Critics should let Lieberman speak his faith

Well, it took a bit of time, but it finally happened. A Democrat has been criticized for being too religious.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman of Connecticut made history several weeks ago when he became the first Orthodox Jew to be nominated for vice president by a major party. The senator, who is by all accounts a man of deep personal convictions, was chosen as Al Gore's running mate to help distance the current vice president from the impeached president. It was considered something of a minor miracle when Lieberman was selected, and he's been praising God ever since.

When conservatives bring up God in the political arena, they are consistently and quickly labeled as members of the Religious Right - an extreme set of wackos with political ties to a "vast right-wing conspiracy." During the Republican primary debates earlier this year, Gov. George W. Bush was promptly raked over the coals when he said Jesus Christ was his favorite political philosopher.

There has been a double standard with Democrats, however. Members of what could be called the Religious Left can get away with almost anything. Rev. Jesse Jackson, Rev. Al Sharpton, and Louis Farrakhan can spew all kinds of venom with nothing being said about it. Al Gore can stand before a congregation and preach an old-fashioned hellfire and brimstone sermon, and that's peachy keen with liberals.

But last week the Anti-Defamation League (ADL) had its fill of Lieberman's spiritual remarks after he told a Detroit congregation, "As a people, we need to reaffirm our faith and renew the dedication of our nation and ourselves to God and God's purpose." He also said morality can't be maintained without religion.

In a letter to Lieberman, the ADL said, "... language such as this risks alienating the American people... As this campaign unfolds, we urge you to keep in mind that public profession of religious beliefs should not be an elemental part of this or any other political campaign."

The ADL was founded in 1913 to fight anti-Semitism; and according to a press release from the group, it supports religious expression... to an extent.

"Candidates should feel comfortable explaining their religious convictions to voters," ADL leaders said in the release. "At the same time, however, we believe there is a point at which an emphasis on religion in a political campaign becomes inappropriate and even unsettling in a religiously diverse society such as ours."

The ADL admits on its web site that it is impossible to determine exactly when a candidate has crossed the line, but the group says it will always speak up when it happens. It's sort of a "we know it when we see it" philosophy.

Apparently the ADL thinks it's okay for candidates for public office to be people of faith as long as they don't talk about it too much.

Another group was harsher in its criticism of Lieberman. The Freedom From Religion Foundation sent the senator a letter that called up images of Salem witch-hunts and death penalties for heretics as examples of religion being involved in politics.

"You are not running for rabbi," the letter said. "You are running for vice president of all the people, including those of us who have a constitutionally protected right to be free from religion."

The members of the Freedom From Religion Foundation espouse that the United States was not in any way founded on a belief in God. That, of course, is incorrect.

While the US was not set up as a "Christian nation," as many folks think, neither was it set up as an "anti-Christian" or "anti-Jewish" or "anti-Muslim" nation. The Founding Fathers did believe in God and did recognize that our inherent natural rights come from God.

The Constitution insures that no person should have to take a religious test to hold public office, and the First Amendment prohibits the Federal government from establishing a national religion. Nothing in that great document guarantees anyone the right to be free "from" religion, and there is no authority granted to stamp out religious expression in public forums. The American people represent a multitude of faiths and religious backgrounds, and they are all protected by the Constitution.

Unless someone is advocating something extreme (i.e. human sacrifice or mass suicide), the faith of candidates for office should not be an election issue. Sen. Lieberman should be free to talk about his beliefs all he wants to - even on the campaign trail.

And other Americans should feel free to talk about and exercise their faith as well - even at football games.

Meanwhile...

Children in New Zealand who want to play cops and robbers or cowboys and Indians must now have a license to carry toy guns.

Ananova.com reports the licenses, modeled on real permits, were implemented after school age kids kept staging the pretend gunfights despite rules against them.

Children must justify their need for a toy gun and agree to abide by certain rules before a permit is granted. Kids under the age of four who request a permit will have their parents notified.

Where is freedom in the income-tax debate?

By Jacob G. Hornberger

The debate over income-tax cuts between George W. Bush and Al Gore reflects how far Americans have plunged in their understanding of what it means to be free. If elected president, Bush proposes to cut income taxes by $1.3 trillion. Gore is calling the plan "a tax cut for the rich" and has proposed his own $500 million tax cut that purports to target the American middle class. The squabble over the details obscures the real issue that the American people should be reflecting upon - the meaning of human freedom.

