FISH, WARD AND WARNER.

Fish Expresses Himself Before Returning to Albany-Ward's Alleged Plant in Europe-Efforts to Convict Ward Some More.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30.-Ex-Banker James D. Fish was visited last night at the Murray Hill Hotel by several prominent business men, who extended to him their friendship even in adversity. This morning his daughter, son and sister called and accompanied him to the Grand Central depot. When the train was about to start Fish kissed his female relatives affectionately, and at 10:30 the traim moved out from the depot. A report was current this morning that Judge Smith, of Canandaigua, issued that Judge Smith, of Canandaigua, issued yesterday a writ of habeas corpus in the case of James D. Fish, based on the claim that his removal from prison was irregular, and that he cannot lawfully be returned. It was said the paper would be served when the train stopped at Syracuse. The Assistant District Attorney said to-day that it was, in his opinion, untrue, and that Fish was making no effort to escape the execution of his sentence. Mr. Purdy, in further discussion of the Fish and Ward business expressed regret that the law limits the period of Ward's possible imprisonment to that of any "poor devil who steals $25." He said that United States District Attorney Dorsheimer can easily make application to have sentence suspended on Ward for his present conviction and have him remanded day by day to the custody of the Sheriff until he could make a case against him on his (Dorsheimer's) own indictment. day to the custody of the Sheriff until he could make a case against him on his (Dorshelmer's) own indictment. Then upon conviction Ward could be sentenced consecutively in both courts and receive in aggregate a punishment far more compatible with the enormity of his offense than a period the limit of which can be reduced by good behavior to about seven years.

AN AFFECTING SCENE. Jas. D. Fish was taken to Auburn on the train which left the Grand Central Depot at 10:30 p.m. He passed a sleepless night in his room at the Murray Hill Hotel. The scene at the depot when he bade his young daughter adieu was affecting. Father and child were in tears. "Good bye, child," said the old man. "Be brave for my sake." The young lady was too deeply affected to The crowd in the waiting room. which had a few moments before looked disdainfully at the aged prisoner, seemed to relent.

"It is hard for such an old man to go to jail," said one, and there were various nods f approval.

The Assistant District Attorney hurried Fish aboard the cars. Before the train left Fish said to a reporter: "I am satisfied to go back to Auburn, for I know that villain Ward is also in the grasp of the law. I blame him alone for all that has been credited to me. I never took a penny of anyone's money, and whoever says so tells a falsehood. I made several bad mistakes, and that was all.

MORE CONVICTIONS FOR WARD.

Mr. Purdy was quite free in his comments upon Ward. He hoped his chief, the District Attorney, would move suspension of Ward's sentence and secure his conviction on several more indictments, that his term of imprisonment could be lengthened. Among the many things for which Ward could be punished were his sale to Spicer of a mine which he did not own, and his permitting the Marine Bank accounts to be sued for unlawful purposes while he was a director of the institution. Mr. Purdy declared that Fish was a Mr. Purdy declared had scapegoat. He never robbed any one but himself, but on the contrary, gave up a fortune to protect the bank. Mr. Purdy also une to protect the bank. Mr. Purdy also ntimated that an effort to secure Fish's ardon would be made in about a year after pardon would be made in about a year after his evidence had been obtained in all the suits growing out of the Grant & Ward matter. The statements published this morning to the effect that proof exists of Ward's having invested from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 of his ill-gotten gain in England were not denied by the District Attorney when spoken of to him to-day, though he grew very angry over the fact that this line of inquiry had become public. The official seemed to think the premature discussion of the matter might defeat the ends of justice.

THE STORY OF WARD'S WEALTH. A gentleman familiar with Ward's affairs cast doubts on the accuracy of the English investment stories to-day in con versation with a reporter. "They are based," he declared, "on the fact that just previous to the failure Ward sold sterling at sixty days, short, to the amount of $1 500,000. On this he had to put up securitie for that amount to back up the checks he received from other people for it. But it did not mature, and the transaction thus stood as a loan only. In order to compensate the holders of the checks the collaterals were sold. That is all there is of the story, and of course Ward made nothing out of the transaction." It is the general impression, however, that there is more in the story than is admitted in the foregoing explanation.

SUITS TO RECOVER. The publication to-day of the fact that suits had been brought by the receiver of Grant & Ward against various banking in stitutions and firms, under the usury laws, to recover excessive interest paid for loans from such institutions to Grant & Ward, caused some uneasiness in financial circles. which was allayed, however, by the publi which was allayed, however, by the publication this afternoon of correspondence between one of the principal banks referred to, the Lincoln National, and Receiver Johnston. By this correspondence it is shown that the amount received by that bank was 8 per cent discount on a $10,000 note, equal to $131 10, and the amount claimed to be recoverable by the receiver is twice this sum. Such small affairs are not likely to greate much of a sensation. likely to create much of a sensation. WARNER'S TRIAL.

The trial of Warner for conspiracy with Ward to defraud the Marine Bank was resumed before United States Commissioner Shields to-day. Cashier Spencer, of Grant & Ward, testified to making entries in the books purporting to show the existence of government contracts. He claimed to have done so under the belief that the contracts were genuine and profitable. The case will go on again to-morrow.

In an interview this evening District Attorney, Martine stated that Word world be torney Martine stated that Ward would be sentenced to-morrow morning, and that the other indictments pending against him would probably not be pushed to trial.

A NOTED CHARACTER SUICIDES.

The "Otto Funk" of Chicago Creates a Sensation at Harvard College.

Special to The News. Boston, Oct. 30 .- Six weeks ago a wellappearing man 27 years old, who gave his name as J. A. Talbot and his residence as Chicago, applied for admission into the Divinity School of Harvard College. He passed the examination and admitted, but soon afterward the college authorities discovered that the dates of his numerous letters of recommendation had been altered, and they refused to enter his name on the catalogue. This was the man who was arrested last night for the larceny of an overcoat, and who, this morning, was found dead in his cell at the police station, an evident suicide by poison. By his side lay a bit of paper on which was pencilled: "Mr. Peabody, will you please send my trunk to my sister, Bertha A. Fopel, No. 47 West Blackstone street, Chicago, Illinois. Tell her what has happened." Investigation at the suicide's boarding house and elsewhere proved him to be no other than the noted Otto Funk, alias J. A. Talbott, alias Otto Bohæmi, who last spring dug a trench in the college yard of the University of Illinois and filled it with dynamite. For this and stealing many books and papers from private and public libraries in Chicago he was tried before the Criminal Court there and adjudged insane and sentenced to the asylum of the State, He soon escaped.
All efforts to discover him were vain. A memorandum found at Talbott's boarding house, showed him to have been the thief who took the many books that have recently been missed from the Harvard Library. Guided by these notes, the officers discovered in the woods, behind the Agassiz Museum, two sacks containing 150 volumes; at an express office a trunk with seventy-five books, two sets of surgical instruments and other articles. All these thefts, it now appears, was Talbott's work. An autopsy will be held to-morrow.

CALAMITY AT NAVASOTA.

Special to The News.

NAVASOTA, Oct. 30.—Last night, between 8 and 9 o'clock, the dwelling of John H. Mickelborough was destroyed by fire. M. E. Hearne and family occupied the building, but all had gone to the show, and the servant, Ella Young, left her 3-year-old girl asleep in the servant's house, where the fire originated from the burning lamp, and the child was cremated. The furniture was partly saved, but greatly damaged. There is $1350 insurance on the house and furniture. The Presbyterian parsonage was near by, and was saved with much difficulty. Had the city waterworks been in operation, the fire could have been easily arrested. This occurrence is a pointer for the guidance of the voters here on the waterworks question, which is to be voted on next Monday. It is estimated that the loss by this one fire would pay one-twelfth of the cost of the waterworks. The advocates of the measure are sanguine of success. the child was cremated. FIRE AT AUSTIN.

Special to The News. AUSTIN, Oct. 30.—This morning, about 2 o'clock, the barn and corn cribs of the Lunatic Asylum burned and two frame buildings and a small storehouse were destroyed, together with 1000 bushels of corn, 2000 bushels shelled oats, 1000 bundles of fodder and a large quantity of hay, plows and harness. The carriages, a buggy and the live stock, except one cow and calf, were saved. Loss about $5000; no insurance The fire is supposed to have caught from a cigarette. An old Mexican who was employed there, had occupied a room in the building. He is missing this morning, and it is believed that he left because he thought he would be charged with firing the place. Superintendent Denton had forbidden smoking on the premises. The provender destroyed was mostly raised on the asylum farm, and was sufficient to have supplied the institution until the next crop was made. tion until the next crop was made.

Accidentally Killed.

Special to The News. CLARKSVILLE, Oct. 30.-Mr. David A. Hill was accidentally killed a mile east of town late yesterday evening. He was riding upon several bales of cotton, with which his wagon was loaded and, upon his team becoming frightened and running away, he was thrown off, falling on his face. He re-covered sufficiently to crawl out of the way under a tree near the road, but soon died. Mr. Hill was a well respected citizen of Bowie County, coming to Clarksville to sell his cetter.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 .- It is learned late to night that President Cleveland will not visit this city to-morrow, as was reported early in the evening. It is stated at the State Democratic Committee headquarters that, leaving Washington to-morrow night, he will go direct to Buffalo, where he will remain until Tuesday. After voting he will return at once to Washington.

