BOOSTERS TO AID IN VOTE CAMPAIGN

About Our Friends

By STEPHEN A. LONG

Ray Haley, T. & P. Service station operator, cattleman and city farmer, says, even if the cloud which he had been observing all the early morning should give us rain its too late for his corn crop, but would be of material assistance to his two tiny tomatoes now growing merrily alongside his station... Haley has a few stalks of corn growing on the northwest side of his station where he has been pouring water generously in order to outwit the hot atmosphere but all in vain... the corn has not only blasted but has dried up from tassel to bottom... A little tomato plant which he found clinging to the edge of the sidewalk was transplanted near the wall and has put on two little tomatoes which are increasing in size each day... a rain would make them into big ones immediately... Haley says what is true of his little crop, would likely be true of others who are farming and gardening on a larger scale...

Yes, Leon Maner has us down at present... he's too much for us... in addition to being able to pronounce and spell those long Aztec names in old Mexico and make them sound musical, he catches other errors... He's decided to write his own obituary and file it here for us against the time it might be needed...

W. E. Brown, of the Home Furniture company, vouches for the fact that A. D. Starling and party, brought home plenty of fish. He is not sure where they got them... they tasted fresh but he did remember that great thirst followed the eating... All parties suffered some minor ailments... Smith Huestles had rheumatism after falling out of the boat... Barton Philpott had a violent headache. Doc Lee was the only man who was not sick, but then they said no wonder, he did the cooking and we ate it... A. D. Starling is still sitting around holding his head... wonder just where they did buy those fish...?

Vance Owen, of the Waco Tailoring Supply company, was the evening guest of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Reimer and he was treated to a swim in Lake Cisco...

LABOR CLASH STARTS OVER SHRIMP WORK

BAYOU LABARRE, Ala., Aug. 13. — Open warfare between union and non-union workers at shrimp factories began today. Three white men were wounded and a negro beaten. A squad of deputies from Mobile were rushed to guard a non-union plant when groups of union men armed with shotguns appeared and announced their intention to take over the factory. The trouble started last night at a meeting to induce negro workers to join the union. The negroes had been hired when boatmen supplying the factory struck and white workers on the Deer Island plant joined others in a sympathy walkout. The first clash occurred shortly after midnight when a negro in a truck fired on a group of white men, investigating officers said. Three were slightly wounded by birdshot. Union workers armed themselves and gathered in the streets.

Hopson Claims He Can't Remember Income

MIXES ANGER AND LAUGHTER IN TESTIMONY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13. — The senate lobby committee was hurriedly summoned today to ascertain whether contempt citations would be sought for Howard Hopson, who dodged a subpoena, with the aid of house lobby investigators, after testifying before house committee.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Aug. 13. — Howard Hopson, smiling, jovial mystery man in the utility lobby investigation, earnestly told house probers today he couldn't remember his present income, although he recalled making about $100,000 in 1932.

The reputedly dominant figure in the investigation of the $1,800,000 Electric company, sought for weeks in the investigation of the Wheeler-Rayburn bill but found only yesterday, mixed flashes of angry defiance with roars of laughter when he appeared before the committee.

And at the end of the morning session he gave an example of the case with which he avoids subpoena bearers by scooting away in a taxi as an investigator for the rival senate lobby committee fumed on the sidewalk subpoena still in hand.

Hepburn's Hair Sacrifice to Art

A martyr to her art—and a most attractive one—Katharine Hepburn scores high in the role of a boy in which she is shown here. Faced with playing the part of a young girl who masquerades as a boy, the star surrendered to the shears, getting a boyish haircut that is far from unbecoming—and very convincing, too.

All boys and girls under the age of 16 years will be admitted free to the pool on Mondays and Fridays for the rest of the season, it was announced. At the same time, an effort will be made to furnish special entertainment on those days.

RACKET PREYS ON RELATIVES OF DECEASED

CHICAGO, Aug. 13. — Racketeers have found a way to cash in on death.

The "Memorial Scroll" racket, a ghastly farce in which confidence men plan months in advance to extract a "fin" or "sawbuck" ($5 or $10) from dazed relatives of the deceased, is handled this way:

Calling themselves the "Institute of Brotherly Love," "The Arms-Around-the-Neck Foundation," or by some such name, the racketeers circulate a list of clergymen over the nation.

They ask clergymen for expressions of opinion regarding a plan to promote good will among Protestants, Jews, Catholics and other faiths. In many cases, and in good faith, the clergymen answer.

