driven Snow.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure

MONDAY HINTS FOR THE HOUSE-WIFE.

Polish Tart. Roll good pie crust out thin, and cut it into two and a half inch squares; brush each square over with the white of an egg; then fold over the corners together; brush over with the white of egg, sift with sugar and bake in a quick oven for a quarter of an hour.

Delicious Brown Fricassee Chicken. Brown fricassee is a very tasty way of serving a fowl. Singe, draw and disjoint; put into a good sized saucepan two tablespoonfuls of butter; when hot drop in the pieces of chicken; allow them to brown gradually, taking great care the fowl does not burn; the soon as the pieces are browned draw them to the one side of the saucepan and add to the fat two tablespoonfuls of flour; mix and add one pint of stock or water.

Clear Starching. An English matron claims that clear starching is accomplished in this way to the best advantage. Wash the articles in three waters, dry them and dip them in a thick starch previously strained through muslin. Squeeze them, shake them gently and hang them up to dry.

Spinach and Bacon. Spinach served with bacon and eggs is very often served with tomato. Wash and pick over the spinach; wash it with cold water; lightly boil in water, and when done drain and chop it.

Mutton Baked with Tomatoes. Cut five neat thin slices from cold leg of mutton; season them slightly with salt, pepper and a pinch of cayenne.

Creamed Horseradish. This is an excellent sauce for cold meat or poultry, made from horseradish, fish, yolk of an egg, and whipped cream.

Ginger Ice Cream. Two cups scalded milk, one tablespoonful flour, one cup sugar, one egg, eight drops vanilla, one quart cream, one tablespoon vanilla, one-half cup ginger, cut in small pieces, three tablespoon ginger syrup and two tablespoon cream.

Breaded Lamb Chops. French the chops by cutting off the strip of fat and skin on the long end of the bone. Wipe the meat with a damp cloth, beat an egg just enough to mix, add one tablespoonful of warm water and a pinch of salt and pepper.

Deerfoot Scraps. One of the latest old-fashioned dishes to come into favor with the modern palate is scraps, or the crisp membrane left from the trying out of lard.

Watch Your Refrigerator. "Here are the eggs, mum!" "Lay them on the table." "I'm not the hen, mum; I'm the grocer's boy!"—(Yonkers Statesman.)

The harvest from the Carson City fight is being reaped. During the past week four deaths have been recorded from the harmless scientific exhibition of sparring.

About Reincarnation. To the Editor of The Gazette. After reading Miss Besant's frank and interesting letter, recently printed in the columns of your issue, I am struck by the difficulty of giving credence to that scheme of psychology.

THE NEW GAME LAW. The game law passed by the Eleventh general assembly is more strict in its provisions than any previous law upon the same subject in Colorado.

By the act it is declared that all wild game, animals and birds and fish in the public streams, are the property of the state and shall not be killed or taken except as provided for by the act.

On May 1 the season for all game closed and it will open for the taking of fish on June 1. The open seasons are as follows: Wild turkeys, prairie chickens, grouse and sage chickens, August 15 to November 1.

On May 1 the season for all game closed and it will open for the taking of fish on June 1. The open seasons are as follows: Wild turkeys, prairie chickens, grouse and sage chickens, August 15 to November 1.

and imprisonment 10 days to six months. Permission may be granted by the commissioner to collect certain animals and fish for scientific purposes.

Authority is given to game wardens, sheriffs and constables to enter and search wagon, camp, warehouse, etc., and to confiscate and turn over to the poor houses, hospitals and poor people, all game and fish held in violation of the act; to arrest without a warrant all violators, and to call for assistance if necessary to enforce the law.

After May 1, and until the seasons of 1897 begin, none of the protected game or fish can be lawfully had in possession. Proprietors of hotels, restaurants and cold storage warehouses, market and commission men, will be afforded an opportunity to dispose of all protected game and fish on hand, until the 10th inst., after which date special attention will be given to those places furnishing a market for game and fish illegally taken.

Proprietors of sawmills, stamp and reduction mills and placer mines are notified to dispose of their sawdust and tailings as not to pollute the waters containing food fish.

One-half of all fines collected is payable to the person who furnishes the information as to the violation of the law. The principal changes from the old law are those which prohibit hunting or fishing on posted enclosures, the allowing permission to be given for keeping certain animals for scientific purposes, the implied legalization of trap shooting at live birds and the much stricter rules against the serving of game fish and animals at hotels and restaurants.

