House Turns Down Utility 'Death Sentence'

NO RECORDED BALLOT TAKEN ON MEASURE

WASHINGTON, July 1 — The house today rebuffed President Roosevelt in his demands for a mandatory "death sentence" for unessential utilities holding companies. Before packed galleries, the house, without recording the vote of individual members, defeated an effort to insert the senate "death sentence" in the less drastic house utilities bill. The vote was counted by tellers who did not record the names of representatives as they signified their preferences. Defeat of the "death sentence" came after direct pleas by Mr. Roosevelt that it be enacted. The vote was 216 to 146.

Fight Upon Rabies Strengthened Today

PENSIONS TO BE BIG ISSUE AT ELECTION

AUSTIN, July 1 — Texas' much-amended constitution goes up for another face-lifting at the polls August 24 with the old age pensions threatening to displace prohibition repeal as the most controversial issue. Since its adoption in 1876, Texans have amended their constitution 74 times. Latest changes were in 1933. Last year eight amendments were defeated. Number one on the list of seven proposed changes which Texans will decide is the old age benefit amendment, empowering the state legislature to provide $15 monthly pensions to citizens in good standing who have reached 65 years of age. Pensions promise to lure most voters to the polls, although early indications point to a small vote. Texans have voted upon the liquor question numerous times since statehood, but the amendment adopted in 1919 making the state "dry" was the only prohibition proposal ever to carry a statewide election. Two years ago, voters liberalized the legalizing sale of 32 per cent wines and beers. They also ratified the 21st amendment to the national constitution. Wet and dry forces organized early this summer, but popular enthusiasm is yet to be greatly stimulated. Adoption of the amendment would return Texas to a local option status, with the "open saloon" forever barred. Legislators would define "open saloon."

WICHITA FALLS GIRLS TO PLAY 3 GAMES HERE

One of the most spectacular teams to play on the Humble softball diamond here will arrive Thursday for a three-day series when the Auto Spring Red Jackets of Wichita Falls hit town. Glad entirely in red, the Jackets present a colorful sight when they take the field, playing ball more like men than most of the girls teams of the state. They won 39 games and lost nine last season. This year they have won 10 games and lost one.

Wheat Market On Spectacular Boom

CHICAGO, July 1. — The wheat market went booming into new high ground today. Stimulated by the black rust scare and the hot sultry weather, both of which were considered contributing factors, the market rallied spectacularly. Elmer, barefoot and in the fifth grade at school, waits for the "full of the moon" to plant and to harvest because a "full moon yields a full harvest." He expects to make 65 bushels of corn per acre. He has picked 75 bushels of peas from an acre and a half and expects to pick that much more. Elmer, who farms while his father, J. A. Fowler, 50, "works out," is saving money from his cash crops. "Corn husks are thick, so you can look for a hard winter with lots of rain and cold," he says. He knows all the signs of the zodiac and plans according to "indications." Elmer's father said he foresaw the depression and swapped his $2,000 city home for his farm. Since 1926 the value of his place has grown to $15,000. Elmer likes to farm because of the freedom. "You can work when you want to and quit when you want to," he says.

BOY FARMING BY MOON ENVY OF 4-H BOYS

MYKAWA, Tex., July 1 — Elmer Fowler, 15, who farms 15 acres "by the moon" and his weather almanac is the envy of Texas 4-H club boys. Elmer, barefoot and in the fifth grade at school, waits for the "full of the moon" to plant and to harvest because a "full moon yields a full harvest." He expects to make 65 bushels of corn per acre. He has picked 75 bushels of peas from an acre and a half and expects to pick that much more. Elmer, who farms while his father, J. A. Fowler, 50, "works out," is saving money from his cash crops. "Corn husks are thick, so you can look for a hard winter with lots of rain and cold," he says. He knows all the signs of the zodiac and plans according to "indications." Elmer's father said he foresaw the depression and swapped his $2,000 city home for his farm. Since 1926 the value of his place has grown to $15,000. Elmer likes to farm because of the freedom. "You can work when you want to and quit when you want to," he says.