THE DEEP WATER MEETING

Important Congressional Conference Held at Galveston.

Advice of Members of the Texas Delegation in the Premises-Popular Public Opinion on Appropriations.

GALVESTON, Oct. 30 .- Senator Maxey and Congressmen Miller and Stewart, who were here yesterday for the purpose of discussing a proposed plan for deep water with a number of Galveston's representative citizens, left to-day for their homes. Congressman Crain is still here, but is expected to leave to-morrow. The Congressmen generally, while agreeing to support any plan that Galveston may suggest for the securing of deep water, all advise a return to the government system and a reliance upon the river and harbor item as the best course for Galveston to pursue. They regard that any independent measure looking to a distinctive and larger appropriation for Galveston outside of the river and harbor bill would meet the same fate that the Eads measure did at the last session of Congress. The representative local sentiment, however, is opposed to this, and they cite the present condition of the harbor work as their strongest argument, which is a gain of but three inches of water in thirteen years. Two plans are suggested as affording relief. One is a belief, founded upon information received, that a strong engineering combination will put in a bid to do the work before the next Congress. In such event they will meet with the co-operation and support of Galveston and the Texas delegation. Another is that the Government Engineer may be induced to recommend an appropriation to this harbor sufficient to accom plish results. This would also meet with the support of Galveston and the Texas delegation. As it is, nothing will be done until Congress meets, when either of these two contingencies will be strongly supported as they may present themselves. The prevaling opinion among the representative element is that Galveston wants no more small appropriations in the river and harbor bill. They would prefer being left out altogether, and their share distributed among other Texas ports and used in experimenting.

GALVESTON, Oct. 30.—The Board of Health met this evening. Dr. Sampson advocated very strongly the importance of getting up and maintaining a proper system of sanitary statistics for Galveston. He had compiled the mortuary statistics for the year 1880 and the result was very advantageous to Galveston. It showed her death rate to be 13.17 per 1000 population-a lower death rate than any other seaport city in the United States This fact was important to Galveston, but the advantage was being lost and the proper statistics were not being sent out from this city to find their way into the sanitary and statistical journals of the country upon subject of sanitation. Galveston had no recognition before the National Board of Health and was not rated on the national

The number of permits issued to the hospital again brought up the question of the city being imposed upon by non-resident and imported paupers, not entitled to be provided for at the expense of the city. The railroads came in for a share of censure for bringing these paupers to Galveston from along their lines to be pensioners upon the city. It was suggested that the matter be investigated, looking to the passage of an ordinance fixing a heavy penalty upon any railroad that may bring indigent sick into the corporate limits.

On motion of Alderman Large, Secretary Sampson was authorized to prepare a petition to the City Council, asking the passage of a resolution to remedy, if possible, the prevailing evil.

Secretary Sampson submitted a letter from Senator Chas. B. Pendleton, of Key West, asking if it was an order of the Galveston Board of Health that prevented New York and Galvaston steamers from touch. ig at Key West; that it was a great hard-

JUDGE VINCENT HAS AN INTERVIEW.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Ex-Chief Justice Vincent, of New Mexico, called on the President this morning, and had quite a protracted interview. MR. LAMAR'S DECISION.

In a recent decision Secretary Lamar holds that the selection by a railroad com pany of lands within its indemnity limits and the certification of the same to the State for the benefit of the railroad company di vests the United States of all jurisdiction over such lands. This decision reverses the practice hitherto prevalent in the General Land Office.

OF INTEREST TO PATENTEES.

Patent Commissioner Montgomery has rendered a decision of importance to persons seeking patents. An application for "an improvement in playing cards" was filed in the Patent Office, and the examiner was at first inclined to reject it as not proper subject matter for a patent; but at the request of the ap-plicant agreed to refer the matter to the Commissioner. The Commissioner directed the examiner to examine the improvement, and if he thought that the application did not contain proper subject matter for a and if he indight that the approximation and not contain proper subject matter for a patent to reject it, thus affording the applicant the right of appeal to higher authority, and finally to the courts. Commissioner Montgomery remarks that it would be manifestly unfair to reject the application in made the first instance, as it would be deciding the case without a hearing.

THE YELLOWSTONE PARK.

Superintendent Wear, in his annual report on the National Yellowstone Park, says that when he took charge he found the stock worn out and a lack of discipline in the force employed. He immediately set to work to remedy these defects of the management and to protect the game and various objects of interest from vandals and hunters. He says the vandals and hunters. He says the park is full of game which, with proper attention, will become gentle and add to the attractions of the place. The military have built sixteen miles of good road which brings within easy access points of interest hitherto difficult to reach. The superintendent estimates that it will require $150,000 to meet the expenses of keeping the park in order next year.

CHIEF OF ORDNANCE REPORT. The annual report of Gen. Bent, Chief of Ordnance, shows that the expenditures of the Ordnance Bureau were $1,881,674, that 40,657 rifles, carbines and shotguns were manufactured at the National Armory, that the army rifle ranges for target shooting have increased in number and are better equipped, that there is an urgent demand for larger appropriations for arming and equipping the militia, that the government is bound to either provide properly for the militia of the different States and bring them to uniform and more perfect organization, or to throw that obligation entirely on the States, and that there is an absolute necessity for the proper organization of the militia of the District of Columbia. The interest at stake in the national capital, he says, requires that the armed force there should be properly controlled and ready for effective service at a moment, s notice. The necessity for prompt provision for the coast defences is again urged.

GEN. DRUM'S REPORT.

Adjutant General Drum, in his annual report to Lieut. Gen. Sheridan, after reviewing the organization and distribution of the army, says, on the subject of desertion, that the number of cases has largely decreased. The present educational methods in the army have been to a great extent unsuccessful. There were 8300 enlistments and reenlistments in the army during the year. The army lost 8843 persons during the year by discharges, deaths, retirements and desertions. No difficulty has been encountered in obtaining suitable men for recruits wherever needed.

ALASKA SCHOOLS.

The Commissioner of Education informs Secretary Lamar that two schools have been established in Alaska, one at Sitka and one at Juneau. He recommends, and Secretary Lamar approves of, the erection of schools at Fort Wrangle, Jackson, Boyd, Fort Yukon, Kuskokwin, and additional schools at Sitka and Juneau.

THE BUREAU OF LABOR

"The appropriations for expenses of the Bureau of Labor were ample," says Superintendent Wright in his first annual report. He then explains that the policy has been to keep the bureau disconnected from politics and to confine it to the investigation of questions of industrial depression, involving a study of their causes and character, and whether as to duration, severity and periodicity they are alike in all great producing countries. The investigations thus outlined, Mr. Wright says, will not be concluded until next year.

THE PENSION BUILDING. Gen. Meigs, supervising architect of the new pension building, in his annual report, says that although $69,240 of the original appropriation remains, an additional amount will be needed to complete the structure.

Ex-Judge Vincent, of New Mexico, saw the President and Attorney General Garthe President and Attorney General Garland to-day. He has prepared and presented a defense and justification of his course, which his friends say is a complete vindidation and Judge Vincent to-night declined to talk about the results of his interviews with the President and the Attorney General. The farm is in a from the United States. The farm is in a thrifty and flourishing condition. It was plauted with seeds presented to the embassy by the American Commissioner of Agriculture. Last year the entire crop was allowed to go to seed after a very successful season. Large quantities of all the varieties of seeds were thus obtained, which were later distributed to more than three hundred localities, accommanied tained, which were later distributed to more than three hundred localities, accompanied by directions for planting and use. The farming of these seeds this year has been very successful. The American farm has been successfully stocked with blooded animals from California, and Mr. Foulke believes, "needs but the advice of a competent Western farmer to become infinitely benecial to this country."

POLITICAL.

COON'S SUCCESSOR. WASHINGTON, Oct. 30 .- Hon. William E.