Most of the changes are reasonable and beneficial, and the new game law seems to be one of the very few things for which the Eleventh general assembly deserves credit.

A Nebraska clergyman says that New York and Chicago are about to be desolated because of their wickedness. The way of their ending he is not quite sure of, but he thinks that it will be either by earthquake or cyclone.

The government pays well for its weather prophets, and it is scarcely fair for those who wear the cloth to invade its domain. What we want in our churches is more preaching of the Bible, and the sooner the ministers of the present day understand this the better it will be for the church and the public generally.

We strongly suspect that the reverend gentleman is suffering for notoriety. The Chinese, in building their railroads, are availing themselves of skilled American labor.

Many of their own people have helped lay road beds in this country particularly in the far west, but they have not had the experience necessary for the construction of important roads such as are now being contemplated by the Chinese.

The harvest from the Carson City fight is being reaped. During the past week four deaths have been recorded from the harmless scientific exhibition of sparring. The blow with which Fitzsimmons parried his opponent has been adopted with deadly effect.

About Reincarnation. To the Editor of The Gazette. After reading Miss Besant's frank and interesting letter, recently printed in the columns of your issue, I am struck by the difficulty of giving credence to that scheme of psychology.

That events, apparently totally forgotten, can be recalled is subject to reasonable explanation, without resorting to the doctrine in question. Let it be conceded that every thought that has ever crossed the mind from infancy to maturity leaves, consciously or unconsciously, an indelible impression.

What then? How is the memory—that cannot be found any disappearance of the memory of incidents that follow between the revival of a forgotten impression of childhood and a supposed reminiscence of a later life?

Of course, the memory as a faculty is not to be measured by the seeming capacity. Our every day experiences consist so largely of scarcely varying repetitions, that the memory of incidents that follow, and there is the memory of our deepest impressions, the cream, so to speak, of our more momentous experiences.

It is true that "nothing in nature is understood to spring into existence suddenly with marked characteristics." The newly escaped chick begins at once to scratch for its living. The new-born duckling takes at once to the water.

In explanation of the early development of instinct in the beginnings of animal life science propounds and fairly verifies the theory of heredity. I see no reason why the precocity of childhood should not be a similar origin.

We are aware how frequently genius and talent follow ancestral lines. Galton's work, a classic on this subject, is of value in this discussion. If there is any truth in the reincarnation doctrine, I marvel that its application is not directed to the advancement of the human race.

Some second advents of civilized souls in darkest Africa might produce a beneficial uplift there. But the presumption is that such spirits get reincarnated nearer home, where least needed.

Those indefinable recollections that occur to many sympathetic minds are but apparently distant echoes of local impressions. In my younger days I have listened to music with a suspicion of having heard it before, unable to remember when or where. Truly the mysteries of memory are wonderful enough.

But the theory of reincarnation is not to be substantiated by stepping from one memory to another, as J. W. A. C. Troy, N. Y., April 28, 1897.

SPRIT OF THE TIMES. Noteworthy Opinions of Journals of the World.

Physical Degeneracy of the Negro. Springfield Republican. The white population of Augusta, Ga., numbers about 28,000; against a negro population of 18,000; yet just twice as many negroes died of consumption in that city last year as whites—the colored victims of the disease numbering 64 to 32 white.

The president of the local board of health, Dr. Eugene Foster, in giving out these statistics before the war consumption was a rare disease among the blacks, and a negro with consumption was a clinical curiosity. "This new susceptibility of the negro race to consumption," he says, "is one of the numerous penalties following upon the changed relations of this people consequent to their emancipation."

trial capacities as a laborer were not of a low order, nor was the condition of servitude such as to prevent in him normal conditions favorable to mental disease, suicide or intemperance.

What are the conditions 30 years after? The pages of this work give but one answer—an answer which is a most severe condemnation of modern attempts of superior races to life inferior races to their own elevated position.

Unless a change takes place, a change that will strike at the fundamental errors that underlie the condition in which matters will be worse than they are now, when disease will be more destructive, vital resistance still lower, when the number of births will fall below the deaths, and gradual extinction of the race take place.

FAST SEEN IN TOWN

Some of the Swift Ones Out at Roswell Track.