KEY BROTHERS SET NEW ENDURANCE RECORD, WILL LAND THIS EVENING

The two brothers had flown their ship, "Ole Miss," 647 1-2 hours, or almost 27 full days. They had traveled 51,800 miles since the takeoff. They announced by radio today that they expect to land at 6:30 p. m. The two brothers have flown steadily, maintaining that they would not come down until forced down by motor trouble. Saturday they faced one of the gravest dangers of the air, fire in their plane, but extinguished it and kept on flying.

GIRL AT WILD PARTY TELLS OF SHOOTING

DETROIT, July 1. — Howard Carter Dickinson, prominent New York attorney was slain during an attempt to rob him by William Schweitzer, one of three women participants in the wild party that ended in death, confessed, Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea said today. Police attempts to break the case after Schweitzer had given them three widely divergent stories of the shooting, centered on a reexamination of Jean Miller and Loretta and Florence Jackson. Jean Miller, led tearfully back to the room where she had told her story Sunday, broke down.

DETROIT, July 1. — From hours of intensive questioning of William Schweitzer, procurer and police character, authorities today sought the "hidden motive" for the murder of Howard Carter Dickinson, prominent New York attorney and nephew of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes.

Although Schweitzer had confessed killing Dickinson, officials said the murder was as much a mystery as ever. Authorities believed he was attempting to conceal the motivation for the murder and the participation of another person. They were positive he did not kill the lawyer in fear of his own life and that Dickinson did not kill himself. Schweitzer changed his story repeatedly, alternately insisting upon self defense and suicide through hours of questioning.

TWO CHARGED WITH STEALING CATTLE HERE

EASTLAND, July 1. — Charges had been filed against two Nimrod men today, following a series of incidents that allegedly included a trip to Fort Worth to sell stolen cattle. J. W. Adams was charged with forgery, driving while drunk, and cattle theft. Paul Tomlin was charged with driving while drunk and cattle theft.

The theft charge, filed in Eastland county, alleged that the men took some cattle from a field near Cisco and sold them at Brad, it was announced by Frank Fulgham, Parker county attorney. The forgery charge grew out of a transaction that included the purchase of a car. This charge was filed in Tarrant county. The driving while drunk charge, filed in Parker county, followed an alleged sidestepping of a car driven by a California woman. Adams was said to have been driving at the time.

BETTER CROPS OFFSET FLOOD DAMAGE LOSS

DALLAS, July 1 — Flood damage in the Southwest from recent rains will be more than offset by material improvement in agricultural and livestock industries, the Eleventh District federal reserve bank's monthly business review predicted today.

"A period of dry weather," the report explained "would do much to overcome the bad effects and the good season which now obtains will be a sustaining factor in crop developing throughout the growing season."

Sustained activity in the distribution of merchandise also was a development of major importance during the last month, the review found.

Wholesale Activity "Distribution of merchandise in wholesale channels continued active in May," the review reported, "which is normally a quiet month. The volume of business in a majority of reporting lines was substantially larger than a year ago."

"Sales of department stores located in larger cities were slightly larger than in the previous month and exceeded those of May, 1934, by two per cent. Collections in both wholesale and retail trade were well sustained. "Debits to individual accounts banks in leading centers, while per cent smaller than in April, were 12 per cent greater than in the preceding month last year."

Intelligent Children

Those children who deliberately slacked on their intelligence tests in order to be placed in a division taking the minimum or average amount of work instead of the "enriched course" of study prescribed for bright children may have been wiser than their parents and teachers. On general principles the enriched course may be a boon to the majority of children, but here and there are growing folk who could do far better without it.

Once upon a time the case of an apparently lazy girl came up before faculty meeting at a woman's college. After various professors and instructors had had their say about the girl who could do much better work if she would, but who would not, the college doctor got to her feet.

"Can not any of you see," she asked, "that laziness is Nature's way of keeping that girl alive? She is intense and none too strong. If she did the work you think is called for by the quality of her mind, her body would not stand it. I would have to send her home and she wouldn't have any college education at all. Let her alone and she'll get some education and some out of doors fund and a lot of happiness."

