Local sales tax receipts increase in November

Sales tax receipts for the City of Clarendon climbed higher for the third month in a row according to information released by Texas Comptroller Carole Keeton Strayhorn last week.

The city's November allocation of $30,260.71 reflected an increase of 18.13 percent over the same period last year. Clarendon is now running 11.02 percent ahead for the year-to-date with total sales tax revenues so far this calendar year standing at $275,776.86.

11.81 percent to $844.62, and that city's year-to-date figure is now up 59.31 percent to $9,247.57.

The November allocation is also on the positive side for the City of Howardwick, which received $1,278.52. That figure was up 7.18 percent over the same period last year and pushes Howardwick's year-to-date total to $11,653.50, an increase of 6.65 percent.

Strayhorn said the state collected $1.6 billion in sales tax

Hedley's allocation was also up revenue in October, up 17.3 percent compared to October 2005. Her office sent $505.3 million in November sales tax rebates to local governments, up 11.9 percent compared to November 2005.

"Texas continues to see an increase in sales tax collections, from both consumer and business purchases, as we progress into the final months of the year and the start of the holiday shopping season," Comptroller Strayhorn said.

Strayhorn sent Texas cities

$348.8 million in sales tax allocations, up 12.2 percent compared to November 2005. So far this calendar year, city sales tax allocations are up 14 percent compared to the same time period last year.

October sales tax collections and November sales tax allocations to local governments represent September sales reported in October by monthly tax filers and July, August and September sales reported to the Comptroller in October by quarterly tax filers.

assuming the REPs pass the full amount on to their customers, the increase for a residential customer using 1,000 kWh a month of electricity in the TNC service area would be around $1.24 a month, or less than a one percent increase.

Current charges to the retail electric providers are not sufficient to cover the companies' cost of delivering electricity, according to Charles Patton, AEP Texas president. Additional investment in transmission and distribution facilities, as well as cost increases that have occurred since 2005, have compounded the problem, Patton added.

"We know the overall price of electricity has risen dramatically over the last few years, and it's a major concern for all of us," Patton said. "It is important to remember that TNC does not bill the end-use customer. We bill the retail electric providers through our wires charge. The charges associated with energy delivery in the TNC territory is less than 25 percent of a residential customer's bill. The wires charges by TNC have remained essentially constant since retail competition began in 2002."

Hawkins leaves lasting legacy on Clarendon

"He was a man, take him for all in all; I shall not look upon his like again." - Hamlet, Act I, Scene II

The measure of a man is the friends he leaves behind; and, by that standard, Jerry Hawkins was a giant in our community and in the worlds of education and agriculture. His passing last Tuesday leaves a void among us that cannot be filled.

Hundreds of people commentary mourned him Sunday, and hundreds more would have likely been here had the word reached them in time or had their schedules permitted. His family and friends will mourn his absence even more in the days and weeks and months to come.

My own family's experience with Jerry Hawkins goes back pretty far. My father ran around with the former Glenda Borden when they were teens in the fifties. After she fell in love with Jerry, she arranged for her Texas Tech roommate - a young Helen Hartzog - to meet her old friend from Clarendon. The rest, as they say, is history.

The emotion of losing such a man as Jerry Hawkins in terms of what he meant to his family and to his closest friends is overwhelming. Some people you just expect will be around forever; and when they leave so suddenly, it is an incomprehensible thing that leaves us shocked, confused, and saddened.

The constant theme throughout Jerry's life was education. His love for Clarendon College and his love for his students and livestock judgers - Jerry's Kids - survive him and will continue to do so for many vears to come.

I have often thought that if every faculty member and every coach at old CC had half the passion for their own programs that Jerry had for his, Clarendon College would be one of the biggest most prolific community colleges in the state. Enrollment and growth wouldn't be a problem in that scenario except in terms of how to keep up with it.

