Tornadoes Rip Area Counties

By JIM STEIERT
Brand Farm Editor

Violent weather stalked the Panhandle and South Plains regions Wednesday evening and while the immediate Hereford area came through the heavy storms with only a brief rain shower, neighboring Castro and Swisher counties were both hit by tornadoes.

A cloudburst drenched Hereford about 7:30 last night with KPAN radio logging a moisture accumulation of .55 inches from that storm.

A total of .50 inches of rain was reported from Northwest Grain, west of the Farmer's Corner area north of Hereford, but no rain was recorded at the Milo Center area, according to a spokesman for Pioneer Fertilizer.

Only light sprinkles were reported from the Bootleg Corner area to the west, while .30 inches of rain fell at the Clint Homfeld farm 47 miles northwest of Hereford.

No rain was recorded at the Westway community, but to the south .50 inches of rain was logged at Easter Grain.

Only light showers were recorded at Dawn to the east of Hereford, and at Farmer's Elevator, north of the Dawn community.

Turbulent weather apparently brewed in the vicinity of Dimmitt in neighboring Castro County before working its way eastward along Highway 86 en route to Nazareth, and eventually, to Tulia.

Rainfall ranging from .95 to 1.50 inches was recorded in Dimmitt and a savage hailstorm with hailstones ranging up to tennis ball size pounded that community about 7 p.m. Wednesday.

Mrs. Elvis Barker of 711 Oak, Dimmitt, reported that the roof at the Barker residence was damaged along with the roofs of numerous other homes in that community.

"Most of the cars that were left outside were heavily damaged. We watched cars going by on the street this morning and counted 52 with windshield damage in only a brief time," stated Mrs. Barker.

Windows were knocked out at some homes in Dimmitt as the rapidly building storm apparently unleashed its first round of fury in Castro County before moving eastward.

Prospects were for severe crop damage in the vicinity of the heavy hail, although reports had not been posted this morning concerning effects of the storm on agriculture in the Dimmitt area.

The storm cell which spawned the Dimmitt hailstorm apparently followed an eastward route along Highway 86 running east from Dimmitt and the next area in the storm's path was the eastern Castro County community of Nazareth.

The violent weather struck west of Nazareth with a preliminary hailstorm and the turbulent clouds then dropped a funnel cloud which inflicted damage west of Nazareth, but missed the community itself by a narrow margin.

A mobile home owned by Kent Birkenfeld 1 1/2 miles west of Nazareth was completely demolished by a funnel cloud while Robert Huseman, who lives one mile west of Nazareth, watched the funnel approaching from his home before seeking shelter in the basement there.

"Hail of about egg size preceded the tornado. I live just below a hill and couldn't see too well but I could tell the funnel cloud was coming. You could hear it. It was an awful, loud roaring. I watched it as long as I felt I could, then went to the basement," stated Huseman.

Huseman reported that the tornado blew a cotton trailer at his farm into a neighboring field, and inflicted other damage around the farm.

Combines were also reportedly damaged in the area of the Birkenfeld and Huseman farms, but a second mobile home lying in the path of the twister just west of Nazareth was undamaged.

The funnel cloud then veered off to the northeast and the Nazareth community proper escaped damage, for the most part.

An archway at the Nazareth cemetery was damaged and the funnel then struck facilities of Star Grain, one mile north

Chinese Won't Drop 1st Bomb

TOKYO (AP) — Chinese Premier Hua Guofeng said today his government has committed itself to the development of strategic weapons to break the superpowers' nuclear monopoly, but vowed Peking will never be the first to use atomic arms.

He also said anti-government demonstrations in South Korea heightened instability on the Korean peninsula and that a military dictatorship in Seoul would be contrary to the wishes of the people. But he reiterated that North Korea has no intention of attacking the South.

In a televised speech on the third day of his six-day visit to Japan, Hua said, "We have developed a small quantity of strategic weapons....Our purpose is to destroy the nuclear stranglehold of the superpowers, and to counter the nuclear threat of the hegemonist powers," Chinese diplomatic jargon for the Soviet Union.

Hua pledged his nation would never use, or threaten to use, nuclear weapons against non-nuclear nations. Nor would it ever be the first to use atomic weapons, he said. It was believed the first time a Chinese leader had made such a public commitment.

"In order to preserve national independence and stability, the Chinese people are now engaged in building and strengthening national defense capabilities to the extent our power permits," Hua said in his address before the Japan-China Friendship Association.

China, which has exploded a hydrogen bomb, last week launched two intercontinental ballistic missiles into the South Pacific in its first reported successful test of a nuclear delivery system. The missiles were believed capable of hitting targets

Hereford school board president Sallie Strain said today she hopes the general public will "look at what's best for the overall school district, not just individual kids" when it considers a plan to pair elementary schools.

The plan, along with another which would shift elementary-school attendance zones and a third which would close Shirley Elementary, will be discussed in a public hearing beginning at 8 p.m. today in the high school auditorium.

Mrs. Strain endorsed the pairing plan, which would put grades kindergarten through third in three schools and fourth through sixth in the remaining three campuses.

"I think pairing is the way. I have not wavered in my opinion at all because I feel it's the best long-range plan for all students and taxpayers," Mrs. Strain said.

Pairing, according to school district officials, would balance pupil-teacher ratios throughout the six schools and allow the district to reduce teachers. Staff reductions would be done by not filling certain vacancies in elementary schools.

Declining and shifting enrollment and rising utility and other costs prompted elementary-school principals to devise the three plans. State financial aid is based on average daily attendance, and the school district is projecting around a $50,000 loss in state funds in the 1980-81 school year.

That loss would be coupled with the $91,000 loss experienced this year by the school district.

If one of the three plans is not adopted, district officials have stated that a rise in taxes would be imminent.

"I hope we adopt pairing," Mrs. Strain said. "That may not be the opinion of the other board members, but it certainly is my opinion."

She said that the fact that the plan would involve some additional busing has created more of a roar in the community than any other factor.

"But, we move kids on buses every day, and these kids are just as educated as the rest of them."

Mrs. Strain said she hopes the public response at tonight's meeting is favorable towards pairing.

"We considered public opinion this time in as far as we feel the public is looking at it from the standpoint of what is good for all children and the taxpayer."

"I hope the public will look at what's best for the overall school district, not just individual kids. Most of the complaints I've received so far have been from parents concerned about their own kids. We have to consider all the kids when we (the school board) make a decision."

Educationally, pairing also has its advantages, according to Mrs. Strain.

"I think it has definite educational advantages over what we have right now. I can almost get excited thinking about the advantages you have with pairing—with the primary and intermediate concept."

Most teachers seem to favor the pairing plan, she said, "because they feel it gives them a long-range stability to their jobs. They can plan beyond tomorrow."

Superintendent Harrell Holder will explain the pairing and attendance-zone plans tonight, then field questions from the public.

Iranians Link Attack to U.S.

By The Associated Press

Shooting erupted outside the U.S. Embassy in Tehran and at a residence in the northeastern Iranian city of Mashhad where some of the American hostages are held but there were no injuries, their captors said today.

The militants who reported they were holding the Americans in Mashhad, 440 miles northeast of Tehran, said in a statement carried by Iran's official Pars news agency that the gunmen opened fire at the residence then fled.

The Mashhad students blamed the shooting on "internal mercenaries of Americans staging another plot in order to create obstacles in the way of exporting and spreading our Islamic revolution."

They said President Carter was resorting to "suicidal efforts and tries to stop the trial of the American hostages in any way he can."

They said Carter fears a hostage trial would disclose the operations of the "great Satan," a phrase the militants use to depict the U.S. government.

The students' statement said the United States was trying to "change the determination of our people on the extradition of the deposed shah."

But they said they were sure the people of Mashhad will "frustrate all conspiracies of the American government regarding keeping the hostages."

The militants holding the 53 hostages since Nov. 4 reportedly dispersed their captives to 17 Iranian cities after the aborted U.S. rescue attempt April 25. But State Department sources say they have reason to doubt that the hostages were actually scattered around Iran.

The militants also have said they will try some of the captives as spies and hold on to all of them unless the deposed shah is returned to Iran to face trial.

The Carter administration is delaying a call for new sanctions against Iran in hopes the latest World Court decision will speed the release of the hostages. But Austria's chancellor, just returned from Tehran, reported only "a fair

Miller Appointed Postmaster

Sectional Center Manager/Postmaster C.T. Davis of Amarillo has announced the appointment of Genevieve O. Miller as the new Postmaster of Dawn, effective Saturday.

Mrs. Miller, 61, has served as officer-in-charge of the Dawn Post Office for the past three years.

Mrs. Miller attended West Texas State University and taught school in Ochiltree County and at Dawn. She is the widow of Herbert H. Miller and the mother of three grown children. She is active in the Dawn Music Club, the Deaf Smith County American Red Cross and historical society organizations.

Mrs. Miller will be sworn in during special ceremonies at the Dawn Post Office Friday morning at 10:30.

Residents of the Dawn Community are invited to attend the ceremonies.

Reserve Board Trims Bank Charges

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a move that may lead to lower interest rates for consumers, the Federal Reserve Board is cutting the fee it charges to lend money to the nation's banks. The action underscores a recession that has sent claims for unemployment benefits to the highest level on record.

Several analysts predict the 675,000 first-time unemployment claims filed during the week ending May 17 could mean an annual unemployment rate of 7.5 percent in May. That would translate to about 500,000 more jobless people than the month before.

Despite those warnings, Treasury Secretary G. William Miller told Congress Wednesday that the worst of the recession "may be behind us."

Miller conceded that the nation's slide into recession has been "quite steep," but added that declining interest rates and lean inventories should prevent the downturn from being as severe as the 1974-75 slump.

He again rejected an immediate tax cut to stimulate the faltering economy, saying "inflation is, and must remain, our No. 1 priority."

The Federal Reserve Board's decision to reduce its discount rate for the first time since 1976 — from 13 percent to 12 percent — reflects the recent, dramatic plunge in short-term interest rates referred to by Miller.

Treasury bill rates have fallen below 8 percent and many major banks have lowered their prime lending rate — the interest they charge their best customers — from 20 percent to 14 percent in recent weeks.

These so-called market rates have plummeted as demand for consumer and business credit declined and the U.S. economy entered its first recession in five years.

By cutting its discount rate — the interest charged for loans to member banks — the Federal Reserve Board may have set in motion even further declines in the prime rate, said David M. Jones, an analyst with the Wall Street brokerage house of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co.

Captains Protest Ban on Refugees

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) - As the "Freedom Flotilla" slowly winds to an end, hundreds of boat captains have vowed to keep protesting until the government reverses a policy of fines and seizure for vessels violating the ban on ferrying refugees from Cuba.

As the captains protested, the total number of arrivals climbed steadily toward 90,000. Twenty-eight vessels carrying 2,339 passengers had arrived by early today, bringing the five-week Cuban refugee total to 87,429.

Riot-equipped sheriff's deputies, meanwhile, thwarted attempts Wednesday by 50 boat skippers to block U.S. 1-the southernmost island's only land link to the Florida mainland.

The captains were part of a group of about 200 fishermen who earlier conducted an orderly five-hour rally in front of the federal building in downtown Key West.

Stamford Preacher Hanged in Church

STAMFORD Texas (AP) - This stunned West Texas town is still at a loss to explain the death of Dr. James Enfield, found hanged in the First Baptist Church where he was pastor.

"It's a nightmare, and people keep hoping they will wake up," said the Rev. Larry Armentrout, the associate pastor.

DPS units observing cloud activity then reported a funnel forming just to the west of Tulia. The funnel was reportedly moving east, toward the Tulia community and early warning was given to residents of that community.

Shortly afterward, two tornadoes hammered into Tulia, damaging homes, businesses and power lines, but the early warning averted any casualties.

One home was destroyed and two heavily damaged. Lakeview Cotton Gin, located just west of Tulia was destroyed and a grain elevator and an electric power station were also heavily damaged.

Damage was reported in the downtown business area of Tulia, although it proved less severe in the community than many had first expected.

Bob Carlson, a Tulia resident, watched as the first tornado hit the ground and another formed just as the first one reached the town. The first one struck Tulia, but the second one "was on the ground and then as it approached town, it lifted," said Carlson.

Carlson credited the tornado warning sirens, sounded several minutes before the twisters hit, with saving lives.

In the final regular season rodeo of the year at Guymon Sid Howard placed first in calf roping with a time of 14.130, was second in steer wrestling with a time of 5.725, and placed sixth as the heeler in team roping with a clocking of 25.406 to earn a total of 12 points.

chance" that will happen.

State Department spokesman Thomas Reston told reporters in Washington on Wednesday, "We want to try to gauge the reaction to the decision out of Iran for the moment" before asking for further sanctions, presumably before the U.N. Security Council.

The Carter administration is expected to act within two weeks because "if we don't act by then, the court ruling will lose much of its meaning," said one U.S. official, who asked not to be identified.

The Carter administration moved for sanctions against Iran in the Security Council last January, but was blocked by a veto of the Soviet Union. Some of America's European allies and Japan imposed limited sanctions last week to support the United States.