This is wisdom. Too many youngsters in early teens find their courses enriched with extra sewing and civics and current events and supplementary reading and gymnastics and dramatics and cantatas and one thing and another. They end the day and the school year all nerves. That is not education. More thorough drill on the things that count—such as the low I. Q.'s get—and more time and energy to browse around woods and fields and home libraries might give the bright child a chance to enrich his own life.

Texas Rep. Would Investigate Aliens

Representative Martin Dies of Texas has called for an investigation of aliens on "governmental pay and relief rolls." He has been informed "there are hundreds of thousands of citizens of other countries living off the American taxpayers either by holding government jobs or by being on the relief rolls."

He demands prompt action on his resolution. He would return to their native lands those aliens who are holding government jobs and dismiss from the relief rolls the aliens who are being fed by American taxpayers. Well, the Saturday Evening Post has been clamoring for like action for years. It is an old, old story. There is a vast army of Mexicans, in certain American states who are not citizens of the country but they are holding government jobs. There is a nationwide election next year. Practical politicians—those who are candidates for re-election—know how to play the game. How is it possible for aliens to obtain government jobs? Perhaps

Behind the Scenes in Washington

This is the second of six articles in which Rodney Dutcher explains the details of President Roosevelt's "must" legislative proposals.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON—The Wagner labor disputes bill, passed overwhelmingly by the Senate and almost certainly to pass in the House, embodies a definite government effort to foster organization of labor unions.
It isn't on Roosevelt's formal "must" list. But the indefatigable Senator Bob Wagner, of New York, buttonholing every Democratic member, was able to assert that "Roosevelt is for this bill." And the measure whizzed through the Senate with a conspicuous lack of an administration effort at amendment or compromise.
The bill undertakes to keep the New Deal's early promises of a "magna charta" which would give labor an equality of bargaining power with industry.
A piece of "government interference" especially hateful to owners of America's basic industries, it attempts to sweep away devices by which employers have nullified the intent of Section 7-a of NIRA and defied the National Labor Relations Board while the growth of company-controlled unions far outstripped that of employee-controlled labor organizations.

SPECIFICALLY, the Wagner bill: Writes into permanent law an affirmation of the free right of labor and the compulsory duty of employers to bargain collectively. Establishes the NLRB as an independent body free from executive interference, gives it "exclusive power" to prevent specified "unfair labor practices" regardless of any other law or code, empowers it to hold secret elections of employees—who interfere with the board's agents—orders it to hear employ-petitions "expeditiously"; and enables it to prosecute defiant employers in federal courts with its own enforcement machinery instead of relying on a dilatory Department of Justice.

WRITES "majority rule" into the law by providing that representatives selected for collective bargaining by a majority of employees shall be "the exclusive representatives of the employees in such unit for the purposes of collective bargaining in respect to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment, and other conditions of employment."

Imposes what's considered as a sentence of slow death for company unions by proscribing as "unfair labor practices":
Interference with, restraint, or coercion of employees in their guaranteed right to organize and bargain collectively.
Domination or interference with formation of any labor organization or contribution of "financial or other support" to it. (The quoted words are vital.)

REFUSAL to bargain collectively or any type of discrimination designed to discourage labor union membership or punish complaining employees.
The bill also gives standing to "closed shops" by providing that employers may make such agreements with unions if they desire.
The House bill would put NLRB under the Labor Department, as is passionately desired by Secretary Frances Perkins. That part probably will be knocked out.
Both bills are entitled "an act to promote equality of bargaining power between employers and employees, to diminish the causes of labor disputes. . . ." The Senate committee reported that 70 per cent of the company unions had sprung up since NIRA was passed. (Copyright, 1935, NEA Service, Inc.)

