Play Rankin In Semis Friday at Snyder

Patriots Win Number 13

The Drama Department of Clarendon College Fine Arts Center will be making its first appearance with the production, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs." Seated in the foreground is Rieta Garvin, daughter of Louise Garvin, of Turkey, who plays the part of Dopey in the production. Performances will be given December 7 at 2:00 p.m.; December 8 at 12:30 p.m. and December 9 at 7:30 p.m.

Can you imagine Valley High School in a 6-0 football game? That is exactly what happened last Friday night at Lowrey Field in Lubbock when the high-powered Patriots met a big Klondike High School team in state quarterfinal football action.

Lubbock had caught over 20 inches of snow in the past two weeks, and as a result, the playing field was muddy and slick, and the single touchdown was all that was scored during the contest. The result, however, was enough to propel the Patriots into a semifinal game in school-boy football playoffs.

The Valley coaching staff was expecting a hard game, especially since the Cougars were going to outweigh the Patriots around 50 pounds per man from tackle to tackle.

After the opening kickoff, it appeared that the Patriots were in for a long night as the Cougars started marching downfield. The Cougars' Clay Holcomb broke for a 32-yard scamper that put Klondike deep in Valley territory. On a third down play at Valley's 12-yard line, Jimmy Lacy recovered the first of three Cougar fumbles, stopping that scoring drive.

On their next possession, the Cougars were once again in scoring territory when Big Juice Williams stopped the Klondike drive.

The normally high-gearred offense of the Patriots was unable to move the Cougars out of the Valley end of the field during the first quarter. Early in the second quarter, Valley booted the Cougars deep into their own territory, then forced Klondike to punt. From the Klondike 40 yard line, Valley marched to the six yard line where the Patriots were stalled temporarily. Quarterback Fuston sent the team right, then gave the ball to Tommy Morris on the misdirection play, and Tommy did some neat stepping to score the touchdown, driving the ball in between a pair of burly Cougars. An attempted pass by James McNary was missed, but that was all the points that were needed.

The second half was mostly defense. The statistics show that Valley clearly had the edge. Coach Giddens said, "Williams and McNary broke into the clear on several occasions only to slip and fall on the slick field. They probably would have scored several times had it not been for the mud. Our little hogs did a very fine job of rooting them out of the way and stopping their offense."

Klondike picked up only six first downs during the contest, while Valley accounted for 14. Klondike managed only 111 yards of rushing plus six yards passing for a total offense of 117 yards. Valley gained 222 yards rushing and 11 passing for a total offense of 233 yards. That is less than half of their usual total. McNary carried 31 times for 118 yards, and Williams added 94 yards on 22 carries. Klondike turned the ball over five times, three times on fumbles and two on interceptions, and Valley lost the ball only once, that on a fumble.

Klondike was penalized four times for 45 yards and Valley was penalized six times for 74 yards.

Coach Giddens had praise for the defensive play of Williams, Pinkerton, Lacy, Smith, Chandler, Mike Dowd and Brown. "Dee Dowd did an excellent job of playing the run from the safety position. Kevin Hedrix did super on fielding kickoffs and punts. He saved us over 100 yards by just catching some of those punts," Giddens said.

"Tommy Morris ran real well in his touchdown run. Richey Fuston and Brent Brown connected on a beautiful third down pass play in a very tense situation," Giddens added. In other words, the coach is real proud of the entire team.

Friday night Valley will meet Rankin High School, a big 34-0 winner over Meridian last Friday night, at Snyder High School field, located just south of 37th Street in the southwest part of Snyder, at 7:30 p.m.

Coach Giddens states that Rankin has a very fine football team. The coach said that Rankin does not have a James McNary nor a Ray Williams, but is a fine, well-coached team that keeps coming.

The winner of the Valley-Rankin game will play probably Falls City on Friday night of next week for the state championship.

Turkeys from Turkey On Channel 7

Turkeys (wild, that is) were on Channel 7 Thanksgiving Day.