Smith, of New York, has been appointed Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in the place of Charles E. Coon, resigned, to take effect Nov. 10. Mr. Smith is a lawver, about 40 years of age, and resides at Plattsburg, Clinton County, with an office in New York city, where he is one of the attorneys for the Delaware and Hudson Canal Co. He has been a leader of what is known as the Young Democracy in the State of New York, and has been identified with the Tilden element of the party. EVARTS MAKES A SPEECH.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 .- Senator William M. Evarts addressed a large Republican mass meeting at the Brooklyn Academy of Music this evening. He said that the party that had been in power for la year had not advanced a single interest of the country, and in fact no benefit could have been expected from the change in the administration brought about by Jas. G Blaine being stabbed in the house of his friends. FRANKLIN, Oct. 30,-This town has been involved in a troublesome school muddle for a long time. Two appeals have been taken from the ruling of the County Judge in reference to the appointment of trustees, County Judge having been sustained by State Superintendent Baker both times. The county has been divided as to the employment of C. F. Coheran as teacher. He made application to the County Judge to teach a public school more than a month ago, whereupon P. T. Calvert, T. H. Prendegast and J. M. Moore, all prominent citizens, filed charges against him, that Coheran was not a person of correct or exemplary habits, and therefore not entitled under the law to receive a certificate. Many affidavits have been filed both pro and con, the County Judge allowing all the time desired. Yesterday morning, as the locomotive on the Santa Fe was strolling leisurely along toward Dallas, pulling several freight cars and one passenger coach containing the Professor party, and wondering in its mind where it would mash a sleeping tramp next, its attention was directed to a belligerent bull coming down the track in its front, evidently bent on butting it clear off the right of way and flinging its mangled remains into an adjacent tree. The bell was rung, the whistle blew, the bull bellowed. There was a shock, a jar, a collision; the air was filled with large extracts of beef tea, hide, horns, hoofs, dust, smoke and cinders. Then all was still, with the exception of the engineer, who crawled out of the bank into which he had been stuck and yelled to a section hand near by: "Here. come a runnin' with your pick and dig this cinder out of my eye,"

ENTHUSIASTIC RAILROAD MEETING. VALLEY FALLS, Ks., Oct. 30 .- A large and enthusiastic meeting was held here to night, and the prospects of the Wyandotte, Nebraska and Northwestern Railroad were freely discussed. Capt. Drought, of Wyandotte, the moving spirit in the great enterprise, was present, and made some ringing remarks, which enthused everybody. Twenty-five thousand dollars was pledged by the city of Valley Falls in behalf of the road, and numerous committees were appointed to take care of the town's interests. The surveying corps now on the line will be through here in a few weeks, and the road will probably be under construction before this time next year.

THE INJUNCTION DISSOLVED. GALENA, Ill., Oct. 30 .- Judge J. V. Eustace of this district, having to-day issued an order dissolving the injunction restraining the Chicago, Burlington & Northern Railroad Company from building on the line of the road from the mouth of the Galena River to Hanover Junction, in this county, a large number of employes of that corporation who have had a lay-off pending the proceedings were set to work at once on the ground in dispute, and dirt is now flying in every direction preparatory to the

A prominent official of the Chicago and Northwestern Co., which secured the injunction, informed your correspondent this evening that his corporation would carry the fight through to the bitter end, as the manner in which the Chicago, Burlington and Northern are building over that portion of the route in dispute will make it impossible for his road to get out of Galena on the proposed route from Galena to Freeport. The suit between the two warring companies will come up at the coming session of the Circuit Court in this city.

Hon. A. Leonard, attorney for Capt. Simon Levy, receiver of the former road, will reach here tomorrow to meet Mr. Sheldon. It is rumored that a movement is on foot to pay the indebtedness of the roads and take them out of the hands of the receivers, but this can be traced to no reliable source, and the general impression prevails that Mr. Sheldon's visit is simply to look after the interests of Mr. McDonald, who is the possessor of several thousand dollars of receiver's certificates and bonds of the roads. PASSENGER AGENTS AND TICKET BROKERS AT WAR.

Buffalo, Oct. 29.—The passenger agents of the westbound roads held an important meeting to-day. So did the local ticket brokers. An agreement was entered into by the latter not to sell tickets to Western points for less than the agents of the companies. If the roads take decisive action it is probable some of the smaller brokers will withdraw from the fight. Several of the brokers have large lines of tickets, which they can lines of tickets, which they can close out at a low rate and still make money. One office has about $6000 worth of cheap New York tickets, while another broker holds New York tickets, which, at the summer rate, cost him about $3000, and on which he could more than double his money at the present tariff rates. The West Shore and Erie have set the ball rolling by openly seeling New York tickets over their counters at $5 for single trip and $10 for round trip tickets. The brokers yesterday lowered their rate to $4 50 for single and $9 for round trip tickets.

An Trate Father-in-Law and an Agile Sonin-Law-Real Estate Transfers-General Local Notes.

Special to The News. FORT WORTH, Oct. 30.—Con. Hines, a former driver in the fire department, was today arrested on an indictment charging him with arson in having attempted to burn a dwelling house on Twelfth street, between Main and Houston, last week, the day after he was discharged from the service. Chief Matkin, of the fire department, has been working on this case ever since the attempt was made, there being no doubt whatever as to the incendiary origin of the fire. During the early part of last week there were several small fires in different portions of this city, all of which were supposed to have been incendiary, but as yet nothing is known that will implicate Hines in them. Hines is in jail in default of $600

AFTER HIS SON-IN-LAW.

To-day at noon an old gentleman, who lives near Handley, met on Main street a young man who had eloped with his daughter. As this was the first time the two had met since the elopement, the old gentleman, who had evidently not gotten over the wound his paternal feelings had received, went for the young man with a blacksnake whip. The young fellow managed to evade the blows showered by the old man, who, becoming incensed at his unsuccessful efforts to cowhide his son-in-law, drew a knife and tried to carve him up. The blows from the knife were dodged as easily as those from the whip had been, and the old man, becoming exhausted, turned away, warning the young man to keep clear of him hereafter. The son-in-law made no attempt to injure Gibson. No arrests were made. met since the elopement, the old gentleman,

SAFE ROBBERY AT SAN ANTONIO.

Tony Cracksmen Do a Neat Job and Make a Snug Haul.

Special to The News. SAN ANTONIO, Oct. 30.—Late last night, or during the small hours of the morning, a daring safe robbery was committed at George Schroeder's store, on East Commerce street. This morning when Mr. Rudolph Schroeder, brother of the proprietor, opened the store at 6 o'clock, he discovered that the middle front doors of the store were already unlocked, though carefully closed.

SUSPECTED SOMETHING WRONG, went back of the office and there discovered that the safe had been opened and all the cash contents of the largest safe had been taken. Papers and books were scattered about in great confusion. An examination of the premises showed that an entrance had been effected through the front doors by boring two small holes half an inch each by boring two small holes half an inch each in diameter, just over the catch of the door locks. Some instrument had been driven through the holes, and the two hasps had been broken off and the doors flew open. They were double locked, one above the other, with common door locks, though heavy. Special to The News. RUNNELS, Oct. 30 .- Another stage robbery occurred last night, fifteen miles west of Runnels. About 8 o'clock in the evening, as the west bound stage neared the old stage stand, midway between Runnels and San Angelo, the driver was halted by two masked men and commanded to throw out masked men and commanded to throw out the mail bags. Upon doing so, the robbers cut the bags open, emptied their contents into a large pouch, securely tied the same to their saddles, then leisurely mounted their horses and as leisurely rode off, going in a westerly direction. This is the fourth time the stage has been robbed in four months between this point and San Angelo. OF A SIMILAR SORT.

ABILENE, Oct. 30.—The robber is still abroad in the land. A B. Samuels, a wholesaled liquor dealer of Abilene, and Isaac Kauffmann, a drummer for Frees & Son, Dallas, went to Anson yesterday morning, returning last night. They were held up at Elm Creek at 10 o'clock by two men. One sat on his horse and held a gun on them while the other leisurely appropriated their money. Samuels lost $40 and Kauffmann lost $27. Thus ended the fifth lesson in prairie piracy in this latitude within four months. No clue to the robbers. Elm Creek is ten miles from Abilene, but the victims covered the distance in one hour.

London, Oct. 30.—The gang of burglars who sacked Netherly Hall, near Carlisle, the residence of Sir Frederick Ulrich Graham, on Wednesday night, shot and killed another officer, Constable Byrne, last night. Officer Byrne, with several constables and a number of villagers who had got on the track of the thieves, were pressing them closely, when the gang turned and fired on their pursuers, killing Byrne. Other officers and villagers continued the pursuit, and the culprits took refuge on a moving luggage train. The pursuers here gave up the chase, but telegraphed to the nearest station notifying the authorities that the burgiars were on the train and asking them to arrest the fugitives. At this place the police succeeded in arresting two of the gang. The others escaped, having left the train before it reached the station.

It is also proposed to increase the allowance of forage and rations. It is estimated that this will necessitate the expenditure of about $30,000,000. THE QUEEN CANNOT INTERFERE.

The Queen has replied to the Peace Societies' memorial on behalf of Riel expressing her inability to interfere without first consulting with her responsible advisers. Col. Stanley, Secretary of the State for the Colonies, informed the Queen that he had delegated full pardoning powers to the Governor General of Canada, who was inquiring into Riel's case. The matter being entirely in the hands of the Governor General it was therefore impossible for the home govern-ment to interfere.

SERVIAN-BULGARIAN AFFAIR. Reports of conciliatory proposals by Servia are unfounded. These proposals have been rejected by Servia. The perilous proximity of the armies of the two countries excites alarm and is regarded as a grave menace to peace. Russians are subscribing largely to the Bulgarian cause, the active work of the Austrian Red Cross society in providing wagons and stores for Servia being keenly emulated by the ladies of St. Petersburg.