A Shade-Tree City

Does any Cisco official or department have a complete record of all city trees? Toronto, Canada, believes it has the happy distinction of having more shade trees on its streets than any other city on the continent. Further, its park department has accurate knowledge concerning every one of its 126,000 trees. Within 30 seconds, it is said, any tree on any street could be identified and described as to species, age, general health and variety. With such detailed knowledge it may be assumed that trees are pruned or sprayed or cared for in any way that is needed, that dead trees are promptly replaced, and that other trees will be set out. Rivalry as to human population is common enough, but very few communities take a tree census that is so thorough and so useful as Toronto's. Yet the title "shade tree city" is one well worth holding.

The mark of a good citizen is the willingness to do that which will be a help to his home city without regard to whether that thing will be personally agreeable to him or not. The knowledge that he is helping his city should make it agreeable to him.

tion reports that for the smaller users of electricity—the great bulk of small households—the private company is permitted to charge a higher rate than is charged in Austin.

That means much higher profits go to the owners of the plant than go to the citizens of Austin—owners of the Austin plant.

Yet, the Dallas newspaper pats the company upon the back and no doubt congratulates itself for its public service, in proclaiming that private company operation is the best. Just because Austin had the worst flood in all its history.

Texas officials, just as the state's new industries survey begins and its planning board outlines public developments, have been informed of a national conference in Washington on rural electrification through the creation of cooperative associations.

Suggestions for rural electrification of the Panhandle grew into the broader one of using the fuel—natural gas—to be piped to cities now without gas service.

There will be an extensive development of available electric power in Texas. The government already encourages distribution of electrical household appliances. It will be favorable to the electrical cooperative associations, and probably liberal with loans and grants to finance their necessary power lines. The new industrial development program could well include the idea of fostering these associations.

Sentenced After Jabbing Attorney

CUBERO, July 1—Tom Cheatham, attorney, asked the defendant Emmett S. Cook, charged with assault to murder, to show a district court jury what transpired in the fight. Cook straddled the "victim"—Cheatham—on the floor and jabbed him. He had been knocked unconscious by a knee jab to the ribs. When he was lifted to his feet, blood ran from his ears. Cook was sentenced to one year in prison.

Texas Topics

By RAYMOND BROOKS

AUSTIN, July 1—Damage to Austin by an unprecedented flood recently was credited by a Dallas Times-Herald editorial to municipal operation of the Austin light and power plant.

The editorial contained the dictum that "such plants can best be operated by private companies due to the politics in public operation." Dallas was the wrong city for such an expression to be made. Austin, a city of 60,000 devotes considerable profits from its light plant, and furnishes free lighting for streets, public institutions and hospitals and schools. Austin's tax rate has been held down by light plant earnings, and bonds for betterment and expansion of its lighting system paid from revenues of this service.

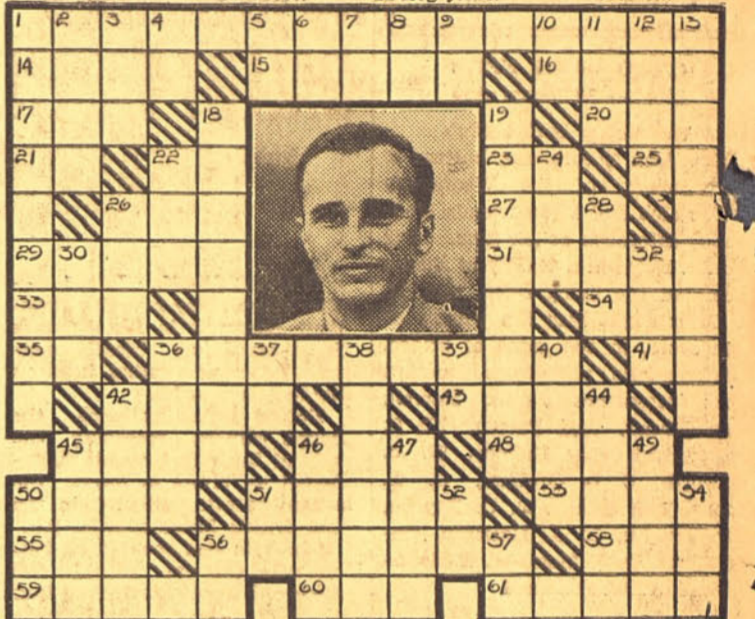

Dallas has four times as many people among whom to spread plant overhead. Dallas has a private plant in operation. Assuming it should be run as efficiently as a city plant—as claimed, in being free of "politics" it should offer a considerably lower rate than Austin, in order not to constitute an injustice upon the citizens, as compared with those of Austin.