On Saturday, the International Court of Justice at The Hague ruled that the hostages should be freed immediately and that Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's regime should pay damages to the U.S. government.

Chancellor Bruno Kreisky of Austria, who spoke with Iranian leaders in Tehran Sunday and Monday, told reporters in Athens, Greece, where he is on a state visit there was only "a fair chance that the hostages will be released sooner or later," adding that Iran "is not ready to give in to any kind of pressure."

Iran has already called the world court decision "meaningless," and when its new Parliament convened for the first time Wednesday the question of the hostages was not addressed either by

The pastor's body, clad in khakis, was turned toward the wall near the opening of the church's baptistry.

Justice of the Peace Mozelle Nance, after an investigation that did not include an autopsy, ruled the death self-inflicted.

Senate Approves Rock-Island Bill

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) - It took some personal lobbying by Gov. George Nigh and the full force of the Senate leadership Wednesday to gain Senate approval of a bill to provide $12 million for acquisition and rehabilitation of discarded Rock Island railroad track.

State Sen. Finis Smith, D-Tulsa, came surprisingly close to derauling the proposal, but Nigh's lobbying outside the Senate chambers and some fast-paced parliamentary maneuvering by the leadership kept the bill on track to passage.

Smith hit hard at the bill during three hours of discussion, saying it offered the potential for "the most unconscionable abuse of the public trust of any bill I've seen in the 15 years I've been here." But in the end the bill was approved by a 26-19 margin, one more than the needed majority.

Sen. Herschel Crow, D-Altus,

Senate author, held the bill on the calendar on a motion to reconsider. A vote on the emergency clause, making it effective as soon as it is signed into law by the governor, will occur later. It takes 32 votes to adopt the emergency.

The bill will allow the state Department of Transportation to spend up to $12 million to acquire and rehabilitate an estimated 580 miles of the 1,100 miles of railroad track abandoned when the Rock Island Railroad went out of business.

Strake Says White Politically Motivated

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Secretary of State George Strake says he will count Democratic voters' signatures on John Anderson presidential petitions despite Attorney General Mark White's opinion that he may not.

The Republican state official accused White on Wednesday of letting partisanship, rather than the law, dictate his legal opinion and placed himself on a collision course with White and the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Strake contends Texas law allows persons who voted in the Democratic primary to sign petitions to place Anderson's name on the state's general election ballot as an independent.

But White issued a legal opinion Friday that persons who voted in either the GOP or Democratic primary may not sign an Anderson petition.

"What Mark White says on this issue does not matter," Strake said. He called White's opinion "a partisan effort to chill the legal rights of Mr. Anderson and his potential supporters."

"We had a long, long time there to get ready for it. We knew it was coming. You could see it," he said. "There was no question about what was happening. It was on the ground, dirt was flying around it and it was extremely large."

Carlson said it was hard to believe that no one was injured. Rescue units and repair crews rushed to Tulia from several towns, including Amarillo, Lubbock, Canyon and Silverton.

Most electrical power was restored within three hours although some of the town remained without electricity at dawn today.

In addition to the tornadoes at Tulia, severe thunderstorms roamed across much of the Northwestern Texas during the late evening and night. Baseball size hail was reported south of Lubbock and another tornado was sighted near Spur.

More thunderstorm activity was forecast today for West Texas and thundershower activity was forecast for Southeast Texas. The entire state was to have continued warm, humid weather.

Highs were to be mostly in the 90s except for the Panhandle where readings were to be in the middle 80s and in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas where the mercury was expected to climb above the 100-degree mark.

Evidence Rules Invalid

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A sharply split Texas Court of Criminal Appeals says evidence obtained in a warrantless "stop" and search of a car cannot be used even if the auto was motionless when approached by police.

The 5-4 decision sustained an earlier ruling by a three-judge panel of the court, which the state had asked the court to reconsider because of its possible effect on law enforcement.

The full court upheld the panel's decision reversing the Bellville conviction of Winnie R. Ebarb, who was assessed a $500 fine and one year on probation on charges of carrying a pistol.

Austin County Sheriff T.A. Maddox assembled what the court majority called a "posse" - including the local district attorney - to search for Mrs. Ebarb after an unnamed tipster told him she was carrying illegal pills and a handgun.

Maddox did not obtain a warrant.

The posse, in two automobiles, caught up with Mrs. Ebarb after the car in which she was riding pulled into the driveway of her son's apartment - and came to a stop. The son was driving. Maddox walked up to the car and asked Mrs. Ebarb if he could search it. She said, "Certainly," and got out. Maddox found a pistol in plain sight on the front seat. No drugs were found.

The high court said the fact that Maddox "stopped" Mrs. Ebarb without a warrant based on adequate justification for such an action made the results of the search inadmissible in court - thus nullifying her conviction.

"It matters not whether the person was moving or standing still when the police officer accosted him; what matters is that the person was then restrained in his freedom to move," said the majority opinion by Judge Truman Roberts.

He said the ruling "should curtail only two things." "It should deter officers (and prosecutors, if this case is typical) from undertaking to detain people on evidence which would not warrant a man of reasonable caution in the belief that the action taken was appropriate. ... It also should curtail the prosecutors' practice of offering the fruits of a search and seizure without first proving that the search and seizure were proper under our constitutions," Roberts' opinion said.

Judges Leon Douglas, W.C. Davis, Tom Davis and Carl Dally dissented.

"No amount of legalistic mumbo jumbo can change the facts to show that the officers stopped the appellant (Mrs. Ebarb) when she was already stopped before they arrived," Douglas wrote. "... What the officers did was good police work. They should be commended, not criticized."

Superintendents Say Feds Wrong in Claim

TYLER, Texas (AP) - Current, and former superintendents, testifying in a federal court suit, said they could not agree with government contentions that Mexican-American students are victims of discrimination in the Gregory-Portland school district.

Superintendent Jack Darnell and his predecessor, W.C. Andrews, took the stand in U.S. District Court in Tyler to defend school integration policies.

Assistant Texas Attorney General Susan Dasher asked Darnell Wednesday about charges that Mexican-American students were assigned "soft" courses, rather than more traditional courses such as mathematics and science.

"I am not aware of this and it certainly is not a policy of the school," Darnell replied.

In previous testimony, Andrews was asked if the difference in vocabulary test scores made by Mexican-American and white students indicated a difference in treatment for the two classes of students.

Andrews said he could not reply without more information concerning the test and the students who took it.

Darnell also testified, on cross-examination, that cross-town transportation of students would be excessively high.

"I was saying it would cost 90 cents per mile to transport students," Darnell said.

"Do you think you're paying (school attorney) Mr. Richard Hall 90 cents per mile?" Ms. Dasher asked, but withdrew the question when Hall objected.

The lawsuit seeks to make the Texas Education Agency enforce school desegregation statewide.

The current hearings, specifically involving the Gregory-Portland district, were ordered by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

One of the issues is the ratio of white students to Mexican-Americans in Gregory-Portland elementary schools.

Evidence in the case shows Austin Elementary School in Gregory is 94 percent Mexican-American while East Cliff and Clark elementary schools, both in Portland, are more than 70 percent white.

TEA standards prohibit minority enrollment of more than 66-percent at any one school.

In November 1973 the TEA, under orders from the Justice Department, ordered the Gregory-Portland district to comply with the TEA guidelines or lose its accreditation and state funding.

The case has been in court since.

Gregory and Portland are small suburbs of Corpus Christi.

Kennedy Seeks Open Convention

CLEVELAND (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, calling for an open Democratic National Convention, said today he will release his delegates from any obligation if President Carter debates him, "and I hope Mr. Carter will do the same."

Trailing the president by hundreds of nominating delegates, Kennedy said the convention "should be at liberty to nominate Mr. Carter, to nominate me - or to select a third person. I am not afraid of their (the delegates') decision - or their conscience."

In a speech that aides said was designed to seize the political initiative on the day of Carter's own campaign foray into Ohio, Kennedy said he realizes "better than anyone else the odds against my nomination." But he insisted he is "not prepared to withdraw from this race. I believe that it can be won - and that it must be run for the good of our party and our country."

Two bicycles were reported to police as stolen as Wednesday, bringing the total number of bikes taken this week to five.

Iris Minnis, 305 Ave. J, told police her son's bicycle was stolen from her residence. The bicycle was a yellow and black Western Auto.

Augustine Coronado, 201 Irving, reported that a White's Auto bike was taken from the city swimming pool Wednesday.

Someone entered the high school cosmology lab through a window Wednesday. Nothing was reported missing, however.

Police issued 11 traffic citations Wednesday and investigated one minor traffic accident.

Paul Harvey News Another Kind Of War

In Europe's capitals during the 1950s I was distressed to see downtown business remove all valuables from their show windows and, overnight, to shutter those windows behind locked iron grills.

Such precaution was then unimaginable in the United States.

Now in United States cities, merchants have been forced to barricade themselves against thieves.

Again, the cities of Europe are ahead of us, this time in protecting themselves from terrorists.

If modern weapons capable of incinerating whole cities have rendered big war impractical ...

And if, as Korea and Vietnam attest, small wars are no longer worth what they cost ...

Then the "next war" will be waged with terrorism. Hereafter, misleaders will revert to intimidating nations by kidnapping national leaders.

What's happened in Iran is soon to become commonplace.

Five years ago a Rand scholar, Brian Jenkins, was trying to warn us that "national governments will use terrorist groups for surrogate warfare."

For a thousand years, any government-supported terrorism against diplomats was unthinkable. The diplomats of any nation were safe - even when those nations were at war.

Not anymore.

If the takeover of our Embassy in Tehran was at first the work of uncontrolled mob, it has since been adopted as "a weapon" by the country itself.

Embassies have since been taken over in Bogota and London.

Already in the United States, takeovers of the German consulate and the Carter campaign headquarters in Chicago and bombings of commercial buildings in New York forewarn of what could become an epidemic of terrorism.

Alistair Thomson, former director of crime prevention for Scotland Yard - and still an advisor to that agency on that menace - urges Americans to adopt countermeasures already proved effective in Britain: Ultrasonic systems to detect intruders, microwave devices to trigger alarms, closed-circuit TV.

He says secondary diplomatic installations, political campaign headquarters and corporate offices need to install internal strong-rooms - containing food, weapons, communications equipment - in which the staff can sustain itself in secure isolation until help arrives.

The "inner stronghold system" has been used for centuries in European castles and palaces. Coupled with the latest in electronic systems, Mr. Thomson believes it would make embassies, consulates and corporate headquarters virtually invulnerable.

While most of the sophisticated security equipment is manufactured in the United States, it is used more in Britain. And, says Thomson, "Where good security systems have been installed there is almost never any trouble."

It's sad to have to adopt what Mr. Thomson calls "a security mentality" - to have to lock up the zoo keepers and let the animals run-loose. But that, as Walter Cronkite would say, "is the way it is."

Survey Finding Shows Charities As Secretive

DALLAS (AP) — More than half of the nation's charitable foundations are so secretive about their operations that they refuse to provide "minimally acceptable" information about themselves, says a committee which spent four years trying to get the data.

Nearly one-third of the 208 foundations surveyed refused to give any information at all, and 13 have unlisted numbers, according to a report released Wednesday by the National Committee for Responsive Philanthropy.

All the foundations covered in the report have assets of $25 million or more, the study said. "We think the findings of this study are a little astounding even for those of us who have experienced how difficult it is to get information about many foundations," said Robert Bothwell, the committee's executive director.

The NCRP study involved requesting from the foundations information about their grants, finances and governance.

The NCRP describes itself as a coalition of 120 organizations and individuals concerned because private philanthropy is "not very responsive to new charities."

"We believe this study illustrates an attitude that is pervasive within the foundation world: that foundations do not need to reach out to the public ... that foundations do not have to reach out to organizations that are seeking grants," he said.

Bothwell said foundations are "cut off" from charities run by "the poor, minorities, the young and most workers," and that "the large majority of foundation funds go to long-established, relatively well-known charities with very traditional approaches to social problems."

The public has a right to information, Bothwell said, because of tax exemptions granted foundations and donors, the trust agreement which is the legal basis of foundations, and because foundations' activities have a direct impact on the public.

"We made extraordinary efforts to gather those materials," Bothwell said. The foundations were then rated according to their responses to the requests. A "minimally acceptable" score was 54.

The report was released in Dallas as the 31st annual meeting of the Council on Foundations began. The NCRP is not part of the council, which is the official association of private, corporate and community foundations.

"We have no quarrel with public accountability," said Granville Austin, council spokesman. "And some parts of the NCRP report are excellent."

"You do have some council members with a 'the public be damned' attitude, and some are shy about publicity for their good works," he said. "But most others believe strongly in accountability."

Austin said council members were given a preview of the NCRP findings in a stormy two-hour meeting Tuesday. He said the report will "make something of a flap here because many foundations are given a zero rating and they don't think they deserve it."

Of 13 Texas foundations surveyed, six received zeros, the highest percentage in the country. Only one — The Moody Foundation in Galveston — got an "acceptable" score of 59.