Watch Death Notices
After several months have passed, the racketeers notice that some one is dead in Cleveland and that some rabbi is mentioned in connection with funeral services, or that a prominent physician is dead in Minneapolis and that a minister whose name is on their list to preach the services.

Racket Often Works
Many of the survivors want some token to remember the deceased by, and readily agree on a memorial scroll showing that the preached tolerance and good will in life. A $10 bill, under the circumstances is small and consequently the racketeers profit by about $9.50.

There are other con games designed to prey on relatives of the deceased, including the C. O. D. racket containing a fountain pen on which the dead man allegedly paid a $1 deposit.

Hog Processing Tax Is Termed Invalid

BALTIMORE, Aug. 13.—The AAA Hog Processing tax today was held unconstitutional by Federal Judge W. Chesnut. The court granted an injunction to a packing house restraining the government from collecting.

Scattered showers over the state were in prospect, Dr. J. L. Cline, government meteorologist reported. With a temperature of 74 at Dallas Tuesday morning, the weather bureau predicted that the peak reading for the day would not go above 90. It went to 96 Monday.

Lower temperatures gave relief to citizens in most of the state Monday and very few cities reported readings above 100.

The mercury stood at 64 at Amarillo today, while reports from Dodge City, Kan., indicated a temperature of 58.

James Allred. Hearing on making the order permanent was set for Oct. 7.

Named besides the wire operating companies were the Daily Racing Form Publishing company, and the Texas News Service, said to be furnishing racing news to bookies in Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, and elsewhere in Texas.

Forfeiture of their charters was asked but not forfeiture of A. T. and T., or the Southwestern Bell Telephone company, as they are merely supplying wires and instruments.

"We are going to stop the bookie industry at the source. We hope to cut the bottom out from under them," Governor Allred said in announcing the filing of the suit.

The restraining order was asked on allegations that the supplying of racing information for wagering purposes violates an article of the penal code and on the charge that it is a misuse of corporation property.

COX ELECTED DIRECTOR OF STATE GROUP

The Cisco Boosters, in a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce last night, adopted a statewide Junior Chamber of Commerce move to help in securing a representative vote of the people at the August 24 special election.

It was pointed out that the organization in the election other than to urge all voters to go to the polls after they had informed themselves on the seven amendments which will be presented to them at that time.

Johnny Cox, president of the club, was named state director of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. His election was by acclamation.

Seek Erosion Camp
The club adopted a proposal to aid J. M. Bird, Chamber of Commerce agriculture expert, in securing a group of farmers to go to Lindale and the soil erosion camp in Cisco in the near future.

The trip will be made on a school bus at a nominal cost. Named on the committee to work on the trip were J. M. Bird, E. P. Crawford, J. E. Spencer and H. A. Bible.

To Aid Lions
The Boosters went on record as unanimously favoring the District 2-B convention here in 1936 and in pledging cooperation with the Lions club in bringing it here. H. L. Dyer, Horace Condiey, W. H. LaRoque, and Dr. Paul Woods were named as a committee to work with the Lions club.

The Boosters planned a swim and breakfast to be held at the Lake Cisco pavilion next Tuesday morning. L. L. Hudson, Rex Page, H. L. Dyer, and T. C. Williams were appointed to make arrangements for it.

F. D. Wright, Frank Langston, F. B. Altman, and T. C. Williams were named as a committee to work out a plan for furnishing free swims to boys and girls under 16 years of age on certain days of the week for the summer.

NANCE VICTOR OVER GARNER'S MONDAY NIGHT

Nance today was a step nearer the top in the second half season of softball play in the city league, following a victory over Garner's last night.

The motorists pounded the ball hard last night and took a 16 to 2 win from the department store boys. Nance won in the first half of the season. The game moved Nance up in the percentage but failed to bring the club quite within striking distance of the perfect record of Community, leading the league.

Tonight the Community club will be out to maintain that perfect record when it takes on the Lobos, present holders of the cellar position.

Thursday night the Garner team will be out for blood when it meets Community. It was Community that first stopped the merchants after their successful first half season.

The Soil Erosion Camp

Farmers of this area are being enlisted to make a trip to Lindale to ask a soil erosion camp to be placed here. Twenty farmers are wanted for the trip, which will be in the nature of a short vacation for those who go.

Cisco has asked for a soil erosion camp before. Each time the answer was the same—No. The reason given for the answer was that this county does not need such a camp—that the land is not broken enough by erosion to warrant the planning of one here.