Summer Sweethearts

By Mabel McEllott © 1935, NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
KATHARINE SPRINGER, 20 and beautiful, allows her emotions to rule when she marries MICHAEL HEATHEROE, young riding instructor who comes into a title and fortune. Katharine's father is rich and her stepmother is a blabber.

The night following his marriage Michael is injured in a terrible accident and when he regains consciousness his memory is impaired. He forgets the marriage. Katharine, heart-broken, believes he has deserted her. She goes to New Mexico to forget. Wandering in a grove for an early morning stroll, Katharine becomes lost in the desert.

Michael arrives to explain and beg forgiveness. He hires a plane to search for Katharine. After a long hunt she is rescued. Michael takes her, ill from shock and fatigue, to a ranch house and a doctor is summoned. FRANK MILLARD, new friend of Katharine's, refuses to believe Michael is her husband. The two men fight.

Michael's home DR. JOHN KAYE, in love with Katharine, learns of her marriage from ZOE PARKER who tries to comfort him. Wandering in a grove for an early morning stroll, Katharine becomes lost in the desert.

CHAPTER XLVI
KATHARINE was struggling out of a dream. It was not a pleasant one. Michael was in danger—horrible danger—and she was calling to him, calling—

When she awoke there was a lamp lit in the room and beside the narrow bed a nurse sat, her shadow silhouetted against the far wall.

"Well, hello, you're better, dear!" the nurse said.

Katharine felt her brow; it was cool. She was in one of her own night gowns. Her hair had been brushed. There was a thick tumbler, half-filled with water, on the table beside the bed. She closed her eyes, remembering with a shudder the blank sky and the desert sand under her feet and a bird wheeling . . .

"Now, my dear, you're safe and sound, and the young man clean out of his head about you," said the nurse in a gentle murmur. "It isn't every day a young lady is rescued from death in that way. I think it's so romantic, my dear. But you must rest now and not talk, and tomorrow you'll be fine."

"What young man?" Katharine's lips were cracked and parched, but she could form the words. Frank Millard, probably. It would be hard to be unkind to Frank Millard if he had saved her from the jaws of death.

She was thinking this when the nurse said in a brightly tone, "Why, Mr. Heatheroe, of course. Your husband."

Katharine thought the dream must be going on and on and that the nurse and this conversation were part of it. But she felt of the coarse, clean sheet; that was real.

Her gown was real, too, and so was the nurse's broad, kindly face.

"Mr.—Mr. Heatheroe?" Katharine said dimly.

"Why yes, dear, your husband—come on from the east to see you, and finding an airplane and all, and swooping down from the sky to rescue you, I declare, if it isn't just like the talkies!" bubbled the nurse who enjoyed the films and had her favorite stars and cut their pictures out of the magazines.

Michael was here, then. Katharine had dreams of him, as she almost always did; and he was here somewhere—close enough so that she might reach out her hand and touch him.

But she was tired suddenly and closed her eyes again. There was so much that Michael had to explain before things could be straight. She couldn't bear to think of it now.

Once more she slept. . . .

BEHIND the ranch house two young men faced each other angrily. Michael said, "So I'm a liar, eh?"

"You are," said Frank, almost affably. Now that there was immediate prospect of a conflict, he was enjoying himself. Fighting—any physical activity—was what he loved most. And he was furiously angry at this man.

There was the slap of sole-leather on the hard packed ground. There were the sounds of blows. Michael flinched. Frank drove a terrific blow to his adversary's chin. Blood began to trickle in a little stream from the cut.

Mrs. Darragh came to the kitchen door and watched them a little fearfully. She was used to fighting. All the "boys" around here fought, early and often. But this was a little different. She sensed that.

"Dad, maybe you and Dossy better go and stop them," she said anxiously. Hobe Darragh grunted, packing the tobacco down into his pipe.