Surgery May Cause Problems

ATLANTA (AP) — Intestinal bypass surgery has been a popular and highly effective way for obese people to lose weight, but now a doctor says it leads to complications that mean they could lose their lives.

Arthritis, kidney and lung disease have developed in more than 15 percent of the surgery patients, and the technique leads to deadly complications in 4 percent, according to a study by Dr. Peter D. Utsinger, associate professor of medicine at Temple University and a researcher at Germantown Hospital in Philadelphia.

The procedure, already on the decline, won't be used at all after the next few months, Utsinger predicted.

Utsinger is presenting his findings today at the Arthritis Foundation's annual scientific meeting in Atlanta.

Intestinal bypass surgery — performed on about 3,000 Americans each year since the '60s — involves tying off part of the small intestine to decrease the amount of food digested.

"We believe that bypass surgery overwhelms the digestive system," Utsinger said. "It seems that in a desperate attempt to do the job of absorbing digested food, the blood also absorbs organisms which normally would remain in the bowel. These organisms circulate throughout the body and then settle into joints and other organs and tissues, leading to damage."

Patients who suffer from "bypass disease" can relieve the problem by having sutures removed and the intestine returned to full size.

"Thank God for these patients," Utsinger said. "If you release the valve, everything goes away."

At least 5 percent of the bypass patients have had to have the operation reversed, he said.

Utsinger said in an interview Wednesday that "dead organisms leaking out of the bypassed portion... are causing the problems."

Organisms — called bacterial antigens — may cause arthritis, he said. The bypass technique, developed in the 1960s, has been used on more than 40,000 Americans. But the problems are emerging only now because there is a two-to-six year delay between the operation and onset of disease, Utsinger said.

"Over the next month or two, people will accept the premise that the operation should be discontinued," he said. "The trend will then be toward other types of bypass — stomach bypass for instance," a new procedure with no more than several hundred performed.

He urged meticulous follow-up procedures to catch any complications that develop from new techniques.

"The patient needs to be told how highly experimental these operations are," he added. "They are told on one hand that being overweight is bad, but they need to know more about the operation being done."

Among the persons to have had intestinal bypass surgery is trumpeter Al Hirt. He said his weight had gone from 333 pounds to 290 pounds within a month and a half of the operation in 1972.

Prosecutor Finds Jordan Innocent of Charge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Hamilton Jordan cocaine-snorting case is over, leaving Jordan exuberant and some legal authorities troubled about the proper way to investigate allegations against high public officials.

In a 53-page report issued Wednesday, special prosecutor Arthur Christy concluded that "there is insufficient evidence to warrant the bringing of criminal charges" against the White House chief of staff.

Moreover, Christy described Jordan's accusers in terms that cast doubt on their credibility.

The Christy report prompted a champagne celebration at the White House with President Carter hugging Jordan in congratulations and Jordan asserting that the result vindicates his faith in the legal system.

The case went to a special prosecutor because of the Watergate-inspired Ethics in Government Act. Some legal authorities suggest the statute may encourage frivolous allegations against well-known public officials, allegations of a type that would be more quickly dismissed in the normal investigative process.

The Jordan case arose last summer while Steven Rubell and other owners of Studio 54, a New York night club, were under investigation for evading federal income taxes on more than $2.5 million in receipts. During plea bargaining with prosecutors, Rubell — who is now serving a prison term for tax evasion — said Jordan had used cocaine while at Studio 54.

Jordan acknowledged visiting the night club with friends June 27, 1978, but denied ever having used cocaine.

Attorney General Benjamin Civiletti ordered an investigation of the Studio 54 matter and later expanded it to cover allegations that Jordan had used cocaine at a Beverly Hills, Calif., restaurant Oct. 21, 1977, and at a party the next night at the Beverly Hills home of Democratic fundraiser Leo Wyler.

Civiletti concluded last November that there was no evidence warranting criminal charges. But he said he was compelled by the Ethics in Government Act to call in a

TSTI Faculty Receives Pay Hike

Texas State Technical Institutes' faculty and staff members were voted a pay increase for the 1981 fiscal year by the TSTI Board of Regents today.

Regents, meeting on the TSTI-Sweetwater campus, approved a 5.1 percent wage hike for staff members and a 3 percent plus $600 raise for faculty. The minimum wage for TSTI employees as of September 1, 1980, was set at $3.35 per hour by regents.

Due to increased food service costs at TSTI Amarillo, Harlingen and Sweetwater, regents approved a board rate increase for these campuses. Meal plans and rates effective September 1, 1980, at TSTI-Amarillo will be:

15 meal per week plan at $275.00 per quarter (a $25.00 increase).

20 meal per week plan at $310.00 per quarter (1 $35.00 increase).

Regents awarded a contract for $644,956.00 to Perry Cates, Construction Company of Amarillo, for the renovations of buildings 1400 and 3400 on the TSTI-Amarillo campus. The Learning Resource Center which will house student services, admissions, the business and personnel offices and library will be located in building 1400. Building 3400 will house the Auto Body Repair program.

In further action, regents approved a lease agreement with Atex Oil Company for the use of two above-the-ground fuel storage tanks on the TSTI-Amarillo campus.

Asphalt Oil Truck Hits Train; Kills 23 Persons

SWIFT CURRENT, Saskatchewan (AP) — Twenty-three persons were killed and 11 injured, two critically, when a bus carrying Canadian railway workers was sideswiped by a car, rolled over and hit from behind by a truck carrying hot asphalt oil, officials said.

It was the province's worst transportation disaster since 37 persons were killed in a plane crash 26 years ago.

Some of the victims were crushed by the truck's impact and the top of the bus was ripped from the chassis.

Others were burned when the truck, carrying 7,500 gallons of the hot oil, exploded and engulfed the wreckage in flame, witnesses said.

Many of the bodies were taken to Swift Current's hockey arena, which was turned into a temporary morgue. The accident occurred about 20 miles from Swift Current.

It took firemen more than two hours to extinguish the fire.

"There were bodies all over," said Bill Junken, a Canadian Pacific Rail employee who took part in rescue efforts. "People were rushing around and trying to help...There was mass confusion. People were shouting, 'Get this guy! Pull this man out!'"

The crash was "just a massive horrible, horrible sight," said Junken. "Oil was burning and splashing all over...Nurses and doctors were everywhere running around screaming." Blue CP Rail construction safety hats littered the highway, he said.

Rheal Forest of St. Milo in Manitoba, said there were huge flames, white smoke and "explosions every five minutes" as men struggled to free themselves from underneath the truck.

Saskatchewan's chief coroner, Dr. J. Stewart McMillan, said the accident occurred about 2:30 p.m. Wednesday on the Trans-Canada Highway near the Alberta-Saskatchewan borders.

McMillan declined to specify the conditions of those injured. Others said some survivors were badly burned.

McMillan said he believed all the dead were on a school bus carrying the rail crew and that the driver of the truck and two persons in the car survived. Witnesses said the car overturned.

McMillan said many crewmembers, believed to all be young men, died at the scene but others died in nearby hospitals.

Rain had fallen in the area and there were reports the work crew had quit early because of the rain.

CP Rail spokesman said between 30 and 36 men were repairing a mainline track near the collision site and were being driven to a special train car where they were to spend the night.

ment right to free speech enabled him to make a political statement by bringing a male date to the prom.

After the ruling, Fricke said: "I think a majority of the students understand this is a human rights issue, and support me."

School Superintendent Robert G. Condon said Pettine's ruling will not result in cancellation of the dance. School Principal Richard B. Lynch said during a hearing before Pettine last week that the school "would have to consider" calling off the dance if Fricke and his prospective date, Paul Guilbert, 18, were allowed to attend.

Condon said he didn't think it would be fair to deny other students their senior prom, and he agreed with Pettine that the school should provide the couple protection at the dance.

In his ruling, released a week after a hearing on a suit filed by Fricke, Pettine overruled the objections of school officials, saying the 18-year-old's right to make a statement about his sexuality outweighs their fears of disruption or violence.

"To rule otherwise would completely subvert free speech in the schools by granting other students a heckler's veto, allowing them to decide through prohibited and violent methods, what speech will be heard," Pettine wrote.

"The First Amendment does not tolerate mob rule by unruly school children," he said.

Lynch had underscored his argument by testifying that Fricke was punched in the eye by a student in a high school corridor after his court fight became public. He said Fricke has been provided with a safety escort in school ever since.

Guilbert failed a year ago in a similar effort to bring a male date to his junior prom at Cumberland High because, at 17, he was a minor. He now resides in New York City.

Homosexual Case Filed In Court

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Cumberland school officials have asked a federal appeals court to block an order permitting homosexual student Aaron Fricke to take another male to the senior prom Friday night.

School Committee lawyer V. James Santaniello filed the motion late Wednesday with the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Boston after U.S. District Judge Raymond J. Pettine upheld Fricke's prom plans.

Pettine ruled Wednesday that Fricke's First Amend-

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Parking permit information at Texas A&M is public record and must be disclosed on request, Attorney General Mark White said Wednesday.

The opinion was requested by James Bond, general counsel for the Texas A&M System.

White said the A&M student newspaper submitted a list of parking permit numbers, and asked the university to provide the names of the holders of the permits.

University officials asked whether the records were covered by privacy laws requiring student consent for release of the information.

In another opinion Wednesday, White said minors may be admitted to a mental hospital as a voluntary patient only with the minor's informed consent.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Susan Vittum, the daughter of a retired Air Force master sergeant, is the new cadet commander of the 825th Air Force ROTC Corps at the University of Texas — the first woman to hold that job.

"ROTC has really helped me discover a lot of things about myself," said Miss Vittum, 21. "I have a lot more strength. I'm more independent. I've had to compete all the time against males. And I'm always competing against myself."

Miss Vittum will begin the fall semester as a senior in computer sciences. She is the daughter of retired Master Sgt. and Mrs. Richard Vittum of San Antonio.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Board Chairman Robert Parker of the Parker Drilling Co. of Tulsa, Okla., will keynote the fourth annual Conference for Teachers of Free Enterprise, June 4-6, at the University of Texas.

Other speakers include Dr. Leslie Peacock, former vice chairman of Texas Commerce Bancshares.

About 175 teachers are expected to attend the conference.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission approved a permit Wednesday for Conoco Inc. to conduct uranium mining operations approximately four miles southwest of Fashing in Atascosa County.

The permit site covers 847 acres, with 54 acres to be mined.

The commission also approved the application of Chevron Resources Co. to add 87 acres to its Panna Maria uranium mining area, which covers 2,856 acres in Karnes County.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — City council members have refused to call for a public hearing on the problem-plagued South Texas Nuclear Project, despite the $100,000 fine assessed against the project's managing partner for quality control problems.

San Antonio owns 28 percent interest in the huge nuclear power plant being built near Bay City. Houston Lighting & Power Co. is the managing partner, while Austin and Central Power & Light Co. are the other partners.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission levied the fine because some quality control procedures were not being followed. HL&P paid the fine and agreed to follow corrective steps.

But the fine prompted local anti-nuclear activists to ask the council for a public hearing on the project. The council voted 7-4 Tuesday night against the request.

The project's completion date has been delayed numerous times, and the cost has more than doubled to some $2.4 billion.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The financially troubled Bexar County Hospital next month will reopen the 20 surgical beds it closed Feb. 1 because of a nurse shortages, officials say.

A multimillion-dollar budget deficit led to the shortage, prompting the officials to cut back on emergency surgery services.

The Emergency Medical Service was instructed to take major trauma cases, such as gunshot and auto accident victims, to other hospitals. Bexar County Hospital usually handles 60 percent of those cases in the county.

Virginia Mousseau, assistant administrator for nursing services, told the county hospital district board Tuesday that continuing success in nurse recruiting makes the reopening possible.

'A Mixture of Crudeness And Warmth'

The Paradox of Brezhnev

The necessity of arms control was much on the minds of Leonid Brezhnev and Jimmy Carter as they met for the first time in June 1979.

"God will not forgive us if we fail," said the Soviet president to the U.S. president.

As paradoxical as that reference to God by the leader of an officially godless state was Brezhnev himself, a man described by former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger as "a mixture of crudeness and warmth; at the same time brutal and engaging, cunning and disarming."

Likewise were the policies, both foreign and domestic, that he pursued.

He will be remembered abroad both for the detente that eased tensions with the West and for the Brezhnev Doctrine that sought to justify brutal Soviet invasions of Czechoslovakia in 1968 and Afghanistan in 1980.

He will be remembered at home not only for an improved national standard of living but for the imprisonments and deportations of his regime's critics.

He may be most lauded by future Soviet history books for the 1975 Helsinki accords in which the USSR and its satellites pledged greater respect for human rights in exchange for recognition of their postwar territorial gains. (Their pledge, of course, was an empty one.)

Brezhnev held power longer than any Soviet leader except Joseph Stalin. Unlike his predecessors, however, Brezhnev never became the object of a "personality cult."

His tenure marked what some historians termed a "bureaucratization" of the Soviet system and a diminution of its revolutionary zeal.