When the Constitution called the federal government into existence in 1787, it failed to provide it with the power to levy taxes on income. This was not an oversight. It was commonly understood that freedom entailed the absolute right to keep everything you earned. If government had the power to take the fruits of your earnings, Americans once believed, then your position was no different than that of a slave.

That notion had been implicitly expressed 11 years before in the Declaration of Independence when Thomas Jefferson wrote that people were endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights and that among these rights were life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

Each individual is born with certain talents, qualities, characteristics, and handicaps. In order to sustain his life, he uses his own personal abilities to either produce the necessities of life himself or acquire them by entering into mutually beneficial exchanges with others. The product of these exchanges constitutes income to the person engaging in them. Thus, income rightfully belongs to the person who has earned it because it is a direct result of the value that others place on the abilities that he brings to market.

For example, consider an opera singer who doesn't know anything about growing food. She offers her particular talents in the marketplace - singing in operas - and people pay to listen to her. That money rightfully belongs to her because her voice belongs to her. She takes that money - her income - and enters into exchanges with those whose talents lie in producing and selling food, clothing, and the like.

What's important to note is the revolutionary nature of American society that lived and prospered without income taxation for more than 125 years. Throughout history, governments had claimed the authority to tax or confiscate any and all of a person's income. Historically, people didn't question this power because the common belief among the citizenry was that government was supreme and the citizen was subordinate.

The Declaration of Independence and the Constitution inverted that historical relationship between government and citizen. For the first time in history, people restrained the power of government to seize any or all of their income. Thus, for more than 125 years, the American people, unlike all other people in history, were free to accumulate unlimited amounts of wealth, and there was nothing their government could do about it.

Therefore, it is impossible to overstate the revolutionary significance of the Sixteenth Amendment, which was enacted in 1913 and which granted the federal government the power to levy taxes on income. From that point on, the relationship between government and citizen was inverted back to the age-old model of government as sovereign and citizen as servant. Because what mattered was not whether the particular percentage of the tax was high or low but rather that government had the power to set the percentage.

For example, let's assume that I have the power to force you to work for me and that I exercise that power by requiring you to work 24 hours a day, 365 days a year, for me. You would acknowledge that our relationship would be one of master and slave.

But suppose I decide to be nice and force you to work only two hours a day for me, four months a year. Has our relationship been changed? Not in the least. You are still my slave because I have the authority to determine the amount of time you are required to serve me.

And this is the situation in which the American people are now mired. By having the power to set the percentage of tax to be levied on income, the federal government is now in the position of master and the American people are in the position of servant. Everyone's income is now effectively owned by the government; and, because the government has the power to adjust the percentage of tax to be paid, what people are permitted to retain is actually just an allowance that the master provides the servants.

The tragedy is compounded by misconceptions about the nature of freedom. As the great German thinker Johann Goethe once pointed out, no person is more enslaved than one who falsely believes he is free.

Mr. Hornberger is president of The Future of Freedom Foundation (www.fff.org) in Fairfax, Va., publisher of Your Money or Your Life: Why We Must Abolish the Income Tax by Sheldon Richman.

US should ensure rural health care access

Seeing a doctor for a broken bone... Taking a child in for an annual physical... Getting your prescription updated... For many people around the country, having access to this kind of medical care is something they've come to expect.

But for many people who live in rural areas, simply being able to be treated locally without having to travel long distances for care is something they can't take for granted and something they can't afford to lose.

I can think of few other issues more pressing for our area than to fix some of the problems facing rural health care. Simply put, I have a real concern that a lot of hospitals will not survive unless Washington comes up with some real relief.

Last year, Congress got the president to agree to put some more money into rural health care. But clearly, more needs to be done.

I've been working as one of six Steering Committee Members of the Rural Health Care Coalition in the House of Representatives on these and other priorities and remain hopeful that we'll get a vote on a relief package before the end of the year.

It's easy to make the case that more needs to be done to strengthen rural health care. The challenge is getting anybody to listen.

It's all the more difficult when you consider that fewer and fewer members of Congress are coming from rural areas. That's why it's more important than ever that those of us from rural areas speak with one voice when it comes to making sure health care remains accessible and affordable.

During the years that the YFW and its Ladies Auxiliary have been involved with the Voice of Democracy, more than 7 million high school students have participated. Interested students need only write and record a three to six minute audio-essay while expressing their view of the patriotic theme "What Price Freedom?"