Jerry always did what he thought was best for his school and for his kids, and, as was pointed out at his funeral, he always thought that "this group" was the best group. It didn't matter that last year's group was "the best" or that next year's group would be "the best." Jerry just went out and got the best kids he could find or the ones he thought he could turn into the best,

Preserving Vietnam's lessons for future

By US Sen. John Cornyn

The Clarendon Enterprise . November 16, 2006

As we work to address current national challenges, there is no better guide than history. Every issue today appears new or unique or unprecedented, but there is always a relevant episode in the past that can serve as a guide or a learning experience. Conditions in the world may change, but the nature of human beings remains constant.

My generation grew up in the midst of the Vietnam War. Our outlook was shaped in part by the political and social upheavals generated by our involvement in Southeast Asia. It was a most turbulent time in the American experience.

I remain extremely proud of, and grateful to, the three million Americans who fought in Vietnam. Some 58,000 were killed, including more than 3,400 Texans.

As we confront terrorists today in our current global challenge including Iraq, it's important to learn everything possible about our Vietnam experience. How can we avoid mistakes we made in Vietnam?

More than 30 years after Vietnam fell, it's time for serious historians to take over the study of that experience. The most ambitious and significant effort is occurring at Texas Tech University under leadership of Dr. James Reckner, a Vietnam veteran and current Tech history professor.

Working cooperatively with local Vietnam veterans in Lubbock, the Texas Tech administration has created the Vietnam Project to collect original source material, encourage scholarly research, and educate students and the public about the war and its lessons

The Project has already amassed an impressive collection of material, in some ways more comprehensive than the Library of Congress on this subject. It includes 11,000 linear feet of documents, eight million pages of manuscript materials, 12 million pages on microfilm, some 72,000 photographs and slides, about 80,000 books, 15,000 periodicals and newsletters, and more than 3,000 audiotapes, videotapes and CDs. Some 2.5 million pages have already been digitized for online viewing.

The collection also ranges from restored helicopters - including a Huey and a Cobra that saw action in Vietnam - to letters home from a solider to his mother in Slaton, Texas. The project's oral history effort has recruited 1,700 participants from all 50 states and 10 countries, including Vietnam. Many recordings are being made at Vietnam veteran reunions across the country

Tech has signed seven cooperation agreements with universities in Vietnam so that education and research efforts will be far-reaching and comprehensive.

Texas Tech has made a serious commitment to the project. Tech regents have allocated 12 acres for a new facility, and plans call for $70 million, 191,000-squarefoot headquarters building, including a world-class museum that would look at the seeing a list of names on a monument to Pennsylvania soldiers who died in the 1863 battle "The names meant little to me, even though I was born and raised in the same state. I could not identify with them; the monument would not tell me their story," Dr. Reckner said.

this project while visiting Gettysburg and

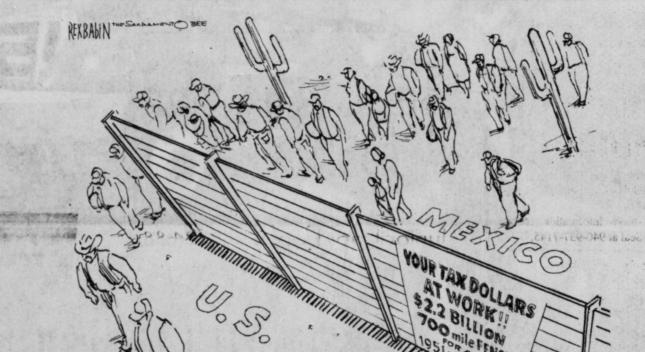

"I realized that 100 years from now, the names on the wall of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington may not mean much to people, even though for those of us who served in Vietnam, the Wall is an intensely emotional reminder of our comrades in arms who did not return from the war," Dr. Reckner says. His idea is to record and preserve the stories of Vietnam survivors, including their memories of those who made the ultimate sacrifice.

We can hope that one lesson of Vietnam has already been learned well. When men and women returned from the jungles of Southeast Asia, they were often vilified and mistreated by opponents of the war. Instead of targeting their opposition appropriately on our civilian leadership, many war opponents took out their frustrations on those who had done their duty.