Beemans Success As Top Bee Men

EAGLEVILLE, Calif. (NEA) — You might think that the fact that Henry and Fred Beeman raise bees is something the Ripley people would be interested in knowing. But believe it or not, they already do.

Most residents of Northern California's Surprise Valley know about the Beemans, too.

Folks buy their tasty natural honey in containers ranging in size from 2½ pounds to 60 pounds. They stir it into cups of tea, substitute it for sugar in cooking or spoon it onto graham crackers for a snack.

Just how Ripley found out about the Beeman bee men is uncertain.

Just how Henry Beeman became a bee man is better known. It happened about 1932 when Beeman entered the bee business with a large Central California firm.

As his son, Fred, explains, "They were paying a little better than they were on the ranches."

By the mid-1930s, Beeman was into business for himself. Surprise Valley became the focus of operations because of its abundant dryland alfalfa farms, which caused the bees to produce a steady honey flow.

Changes in agricultural practices have reduced the flow. Years ago the average amount of honey per hive was 60 to 120 pounds; today it's closer to 20 to 30 pounds. But the valley is still home to the Beemans.

Actually, the family's operations move around Northern California on an annual basis.

In early spring, the Beemans travel south for their bees to pollinate almonds near the town of Chico. They gradually work north as the weather warms, finally arriving in the valley sometime in May.

In fall, the Beemans again load their hives onto trucks and drive south.

Throughout much of the year, either Henry or Fred is on the road, moving or tending hives.

The hours are often difficult.

Transporting, for example, must be done at night or on cloudy, rainy days. The bees fly off if the skies are too bright or if temperatures climb above 55 degrees.

Night travel is necessary for other reasons, too.

"Sometimes bees come out when you stop at a restaurant," explains Fred with a big smile. "And sometimes people don't appreciate that."

Something Ripley may not appreciate is the problem of a Beeman being a bee man.

Taxpayers Angry With Lawsuit

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — An outraged taxpayers group says city fathers will have to answer for their refusal to drop a lawsuit filed against everybody in town.

But at least one city councilman thinks the leaders of the Corpus Christi Taxpayers Association — not the council — should answer to city residents for the turmoil in this Gulf coast resort city.

"They are the ones who precipitated the turmoil. They are the ones responsible for the climate we are in. They are the ones who have to answer," said Councilman David Diaz.

Embattled councilmen held their ground as the war of words over a tax limiting proposition and a city lawsuit challenging its validity "escalated" during a council session Wednesday.

"We feel it is unethical, morally wrong and a misuse of public funds to be suing every citizen in this city with our own tax dollars," said Tom Hunt, a spokesman for the taxpayer's group.

The 400-member group scheduled a meeting today to organize a recall drive against the mayor and four councilmen who voted to file the suit.

The city filed suit last week against all taxpayers, residents, property owners and persons claiming a financial interest in Corpus Christi.

The suit challenges the validity of a city charter amendment — known as Proposition 14 and overwhelmingly approved by voters last month — that cuts the tax rate from 74 to 68 cents per $100 valuation and limits annual tax increases to 6 percent.

"We went to the meeting to allow them (the council) an honorable out. To give them a way to back down gracefully," said association secretary Joe O'Brien. "As it's going to be now, it's going to tear the community wide open with this recall election."

Targeted for removal are Mayor Luther Jones and councilmen Cliff Zarsky, Jack Dumphy, Ed Sample, and David Diaz. The association must collect 9,400 signatures on a petition to force a recall election.

Hunt urged councilmen to consider the litigation's expense to both the city and taxpayers and the turmoil that would result from a recall election.

"They (association members) are using inflammatory tactics to get the people out in arms," Diaz said after the meeting. "There is always a small faction of malcontents, but the responsible citizens will not listen."

Diaz said the council has no intention of reconsidering the suit.

"We are not going to be a part of their frivolous action. Their highly irresponsible actions are setting the city back five to 10 years in progress," the councilman said.

He said state law requires that ad valorem taxes be based on true market value. He said the six annual limit imposed by the amendment would fly in the face of state law if true market value increased by more than 6 percent.

HOW'S THE WEATHER down there, Shorty? That may have been the question that Henry Cooper, an 18-hand-high shire horse, posed to Long Ears, a 26-inch-high miniature donkey, when the two met recently at an English brewery. Incidentally, Henry Cooper was named for an English boxer.

Soccer Receives Low Ratings

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Sports Writer

Now that the threat of a baseball strike has been postponed for one year, ABC's prime time baseball can begin this Monday night without interruption and its Sunday soccer matches can continue in obscurity. It's true that all sides — the players, owners and television — would have been hurt by a baseball strike. The players wouldn't have drawn their salaries, the owners wouldn't have drawn their gate, concession and TV revenues and television itself wouldn't have drawn flies with its substitute baseball programming. But as far as we can figure out, the only possible beneficiary from a baseball strike would have been the North American Soccer League's national telecasts. The ABC soccer shows are well-produced and well-promoted, and they have one of ABC's top broadcasters, Jim McKay, doing the play-by-play. It's just that hardly anybody's watching. Soccer might never be a hot TV ticket in the United States, but its chances of getting a toehold are near nil when it must compete each Sunday with local baseball. Who's going to watch Vancouver-Tampa Bay — even if they are last year's Soccer Bowl finalists — in Chicago when the Cubs are on or in New York when the Yankees are playing? According to the ratings, only the die-hard soccer fan. ABC's premier 1980 soccer telecast May 18 drew a national rating of 2.1, which means a little more than 2 percent of America's TV homes were watching, and a 7 percent share of the sets that were on.

In New York, soccer had 4 percent of the viewing audience, while the Yankees and Mets totaled 40 percent. In Chicago, soccer had 6 percent to the 50 percent watching the Cubs or the White Sox.

A baseball strike would seem to be the only way to get viewers to give televised soccer a chance. "We love it whenever ABC does soccer," says an executive at NBC Sports. "We just wish the soccer season went all year."

ABC's NASL contract requires that at least two games involve the Cosmos. The league, which makes the schedule, made a big mistake in not starting with its best foot forward and opening with the Cosmos.

CBS learned that lesson with pro basketball this season, when the ratings improved because of the near-weekly appearances by the Celtics and Larry Bird or the Lakers and Magic Johnson.

When you've got it, flaunt it, and from a national standpoint, all the NASL has right now is the Cosmos. After a winter of not thinking soccer, the viewing public has to be reminded there still is an NASL, and that it's back on television. The first telecast is extremely important for creating interest and building momentum.

A Super Bowl rematch between Pittsburgh and Los Angeles is one thing, but a Soccer Bowl rematch is another matter altogether. And if you doubt this, see how many people know who the NASL champion is.

This Sunday, it's the Cosmos vs. Washington and Johan Cruyff — the ideal matchup of super-team against super-player — and if the ratings don't improve, the NASL-ABC marriage might be on the rocks.

Caujolle Upsets Connors

PARIS (AP) — It was a classic choke and a classic display of a tour-hardened champion's nerve and intestinal fortitude.

The scene was Roland Garros stadium, setting of the French Open, with 18,000 fans hooting football-style on Wednesday for unheralded Frenchman Jean-Francois Caujolle to put the seal on the seemingly impossible: a three-set upset of Jimmy Connors.

Caujolle had gracefully played the slow clay courts to cut down the American's power game and easily won the first two sets 6-3, 6-2. In the crucial third set, the tall, loose 27-year-old Frenchman with the long wavy black hair twice broke Connor's serve to lead 5-2. Connors, serving, slipped behind 30-40, setting up match point.

This was the moment a young Frenchman dreams of. On other courts Wednesday, other American stars, John McEnroe and Vitas Gerulaitis had won their matches as expected, and so had Eddie Dibbs. But on the big centercourt, the third-seeded Connors came within one point of one of his worst drubbings and Caujolle a single point from instant stardom.

After a long volley Caujolle tried with a passing shot wide. Match point was saved.

Connors served at deuce and won the point. His advantage. He served again, and long rally followed — the two left-handers pounding ground strokes across the clay, until Connors dared a drop shot. It was a winner, and the game went to Connors. Caujolle led 5-3.

Connors, clowning on a disputed call, drew more hoots from the frustrated French crowd, and he fought to a break point on Caujolle's serve. The Frenchman cooled down, smashed an ace by Connors. It was back to deuce.

But for Caujolle, it was not to be. Connors won the next point and then broke the Frenchman's serve to make it 5-4 and leave Caujolle so furious that he batted a ball out of the stadium.

Connors held his serve and then broke Caujolle's, and with it the Frenchman's will, his concentration and certainly all that hope for glory. The third set, instead of going 6-2 to give the match to Caujolle, went 7-5 to Connors, who then had little trouble putting the match away with two 6-1 sets.

McEnroe, making his first appearance here since a 1977 juniors try, was bothered by a blistered hand, but still put away Per-Hertquist of Sweden 6-4, 7-6, 6-0. Gerulaitis, after a first round scare, had little trouble with fellow American Fritz Bochning, dispatching him 6-1, 6-2, 6-1. Dibbs beat French 16-year old Thierry Tulasne 6-4, 6-2, 7-5.

Chris Evert Lloyd got off to a breezy start in her defense of the $42,500 women's title, humbling France's Caroline Franch 6-0, 6-0.

OLYMPICS
SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Defections by coaches, athletes and officials from Australia's Olympic team cast serious doubt about the country's participation in the Moscow Summer Olympics, despite a decision by the Olympic federation to compete.

The Australian Field Hockey Federation voted Wednesday to stay home following similar votes by the yachting, equestrian and women's volleyball teams. TUUIAN Olympic Federation voted 6-5 Friday to send a team to Moscow. The decision divided the nation which hosted the 1956 Olympics.

The Australian government, led by Prime Minister Malcolm Fraser, was angered by the decision and has stepped up pressure on sports organizations to reverse the vote.

BASKETBALL
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Austin Carr of Cleveland and Richard Washington of Milwaukee were among the 22 players selected by the Dallas Mavericks in the National Basketball Association expansion draft.

Featured Display

People visiting during Pioneer Day festivities are invited to tour the Deaf Smith County Museum. A new exhibit on the lower floor of the museum shows baby clothes of early pioneers. This is a special feature corresponding with Pioneer Day. The clothes were handmade of fine batiste or wool flannel by mothers, grandmothers, and doting aunts. Several of the clothes are exquisitely trimmed with lace, embroidery, and silk ribbon. The display was arranged by Mary Elizabeth Barnard and Dortha Prowell, members of the Board of Directors of the museum. Shown with the lower floor display is Mrs. Barnard. (Brand photo by Denise Smith)

DSC Historical Society To Meet

Deaf Smith Historical Society will hold its annual meeting at 2 p.m. Sunday in the county museum, and will elect directors for the coming year. Donald Hicks, president, urges all members to attend this session.

Reports of business and projects of the society will be given for discussion and approval by members. Membership renewals are due at this time, and new members are invited to join the society, Hicks said. Annual dues remain at $2.50, the amount set when the society was organized in 1966.

Last year the group voted to establish life memberships at $250 for those who wish to make a larger contribution.

Society members who attend the meeting Sunday will have an opportunity to see results of work which has recently been done on the museum. In addition to a new roof, the building has been brightened with new paint and the Northwest Room is freshly redecorated. Also, preservation work has been done on some of the outdoor exhibits.

A report this month shows more than 8,000 visitors to the museum registered the past year. This total is equal to that of the preceding year, although the number of out-of-town visitors dropped considerably in keeping with the drop in tourism.

Visitors included approximately a thousand students on school tours, and 15 club tours.

The Newspaper Bible

"MAIL TO GOD'S AMBASSADOR!"

The next day, the news that Jesus was on the way to Jerusalem swept through the city, and a huge crowd of Passover visitors

Took palm branches and went down the road to meet Him, shouting, "The Savior! God bless the King of Israel! Hail to God's Ambassador!"

Jesus rode along on a young donkey, fulfilling the prophecy that said:

"Don't be afraid of your King, people of Israel, for He will come to you meekly, sitting on a donkey's colt!"

(His disciples didn't realize at the time that this was a fulfillment of prophecy; but after Jesus returned to His glory in heaven, then they noticed how many prophecies of Scripture had come true before their eyes.)

And those in the crowd who had seen Jesus call Lazarus back to life were telling all about it.

That was the main reason why so many went out to meet Him — because they had heard about his mighty miracle.

Then the Pharisees said to each other, "We've lost. Look — the whole world has gone after him!"

The informal program at tomorrow's dinner will have Rogers Orr of Lubbock as emcee. He is a 1930 alumni of HHS who is a retired teacher.

Other HHS students of the period around 1930, and friends of the out-of-town class members, are invited to attend the reunion if they wish.

Ann Landers

World-Wide Breakdown

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please tell me if the whole world is having a mass nervous breakdown, or am I the one who is losing my mind? I read in the Las Vegas Sun that the residents of Beatty, Nev., got together and gave a benefit to raise money to help rebuild a house of prostitution that burned down. Their goal was $5,000.