THOROUGHBREDS' INSPECTION

Chaperoned by Udegraf, the Famous Starter-Manager, a Technical Account and History of the Racers Obtained - Fine Prospects of an Exceptionally Successful Meet in Colorado Springs.

A visit yesterday at the Roswell race track in company with Mr. O. P. Udegraf who is here getting up the race meeting which will take place from May 25th to June 2nd inclusive, was an interesting experience. A great deal of work and expense have been put on the Roswell track so that it was found in better shape than ever before.

Among the runners there is a string belonging to Mr. L. Dittmore comprising the chestnut gelding called "Way Behind," the eight-year-old bay gelding, "J. W. Brooks," and the bay mare "Flying Bird," Fred Beard is also working with three of the pick of his stable that will take part in the racing circuit commencing at the Springs.

At work among the harness brigade was Mr. George Hopkins, who is preparing the fleet ones for the coming meet. "Opheila," with a pacing record of 2:12 1/2, "Keen Kicker," another pacer with a record of 2:13 1/2, "Lena Tier," another promising pacer mare with a record of 2:16 1/2, and the colt "McCloud," with a record of 2:19 1/2, "George Dixon," is on the string, record 2:37 1/2, whose sire is "Ashland Wilkes," the sire of "John R. Gentry," the greatest pacer of them all.

Edward Parker of this city, is working the very promising horse, "Sable Guy," by "Guy Wilkes," dam by "Dauntless." This fellow has already set the track on fire this spring and when it comes time to go after the money, look out for him. Mr. J. W. Miller, the former secretary of the association, is having some horses worked at the track that are very promising.

Col. Dick Beirup of Sioux City, Iowa, is here also preparing quite a string. They are mostly green ones but very promising and extremely highly bred. Among them are "Kittie Aberdeen," by "Almont Aberdeen," "Johnnie," by "Almont Aberdeen," "The Mountain," yesterday a record of 2:20, and "The Mountain," yesterday a record of 2:20, and "The Mountain," yesterday a record of 2:20.

Mr. H. B. Daniels, the president of the association, is having worked his handsome bay mare, "Morgan," sired by "Frank Noble," dam, "Lottie S." by "Sorocco."

This mare has a record of 2:37 1/2, but has already trotted full miles this year in 2:28 and has shown a quarter in 1:20 and a 2:20 gait. "Janitor," is a very prepossessing bay gelding, five years old, sired by "Williams," dam by "George Wilkes." This fellow is certainly bred for a trotter as "Williams" has a record of 2:19 1/2, and "Red Wilkes," the sire of his dam stands today crowned with the greatest honor of any stallion living. That of being the sire of the greatest number of race horses.

Over at the large new barn of Judge Colburn was found the genial driver, Mr. M. S. Hayes in charge of an exceptional stable of race horses. Among them is the great race horse, "Judge Toler," with a trotting record of 2:13 1/2, and a pacing record of 2:19 1/2. As most of the Colorado Springs horsemen know, "Judge Toler" is sired by the great "Ashland Wilkes," and dam by "Egbert," and has not only proven himself to be a race horse but is already a sire of speed, having a large number of colts right around the Springs that are already race horses, though many of them out of very inferior dams.

One of the greatest race mares in this country is quartered at this stable, being none other than "Kate Medium," with the record of 2:14 1/2. She is, as most every one knows, by Riley Medium, who has a record of 2:19 1/2, who is the sire of "Bob Riley," one of the greatest campaigners of 1895 and '96.

If "Kate Medium" stays right, she certainly will come home at the close of the Montana circuit with a record as good as 2:07. "Belvidere Jr.," the bay gelding with a trotting record of 2:19 1/2, is now going at the lateral gait and has shown full miles in better than 2:25. "George C.," is a son of "Judge Toler," whose dam's breeding is unknown, but notwithstanding that fact, he has already shown his ability to trot in 2:20. "Little Man," although that name does not imply much, is a four-year-old by "Judge Toler," that can stop you watch at 2:20 about as often as "George C. Bert," and is a sorrel colt by "Toler" also, and though very short of work, has gone quarters in 25 seconds. "Judge W.," another sorrel colt, receiving his lessons in the kindergarten school, is a two-year-old, full brother of "Bert," and has shown better than a 50 clip. Then were found better than a 50 clip. Then were found better than a 50 clip. Then were found better than a 50 clip.

