THE Dowie bubble grew to immense size before it collapsed. Wonder what fake the people will be running after next?
It is time now to let up on the "age of Ann" business. A Kansas man puzzled himself over it until he was continually muttering something about Ann in his sleep, and now his wife is suing him for a divorce.

Why cannot college and university students engage in pastimes that are beneficial, yet harmless? There seems to be a mania for something that smacks of brutality. In this season's foot ball games nineteen lives have been lost, one made insane and thirteen dangerously injured, besides hundreds of minor injuries not reported.

St. Louis and Chicago are both after the two leading political conventions next year. The former has strong claims for such meetings, but Chicago has already offered $100,000 for the two conventions and promises to spend $35,000 in equipping the old Coliseum building besides. Milwaukee, Detroit and San Francisco also want the convention. As the time approaches Cincinnati and Indianapolis, and perhaps New York will come in with bids.

CONSIDERABLE fun is poked at rich American girls who marry broken down foreigners with a title, and not without a cause. But there are "foolish virgins" everywhere. There are plenty of instances where European princesses have eloped with some fellow who could saw on a fiddle, daub on a canvass or drive a coach while dressed in gay livery. Then there are older fools over there of as high rank, even married women, who have done these things.

It is claimed now that there is not likely to be a congressional investigation of the post-office scandal because many congressmen are involved in it. A Washington reporter says Mr. Cowherd of Missouri tried to bring about an investigation last winter, but found so many of his fellow-members knee-deep in the affair that few would aid him. He had to abandon the idea, although he urged the Republicans to inaugurate the investigation and take all the glory.

BEEF trust prices have put man's ingenuity to work in looking for a substitute and Eugene Barney of Vicksburg, Mich., has come to the front with "a substitute for meat," which is good to eat and tastes just like chicken, or veal, or lobster salad, or porterhouse steak—all depending upon the peculiarities of your taste. Also the time of day is said to have something to do with the varied qualities possessed by this remarkable product of the Michigan mind. Naturally it is crisp bacon or veal cutlets if you eat it at breakfast with your coffee. At luncheon, with your tea and wafers, how could it be anything but a delicate salad? But after the theater—when there is wine and no end of other things—ah, how could it be other than the best on the bill, whatever you may think that is! Mr. Barney says his meat substitute is a compound of vegetables and cereals and contains not the slightest essence of meat. Yet it tastes like meat. This, he explains, is the result of ingenious preparation and skillful cooking. The substitute is to be sold in prepared form, ready for the table.

The placing of Quantrell's bones in the museum of the Kansas State Historical Society has brought forth a bitter protest from some of the Kansas people. The Rev. J. T. McFarland, of the First M. E. Church at Topeka was most scathing in his remarks from his pulpit last Sunday in referring to the matter. He wound up his remarks by saying: "My motion is, and I would like to have a rising vote of the people of Kansas in its support, that the bones of William C. Quantrell, cattle thief, horsethief, bandit and cutthroat, be thrown into the Kaw river, and that the space be preserved in our Historical society rooms for mementoes of things honorable and of good repute."

Former Representative William Springer, of Illinois, died in Washington city yesterday morning. He was 71 years of age and was a Democratic leader conspicuous in the House of Representatives during the 44th to 53rd congresses inclusive and was once chairman of the ways and means committee. He had been a resident of Washington the last few years, and represented many Indian claims before the Interior department.

Up in Missouri where people have to be "shown," a Carrolton paper says a local teacher, instructing a class in composition, said: "Do not attempt any flights of fancy; be yourselves and write what is in you." The following day a bright pupil handed in the following: "We should not attempt any flights of fancy, rite what is in us. In me there is my stomach, lungs, heart, liver, two apples, one piece of mince pie, three sticks of candy, a hull lot of peanuts and my dinner."

A patent inside has been put on the Clarendon Chronicle, but it has been nearly doubled in size. Bro. Blake always conducts a uniformly good paper, never spurring, but always pursuing the even tenor of his way, and being unusually reliable. He ought to succeed if constant and earnest effort count for anything.—Memphis Herald.

The Twice-a-Week Clarendon Chronicle has enlarged to a seven column folio.—Dalhart Texan.

Quantrell's Skeleton.
The Kansas State Historical society has what is asserted to be the thigh bones of W. C. Quantrell, the notorious guerilla leader, who led the massacre at Lawrence in 1863. They were left with the late Judge F. G. Adams, secretary of the society, in 1888, and have been preserved in secrecy until now the death of Quantrell's mother permits the society to register them and put them on exhibition. They were presented to the society by W. W. Scott of Canal Dover, O., with the consent of Mrs. Quantrell, on condition that they should not be exhibited until after her death. Miss Lu Adams, a daughter of Judge Adams, who has been employed by the society since its beginning, says that in 1888 Mr. Scott appeared in her father's office with the bones. He said that he and Mrs. Quantrell and two men who were with Quantrell when he was killed went to his grave and exhumed the body. The grave was identified by the two men. One of the men was with Quantrell at Lawrence and his raids elsewhere. The body had been buried nearly twenty-five years, and there was nothing left of it but the skeleton. Even the ligaments were decayed and the skeleton lay in fragments.

The skull and the larger bones were taken away, and upon Mr. Scott's suggestion the thigh bones were given to the Kansas Historical society. The bones are about fourteen inches long and were the bones of a very small man. Quantrell was a small man.

Counsel for William J. Bryan, executor of the will of the late Philio S. Bennett, filed an appeal last Sunday to Judge Cleveland's decision excluding the sealed letter giving Bryan and family $50,000.

The consumers of oil should make ready for another hold up. The Standard Oil dividends this year are 1 per cent below last year's dividends, and you know Mr. Rockefeller is too poor to stand such a slump.—Commoner.