Farmers in this territory, as well as agriculture experts, know that each year the erosion problem is becoming increasingly important to Cisco and the surrounding area. They know that in a few years, if something is not done to stop it, the land hearabouts will be badly cut, that it is blowing away at present as well as washing into the rivers and on into the Gulf of Mexico.

The farmers believe an erosion camp is necessary. Those persons who have had anything to do with the soil from an objective point of view believe it is necessary.

J. M. Bird, agriculture expert of the Chamber of Commerce here, has hit upon the idea of having the farmers present their own cause. Where business men have been turned down in the past, farmers who are closer to the soil may be able to secure the camp. Twenty farming men are being sought to make the trip in a school bus, going to Lindale to present their own petition for a camp. They will represent the land. It is to be hoped that they will come back with the news that a camp will be located here.

Last night the Cisco Boosters agreed to sponsor such an undertaking, to aid in securing farmers to make the trip. In so doing they joined hands with the Chamber of Commerce, which has already been working on the project.

It was announced that approximately 1,000 farmers' signatures had been secured on a petition for the camp. More signatures will be asked.

This is the farmers project. The soil is theirs, but everyone would derive a benefit from an erosion camp. Get behind and push for it.

New Junior C. of C. Director

The Cisco Boosters, member club of the Texas Junior Chamber of Commerce, last night named their president, Johnny Cox, director in the state organization.

Cox has worked hard on the Booster organization and from the beginning has been one of the key men. He has been an untiring worker and has helped swing many things toward Cisco that might otherwise have gone elsewhere. He has kept in close touch with junior chamber of commerce activities and should make a good state director.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Congress has a quaint way of passing bills and then sending them into conference in the hands of men who will kill them if they can.

Lately this practice has been confined to the House. Vice President Garner, staunch supporter of the administration, decided he wouldn't appoint any more Senate conferees who weren't in sympathy with the bill on which they must deliberate.

Selecting five conferees to meet with the Senate group on the holding company bill. Speaker Joe Byrns included two Republican congressmen who had voted against the bill—Holmes of Massachusetts and Cooper of Ohio.

Then when George Huddleston of Alabama Democratic House conferee objected to the presence as Senate counsel of the two lawyers who drafted the bill—Ben Cohen of the National Power Policy Committee and Dozier De Vane of the Federal Power Commission—he was able to get the eager support of Holmes and Cooper who didn't care how long the bill was held up and would have been happy if it could have been stalled until it died with adjournment of Congress.

A LOT of monkey business is sometimes perpetrated after a bill has "gone to conference." Since a large job of the Roosevelt program and some of its most controversial points have lately been before conference committees—including the utilities, banking, and economic security measures, as well as the TVA and AAA amendments—it is a good idea to have in mind just what these conferences are and how they operate.

Conferees are appointed to reconcile differences in more or less similar bills which have been passed by both Senate and House. The vice president and the speaker appoint either three or five conferees each and it doesn't make much difference how many, as an agreement requires signatures of a majority of each group.

Agreements are usually a compromise in which the Senate recedes on certain points and the House on others. The agreements are usually promptly ratified in each body, whereupon the bill goes to the White House for signature.

Conferees are not supposed to add new provisions to the measure, but sometimes do, as when, two or three years ago—thanks to "power trust" lobbyists—conferees shifted a 3 per cent electricity tax from power companies to consumers.

If there's no agreement, the bill just dies. Because of provisions inserted by either Senate or House and objectionable to the other body's conferees and the administration, the utility, banking, economic security and TVA legislation have all been more or less seriously threatened with stragulation in conference.

Administration leaders let the Glass bill slip through the Senate without fight, believing they could get about what they wanted from a conference "compromise."

If the banking conferees named by Garner fail to concede enough, the issue can be forced back on the Senate floor for a vote. After 20 days of inaction, it is permissible to ask for appointment of new conferees.

The Perennial Argument

which seven amendments to the state constitution are to be voted upon. The amendments are briefly:

- 1— Old age pensions.
  - 2— Temporary commitment of insane preliminary to trial by jury.
  - 3— Repeal of state prohibition.
  - 4— Submission of amendments at special sessions of the state legislature.
  - 5— Suspended sentence authority of the courts.
  - 6— Abolishing fee system.
  - 7— Free text books in private and parochial schools.
- How are you going to vote? Are you going to scratch every other one, or are you going to inform yourself as to what each means before making a mark on your ballot? Some of the amendments are tricky as to phrasing. Better look into it before you vote.