Happily, conditions are different today. Even most harsh opponents of our involvement in Afghanistan and Iraq are careful to underscore their support for the men and women who serve our country abroad. We now welcome home our volunteer soldiers with open arms, great pride, and a deep appreciation for their sacrifices.

There is far more to be learned from our Vietnam experience.

In going about the course of his job, Jerry was what one might call a one-man chamber of commerce for Clarendon. It's a title that very few men in our history are worthy of, but Jerry more than earned it. He launched FFA and 4H contests and camps that draw literally thousands of people to this town every year.

The Clarendon College Invitational Livestock Judging Contest alone draws more than 2,000 people every April, effectively doubling the city's population. In recent years, the responsibility for that event has been passed to a new generation and ably handled. But without Jerry Hawkins, it would not be what it is today. In fact, the college itself would not be what it is today.

Men like Jerry Hawkins come along once. When they are gone, they cannot be replaced. But they can be remembered. And Jerry Hawkins will most assuredly be remembered and remembered fondly by thousands of people in this community, across Texas, and around the country.

And while it won't erase their pain, his family can at least take comfort in knowing that Jerry has left a lasting legacy.

Meanwhile...

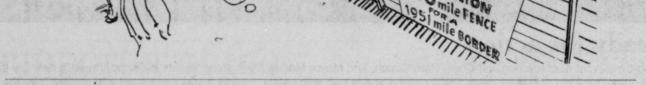

The Republican Party got its comeuppance last Tuesday night.

Since ending the Democrats' 40-year reign of waste and corruption in 1994, the GOP had done little to stem the tide of a growing federal government. Despite the initial progress made with the Contract with America, the party continued to preside over a government that has become more intrusive into our lives and more wasteful of our money than any true conservative would have ever thought possible.

The Democrats, who now find themselves in the position of actually having to come up with ideas. didn't win Tuesday night so much as the Republicans lost. With control of both houses of Congress and a Republican in the White House, real reform should have been a breeze and fiscal responsibility should have just been natural.

The GOP not only squandered its chances of reigning in the government but actually compounded the problem by adding a new prescription entitlement to Medicare and entrenching federal meddling in the school system with the "No Child Left Behind" lunacy. And let's not forget that they just never quite got around to making President Bush's tax cuts perma-

Health care in need of market reforms

By Mary Katherine Stout

A lot has changed in the world since the 1940s and changed for the better. Except the employer-based health insurance system. This vestige of World War II economic policies allowed employers to skirt wartime wage controls by granting them tax advantages for offering this "benefit" to their employees.

Over the years, this arrangement has effectively functioned as a mutually beneficial conspiracy between employers and employees to shield earnings from the sticky fingers of Uncle Sam. Yet while distortions in compensation and unnecessary breaks in health insurance coverage plague the system today due to these archaic policies linking employers to health insurance, many mistakenly view employer-sponsored health insurance as the key to expanding health insurance coverage.

We know the rising cost of health insurance squeezes employers, but the impact to employees is often overlooked. While their total compensation package increases, employees find little of the increase actually making it to their pocket. A recent report by Families USA found that health insurance premiums in Texas rose almost 80 percent between 2000 and 2006, significantly outpacing increases in median earnings, which grew by almost 11 percent over the same period.

While these numbers are often used to highlight the hardship health care costs place on working Texans, the truth is that working Texans could pocket more of the overall increases in compensation each year if they shared the responsibility to keep the cost of health care and health insurance low.

However, the present employerfocused system separates individuals from the cost of their health care and health insurance. This effectively insulates the individual from any responsibility to manage their health care as a way to manage the cost of premiums.

When health care providers and advocacy groups arrive in state capitols around the country asking for new diseasespecific and provider-specific mandates on insurance policies, individuals are often unaware of the impact these regulations have on their pocketbook. Keeping the cost of health insurance down means rejecting regulations that drive up costs at the outset, and there is no better way to focus attention on this fact than to have individual consumers engaged in the discussion

This 1940s era system of providing health insurance through employers is fracturing. It can neither meet the demands of our modern economy and mobile workforce, nor effectively control the growth in health care and health insurance costs as others pay the bills.

