City orders house to be demolished.

By Roger Estlack, Clarendon Enterprise

A dilapidated house on Sixth Street must be moved or torn down following last Tuesday's regular meeting of the Clarendon Board of Aldermen.

City officials held a public hearing on the house at 719 W. Sixth after neighbors filed a complaint under the dangerous structure ordinance. The house is a haven for wild animals and is not structurally sound, they said.

"I'm sick and tired of it, and I think the neighbors are ready to do whatever it takes legally to get rid of it," said Grett Betts, whose house is just west of the property in question.

Heather King, whose property adjoins the house to the east, agreed with Betts and said kids are getting into the old house.

"There are kids that go in there all the time," King said.

The property owner has been notified of ordinance violations in the past, but city officials say that each time just enough is done to bring the house into compliance and then it is let go again.

Aldermen approved a motion 3-0 to declare the property a dangerous structure and notify the owner that it must be moved or torn down in 30 days. Aldermen Kyle Davis and Ann Huey abstained because of conflicts of interest.

City officials said if the owner does not comply with the order, the city will demolish the structure itself and attach a lien to the property.

In other city business, the oath of office was administered to newly re-elected Alderman Tommy Hill, and the board elected Alderman Chris Ford as Mayor Pro-tem.

A bid on tax delinquent property was approved as submitted by the Donley Appraisal District.

A new animal control ordinance and a teen curfew ordinance were approved on their first readings. Both issues must be approved a second time next week.

CEDC awards first storefront grant

By Roger Estlack, Clarendon Enterprise

The Clarendon Economic Development Corporation made its first award under its new Façade Grant Program this week.

Every Nook & Cranny received $1,055.20 following a review of that business' application at the regular CEDC Board meeting Monday night. CEDC President Steve Hall presented the check to store co-owner Terri Floyd Tuesday.

"I'm thrilled to get it," Floyd said. "Now we can do something else to make improvements."

Floyd and her partner Virginia Patten completed a renovation of their storefront at 208 S. Kearney last December, but the project still fit the guidelines of the grant program for this fiscal year.

Chris and Terri Ford of Finders Keepers redesigned and painted the storefront and installed antique ceiling tiles on part of the front.

"I just let them do their thing," Floyd said. "I was their guinea pig, and I am very happy with the results."

The new look has generated a lot of attention, she said.

"We've gotten a lot of compliments on it."

Every Nook & Cranny opened its doors as The Nook in 1977 and sells a wide variety of gifts, jewelry, and clothing.

The CEDC has budgeted $10,000 for this year's Façade Grant Program, which provides fifty-fifty matching grants up to a maximum of $2,000 per project for properties on a three-block stretch of Kearney Street between First and Fourth Streets.

Projects eligible for consideration could be anything from a coat of paint to new signage to a complete rehabilitation of a storefront.

The program will run through the close of this fiscal year, which ends September 30, 2008. The program's future will depend on its success this year.

Every Nook & Cranny submitted the first and only application since the program was approved in April. The CEDC Board will next meet to consider grant applications on July 7 at 5:15 p.m. in City Hall.

Museum exhibit celebrates pioneer newspaper

A newspaper exhibit will open at the Saints' Roost Museum this Friday to coincide with the 130th anniversary of THE CLARENDON ENTERPRISE.

The Texas Panhandle's first newspaper began as THE CLARENDON NEWS and published its first edition on June 1, 1878. The paper, which began as a monthly, has been published continuously since that time despite several name changes and changes in ownership.

The centerpiece of the new exhibit is an original copy of the second issue of the NEWS dated July 1, 1878, which had previously been owned by the Square House Museum in Panhandle but was transferred to the Saints' Roost Museum in 2006.

"We're very excited to display this piece of history," said publisher Roger Estlack. "It provides a glimpse at the daily lives of the colonists who settled in Old Clarendon."

Another highlight of the exhibit is a reproduction of the newspaper's first issue, which was obtained in 2006 from an antique book dealer in Pennsylvania. The original will be microfilmed by Texas Tech University.

"The first issue tells us a lot about the town, which was only a few weeks old at the time," Estlack said. "It gives us the exact date the settlers arrived, and shows the enthusiasm they had for their Christian colony."

