CLARENDON LADY HONOREE

Mrs. Fred Chamberlain Honor Guest at Elegant Reception in Sherman.

Despite the depressing effect of Lent on the social world the reception given last Saturday afternoon for Mrs. Fred Chamberlain of Clarendon by her mother Mrs. M. L. Kelley, and sister, Mrs. Frank Gribble, was well attended and charmingly planned and executed.

The Kelley home on South Walnut street is admirably adapted to entertaining and on this occasion the first floor rooms were thrown together to make a commodious reception suite.

Palms and potted ferns formed masses of soft dark green in the hall where the stair alcove had been lined with a graceful fall of sprigged and clusters of brilliant red carnations stood out in high relief against the foliage back ground. The same effect was to be seen in the decoration of the drawing room where the mantel was artistically banked with ferns and carnations.

It was in the dining room that the most beautiful expression of floral art was achieved. Easter lilies, in all their fragrant purity, were the only flowers used. They rose on their stately stems from out gleam-from a string orchestra filled the air during the reception hours.

Those who assisted in receiving were: In hall—Miss Anna Gribble and Mesdames Judson Wood, Charles Batsell, J. A. L. Wolfe, C. F. Gribble, John Wall, E. J. Neathery, C. A. Sanford, L. M. Tuck, H. McReynolds, H. L. Hall, N. B. Birge.

In Parlor—Mesdames M. L. Kelley, Fred Chamberlain, Frank Gribble, Speake, D. W. Gulick, B. Wrenn, Webb, Crenshaw, Jesse Holt, T. W. Crowder, Geo. Hardwicke, W. L. Bitting, J. C. Pyle, Will Hutt, Sanders Fulton, Miss Lilla Belle Pitts and Mrs. Comer Wall of Dallas, guest of Mrs. John Wall and Mrs. Baird of Kentucky, guest of Mrs. Fulton.

In dining room—Mesdames Vernon Brown, J. F. Jones, Carl Nall and Misses Maude Gribble, Ethel Handy, Louise Yates, Mary Gregory, Gladys Robertson and Eva Fowler.

ing cut glass vases and soft tinted china pitchers on buffet and mantel and white cups were veiled in a cloud of filmy tulle.

Spring received due recognition in the adornment of the library where a riot of purple lilacs heralded its sure return. The punch stand was a mass of sweet scented blossoms and they nodded in plummy profusion from every point of vantage.

Mrs. Judson Wood and Miss Anna Gribble received at the door and at the drawing room entrance were the two hostesses and the honoree. Mrs. Kelley wore a handsome reception costume of Wisteria messaline, fashioned en Princess. Mrs. Gribble was becomingly attired in champagne rajah with band trimmings of brown. Mrs. Chamberlain, the honoree, wore a hand embroidered afternoon frock of old rose silk, made Empire.

Delightful refreshments in a salad course with pineapple ice and nut confections were served in the dining room. From behind a palm and fern screen in the library music,

Knights of Honor Organized Here.

(Crowded out last week.)

On last Monday night V. O. Moutray, the deputy for this part of the state organized a Knights of Honor Lodge here with twenty-five charter members.

Mrs. Lee was elected Past Dictator; Neal Blake, Dictator; Harrell Dial, Reporter, and Mrs. Wm. Atterberry, Chaplain.

The lodge was named "Panhandle," meaning the best, and we predict that it will grow and prosper as the Panhandle country is doing.

This is one of the oldest beneficiary fraternal orders in the United States and has paid to widows and orphans of deceased members more than ninety-two million dollars.

Mr. Moutray was called to Dallas to attend a meeting of all the Texas deputies, but will return on the 18th to take up the work of the order.

Attention Old Soldiers.

The committee met Monday and after considerable discussion, it was decided to hold the reunion at Clarendon or close by in place of Lelia Lake. On May 2nd I request every soldier to meet at the Court House at 2 p. m. sharp to hear the reports read by the different committees and at which time I will read you our program for the reunion.

I have written the different camps from Plainview to Childress to come and be one of us, and the indications are, from the answers I am receiving, that the attendance will be large. The captain of the Memphis camp replied, "I'll come and bring 40 or more."