JAPAN TO BUILD AIR FORCE BY CIVILIAN FLYING, PLANE MAKING

TOKYO, Aug. 12 — With an initial expenditure of approximately $60,000,000 and annual appropriations of $1,000,000 a year thereafter, the Ministry of Communications hopes to turn Japan into a land of fliers and at the same time win world recognition in commercial aviation.

An elaborate program of civil aviation which includes linking Japanese domestic lines with routes connecting the countries of the world has been mapped.

Japan is definitely short of civilian fliers and privately owned planes. Because of the mountainous nature of the country, flying is more hazardous than in the United States. With the air mail and passenger routes spreading over the world, Japan wants a part in the operation of the network. More than anything else, it desires avoiding the charge of backwardness.

Most of the reported suspensions on the part of officialdom regarding the Pan-American trans-Pacific venture are imaginary. Officials do not minimize the importance of an American chain of air stations across the ocean. On the other hand they do not minimize the importance of fast mails and fast travel.

Officials likewise realize that civilian interest in flying has contributed greatly to these advances. Hence the Japanese plan.

The next Diet session undoubtedly will be asked to provide a fund sufficient to let the government give real encouragement to civil aviation.

To make flying practical and safe for civilians, a large number of emergency landing places will be provided. Schools for fliers will be organized as will flying clubs to keep interest alive.

Two Programs Linked
The civilian effort will go hand-in-hand with the five-year plan for improving the air defense.

The air defense program will cost some $25,000,000 for the five-year period but most of the money will be spent in building new fields, purchasing new equipment and strengthening air defense generally.

In designing the civilian the so-called "freedom" principal has been kept in mind. The freedom in this case is to make Japan independent of foreign manufacturers of airplanes.

Japanese manufacturers will receive every possible encouragement. Program Tentatively Drafted
The tentative draft of the program that is expected to meet approval at an early date follows:

1. Completion and extension of the national air routes. Readjustment of new air routes. Subsidy for the establishment of local air-dromes (30). Establishment of exclusive zones for emergency landings (15). Establishment of air beacons (12) and extension of routes.
2. Opening of regular international air service.
3. Training of crews—1,000 second class pilots, 400 first class pilots. Maintenance of crews; training of mechanics, 200; control of training institutes.
4. Control and encouragement of airplane manufacturing.
5. Establishment of an air laboratory.
6. Popularization of home - made planes.
6. Promotion of air industry.
7. Establishment of the wireless equipment for aviation.
8. Protection and promotion of airships. Technical study.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

SMOKELESS POWDER IS 'SMOKELESS,' NOT BECAUSE IT HAS NO SMOKE, BUT BECAUSE IT LEAVES NO SOLID RESIDUE. 12-25

ALTHOUGH the distance from Spitzbergen to the North Pole is about 800 miles, Lieutenant Bauendahl believed that it was possible to travel over the icy wastes by a suspension railway. After his first plan failed, he tried to reach the pole on a raft.

One of the best ways to boost the home town is to patronize the home stores. Every dollar that is spent outside of the town means a loss to the community. Progressive stores are a sign of a live town. The merchants are willing to do all in their power to help the community, but the people of the community must help them by trading at home.

Get the foolish idea out of your head that you can buy cheaper elsewhere. Just remember that the guarantee of the home town merchant is worth a great deal, especially if anything goes wrong with the article purchased. High class goods are sold about the same price everywhere, and going out of town to make the purchase will not save you a nickel.

Let the people patronize the stores of the community and let the merchants get back of the home town and do their part in bringing about a better feeling and help make their home town a better and bigger place.

night through the window of the cottage. How was she to know that there had never been other Dila Saunders, even at the university when he was protesting only his love for Jo Darien?

Her strong legs, tashing steadily in their whipcord breeches, had taken her far into the woods before she realized that now the sun was almost above the trees. Resolutely she turned and began retracing her steps along the path, watching every moss-grown trunk, every moving leaf, in an effort to keep her mind away from yesterday's events.

Tubby was on the veranda when Jo drew in sight of the inn. She had evidently been waiting, for she hurried down the slope to meet her friend.

"Good morning, Tubby," Jo cried gaily, masking her gloom. "I'd have asked you to go hiking with me—but I know how you like to sleep."

Tubby nodded. "Especially on mornings after a dance. What made you skip out so early last night? I stayed until the orchestra put their instruments away."

"I managed to take on a headache," Jo said. "I went out for a breath of air, but that didn't do any good. So I tried sleep."

"Well, you look fine this morning," Tubby told her. "By the way, I went up to your room a while ago and saw a notice on the door saying there was a special delivery letter for you at the desk."

"Special delivery letter? Oh, Tubby... I hope nothing's wrong at home..."