The room also features reproductions of other early publications of the newspaper, an interesting relic

City curfew reactions are mixed

By Ashlyn Tubbs, Clarendon Enterprise

A proposed teen curfew has roused many different opinions from residents of Clarendon. This Teen Curfew Ordinance passed its first reading by the City Council, and they will review it again on Tuesday, June 10.

The proposed ordinance says kids ages 17 and under will not be out past 11:00 p.m. on any Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, or Thursday night until 6 a.m. the following day, and from 12:00 a.m. on any Saturday or Sunday until 6 a.m. of that same day. If the minor has committed an offense past curfew, upon conviction a fine that will not exceed $500 can punish them.

"We will issue warnings the first time the teen is caught who does not have a legitimate reason to be out after hours. The second time a citation will be issued," Sheriff Butch Blackburn said.

Blackburn has his reasons for why he proposed the Teen Curfew Ordinance in the first place.

"Our last spring break we had a lot of vandalism around Clarendon mainly due to young kids who were unsupervised by their parents. Underage kids from 8 - 10 years of age were out late past midnight," he said.

According to Blackburn, Clarendon won't be the only town around that has a teen curfew.

"I checked with several out of area towns that have a curfew, and they thought that it slowed down vandalism, and it gives us a legitimate reason to stop kids out late at night."

When asked her opinion on the teen curfew, 15-year-old Danielle Ford spoke her mind on the issue.

"I don't think that Clarendon needs a teen curfew because most kids here aren't that bad anyways. The good kids shouldn't be punished for what the bad kids do," she said.

City Secretary Linda Smith has a different opinion of the curfew, though.

"There has been a lot of vandalism at the city airport caused by young kids. It's been expensive to replace all the lights that have been broken out," Smith said.

Defenses will include youth accompanied by a parent or guardian, in a motor vehicle involved in interstate travel, engaged in an employment activity, involved in an emergency, on the sidewalk abutting their residence, and attending an official school, religious, or other recreational activity.

The city will review the teen curfew in six months.

How to solve pump pain

By Jerry Taylor, Cato Institute

Skyrocketing energy prices are hammering Americans. Five years ago this week, gasoline cost an average of $1.43 a gallon at the pump; this week, it's $3.94. And home electricity averaged 5.43 cents per kilowatt-hour in 2003; it was up to 10.31 cents in December. The underlying cause, of course, is that oil, coal and natural-gas prices have all gone berserk - with no relief in sight.

What to do? Individually, of course, most of us will start conserving - people are already driving less, buying more fuel-efficient cars, etc. We'll keep on finding ways to save as prices stay high.

Should the government mandate even more conservation? No, "too much" conservation is as economically harmful as "too little." Just consider the economic harm that would be delivered by, say, capping speed limits at 30 miles per hour, or banning recreational long-distance travel. Both would save gobs of energy - but at the cost of doing more harm than good.

The only thing government should do on this front is ensure that prices are "right" - that is, that they reflect total costs. That's mainly an issue for electricity, where retail power prices typically bear little relation to wholesale prices. State governments need to encourage real-time pricing of electricity - so that consumers will get the signal to, for example, run the clothes dryer at night, when power is cheaper.

(Incidentally, those who argue that gas and diesel prices don't reflect important "external" environmental and national-security costs are simply wrong - at best, those added costs are trivial on a per-gallon basis.)

But there's a fair bit to do on the supply side. Congress could take four positive steps - if it really wants to bring prices down.

Open up key areas for oil and gas exploration and development. Washington has declared the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge and 85 percent of the outer continental shelf off-limits. It's absurd for our politicians to fulminate about the need for more oil production from OPEC when they won't lift a finger to increase oil production here at home.

That said, it will take years to get these fields on-line (all the more reason to start now!) - and they'll do more for natural-gas prices than for oil.

By the time those new fields would be producing, global oil production will probably be about 100 million barrels per day. Optimistically, the fields would yield about 3 million more barrels a day - for a long-run cut in the price of crude of about 3 percent.

But US natural-gas reserves are almost certainly far greater - and gas prices are highly sensitive to regional (rather than global) supply and demand issues, so we'd likely see far greater reductions in electricity prices.