Remember no one will be present in the camp except soldiers during the day from 9:30 a. m. until 6:30 p. m. It has been said that we are selfish in meeting off to ourselves, but the public must remember that these old soldiers of the sixties went through four years siege of war by themselves and why not let them meet once more by themselves and talk the past over and have a good time, for year by year the ranks of the Confederate Veterans are thinning out rapidly falling in to their last sleeping and the time will be too soon when there will not be left any who witnessed the great struggle for the rights of the Southland. A message from W. L. (Old Tige) Cabell of Dallas states that he will address us as requested. Also one from General Taylor of Oklahoma who will address the Camp. Will have four speeches. They will be short but sweet for the time will be spent in talking with each other about the past as well as the future.

At 8 p. m. the old soldiers will have a fiddlers contest. In this the old tunes of a hundred years or more old will be played and also some of the old war songs. To this we invite everybody to come for "Old Tiges" who will speak during the evening, will interest you.

Every old soldier of 60's is expected to come.

Respectfully,

R. S. Kimberlin, Captain.

Mrs. Robinson, of Lelia Lake, was in the city shopping Saturday.

J. W. Helm and daughter were visitors to the city Saturday, from Jericho.

Mr. Goulston was in the city Saturday from the Graef neighborhood.

Mr. and Mrs. Eichelburger were in the city Saturday from Graef.

Mr. and Mrs. Richmond Bowlin were in the city Saturday from Lelia Lake.

The Best Offer Made for the New Year

THE TRI-WEEKLY ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

The Banner-Stockman

together with the superb FREE OFFERS of PARIS MODES, a woman's magazine; or THE SOUTHERN RURALIST; a splendid agricultural paper; or TALKS FROM FARMERS TO FARMERS, an epitome of farm wisdom, worth its weight in gold. All for only $1.75

The Tri-Weekly Constitution Monday, Wednesday, Friday, three times a week. The newest, best, brightest, and biggest Southern Newspaper. Almost a Daily, yet at the price of a Weekly.

or The Weekly Constitution—once a week, with each of the above (except that The Weekly Constitution is substituted for the Tri-Weekly)—all for one year for only $1.40. The Tri-Weekly Constitution presents at one sweeping view the whole area of events. The news of the country, state, nation, and the world is given in each complete issue. Each week the departments of Farm and Farmers, Woman's Kingdom, Great Agricultural South, Farmers' Union, Rural Free Delivery, Poultry and others of wide interest, edited by experts, appeal directly to those addressed. The Weekly Constitution contains all these special features and the difference between it and The Tri-Weekly is that the one is issued once a week (on Monday only) and the other three times a week—Monday, Wednesday and Friday. If you want the Constitution alone, without any clubbing offers, you can get the Tri-Weekly Constitution at $1 per year, or The Weekly at 50c per year, by addressing The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. One sample copy sent free on request, giving with it six of your neighbors.

THE CONSTITUTION IS THE PAPER FOR RURAL FREE DELIVERY ROUTES

A club of 40 or 50 or more will keep an R. F. D. route above the minimum average required for daily mail service. It is the great news purveyor of the whole Southland, as good in the Gulf states as on the Atlantic seaboard.

Clubbed with The Atlanta Constitution, we have the superb FREE OFFERS shown from which you may make your choice of one:

- (1) Talks From Farmers to farmers, a symposium of Southern farm knowledge that should be in the hands of every practical farmer, young or old. The articles have all appeared in Tri-Weekly Constitution under same title and made one of the greatest features of this splendid farmers' paper. It will be mailed to you immediately upon receipt of order.
- (2) The Southern Ruralist, one of the best agricultural papers in the south. It is a semi-monthly edited by a farmer on his own farm, and is intensely practical and helpful.
- (3) Paris Modes, a woman's magazine, monthly. There are fashions in it, as the title indicates, and they are right up to date. Do not think they are all of the sylph-like, hipless, clothes-pin styles of the extreme devotees of the changeable flirt called "Fashion." They are all pretty and becoming and up to date, so that the ladies may feel well-dressed and in the style who follow them. But you get more than mere fashions. There are stories, poems, storyettes, incidents of travel, seasonable articles for entertainments, home keeping, cookery, care of the person, sanitation and hygiene, plant culture and all the rest that go to make up a monthly feast for the busy woman who reads as she works, who relaxes from one task and finds charm in the ever-varying features of woman's work that is said to be never done.