Mr. Udegraf introduced Phin Smith of St. Louis. Phin is only a boy, possibly 22 years of age, but nevertheless, he has proved himself the master of many a race. He has brought to this track a mare whose campaign '96 has given her a national reputation. It is none other than "Tulsa," with a record of 2:15, and with her, Smith expects to carry off his full share of the purses in the circuit. He has also with him a horse called Struble, and while he has no record, will be ready to race when called upon as he has shown his ability to go better than 2:24.

To those who are interested in seeing these speedy fellows take their work, it will be as effective if they will go to the track on Tuesdays or Fridays, they will find them there in all their glory, as these are the days that most of the drivers select for their fast work, although every day in the week there are many working three and four heats.

DANA'S LAST DAY

He Leaves the Service of the City to Assume New Duties.

HIS RECORD AS MARSHAL

What He Has Accomplished During His Tenure of Office—His Rogues' Gallery and Collection of Weapons—Something About Captain Gathright—History of Mr. Dana's Life for a Pittsburg Paper.

After 22 years of faithful service for the city of Colorado Springs and the county of El Paso, Mr. L. C. Dana resigns his position tonight as marshal and chief of police of Colorado Springs.

As Mr. Dana has been so long connected with city affairs and so prominently identified with the interests of the city, his retirement is something of more than passing interest and realizing this fact, a Gazette reporter interviewed a number of prominent city officials asking for expressions regarding the manner in which Mr. Dana had discharged his duties during his tenure of office.

The following words of one of the gentlemen voices the sentiments of every one interviewed: "I have known Mr. Dana for years and he has been so long connected with the police department of the city that he is known throughout the United States as one of the most efficient officers in the entire country. His record is one that he can well feel proud of, as during the long period of his services as policeman, deputy sheriff, sheriff and marshal and chief of police, he has been bringing to the aid of the city government which has entrusted to his care has been conducted in the most efficient manner and his services to the city and the city which he has served so unselfishly."

"Now that he has been appointed postmaster and will be leaving the city, it is with great regret that the citizens generally, and the officers of the police department especially, give him up."

Boquets for Gathright. "Mr. Dana has been fortunate in having a man like Captain Gathright for an assistant, as he has always proven to be a most efficient officer, and it is with regret that he is leaving the city. His services have been most valuable and his collection of weapons and rogues' gallery is one of the most interesting collections in the city."

During the time Mr. Dana has been marshal of Colorado Springs he has gotten together one of the finest rogues' galleries in the country. It consists of some 2,000 photographs of noted crooks and is the personal property of Mr. Dana. These photos have been collected in the course of his long career, and required a number of years to collect. He says that while the outlay has been great in securing the collection, yet it has been well repaid by the material in the apprehension of criminals and his successful career.

Mr. Dana says he expects to remain in Colorado Springs all of his life and that he will probably donate his valuable collection to the city.

Interesting Collection. The marshal's private office in the northeast corner of the City Hall is well worthy of a visit, for exclusive of the rogues' gallery, Mr. Dana has gathered together a collection of curious and interesting objects that are most interesting. The most complete set of burglar tools in the country, containing 165 separate pieces, is artistically displayed in one of the large cases on the walls. This set was the property of Jerome Markie, alias Miller, alias Weber, alias Gook Tooth Dutch, a notorious crook and safe-blower, who was arrested by Chief Dana and his men November 5, 1896. Then there are scores of pistols, razors, knives, saws, and other tools and weapons of every description, all of these are arranged in glass cases and when they were taken from whom and when they were taken.

The upper portion of the walls are decorated with pictures of the various mayors who have served Colorado Springs, many of the aldermen, the marshal, police force and firemen.

The annual convention meets this year at Pittsburg, but Chief Dana will not be able to attend. A Pittsburg paper has asked for a short sketch of the life of Mr. Dana, and the following account has been sent, which will appear in the paper during the convention.