Open up the West to oil-shale development. The United States has three times more petroleum locked up in shale rock than Saudi Arabia has in all its proved reserves. But this US oil is costly to extract. Oil prices need to be at about $95 a barrel to allow a reasonable profit from extracting oil from Rocky Mountain shale.

Well, it's probably profitable now; there's undoubtedly great investor interest in harnessing shale. Only problem: It's mostly on federal land; Washington has so far said, "Hands off!"

Environmentalists object to both these first two ideas - insisting that the wilderness that would be despoiled by energy extraction is worth more than the energy itself. That's nonsense - faith masquerading as fact.

How much something is worth is determined by how much people are willing to pay for it. If these lands were auctioned off, energy companies (the market representatives of energy consumers) would outbid environmentalists for virtually all of them.

Empty out the Strategic Petroleum Reserve. This now holds 700 million barrels of oil; draining it could add up to 4.3 million barrels of crude a day to the market for about five months. That's nothing to sneeze at - it's about half of what the Saudis now pump and almost twice what Kuwait puts on the market.

At the very least, this would bring gasoline prices down. And if the theories of a speculator-created "oil bubble" are true (I doubt they are), it would pop the bubble and send prices tumbling.

What of the national-security risk? Another myth. As long as we're willing to pay market prices for crude oil, we can have all the oil we want - embargo or no embargo.

A real US physical shortage is impossible unless a) all international oil actors refused to do business with us - which won't happen, or b) a foreign navy stopped oil shipments to US ports - which the US Navy is more than competent to prevent.

Opening this spigot now also means a $70 billion windfall for the US Treasury.

Suspend (or end) federal rules that force refiners to use only low-sulfur oil to make gasoline and diesel. This is easily the best short-term fix for high gas prices.

Refiners were once relatively free to use heavy crude to make transportation fuel. Today, environmental regulations make it difficult and costly. And there's actually a (relative) glut of heavy crude right now.

Light-crude oil markets are incredibly tight, with no real excess production capacity. Heavy-crude markets are robust, with plenty of crude going unsold for lack of buyers.

Suspending low-sulfur rules would bring those heavy crudes into the transportation fuels. Oil economist Phil Verleger says it could well send gasoline and diesel prices plummeting.

Explore the underground of Texas

By US Sen. John Cornyn

From the High Plains to the Big Bend, the Hill Country to the Piney Woods, and places in between, Texas's natural beauty has always been part of its broad appeal. But Texas also has a less familiar attraction: some 3,000 caves that make up a vast expanse of underground wonder.

Texas has more caves than any other state. For generations they have provided utility, historic fascination and scientific insight into life below and above the surface. Underground Texas yields information for scientists and students in biology, geology, paleontology, anthropology, archaeology, and speleology - the study of caves.

"Because things may be preserved in a cave that would be destroyed almost anywhere else, caves add greatly to our knowledge of the past," a geologist writes in Geo-Texas. More than 1,200 animal species have been found in Texas caves.

Several caves are National Natural Landmarks, but many are on private land. I co-sponsored the Endangered Species Recovery Act of 2007 to provide tax incentives to private landowners who voluntarily protect habitat of endangered or threatened species. This approach respects property rights of Texas landowners.

Texas has both "wild caves" and "show caves." Wild caves exist in their natural state, with no lighting or public paths. Honey Creek Cave is the longest cave in Texas, stretching more than 20 miles underneath Comal and Kendall counties.

Exploration of a wild cave may involve crawling through water, mud, insects and other distractions, or descending into total darkness on a rope. It has been compared to mountain climbing, "only backwards."

The state's seven show caves provide easier access and welcome thousands of visitors every year. Most are in the Texas Hill Country, with several between Austin and San Antonio. The westernmost show cave is the Caverns of Sonora, about 170 miles northwest of San Antonio.

Show caves often feature translucent, icicle-shaped stalactites, stalagmites, crystalline walls, and mirror-like pools. The remarkable formations in caves result from the continual dripping of mineral-rich water over millions of years and the flow of underground streams.

Caves figured prominently in Texas history. Analysis of arrow points and other artifacts indicate some Native Americans lived in Texas caves, beginning thousands of years ago.

Comanche Indians once used Longhorn Cavern, near Burnet, for shelter. The cavern went on to become a gunpowder factory for the Confederacy and later a nightclub during the Roaring Twenties. In an ironic conversion, Longhorn Cavern once even housed church services. The State of Texas bought Longhorn Cavern and opened it to the public as part of a state park in 1932.