OUR GREAT PROPOSITION

Remember, our paper one year, and THE TRI-WEEKLY CONSTITUTION, Monday, Wednesday and Friday, three times a week, for one year, and your selection of one from the three alternate free offers, all for $1.75; or the whole combination (except that The Weekly Constitution is substituted for the Tri-Weekly) for only $1.40. Send at once. Get right on. Don't miss a copy. Address all orders for above combination to HARTLEY'S CALLER.

By COLIN S. COLLINS.

Copyrighted, 1928, by Associated Literary Press.

"Lady to see you," announced Jimmie, one of the office boys, with a deference that he showed only to Hartley, the dramatic critic, and Murphy, the sporting editor. The sporting editor could call all the baseball players by their first names, but Hartley had only to write on a slip of paper and it would take Jimmie into the much desired "show." Such small fry as editors and star reporters were not at all in the same class with a man who carried passes in his pocket every day. "I've told you a hundred times to get the name, Jimmie," was the testy response. Hartley was ill at ease with the whole world that morning. "I know," admitted Jimmie, with unembarrassed truthfulness, "but, say, Mr. Hartley, she's a peacherino for fair!" "I'm not interested in fruit," was the cold response as Hartley turned to his desk. He hated all women at the moment, for he had had to do a thing which would probably cost him the love of the one woman he really did care for. He had had to tell the cruel truth about Norma Keating as an actress, and he felt that the high spirited girl never would forgive him. Jimmie, the persistent, hung over the desk. "She don't look like an actress," he declared, using the argument he knew to be most potent. "An' she's a pipplin for fair!" "I can't see any one who does not send in a card," declared Hartley as he turned to his work again, and Jimmie dashed out presently to return with a bit of pasteboard. With a start Hartley read Norma's name and gave orders that she be ushered in. It was better perhaps that since there was to be a quarrel they should meet on his own ground. Somehow, with the familiar surroundings, he felt more safe than he ever could in the parlor of the little actress' suit at the hotel. With a sternness that indifferently masked the misery that he felt he prepared to receive his caller. He had expected that she would come storming in to denounce him for his criticism and to declare him biased and unfair. He was braced for the shock and illly prepared for the sight of the dejected little woman who came timidly into his dingy office, her rich furs forming a strange contrast to the bare walls and cheap furniture. Jimmie slipped away after one last admiring glance, and then the girl raised her eyes to Hartley's and met the pity in his bravely. "I did not come to reproach you for your notice," she said, with a quick appreciation of his attitude. "It was your right to say what you pleased. I paid a big price for the special performance in order to get the metropolitan notices, and in doing so I exposed myself to every form of critical attack." "I suppose that you are expected to be severe on beginners, to ridicule them and beat them down and force them into their proper places." "You demand that we start at the bottom. I can see now that it was absurd to think that I could win favorable comment from the great men who have made their reputation more through the savageness of their attacks than through their ability as critics." "And yet you said you had not come to reproach?" he asked gently. Even in her bitterness she noticed a new note in the rich voice. It hurt him to think that he was in part responsible for that little catch of pain which would sound, try as she would to be hard and cynical. It was as if her whole quivering soul was laid bare in spite of the dress of words with which she sought to clothe it. "I did not mean to say that," she cried. "I only meant to come and ask you if you would let me have my photographs back. You and the rest of your confreres have beaten me. I am in retreat. I am going as far from New York as I can. I want to take with me everything that is mine." "You should have sent your agent and spared yourself," he reminded her gently. "I will see that the pictures are found for you. Will you sit down?" He indicated a chair as he rang for a boy, and presently Jimmie went away with instructions that Miss Keating's photographs were to be returned by the art department at once. Neither spoke until the boy had laid the package down and had departed for the outer office. Then Hartley rose and placed them on the chair beside her. "There is another one," she said uncertainly. "The one that I gave you. May I have it back, please?" "If you wish," he promised as he turned again to his desk to draw from one of the recesses a photograph with a flowing autograph across its face. "Does your anger go so deep that you are unwilling to leave me even this souvenir of a friendship that I shall always treasure in my memory?" he asked. "May I not keep it?" "To add to your sacrificial heap," she retorted bitterly. "I suppose you must have a goodly collection of those you have flayed." "I have few photographs—and few friends among the women of the profession," he said simply as he opened a drawer for an envelope. "I had hoped to number your first among those few." He held the envelope toward her, and for a moment she hesitated. She seemed about to leave the room, but she turned and faced him again. "You told me once that you never would marry an actress," she said tensely. "Was it because—because you did not want me on the stage that you—that you wrote as you did?" "I have made no secret of my admiration for you," said Hartley simply. "and I may have made the remark you attribute to me, but it was with no desire to drive you from the stage that I framed my criticism as I did." "Can't you see," he continued passionately, "the awful position in which I was placed. If I praised your acting, I should have made my paper the laughingstock of the town. If I spoke the truth I knew that I should lose you. Every line of the story in this morning's paper was studied that I might speak as warmly as I dared without stultifying the paper." "It was a little better than the rest," admitted Norma, "but I thought you had been a little kind so that I would not suspect how you had induced the other critics to be so merciless." "On the contrary, I saw none of the boys," he declared. "I was far too sick at heart to mix with them and hear their ugly comments." "Was I really as bad as that?" asked the girl wonderingly. "I thought it was because I was an amateur and had the money to hire the theater and the company. They always jump upon the rich amateurs, I had heard. I thought that was it. Was I really as bad as all that?" "Don't ask me," pleaded Hartley, but the girl persisted. "You have a good voice and a good presence," he said slowly. "You have some crude ability, but that is all. You lack the spark of genius. Even money cannot buy that." "Then you think I will never be an actress?" she asked with quivering lips. Hartley shook his head, and she turned away to the window, pressing her brow to the cool pane, against which the sleet rattled angrily. For several minutes she stood thus looking out into the whirling snow and hail with unseeing eyes, while Hartley silently watched her. He would have given the world to take her in his arms and comfort her, but instinctively he realized that she must fight her battle alone. She was the one woman in all the world to him, and yet he dared not speak. At last she turned, and now her eyes were smiling, though her lips still were drawn and white. "Why struggle against unanimous condemnation? You must be right," she conceded. "I never shall make an actress, and you said that you never would marry an actress." "I'd marry you if you were Bernhard and Duse in one," he cried, "but I rather would marry just you, dear. Will you have me? In spite of the blow that I have struck your pride can you love me?" "I hate to marry a wife beater," she said, with a wan little smile, "but, Frank, I think I'd rather have your love than to be a great actress, and I don't mind the notice—now." Jimmie, coming in with a card, turned and fled precipitately. "I used to think that Mr. Murphy had the best of it, going to prize fights an' ball games," he said reflectively, "but I guess it's Mr. Hartley that has the ench. I'd rather kiss that pipplin than know the bull ball team."