While defendant was in custody and without warning he confessed that he had sold a certain horse to M. a few days after the homicide. The State proved that this certain horse sold by defendant to M. was claimed by a brother of the deceased as the latter's horse. Held: Not error. "Of the guilt of defendant there is not the slightest doubt. * * The jury, strange to us, found appellant guilty of nurder of the second degree. Upon this he should congratulate himself and feel profoundly grateful for such leniency as the jury in their mercy have awarded him." Affirmed.

Max Munzes Heimer et al. vs. W. J. Allen et al., from Bowie County. White P. J.— Whether a certificate of protest for non-payment, made by a notary who protests a note, is sufficient as a protest and notice, is a question of law for the court to decide. The question of law for the court to decide. The notary indorsed across the face of the note these words: "Protested for non-payment, Oct. 11, 1884. O. P. Taylor, notary public, Bowie County, Texas." Held: Sufficient to fix the liability of the indorsers. Reversed and remanded.

John Arto vs. the State from Calvester.

Bowie County, Téxas." Held: Sufficient to fix the liability of the indorsers. Reversed and remanded.

John Arto vs. the State, from Galveston County. Willson J.—Where the evidence demands a charge upon the law of self-defense, an omission to instruct the jury that defendant, if unlawfully attacked by the deceased, was not bound to retreat in order to avoid the necessity of killing his assailant is material error, calculated to prejudice defendant's rights, and is reversible error, although not excepted to at the time. The charge given by the court on self-defense required the jury to believe from the evidence that defendant fired the fatal shot under the influence of terror in order to render the killing justifiable. Held: Error. A party assailed, although not terrified by such assault, might still be justified in protecting himself by killing his assailant. If a defendant intending to kill deceased enters the latter's house and provokes the occasion resulting in the homicide, the killing is not self-defence. If defendant is a mere tresspasser upon the premises of deceased, and provoke the occasion resulting in the homicide, without any intent to kill the deceased or do him serious bodily injury, and without any intent to commit any fefony, he is not deprived wholly of his right of self-defence, but such right could operate no further than to reduce the homicide to manslaughter. Reversed and remanded.

Exparte Benton Kramer, from Young County. Willson J.—Where the record shows that defendant was remanded by the order of the County Judge to the custody of the deputy sheriff, it will be presumed that he is held in custody by such officer in obedience to the order. The rules governing the forwarding of transcripts to this court in other criminal cases do not govern appeals in habeas corpus cases. his policy begins to assume the shape that has been promised by every administration

during the past ten years. The iron furnace at Rusk is believed to have the capacity for furnishing pig iron in excess of the requirements of the foundries in the State. No objection on account of the competition with free labor holds good,

since no other furnace is now producing iron in the State. Home foundries, it is stated, were underbid by outsiders, but Superintendent Goree agreed to the lowest terms, and other things being equal, the capitol contractor gave the State the preference. There was no real competition then with either home furnaces or home foundries on the part of the State, and certainly no one will object to the competition with outsiders. There is, however, no sentiment in Texas worth serious attention that would compel the State, because of competition of convict with free labor in the iron industry,

to abandon its plant at Rusk, thereby requiring the convicts to be supported in idleness or worked in gangs upon the railroads. By this contract and the granite contract the capitol contractors have removed the principal causes of contention likely to arise during the construction of the 3,000,000 acre Statehouse. The building is to be almost exclusively of stone and iron-Texas iron or Texas stone, The capitol commissioners and superintendent

will have no trouble in accepting Burnet granite or Rusk iron. If there is any contention it will be confined to a very limited scope. The capitol commissioners will not disparage Texas iron. It was reported some days ago that the Penitentiary Board was having an office built on the capitol grounds. The Capitol and Penitentiary

Boards will doubtless be close and agreeable neighbors. There is an appearance, in the present shape of the capitol contract, of a wholesale substitution of responsibility

by which the constractor has interchanged places with the Penitentiary Board. If the stone is not properly dressed and prepared the convict management at the quarries is to blame, and if the iron is defective Superintendent Goree and the Rusk managers are responsible. The contractor would in either case refer the capitol commissioners to the Penitentiary Board. So it is very convenient to have headquarters together on the capitol grounds. In case other sub-contracts that the penitentiaries might execute are to be let by the capitol contractor, the board will be handy for information and negotiations. The removal of the penitentiary headquarters to the capitol square

may account for this new iron contract, which perhaps opens up the iron industry

of Texas to an early and high stage of de-

CHANGE IN SPECIAL TRAIN SER-

VICE. THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS, at its own expense alone, on Monday morning last began running a special section of the regular daily express and passenger train of the Texas and Pacific Railway from Dallas to Fort Worth, in order to insure connections for its issues with all trains leaving the latter city on schedule time. This service was made free to all publications in Dallas choosing to partake of it. In consequence of the misconception on the part of the public regarding this special train service and the misrepresentations made concerning it, THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS has concluded to withdraw the special section of the regular passenger train of the Texas and Pacific Railway and to substitute therefor a special engine and car of the same company for ser vice between Dallas and Fort Worth, to be used in the delivery of the paper to all connecting mail service from the latter city. This special engine and car will commence running this morning, Oct. 31, leaving Dallas at 4:30 o'clock and reaching Fort Worth at 6 o'clock each morning. THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS, inviting any legitimate competition, will run this special service in connection with any other publication or publications in Dallas, the only difference being that, whereas the present service of THE NEWS was free to all, the other publications now choosing to use the 4:30 a. m. special train service will have to bear their pro rata of the expense. There has been no attempt to push any competition out of the way, for THE DALLAS MORNING NEWS for the past week has carried competition along with it and at its sole and only expense; but misconception and misrepresentation have induced THE NEWS to adopt the service now determined upon. This morning at 4:30 o'clock, and THE DAL- steadily working toward this result, and LAS MORNING NEWS will be on the streets of Forth Worth every day hereafter at 6 a. m. The special mail service will be operated hereafter by THE DALLAS MORN-ING NEWS singly or conjointly with others, at the option of those concerned.

BRITISH POLITICAL PARTIES.

GALVESTON, Oct. 28.—Noticing that the Marquis of Lorne was recently mobbed at Brentford, will you be kind enough to state what opinions and measures the Tory, Radical and Liberal parties in England respectively represent? By enlightening on this subject you will oblige It is inferred that the views mentioned in a dispatch as those entertained by the marquis, and his designation as a Liberal while he is a member of the aristocracy, prompted this inquiry. There are numerous terms in every country indicating factions or divisions of political opinion, but there are usually two main parties, and so it is in England. These parties are now the Conservative and the Liberal. The Conservative party is nicknamed the Tory party. This designation is said to have first occurred in English history in 1679, during the struggle in Parliament occasioned by the introduction of the bill to exclude the Duke of York from the line of succession to the throne. It was applied by the advocates of the bill to their opponents The duke favored Irishmen. The word tory signified wild Irishman. Dr. Johnson supposes it to be derived from an Irish word meaning a savage. Apart from the name the Tories were the successors of the cavaliers of the civil wars, believing in the maintenance of the monarch of divine right and the state church, and thus developed into the party for the maintenance of things as they are, earning from Johnson the definition which names the two points of adherence to the ancient constitution of the State and the established Church of England. At the same time that the nickname Tory was applied, the advocates of the famous bill were stigmatized as Whiggs, a contraction of the word whiggamore, which in the Southwest of Scotland denoted a drover. From 1648, when some Covenanters in Scotland were incited by their preachers to march upon Edinburgh, reference to the whiggamores' inroad gave currency to the word whig as designating one that opposed the court. Thus the Whig and Tory parties were formed and named. Hallam, the historian, says: "A Whig deemed all forms of government subordinate to the public good, and therefore liable to change when they should cease to promote that object. Within those bounds which he, as well as his antagonist, meant not to transgress, and rejecting all unnecessary innovation, the Whig had a natural tendency to political improvement, the Tory an aversion to it. * * * This made the privileges of the subject, not the crown's prerogative, his peculiar care." Hallam means that the Whigs cared for the privileges of the subject, the Tories for the rights of the crown. It was in line with these principles that the Whigs wanted to have more power in Parliament, and the Tories resisted such a measure as the exclusion of the Duke of York from the line of the succession. With the accession of William III the Whigs came into power, and, as Whigs and Tories were parties for spoils, power and honors,

it often happened that the Tories in opposition did some service to justice. Whigs and Tories were subservient to monarchical

and aristocratic ideas, and the aristocracy controlled the House of Commons. The much influence that, from being progressive

Whigs, they, after the success of the reform

Liberals. The old disputes about divine right and the succession were practically obsolete, and the Conservatives or Tories occupied nearly the ground formerly taken by the Whigs. The Whig party existed no longer, but men of title who were mild

Liberals are still called Whigs. The Liberal party, with its cardinal ideas of extending representation to all the male subjects, and reducing the House of Lords to a cipherintroducing in fact democratic government

by the commons under the forms of monarchy-is opposed chiefly by the landed aristocracy. Yet many aristocrats adhere to and moderate the tendency of the Liberal party. Those among the Liberals who go more in the direction of change to unqualified popular government are called

Radical. John Bright was called a Radical in his younger days, but what was Radicalism then is the ordinary Liberal creed now.