"Young people who participate in the contest benefit by gaining a better understanding of their country, their freedoms, and their obligation to America," said Chairman Bill Holden.

All state winners receive at least a $1,000 National Scholarship but could win a $25,000 first place award. A total of $139,500 in National Scholarships are awarded to student national finalists. Local winners will receive a savings bond from the Donley County Post and its Ladies Auxiliary. The deadline date for student entry in November 1, 2000.

Applications can be obtained from the high school offices or by contacting the VOD chairman Bill Holden at 874-3813. Home school students and students from surrounding high schools may also participate.

Drought: Dry weather has hampered Texas for five years

the first frost. If this does not occur, ranchers will be facing another costly feeding cycle through the fall and winter this year, according to Extension beef specialists.

Meanwhile, the Texas cotton crop was planted on 6.3 million acres this spring, with many expecting above average yields. Only the state's earliest cotton acres were able to escape the devastating summer drought.

The lower Rio Grande Valley, the lower and upper coast region, and the Central Texas Blacklands produced an average crop that totals close to 1 million bales.

High temperatures of 100 degrees or more and a lack of rainfall have caused a substantial setback across 5 million acres of cotton planted in the Rolling Plains and Southern High Plains of West Texas. With less than 2 million acres irrigated, the 3 million acres of dryland cotton in the region have suffered significant losses. Extension economists report.

An estimated 1 million acres had already been lost by the beginning of August, according to the Texas Agricultural Statistics Service.

In the Rolling Plains, 1 million acres of cotton stretching south from the Red River to near Abilene are expected to be less than half the usual 300 pounds of lint per acre. Cotton losses in the Rolling Plains are expected to be at least 250,000 bales, valued at $75 million.

The Southern High Plains region stretching from San Angelo to Big Spring, Lubbock into New Mexico also has been hit hard by high temperatures. A lack of sufficient rainfall last winter failed to build sub-soil moisture. Losses in the Southern High Plains are estimated at 700,000 bales, valued at $210 million. These estimates do not include likely losses in fiber quality, such as a shorter staple length, due to moisture stress.

Of the $285 million in cotton losses, Anderson said the economic impact felt by rural communities and agribusinesses could reach $600 million.

"Government payments will be very welcomed (by the cotton farmers)," Anderson said. "We've been in continuous drought. Most producers haven't had time to catch up, and the market price last year was so weak. The market is better now, but it's not going to show much in the pockets of producers because of the way the loan deficiency payments work. Any programs that might be added for disaster reasons would be welcomed."

Drought conditions have hampered Texas agricultural production four out of the past five years. The 1996 drought resulted in $2 billion in producer losses while the 1998 drought led to $2.1 billion in producer losses. The 1999 drought resulted in $223 million in producer losses.

Rampaging bear breaks into relatives' home

I think everybody in Clarendon must have left town for Labor Day. Or almost everybody. The ones who didn't leave town had folks come in to visit, so I imagine the population of Clarendon didn't change much. Still, things seemed a bit sparse in downtown Clarendon on Saturday and in the church parking lots on Sunday. They seemed pretty sparse on Friday, for that matter.

Those few who stuck around town seemed to spend the holiday much like we did, perfecting their vegetable imitations. Couch potato. Sofa carrot. Recliner radishes. Something about those root vegetables suggests immobility. Frankly, it was too dang hot to do much of anything. Y'all pray for rain. The farmers can't get water on their crops fast enough.

My parents did come in on their trek from Colorado back to Austin and had quite a story to share. Seems that while the relatives were enjoying a dinner together there in Colorado, my aunt and uncle had left the kitchen window open at their house down the mountain. A bear decided to help itself to dinner in their house, shredded the screen door and the window screen, and climbed in. It ate everything on the counters, ripped the refrigerator door off, bit off the tops of jelly jars to get at the contents, and generally trashed the kitchen. Then the phone rang.

