Cedar of Lebanon a famous tree species grows in Clarendon

Some of the most remarkable trees grown are the majestic Cedars of Lebanon, and while only a few of these beautiful trees remain in the world today, Donley County can boast of having one. Harriot Kunz has a Cedar of Lebanon growing on the grounds of her home. The tree was purchased in 1950 when it was about three feet high. It was grown from seed ordered direct from Lebanon and planted in a greenhouse by Paul Bruce of Alanreed. Mrs. Kunz planted the cedar out of a love for plants instilled by her father, L.K. Edgerton, a pioneer Donley. Edgerton, a pioneer Donley Co. nurseryman. Today the Cedar of Lebanon planted by Mrs. Kunz towers some twenty odd feet into the air and has a spread of an estimated eighteen feet.

Within the past several years people have become aware of the need to conserve these historical trees and several plantings have been made in the United States. Until the early

Letter to the Editor

I am enclosing a beautiful poem of long ago that shows to have been printed by the Donley County Leader, it was used in N Guffey's Fifth Reader which the Apostle used to study at Old Tascosa. I wonder if it would be possible you may have this poem stored in your files. I found this clipping with Mrs. Holmes's clippings collection. I feel sure there are a lot of old timers that would appreciate a rerun of this poem. I for one would appreciate a new copy.

Sincerely.

James Holmes

I've wandered to the village, Fom,
I've sat beneath the tree,
Upon the school-house Play-ground,

That sheltered you and me:
But none were left to greet ne, Tom,
And few were left to know.
Who played with me upon the green,

The grass was just as green. Tom,

Barefooted boys at play
Were sporting, just as we did then,
With spirits just as gay.
But the master sleeps upon the hill,
Which, coated o'er with snow.
Afforded us a sliding place.

The old school-house is altered some:

But the same old bricks are in the wall,
The bell, swings to and fro;
Its music's just the same, dear Tom,

The spring that bubbled 'neath the hill,
Close by the spreading beech,
Is very low; 'twas once so high
That we could almost reach:
And kneeling down to take a drink,
Dear, Tom, I started so,
To think how very much I've changed
Since forty years ago.

Near by that spring, upon an elm,

You know, I cut your name. Your sweetheart's just beneath it, Tom; And you did mine the same.

'Twas dying sure, but slow, ist as that one whose name you cut Died forty years ago.

My lids have long been dry, Tim,

But tears came in my eyes: I thought of her I loved so well,

And took some flowers to strew Upon the graves of those we loved

Some sleep beneath the sea; And none are left of our old class Excepting you and me. And when our time shall come,

And we are called to go,
I hope we'll meet with those we loved

Those early broken ties.

was much richer in trees, but today almost all these famous cedars have been exploited by man's eager hand. As far as is presently known the oldest Cedars of Lebanon are confined in Syria to one valley of the Lebanon Mountain range, that of the Kedisha River, which flows from near the highest point of the range westward to the Mediterranean, and enters the sea at the port of Tripoli. These trees are located at the very upper part of the valley, about 15 miles from the sea or 6500 feet above sea level. The position of these cedars is above that of all other

Here, it means maize, but originally, it was any small, hard seed of a plant. Generally it means whatever cereal crop is grown primarily in a specific locale. In Scotland and Ireland, for instance, the word corn refers to oats; in England, it refers to wheat.

-Turn down all chances to invest in speculative deals JUSTICE ON THE JOB

By Senator
Hubert H. Humphrey
A few months ago I became the head of a coalition of responsible citizen organizations of various kinds which has taken the name of "Americans for Justice on the Job."
It is dedicated, essentially, to helping win passage of the much needed Labor Law Reform Act. I hope we can accomplish that early in 1978.