Mr. Dana, marshal and chief of police of Colorado Springs, Colo., was born in Chemung, McHenry county, Ill., April 25th, 1874, consequently is 48 years of age. At the age of 15 years and two days he enlisted in Co. H, 145th Illinois volunteers, commanded by Capt. A. H. Bogardus, for many years champion wing shot of the United States, and a warm friend of Wm. A. and Robt. Pinkerton, who is proud of his rogues' gallery, which contains portraits of some 2,000 of the most prominent criminals of America. Inside a number of large cases artistically arranged to show the curios and weapons connected with the numerous crimes that the police of his department have arrested, the most interesting of which is one of the most complete sets of burglar's tools ever laid out. It contains 152 pieces, and was the property of Jerome

As Mr. Dana has been so long connected with city affairs and so prominently identified with the interests of the city, his retirement is something of more than passing interest and realizing this fact, a Gazette reporter interviewed a number of prominent city officials asking for expressions regarding the manner in which Mr. Dana had discharged his duties during his tenure of office.

The following words of one of the gentlemen voices the sentiments of every one interviewed: "I have known Mr. Dana for years and he has been so long connected with the police department of the city that he is known throughout the United States as one of the most efficient officers in the entire country. His record is one that he can well feel proud of, as during the long period of his services as policeman, deputy sheriff, sheriff and marshal and chief of police, he has been bringing to the aid of the city government which has entrusted to his care has been conducted in the most efficient manner and his services to the city and the city which he has served so unselfishly."

"Now that he has been appointed postmaster and will be leaving the city, it is with great regret that the citizens generally, and the officers of the police department especially, give him up."

Boquets for Gathright. "Mr. Dana has been fortunate in having a man like Captain Gathright for an assistant, as he has always proven to be a most efficient officer, and it is with regret that he is leaving the city. His services have been most valuable and his collection of weapons and rogues' gallery is one of the most interesting collections in the city."

During the time Mr. Dana has been marshal of Colorado Springs he has gotten together one of the finest rogues' galleries in the country. It consists of some 2,000 photographs of noted crooks and is the personal property of Mr. Dana. These photos have been collected in the course of his long career, and required a number of years to collect. He says that while the outlay has been great in securing the collection, yet it has been well repaid by the material in the apprehension of criminals and his successful career.

Mr. Dana says he expects to remain in Colorado Springs all of his life and that he will probably donate his valuable collection to the city.

Interesting Collection. The marshal's private office in the northeast corner of the City Hall is well worthy of a visit, for exclusive of the rogues' gallery, Mr. Dana has gathered together a collection of curious and interesting objects that are most interesting. The most complete set of burglar tools in the country, containing 165 separate pieces, is artistically displayed in one of the large cases on the walls. This set was the property of Jerome Markie, alias Miller, alias Weber, alias Gook Tooth Dutch, a notorious crook and safe-blower, who was arrested by Chief Dana and his men November 5, 1896. Then there are scores of pistols, razors, knives, saws, and other tools and weapons of every description, all of these are arranged in glass cases and when they were taken from whom and when they were taken.

The upper portion of the walls are decorated with pictures of the various mayors who have served Colorado Springs, many of the aldermen, the marshal, police force and firemen.

The annual convention meets this year at Pittsburg, but Chief Dana will not be able to attend. A Pittsburg paper has asked for a short sketch of the life of Mr. Dana, and the following account has been sent, which will appear in the paper during the convention.

Mr. Dana, marshal and chief of police of Colorado Springs, Colo., was born in Chemung, McHenry county, Ill., April 25th, 1874, consequently is 48 years of age. At the age of 15 years and two days he enlisted in Co. H, 145th Illinois volunteers, commanded by Capt. A. H. Bogardus, for many years champion wing shot of the United States, and a warm friend of Wm. A. and Robt. Pinkerton, who is proud of his rogues' gallery, which contains portraits of some 2,000 of the most prominent criminals of America. Inside a number of large cases artistically arranged to show the curios and weapons connected with the numerous crimes that the police of his department have arrested, the most interesting of which is one of the most complete sets of burglar's tools ever laid out. It contains 152 pieces, and was the property of Jerome

DOCTOR SPONGE Has a very large practice, but it would be much larger if people knew what an excellent physician he is generally, and how very moderate are his charges. Those who do know him, thoroughly could be induced to give him up. He comes in all sizes and at all prices. You may have a big, soft, spongy sponge for $1.25, and you may buy a tiny, soft spongy sponge for 15c. You may also get a soft, spongy sponge in different prices and sizes between these. Try one at your path tomorrow, try one on the baby, use it for everything.