Steve Pritchett, of the Channel 7 staff, interviewed Billy Farley who lives on the Ox Bow Ranch and took pictures of the many (probably 60 or 70) wild turkeys on the ranch.

The turkeys aren't really very wild, because the Farleys feed them; but they roam and no one bothers them.

Scenes were also shown of the Thanksgiving get-together hosted by Billy and Betty Farley for some 29 relatives.

As Pritchett said, he "wanted to see turkeys on Turkey Day in Turkey."

Thanksgiving Given New Meaning For Valley Kindergarten Students

Thanksgiving this year took on a new meaning for the 26 Kindergarten students at Valley. They discovered many things about the people who celebrated the first Thanksgiving. During the first part of the week the children became Indians. Each child chose an Indian name, such as Red Wing, Shining Star, Big Horse and Little Bear. They learned signs and symbols used by the Indians, then used these signs to decorate vests and headbands. Indian beads were made to complete the costumes. The children discovered that some Indian homes were called teepees. A small teepee was set up in the classroom for the children to play in. We also learned about weapons used by the Indians, Indian foods, and transportation used by the Indians.

The class finally left the Indian village and visited the pilgrims at Plymouth Rock. After learning about the clothes that the pilgrims wore, each child made a pilgrim hat or bonnet. They discovered that pilgrim children probably learned to write with a quill pen and each child was given a feather that they used to write their names, the alphabet and numbers. A quilted log cabin was set up in the classroom so the children could get an idea of how the pilgrim's houses might have looked. Any study of Thanksgiving would not have been complete without a Thanksgiving feast.

The children enjoyed a Thanksgiving feast similar to the one that the pilgrims and Indians celebrated on the very first Thanksgiving in 1622. The feast was held at the home of Warren Lee and Jan Merrell. The long tables were decorated with fall leaves, Indian corn, and pumpkins. Those attending enjoyed turkey and dressing, green beans, corn-on-the-cob, Jello and cherry tarts, prepared by the mothers. The children wore their pilgrim and Indian costumes to the feast.

The pilgrims who attended the feast were Clay Merrell, Rusty Catoe, Bradley Price, Garrett Mills, Paul Brittan, Lisa Mullin, Roland Castillo, Stacey Don Ward and Junior Rosenbaum.

The Indians attending the feast were Julie Clay, Sandy Lowe, Chastity Price, Ricky Hughes, Carissa Rothwell, Jason Smith, Kacey Fuston, Audra House, David Lane, Brian Castillo, Irene Silva, Carmen Rodriguez, Michael Tamayo, Tina Williams, Johnny Joe Galvan and Sarah Alexander.

The Thanksgiving feast was enjoyed by all those attending.

We would like to say a special thank-you to all those who helped make this Thanksgiving a special treat for all of us.

is about to be decided by THE VOTER. The committee has carried the ball with all your excellent help and blocking and we have made progress. The time has come that the ball be PITCHED to gain the VICTORY. Carry the ball well on to VICTORY. SCORE a TOUCHDOWN for your community.

VOTE AGAINST LEGAL ALCOHOL IN TURKEY

1. The city can expect to gain PENNIES while the liquor industry gains DOLLARS.
2. The wets expect you to give up your right and freedom to a community without alcohol being sold so they can have it convenient to them.
3. They expect the citizens of Turkey and surrounding communities to carry the burden to control legal sales and consumption.
4. The wets would like to have alcohol convenient even if it means in-convenience to our children.
5. The wets show how they will respect the law about off-premise consumption. Do you think they will respect the law when it's legal.
6. People are going to drink it anyway. So why would the individual that doesn't drink have to help pay for those that are going to drink it anyway. It costs the dries no gas to purchase it.
7. It will take revenue from our merchants instead of bringing in revenue. BE HONEST NOW. When you went to buy alcohol what else did you buy? ALCOHOL, that's all.

The ball has been pitched to you the VOTER. Carry it into the end zone. Score a victory. Help keep Turkey dry.