1978.
Why, at this particular 1978.

Why, at this particular stage in my career, did I volunteer for still another assignment?
The reason is simple, I feel very strongly that, for the good of the country and for the future of decent labor-management relations, the Labor Law Reform Act is essential to our national welfare.
This is not an idea that I hold all by myself. By a large margin, the members of the U.S. House of Representatives passed the bill early in October. It has won the support of many business people, numerous members of the clergy, a number of important newspapers, and many responsible trade union leaders.
During my many years in the Senate I have paid close union leaders.

During my many years in the Senate, I have paid close attention to the problems of labor-management relationships in our country. I am pleased when, in the vast majority of cases, they serve the public good; I am dismayed when they break down into discord and anger. Fortunately, the collective bargaining process has worked for America's benefit.

But it has become appar-

But it has become appar-ent, to me and to other ob-servers, that our basic labor law is in serious need of improvement. Not drastic change, but modifications so that it will work more smoothly, more equitably. At present, the labor relations law is not working as well as it could and should.

and should.

Don't take my word for it. I read the testimony of decent, law-abiding American working men and women during the hearings of the House of Representatives. Many of these people might be your friends and neighbors—the folks who make up what the headline writers call "middle America." These people are not getting either the benefits or the protection that our nation's labor law was intended to provide.

Taxes Like None Before

by U.S. Senator for Texas

JOHN TOWER

most members of the House and Senate who voted for the Conference Committee Report on Social Security went home satisfied that Social Security financing was an issue settled once and for all.

I hope Texans realize that it is not.

What the Congress passed and what will take effect this week is an unprecedented and in my view totally unacceptable tax package that will cost $227 billion over the next decade, tripling the cost for those least able to pay for it—low income wage earners and families.

Most important, this tax package ignores many of the conditions in the Social Security financing formula which created the very problems we have now. At the same time, it will discourage our efforts to reduce unemployment and return vitality to our economy.

Why? First of all, the law which triples taxes over the next decade itself may be inadequate to bring benefits up to sustainable levels for many of the Nation's elderly. It will not cover the projected deficits for the coming generation, and there is the very real possibility Congress would have to raise—perhaps triple again—taxes paid into the system over the next several years.

The larger tax bites working Americans will begin to see taken from their checks will have an enormously destructive impact on needed economic growth and reduced unemployment. Wage costs will be considerably higher, forcing employers to reduce their payrolls.

Working in combination with recent increases in the minimum wage, the new Social Security measure signed into law undoubtedly will throw minorities out of work first, extending unemployment to the very sectors most cruelly affected now by a bleak jobs picture.

In its haste to present the President with a bill he could sign, Congress threw together a patchwork quilt of tax increases which keeps the system afloat temporarily, but one which does not begin to come to grips with the larger inherent inequities, which for example, pay benefits bearing no relation to the amount of taxes paid into the system.

It is not uncommon, you might be interested to know

It is not uncommon, you might be interested to know, for a working couple to receive less benefits in retirement years than a couple with only one wage earner, even though the working couple paid much more in taxes over the years. Single workers receive fewer benefits than married co-workers, even if both paid exactly the same amount in taxes over a lifetime.

With this Social Security measure passed by the Congress and signed into law by the President, the old adage "robbing Peter to pay Paul" has a regrettably new inference. Congress needlessly heaped taxes on working people, shirked its responsibilities in improving the Social Security system in much more comprehensive and responsible fashion, and worst of all, failed again to be truthful with the American people about the true condition of the system millions count on for retirement security.

Those who voted for the measure may have a lot of explaining to do.

a union, I cannot work at my trade."

Paul Grammont, a rubber worker from Ohio, told the House Committee: "I was told if I had to go to the restroom at any time other than lunch, I would need a physical from the medical department."

Milton Taylor, a textile worker in North Carolina, reported his employer cut the workload before the employees were to vote for or against the union; but after the union won, "our workload is almost double."

Since most of our businesses conduct their labor relations in a responsible manner, it is hard to believe that such practices as these exist in America today. But make no mistake about it, they do.