THE METHODIST REVIVAL

The Business Houses Closed Their Doors This Week in Order That Everyone Might Attend.

The interest in the Methodist revival has been great and every day it has increased until the meeting has been a power for good and should yet do greater good. The building of the tabernacle proved that the people were in earnest about desiring a great revival, and this week the closing of the business houses for one hour each afternoon has strengthened the efforts of the workers in their efforts for good among the unsaved of the town.

Rev. D. L. Coale has been faithful in his labors for the cause of Morality, Christianity and the right. Twice each day he has held the undivided interest of large crowds of hearers, while with all his power he has preached to them of the gospel truths. Between the services he has met and talked to the unsaved of the town and been untiring in his efforts to lead men to Christ. This town has never had a more faithful man to assist in a revival and with his departure it may be assured his influence will not cease, for the lives that he has touched will carry with them the blessing of the influence of this consecrated man, whose chief purpose is to lead men and women to better lives.

At each service Ed G. Phillips has not only directed the music but has rendered a solo, as only Mr. Phillips can render it. His voice is sympathetic as well as strong and his songs have carried conviction to the hearts of scores and hundreds of men. His life and his talent have been given freely to the work of christianity and especially has he been successful in leading men to Christ. His long experience as a gospel singer and personal worker has been crowned with success. He has sung in some of the South's greatest meetings.

With these two tireless workers and the pastor who has been so faithful in serving these people, and in every movement for the moral upbuilding of this town and community, and with the co-operation of the working members of the church the revival has accomplished great good. The church has been spiritually revived, and the membership awakened to a sense of their duty. Nearly one hundred have been converted and quite a number reclaimed, of this number about sixty are grown people and quite a number of them are men.