Mt. St. Helens Eruptions Took Awful Toll,
But Scientists See Some Positive Effects

In the area around Washington's Mt. St. Helens, the future looks bleak. As a result of the volcano's devastating eruptions, more than 70 people died or disappeared, 240 miles of woodland were obliterated, 26 lakes were destroyed, nearly 11 million fish and 1.5 million other animals were wiped out.

The losses, estimated at more than $1 billion, are hard to exaggerate and the short-term prognosis seems grim.

But according to National Wildlife magazine, some scientists foresee "some positive long-range effects" of the blasts after nature has worked to restore the area. Among them:

● Volcanic ash will eventually enrich the soil and some new plant species will probably appear.

● Changes in wildlife habitat should enhance the populations of many creatures. For example, the mountain bluebird, which is attracted to snagged trees, is expected to flourish.

● Scientists will have, as one of them put it, "a rare opportunity to see how the earth regenerates itself . . . In some places, everything must start all over again."

And finally, not listed by the scientists, but noted by Washington State business leaders, the area will become a tourist attraction. The U. S. Forest Service reported more than 4,000 daily visitors to the Mt. St. Helens area in August.

Meanwhile, scientists are looking for signs that the area around Mt. St. Helens is beginning to heal. According to the report in the current issue of National Wildlife on the volcano's effects, some insect populations—vital links in the food chain—are already showing signs of recovery. And U. S. Forest Service biologist Bill Ruediger told the National Wildlife Federation's bi-monthly publication that he believed deer and elk will return to the region rather quickly, "particularly around the edges of the blast zone where there is adequate cover."

While Washington officials mourn the devastation of the 145-mile Toutle River, one of the few remaining undammed rivers in the Northwest, they feel sure that the river's flow will return to normal and its huge population of salmon and trout will return. Biologists have discovered that some salmon have already navigated through the high levels of silt in the Cowlitz River — another waterway that was severely damaged.

One factor which makes scientists optimistic about the damaged region's recovery is history. "In geologic terms," explains National Wildlife, "Mt. St. Helens is a relatively young volcano, just one in a string of 15 major ones in the Cascade range that runs from British Columbia to northern California." During the past 200 years, eight of these mountains have erupted; the most recent was California's Mt. Lassen, which blew more than 170 times between 1914 and 1921.

Periodically, these mountain peaks have poured vast rivers of mud into surrounding areas. One such mudflow descended Mt. Rainier about 600 years ago, smothering the Puyallup River. When the first white explorers arrived in western Washington 400 years later, the Puyallup was stocked with chinook, steelhead, cutthroat and coho. And its banks were crowded with big timber.

So the Puyallup did recover. "And the same thing will happen around Mt. St. Helens," Washington Department of Game official Jon Gilstrom assured National Wildlife. Until then, scientists will be watching carefully. "We're going to learn how to plan ahead for such blasts, how to cope with the ash, what to do with plugged-up waterways," a federal geologist told the NWF magazine.

Obviously, there is no way to prevent volcanic eruptions. As Gilstrom concludes in the National Wildlife report, "What happened at Mt. St. Helens has happened a thousand times before in the Pacific Northwest and will surely happen again. Nature has a way of taking care of herself."

"Something's wrong up ahead on the highway," my wife remarked as she squinted her eyes to see better through the mist of a light rain that seemed to reflect the car headlights back into our faces.

I noticed the flashing red lights, which I guessed were emergency vehicles. One was coming our way, the revolving light accentuating the message of the siren.

"It must be a bad one," she added, "and here comes another ambulance."

But I didn't really hear her. I jammed my foot on the brake to avoid smacking into the back of the car just ahead, which had come to a sudden stop. If our seat belts hadn't been fastened, we too might have been candidates for an ambulance ride to the hospital.

I couldn't help grumbling about the inconvenience we were experiencing. "Traffic seems to be stalled clear back here. It looks as if we'll have a late supper tonight."