In one tale, Texas Rangers followed Comanches into Longhorn Cavern in search of a kidnapped young woman. The Geologic Story of Longhorn Cavern recounts the story: "There by the dancing firelight they saw Miss King against the wall with her hands bound behind her ... the Rangers rushed in, freed the girl, and were climbing out of the cavern when the Indians, seeing there were only three of them, attacked ... Keeping between Miss King and the Indians, the Rangers were able to fight their way to freedom."

Even without embellishment, Texas caves can offer a great adventure for young people - particularly in the summer, when they also provide an escape from summer heat. When temperatures above ground soar into the 90s or higher, most caves have constant temperatures around 70.

There is no substitute for visiting caves in person and learning more about life under the ground of Texas. They're a little-noticed part of what makes our state great.

Remove VA debt from fallen heroes

President Abraham Lincoln best described our enduring commitment to soldiers when, on behalf of a grateful nation, he promised "to care for him who shall have borne the battle."

Caring for the health and well-being of those who fought to defend freedom continues to be one of the federal government's most solemn responsibilities. The Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) was created in 1930 to coordinate federal efforts to provide veterans the very best in health care, to make a quality education available to service members, and to help our heroes return to civilian life.

As Ranking Member of the committee that provides funding for veterans programs, I am proud that we have increased the current VA budget to a record-level $87.6 billion, up 28 percent from $68.2 billion in FY2006. This is mostly focused on improving our health care system and addressing the needs of today's soldiers returning from Iraq and Afghanistan.

There are also policy changes that must be made to address the needs of our veterans who are returning from the War on Terror.

One is the forgiveness of VA debts that are owed by the courageous service men and women who lost their lives in combat. Currently, the VA Secretary is required by law to notify the family of the deceased of the outstanding debt and attempt to collect it. In January, I introduced legislation to remove this debt collection. After all, the families who have lost loved ones in combat have surely paid enough and are owed our deepest gratitude for their sacrifice.

But to date, of the thousands of families whose child, parent or spouse was killed fighting for our freedom in Iraq or Afghanistan, there are 22 whose grief has been compounded by this insensitive requirement. Together, the federal debts owed by the 22 fallen service members totaled a mere $56,366. In most of these cases, the debt came in the form of education benefit payments being used for college when they were called to active duty.

Three instances of this debt collection occurred in Texas. One fallen hero was a brave soldier from Raymondville; he was a star athlete and an exemplary student in high school. Even though he had already been accepted to a prestigious university, this young man deferred college to serve his country in the U.S. Army. While serving on his third tour of duty in Iraq, his life was cut short by a sniper's bullet. Though I have no doubt his family received an outpouring of love, support, and gratitude, they also received a $389 bill for education assistance the fallen soldier had incurred prior to his death.

A second case in Texas involved an Army Sergeant from Missouri City. After contributing several years of service in the U.S. Marine Corps, this young man again felt the call of duty and enlisted in the Army. He balanced his service with efforts to further his education and attended two different colleges with the help of VA education benefits. He interrupted his education when he was deployed to help fight the War on Terror.

After serving one tour in Afghanistan, he was on a second tour in Iraq when he was killed by a bomb. Because he took a leave from school to fulfill his military service, he had $2,282 in outstanding VA education assistance payments. This financial burden fell on the shoulders of the wife and four children he left behind.

Another Texas hero was a Marine reservist and graduate of Texas A&M University. He, too, financed his education with VA assistance and aspired to become a cardiovascular surgeon. While fighting bravely in Iraq, he was killed in a violent blast. A letter attempting to collect $845 in education assistance payments arrived shortly before his wife, raising their two small children, was notified of his death.

The widow from Missouri City, Texas, bravely stated, "It was the right thing to do." Now, Congress must do the right thing by lifting this unfair burden from the families who have already paid so much and ensuring no family is asked to pay a VA debt in the future.

On May 22, the Senate passed my VA Debt Elimination Act, which, if passed by the House and signed by the President, will stop this unconscionable practice by changing the provision in law that requires the VA to seek the collection of eligible debts from grieving military families. It is retroactive to September 11, 2001, so not a single fallen hero in the War on Terror or any future conflict suffers this inequity. To his credit, the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, Dr. James Peake, personally requested the law be changed. I had the bill ready within one week of his request.