If lawmakers are serious about increasing access to health insurance - or more importantly, quality health care - they should stop creating new incentives and penalties that further tether employees to the provision of health insurance by employers. Instead, lawmakers should remove the tax code's bias toward employer-sponsored health insurance, or at least offer equal financial incentives and tax advantages to individuals who purchase coverage for themselves.

Next, lawmakers should remove government-imposed barriers and biases that increase cost through regulation and limit both competition and consumer choice. In particular, lawmakers should remove state mandates on health insurance coverage that often drive costs up and value down, as well as allow individuals the freedom to purchase coverage from any insurer in any state

In addition, Congress should expand Health Savings Accounts by loosening limits on contributions, ensuring that individuals can better build savings to cover out-of-pocket costs, as well as loosening restrictions on purchasing coverage with HSA funds

By creating real health care consumers, rather than separating the individual from their health care decisions and health care dollars, individuals will increasingly demand better quality services at competitive prices. Furthermore, these consumers will rightly demand greater choice through a deregulated health insurance market that offers individuals more flexibility in choosing coverage that meets their needs.

Lary Katherine Stout is the director of the Center for Health Care Policy Studies at the Texas Public Policy Foundation.

New program aims to save prairie chicken

AUSTIN - A new agreement between the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD) and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) is expected to help private landowners conserve the lesser prairie chicken, a rare bird whose fate is tied to the health of grassland ecosystems that sustain many other wildlife species.

A signing ceremony for the agreement took place, November 2 at the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department Commission meeting at TPWD headquarters in Austin.

By undertaking voluntary conservation measures on their property under the new agreement, landowners will be assured that no further land use restrictions or conditions will be required from them if the lesser prairie chicken is ultimately listed under the federal Endangered Species Act. The bird is currently a candidate for listing.

Under the new agreement, TPWD can issue a one-page Certificate of Inclusion signed by a landowner who wishes to voluntarily commit to undertake certain conservation actions. Such landowner actions would include measures such as brush control, grazing management, prescribed burning, and allowing periodic monitoring on their property.

Concerned Citizens speak to Hedley board

The Hedley Board of Aldermen heard from the Donley County Concerned Citizens during their regular meeting November 2.

Brad Dalton presented a petition on behalf of the Concerned Citizens and requested that the city abolish the tax on automobiles, boats, RVs, and other similar forms of personal property. Several members of the group spoke in favor of repealing the tax.

The aldermen took no action on the petition, according to city minutes.

An article in last week's ENTER-PRISE said the Donley County Senior Citizens Center had been serving meals since 1979. However, former center director Ruth Mills called to say the center actually began serving meals three days a week in 1975. It began serving six days a week in 1979, she said.

Broncos end season with 6-42 loss to Quanah

By Sandy Anderberg

pions

Despite the disappointment of not making the playoffs, Coach Gary Jack felt the Broncos were worthy of much praise as they fought hard all year long.

JV Lady Broncos open at Panhandle

The 2006 season has begun for the Lady Bronco junior varsity as they took on Panhandle and Dumas last week. The Lady Broncos had two close losses as they fell 31-36 against the Pantherettes and 32-35 against the Demonettes.

Panhandle jumped out to the early lead against the Lady Broncos with a five-point advantage. Clarendon held their own as they fought hard to stay in the game, but they fell victim to the buzzer and took the loss.

Scoring: Janae White 7, Deidre Lewis 7, Haleigh Lewis 6, Abby Patten 3, Jenci White 3, Bailey Starnes 3, and Erin Holland 2. Other members of the Lady Bronco team are Morgan Hysinger, Amelia Taylor, Amanda Mendez, Lauren Shelton, Caitlin Christopher, Dominique Mason, Kia Bryley, Jillian Luna, Brandie Mays, Elissa Holland, and Erika Edwards.