As Whig doctrines contained the germ of the Liberal party, it looks now as if the Liberal doctrines may evolve a distinct

Radical party, and the new Radical doctrines may lead to a socialistic party. So far, however, the Radicals are but a growing faction, as the Whigs are an extinct party. The Radicals try to carry the Liberal party with them as far as possible, but adhere to it in a fashion. The Liberals in the main are in favor of abolishing the right of primogeniture and entail, and so allowing the landed estates to be broken up. Some are for immediate disestablishment of the Church of England. Their policy tends that way, but it is a question with them how fast they ought to go, while with their Radical wing it is a question of

THE CAPITOL BUILDING AND

The contract to supply the cast-iron of the capitol building from the iron works at the Rusk Penitentiary is not likely to net

the State much profit, but it is an indication that penitentiary management is progressive. The gross cost of the iron to be furnished is estimated at about $80,000, which will be retained in the State, and will greatly encourage Superintendent Goree in his efforts to render the iron industry of the Rusk prison successful. That the State is able to successfully compete with the great iron-molders of the East is certainly gratifying. It is surmised that this and the quarrying contract will give employment to all the convicts not contracted for plantation work and not employed within prison walls; or, in fact, that there will no longer be any pretext for working convicts upon

A POLITICAL platform, if honestly and well made, is a convenient guide to the tenets of a political party, but a platform can not be considered as the source of the views of a party. The affinity in opinion or in principle must have existed to draw members of a party together before they could meet to formulate a platform.

In the summer of 1867 Gen. Grant was before the House committee on impeachment of President Johnson, and when asked what he had heard Mr. Johnson say as to the admission of Congressmen from the seceding States, he replied:

I cannot say positively what I have heard him say on that subject. I have heard him say as much, perhaps, in his published speeches last summer as I ever heard him say at all on the subject. I have heard him say, and I think I have heard him say twice in his speeches, that if the North carried the election by members enough to give them, with the Southern members, a majority, why would they not be members, a majority, why would they not be the Congress of the United States? I have heard him say that several times.

After hearing this the committee made no treason of it. The published speeches were familiar to all at the time. Gen. Grant's testimony, while the matter was fresh on his mind, was probably as good as he could give; and here he simply refers to Johnson's public remarks as the amount of what he had heard Mr. Johnson say. Surely this would bar even Gen. Grant from any further allegation against Mr. Johnson.

According to Harper's Weekly, every good citizen in New York, Republican or Democrat, who believes in administrative reform will desire to sustain the President in his courageous stand for reform against the baser forces of his party. The Weekly adds that "there is no present way in which every such citizen can so effectively serve the good cause as by voting for Mr. Davenport." Query: Is the citizen Grover Cleveland a good citizen who desires to sustain administrative reform? Will he not be sorry that he contributed to sustain the baser forces of his party, or will he vote as he contributed, and thus raise a question of intelligence as to whether citizen Cleveland knows how to sustain President Cleveland?

STATE PRESS.

What Our State Exchanges Say. The Brownwood Bulletin says:

Under the caption of "Possibilities of the Future," the Fort Worth Gazette gets off in its usual sanguinary style when speaking of the Fort and its prospects, all of which we hope may be fully realized.

The Gazette's style has only become 'sanguinary" since THE DALLAS MORNING News has invaded its territory. Its utterances were not over sanguine before, but it now sees blood in the moon.

The Grandbury Graphic says: Col. James and a party of prospectors are now locating a town site fifteen miles north of Wichita Falls, in Culp's pasture. The town is to be a trading point for the Illinois colonists soon to locate in that county. * Grading on the Santa Fe Road is about completed to Coleman. * * Add-Ran College now has 375 students enrolled, and will perhaps reach 500 by the close of the session.

The papers continue to report forgeries of orders on stores for goods or money committed by negroes who have learned to write. The Milam County Democrat reports the business active in that region: The grand jury found twelve indictments for forgery against Abe McCulloch, colored, now in jail. The Vernon Guard mentions some more drunkards in office. It says: A certain deputy clerk of Wilbarger County has been fired from office since the 18th of last May for habitual drunkenness, and that he had been repeatedly fired from the same office previous to that time and for a similar offense, and that just prior to the 18th of last May the County Judge of Wilbarger was tried for official drunkenness, and while plenty of creditable witnesses could have been found to testify to the fact, the county attorney failed to prosecute the the county attorney failed to prosecute the case to a conviction.

The Times states that the citizens of Weatherford and Parker County have resolved to organize an association for the purpose of developing the stock and other

The Times says:

The cash system can be established throughout Northwest Texas if the members of the Farmers' Alliance resolve to adopt that system of finance in all their operations. Many of the members are favorable to this business proposition, and are determined to make it effective. They desire to carry out the principles of their organization, and hold the golden rule as an exemplar of the every day business details of their lives. They tell us they can't afford to sell their produce, and will not sell it except for cash. They allege that by close buying they can obtain all necessary supplies and liquidate indebtedness overdue. The close buying, they tell us, is through the combination—in selling collectively and purchasing collectively and paying cash for all they buy. When so important a body as the Alliance sets so praiseworthy an example, the system thus inaugurated will ramify every department of trade, and result favorably to all business operations. And still we survive and are doing our level best to deal fairly with all mankind. As editor of the Telegraph he became well known to the people of Texas. But even while the columns of the Telegraph were sparkling with the scintillations of his wit and wisdom, even long before that, the mark of physical misfortune had been set upon him. The most acute rheumatic gout for more than a decade had made his life one of almost constant pain. For the past eight months he had been almost constantly at the mercy of his physical tormentor, being almost entirely incapacitated for work. He fully appreciated the fact that dissolution was rapidly approaching, and often told the writer of this that but for leaving the beloved partner of all his joys and sorrows for so many years, no schoolboy would welcome a holiday more joyously than he would welcome the summons across the dark river.

FERD WARD'S MONEY.

Report That He Has Large Possessions in Europe of Money and Property.

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 .- According to a morning paper, a statement was made by an assistant district attorney last night that evidence points to the fact that Ferdinand Ward is still a rich man, and that he is at present a large holder of real estate in England, and that for months previous to the failure of Grant & Ward he had been shipping immense sums of money to England through well known banking houses the presumption being that he contemplated flight to that country, where he could enjoy his possessions in peace, but that he was prevented from escaping by the sudden and unexpected collapse of the Marine Bank and of his own firm. A DIFFICULTY AT DENISON. "Bill Gallagher" Probably Mortally Stabbed by Bill West. Special to The News

DENISON, Oct. 30 .- A difficulty occurred this morning about 4 o'clock between Bill West, a carpenter, and Bill Gallagher, a hack driver. It seems Gallagher drove West to a house on Crawford street, kept by a woman named Spence. After West was inside a quarrel began between him and Gallagher, the latter being outside. West then went out to fight Gallagher, when, it is claimed, Gallagher struck West a blow on the head with a rock, and West plunged his knife into the right side of Gallagher's face, cutting through into his mouth, and making a wound about an inch and a half long.

West's wound is not serious, but Gallagher's may prove fatal. When Dr. Atcheson, the attending physician, left Gallagher about noon he was doing as well as could be expected. West has been arrested, and is to have a preliminary trial this after. is to have a preliminary trial this after-

ESCAPED CONVICT CAPTURED. Dick Baldwin, at Large Since '76, is Taken In at Forney by Constable Yates. Special to The News

TERRELL, Oct. 30 .- Dick Baldwin, colored. alias Bill Wade, was yesterday arrested at Forney by Constable Dick Yates on a charge of stealing a pair of pants. The Constable suspected from the excited manner of his prisoner that there was something back of the offence for which he was arrested. He set to quizzing and pumping, and met with gratifying success. At the end of an hour Baldwin cess. At the end of an hour Baldwin had confessed that he was an escaped convict; that he had served three years of a five years' sentence, and exhibited with pride a scar on his arm made by a shot sent after him by the guard when he escaped in 1876. On the strength of this confession the minor charge against the prisoner was dismissed and he was held as an escaped convict. CAPACITY 1,400 BARRELS OF FLOUR INTO CRACKERS DAILY.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO GROCERS.

There seems to be an idea in the minds of many that a Cracker is a Cracker, and the maker makes no difference. This is a great mistake, for the maker is everything, in Crackers, the same as in other articles. Three elements must be considered in the manufacture of Crackers, namely: Choicest materials, skill in manufacture and careful packing.

Our past record, we think, justifies us in claiming all these essentials to the best goods.

To barely please your trade is poor policy. To delight every one—rich and poor, young and old-should be your aim.

In all articles of food insist upon having the best, and never submit to the substitution of others for the brands you order.

Shrewd merchants as a rule handle the best known and most reliable brands of all kinds of goods, as fine leading brands cut their way into opposition. Time is too valuable to waste in talking up unknown and untried brands. It pays to sell goods that sell themselves, unless wide differences in price exist. Remember this! Sell brands that make you a reputation for handling the nicest goods—they push you forward, not pull you back. Well known standard brands sell themselves, and stamp the dealer as a progressive merchant.