But the tie-up was not as bad as it had seemed. Traffic was moving, though slowly, past the scene of the accident. I could see that it had involved only one car, which now lay on its top crossways on one lane of the pavement. Two men were attaching a cable to it so the tow truck parked in the median could right it before moving it off the highway.

As we passed the smashed car, I could see a victim, half sitting, half lying, on the ground beside the highway. She was young, perhaps in her late teens or early twenties. I couldn't see how badly injured she was, but what I heard I shall never forget. Through the half-open window that my wife had rolled down so she could get a better view, I heard a hysterical wail: "I told him not to take that drink!"

What story lay behind her words of regret I'll never know. Then we had passed, and in a matter of moments we had resumed our usual speed down the highway toward a supper that would not be late after all.

A brilliantly lighted signboard shone through the mist, shouting its message to us: "For the good life, drink X beer."

I felt nauseated and wondered if I wanted supper after all.

Do You Want This To Happen In Turkey?

(Committee Against Alcohol)

"I Was in Love With a Girl Named Cathy. I Killed Her"
This is the theme of one of three ads by the Department of Transportation

"I was in love with a girl named Cathy. I killed her." This is the theme of one of three ads by the Department of Transportation (DOT), saying that every year 8,900 American people between the ages of 15 and 25 are killed in alcohol-related crashes.

The ad, addressed to young people, says, "The automobile crash is the number one cause of death of people your age. And the ironic thing is that the drunk drivers responsible for killing young people are most often other young people."

Another of the ads says, "You march against war. You fight for clean air and clean water. You eat natural foods. You practice yoga. And you are so much against killing."

"It would be unthinkable for you to kill another human being on purpose. So why is this happening?"

The three ads by DOT have appeared in many newspapers and magazines. Each ad has a coupon inviting youthful readers to respond: "I don't want to get killed and I don't want to kill anyone. Tell me how I can help." The coupon is signed by the Youth Highway Safety Advisory Committee. The address is Department X, Box 2345, Rockville, Maryland 20852.

DO YOU WANT THIS TO HAPPEN TO YOUR CHILD OR MY CHILD?

The purpose of these ads is to focus on a current problem, the tragedy that some 25 young Americans will be killed today, and nearly 125 will be maimed or disfigured—not from drugs or disease, but from alcohol.

"Not a 40-year-old drunk," says DOT. "Not someone with a red nose and a pot belly. But someone like you."

That someone, perhaps just this once, had been drinking wine at a party, or beer at a drive-in. That someone, maybe just this once, was "drunk out of his mind and behind the wheel of a car."

"He might kill his best friend. He might kill a stranger. Or he might just kill himself. But either way, someone young and alive is suddenly young and dead."

All of this is literally happening. Today alcohol is available to more people, especially young people. It is easier to get most anywhere, maybe even at home. Legal drinking ages are being lowered in many states. Everywhere colorful, youth-slanted ads extol social graces of drinking. College and university campuses are setting up beer cellars or permitting drinking in student centers.

Add all this to the fact that more drivers of automobiles are taking over cars at younger ages. All put together, the components make for a deadly mixture.

Here's one example of what happens. The town of London, Ontario, Canada, lowered its legal drinking age in 1971. Since then car crashes involving 18- and 19-year-old males who had been drinking more than tripled.

In a special study of police reports of traffic accidents involving young London drivers, Prof. Paul C. Whitehead of the University of Western Ontario found that alcohol-related crashes increased by 339 percent for 18-year-olds and by 346 percent for 19-year-olds.

Before the law changed, 3.06 percent of accidents among 18-year-olds involved drinkers, and afterward this rose to 9.18 percent. For 19-year-olds the percent went from 3.5 to 11.48.

At the same time, among 24-year-olds, who were not affected by the law change, the increase in accidents involving alcohol was small—up to 8 percent from 7.3.

But this is not all the story. When the drinking age was lowered to 18, illicit drinking increased in younger age groups. Teen-agers under 18 have friends over 18 who buy drinks for them. And this was reflected in the traffic picture. Among 16- and 17-year-olds, crashes after drinking more than doubled, from 2.1 percent to 4.6 percent.