It seems the madam is a very popular woman. Every year she buys a full-page ad in the Beatty high school annual. She has helped purchase band uniforms for the students and donates money to the volunteer fire department.

What I cannot understand is how this dame gets away with it. Isn't prostitution against the law in our country? Everyone I have mentioned this to thinks it's funny. My husband (and this really burned me up) said, "Madam What's-er Name must be quite a gal. I'd love to meet her some time." What are the facts, Ann? Shocked, Mad And Needing Answers

DEAR SHOCKED, MAD, ECT.: Prostitution is legal in some counties in Nevada and the madam lives in one of those counties. Since she is operating a legitimate business (for which, obviously, there is some demand) and she seems like a big-hearted soul, I think it's rather sweet that the townspeople are giving her a hand.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am waging a secret war with cigarette smokers and using any and all methods to get even. There is no point in trying to discourage smokers. They are a crazy breed of addicts, and we'd better face it. I once told a man who was puffing away in an elevator that I was allergic to cigarette smoke, and he said, "That's tough."

No one in my office is aware that I despise people who smoke, so I strike back secretly. I have slashed tires in the parking lot behind our office building, broken car windows and made obscene phone calls in the middle of the night.

I agree, smoke is ambient and smokers have a right to the air space around them. However, with the same logic, I could put a dead fish in my desk drawer and claim nobody in the office has a right to be offended by it since it is within my air space.

I know I'm fighting a losing battle, but I won't give up. Any suggestions?—Battle of The Republic

DEAR HYMN FOR HER—YOU DIDN'T SAY!: I suggest that you get some professional help and learn to vent your anger in socially acceptable ways.

If you continue to slash tires, break windows and make obscene phone calls, you just might land in the slammer or wind up with a dent in your skull.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We have a neighbor how is a professional bum. (His mother says he is emotionally ill, but I don't believe it.)

This guy walks into our house and helps himself to food whenever he feels like it. It's real weird the way he appears all of a sudden. None of our family wants him around. He doesn't say much—just stands around and listens to our conversations.

How can we get rid of him?—Disgusted in California

DEAR DISGUSTED: Does this person have a key to your home? If not, how does he get in? I can't believe intelligent people would leave their doors open these days. Doors not only should be locked, but also bolted at all times. Get with it, dummy.

Is alcoholism ruining your life? Know the danger signals and what to do. Read the booklet, "Alcoholism—Hope and Help," by Ann Landers. Enclose 50 cents with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

began cheesemaking as a home dairy operation, with a herd of five cows, in the Swiss colony of New Glarus, Wisconsin.

HHS Senior Class Presents $1,000 Check to MD Assoc.

The Hereford High School senior class held several fund raising events during the 1979-80 year to defray senior expenses. Class representatives decided to present the local Muscular Dystrophy Association with a $1,000 check to be used on MD patients in this area.

The check was presented to Jerry Johnson, MD city coordinator and MD patient Joey Mazurek, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Mazurek Jr.

Senior class president Tim Ruland, Mary Garcia, vice president; and Felinda Trolinder, class secretary; made the presentation.

Jerry Johnson recently announced that the Hereford Elks Lodge was chosen as the number one fund raising organization in the Panhandle for MD with a total of $15,400 last year and currently $3,762 for this year.

Endurance Ride Tests Horsewoman

Lisa Womack of Manford, Okla., who as a child lived in Hereford and still comes to visit relatives here, proved her ability as a horsewoman and won third place in an endurance ride recently at Camden, Mo.

Mrs. Womack is the daughter of Mattie Hitchings. Her grandmother is Mrs. Pat Lawton and her great-grandmother Mrs. George Beams, who reside at 601 E. 3rd. When she was a child she attended school here for a time.

Riding her Missouri Fox Trotter, "Doll," Mrs. Womack was one of 18 participants in the Dogwood Colorama Endurance Ride on a recent weekend. The rider went down a mountainside, over creeks and through miles of rough terrain and were judged for horsemanship and care of their animals.

She has ridden for years, mostly for enjoyment, and her 13-year-old daughter Yvonne is also a horsewoman. Mrs. Womack plans to ride in several parades this summer in cities of Oklahoma.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor: On behalf of some concerned students at Hereford High School, as well as some parents, I am writing this letter to pose some questions about the changes made in policies at HHS.

I am a graduate of HHS and I am proud of the school and all it has done for me. But I, along with some other students and parents, believe the system is slipping—maybe not its educational value but in its ability to Hereford school spirit.

I think some apparent policy changes made by the administration the past two years are partly to blame. Do these changes mean that school spirit has to be stifled at every turn?

For instance, there once was a 10 to 15-minute period for announcements before first-period classes. It was set aside for students and faculty to make known to the students, upcoming events and school activities. Birthdays were announced ever once in a while; cheerleaders sang songs or made up cheers to proclaim school victories, or to announce upcoming sports events; skits and small humorous statements were made to announce weekly events.

Now some of this may sound foolish to some, but the reason was simple—to catch and hold the attention of the average student at HHS. The announcements were changed to formal.

Airman Ends Basic Term

Airman Richard H. Thames, son of Joe A. Thames, 203 Hickory, has been assigned to Chanute Air Force Base, Ill., after completing Air Force basic training during six weeks at Lackland AF Base in San Antonio.

His training included Air Force mission, organization and customs. He also received special training in human relations. At Chanute he will be given specialized instruction in aircraft maintenance.

strict, newlike reports, and many students quit listening to them. The question I ask, was it for fear of the HHS image?

Does change in administration mean that students must go to school militarily with no enjoyment for learning? There was a time when student response, such as an outburst of laughter, at school assembly programs was considered a healthy involvement. Why has this spirit been reprimanded?

Does change in administration mean that achievers have to be punished and the minority of triple offenders be pardoned. Does it create a bad school image to punish certain students?

I think more citizens of Hereford need to get involved with HHS, and not just by an occasional visit to a school board meeting. If you see a stifling of school spirit, it is too late to ask why?

IN WASHINGTON After the flight

Fort Walton Beach, Fla. (NEA) - "We shouldn't let a family with six kids live in that jungle out there," says a fiery John McCarthy. "No matter what we do with them, it's a helluva lot better than keeping them here."

What McCarthy calls a "jungle" is a sprawling tent city in this Florida panhandle community that serves as a processing center and temporary home for almost 10,000 Cuban refugees now seeking political asylum in this country.

Although the Cubans' dramatic flight from their homes in a flotilla of overloaded fishing boats has captured the public's imagination, too little attention has been paid to the complex task of relocating them in the United States.

When that story is told, John McCarthy will be one of its heroes. An eternally optimistic Irishman whose peripatetic lifestyle belies his 66 years of age, he has spent almost his entire adult life resettling refugees around the globe.

"No matter where you go, we're a world of refugees," he says, noting that while aiding in relocating the Cubans here he is simultaneously working on resettling 5,000 Afghanistan political refugees, victims of the Soviet Union's military invasion of their country, in Frankfurt, West Germany.

McCarthy also has moved a band of Yao tribesmen from Laos to Montgomery, Ala., found a home for the exiled Royal Laotian Ballet with a Mormon community in Nashville, Tenn., and resettled 30,000 South Vietnamese in the Philippines.

The executive director of Migration and Refugee Services for the United States Catholic Conference, McCarthy represents one of several non-government agencies whose efforts are crucial to the success of the relocation operation here.

The popular assumption is that the federal government is wholly responsible for that work — and the processing center here is indeed filled with representatives of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, State Department, Immigration and Naturalization Service, Federal Bureau of Investigation, Central Intelligence Agency, Public Health Service, Air Force, Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

But they perform only conventional bureaucratic functions, confining their efforts to providing temporary support facilities and processing the refugees for the necessary security, health and other federal clearances.

The government is neither interested in nor capable of doing the actual resettling — finding friends or relatives willing to provide shelter and support, making travel arrangements and offering the follow-up services necessary to locate jobs, schools and homes for refugee families.

Carrying that burden here — with virtually no financial

THOUGHTS

Thursday
"Double threat" seems an odd expression but is similar to "two-faced."
"They speak vanity every one with his neighbour; with flattering lips and with a double heart do they speak." — Ps. 12:2
Friday
It is usually better not to "speak your mind" and express all your thoughts as you may have to explain some of them or even apologize.

Saturday
There is little mention in the Bible of the activities of children. Zechariah does mention the playing of children in the streets in his description of the restoration of Jerusalem.
"And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof." — Zech. 8:5

"A fool uttereth all his mind: but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards." — Prov. 29:11

Song-Drama Program Will Be Presented

The Traveling Ambassadors, a song and drama group of college age youth from various parts of the United States, will present a program at 7:30 this evening in Immanuel Lutheran Church, Park and Ave. B.

This group, which accompanies lively songs, including some "soft rock," with guitars, has recently presented concerts in California. In addition to music, they use puppets in their programs. Ron Stelzer is the team leader.

Due to arrive by 5 p.m. today, the group will be welcomed with a sandwich supper at the church. Families and friends of the congregation are invited to bring sandwiches and have supper with the visitors.

Families in the congregation who include teenage members will be host to the group members overnight, according to Ed Brown, pastor.

"This is a faith ministry of Ongoing Ambassadors for Christ, an international evangelism ministry headquartered at St. John Lutheran College in Winfield, Kan.," Brown said.

The Hereford pastor has been South Texas director of Ongoing Ambassadors, and also was president of the Lutheran Evangelism School when it was located in Wichita Falls.

Chicken Salad Adds Noodles

Here's an easy, portable salad that's excellent for any picnic, whether you're camping out or having a summertime backyard meal. Hearty Chicken Noodle Salad would be a fine dish to make ahead and carry along in the cooler for that first meal away from home when vacationing.

Everyone will enjoy this cool chicken salad with the homey flavor of chicken noodle soup. Of course, there's chicken in it, about 3 cups of chopped cooked chicken (or turkey if you prefer). But a couple of extra touches bring out the flavor and make it taste even better.

One is the use of chicken-seasoned stock base in the water you use for cooking the noodles. The other is a dash of poultry seasoning in the sour cream, adding that combination of herbs and spices specially designed to enhance chicken, turkey and other poultry.

Radishes, celery and green onion add color, crunchiness and fresh garden flavor, and the salad dressing does the rest. While most chicken salad recipes call for mayonnaise, this one stars sour cream and you'll like the difference. The sour cream has a lot less calories than mayonnaise; only 25 calories in a tablespoon. And it contributes some of milk's valuable nutrients: protein, calcium and vitamin A.

The best thing about Hearty Chicken Noodle Salad is that it contains ingredients from all four of the major food groups. The celery, radishes and green onions are from the vegetable/fruit group. (Frozen peas would be an excellent addition to the casserole if more nutrients from this food group were designed.)

The recipe contains chicken from the meat group;

noodles from the bread/cereal group; and sour cream from the milk/cheese group. You may want to round out this nutritious casserole with a fresh green or fresh fruit salad.

HEARTY CHICKEN NOODLE SALAD

- 6 cups water
- 1 tablespoon chicken seasoned stock base
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 3 cups noodles
- 3 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey
- 1/2 cup sliced radishes
- 1/4 cup sliced green onion
- 1 cup dairy sour cream
- 1 teaspoon seasoned salt
- 1/4 teaspoon poultry seasoning

In a saucepan bring water, stock base and salt to a boil. Add noodles and cook according to package directions; rinse with cold water and drain. In a large bowl combine chicken, celery, radishes, onion and noodles. Combine sour cream, seasoned salt, and poultry seasoning; fold into chicken mixture. Chill.

Appetizers are a promise of good foods to come. Perfect starters are slices of Brick, Camembert of Gouda cheese served on apple slices. Another palate pleaser is pears slices accompanied by Cheddar or Muenster cheese.

Child-rearing costs have increased more than 50 percent since 1969, reports Dr. Betty Jo Smith, a family life education specialist on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

NOTICE PUBLIC MEETING

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE HEREFORD INDEPENDENT SCHOOL DISTRICT WILL HOLD A PUBLIC MEETING AT THE HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM ON THURSDAY MAY 29th, AT 8 P.M. THE PURPOSE OF THIS MEETING IS TO SECURE INPUT FROM CITIZENS IN THE DEVELOPMENT OF A LONG RANGE PLAN TO DEAL WITH PROBLEMS FACING THE DISTRICT.

THE PROBLEMS FACING THE DISTRICT

- 1. DECLINE IN STUDENT ENROLLMENT
This is resulting in loss of state revenue. This year's losses are approximately $91,000. With an additional $50,000 projected to be lost for next year. No reversal of this trend is anticipated.
- 2. SHIFT IN POPULATION
Changes in residential patterns have resulted in over crowding at West Central and Shirley Elementaries at the same time student population at Tierra Blanca and Aikman have decreased.
- 3. INFLATION
Costs of education are rapidly increasing. The cost of utilities are expected to increase over $50,000 during the next school year. Salary increases are in order for the district's employees.