Perhaps Louise Bailey, "President of the survey of the surve

Perhaps Louise Bailey union member at J.P. tevens—a company found by the Labor Board and the courts to have violated the labor law many times—expressed it best: "We are not asking for the world, just a chance to hold our head up."

It's for reasons such as this that I became associated with Americans for Justice on the Job. For the same reasons, I'm urging my fellow Senators to vote for S. 1883, the Labor Law Reform Bill.

If you feel the same

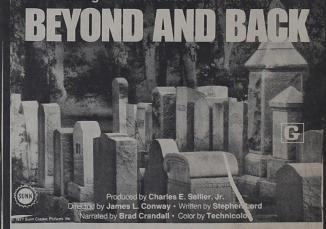

Reform Bill.

If you feel the same way—that we need fair play and an effective labor law—one that is fair to workers and responsible businesses alike—I hope that you will write a letter or a postcard to your two Senators. Ask them to vote for S. 1883. (You can address your Senators c/o U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510).

If you write, a lot of people, including myself, will be deeply grateful.

periods of high domestic production.

Chaloupka said Bergland feels the best way out of the current problem is to expand dollar sales and P.L. 480 shipments overseas. He said the Secretary wants farmers to get their income from the marketplace and believes the alternative would be total domination by the federal government. "I told him we would appreciate it if he would take a strong stand for government. "I told him we would appreciate it if he would take a strong stand for the farmer rather than championing the consumer, and he agreed with me," Chaloupka said. A delegation met with TFB

TFB president Carrol Chaloupka met with Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland in Washington, D.C., Jan. 5 in what the Texan called a "friendly and productive" meeting on the farm income problem. The Secretary promised a number of actions to alleviate the current farm crisis, including — more farm credit to keep hard-hit farmers in business. — increased efforts to open up more foreign markets, including beef exports to support the strike move-ment. He further explained that legal counsel had since advised that any action by the Farm Bureau in connection with a strike, with the plan in mind to withhold agricultural production in order to increase prices, would be in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Chaloupka said Farm Bureau sympathizes with the plight of farmers ("I am one of you"), and he listed a number of actions that Farm number of actions that Farm Bureau has undertaken to improve farm income. He said then he had a tentaive appointment with Secretary of Agriculture Bergland to discuss what might be done. TFB Vice President Reed Lang and Secretary-Trea-surer S.M. True, Jr., who were in Waco for another meeting with Chaloupka, attended the session as observers.

Tips from Cynthia

By Cynthia Manning "Home Safety for Raw and Cooked Food" Most consumers know how easy it is for harmful bacteria to grow in raw meat or poultry held for several hours poutry held for several hours at room temperature. But equal concern should be given to being sure cooked food is properly refrigerated. Most bacteria in raw food are destroyed at cooking temperatures above 140 degrees F. But cooked foods can also be a hours for can also be a haven for growing bacteria through recontamination or crosscontamination.

Conked foods may be re-contaminated if kitchen utensils used for preparing the food before cooking aren't washed before hand-ling the same food cooked. Foods can be contaminated by handling uncooked meats, then fresh vegetables without washing kitchen utensils and hands.

A good rule to follow is to wash all utensils and hands in hot soapy water after handling raw food--since it may contain bacteria--and before touching cooked food. Cooking food at proper temperatures will destroy bacteria that cause food can also be important for food safety. After dinner guests depart, the problem of what to do with leftover food remains. If it is to be useable later, special care must be taken right away.

Usually the lower the temperature, the longer food can be kept. So it is best to store food at as low a temperature as possible without actually freezing it.
All foods placed in storage should be wrapped--and this means covering well. Food that is kept covered in cold storage can better keep storage can better keep bacteria under control. Though useful in many ways, some kinds of bacteria also spoil food and cause illness. Like other living illness. Like other living things, bacteria need food, warmth and moisture to grow. But they won't grow as fast in refrigerated food that's covered. Some foods need loose wrapping so that air can get to them-others need tight wrapping to keep odors and moisture in and air odors and moisture in and air

If the food is to be stored only a few days, waxed paper or a covered container may be all right. But for freezing, be all right. But for freezing, tight containers or packages of freezer paper, heavy duty foil, glass or plastic are necessary.