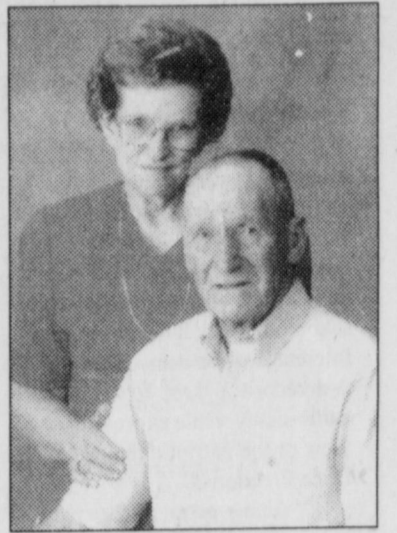

The bear panicked, ran the wrong way, and started hunting for an exit. After all, it had eaten pretty much everything it could find to eat. So it went into the great room, ripped down the new curtains, and tried to get out the window. No luck. It went into the bedroom, tore up more curtains, more window screens, muddied and scratched up the walls, and still couldn't get out. Mr. Bear pretty much rampaged through the whole downstairs of the house before he finally got back out the way he got in. They called in the Parks and Wildlife fellow who set up a trap, and the bear was caught the next night. They said the drought had driven the bears down out of the high mountains, and there are a lot more houses for them to raid. Stories like these make me grateful that we only have to deal with hungry deer and coyotes when the drought starts to bite. I did see a coyote sprint across Hwy. 287 the last time I went to the Big City. They're bad enough. But they never seem to want to come inside and help themselves to the contents of your refrigerator.

Though we do have our own version of rampaging wildlife. Just ask Joe Robinson. Before the buffalo were moved, he told Ruth one day that he'd seen the buffalo herd. When Ruth asked where they were going, Joe replied "Anywhere they want." Right through the fences.

Fences are one thing. My front door is something else.

Henry and Nadine Hastey

Hastey to celebrate wedding anniversary

Henry and Nadine Hastey of Route 2, Hedley, are celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday, September 16, with a reception at the Clarendon Community Center.

Hosts for the event are the children of the couple.

Henry married the former Nadine Stone on September 15, 1950, in Turkey, Texas. The couple previously resided in Quitaque and Plainview. They have lived in the Clarendon area since 1967 and have been engaged in farming.

Treacherous typewriter betrays Hedley columnist

I can't believe my typewriter could be so treacherous. I knew it didn't always write what I wanted it to, but to say such a thing as it said in last week's ENTERPRISE is unbelievable. It wrote that I could walk a block in half an hour. Saturday morning I walked fourteen blocks in fifteen minutes.

Dr. D.H. Cox, who used to practice medicine in Hedley, told me once that sixteen city blocks equaled a mile. I think that's pretty good for a little old lady like me.

I read with interest Cynthia Hall's remarks about making it rain. It reminded me of a song I heard once about a rainmaker. He did the stuff he thought would make it rain. When it didn't, the towns people hanged him...and walked home in the rain. Cynthia, let's find a rainmaker or plan a huge cookout, invite everybody within miles, line all our cars up and wash them, and spray all our plants. Then watch it rain.

When it finally does rain, if it rains much, all the creeks will flood and wash the trash out along the watercourses. Every water gap along the creeks will wash out. Keith, along with everyone with water gaps, will be busy for days replacing them. I doubt they'll mind much.

My Post kids were in Memphis and Hedley during the long weekend. Linda and Leon Couch, along with Langly and Mariah, of Linda's sister's wedding. Langly was an usher, and Mariah served cake during the reception.

I guess I'm mellowing in my old age or getting used to living on Main Street, Hedley. The noise the kids make driving up and down doesn't bother me any more. In fact, I hardly notice it, and it sounds pretty good. Kids have driven up and down the street for fifty years that I can remember. Its been almost fifty years since Allen Cope and I, along with others who shall remain nameless, made the drag till all hours on Friday and Saturday nights.

I talked with Allen recently, and he reminded me of some of the things we did. He'd ask if I was with them the night such and such happened. Of course I tried to deny being there, but he remembered.

By the time I was old enough to stop doing things like that, my own kids were almost old enough. Now

I have grandchildren old enough, if they lived here.

I heard Kelly Rieken tell Leon last night that it sure didn't take long for a man to get old. I'd rather phrase it a little differently.

I'd say, "Kids don't stay little long enough."

I talked with Juanita Brown, and she told me that her son, Johnny Brown, and his wife, Kay, of May, Texas, were here during the weekend to move her daughter, Kay Miller, to May. She has lived in Clarendon for several years.

Grace Burkhalter has flown off to Austin to celebrate a birthday with her grandchildren there. I'm not sure if I'd call her lucky or not. It's humid as well as hot there. At least here we don't have to deal with much humidity.

New Arrivals

Guys should stop trying to figure women out

I had an interesting conversation with my daughter the other day. She was upset over an argument she had with her boyfriend.