"Do 'em good," he grunted. "Get it out of their systems. Never saw woman trouble yet but could be settled that way."

Dad was smart, thought his wife proudly. He knew, straight off, this fight meant woman trouble. Nobody'd told him; still he knew. It was one of the things you felt in your bones. That young girl in the bedroom was sure a pretty piece of goods. Quality all through. Mrs. Darragh had seen the pigskin case, packed with tortoise backed toilet things, that the Millards had brought in their car. It must have cost a small fortune. Still and all, even a high-toned girl like this had her love troubles. Two fighting over her, eh? Well, Ma Darragh had known the thrill of that, too, in her own tempestuous youth. She was gray now, and fat and shapeless, but she hadn't forgotten.

It would be hard to be unkind to Frank Millard if he had saved her from the jaws of death.

She was thinking this when the nurse said in a brightly tone, "Why, Mr. Heatheroe, of course. Your husband."

Katharine thought the dream must be going on and on and that the nurse and this conversation were part of it. But she felt of the coarse, clean sheet; that was real.

Her gown was real, too, and so was the nurse's broad, kindly face.

"Mr.—Mr. Heatheroe?" Katharine said dimly.

"Why yes, dear, your husband—come on from the east to see you, and finding an airplane and all, and swooping down from the sky to rescue you, I declare, if it isn't just like the talkies!" bubbled the nurse who enjoyed the films and had her favorite stars and cut their pictures out of the magazines.

Michael was here, then. Katharine had dreams of him, as she almost always did; and he was here somewhere—close enough so that she might reach out her hand and touch him.

But she was tired suddenly and closed her eyes again. There was so much that Michael had to explain before things could be straight. She couldn't bear to think of it now.

Once more she slept. . . .

BEHIND the ranch house two young men faced each other angrily. Michael said, "So I'm a liar, eh?"

"You are," said Frank, almost affably. Now that there was immediate prospect of a conflict, he was enjoying himself. Fighting—any physical activity—was what he loved most. And he was furiously angry at this man.

Cisco Praised By Reporter at Dallas

Dick West, reporter on the Dallas Journal staff, today pointed out the advantages of being a citizen of Cisco and praised Ciscons for their spirit of friendliness. A letter from West, formerly a resident of Cisco, said, in part:

"I should like to pause here and tell you that to me Cisco and Cisco people represent the highest point in my life. People there at times fail to realize their advantages, but as soon as they are forced to leave they will appreciate what a grand little city it is.

"Too much cannot be said about Cisco people. Their handshakes are a little tighter, their encouragement more sincere, their words of praise more frequent, and their ideals more lasting. I have paused and relaxed many an hour to think of my friends back home and how they are all like one family, united on ties of friendship and ardently seeking to perpetuate a heritage that is Cisco's and envied by every other city."

BETTER CROPS
In its optimistic view of the agriculture situation the review reported that "good yields from feed crops are practically assured and the outlook for other row crops is generally promising."
"The condition of ranges and livestock has shown a marked improvement and there are prospects of ample pasturage in all sections of the district, as the prolonged drought in the western portion was definitely broken by the heavy rains around the middle of June. Building operations, the review found, reflected a slowing down during the last month. The valuation of building permits issued at principal cities declined 24 per cent as compared with the large April volume, but was 13 per cent above that in the corresponding month last year."

WOMAN PAYS GRANT BACK TO RELIEF HEAD

AUSTIN, July 1. — State Relief Director Adam R. Johnson, bombarded from all sides for the past year with requests for "bigger and better relief grants," suddenly found a new faith in the human race this week.

In the morning mail came a money order for $9.55 from one Mrs. Blanche Perkins of Fort Worth in payment of what she termed a loan from the Tarrant county relief office in April, 1934. Johnson could scarce believe his eyes. Could this be a relief client paying back a direct relief grant? There must be some mistake. Probably the woman was a rural rehabilitation client sending a money order for the state office by mistake to apply on a capital goods or subsistence loan.