The Lady Broncos hosted Dumas on Saturday, November 11, and played them close but lost 32-35. The Lady Broncos led until the final quarter when turnovers overwhelmed them.

"All of the ladies played hard until the end," Coach Kasey Bell said. "We have got to learn how to cut down on turnovers to ever be successful."

Scoring: Janae White 8, Starnes 7, D. Lewis 7, Erin Holland 5, H. Lewis 2, Patten 2, and Cortnee Thornberry 1.

The Lady Broncos will travel to Childress November 21 and Hedley November 28, with both games beginning at 4:00 p.m.

AMARILLO - The current volatility in agriculture markets is increasing the importance of knowing when to use futures and options, said a leading expert in the industry.

"With all the volatility that we're seeing in the grain and livestock markets now, it is important that producers control their risk," said Alan Brugler, president of Brugler Marketing and Management in Omaha, Neb.

Brugler will conduct two Advanced Futures and Options seminars in December under the Advanced Topic Series. Advanced Topic Series is a part of the Master Marketer Education System offered by Texas Cooperative Extension.

The first meeting will be December 4-5 at the Neuches County Show Barn in Robstown. A second meeting will be December 18-19 at the Texas A&M University System Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Amarillo.

The cost is $125 per twoday session and covers materials, breaks and lunches. Pre-registration is required one week prior to the course date. Each course runs from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily. Registrations forms can be found online at http: //mastermarketer.tamu.edu .

"Using a hedging program or futures only can tie up a lot of capital in margin calls," Brugler said. "Not using a hedging program at all can result in a lot of lost profit opportunities

"The use of the option strategy makes the risk to the producer one directional," he said. "The producer is able to pass on the risk and still take advantage of price movements that are favorable.'

the lion's tale by roger estlack

The Clarendon Lions Club held their regular Tuesday noon meeting November 14, 2006, with Boss Lion Jim Shelton in charge.

We had 18 members and two guests: Barbara Seal and Terry Keener of the Texas Department of Transportation office in Childress, who presented our program.

Keener and Seal showed a video discussing the history of transportation in Texas and the proposed Trans-Texas Corridor (TTC). The Texas Highway Department, as TxDOT was originally named, was created in 1917; and its major projects since that time have included the Farm-to-Market system in the 1930s and the Interstate Highway System in the 1950s.

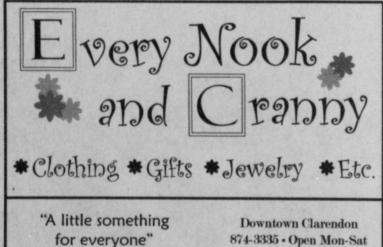

Keener said the state's population has gone up 57 percent in the last 25 years and is expected to increase dramatically in the coming decades. The highway system isn't keeping up with this growth, and the TTC is designed to meet those needs. While most of the focus is on the I-35 corridor right now, Keener said our area may benefit most from the utility and rail corridor aspects of the TTC as electric transmission lines are needed to carry power from Panhandle area wind farms down state and as the need arises to accommodate additional freight train traffic through this area.

There being no further business, we were adjourned.

Vaccines Delivered In a Skin Patch

Early stages of research aimed at delivery of vaccines in a skin patch are just beginning. Media reports indicate that current research is focusing on vaccines that would protect against influenza (flu) and traveler's diarrhea. One recent news story provided by the Associated Press indicates that flu vaccine is currently being tested in 270 volunteers to determine if those who get vaccinated with the vaccine delivered through a skin patch would develop as many antibodies against the flu as those who get the standard flu shot. Another vaccine is designed to prevent traveler's diarrhea.

The report indicates that one of the goals of flu vaccine studies is to determine if older persons can use a skin patch vaccine to boost their immune systems. As a general rule, older persons tend to be less protected from standard flu shots than are children and younger adults. A small study of elderly volunteers has already shown that giving the flu shot along with vaccine in a skin patch provided higher antibodies against the flu than did the shot alone. Obviously much more research needs to be conducted before conclusions can be made.