"I yelled at him, and then I hung up on him," she told me. "I don't even know why I was mad at him. He didn't do anything!"

I knew immediately what the problem was. She is female. Women do not always have reasonable explanations for their actions, and many a good man has gone slowly crazy trying to figure out what makes us tick.

It's sort of like when your children were small and would start to fight.

"Mommy make him stop!"

"What's he doing to you?"

"He's looking at me!"

Women can be just like that - at least I know I am. There are some days when my husband awakes - gets out of bed - and discovers that sometime in the night, I became angry with him.

His first clue about my mood is when he says "Good Morning!", and I never respond. He will always give it another try.

"What are your plans for today, dear?"

"Why? I suppose you have a list a mile long of things you want me to do for you, right? Just once I would like a whole day to do nothing. But nooooo...that would never do, would it? Men - you are all just alike!"

My husband, being a long-time veteran of the Man/Woman Wars, knows immediately that this is a no-win situation. However, being a brave soul, he tries to take the bull by the horns.

"Are you mad at me?" he asks.

"Well, what do you think?" is my reply.

"I'd say it's a safe bet that something is wrong. What did I do?"

Now, he knows better than to ask that question, but he always does. I guess he keeps thinking that eventually he will receive a reasonable answer. He never does.

"If you don't know what's wrong, I'm certainly not going to tell you."

That statement makes a lot of sense, doesn't it?

At that point, my husband will kiss the top of my angry head and disappear out into the yard. As I mentioned, he is a veteran, and he knows that my anger will disappear as mysteriously as it arrived. He doesn't try to find the logic in it because he understands the one crucial fact: I am a woman, and sometimes I can be downright irrational!

My daughter's boyfriend is still young. He will learn in time that when a female doesn't make any sense, there are a few basic rules to follow: 1. Don't ask her what's wrong. You won't get the answer you want to hear because the truth is that she doesn't really know the answer herself. 2. Go away and give her some time alone. It's also good to bring her a flower when you come back. 3. Keep on loving her. She'll come back from the "anger zone" eventually.

Don't try to figure us out, guys! Spend your time solving a easy puzzle, like how God created a woman from a piece of bone!

"The test includes 200 multiple-choice questions and covers 33 major competency areas of law and skill."

The play focuses on the Buckle brothers, Billy and Tom, who are in big trouble. Tom's infallible eye for slow horses has drained away all of Billy's savings so he had been forced to borrow from loan shark, Pizza Face Petrillo, who now wants his money back or else. There's plenty of money in grandfather Buckle's will, but these two black sheep are pretty sure they'll never see any of that. What else to do but dress Billy up as a nun and have him pose as their cousin who is to inherit the entire fortune? Involve a stuffy young lawyer, a hard-drinking, man-hungry housekeeper, and a trio of beautiful young women, and you have a recipe for a laugh-packed evening of twists, turns, puns, and pratfalls as Tom strives mightily to compensate for Billy's "habitual" errors.

Lady Bulldogs continue working on their timing

By Sandy Anderberg
The Clarendon College Lady Bulldogs traveled to Vernon to face Vernon Regional Junior College Tuesday, August 29. The CC women played hard but lost 9-15, 5-15, and 3-15. Statistics for this game were not available at press time.

The Lady Bulldogs played Otero Junior College and McCook College in LaJunta, Colo., on Saturday, September 2.

In the match with Otero, the Ladies lost 3-15, 13-15, and 3-15. Coach Reed noted that a low serving percentage made a big difference in the game.

"Our serving percent should be 90 or better. For this match it was 78%," said Reed. Also service receiving errors were high at 16.

Cassie Vaughn, a 5'8" outside hitter, led all kills with 9. Laquisha Washington added 5 kills, and freshman Brandie Cornelius had 4. Cecilia Moreno had 7 assists.

Play improved, however, in the match with McCook College out of Nebraska.

Scores for the match were 11-15, 13-15, and 11-15.

There were 21 kills, led by freshman Cassie Vaughn with 9. Shelly Miller hit 3 aces, helping her team to improve their serving to 87%. Service receiving errors were down from the previous match, which is part of Coach Reed's game plan.

Reed feels timing is still something the Lady Bulldogs need to work on.

"I'm pleased with our start," said Reed. "Everytime we can step on the court will help us to improve."