I DON'T HAVE SOME OLD PLODDER RIG YOU OUT. Do not have some hand-me-down plodder rig you out. Your clothes must be right. How to get them right is a problem. Call on us and we will do it for you at less cost than any legitimate competitor.

It is authoritatively stated that the deal which has been pending for some time between the Midland, Midland and the Denver and Gulf roads has fallen through, and it is also currently rumored that the Santa Fe road will succeed in getting full control of the Midland after May 15th, when the sale of the road is to occur, although Receiver Ristine is understood to be working energetically to keep the Midland intact as an independent line. The Midland will continue to run its trains over the Santa Fe between Colorado Springs and Denver as it has done in the past.

MIDLAND-GULF DEAL

The Attempt to Consolidate the Interests of These Two Roads Has Apparently Failed of Consummation. The Midland, a few days ago inaugurated a new system of retrenchment in operating expenses, by permanently laying off three of its engineers, and placing four other engineers at work as firemen. Some of the men who have been put on have only been working 40 hours a week.

SUNDAY SERMONS.

A few Sundays since the Rev. Henry R. Rose, D.D., of the Universalist Church of Auburn, Me., preached the following sermon, which from its originality created attention and is worthy of a reproduction.

O, my God, my soul is cast down within me. . . . All thy waves and thy billows are gone over me.—Psalms, xlii, 6, 7.

Why art thou cast down, O my soul? And why art thou disquieted within me? Hope thou in God, for I shall yet praise him.—Psalms, xlii, 11.

There is a secret worth learning—the secret of a serene, happy, productive life, the spirit of crushing experiences and temporary lapses.

Some years ago a friend handed me a poem, one stanza of which read thus: The people live in grief, they like best to be in grief, they like best to be in grief. . . .

Does anybody truly rest? Till grass roots bind him under?

I expressed my estimate of her own life. She felt out of place. She longed for a different career than the one she was forced by circumstances to pursue.

Many a time her soul was cast down; almost continuously her spirit was in quietude. She quoted David's words: "O, my God, my soul is cast down within me."

She was now in a position where she could understand and sympathize with the psalmist. But I asked her if she had noticed the whole of that psalm—if she had noticed how David ended his strain of sorrow? He is not discouraged and pessimistic at the last. No, a cry of confidence in God and a shout of triumph rushes from his lips.

He cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? You have no good reason for despondency. "Hope thou in God for I shall yet praise him."

He is not discouraged and pessimistic at the last. No, a cry of confidence in God and a shout of triumph rushes from his lips.

He cast down, O my soul, and why art thou disquieted within me? You have no good reason for despondency. "Hope thou in God for I shall yet praise him."

on it and said, "Who are you that is like a bit of snow? And there were no birds to sing, and the sunshine was veiled, and the rain was cold, and the flower that was born before its time died before its time."

That is the lesson of the poem, but it is not altogether true when applied to human life. As faithful as is the history of the human race, considered in the light of the great lives that have been unappreciated and destroyed by their own generation, and therefore seemingly lost to us, yet the history of such lives is vocal with strains of usefulness and triumph. So many did not die in vain. Jesus did not spend his years as a tale that is told. Copernicus and Galileo did not cover the real heavens unwardly. Darwin and Wallace did not die in vain. The hieroglyphics of the past into intelligible language without gaining readers and converts, and doing the world an inestimable service. John Brown did not plunge to his death in behalf of the slave and leave no sound to echo round the world. No man that ever lived has died in vain, or expounded a great cause in advance of his age has been too soon, and therefore a failure.

His voice is forever bidding us to adapt ourselves to our circumstances; never to allow our circumstances to enervate or discourage us. When man adapts himself to his environment it means the glorification of that environment. The meagrest work and the smallest sphere will become divine if the sparks of nobility fly from the soul there.

Therefore let us still be faithful, whether that which is least or that which is much, waiting for the future to justify our present state, and ever believing with all our might, that

IS CONSUMPTION CONTAGIOUS?

The Extraordinary Exception from the Disease in the High Altitude.