The Age of Gambling.
Gambling in the United States has passed beyond anything known in the history of the world before. The records show that during the season at Saratoga more than $2,000,000 a day was bet on horse races. The amount of money bet on horse races alone during the year is estimated to be above $2,000,000,000. The bucket shops and board of trade gambling involves still larger sums. There are many more forms of gambling, running all the way from shooting craps in back alleys to amounts involving hundreds of thousands. The age of gambling is upon us. It prevades every part of society from the lowest to the highest. The lottery schemes legalized by Spain in its darkest days were as a drop of water to the mighty ocean in comparison to it.

This state of society could never have been possible if the churches had done their duty. Did any reader of The Independent ever hear a sermon preached denouncing the sin of gambling? Whenever a man under any guise takes money from another and gives nothing in return, is that not a sin? Does not gambling destroy the moral rectitude of every person engaged in it?—Nebraska Independent.

A Hand-Blistering Task in One Building.
It is enough to blister one's hands just to contemplate the job that confronted the men who swept the floor of the mammoth Palace of Agriculture at the World's Fair. When the contractors finished their work recently all that remained to be done was to sweep the floor. It never dawned on anyone how great the task was. Caldwell and Drake, the contractors, ordered a dozen brooms and set 12 men to work. When night came their inroads on the great expanse of 23 acres of floor space was scarcely noticeable. They increased the force next day to 40 men and ordered 100 brooms. These 40 men worked ten days before the big floor was thoroughly swept.

Texas Women Want To Vote.
A convention for the purpose of organizing the women of Texas into a Woman's suffrage association is to be held in Houston, December 8 and 9. They say, "Taxation without representation is tyranny," and "governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed" were the maxims which enfranchised men. Women are taxed, but without representation; they are governed, but without their consent.

Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and Idaho held these principles to be applicable to women, and there they may vote in all elections. Twenty-four additional states have acknowledged the justice of this claim by extending some form of suffrage to women. The woman suffrage movement is now world-wide, and a million and a quarter of women are voters upon equal terms with men. Nearly every European country has granted some form of suffrage to women, and Australia has extended the parliamentary suffrage to them. Why should not Texas keep pace with this progress?"

The degeneration of which The Independent has been talking for the last three or four years was displayed in red ink and large type upon the occasion in New York when richly dressed American women crawled on all fours under curtains and into coal holes to get a glance at a duke while he was being married to an American heiress. All Europe wore a broad grin for several days afterward. The marriage dot was $20,000,000.—Nebraska Independent.

Leslie K. Johnson and Miss Jessie Herring were married Monday at Vernon.

It is not at all likely that John Stevens will have opposition for the democratic nomination for congress from this district. He is a safe and sure man, and the people of the district will think twice before they put him out.—Childress Index.

The Caricatured West.

According to the Washington Post Mr. Rody, delegate to Congress from New Mexico, was not pleased at a play in a Washington opera house in which Arizona was caricatured.
"Why, that play is as bad a libel on the great territory of Arizona," said the delegate, "as the so called editorials of the 'Arizona Kicker,' a newspaper that exists only in the wild mind of the man in Detroit who writes the screeds. We have a local poet at Albuquerque, N. M., named Carter, who, as to this custom of the eastern squib writers, voiced the sentiments of the West in the following verses.

"You funny fellows who grind out—
Stale jokes at so much per,
You've worked the 'wild West' joke till we
Are weary of the slur;
Now listen, for we've news that may
Cause you some tears to shed:
Poor Grizzly Pete and Broncho Bill,
And all their kind are dead.
"Yes, funny men, we've killed them off—
We've civilized the West,
And 'gainst these threadbare jokes of yours
We earnestly protest;
You'll have to strike another lead
To earn your daily bread,
For Grizzly Pete and Broncho Bill,
And all their kind are dead.
"Keep up your jabs on mother-in-law,
On Irishman, and Jew;
And Uncle Rube and Mandy Jane
Are good for not a few;
They're chesnuts, but we'll swallow them
And smile when they are read,
But Grizzly Pete and Broncho Bill,
And all their kind are dead."

Eel Created Consternation.

There were large doings at Union Station, Pittsburg, a few days ago. A rough house was caused by a monstrous eel getting loose and wriggling amongst the legs of bystanders. The fish was one of a lot of one hundred which were being shipped to the Bellefonte hatchery of the State Fish Commission, where they will be kept during the winter and then sent to St. Louis for exhibition at the World's Fair.

When the eel broke jail, fish attendants, baggage men, brakemen, and other attaches of the station all made grabs for him. Wriggling like an Oriental dancer he went through their hands like the proverbial greased eel.

Terror was added to the excitement by some one raising a cry that he would bite. Women grabbed their skirts and screamed, and men looked foolish. It was a hot chase. The attaches ducked in and out losing their hats and temper in the scrimmage. Sometimes their hands would close over the eel but for not long, a few wriggles and the exclusive eel would be gliding over the smooth floor. Finally the attaches, puffing and blowing, and perspiring freely, coralled the eel and he was returned to his can. Quiet restored and peace reigned again.

Pennsylvania's fish exhibit at the World's Fair will be the largest ever made at an exposition and will include the eel that started this tale.

Notices have been posted at several mines by the Somerset, Continental and Merchants Coal Companies in Pennsylvania, notifying their employes of a 10 per cent reduction in wages, effective December 16.

Snow Thursday night stopped traffic on the Rock Island between Alamo and Santa Rosa.

Walter J. Martin was caught in the belt of a gin near Brownwood and killed a few days ago.

Cattlemen of this section are not pleased with the general drift of affairs at the meeting of the National Live Stock Exchange at Fort Worth a few days ago. They say the commission men are showing too much of an arbitrary spirit and too much disposition to build up a trust of their own.—West Texas Stockman.