A trade built upon the "First" brands is permanent, while that on "Seconds" belongs to anybody. First class goods are always in demand. Unknown brands have to be talked up, and "time is money.

DON'T HIDE YOUR LIGHT UNDER A BUSHEL, as to sell goods rapidly, especially anything to eat, you must display them. Do not let your competitor sell more fancy goods than you because he displays and talks them up! Try to excel him by having a reputation for the best brands. Crackers, Jumbles, Snaps, etc., are tempting, and will sell fast and yield a handsome profit if displayed. In this way your stock will always be fresh and nice. Do not keep Crackers under the counter out of sight, or your sales will drag and the goods get stale and rancid, and PEOPLE DON'T BUY STALE CRACKERS TWICE FROM THE SAME MAN. Sell the best grades; they please the most desirable customers and secure a permanent trade and we guarantee you will soon note a marked increase in reversales.

permanent trade, and we guarantee you will soon note a marked increase in your sales.

Always ask for the "PARROT BRAND" of Crackers, and take no other, and in time you will have built up a trade of which you will be proud.

Respectfully Yours,

DOZIER-WE CRACKER ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

A REVIEW

Of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's Eloquent Tribute to the Memory of Gen. Grant.

To The News. LONGVIEW, Oct. 27 .- The object of the writer is not so much to criticise this highly eulogistic portraiture of the eminent man sketched by this masterly word-painter, for it is just in many respects, though overdrawn and extravagantly eulogistic in others. But in photographing his hero the eminent artist limns the South upon the canvass as having coquettishly and imperiously demanded submission to her will, which could not be granted by men who hated slavery but felt bound by the "compacts of the constitution."

"That she sprung the mine of dynamite" that upheaved the rock of slavery that lay in the "channel of civilization." While this is eloquently expressed, it is not true. The South abided by the compacts of the constitution and fought for her rights guaranteed therein, and while she lost the battle as nobly contested as ever displayed by heroes on earth in her soldiers and commanders, the peers of her foes, she saved the constitution. Had it not been for her resistance unto death the onslaught of the mad fanaticism that overrode right with might, the constitution would have perished in the wild surgings of a reckless majority which disregarded and utterly ignored the compacts of the constitution," and her blood poured out so freely in libation upon the altar of constitutional right saved the constitution from utter wreck, and this was not too great a price for constitutional liberty. The experiment of overriding constitutional rights is not likely to be repeated in the history of our government. In the language of Gov. Humphreys, of Mississippi, "It was better to have fought and lost than not to have fought at atl." We should have proved unworthy of our ancestry and our heritage if we had tamely submitted to the onslaught upon constitutional right. The arrogance of Northern pretension, as symbolized by its eloquent exponent, Mr. Beecher, in attributing the war of devastation and ruin to the South, is only equaled by its travesty of truth. That God has overruled it for good cannot be accredited to the philanthropy of the agents in its accomplishment. War! dreadful war! disregarding all human right, is made subservient to human progress, as illustrated in the history of humanity. Mr. Beecher has presented his hero as the embodiment of the scourge of God, His rod to chastize the land for its sins without any reference to latitude or longitude, and to discriminate in favor of one section as against another, is either bald assumption or unpardonable ignorance of the divine economy. The sin of slavery, if it be a sin to change a savage to a man endowed with the elements of a Christian civilization, inheres in the whole country, both North and South, and the violent disruption of this institution has been fraught with evil beyond computation in the comparative estimate with the good as the result. God reigns, and He in His infinite wisdom and goodness may evoke from the grand aggregate beneficent results, beyond human apprehension or contrivance. On the other hand we present our hero the embodyment of constitutional right, the peerless antagonist of Grant, who measures up to the full status of human estimate of true nobility and grandeur of character. The immortal Lee, who, if not in the estimate of Beecher, "the greatest Southern general," was at least the peer of Grant and would, if their respective resources had been reversed, have and this was not too great a price for constitutional liberty. The experiment confused rush of ins leg. quering hosts of Johnston.

HOW TO BECOME WEALTHY.

How Two Clever Advertising Swindlers Operated.

New York World. An excited man rushed into police headquarters at Hoboken Friday afternoon and demanded the address of the Rice Manufacturing Co. The directory and business register were searched in vain, and it was decided that there was no such firm in the city. The man drew out of his pocket the copy of a New York paper and pointed to the following advertisement:

HELP WANTED—You can earn from 10c. to 50c. an hour quietly at home, day time or evening; no picture painting, peddling or humbug; send 10c. for 15 samples and full instructions that will do to start work with at once, without further expense. Address Rice M'f'g Co., Hoboken, N. J.

Chief of Police Donovan at once perceived that the affair was a swindle, and proceed ing to the postoffice found that two men had rented box No. 26 in the name of the Rice Manufacturing Co. He then waited in the postoffice corridor. Before long a very stylishly dressed young man twirling a light cane entered, followed by a less carefully attired man. They went at once to box 26 and took out a package of about thirty five letters. The fashionably attired man smiled pleasantly to his companion, and lighting a cigar strolled toward the door. Chief Donovan placed them both under arrest. Although taken by surprise they were not at all confused, and refused to give their names. About $100 was found on their persons and a large number of letters. After searching the prisoners it was decided that there was no law in New Jersey which would warrant their retention, and they were discharged from the police Jersey which would warrant their retention, and they were discharged from the police station.

The dapper young man lighted a cigar and bade a pleasant adieu to the sergeant at the desk, when a gentleman stepped out of the crowd and asked them to wait a moment. Postoffice Inspector L. A. Newcomb quietly arrested both men under section 5480 of the United States law, which provides punishment for using the United States mails with intent to defraud. The dapper young man at once wilted. He admitted that he and his friend were the Rice Manufacturing Co. They gave their names as William H. Sizer, of No. 176 West Fourth street, and T. W. Rice, of New Haven, Conn. Both men protested that they did not know that they had violated any law.

The attention of Inspector Newcomb was first directed to the swindlers soon after they rented the postoffice box in Hoboken. This was a week ago last Friday, and during the first six days over 1000 letters were received for the Rice Manufacturing company. The sudden bulk of mail surprised the clerks and they amused themselves one day by looking over the correspondence, which was at first entirely sealed letters and later largely postals. One card caught the eye of a clerk and he showed it to the postmaster. It read as follows:

RICE MFG. Co.: You are the humbug of the age. You got the 100 of a good many, but you will be exposed in your ads. for help. I do not want work. I wrote to you to see what humbug you were in. You will be exposed!

see what humbug you were in. You will exposed!

be exposed!

A copy of the postal, with several similar other ones was forwarded to Inspector Newcomb. He sent four decoy letters from different places to the "company" and received a printed circular in each, but no "samples." The circular was about five by ten inches long, printed on this paper, with this heading. this heading; KIND READER.

We send you full particulars of a business whereby you can, by strict application and close attention, earn an honest livelihood and eventually BECOME WEALTHY.

We take it for granted that you write in good faith, and really want to better your condition in life. We trust that you do not belong to that gigantic army of dead beats and curiosity-seekers who answer every advertisement they see, simply to gratify their curiosity. If such is the case, you are welcome to all we send you, as you have paid your money and got your samples. All we ask is this: "Don't destroy the samples or circulars." Read them carefully, then stop and think. Is not this a chance for me as well as others? Why should I not give it a trial? Ponder carefully! Think of it after you retire! If after sufficient reflection you make up your mind not to go further, give as the above. Inspector Newcomb was armed with these papers when he arrested the men, whom he had been watching for several days.

In referring to the swindlers, Mr. Newcomb said to a World reporter:

"I hope this case will be a warning to a great many other similar concerns. They exist all about us and I am doing my best to break them up. Most of the managers are shrewd enough to keep within the letter of the law and it is hard to reach them. The amounts advertised for are so small that no one feels like making a complaint against them and they know this. In the present case we have a man who has been in the business for a long time. I arrested Sizer last April in Brooklyn for a similar fraud and since then he has been in the Bijou Novelty Company of Williamsburg, and now is the proprietor of the Bristol Manufacturing Co., of No. 309 Broadway."

Sizer and Rice were taken before United States Commissioner Muirhead, of Jersey City, yesterday, and each held in $2000 bonds. They were unable to furnish bail and were committed.

The intelligent compositor came across the words, "Cricket on the Hearth." With his usual perception, he saw that "cricket on the hearth" was nonsense. "Of course," he thought, "it is impossible to play cricket on a hearth; evidently it should be 'heath.' 'Cricket on the heath' means something." He made the emendation, and another gray hair was added to the editor's whitening head.—Boston Transcript.

col. Dorsheimer, District Attorney and editor of the New York Star, takes a somewhat peculiar view of independent journalism. "The World," as Col. Dorsheimer thinks, "represents only the opinions of one man, whose opinions are of no consequence, not even to himself." The adoption of this tone would be construed in Cincinnati to mean that Col. Mr. Edmund Clarence Stedman, who declines and falls from poetry into Wall street and from Wall street into poetry, complains that New York poetry is more read "in the provinces" than it is in New York. If Mr. Stedman means her majesty's provinces of the Canadas, this may be accounted for on the theory that he sends presentation copies of his poems to his financial friends who are refugeeing there.—St. Louis Republican.