We must constantly seek to improve the way our government honors those service members who made the ultimate sacrifice, as well as the families they left behind who have made silent sacrifices to safeguard liberty at home and throughout the world.

from the HEDLEY INFORMER, a galley proofing press from the 1870s, photos, and other items.

Funding for the newspaper exhibit was provided by the Clarendon Economic Development Corporation. The CEDC has also provided funding for an upcoming JA Ranch exhibit.

The newspaper exhibit is just one of the many exciting changes at the Museum that will be on display during the open house and member appreciation dinner Friday evening.

Don Ray's artwork will be on display in a special exhibit. Ray was born in 1937 in the Adair Hospital, which is now the home of the Museum, and he lived on a ranch near Clarendon until 1953.

Ray later worked for the AMERICAN QUARTER HORSE JOURNAL and served as the first graphics arts director for the regional education service center in Amarillo.

Ray has been a professional artist since 1972 and has produced many paintings and sculptures reflecting the landscapes and the Southwestern historical subjects in Texas and New Mexico.

The Museum will also draw for a pair of custom spurs made by Clarendon's own Kevin Johnson.

Next Friday's event will begin with an open house at the Museum at 6:30 p.m. followed by a barbecue dinner served out of the 1887 Ft. Worth & Denver Depot building at 7 p.m.

The dinner is free to Museum members and their families. Annual dues are $25 and may be sent to PO Box 781, Clarendon, TX 79226. Your help is needed and appreciated as the Saints' Roost Museum works to preserve the history of Donley County.

USDA sets deadline for LCP, LIP sign-ups

COLLEGE STATION - John Fuston, State director of U.S. Department of Agriculture Farm Service Agency (FSA) in Texas, reminds Texas livestock producers they have until July 18, 2008, to enroll in the 2005 - 2007 Livestock Compensation Program (LCP) and Livestock Indemnity Program (LIP).

Signup began on September 10, 2007, for the two programs that provide aid to livestock producers who suffered eligible livestock or livestock feed losses between January 1, 2005, and December 31, 2007, because of a natural disaster.

"The deadline to enroll in the 2005 - 2007 Livestock Compensation Program and Livestock Indemnity Program is rapidly approaching," said John Fuston. "I encourage all eligible producers to enroll soon because sign-up ends on July 18, 2008."

LIP provides payments to eligible livestock owners and contract growers who incurred the death of livestock because of a natural disaster. LCP provides payments to eligible livestock owners and cash lessees who suffered feed losses or increased feed costs because of a natural disaster.

More information about LCP and LIP is available online at: <http://disaster.fsa.usda.gov>. For more information on FSA programs, visit your local USDA Service Center or the agency's Web site, <http://www.fsa.usda.gov>

Simple tips help keep you on your budget

MaryRuth Bishop, AgriLife Agent
Has impulse buying been secretly undermining your monthly budget? Here are simple strategies for beating the urge. Choose the method that works best for you.

Create a 30-day list. Make a new rule: you can't buy anything (except necessities) until a 30-day waiting period has passed. Put a 30-day list on your refrigerator; and when you have the urge to buy something, put it on the list with today's date. After a month has passed, you can buy the item. Many times the urge will have passed, and you can just cross the item off the list.

Don't go to the mall. You only get the urge to buy on impulse if you're in a shopping area (or if you're watching TV). So, prevent the urge from happening in the first place by not going shopping. Don't just walk around window shopping for entertainment, or you will be sorely tempted. Find other ways to have fun.

Don't go to online retail sites. Just as the mall will create the urge to buy, so will online sites such as Amazon. They make it too easy to buy something. Instead, stay away from these sites. Monitor your urges. Keep a little piece of paper and put a tally mark on it every time you get the urge. This helps you to become more conscious of the urge, which is usually something we don't even notice. By becoming more aware of the changes in our body, we can begin to get the urges under control.

Plan your purchases. Making a list before you go shopping is important. If you can make it a habit to stick to that list, you'll eliminate a lot of little impulse buys. For other purchases, make it a habit to plan them, save for them, shop around, and even see if you can get it for free.