Dr. Whitehead estimates from his London study that at least half of the total increase of traffic problems for teen-agers 18 and 19 years old was the result of changes in the drinking law.

Another example of the import of lowering the drinking age is the state of Michigan. When the U. S. Constitution was amended to permit 18-year-olds to vote in Federal elections, a bill to bestow full adult privileges and responsibilities on 18-year-olds was hastily drawn up and passed by the Michigan legislature and signed into law by the governor. Twice before, the voters of the state had turned down this proposal.

When this new law lowering the legal drinking age went into effect on January 1, 1972, misgivings were expressed by school and law enforcement officials that it would lead to more problems with drinking and driving, that it would result in more 15- to 17-year-olds obtaining liquor illegally and getting into trouble. Schools would also experience more trouble since most twelfth graders become 18 before graduation.

These misgivings later proved to be well founded. During 1972 the official data on motor vehicle accidents of drivers 18 to 20 years of age showed an increase of 119 percent in alcohol-related accidents. For all other drivers, the increase in alcohol-related accidents for this period was only 14 percent.

Among 18- to 20-year-old drivers the alcohol-related fatal accidents were nine times those of other drivers. Road surveys both before and after lowering the legal drinking age showed that the percentage of 16- to 20-year-olds with a blood alcohol content of .05 percent or above increased from 1.3 percent in 1971 to 4.9 percent in 1972, or almost four times.

So in Michigan, with the coming of more drinking by teen-agers, here came more problems rising from drinking. This was true on the roads and streets, but it was also true in other ways.

Nearly half of the public school principals said that their school dances and athletic events were harder to supervise because more students were drinking. Other principals said more of their students were returning after lunch hours with evidence of drinking, a problem almost nonexistent before the age was lowered. One third of the principals said they found more problems with students drinking during school hours.

Whenever alcohol is used, it will have an effect on the user, and this effect is not always what the user expects. He may feel he is able to take care of himself under any circumstances, but feeling and reality are two different things when it comes to alcohol.

And that is the problem. It is the major reason that, as DOT phrases it, "The number one killer of young Americans is young Americans."

Is this description by DOT going to be true of all teen-agers? "You're young. Just beginning to really live."

You see things wrong in the world and want to change them.

You march against war, protest against pollution because you want a better life for everyone.

Yet the thing that cripples and kills more young Americans than anything else, you do nothing about.

"The automobile is the greatest single threat to people under 30."

"And you do absolutely nothing about it. It just doesn't make any sense."

Where do you fit into this picture?

WRECK—July 7— Green and Wade Sts.

2 cars pulled into station by wreckers.
 "Car full a beer cans. They ran the light."
 "Had to get them out of top—cut them out. Couldn't find 1 of them at first."
 "Stew lived a few min. I went to school with him. He kept yelling, "Get me out."
 "That other guy they hit—22. Just let girl friend off—headed home."
 "Three guys messed up in that wreck. 2 in 1 car that hit other. Car with 2 ran light. They were doin' 80."
 "Worst mess I've seen. TV guys been here all morning. Seen all them driver-ed kids lookin' like? Made 'em sick. Made me sick."
 Blood oozes out of cracks in car, station owner pours water to wash blood away. "These cars have bled 5 hrs. now!"
 Bankers, driver-ed classes, firemen, cement haulers, mailmen, housewives, girls from beauty salon, people carrying groceries, boys on bikes, little kids, men from office—staring.
 "That wreck! I was in ER when they came in. First time it's made me sick. Had to clean off walllets to do identification. That picture of the girl friend—really a pretty gal."
 Man at hospital: "My friends know the driver of car that ran the light. He (driver) always brags, after a beer or two, about all the stoplights he can run at high speed. Sorta like notches on a gun. Now he is the last notch—Too bad."
 There's blood still oozing out of the cars. Looks so strange. Dull, damp day. Smell of blood & beer.