COMMERCIAL.

DALLAS, Oct. 30.—The volume of business transacted at this point is less than that of last week. This is due partly to the bad weather prevalent at the beginning of the week; it is chiefly due, however, to the habits of retailers, who, with few exceptions, cease buying about the closing week of each month, only ordering in cases of necessity in a hand-to-mouth way goods of all sorts has been greater than last year for the same month, in a ratio in excess even of that increase to be expected in a new, prosperous country.

It has been remarked by dealers in wares of ornamental character, such as builders' decorative goods, lawn statuary, metal fences, pic tures and wall paper, that sales in the articles indicated are vastly in excess of any preceed indicated are vastly in excess of any preceding year.

Holiday goods are being placed by all the dealers handling those wares, Books, toys and all sorts of articles suitable to the Christmas trade have been received, and the stocks present a very attractive appearance.

No changes are noted to-day. Cotton closed dull and unchanged everywhere.

Corn came in more freely to-day in wagons than has been the case for many days, selling at 32 @ 35 cents per bushel in the shuck.

GENERAL TELEGRAPH MARKETS.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET. CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, Oct. 30.—Wheat has been again very dull and prices ruled lower. Very few orders were received, nearly all the trading being local. There was a good demand for November wheat that kept that delivery steady, and barely storage charges were made. The local crowd was inclined to be bullish at the decline, and filled up their shorts to a large extent. Smith, Bloom & Lester sold a good deal of wheat and tried to break the market by offering large blocks, but the demand was enough to absorb all the offerings, and the market closed steady at nearly the top prices. Receipts at Western points were 501,000 bu. There was not much doing for export, but some was taken. Receipts at the Northwest continue moderate.

Corn was fairly active and in good demand for November. October was neglected and dull. May was traded in to a large extent, and is very steady. The market closed firm.

Costly Bar Room Furniture.

New York Mail and Express. A Mail and Express reporter dropped into a big warehouse on Canal street the other day, where bar fixtures are the principal articles of merchandise for sale. Costly mirrors and elegantly carved woodwork ornamented the side walls, while bars made of solid mahogany were ranged along the "Business is good," said the proprietor. "Every liquor dealer who can afford it is getting rid of the old and shabby style of bar fixtures, and adopting the new and showy furniture which we make in a dozen different designs. There has been a radical change in the last five years. Why? Well, people who drink have become fastidious. The barroom with plate-glass mirrors and frescoed ceiling coins money, while the old-fashioned store with the sawdust floor and plain bar fails to attract trade. Years ago a pine board, a cracked glass and a black bottle were good enough. Now drinkers demand and insist on the best of treatment. Everything about a modern saloon is supposed to be scrupulously clean. The glass service must be delicate as air and shining from renewed polish. The barkeeper's linen must be immaculate, and he must be thoroughly posted in his business. The old time business of slamming a greasy glass on the bar and placing a tumbler of muddy water beside it as an accompaniment is a thing of the past. The public won't have it."

"What does the new style of bar cost?"

"From $700 to $10,000. This includes simply the bar and fixtures. Then costly pictures and bric-a-bat may cost $5000 or more. The average cost is $2500. Each dealer tries to eclipse his neighbor, and the one who has the finest place attracts the greatest custom."

"Are the fixtures paid for when put in?" people who drink have become fastidious.

"Are the fixtures paid for when put in?"

"Are the fixtures paid for when put in?"

"Oh, no. We take a mortgage and we are satisfied to get 25 per cent down and 5 per cent a month afterward until the debt is paid. Other cities are about the same as New York. It is a craze, and while it lasts will put money in the pockets of the cabinet makers."

An Old Rabbit. Pall Mall Gazette.

stories hollow. According to M. Laborde, a writer in the Review Scientifique, a rabbit, one of the ordinary tame species, was bought for purpose of experiment at the Physiological Laboratory in Paris, and after a portion of the facial nerve had been removed it was left to run about the laboratory. It very soon recovered from the effect of the operation, and was for four years M. Laborde's affectionate companion. It would await at the top of the stairs his arrival in the morning and would sometimes run to meet him. Whenever it had the opportunity the rabbit would jump upon his knee, and was as fond of caresses as a cat. During the progress of an experiment it would sit on the operating table, watching the proceedings with every appearance of interest. Bunny's chief delight, however, was in a microscopical examination. As soon as M. Laborde put his eye to the microscope the rabbit would perch on his shoulders and endeavor to take a peep. This wonderful animal lived on terms of the most intimate friendship with two dogs belonging to the laboratory; but when a strange dog arrived he invariably turned it out, and sometimes chased it along the street. To City Subscribers.

We beg to announce that the failure of our city circulator to call upon a number of citizens for their subscriptions is not due to oversight, but is the result of his finding it necessary, for the time being, to devote his entire time and attention to the systematizing of the routes, and the supervision of his carriers, to insure the prompt delivery of the paper each morning to the subscribers already obtained This work has prevented him from making a thorough canvass of the city. He expects, however, to resume this canvass this morning and continue daily until every section of the city has been visited. In the meantime be pleased to send names and addresses to the counting room, where they will receive prompt attention. Subscribers failing to receive their papers with regularity and promptitude will please notify us.

A FAIR DEBUTANTE

Miss Cheatham Chats Pleasantly About Her Stage Experience and Prospects.

The company which presented "The Profes sor" at the Opera-house last night had a novel and exciting experience yesterday morning, having been on the train which was wrecked on the Santa Fe road some twelve miles from the city. It was late in the afternoon when they arrived on a special train sent out for them at the instance of the Opera-house management. Immediately on their arrival the members of the company repaired to the Opera-house for such brief rehearsal as the limited time at their disposal would admit. During a brief interval a NEWS representative was presented to Miss Kittie Cheatham, the young debutante of Nashville, who has met with such decided success during her brief professional career. Seated in a proscenium box in her traveling habit with a light veil pending from her bon net to her chin, her features were too much nidden to admit of such satisfactory inspec tion as curiosity might have prompted, but even seen under such disadvantages there was evidence of beauty of the truest Southern type, and the sparkle and warmth of her large, ustrous eyes, penetrating the gauzy screen which partially concealed them, was rather felt than seen as the enthusiastic little lady dilated upon the hair-breath escapes of herself and companions in the awful wreck through which they had so recently passed.
"I am wedded to my profession," said Miss Cheatham, after detailing incidents of the wreck and with a warmth of enthusiasm almost contagious, "and I intend to make it ny life work. My family and friends were very nuch opposed to my going on the stage at all, and I did so at last not only contrary to their wishes but against their solemn and unyielding wishes but against their solemn and unyielding protest."

"And you have not since regretted the step?"

"Not at all, for, as I said, I am devoted to the profession, and my ambition to succeed makes light the work which would otherwise be extremely wearing and perhaps disagreeable."

"You have learned already, then, that the life of the dramatic artist, as seen from the greenroom and behind the scenes, is not altogether the same radiant holiday of play that a favorable view from the auditorium might indicate to girlish fancy?"

"Oh, yes indeed! If any one imagines that the life of an actress is all play, such an one should experience the reality for a little while. It is play for those who merely look on, but for us it is work of the most prosy and practical sort sometimes. I know I shall not be able to do myself justice to night because of the fatigue I have undergone, the sleep I have lost and the trouble I am suffering with my throat, but it cannot be helped. We are almost constantly moving, playing one or two nights at a place and leaving immediately, sometimes before daylight, for the next point, possibly going straight from the theater to the depot, and of course that doesn't afford sufficient time for rest."

"It rather destroys the romance, does it est."

"It rather destroys the romance, does it not?"
"Yes, that makes it rather hard, but when we get to larger places where we remain for one or more weeks then it is pleasant."

"You are not disappointed in your expectaget to larger places where we remain for one or more weeks then it is pleasant."

"You are not disappointed in your expectations?"

"Not at all. I adopted the stage for several reasons. No, it was not a girlish freak. I have had a passion for the stage ever since I was a child, but that was not altogether the cause of my disobedience in opposing my mother's wishes. I am young, not quite eighteen yet, but I wanted to be independent and self-reliant, to do something for myself and not be a drone; and just think what risk I ran? If I had failed utterly! But no matter; I should have continued just the same, sustained by the reflection that others had failed at the start who achieved success in the end. I do not expect to become great, but I can succeed in earning a livelihood, and I'll tell you confidentially, I have already put away several hundred dollars of my earnings. Not much, of course, but very good for so short a time."

"How long have you been on the stage?"

"Just six weeks. I made my debut at Joliet, Ill., in a sort of public rehearsal. Subsequent! y we played at Springfield, St. Louis, Nashville, Savannah, Mobile, New Orleans and other places en route. The press has treated me very kindly everywhere, except in St. Louis, where one of the papers rather cut us up, as it generally does everybody."

Miss 'Cheatham ran on in an easy, natural way, as it falking to a confidential friend, and without reserve, detailing her experience and impressions, and dwelling with especial pleasure upon the hearty receptions accorded her at her Nashville home and in those neighbor ing cities in which her social prominence had gained her many friends and admirers before her entrance upon professional life.