The Lady Bulldogs will play Redlands Community College and Lamar Community College at home Wednesday, September 6, at 5:00.

They will travel to Vernon Junior College on Tuesday, September 12, and will be in the Vernon Junior College Classic coming up on the 15th and 16th.

Good luck, Lady Bulldogs!

The Lion's Tale

By Allen Estlack

The Clarendon Lions Club held its regular Tuesday noon meeting September 5, 2000, with Boss Lion Stan Leffew conducting the meeting.

We had 15 members and seven guests: Ryan White of Amarillo and Mat Wortherspoon and Bob Thomson of Motherwell, Scotland, guests of Darrell Leffew; Russell Estlack, guest of Roger Estlack; and CHS coaches Roger Hoeltzel, David Towner, Joe Gifford, and Danny Brittain, guests of the club.

Lion Dr. Myles Shelton reported that it looks like Clarendon College will have a record enrollment system-wide this semester, and Lion Marvin Elam said Clarendon ISD had received a $75,000 grant for infrastructure improvements.

Our program was presented by Coach Hoeltzel, who introduced the new coaches and gave a preview of the upcoming football season. The Bronco staff has studied the strategies of 4A schools to help the Broncos compete with larger schools in our district. Hoeltzel said the boys have been working on their passing game and are focusing on blocking, tackling, and executing. There are only 36 boys in the high school football program. Sixteen of them are seniors.

There being no further business, the meeting was adjourned.

Crawdads caught on site make for good fishing bait

The heat was on this past Labor Day weekend! Lake Greenbelt was the place to be, and boy, the people covered the lake! Labor Day is the last summer holiday where the family can get out and spend an extended weekend.

I drove around Lake Greenbelt and saw a lot of people swimming, water skiing, and jet skiing. Oh yeah, there were a few people fishing. But by talking to the fisherman, the fishing was slow. It was just too hot. What I thought was amusing was most of the trees at Lake Greenbelt were shading the fisherman. Half of the people at the lake were praising the hot sun, and the other half were cussing it. I belong to the group that was cussing. I have had it with this heat. Enough is enough! I am ready for a blue norther to blow in from the Arctic and cool us off.

Anyway, I had the chance to go dove hunting near Hedley with three friends, but I passed up the offer. Hunting dove in 108 degree temperatures does not appeal to me. My friends went anyway. Two days of hunting and they shot 52 doves. I guess that was all right, but I wonder if those birds were half cooked by the time they cleaned them. I bet they could have been cleaned and placed on the hood of the vehicle, and they probably would have cooked in no time at all! Speaking of dove, the following is a recipe that I tried this weekend, and I think it is wonderful.

Recipe

Grilled Dove
Breast fillets of dove
Italian salad dressing
Lawry's Garlic seasoning

outdoor
Life
By Gary Dziezic

1 jar of sliced jalapenos
onion wedges
Roma tomato halves
bacon slices
wooden skewers
Combine Italian dressing and garlic seasoning and marinate dove fillets at least four hours before cooking. Soak wooden skewers in water. After marinating, alternate dove fillets with a jalapeno slice, onion wedge, and tomatoes on the wooden skewers. Wrap entire skewer from top to bottom with bacon slices. Use as many as it takes to cover the skewer completely. Place on a medium grill and cook until bacon starts to crisp. Do not overcook. This recipe also works well with geese fillets.

Fishing Tip of the Week

Find an area that has miscellaneous sizes of rocks that you can turn over and find crawdads. If you are in an area that has a lot of rocks and crawdads, fish these places with the crawdads you have caught early in the morning or late in the evening to catch a variety of fish.

If you have any information on outdoor activities that you would like to share, please contact me at P.O. Box 1281, Clarendon, TX 79226, or e-mail me at gdol@nts-online.net.

Catch a few fish for supper and release a few fish to ensure another great fishing day. Good luck!

Southwest Airlines offers free tickets to seniors

Southwest Airlines and the Area Agency on Aging of the Panhandle have announced the start of the 21st annual Home for the Holidays program, which will provide Panhandle seniors with complimentary tickets to visit family and friends over the holidays.

Over the years, the airline with the big heart has allowed thousands of seniors the opportunity to be reunited with family and friends during the holiday season.

Fifteen applicants from the Panhandle area will be selected to receive complimentary round-trip tickets based on their need for economic assistance and their reason for travel.

Camille Keith, Vice President of Special Marketing at Southwest Airlines, has nurtured the program through the years.