One of the best features of the meeting is that every church is working together, and that members of all the churches may be seen working side by side, all for the upbuilding of God's Kingdom and the furtherance of his cause and church. And all the churches will reap a harvest of members from the meeting. A large number have given their names for membership in the Methodist church, some for membership in the Baptist church, some will join the Presbyterian church, and still others will become members of the Christian church.

It is hoped that in the few days remaining time for the revival still greater results will be accomplished and everyone in this town interested in the church and the cause of Christ are urged to attend the remaining services.

J. H. Hodges has offered free a carriage, horses and himself for driver, to carry the Confederates to all parts of town on May fourth, the day of the reunion. He will also give a ham for the dinner. Because he is the son of a confederate veteran, and in the name of that father, he is planning to do all in his power to make this a pleasant reunion. Rev. Buchanan, traveling missionary of the Foreign Mission work for the Panhandle Presbyterian church will lecture at the church in this city tonight. Everybody cordially invited.

Clarendon, Tex April 23, 09

The moral interest of a community should be the paramount interest.

A young man who always stands for the right is in demand everywhere.

Governor Campbell is certainly standing by the people and the democratic platform.

The Standard Oil Company has earned in twenty-three years $1,000,000,000 and that too on an original capital of $69,000,000.

The intangible values of railroads in Texas have been increased for the year 1909, $15,000,000. The State Tax Board is surely after the railroads.

We will appreciate letters from our farmer friends and readers on any thing connected with the farm. Give your experience on farming in this section and offer any suggestions you think will help your fellow farmers.

Every true democrat in Texas must be disgusted with a majority of the state senate. That branch of the thirty-first legislature is surely against the best interests of the people and have little regard for the demands of the platform.

Farm and Ranch is offering $1000 in cash prizes to corn growers who make the best showing of 1909. There are 71 prizes ranging from $100 down to $2.50. Surely the farmers of Donley county should come in for some of them.

No entrance fees will be charged for exhibits in Farm and Ranch's $1000 corn contest which will be held this winter. A corn grower may grow corn on any sort of land and cultivate it in any way he pleases. All he has to do is to ship his exhibit, at the proper time to Farm and Ranch at Dallas and expert corn judges will award the prizes.

In addition to the $1000 in cash prizes offered by Farm and Ranch for exhibits of corn grown this year, Mr. Walter B. Whitman, managing editor of the Farm and Ranch, offers a magnificent silver trophy cup, 14 inches high and lined with gold, for the best display of 10 ears of corn, any variety, grown by a boy under 18 years of age. What do the boys of this county think about winning this cup?

We have been expecting the Texas senate to expel Governor Campbell for affirming that Thomas was right when he said there was a strong lobby at Austin, that was doing all it could to defeat the will of the people expressed at the ballot box and in their platform. Perhaps all that saves the Governor is the strong indorsement the people of Mr. Thomas' district gave him by selecting him by such a large majority over the strongest and best known man in the district.

Bascom Thomas, expelled from the senate, has been vindicated by his district and will take his seat just as soon as the certificate of election is issued. It appears that the second district knows who they want at Austin as their representative.—Sherman Democrat.

Sure. The people of Texas will never stand for any such unwarranted proceedings as the senate enacted in expelling Thomas. They may not care so much for Thomas personally, but they are not going to rest such proceedings become a precedent for future expelling of legislators who naturally become "unpopular" the moment they become active in exposing the work of lobbyists or the dereliction of members who would rather play poker and loaf about saloon bars than attend to the grave duties that rest upon them as representatives of the people.—McKinney Examiner.

There is little doubt, in the minds of the people of Texas, but that Thomas was right in his charges that a mighty lobby infested the thirty-first legislature. The people of Mr. Thomas' district evidence their belief in the genuineness of his charges by selecting him to fill the vacancy caused by his expulsion. Thomas defeated one of the strongest men in the district by two to one carrying every county in the district. Doubtless the people of the whole state would give a similar endorsement if they had the opportunity.

Cultivator Demonstration.