Johnson communicated with the Fort Worth administrator and asked for a complete history of the case. Records there showed Mrs. Perkins asked for and received direct aid amounting to $9.55 in April, 1934. Thereafter, no more aid was granted to her and her case was closed in September, 1934.

"Then it's true!" said Johnson. "This is the first relief client in Texas so far as I know, to pay back a relief grant." He sat down, dictated a personal letter to Mrs. Perkins as follows:

"...I am herewith enclosing receipt in full for post office money order for $9.55 as repayment for assistance given you on your application for relief in April, 1934, made with the Tarrant county relief board.

"As the relief you received was not extended on a loan basis, you have done a most exceptional thing in repaying the government for the aid extended to you. I can not express my commendations for the splendid thing you have done, and I want you to know it has had a really inspiring effect upon me and others of my organization through whose hands your money order passed in order to get back into the account of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. It is an assurance to us that the spirit, pride and ambition of our forefathers still live in the mind and heart of at least one Texan."

The state director had no other information indicating what good fortune had enabled Mrs. Perkins to repay the government, but he said she deserved it all, for the character displayed in this one act.

Textile Industry Slump Continues

AUSTIN, July 1. — The unfavorable year-to-year comparison in the textile industry of Texas continued through May, according to the bureau of business research of the University of Texas.

Reports from nineteen Texas cotton mills show a total consumption of only 2,686 bales of cotton during May, a decline of 19 per cent from the previous month and 58 per cent from last year; and sales, 3,777,000 yards were 5 per cent below those of May last year but 9.7 per cent above April of the current year.

Unfilled orders on May 31 totaled 7,521,000 yards, declines of 4.8 per cent and 18.2 per cent respectively from the previous month and the similar month last year.

Poultry Shipments Continue Decline

AUSTIN, July 1. — Poultry and egg shipments from Texas to interstate points by rail during May continued the unfavorable year-to-year comparison noted in previous months, according to the University of Texas bureau of business research.

A total of 103 cars were shipped to out-of-state points against 160 cars a year ago, a decline of 36 per cent. There were 60 cars of poultry and 43 of eggs in May this year compared with 87 cars of poultry and 73 of eggs during the similar month last year.

Receipts of eggs from out-of-state points totaled 41 cars of which 36 cars came from Kansas, 1 from Missouri, 3 from Nebraska, and 1 from Illinois. Last year in May 50 cars were brought in, and these all came from Kansas.

Don't Expose Your Property to Loss

But are you not driving your machine with anywhere from $1,000 to $25,000 of your property exposed?

If you injure a man, and he obtains a damage verdict against you, you've got to pay it.

If you haven't the cash, your property can be sold to get it.

ATHLETES SAY:
"THEY DON'T GET YOUR WIND!"

SAM HOWARD, the high-diving champion, says: "I can smoke Camels all I want to and keep in perfect 'condition.' Camels are so mild. They never get my wind. And when tired a Camel gives me new energy."

CARL HUBBELL, star pitcher of the N.Y. Giants: "Camels are so mild, they never get my wind or ruffle my nerves."

GEORGE BARKER, the former intercollegiate track star: "A cross-country runner has to keep in shape. I've learned one thing about cigarettes — Camels are mild. They don't get my wind, and they never bother my nerves."

GEORGE M. LOTT, JR., tennis star, says: "Camels never take the edge off my condition or get my wind, because they are mild. I understand more expensive tobaccos are used in Camels. That accounts for their mildness!"

BILL MEHLHORN, the star golfer, adds this timely word: "I've got to keep fit to compete in tournament golf. I can smoke Camels steadily. From years of experience I know they won't get my wind or jangle my nerves."

CARL HUBBELL, a Camel smoker for many years, caught in action on the diamond! He says: "Camels have flavor, plus mildness—a rare combination. And they never get my wind. I'd walk a mile for a Camel!"

YOU'LL LIKE THEIR MILDNESS TOO!
Because Camels are so mild...made from more costly tobaccos than any other popular brand... you can smoke all you please. Athletes are agreed that Camels do not jangle the nerves or get the wind. You'll never tire of their appealing flavor.