"That's not likely," said Tubby philosophically. "I never throw a fit unless it's a telegram."

Jo hurried to the desk and received the letter. As she had suspected, it was from Weston, and addressed in her father's familiar handwriting. Feverishly Jo slit open the envelope.

UNABLE to wait until Jo had finished the letter, Tubby burst out, "Anything wrong, Jo?"

Jo shook her head, hurriedly scanning the letter through. "No... it's good news, Tubby!" Smiling happily, Jo folded the letter and slipped it into the pocket of her jacket. "Dad got his job at the state house. The one he was planning on when he sold the store."

"Say, that's great!" Tubby eyed Jo speculatively. "That means you can go back to the university this fall. You should have saved enough here to just about—"

Jo was shaking her head. "No, Tubby. I don't think I want to go back... now."

The other was silent a moment. Then she said, "I can understand that, Jo. You're way ahead of us who are in school yet. You've found a place in the world—and none of us can know where the devil we're headed once the campus lets go of us."

"That's not it altogether," Jo said slowly. Then, smiling quickly, she added, "But let's have some breakfast, Tubby."

They found the dining room crowded with the movie company. Drann and the principals—except for Fragonet—were at one table, and the technical crew grouped around several square tables which had been shoved together. They were all talking ceaselessly, and all seemed excitedly glad that their location work was over and the familiarity of Hollywood was imminent once again.

"I wonder," mused Tubby as she and Jo found a small table, "where your boy friend is?"

"If you mean Fragonet," Jo said lightly, "I'm sure I don't know."

"He's been keeping very much out of sight since that day he let Miss Montez slip into the lake."

Jo shot Tubby a disapproving glance. "Can't we talk about something pleasant, Tubby?"

"Sure... let's talk about what we're going to have for breakfast."

BEFORE they had finished Silas Drann sauntered over to their table to bid them goodby. Jo was vastly amused at Tubby's discomfort, for she knew that Drann had danced almost exclusively with Tubby the evening before—and she could only imagine the trend of the frank and eccentric Drann's conversation. When he had taken himself off, Tubby gave vent to a prolonged sigh.

"That man worries me to death when he's around," Tubby confessed. "I never know what he's going to say next."

"I should think," remarked Jo, "that would be delightful. With most men you know perfectly well what they're going to say next."

"Sa-ay... you've certainly taken on a load of disillusionment the past few days, Jo Darien!"

"Perhaps it's time. Perhaps I've been just a silly young fool of a girl, Tubby."

But Tubby shook her head dubiously. She didn't like to see Jo so bitter, so set against everything. It wasn't, she knew, the true Jo Darien. Tubby wondered what had happened now; and she wondered, too, if something might happen soon to shake Jo loose from her bitterness. Tubby had her own ideas about what that something would be, but she kept her own counsel this morning. Her friend hadn't been very open to advice or suggestions recently.

As she sat trying to think of something which might lift Jo from her mood, Babs Montgomery came fitting into the dining room and caught sight of the two girls instantly. Babs nodded brightly to Jo's "Good morning" and gave not the slightest heed to the obvious fact that Tubby's greeting was entirely noncommittal.

"Mind if I join you?" Babs asked cheerfully.

"Please do," Jo invited, wondering at the other girl's suddenly cordial attitude.

"I'm not sure I can really eat anything," Babs told them, laughing. "You see, I'm rather excited—after last night." She shrugged, taking up the menu. "But I suppose it will wear off after a while."

Tubby made a queer sound within her throat. "I stayed at the party until the janitor came in, and I didn't see anything unusual last night. At least nothing that would make me lose my appetite for breakfast. Give us the lowdown, Babs."

"Oh, of course it might not seem important to you two," Babs said. "But it's important to me—and to Douglas."

"Douglas?" repeated Tubby maddeningly. "You mean Mr. Marsh?"

"Of course. You see," Babs leaned forward confidentially, "we're going to be married!"

Communists Resent Error In Capitalist Geographies' Portrayal of Soviet Scenes

By JOSEPH H. BAIRD
United Press Staff Correspondent
MOSCOW, August 13 — Tea samovars instead of tractors, the Winter Palace instead of Lenin's tomb—these "errors" in illustrating sections of modern foreign geographies portraying the Soviet Union today are arousing the ire of Communist critics. And the texts of the books are similarly wrath-provoking.

