Lloyd Bentsen Report

The ability of the people of the United States to work together and solve problems has always been one of our greatest assets. The economics and the destinies of the various regions of this country are irrevocably intertwined. America today does not need and cannot afford the sort of an- tagonistic regionalism in which one area attempts to solve its prob- lems at the expense of another. When regionalism is vigorously pur- sued, it has the potential to destroy our national unity.

Recently I have felt compelled to speak out against regionalism that has appeared in Congress in a new political form. A Coal- ition of Congressmen from the Nor- theast and Midwest have banded together in an effort to garner more federal funds, at the ex- pense of the South and Southwest.

These Congressmen have one objective: to get more federal funds for their areas.

This is an aggressive, grasping form of regionalism that is dan- gerous. Not only does it destroy the unity which is our greatest asset, but it inhibits our abil- ity to deal with national problems on a national basis. It is found- ed on phony logic and statistics, and it proceeds from the premise change. In resisting and responding to the Northeast offensive, we who represent the Sunbelt must drive home the point that is not the federal purse, but private invest- ment, individual initiative, and a system of incentives that will en- able each of the different regions to meet the challenges facing our country today.

As many of the industries that for over a century provided the foundation of the Northeast's in- dustrial prosperity have become outdated and inefficient, there has been a definite movement of pop- ulation away from the Snowbelt and into the Sunbelt—the South and Southwestern United States.

But the Sunbelt is not to blame for the current problems of the Northeast any more than the Nor- thwest is to blame for the histor- ical low per capita incomes that have existed for so long in the South and Southwest.

The Northeast and other regions face an obvious requirement to update their industrial capacity, to establish new and more effi- cient industries. And the rest of the country should help, and is prepared to help.

We in the Sunbelt recognize that our future, and our prosperity are irrevocably linked to that of the Northeast and the Midwest. But we are not prepared to accept the argument that their problems—the crumbling cities, the outdated industries, the high levels of un- employment—are attributable to the relative prosperity of our re- gion.

A recent article in "Fort- une pointed out that Texas has the best environment for business in the country, with New York hav- ing the worst. But surely New York doesn't seek to place the blame for its problems on Texas or other Sunbelt states.

The point I want to make is that the Northwest is mistaken in attempting to export the blame for its troubles, while at the same time relying increasingly on the federal purse to seek redress.

The recent pattern of robbing the Sunbelt that we have seen written into formulas for distrib- uting federal funds in both the $4 billion Public Works Employ- ment Act and Community Devel- opment Act is going to have to change. In resisting and responding to the Northeast offensive, we who represent the Sunbelt must drive home the point that is not the federal purse, but private invest- ment, individual initiative, and a system of incentives that will en- able each of the different regions to meet the challenges facing our country today.

In the meanwhile, instead of arguing with us about the allocat- ion of funds, the coalition of Con- gressmen from the Northeast and Midwest should take a page from the Texas book and try to improve their climate of invest- ment. We are only as rich as our poorest region.

CUSTOMERS USING RECORD AMOUNTS OF ELECTRICITY THIS SUMMER
West Texas Utilities Co. customers are using record amounts of electricity this summer, but generation engineers say the system is capable of supplying any demands.

Three new record peaks have been set and daily consumption is running above average. But in response to questions prompted by the recent New York blackout, WTU officials said that even though usage likely will continue increasing if the weather stays hot, the projected peak will be within the system's generation and transmission capacity.
Carl Yancy, WTU systems operation manager, said it is "highly unlikely" that a blackout similar to the one in New York could occur here.

"Of course no one can be absolutely certain, but there is no doubt in my mind that our system is reliable," Yancy said.

He explained that WTU's eight major power stations are strategically located near the load centers and that the transmission network is designed to eliminate too much dependence on one plant. Total generating capacity is 1,055,500 kilowatts, Yancy said, and the all-time consumption peak so far was 747,000 kilowatts, which was recorded at 5 p.m. on Monday, July 11. Last year's record peak was 725,000 kilowatts on August 11.

WTU officials have forecast a summer peak of 785,000 kilowatts, which is 270,000 kilowatts below the company's generating capacity. This reserve of about 26 per cent is considered good by national standards.
And the reserve would more than make up for the loss of the company's largest generating facility, which is the new 200,000 kilowatt unit at the Fort Phantom Power Plant near Abilene.

The system also could receive back-up power from neighboring companies, Yancy pointed out.

Heavy consumption occurring this summer in spite of customer efforts at conservation, company officials said. They attribute the increase to the hot weather and to the fact that WTU is serving about 3,000 more residential customers now than at the same time last year.

Though the system is geared up for any emergency, company spokesmen acknowledge there is no sure guarantee against an electrical outage, particularly those caused by acts of nature.
Yancy said the last system-wide blackout occurred in April, 1961, when a phone wire broke and fell into the Paint Creek substation. The outage spread throughout the system, although all service was restored completely within 40 minutes.

Since then, automatic oil circuit breakers have been installed to prevent a recurrence.