POSSIBLE SOLUTIONS

- 1. SHIFTING ATTENDANCE ZONES
Attendance zones could be changed to create two elementary schools with 2 sections of each grade and four schools with 3 sections of each grade. This only solves the problem as it exists today and would have to be done annually.
- 2. RESTRUCTURING GRADE LEVELS (PAIRING)
This plan calls for grades K-3 to be offered on three campuses and grades 4-6 to be offered on three others.
- 3. CLOSING A SCHOOL
- 4. RAISE IN TAXES
Some raise in taxes will be necessary through the years simply to keep up with rising costs. If no changes are made all of the increased expenses will have to be paid for by local taxpayers.

The Board of Education is committed to a quality education for its students. Its decisions are based on this commitment.

We urge you to come to this meeting with real solutions to the problems as well as criticism of the above plans. This is a community problem and needs to be solved by the community. Your input is earnestly solicited.

Avoid Food Poisoning In Home-Canned Foods

COLLEGE STATION -- Take a safety step before eating home-canned foods -- boil them at least 10 minutes even before tasting, a foods and nutrition specialist warns.

Dr. Rose Tindall Postel, on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, says this step is a "must," even if you home-canned your foods very carefully. This major safety step is necessary to avoid the unpleasantness and possible danger of food poisoning, among them the often-deadly botulism. "About two million people in the U.S. suffer the ill effects caused by foodborne bacteria each year," she explains.

"Fortunately, relatively few are exposed to botulism, a deadly foodborne disease, but it can happen," she cautions. Most botulism poisoning in this country is associated with improperly processed home-canned, low-acid foods -- such as meats and low-acid vegetables, including green beans, corn, spinach or asparagus.

Several warning signs can alert you to possible food poisoning is still there, including deadly botulism, so be sure to boil all home-canned foods for 10 minutes even before tasting them.

-- if you notice abnormal odors or spurting liquid when you open the jars, know these are signs of food spoilage.

-- always examine and smell canned foods for spoilage, even if you don't notice any of the other signs, and

-- remember, even if no signs exist, the threat of food poisoning is still there, including deadly botulism, so be sure to boil all home-canned foods for 10 minutes even before tasting them.

If you do notice any signs of spoilage or off odor, before boiling or during it, dispose of the food out of reach of humans, pets or livestock -- that's the safest way.

It's also wise to know the symptoms of botulism, in case of poisoning.

Symptoms can occur within a few hours -- or as long as six to eight days after a person eats food containing botulism toxin.

Early signs of botulism poisoning may be nausea, blurred vision, vomiting, abdominal cramps and diarrhea.

Other symptoms include fatigue, weakness and dizziness.

These are very general symptoms, so they're not always attributed to food poisoning.

However, eventually the toxin paralyzes muscles, starting with the eyes and face. Then it moves down to the throat, chest, arms and legs.

Once the paralysis moves to the chest and reaches the diaphragm, suffocation occurs.

Of course, the best place to start in preventing botulism poisoning is in proper home-canning methods.

You must use a steam pressure canner to process low-acid vegetables and meats, and the canner must reach at least 10 pounds pressure (240 degrees F.) and hold that pressure for an appropriate time -- depending on the type of food, size of jar and other added ingredients.

No other way is safe, since no other method reaches temperatures that high. Carefully read the directions that accompany your canning equipment, and be sure to follow high standards of sanitation during the canning process.

Mainly, use the correct equipment and specifically follow the directions for products you are processing.

Everyone has heard of dressing up a baked potato with sour cream but how about whipping creamy cottage cheese with chives or parsley until smooth and serving on a piping hot baked potato. Calories are reduced, too.

SHOP IDEAL... WHERE THERE'S MORE VALUE IN

Consumer's 'Best Buys'

COLLEGE STATION -- Every week your "best buys" depend on three things, says Dr. Carol Akkerman Sain, consumer information specialist on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Ask yourself these three questions:
 * Do I need the item?
 * Did I comparison shop?
 * Do I know how I'm going to use it?

If you can say "yes" to all three, then you have a "best buy," she says.

In general, throughout the next two weeks, expect heavy supplies of broiler-fryers, dairy products, eggs, pork and turkey. That could mean attractive prices, too, except for dairy products unless they're on special.

Also, compare prices carefully on fruits and vegetables -- fresh will continue to be a better buy than the canned or frozen product.

And keep your eyes open for promotional foods with special prices.

MEAT -- It looks like poultry and pork will remain our best buys.

In selecting fresh pork, look for firm, fine-grained flesh of a grayish-pink color. It should be marbled with flecks of fat through the muscle -- and have a uniform covering of firm white fat on the exterior surface. Bones should be porous and pinkish in color.

In both fresh and processed pork products, look for the USDA mark of inspection. It's your assurance that the product has been processed under sanitary conditions and is safe to eat. It also means the product is not adulterated and is truthfully labeled.

Look for pork roasts, chops, spareribs, sausage and ham -- and cook pork slowly for the most tender, juicy results, whether you bake, broil, pan-broil, fry, braise or simmer it.

In selecting fresh poultry, check the label.

The round inspection mark tells you the bird is safe and wholesome to eat.

It does not tell you anything about the tenderness or meatiness of the bird, however. You'll have to look for the USDA grade shield and class of bird to find out about these things.

For example, U.S. Grade A chickens, turkeys, ducks and capons are the meatiest and have the fewest tears in the skin.

Age tells you about tenderness -- most tender are the young birds, usually labeled as broilers, fryers and roasters. Older birds, often labeled as stewing hens, are good for stewing, baking and soups.

In selecting eggs, also know your labels. Three grades -- AA, A and B -- describe the interior quality of the egg, appearance and shell condition.

AA and A are ideal for frying and poaching when appearance is important, and they're the best choice for hard-cooked eggs. B-grade eggs are fine for general cooking and baking and other uses in which appearance is not important. They're just as nutritious as the higher grade eggs.

DAIRY -- products will be plentiful for the next few weeks, too, but don't expect lower prices. For bargains, shop the promotional sales on yogurt, cheese, sour cream and butter.

FRUITS -- Strawberries have their highest quality and lowest prices -- now.

California Navel oranges are plentiful and very sweet, as are the Florida Valencias (usually sold in bags). Smaller grapefruit is the best buy, and prices on California cantaloupe are lower while quality is better. Lemon prices are leveling off, but limes are still expensive.

Apples are a best buy, but wait a few weeks on peaches, grapes, avocados and melons.

VEGETABLES -- Artichokes are as low-priced as they'll get until fall, and corn has lower prices, but ears are still small.

Some consumers are beginning to prefer the European habit of non-sweet desserts. That means any number of combinations of fruit and cheese, crackers and cheese as well as dried or fresh fruits with nuts.

Milk Contains Array Of Nutrients

Milk has been called an almost perfect food because of the array of nutrients it contains. Yet a number of fallacies have arisen about its quality and usefulness. Some of the most common are:

FALLACY: Milk is fattening.

FACT: No food by itself is fattening. It is the total calories absorbed in a day that make the difference. When food intake must be curtailed, it is important to keep in your diet such foods as milk that provide generous amounts of nutrients and moderate amounts of calories.

FALLACY: Adults do not need milk.

FACT: Sixteen ounces or more of milk each day will furnish the calcium recommended for an adult. Two glasses of milk will also provide 54 percent of the riboflavin, more than 30 percent of the protein, 30 percent of the niacin equivalents and 14 percent of the vitamin A daily requirements for women. These nutrients are also in other foods, but the milk/cheese group by far the most fuel efficient source.

FALLACY: Skim milk (non-fat milk) has little of the vitamins, protein and minerals of whole milk.

FACT: Skim milk is simply whole milk with the butterfat (which includes vitamin A) removed. Buy skim milk fortified with vitamin A and you'll get the same nutrients as whole milk, but none of the fat. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, an eight-ounce glass of whole milk contains 3.5 percent or more milk fat and averages 160 calories. The same amount of skim milk has less than half a percent milk fat content and averages about 90 calories.

FALLACY: Milk cannot be frozen.

FACT: Milk can be frozen and kept at the normal freezer temperature of zero degrees or less for up to three months. Freezing does not measurably change the nutritive value of milk, but can alter taste and appearance.

FALLACY: Rapid heating of milk reduces the nutritional value of milk.

FACT: As long as milk is not scalded in the warming process, no nutritional loss occurs.

FALLACY: Buttermilk is made from the liquid whey that remains after butter is churned.

FACT: Buttermilk produced in commercial dairies in the United States is cultured buttermilk. This means that a lactic acid-producing organism is added to fresh skimmed or partially skimmed (lowfat) milk to produce a culture that gives buttermilk its characteristic tangy flavor and consistency.

FALLACY: Chocolate milk and chocolate dairy drink are the same.

FACT: Chocolate milk is made with whole milk, chocolate and sugar that add flavor and calories (totaling 205 calories in an eight-ounce glass) to plain milk. Chocolate dairy drink is made from skimmed milk or partially skimmed milk; the milk-fat content and calories are less (190 calories in an eight-ounce glass) than that of chocolate milk.

Snack Food May Be Nutritious

Americans have increased their consumption of popular packaged snack foods at a faster rate than the population has grown, according to a 30-year federal government survey.

The Household Food Consumption Survey confirms the popularity of snacking. Is it bad?

"The foods we label snack foods -- cupcakes, cookies, potato chips -- have given snacking a bad name," Dairy Council, Inc. nutrition consultants say. "Snacking on nutritious foods over a lifetime can add up to improved nutritional health."

Young children, active teenagers, fussy eaters and busy adults often depend on between-meal eating to supplement regular meals.

Sometimes all the incentive people need to snack nutritiously is to know there's nothing to prepare. Nutritionists suggest keeping cubed cheese on a covered plate in the refrigerator, or cut and store a variety of sandwiches in small quarters. Sliced raw vegetables and fresh fruits are other snack ideas.

For meal skippers or late arrivals, consider converting leftovers into an assortment of ready-to-eat or ready-to-heat mini-meals.

Knowing what kinds of foods snackers are not getting enough of is one key to nutritional snacking.

USDA's four food group system can help take the guesswork out of checking a diet for missing foods. The four food groups are milk, meat, vegetables and fruits, and breads and cereals. Proper daily selections from each group meet the recommended dietary allowances established by the Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences.

Cleaning Of Copper Cookware

COLLEGE STATION -- Copper's popularity is increasing as silver becomes less affordable, so some consumers have an eye on copper cookware.

Linda McCormack, a home economist, advises consumers to know a few things about copper cookware before investing in it.

Mrs. McCormack is a family resource management specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Consumers should know about cooking with copper, gauge differences and cleaning it.

Copper's uniform heat conductivity makes it a good material for top-of-range cooking, because it distributes heat evenly.

This ability also helps copper serving utensils keep food warm longer.

Copper cooking surfaces usually are lined with tin, stainless steel or aluminum, or they're coated with a non-stick finish, because cooked foods left directly in contact with uncoated copper may become discolored.

While the discoloration isn't necessarily injurious to health, it tends to detract from the food's eye appeal. Also, if the lining is tin, it must be replaced periodically.

Thin-gauge copper cookware (like thin aluminum) will damage easily, and it does not cook to most people's satisfaction.

On the other hand, thick-gauge copper has the best cooking characteristics, but it's very expensive and takes extra care for good looks.

When copper is tarnished, the dark color makes it absorb heat more efficiently than bright shiny metals which reflect heat.

Of course, that makes a good "excuse" for not polishing it, but if you do like your pans shiny, you can easily polish copper with various commercial copper cleansers. Mrs. McCormack says.

For a homemade copper cleaner, devise your own mixture of vinegar and flour. After cleaning copper, wash it in sudsy water and rinse it. Then rub dry with a soft, clean cloth.

Installing Closets For More Storage

COLLEGE STATION -- Today's homes can actually have more storage than you realize -- if you use the "De-Fibber McGee" attack on closets.

Sue Young, a housing and home furnishings specialist, says efficient closet space is the key.

Mrs. Young is with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Reach-in clothes closets are a more efficient use of space than walk-in closets.

An ideal measurement is 28 inches deep -- although the Federal Home Administration (FHA) has a 24-inch minimum standard depth.

For rod length, each person needs a minimum of three linear feet -- but five or six feet would be better. Install closet rods at different heights for the best use of space -- decide the best heights for each rod according to use.

To determine height, measure the longest garments and then add six inches.

Remember to make rod heights for children adjustable, so they will serve from present on to adulthood.

Shelves also take some planning. Shelves above the rods increase storage possibilities -- and a tier of shelves in the closet's center adds even more storage.

Mount shelves two or three inches above the rods so hangers will clear them, hangers will clear them.

Also, you can include more shelves above children's clothes while the children are small -- if you mounted the rods low enough, rods low enough.

Even the closet door makes a difference in storage efficiency.

Ideally the closet front should open completely -- no more than six inches of rod on either side should be concealed when the door is open.

Doors may be hinged, folding or sliding -- but sliding doors allow you to reach only half of the closet at one time, while a full-width swing door requires much floor space for clearance.

Bi-fold doors suspended from tracks are good choices for most closets.

Natural cheese, up to one-pound size, (except Neufchatel) can be frozen for six weeks to two months if kept unopened in the original wrapper.