The following article from the New York Sun will be read with interest by many Colorado Springs people:

With the present agitation in many of our large cities concerning the extension and spread of that dread life destroyer, consumption, with health boards passing laws against spitting in streets and public places, with each being killed by the hundreds to prevent tubercular meat infection and with legislative bodies grappling with the advisability of laws to quarantine the consumptive, it seems rather a gratuitous question to ask if consumption is contagious. Of course it is contagious. The proof is in the fact that it is transmitted by the sputum and technical skill in all civilized countries have for years proved by direct experiments upon animals and from the fact that it is transmitted by the sputum, that the germ from the dried sputum of consumptives, wafted about in the air, to be inhaled with the dust, or taken in a glass of water, is capable of giving a person consumption.

The records show it to be a most frequent and deadly disease, one person in every eight being attacked. It is found in any city and before the year runs out one of them will succumb to this scourge of the human race. The story is the same from the tropics to the poles, from the cold and frozen north; where people live, there consumption lives also, and claims its victims from the mud hut of the peasant up to the palace of the rich, with an impartial and relentless certainty year after year.

The suffering, the crippled life, the desolate home, the agonizing question, "Is there no escape? Are there no people, is there no race or climate where this awful destroying angel, tuberculosis, is not found?"

To answer this question one has to turn to climatology, or the study of climate and its effect on mankind. It has long been known that the climate inhabiting a country several thousand feet above the level of the sea suffers less from consumption than any other land in the high vales of the Andes. It is almost an unknown disease. The same immunity has been found to exist in races living in the high plateaus of the African continent, and in the mountains of Europe rarely show any evidence of this disease among them. To come nearer home, in our own country, the high altitude plateau extending east of the Rocky mountains, through New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Colorado, etc., it was observed in 1892 that the mortality from consumption was practically unknown. Now that all of this region is becoming rapidly settled, having even cities of fair size, the question arises, is this freedom from this disease held out by the vigorous action now being taken against it, or is it due to the climate?

It is a question that has been asked by many a doctor, and the answer is, unfortunately, more than a little uncertain. Tubercular era arrives, countless lives will be sacrificed, as contagion is controlled slowly and with great care, and for years it will be a losing battle. What and where has been fought step by step, thousands of children are born, children who are weakened by an inherited taint, and like a spark in a powder magazine. One pipe of air comes, and their poorly resisting bodies are all aflame with tubercular fire, a fire smoldering, but not extinguished.

A country, then, in which life can be saved, a country right here in the United States, where the climate is so favorable, where to catch consumption is next door to impossible, and where even those said to be hopelessly ill with the disease recover, is a question that has long been one needs to offer no apology for presenting its merits to the whole world, at once and with all the force one can.

There is no question as to the single section of a human individual, or even the seductive and illusive gold and silver mines; it is a question of a nation's health, and deals with a piece of property that is in all parts of which the climate offers the same protection and cure—a cure that has stood the test of years, and is shown from carefully compiled statistics as more effective in the greatest number of cases than any climate cure ever studied.

There has been, however, one objection, especially in the eastern cities, considered an alarm expressed about coming to this practically non-tubercular belt for fear that in the process of coming to this high altitude there is great danger of contracting the disease. This impression is very strong, and is constantly being ground, and even doctors are warning against a trip to Colorado for that reason. The newspapers have taken it up, and several articles have appeared, one in the New York Evening Post, which is a very interesting and denouncing Colorado Springs as a plague spot and painting the danger and risk of infection from consumption in the most vivid and glowing colors. The article, no doubt, regarded as true by many people, as it received a wide publicity by the papers all over the country, and as I know, was never denied; so that it probably has been accepted by the average reader is correct.

Now, at first sight, and without positive knowledge to guide one, it cannot be denied that the greatest danger from infection must exist where there are the greatest number of consumptives, and to communicate the disease. Other things being equal, it would be so. But other things are not equal. Colorado, and in general any country with a similar climate, for climate comes in. That makes all the difference, and it was to determine practically this difference between the climates and the climate of Colorado that for some years I have been collecting statistics and making experiments, so as to make without reserve all the evidence that presented itself on this subject.

It is estimated beyond doubt that consumption is communicated by the sputum to the well by the expectorated, from the sick to the healthy, and from the healthy to the healthy, and it is drawn into the lungs in the form of dust. With a view to ascertaining how consumption is communicated in this climate, I have for a number of years made a careful study of the dust and germs in the air in Colorado Springs and the surrounding country, and have been amazed day and night, indoors and out. It was found by these experiments that the air all over the region on the prairie, in the foothills, and in the mountains, was free from any germs; in the town it was found that the average number of germs contained in a place of like size, and in a similar climate, was ten times as many as in the country.