Nothing annoys a Communist more than having the Soviet Union portrayed abroad as a colorful but backward country, in other words, as the Russia of Tsarist times. That is what Izvestia, the government's leading organ, believes several recent geographies have done. "We understand the difficult position of those who write geography textbooks in bourgeois countries," Izvestia said. "First, one after another, are pictured all respectable countries whose citizens believe in God and capitalism. It is easy and pleasant to write about them. But what can they tell youth about that indecent country—the U. S. S. R.? Yet it is not easy to ignore it, for it occupies one-sixth of the world's surface."

Danish Book Pointed Out
Especially annoying Izvestia found a recent Dutch geography which as a primary insult preferred to call this country "European Russia" instead of the Soviet Union and then described the 1917 revolution in the following terms: "A revolution happened in Russia during the World War. The Tsar was put off his throne and a new government was introduced under which the power was transferred into the hands of workers as no one but the workers received political or civil rights.... This is called Communism."

Editors Greatly Disturbed
Having in mind the large amount of construction which has been carried out in Leningrad during recent years, the editors of Izvestia did not appreciate this last remark either. Next in line for criticism came a new American geography whose author called this country the U. S. S. R. and explained that it was composed of seven constituent republics, but offended in other ways. He described Moscow as having an "oriental look" (which few foreigners would dispute); the Kremlin as "the place where the Tsars were crowned" (which is true enough); and Leningrad as "previously the capital of Russia" (which is indisputable). But Izvestia intimated, he might have added something about Moscow's civic improvement program and its heavy industry; a few lines to the effect that the Kremlin is the seat of Soviet administrative power; and perhaps a mention of the industrial advancement of Leningrad.

Pictures Not Appreciated
But the American author was thanked, with an undertone of sarcasm, for not altogether destroying Leningrad as the Dane had done. However, the author was not thanked for his illustrations, which he explained were "typical views" of the country. Two photographs were used to illustrate the Soviet Union—the Winter Palace in Leningrad, former seat of Tsarist power, and the interior of an inn where a group of strange figures in Oriental dress were gathered about a samovar drinking tea. Izvestia received no comfort from the fact that while Germany was represented by a factory and a port, "but we by a palace and a pub."

JAPAN SEEKS EXPORT TRADE NOW CHINESE

TOKIO, Aug. 13. — Forcing some 5,000,000 Chinese merchants out of business in countries where they have prospered and replacing them with Japanese merchants who would sell Japanese goods, is one of the plans advocated by Isamu Hishinuma, chief of the trade section of the Ministry of Commerce and Industry, to increase Japan's export trade.

While an increase in the number of Japanese merchants in all countries is advocated as a general policy for expanding commerce, Hishinuma points out that if native merchants in those countries are forced out of business, unemployment with ill feeling will follow.

Therefore, he argues, it will be better to replace the Chinese and prevent such results. He makes it clear that since the Manchukuo incident, Chinese merchants in the Netherlands Indies, the South Seas, Central and South America no longer handle Japanese goods. They handle the goods of the country in which they live or goods made in China or some foreign country.