Game birds could supplement income through hunting leases

Game birds such as quail and dove offer a substantial supplemental income to area farmers and ranchers through commercial hunting leases. The demand for bird hunting leases increases each year and prices in the Plains area range from fifty cents to several dollars per acre depending on the quality of hunting. With some 500,000 acres of potential hunting land in Donley County, commercial hunting could have a significant economic impact on agricultural income.

Gary Hunt, local game warden, advises that commercial bird hunting in County is virtually non existant at present but that the opportunity exists for landowners interested in development.

Dick DeArment, biologist for the Texas Extension Service, stated recently, while working in this area, that he has observed well developed wildlife habitats support up to a quail per acre or one covey per fifteen to thirty acres. He was quick to add however, that though it is conceivable to have such populations, development is populations, development is slow with natural predation and weather being adverse

According to Jimmy J. Donaho, District Conserva-tionist of the Donley County

Soil and Water Conservation District, technical and cost share assistance for de-velopment of wildlife areas is locally available through the Soil Conservation Service. Donaho states that, ba-sically, the key to attracting and holding a game bird population is in creating a year round habitat of food, year round habitat of tood, cover and water as nearly duplicating nature as possible. Many people don't understand that providing supplemental feed alone is not effective. A complete habitat is necessary to encourage sustained popu-

To be most effective these areas should be secured from outside activity by fencing. They should be from one half to three acres in size and spaced so that birds can utilize approximately twenty five to fifty acres sur-rounding them. Primary plants utilized by quail and dove consist of a variety of native grasses, forbs and woody plants.

Donaho further states that

Dept. of Safety urges motorist to comply with 55 miles speed limit The Director of the 1exas conducted by the Depart-epartment of Public Safety ment of Highways and Public

The Director of the Lexas Pepartment of Public Safety has issued an appeal to Texas motorists to give better voluntary compliance to the 55 mile per hour speed limit on the state's highways.

Col. Wilson E. Spier said he is alarmed over the increasing necessitate of reported a very nice Christmas. Mr. and Mrs. Reid went on increasing percentage of drivers exceeding the speed limit, particularly in light of the increasing number of fatalities and major accidents

"From our own ob-servations as well as surveys

ment of Highways and Public Transportation, it is in-dicated that the vast majority of vehicles on our roads are exceeding the legal speed limit of 55 mph," he said. "Meanwhile traffic fa-talities are on the increase, showing an eight per cent rise over the same period last vear. At last report traffic year. At last report traffic deaths have increased from 2,467 at this time last year to 2,675 an increase of 208 deaths.

"What's more, the percentage of increase in deaths is becoming greater with each passing week.
"The latest report indicates that some 74 per cent of motorists are exceeding 55 mph. This compares to 69 per cent exceeding 55 during the calendar-quarter year ending December 1, 1976. Spier noted that while the DPS enforcement effort has been increased tremendously been increased tremendously well over 100 per cent since the new speed law went into effect - shortage of highway patrol personnel makes the task extremely difficult when some three-fourths of the driving public is violating the speed law.

"We are therefore issuing this appeal to motorists in the hope they will realize that slower speed will pay off in the saving of lives, suffering and money in the form of better gas mileage and better gas mileage and insurance costs," he said, insurance costs," he said,
"in addition to extra wear and tear on vehicles."

Spier reported that there is an alarming increase of 50 per cent in deaths on the year, clearly muchaning time excessive speed is a major factor in fatal accidents. And he said the efforts of highway patrol troopers to remove dangerous drivers from the traffic stream will be continued.

"The ultimate solution to the problem of speeding above the limits on Texas highways will come only when the majority of Texas drivers accepts their re-sponsibilities under the s their re-under the Spier added.