Dogs, Cats Provided Medical Insurance

SAN DIEGO (NEA) - Behind every successful man, the pundits say, is a woman. Bart Miller is successful, all right. But the real catalyst for his success is not his wife but his dog Riley, a Belgian terrier by breed.

Nearly three years ago, Riley, then a pup, took a tumble near a pool in Miller's backyard and strained a leg. The resulting veterinarian bills started Miller searching for a medical-insurance program for animals.

Unable to find one, Miller, a former restaurateur, formed his own program, Pet Health Support Inc., which he describes as a sort of "Blue Cross for pets."

Riley's leg healed long ago. Now he is a healthy, active dog. And Miller's new business is fast becoming just as healthy and active.

Inaugurated in March 1979, Pet Health Support already has more than 1,200 dog and cat clients signed up. The program has representatives in all major California cities, with the San Diego office serving as headquarters.

"We're also heading up north to Oregon, and pretty soon we'll be marching across the country," says Miller.

Miller's idea was not entirely new. His investigations have shown that at least two major insurance companies tried such a program in recent years but failed.

"They failed for three prime reasons," Miller explains. "First, they covered death benefits, which, unfortunately, can allow for rip-offs."

"Secondly, they covered electives such as cosmetic surgery — having a dog's tail bobbed, for example. Lastly, they tried to get veterinarians to publicize the programs, and the vets were just too busy with their own work to be publicity agents, too."

"As a result, those companies got out of the business because it cost more to implement the program than the returns they were getting."

After learning of the mistakes made by others in the pet-insurance field, Miller and insurance agent Don Dunagan spent a year consulting veterinarians and collecting data on animal sickness risks. From this material, they built their actuarial tables on which they could base premiums and illness settlements.

"I believe we're the only firm in the United States that has actuarial data on dogs and cats," says Miller.

After the study was completed, the next step was to check with the state.

"We found there were no codes on the state law books to allow us to be an insurance company for pets," says Miller.

"And since it would take too long to get such a code written, we decided to model ourselves after Blue Cross, which is really a trust."

Miller believes there is "a critical need" for pet insurance.

"Today to buy a pet costs a lot of money," he says. "And when you've bought that pet, you're not done spending money. You buy him a bed or a doghouse, buy food, toys, pay to have him groomed and checked regularly by a vet."

"Then your dog or cat gets hit by a car and it will cost you $200, $300, maybe $400 to have him taken care of by a vet. If the owner can't afford to pay that much, he unfortunately may have to have the animal put to sleep."

"So, not only have you lost your initial investment, but your family has suffered a great emotional loss because a pet often is treated like a member of the family. If you try to ease the hurt of your family by buying another pet, then the investment starts all over again."

"Our position is that you might as well protect that initial investment as long as you can."

Pet Health Support offers one standard policy to pet owners that covers accidents and serious illnesses. It does not cover electives such as cosmetic surgery.

Annual premiums range from $38 to $55 for dogs and from $28 to $44 for cats. Cats, notes Miller, tend to be healthier than dogs.

Animals accepted for coverage can range in age from 4 weeks to nearly 8 years. Once a pet is accepted into the program, it will never be dropped because of age.

Coverage limits are $350 for yearly maximum coverage and $800 total for the life of the pet. There are no deductibles. Pet owners pay the veterinarian directly for treatment of their pet and then file reimbursement claims with Pet Health Support.

As an added, no-cost benefit for its clients, Pet Health Support operates a national registry for lost dogs and cats.

Currently, the company offers coverage only for dogs and cats. Miller hopes, however, to expand to include exotic birds, horses and other animals once risk tables can be established for them.

Riley, undoubtedly, would approve.

AMONG THE LATEST visitors to the United States are these marionettes from Liege, Belgium. The wooden puppets, each almost half the size of a person, were made by anonymous puppeteers in the 19th and early 20th centuries. They are on display at Washington's Renwick Gallery as part of "Belgium Today," a celebration of the 150th anniversary of Belgian independence.

Names in the News

NEW YORK (AP) — She's met Leonid Brezhnev and the leaders of China. She has a master's degree, and "so much more going" for her that she'd be a better first lady.

So says Joan Kennedy, whose husband is badly trailing President Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination.

In an interview Wednesday in Women's Wear Daily, Mrs. Kennedy, 43, explained why she was better qualified than Rosalynn Carter.

"I'm a very sophisticated lady. I just have so much more going for me. And I can make so many more contributions."

She also said the Massachusetts senator would make a better president than the incumbent. "I've got nothing against Georgia, but I'd prefer to have Ted in the White House listening to the best brains in our country on matters like foreign affairs."

NEW YORK (AP) — Dressed in a black lace blouse and long skirt, Louise Nevelson quietly supervised the installation of "Frozen Laces — One 1979-1980," at the Fifth Avenue and 60th Street entrance to Central Park amid a throng of onlookers.

Shrugging away autograph hounds, the 80-year-old sculptress sat in the shade Wednesday as a giant crane and five workmen hauled pieces of the 15-ton sculpture into place.

Her attire only coincidentally paralleled her "lacey" black steel creation, she insisted.

NEW YORK (AP) — Although she explained "it's not really an injury," Natalia Makarova, prima ballerina of the American Ballet Theater, was unable to complete a nationally televised performance of the Russian Ballet "La Bayadere" at the Metropolitan Opera House.

After dancing the first act Wednesday, Miss Makarova was replaced for the remainder by Marianna Tcherassky, who had performed in the role on Monday.

ABT spokesman Charles France said Miss Makarova had hurt a knee several days ago and could not continue the performance on the Public Broadcasting Service.

"It's not really an injury. I just need a few days rest," Miss Makarova said later.

CHICAGO (AP) — Looking at the U.S. boycott of the Moscow Summer Games "from a political standpoint" and "as an American citizen," Olympic gold medalist Bruce Jenner says he's changed his mind and supports it although it probably "will be the end" of the Olympics.

The Golden One Rock Has Single Rule

THE ROCK, Ga. (NEA) — It's not likely any of this year's presidential candidates will stop in this farm community.

That's unfortunate. There's a good deal to be learned about government here, and leadership, and public support. And perhaps most of what else constitutes democracy.

The Rock, you see, has organized its civic responsibilities in the spirit of mutual trust. It has no rules or regulations.

Well, there is a traffic light here.

Also there is one law forbidding the sale of liquor.

But that's all of it. The Rock has no taxes, no town hall, no public services, no police, no lockup — and no bureaucracy.

It doesn't even have a head count. Many residents estimate there are 90 to 100 people in the village, some others insist it is more like 100 to 110, but no one would think of conducting a census. Folks believe that if a man says he lives in The Rock, he does; if he's a liar, then he doesn't.

The idea that nurtures the body politic here is the golden rule. People are expected to do unto others as they would have others do unto them, and to a remarkable degree it works. When the community needs money, for instance, no tax is levied, because it's simpler and more satisfying to just pass the hat.

The same goes for public services. Cecil Harris, at 74 the oldest citizen, claims there's no need for garbage pickup, because people do it themselves. There's no need for a fire department, for the same reason. As for police, Harris sighs, "There ain't a lot of temptation in The Rock anymore."

Actually, there has never been much temptation here. The town, situated about 90 miles due south of Atlanta, has been small, plain and remote since it was chartered in 1877. In those days it was merely a stagecoach stop, and was characterized by a large boulder in the trail. The town took its name from that rock, which was eventually detonated.

The town at that time was surrounded by peach orchards, thus despite its modest size it had worries and complexities. For one thing fruit pickers would come to The Rock on weekends to raise hell. So there was a normal government here then, and laws that told people what they could or couldn't do.

Clark established "government by golden rule," and wrote a new charter around it. He's still mayor today, and his philosophy hasn't changed.

"When I came to The Rock it was almost dead," he says. "Nobody cared. Nobody tried. Now we work as a unit; we don't just have a town here — we have a family."

His Honor says most problems are solved by getting people together over coffee. But, he adds, there aren't many problems.

Oh, the traffic light needs repair, the mayor admits. And the county is threatening to remove its garbage dumpster.

Otherwise, though, "things are pretty quiet."

Even the misunderstandings are few. The mayor, who is also the justice of the peace, says the last legal dispute in The Rock occurred when a resident didn't pay for a newly installed water pump.

There was some talk about a warrant, but tempers cooled. Clark got the protagonists to shake hands.

"That's the way we do things here," the mayor says. "We don't demand cooperation. We ask for it." In 1966, as example, the townspeople were asked to put flags out on Flag Day. "Do you know that we were the first town in the nation to have every home display a flag — isn't that something?"

The golden rule does wonders, Clark insists. And it is alive and operative in The Rock. "We have proved government doesn't have to be big and tough to get people to work together. And we believe that idea should grow. We'd like to have the presidential candidates here to see what really can be done."

What the candidates would see is 26 homes, three churches and the railroad tracks. They would also see 100 people, give or take, who are hopelessly outdated in civic affairs, who are terribly naive about public management, but who may very well have the best system of government in America.

Woman's Sentence Declared Illegal

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A stay-at-home sentence given a pregnant woman convicted of stealing clothing was illegal, according to the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

Vickie Walker of Orange was found guilty of misdemeanor theft and went before State District Judge Larry Gist for sentencing on Oct. 5, 1979. She told him she had two children and expected a third.

Gist ordered a 60-day sentence and $350 fine. He said she could serve the time at her home, and ordered her to remain at the residence for 60 days.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals said Wednesday the sentence could not be enforced because it was improper.

"I'm trying to let you stay home and take care of your kids, so the taxpayers don't have to," Gist had told Mrs. Walker.

The judge's secretary called Mrs. Walker, then 22, every day to make sure she was home. On Oct. 11, the secretary got a busy signal for several hours when she tried to call. She eventually got a call through, and Mrs. Walker said she had gone out to pick up her daughter at school.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Thursday, May 29, the 150th day of 1980. There are 216 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history: In 1790, the last of the 13 original colonies, Rhode Island, ratified the U.S. Constitution.

On this date: In 1453, the capital of the Byzantine Empire, Constantinople, was captured by the Turks, an event some historians consider the end of the Middle Ages.

In 1917, the 35th American President, John F. Kennedy, was born in Brookline, Mass.

In 1953, New Zealand's Edmond Hillary and Nepal's Tensing Norkay became the first men to reach the peak of the world's highest mountain, Mount Everest.

In 1972, President Richard Nixon and Soviet Communist Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev signed a declaration pledging an era of peaceful coexistence between the United States and Soviet Union.

Ten years ago, some 11,000 British soldiers were ordered into Northern Ireland following bitter sectarian rioting.

Five years ago, President Gerald Ford pledged America's commitment to NATO at a meeting of the allies in Brussels.

Last year, the government grounded all DC-10 jet airliners in the nation for emergency safety inspections in the aftermath of the Chicago crash that killed 272 people.

Today's birthdays: Comedian Bob Hope is 77. Dancer and choreographer Pearl Lang is 58. Biologist Paul Ehrlich is 48.

Thought For Today: Beware the fury of a patient man. — John Dryden (1631-1700)

Big Government

Government looms large in the English-speaking world. In the United States, government employs one out of six workers and controls around 37 percent of total spending. In the United Kingdom, it controls nearly 60 percent of expenditures.

A NEW WARDROBE for a new life is being selected by this young Cuban emigre at a Florida processing center. Her finery is not new, of course, but was donated by earlier refugees from the Castro regime.

HEALTH
Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
Professional help needed

DEAR DR. LAMB - What is your opinion about birth control and depression? My daughter is 25 years old and has been taking the pill for five years. Also for five years she has suffered from cycles of depression which have become worse during the past six months. She has been suicidal in her depressive moods. Is depression a side effect of the pills?
DEAR READER - Probably not. It's certainly true that hormones can affect one's mood and many women experience this with the different stages of the menstrual cycle. That's directly related to the amount of estrogen and progesterone that's formed at different stages of the cycle. A depression as bad as your letter describes is something more than ordinary mood swings and deserves professional attention. I'm sending you The Health Letter number 10-10, Depression: The Ups and Downs of Life. Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. A great deal can be done to help control depressions. There are new medicines that can be used for this purpose and it can really make an enormous difference in a person's life. While we all experience ups and downs in mood that affect our productivity and life in general, there are degrees of this which are not normal. In these cases, professional help is indicated. There are many people who have depressions that go unrecognized. An executive may retire and then have a change in personality which people attribute to age when, in fact, it's a depression because he's lost his previous position of authority and importance. There are some things that people can do to help avoid depressions. This includes having goals to achieve, being personally involved with other people in the daily fabric of life and being sure to include things in life which you really enjoy. These measures are particularly helpful in managing the ordinary up and down swings that people have.