Freeze your credit card. If using your credit card is a problem, consider giving it up completely. If that's not a good option for you, try literally freezing your card. Put it in a Ziploc baggie with water, seal it good, and put it in the freezer. Now, if you want to make a purchase with the card, you'll have to unfreeze it. That little wait of a couple of hours can be enough to stop you from making many purchases.

Is the purchase going to improve your life in some important way? Is the purchase supposed to make you feel better? Does it help you meet one of your life goals? Will it simplify your life? These are useful questions to help you evaluate the value of a purchase and why you're making it.

Keep the end in mind. It's useful to have clear goals in mind at all times. What do you want to do with your life? Do you have financial goals that you're trying to accomplish in the long-term and medium-term? Keep your savings goals in mind and know when you're about to make a purchase how the purchase will affect your goals.

Carson marks 80th birthday

Happy Birthday to Bill Carson, who turned 80 on May 29. Bill's daughter, Susan, came down from Amarillo; and they served birthday cake all day at the hardware store. His son, Tommy Carson, turned 52 on June 2.

Family were here to visit Jim and Anita Mitchell. They all had a wonderful time.

The Hedley Methodist Church has grown by about six new people.

The Giles Café is under new management by Guy and Cathy Watt. They plan to open soon under the name of Cedar Creek Caffe. They have been remodeling and plan to open about the middle of June. The plans are right now to be open every day except Monday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. and 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. on Sunday. They will serve a breakfast all day long. He is preceded in death by his father, Ray Cruse, and his grandparents.

The family requests that memorials be made to Flomot Cemetery Association or Hospice Hands of West Texas, which has been immensely helpful and supportive in our time of need.

THERE WILL BE A RECKONING....

Proverbs 6:17 tells us that God HATES the shedding of innocent blood. Willfully taking another life is as about as evil an act one can commit. There are so many people affected besides the one killed. There are dreams and hopes that are snuffed out with the one murdered. Some guilty of this may never be punished on Earth, but you can know that God will give them their reward! Romans 14:12 tells us that we shall all give an account of ourselves to God.

Recently a woman was caught on tape bartering with a "hit-man" to murder her husband. She asked that her husband not be shot in the face as that would make her feel bad! Little did she know that she was speaking to an undercover law officer. Even though she never would have personally have killed her husband, she would have been just as guilty of murder.

Since the early 1970's there has been legalized murder called abortion. Over 40 million babies have been murdered in this country since Roe v. Wade. There are many guilty parties of these murders: those who instituted this law (Supreme Court); those who uphold this law (all courts); the doctor and staff performing this procedure; the mother; the politicians who continue to give their support to this practice; and last but not least, those who continue to vote for these people. One can't simply say that I haven't committed a murder or performed an abortion, therefore I'm not guilty. Just as the woman bartering with a hit-man to murder her husband, a constituent barter with his or her representative. Anyone who will ignore their politician's support of abortion while trying to get a tax break or health care has just become guilty of the evil deed that politician, abortion doctor, Supreme Court, and the "mother" has perpetrated. If anyone in this chain would stop their action, abortion (murder) would cease.

I pray that we would all wake up and realize there is a consequence to our actions. Please do not give your consent to a person you know is guilty of supporting this barbaric and ungodly practice. There will be a reckoning....

The groom elect's grandparents are Buddy and Barbara Hendricks and Jerry Sr. and Pat Bettey, all of Floydada. Great-grandparents are Alice Cornelius of Corpus Christi and Wayne and Naomi Battey of Paris, Tex.

Broncos representing All-District team well

By Sandy Anderberg

Senior Dalton Askew had a great season and was recognized with the honor of being named the District Most Valuable Player. Askew was nominated and voted on by the participating coaches in the Broncos' District.

Austin Howard, Trevor Leeper, Devin Noble Johnny Gaines, and David Roberts were also named to the All-District Team.

The Broncos had a great season overall as they went 18-8.

According to coach Brad Elam, the Broncos worked through some setbacks, but they finished strong as the District Co-Champions.

"We had a very successful season," Elam said. "Our only losses were to the District Co-Champions Follett twice, a District 2A champion once, one game to a 1A Regional Finalist, one game to a 3A team, and two games to our regional representative going to state."