These results were negative, with the exception of the wonderful purity of the air everywhere except in the immediate vicinity of human habitations.

In the next experiment dust was taken from the walls of rooms, occupied by consumptives in houses, hotels, sanitariums and boarding places, and was carefully removed from behind pictures, and from other places, and then injected into animals, which were killed after a certain interval and examined for consumption. These experiments are nearly completed, and have given to the medical profession at the present time a very clear idea of the question.

It is found that the dust in Colorado Springs is not only free from germs, but is also free from the dust and germs in the air in the high vales of the Andes. It is almost an unknown disease. The same immunity has been found to exist in races living in the high plateaus of the African continent, and in the mountains of Europe rarely show any evidence of this disease among them.

To come nearer home, in our own country, the high altitude plateau extending east of the Rocky mountains, through New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Colorado, etc., it was observed in 1892 that the mortality from consumption was practically unknown. Now that all of this region is becoming rapidly settled, having even cities of fair size, the question arises, is this freedom from this disease held out by the vigorous action now being taken against it, or is it due to the climate?

It is a question that has been asked by many a doctor, and the answer is, unfortunately, more than a little uncertain. Tubercular era arrives, countless lives will be sacrificed, as contagion is controlled slowly and with great care, and for years it will be a losing battle. What and where has been fought step by step, thousands of children are born, children who are weakened by an inherited taint, and like a spark in a powder magazine. One pipe of air comes, and their poorly resisting bodies are all aflame with tubercular fire, a fire smoldering, but not extinguished.

A country, then, in which life can be saved, a country right here in the United States, where the climate is so favorable, where to catch consumption is next door to impossible, and where even those said to be hopelessly ill with the disease recover, is a question that has long been one needs to offer no apology for presenting its merits to the whole world, at once and with all the force one can.

There is no question as to the single section of a human individual, or even the seductive and illusive gold and silver mines; it is a question of a nation's health, and deals with a piece of property that is in all parts of which the climate offers the same protection and cure—a cure that has stood the test of years, and is shown from carefully compiled statistics as more effective in the greatest number of cases than any climate cure ever studied.

There has been, however, one objection, especially in the eastern cities, considered an alarm expressed about coming to this practically non-tubercular belt for fear that in the process of coming to this high altitude there is great danger of contracting the disease. This impression is very strong, and is constantly being ground, and even doctors are warning against a trip to Colorado for that reason. The newspapers have taken it up, and several articles have appeared, one in the New York Evening Post, which is a very interesting and denouncing Colorado Springs as a plague spot and painting the danger and risk of infection from consumption in the most vivid and glowing colors. The article, no doubt, regarded as true by many people, as it received a wide publicity by the papers all over the country, and as I know, was never denied; so that it probably has been accepted by the average reader is correct.

Now, at first sight, and without positive knowledge to guide one, it cannot be denied that the greatest danger from infection must exist where there are the greatest number of consumptives, and to communicate the disease. Other things being equal, it would be so. But other things are not equal. Colorado, and in general any country with a similar climate, for climate comes in. That makes all the difference, and it was to determine practically this difference between the climates and the climate of Colorado that for some years I have been collecting statistics and making experiments, so as to make without reserve all the evidence that presented itself on this subject.

It is estimated beyond doubt that consumption is communicated by the sputum to the well by the expectorated, from the sick to the healthy, and from the healthy to the healthy, and it is drawn into the lungs in the form of dust. With a view to ascertaining how consumption is communicated in this climate, I have for a number of years made a careful study of the dust and germs in the air in Colorado Springs and the surrounding country, and have been amazed day and night, indoors and out. It was found by these experiments that the air all over the region on the prairie, in the foothills, and in the mountains, was free from any germs; in the town it was found that the average number of germs contained in a place of like size, and in a similar climate, was ten times as many as in the country.

These results were negative, with the exception of the wonderful purity of the air everywhere except in the immediate vicinity of human habitations.

In the next experiment dust was taken from the walls of rooms, occupied by consumptives in houses, hotels, sanitariums and boarding places, and was carefully removed from behind pictures, and from other places, and then injected into animals, which were killed after a certain interval and examined for consumption. These experiments are nearly completed, and have given to the medical profession at the present time a very clear idea of the question.