DEAR DR. LAMB - Do you think obesity is caused by a disease - something to do with sex?
DEAR READER - No. If by sex you mean the sex act, it has no relationship to obesity. One enterprising physician a few years ago suggested that sexual activity could be helpful in preventing obesity and popularized his philosophy with the statement, "Reach for your mate instead of the plate." Well, regardless of what you reach for, if it doesn't contain calories it would be preferable to eating if you have a weight problem. But I wouldn't count on the amount of calories involved in sexual activity to be much help in controlling obesity. Now, it is true that some diseases can contribute to obesity problems. A classic example is the relatively rare person with low thyroid function. The body doesn't use as many calories and consequently these people tend to gain weight even though they're not consuming a lot of calories. Certain other endocrine disorders also affect body metabolism which in turn affects how many calories a body can process without developing obesity.

DEAR DR. LAMB - The doctor says that my husband has some liver damage. Is this cirrhosis of the liver? He took some blood tests that evidently showed the damage. My husband feels OK and if it were not for the blood tests you wouldn't know there was anything wrong. The doctor left him on a regular diet but told him to be sure to get plenty of protein and to go light on the salt. He suggested that he take vitamins every day. He also told Bud not to drink any alcohol, not even one beer. Does that mean the liver damage was caused by alcohol?
I'm confused about that because Bud has never been a heavy drinker. He drinks an occasional cocktail but mostly a can of beer in the evening or several on the week ends. If you eat a good diet regularly won't that keep you from damaging the liver with alcohol? Just what is the outlook for him? Will he develop symptoms from his liver damage and if so, what?
DEAR READER - Evidently your husband is one of those people who have blood tests indicative of abnormal liver function even though he has no symptoms. Liver disease can be insidious and may cause only mild fatigue. Of course, there are many other things that cause fatigue as well. Those blood tests are very sensitive and often don't mean there is extensive damage. If your doctor had suspected more serious disease, he would probably have asked for other tests including a biopsy of the liver to look at it under the microscope. He probably will repeat the tests and if they stay mildly abnormal or return to normal, he may decide to do nothing else about it. If your husband does develop more serious liver disease, he may have digestive complaints, particularly indigestion. Or he could even develop some mild jaundice. There are a number of physical signs that people with liver disease may develop. I doubt your husband has cirrhosis of the liver. That usually occurs after a relatively long period of disease. It is simply replacement of liver tissue with scar tissue. Cirrhosis can be caused by many different liver diseases, including inflammation of the small bile ducts inside the liver, as a complication of long-standing heart failure or as a complication of viral hepatitis and various toxins, including alcohol. The fact that your doctor asked your husband not to use alcohol does not mean that he thinks alcohol caused his problem. Alcohol is a direct toxin to the liver cells.

POLLY'S POINTERS
Polly Cramer
Shave off fuzz balls

DEAR POLLY - Some of my washcloths were so dingy. Nothing improved them until I soaked them in boiling water with some cream of tartar in it. These clothes look like new again. (Polly's note - This is also great for sad-looking handkerchiefs. Just a pinch of the cream of tartar does it.)
Would someone please tell me how to get fuzz balls off my wool blankets? Nothing I have tried has helped. - MRS. J.P. Sr.
DEAR MRS. J.P. Sr. - Have your tried shaving them off? Also you might try a crumpled-up ball of nylon net. - POLLY

DEAR POLLY - I use a roll of masking tape for an excellent lint brush. Turn enough tape back around the roll until it sticks to itself. Then put your fingers through the center hole and roll it up and down the garment. - BETTY

DEAR POLLY - You have little tots who are just learning to put on their sneakers and are always asking which foot is which? I saw a small button on the inside of each sneaker - facing each other. I call them the kissing buttons. The children put them together and have no more trouble. - SWEET ADELINE

DEAR POLLY - Mrs. P.G. Jr. wrote about things getting so upset in the cupboards of their camper. We have had a camper-pickup for years and I have never had any broken dishes or things out of place. I pack rags and towels in and around everything, like food and dishes. Things never get out of place. My worst problem was remembering to make sure the doors were all latched. - MRS. M.M.

DEAR POLLY - Our mail chute has a flap on the outside of the house. When I have mail for the postman to pick up I fasten it to this flap with a rubber band so it does not blow away. In rainy weather, I first put it in a plastic bag so it does not get wet. - ELAINE

Polly will send you one of her signed thank-you newspaper coupon clippers if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Whatever Became of Ed 'Big Daddy' Roth?

BUENA PARK, Calif. (NEA) — Maybe if you grew up in Saudi Arabia or maybe if you are under 10 years old — but only maybe — you never heard of Ed "Big Daddy" Roth.

There are probably few outside those two groups who were not exposed in some way to the custom cars, the pin-striping and the monster, "weirdo" and Rat Fink characters that Roth designed during the 1960s.

But what has happened to this near genius of hot rodding who was called the Salvador Dali of custom-car designers?

He is alive and doing very well, thank you, as a sign painter extraordinaire at Knott's Berry Farm, a Southern California amusement park.

To understand why Roth could never be an ordinary sign painter — or an ordinary anything else — you first must comprehend the values, the work ethos, the introspective thinking of this big man in his late 40s whose nickname fits as well as the paint-splattered jeans, work boots and faded work shirt that cover his solid 265-pound, 6-foot 3½-inch frame.

"I was raised under the old German household thinking where everybody had a craft," recalls Roth, whose father had been a cabinetmaker in Germany. "Even during the times when my father was poor, my brother and I always had the tools — carpentry, metal shears, whatever — to make anything we wanted."

"It was a rigid life as far as work and responsibilities, though. For instance, I wouldn't have dared not go to school because I was sick. That would never have been an acceptable excuse to my father. But I wouldn't trade that life for anything."

Roth was born and grew up in Hollywood, where he started building his own cars in the 1950s. They were the kind of souped-up hot rods assembled by young men who in those days couldn't afford to put money down on a new car.

After serving in the Air Force and picking up an A.A. degree in math and physics, Roth built his first show car, the Beatnik Bandit.

That bubble-topped, Oldsmobile, fiberglass fantasy — along with most of the other cars he would build for nearly two decades — earned big bucks for Roth and for the Revell Co., which bought the model rights to his designs.

Among his other automotive creations were the Druid Princess, a Cinderella-type fantasy coach whose gas tank was a casket; the Outlaw, built in 1959 and probably the first fiberglass hot-rod roadster, and the Road Agent, ahead of its time in 1961 with its glass body and rear engine.

The cars brought out the genius of the man who at one time or another was described by automotive writers as everything from cynical to capricious, from intellectual to prankster.

To finance the expensive materials and tools for his customizing ventures, Roth started the business that may well have spawned today's market for individualized T-shirts.

It all began on the fast-paced, heel-kicking car-show circuit, when the scruffy, goateed Roth painted monsters on youngsters' T-shirts.

A generation became devoted to such Roth caricatures as the Rat Fink, a slightly overweight monster with bulging eyes and sharp teeth who its creator visualized as "a misfit who smells bad with flies hanging around him but who never goes out looking for trouble."

Roth left his mark on the hot-rod and T-shirt industries. But perhaps his most lasting impact was auto pin-striping, the combinations of short lines, eyeballs, curlicues and other doodads that moved with some modification from fad to standard feature in the 1970s.

Not content to be a mediocre striper, Roth knew that breath control and balance were the secrets to the long, straight, flawless lines that would grow out of his earlier, more ornate efforts.

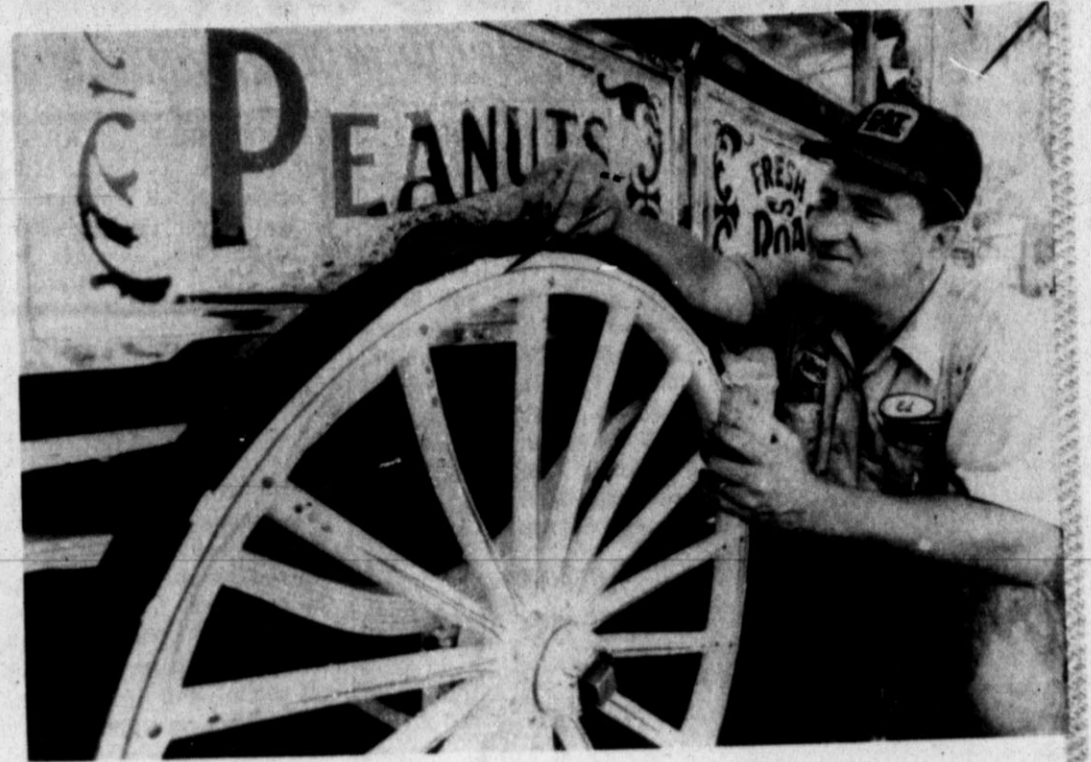

So, in 1967, he went back to school, this time to study martial arts.

"To paint those long lines, you just hold your hand steady, which I would do," he says. "But it's the body that has to be in balance, which was what I needed to perfect my art. ... Besides, I always had a big body, and I wanted to learn how to move."

Today, Roth is out of car building, though he continues to make custom motorcycles, claiming that each is his last. "I never built a car for money, always for my own pleasure," he says. "There's a pleasure in taking two pieces of metal and welding them together so they take the form of a finished product."

"But the whole thing is an ego trip. The time spent is robbing people you should be making happy. ... Now that I have built the best, I don't have to do it to prove anything."

Roth pauses and contemplates his large, work-worn hands whose talents have earned him large amounts of money. Money no longer interests him, he says.

Roller Coaster Built Just for Golf Balls

NEW LONDON, Iowa (NEA) — Picture a wooden roller coaster 8 feet long, 3 feet wide and 5 feet high.

It has five tracks in all, each different in its turns and dips.

One track winds through a tiny, shingle-roofed home. Another travels through a covered bridge, also roofed with wooden shingles the size of fingernails.

Many of the curves are so sharp that tiny guardrails are attached to the track. At the end of a bend may be a trap door, a chute or an elevator.

At the base of the elaborate and delicate structure is a one-quarter horsepower engine and many sets of hand-carved gears. Two are of the traditional round variety, but there also are square, triangular and even walking gears.

The mind-boggling contraption named "Fascination" is the fifth and latest "machine" created by Herb Stevens. Its predecessors are "The Wonderment," "The Amazement" and two earlier machines that were never named.

Fascination is the most ambitious of the machines. It is also the first made of 14 varieties of wood, which give its unpainted surfaces natural contrasting color. The other machines were built only of pine with metal gears used to activate them.

As impressive as the 400-pound wooden structure is at first sight, the fascination with Fascination really begins when Stevens throws the switch.

The highly varnished gears move, the tiny elevators slide up and down, and five golf balls begin their different trips down the five tracks.

One ball follows a track through the house and descends now slowly, now quickly through bends and twists to the base. There it enters an elevator to be lifted back up to the top rail, this time to follow another of the routes from top to bottom.

Meanwhile, another ball travels along a track that stops abruptly. The ball falls, bounces and, in a never-failing arc, lands in the basket that leads to the continuation of the route.

Stevens spent about 9,000 hours — two winters of spare time — cutting, polishing and assembling the approximately 9,000 pieces of wood from which Fascination is made.

He has no pattern for his machines. Each curve, slope and drop is meticulously worked out as the machine grows in his hands in the small shed behind his home.

One has only to see the machines to know they are, indeed, amazing, wonderful and fascinating. But why does he build them?

"Why not?" is the reply of the gregarious, self-taught wood hobbyist who, at age 39, has been a U.S. Navy cook, a truck driver, an electrician, a mechanic, a town marshal — even a cowboy.

He also is a high-school dropout who has since earned a diploma and a few college credits.

"I'll do more, try anything," he says.

Stevens and his wife, Betty, both hold full-time jobs. In addition to the machines, their hobbies include making toys and wooden jewelry, which they sell to augment the family's income.

Stevens' machines aren't money makers, but they could be.

"I was offered enough for The Wonderment to buy a small car," he says. "And the offer on The Amazement would have bought a Cadillac."

"If I'm not offered enough for Fascination to buy a house, I'll be disappointed."

But the machines are not for sale.