The Broncos had several returning starters but had to make some position replacements.

"Going into the season, things were looking pretty good," Elam said. "We had our two top pitchers back plus three more good ones with experience. But as the season got going, we had more positions to fill.

"Some of the guys didn't play this year, and we lost some to injuries and grades. But I was proud of the way the players stepped up and filled those positions. Trevor, Johnny, and Troy Chambless responded well in the pitching positions."

The Broncos were a fairly young team this year, according to Elam; and he used several underclassmen as starters.

"At times during the year, we started four freshmen including during our regional quarterfinal series," Elam said. "Seymour started seven seniors, and we played them until the end losing 12-11 and 3-0."

Seymour is currently still in the playoff race and recently defeated our District rival Follett.

"I can't tell you how proud I am of these players and how all of them stepped up, filled roles they weren't used to, and won games," Elam said. "We are going to miss the four graduating seniors, three of them were four-year starters. But, we have a bright future and many more gold gloves to win."

CC Ranch Horse Team earns title

The Clarendon College Ranch Horse Team finished their first season of competition as champions.

The team was named the Nacogdoches Collegiate Champions and the Reserve Star of Texas Collegiate Champions in Austin, Texas, and also placed fourth at the Texas Tech Collegiate show.

The team of more than 20 members was one of the largest collegiate teams going up and down the road this year and is the only junior college team in the state of Texas. The team competed against universities such as Texas Tech, Texas A&M, and Tarleton State, just to name a few.

The team competes in ranch horse pleasure, trail, reining, and working cow horse in three levels ranging from novice to non-pro.

The Ranch Horse Team also competed in Stock Horse of Texas (SHOT) shows throughout the state of Texas, which is the founder of the Collegiate Stock Horse Shows.

The Clarendon College Ranch Horse Team

The objective of the Clarendon College Ranch Horse Team is to promote Clarendon College and agriculture through competitions in various ranch horse and stock horse events. The team directly represents the Clarendon College Agriculture Department and the area ranching community.

Involvement in the team will increase the practical experience of our students in a competitive atmosphere as well as place them in an ambassador position to preserve and promote Texas' deep ranching heritage.

56 golf in Memorial Day Scramble at CCC

By Sandy Anderberg

Thirteen teams were made up of the fifty-six-person playing field that took part in the annual Memorial Day Scramble at the Clarendon Country Club Monday, May 26.

The team of Mike Santos, Gary Roye, S.J. Johnson, Bobbie Conrad, and D.J. Edwards won going away at 17 under par for the 18-hole tournament. Neil Conrad, Chase Thornberry, Gail Leathers, and Ken Shelton finished second at 13 under.

Two teams tied at 12 under, and the third place finisher was determined on a card playoff. Terry Esch, Diane Esch, Bobbie Kidd, and Travis Wilson finished third; and Tom Stauder, Lance Thornberry, Junior Rodriguez, and Greg Collins came in fourth.

Sherol Johnston won low gross in the weekly women's game on Thursday with an 86, and low net went to Bonnie Crofford with a 74.

Seven teams competed in the Friday night nine-hole scramble; and the winning team was Mike Santos, Larry Lincycumb, Steve Pascal, and Diane Esch at eight under par.

There will be a Three-Person Scramble June 7-8, and you may call the Pro Shop for more information.

Drugs in the News

New Drug Approved for Women with IBS-C

The FDA recently approved a drug for women 18 years of age and older for a condition called irritable bowel syndrome with constipation (IBS-C). The drug is Amitiza (lubiprostone). Health officials indicate that at the present, there are no other prescription drugs available in the United States for this condition. The safety and efficacy of Amitiza was evaluated in two major studies and involved individuals who were experiencing at least mild abdominal pain or discomfort associated with other IBS-C symptoms. Women in the study that got Amitiza reported relief of IBS symptoms moderately or to a significant degree, more so than those who took a placebo (fake drug) over a 12 week period of study.

IBS-C is an intestinal disorder characterized by abdominal pain, bloating, cramping and constipation. Although these symptoms vary from person to person, they can in some instances be disabling. Some health experts believe IBS is caused by changes in the nerves that control the muscles in the bowel. Since women are more likely than men to experience this condition, some researchers believe that hormonal changes may play a role.