"I have been proud to watch the Home for the Holidays program grow tremendously as Southwest Airlines has expanded," said Keith, "and I am grateful for our loyal customers and hardworking employees that allow Southwest Airlines to continue to give back to the community."

Applications are available at senior centers across the Panhandle and by contacting the Area Agency on Aging at 1-800-642-6008.

To apply, a person must be 65 years of age or older and demonstrate a strong economic need. Southwest Airlines is sending senior citizens "Home for the Holidays" in each of the 56 cities they serve. Deadline for submission of applications is Friday, October 13, 2000.

I found buried treasure in my attic.

More than 40 years ago, Grandma gave you some Series E Savings Bonds.

So you put them in a safe place and forgot about them—until now. You were looking for old records, but you found an unexpected treasure instead... those old Series E Savings Bonds. And even though your old bonds are no longer earning interest, they could still be worth more than 5 times their face value. So why not put your money back to work? Redeem those old bonds for cash, or if they qualify, exchange them for Series HH Savings Bonds at your local financial institution. To find out more, call 1-800-4US BOND or write to Savings Bonds, Parkersburg, WV 26106-1328 and ask for a current values chart. Old Savings Bonds.

They're a treasure worth digging for.

Do you have old Savings Bonds? Check out the Savings Bond Calculator at www.savingsbonds.gov to discover their value.

* Pre-December 1965 Series E Savings Bonds stop earning interest at 40 years and those purchased after November 1965 stop at 30 years. A public service of this newspaper

CC library proclaims new year in September

By the College Bookworm

No, no, no. Although this year seems to be zipping by, it's not 2001 just yet. For the Clarendon College Library, however, so much is new that we may as well be unwrapping calendars and resetting date stamps.

Leading the "new" list is Library Director Jewel Austin. Two years ago Ms. Austin transferred from Clarendon College to take over the reins of the Frank Phillips College Library in Borger. This year we were able to persuade her to come back to Clarendon.

"It is good to be back in Clarendon," Austin said. "It's like coming home."

According to the new Library Director, the number one item on her agenda is planning for something else that qualifies as a very large "new."

"The first order of business for me is planning for a new college library building," Austin said.

From Santiago to Saints' Roost

Carolina Selvidge is another new face at the library. Carolina was born and raised in Santiago, Chili, and went to school at the University of Miami. Before moving to Clarendon (Saints' Roost) four months ago, Ms. Selvidge lived in Dallas.

"It was a big change coming here," she said. "This is the first time I have lived in a small town. It is a completely new environment for me."

She went on to say that the absence of gridlock traffic and the presence of people who always smile at you were the first changes she noticed.

Carolina will be a library assistant and will also work with the Dean of Students.

The remainder of the library staff consists of Assistant Librarian Annis Stavenhagen, a Clarendon native who is beginning her 13th year at the college library, and Bill Russell, a transplant from "back east" who is the library "night guy."

Assistant Librarian Jo Shaller was able to hornswoggle someone into believing she was of retirement age and will not be on staff this year. Her erudite perspicacity and unflinching good humor will be missed by staff and students alike.

Open Seven Days A Week

Along with a new semester and a new furniture arrangement, the College Library will be open new and expanded hours. Doors will be open from 7:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Monday through Thursday. On Fridays the library will once again open at 7:30 a.m. and will close at 4:00 p.m. On Saturday the library is open from 2:00 to 5:00 p.m. and again on Sunday evening from 4:00 to 9:00 p.m.

As always, the college library is open to the public, and visitors are welcome to come in and browse.

The Tip of the Book Iceberg

We are just beginning to unpack and catalog the new books that have arrived during summer vacation. Here are a quartet of fresh volumes now available:

The Indwelling by Tim LaHaye and Jerry B. Jenkins – the latest in the Left Behind series and a must read for series fans.

Off the Mangrove Coast by Louis L'Amour – nine adventure tales by the master storyteller, some of them long out of print.

Showers In Season by Beverly LaHaye and Terri Blackstone – follow up to their best-selling novel Seasons Under Heaven.

Gardening From Seed – this is a Martha Stewart Living Book written by Thomas Christopher and a great guide for raising plants that are "Pant-handle tolerant."

With all of these "new" things to write about in this first column of the new semester, it should be pointed out that at least some things remain the same – the friendly, helpful attitude of the staff and quiet enjoyment awaiting visitors to CC's Library.