It is not because she is the daughter of a distinguished citizen of Tennessee, the niece of one of the most popular and widely-known of the Confederate commanders and lately a reigning belle in the upper circles of an especially cultivated and aristocratic Southern capital, that interest is felt in Miss Cheatham's succes objection to characters she would be obliged to assume. After her mother had returned to Mashville, leaving her in charge of a chaperone, Miss Cheatham closed a contract with Mr. Barrows to play the soubrette part in the comedy of The Professor, believing that would suit her best. Thus without training, without ever having taken any lessons in elocution, without any experience of the stage, or what is known as stage people she launched out upon the training especially be a suit of the stage of owever, a fine presence, handsome features sweet, resonant voice, pleasing vivacity, and est of all, as she herself says, youth and am schoolgrif friend supplies the place at once of chaperone and companion.

At the expiration of her forty weeks' engagement with Mr. Barrows Miss Cheatham will apply herself to close study and instruction, and possibly forsake the dramatic for the lyric or operatic stage, though as to that, she says, she is yet undetermined.

A Praiseworthy Meeting.

The gallantry displayed in war, and the poetry of "fame's eternal campingground" do very well for immortality, but the

THEATRICAL.

Society was numerously represented at the Opera-house last evening to witness the production of the "Professor," Gillette's wellknown comedy. The piece deals with the vagaries of Arthur Hinsdale, professor of as tronomy in the Boston University, who is gradually led from stellar complications to those of matrimony, when he meets his "opportunity" in the heroine, Daisy Brown. The episode of a stolen child is introduced; other wise there is not the shadow of a plot in the The "Professor" may be described as a bundle of absurd situations often thrown in without regard to the thread of the narrative, and a generous interpolation of college glee songs and popular medleys. There is much to commend in the subtle and catching humor displayed by Mr. J. O. Barrows in the title role. His acting is quiet, his fun penetrating and his eccentricities well man aged. It demonstrates one fact, that a skillful actor can be very funny without encroaching upon the boisterous. Miss Kitty Cheatham actor can be very funny without encroaching upon the boisterous. Miss Kitty Cheatham came in for her share of the generous applause and was the recipient of a handsome floral tribute. The lady, who is comparatively a debutante, is very handsome and presents an attractive stage appearance. She is the possessor of a sweet, sympathetic voice, which shows evidence of good culture, and her singing is done in splendid taste. She is evidently capable of something more serious than ballad singing. Her rendition of "Where are You Going, My Pretty Maid," was quite coquitish and merited instant recognition from the large audience and called for an encore. Miss Cheatham is developing good acting talent, and is destined to achieve success in comedy parts. The balance of the cast of the "Professor," as given last evening, was excellent, and a collection of prettier faces is seldom seen, even in more pretentious organizations. It was, likewise, a reflecting fact to note that the management is paying due attention to stage details. Several new sets were introduced, and the mountain scene in the fourth act was picturesque and truly artistic, the effect being helghtened by the introduction of a genuine waterfall.

"The Professor" will be repeated at the matine this afternoon, and will receive its final representation at the evening performance. The play is a good one, and the acting of the whole cast is meritorious. It can be unhesitatingly recommended to those who would laugh and chase away the horrors of the defined.

PROFESSOR BLACK.

An Accepted Invitation to Repeat an Interesting Sermon.

Interest in the eloquent preaching of Prof. Black, the nephew of the great American statesman, Hon. Jere Black, continues to increase. A notable feature in his sermons is the entire absence of bigotry, and this has done much towards swelling beyond the seating capacity of the church the congregations that assemble nightly to hear the learned scholar and theologian. Of all his efforts his address on the "Divinity of Christ" has produced the most pronounced effect upon his hearers. This s shown by the following correspondence, which explains itself:

which explains itself:

To the above, Prof. Black replied as follows:
DALLAS, Oct. 30.—Gentlemen: In compliance with your request I will take great pleasure in repeating the sermon on "The Divinity of Christ" Lord's day, Nov. 1, at the Opera-house, at 3:30 p. m. Yours, etc., W. F. BLACK.
Prof. Black's subject to-night will be "The Divine Legation of Moses."

Fine weather train wrecks are uncommon in Texas, where the heart of the jury goes out to the lineal descendants of the wayworn immigrant who has had his back broken by a small track. Yesterday, however, the cattle seemed to have been suddenly taken with evil design against the railroads, and several small wrecks were the consequence. The accommodation rying Miss Cheatham's theatrical company, was run into by a bull—the cow coroner will propably ascertain that it was a Hereford or can, with the effect of derailing the engine and several boxcars. The passenger car containing the troupe remained on the track, and nobody suffered bodily harm, although several of the ladies gave way to their shattered nerves in quite an elevated, animated tone. As soon as the news of the accident reached Dallas, Mr. Greenwall took steps for the immediate dispatch of a special train, and succeeded in getting the troupe here on time. Mr. Bert J. Kendrick, agent for Zo Zo, the Magic Queen, was a passenger, but instead of waiting for the relief train he headed for Dallas, where he arrived seemingly used up by the fatigue of stepping on railroad ties.

The incoming train on the Trunk Road ran off the track at Central during the night as the result, it is thought, of a collision with a Jersey bull, the highest prized of the bovine species at and around Central, but sustained no further damage than the demolition of the pilot.

On the same road, at early dawn, a train of fifteen cars, laden with cotton, was ditched about two miles from the Dallas terminus. The fine breed of cattle responsible for the accident is yet involved in doubt and obscurity, like the history of the early Saxons, but it could not have been of the native kind. suffered bodily harm, although several of the Review of the Situation as Ascertained on Yesterday.

over the city, and business is running short handed. There is neither weeping nor wailing norgnashing of teeth, but a woe-begone ex pression greets you on every corner, and lemons are on the rise. The convalescent say they are as children; the sick like the immigrant in rough weather, feel like jumping verboard, but cannot find the consolation of an overboard and the well, or a large percentage of them-gentlemen of course-are insisting on the value of preventives of the "set 'em up" kind. "I never drink from choice," a young gentleman was everheard to remark yester day, "but my physician says forty drops three times a day staves off the dengue, and I cannot afford to catch the complaint." A temperance man, on the other hand, insists that the only preventive consists in keeping the exterior of the body at a lighter temperature than the inside, for which object he wears heavy flannel underclothing and gets the servant girl to iron him whenever a fresh norther breaks out. A him whenever a fresh norther breaks out. A few there are of the hay-fever persuasion, who boast that they have had it, but shook it off—like water off a duck's back—by the sheer dint of resolution. The doctors say that people thinking that way have not had their cases, which were evidently dyspepsia, professionally diagnosed, in testimony whereof they cite the fact that one day's experience in dengue is more prostrating than a week's trial of the malarial troubles that are known to be the amunition of the regular swamp angel. A few of them also point to what they assume to be the fact, i. e., that during the dengue the patient's blood is literally alive with microbes, which obey the apostolic injunction and prey without ceasing. These microbes seem to fill the atmosphere, are drawn into the system by pneumatic power, and after raising large families in the veins, where they wallow like hogs in a canal, either die of fatty degeneration of the heart or cometo the surface in the shape of nettle rash. There is a theory about this, and the imagination can be stretched indefinitely on theory. There is no complaint, however, against doctors, nor will there be so long as the mortality from dengue continues to be less than one in a thousand; but there are those who imagine that the doctors might have advertised their city and given science a boost by starting in the vaccination process or putting a few germs—wiggletails might answer—under a glass case at the Merchants' Exchange. Coming down from theory to fact, those who had tears to shed yesterday found the machinery of justice almost at a standstill and about two hundred exemplary, citizens standing, still under their heavy, overcoats. They had ventured out to see that the sun did not stand still, and the facr of falling down called a halt. The melifluous voice of Judge Schuhl and the stern one of Justice Kendall were no longer heard in the ludgment seats, while the wheels of justice in the County Court were as clogged as if they had struck East Dallas after a wet nor few there are of the hav-fever persuasion who boast that they have had it, but shook it

THE COURTS.

The Mayor's Court only had three cases for disposal yeaterday, which is accounted for on the supposition that the dengue fever has temporary control of several hard cases. Tom Moore, a poetical looking personage, for exposing his person, was taxed $3, and Pat Leach was mulcted in a like amount for getting drunk. A party named King, charged with getting drank whenever the chance offered, was considered by his honor a healthy case for sublimation on the fall crops at the poor farm, and with that idea the officer in charge proceeded with him to find a justice. He first went to Justice Schuhl's Court, but the voice of justice there was hushed by the dengue; so he then proceeded to Justice Kendall's, which he found in a similar condition. The prisoner about this time looked as if he did not have a solitary friend on top of earth. He said he felt terribly mortified at being yanked around from Pilate to Hered without inding either, and promised the officer that should he consent to release him he would hie himself away forthwith for Johnson County, where he could find justice and an asylum. The officer was moved with compassion and let him depart, on condition that he should give leg bail.