On last Saturday Messrs A. S. Johnson and E. T. Beall, representing the Kingman Texas Implement Co., gave a demonstration of the workings of the "Texas Surprise," a new cultivator, just invented and for sale to the retail dealer by this firm. This cultivator is so constructed that it can easily be handled by a fifty pound boy or a three hundred pound man being arranged so as to be balanced for either. Quite a number of farmers were present, among whom were S. P. Morton, on whose place the demonstration was made; A. D. Major, Mr. Hall and Mr. Teel, all of whom were well pleased with the workings of the "Texas Surprise." The plows can be placed to any depth in the ground, owing to the desire to plow deep or shallow, and will take the very hardest of land, either deep or shallow. These gentlemen will place this cultivator for sale with some of the local dealers of this city.

Foreign Mission Notes.

The woman's Foreign Mission Society had its mission study ("The Nearer and Farther East") Monday afternoon. The study of conditions is essential to the progress of the gospel in the heathen world.

As a railroad is being projected to the sacred Mecca from Medina, before many months the Mohammedan pilgrims may make their way to the tomb of the false prophet more speedily and comfortably than in past centuries.

The same facilities will hasten the spread of the truth of the Bible also.

Officials in China are directed to open at least a hundred preparatory schools in each provincial capital within twelve months with a student roll of fifty children each, the government to defray all expenses.

What wonderful results would go out if each of these schools was put under the care of a well equipped, consecrated Protestant teacher.

Two rooms are being added to the residence of J. Walker Lane.

Claude Lissanby, of Amarillo, was a court visitor to Clarendon Sunday.

J. C. Asher left Sunday night for Dallas where he is having his eyes treated.

Misses Minnie and Ethel Rutherford entertained a large crowd of young folks Saturday night, in honor of Misses Mary and Imogene King of Memphis. The party was very pleasant, games and conversation passing the time away all to last. At a late hour delicious refreshments were served and the guests reluctantly departed profuse in their thanks to the hostesses and honor guests for the pleasant evening.

P. P. P. Cures Rheumatism

Read what Nicholas Lang, the largest retail grocer in Savannah says about P. P. P.

F. V. LIPPMAN, Savannah, Ga.,

Dear Sir:

For many years I consumed much medicine, and in fact tried every means in my power to get cured of that terrible disease, rheumatism, which had undermined my health. I visited Hot Springs, Ark., without gaining relief, and at last in sheer desperation I took P. P. P. (Lippman's great remedy), and was in a short time entirely cured. In the eight years since that time I have not had a symptom of rheumatism.

P. P. P. did the work to my entire satisfaction and made a quick and permanent cure.

Yours truly,

Nicholas Lang.

The Prospect Was Never Better

For people to buy goods cheap at Hedley, Texas. We overestimated our selling business when we were in the market and we bought in too large a quantity.

On purchases of shoes and Hats, we will pay your fare one way. On clothing in boy's or men's suits amounting to $7.00 and upward we will pay your carfare both ways.

Easter Sunday at the Churches.

(Crowded out last week.)

Rev. John D. White of Canyon City filled the pulpit at the Christian church both morning and night Sunday. The congregation extended a unanimous call to Rev. White to give half time to the Clarendon church, and from this time he will preach here the second and fourth Sundays. He is an able man and the congregation is fortunate in securing his services.

In the afternoon the children met at the church and with a few of the grown people to care for them were taken in wagons and carried to Morgan's sink hole where they had an Easter egg rolling and later had lunch served to them. It was a very enjoyable evening for the little ones as well as the grown ups.

Rev. Pittman filled his pulpit at the Baptist church at the morning and night services, preaching splendid sermons both times. The house was well filled for both services, and crowded at the morning hour. A collection for Home and Foreign missions in the morning met with a generous response. The Sunday school and the Union had as usual good services.

Saturday afternoon the children of the church and a few of the ladies went out to the prairie and had a very enjoyable Easter egg hunt.

Rev. Gill, of Amarillo, a local missionary, filled the pulpit at the Presbyterian church at both the morning and evening hours. Small audiences were present at both the services, but the sermons were very interesting and helpful.

The rector, Rev. Yerger, filled the pulpit at the Episcopal church at both services Sunday.