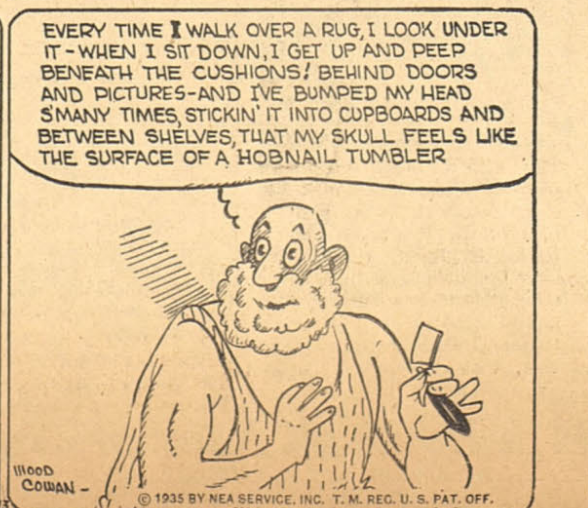

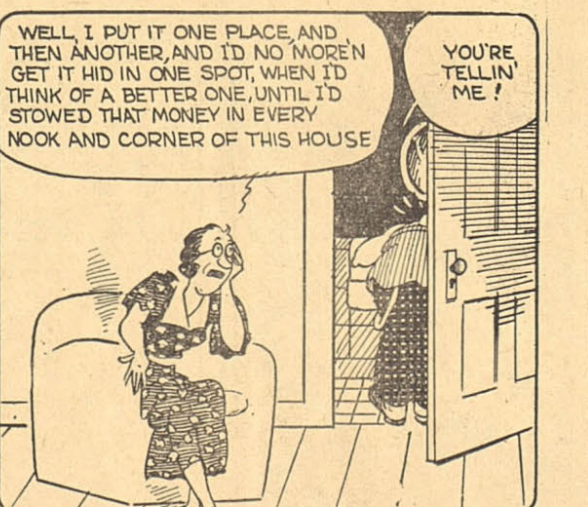

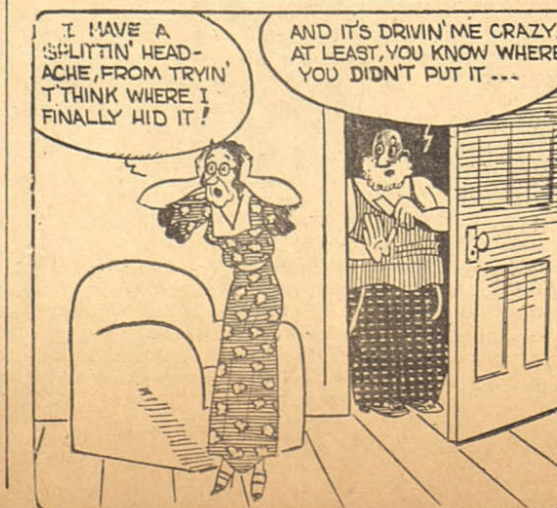

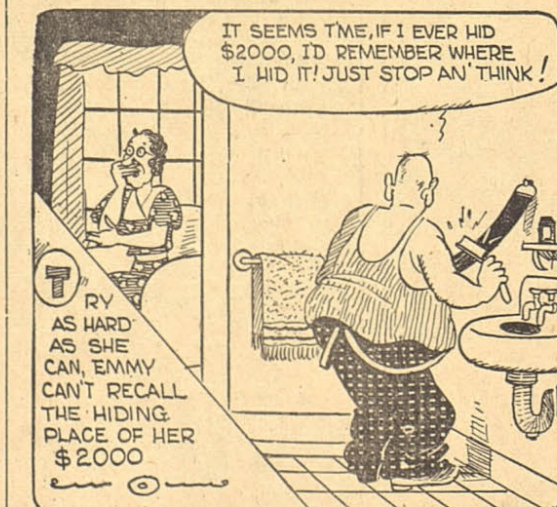

Remittances of Chinese merchants to the homeland is no small item. Hishinuma says. He advocates and honest methods to obtain this goal and would have the Japanese "oust" Chinese merchants. Such procedure, he adds, would have at the start, the favorable attitude toward Orientals which the Chinese already have built up.

Other methods favored by Hishinuma include avoidance of foreign antagonism, exportation of capital to found overseas industries where they will not compete with local factories and collecting export fees to help make up the losses incurred through purchasing foreign goods as a measure to balance trade where necessary.

HAWAII FORMS CIVILIANS INTO DEFENSE UNIT

By ED MORGAN
United Press Staff Correspondent
HONOLULU, Aug. 13 — Army officials are preparing quietly to instruct civilians in the problems of defense.

Protection of Hawaii presents a peculiar situation since an attack might cut the islands off from the mainland entirely, forcing them to rely indefinitely on their own forces and supplies.

MaJ. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commandant of the Hawaii Department largest army concentration in America, has ordered the creation of a "service command," authorized under the National Defense Act of 1916, for the purpose of correlating military and civilian agencies in case of emergency.

"If an emergency arose, the problems of various local defenses largely would be up to the respective communities," Drum said, explaining that the service command would work with civic officials and industrial leaders to coordinate the framework of defense.

For defense purposes the Hawaiian archipelago must be considered as a unit for two important reasons, Drum told the United Press.

1. The speed and range of present-day fighting planes naturally would move the first line of defense outward, thus binding all the islands to an aerial frontier.

2. Routes must be kept open to outside islands for food supplies, since Oahu, Maui and Hawaii, Hawaii's army and navy protection line could not produce enough for its own consumption particularly in wartime.

Following a detailed personal survey of the archipelago by land and air, Drum said he was agreeably surprised by Hawaii's facilities both for producing food and for temporary military fortifications.

Diversified Crops Raised
On the vast acreages of Maui, Hawaii and Kauai he found an amazing variety of crops being raised, ranging from such tropical products as coffee and bananas to potatoes and melons. Even wheat has been grown on some sections of Maui and could be cultivated if necessary.

Drum particularly examined the terrain for possibilities of emergency airplane landing fields. Outside islands have several areas used irregularly for landing fields but most of them would have to be lengthened and the surface improved to accommodate fast Army planes, he said.

Air Defense Important
The general admitted planes would play an increasingly important part in Hawaii's defense pattern, pointing out the projected $18,000,000 airbase adjacent to Fort Kamehameha as evidence of that.

He stressed the importance of Hawaii's two National Guard regiments. "It is desirable that the National Guard be used as a nucleus of local defense," he said, indicating it was tied in with his plans for the service command.

This command, which will have sections in each of the four islands of Oahu, Maui, Hawaii and Kauai, as well as at Department Headquarters, became effective on Aug. 1, headed by Lieut. Col. James A. Ullo, aide-de-camp to Gen. Drum.

SISTER MARY'S RECIPES

BY MARY E. DAGUE
NEA Service Staff Writer

SHRIMP salad served on a bed of fresh, spring looking cress, proved to be one of the most inviting looking luncheon dishes on which I have hit this Lenten season. And it has the advantage of being a quick dish to compile on the first balmy day when you're in a hurry to get out into the sunshine a while yourself.

While on this subject of shrimp and Lent, let me remind you that there are many other varieties of seafood that lend themselves to appetizing combinations. Smoked and salted fish as well as canned and fresh fish can be used to splendid advantage in salads.

Use Firm-Fleshed Fish
Fish for salad must be firm-fleshed—cod, halibut, haddock and salmon separate into firm flakes. Scallops, shrimp, crabmeat and lobster are favorites for party salads.

I think that a successful fish salad depends on the first thoroughly marinating the flakes in lemon juice. At least an hour is needed for marinating.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Pine apple juice, cereal, cream, bread, crumb omelet, toast, milk, coffee.
LUNCHEON: Bouillon, toasted crackers, shrimp salad, pumpernickle, apricot crisp, milk, tea.
DINNER: Vegetable loaf with tomato sauce, baked beets, salad of cottage cheese and chives, rhubarb pudding, milk, coffee.

The other ingredients are less important than seasoning. Celery and capers improve the flavor immensely. Finely shredded cabbage is excellent to mix with cod haddock, halibut and scallops.

Shrimp and Cucumber Salad
If fresh shrimp are used plunge them in the shell in boiling salted water and boil for 12 to 15 minutes. Cool. Cut the thin shell with a pointed knife and remove the round tail which is the part good to eat.

Unless shrimp are quite large, leave them whole. Sprinkle with lemon juice and let stand on ice, closely covered, for an hour or more.

Combine 2 cups shrimps with 1 cup diced cucumber, fold in 4 tablespoons heavy mayonnaise and serve on a bed of crisp cress.

Blames Hatless Fad For Baldness

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Aug. 13. —Young men anxious to keep hair on their heads should wear hats, is the opinion of Charles W. Eldridge, St. Petersburg's oldest citizen and czar of the famous Three Quarter Century club, who celebrated his 104th birthday anniversary recently.

Asked for longevity rules, Eldridge answered with a curt, "Keep your hat on and don't worry." He said there was a mistaken impression that bald heads resulted in hair growth.

"The head should be bared no longer than the rest of the body," he said. "Benefits from the sun's actinic rays are to be obtained within 20 minutes. I have seen tars in the old days who made the mistake of going about hatless who lost their hair within a year. Salts who wore head covering kept their locks."

Eldridge said that early deaths were brought about by worry.

The centenarian is alone in the world. He has survived three children and three wives. Eldridge

Police at Buffalo Aid Drunk Driver

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 13 — If any motorist in Buffalo has too much to drink and feels he is not capable of driving home, all he has to do is call the police department. It will see that the driver gets home, and that his automobile is delivered, too, all without expense.

Capt. Joseph J. Godfrey, chief of the traffic division, revealed that an autoist called in and advised him he was too drunk to drive his car home.

"I figured such an honest man should be given extra consideration, and I saw to it that he and his car arrived home safely," Godfrey said. "And I'll do the same thing again when called upon."

Mr. Owen was lavish in his praises of what we have in Cisco. We far surpass Waco, he says, in a swimming pool and a delightful climate. He is planning his next vacation at our lake, he says. And he will tell others about our recreational advantages here and the fine hospitality of our citizens, whom he said were greeting each other at the lake last night, calling each other by given names in the finest spirit of comradeship he ever saw manifested anywhere.

He says his name for Cisco would be the "Friendly City." He wants to hurry back.

Jensen to be away up at Leon Maners. We're found out why he is so red headed. We caught him buying red hair oil the other day. We're investigating those freckles now.