There was the regular service and Holy Communion Sunday morning besides a special program of music. Prof. Herrmann presided at the organ and two beautiful anthems were rendered as well as a solo by Mr. Anderson, of Amarillo. Those who heard Mr. Anderson at the College Saturday night will know that there was no better music rendered Easter than that in which Mr. Anderson took part.

The night service was for the children of the Sunday school, and was a good service as well as that held at the morning hour. A very pretty children's anthem was given as well as other good choir singing.

Damaged by Hail.

Saturday afternoon Clarendon had quite a hail-storm, some of the stones that fell measuring ten inches around. The storm lasted only a few moments, but in that time a number of window lights, and sky lights around town were broken, some chickens were killed and it is thought that quite a lot of the fruit was knocked off the trees.

Several panes of glass in the sky light at Martin-Bennett's store were broken, some was broken in the sky light at Miss Porter's store and several in the Banner-Stockman office. A large window pane was broken in the Masonic lodge building, a number of panes of glass in windows of residences. Several panes in the sky-lights at Tillery Bros. Store, Dr. Stocking, and possibly others of which we have not learned. Seventy five holes were beat in the roof of the McDaniel building. Some stones beat through the roof of Mr. Antrobus's house and did considerable damage.

Gen. Cabell to be Here.

R. S. Kimberlin is in receipt of a letter from Gen. Cabell who says that he will be present at the Confederate Reunion at Clarendon on May fourth. Gen. Cabell will speak in this city at night on that date. All who are in sympathy with the old veterans will be glad of this opportunity to hear this veteran speak.

Mr. Watson was in the city Saturday from Windy Valley shopping.

Damaged By Fire.

Monday night about nine thirty o'clock fire broke out in the hardware store of H. C. Kerbow and Company. The fire boys made a quick response and by hard work succeeded in checking the flames before the stock was entirely consumed. But not before a great deal of damage had been done.

The fire was in the upper part of the store and the origin is unknown. It is supposed that either a rat and match did the work or someone had entered the store from the rear door, which was found to be open, and set fire to a pile of mattresses. The greatest damage was done to these mattresses and some springs and chairs which were upstairs. But the damage by water was considerable down stairs. The building was considerably damaged above and beneath the stack of mattresses.

Disinterested parties have been in and an invoice of the stock taken the loss being found by them to be between $1500 and $2000, covered by insurance.

For novelty and latest styles in all over net for waists will be on display in a few days. Clarendon Mercantile Co.

Mrs. Watkins Entertains.

(Crowded out last week.)

Last Monday afternoon Mrs. Watkins entertained the mothers of kindergarten pupils with an Easter entertainment. The school room was decorated with paper chains and the walks were covered with Easter emblems, wee yellow and white chicks, rabbits and butterflies, the work of the children.

A very interesting program was given consisting of motion songs and recitations, after which the little ones enjoyed rolling the gaily colored eggs. After playing several games the hostess announced that everyone was going fishing. Accordingly they all marched into a room with one corner screened off which they were told was a pond. Each one in turn threw in a line and soon got a bite. The fish proved to be yellow sacks tied with white ribbon which were filled with bon bons—that is all except the one caught by Mrs. H. B. White which contained an immense sandwich. After this they adjourned to the parlor where golden punch and white cake were served. As a fit closing to this enjoyable occasion the pupils assembled and gave their yell. Each guest was presented with a souvenir a small colored rabbit, chick or butterfly.

Appreciates Fire Boys Work.

H. C. Kerbow requests the Banner-Stockman reporter to express, through our columns, his appreciation for the valuable service rendered to him during the fire Monday night. The boys responded so promptly and worked so faithfully until perfect safety was assured. He says his thanks are due the band boys and a number of others who did their best in checking the fire and that he will ever feel grateful to each one of them.

Those who are skeptical about the use of printers ink being one of the best investments a merchant can make should have been in Warren and Webb's store during their sale Saturday and Monday. The store was crowded nearly all of both days and the reporter was not surprised to hear one of the proprietors say about night that he had had no time to eat dinner. Prices and printers ink are a matchless combination.

Dr. Clyce, of Sherman, will fill the pulpit at the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and evening.

W. A. SoRelle spent Saturday and Sunday with home folks here. He is now a member of the Reeves Realty Co. of Plainview.

Henry Saunders, of Memphis, was in the city Sunday.

A Memory.

When the news went out from the saddened home that Ekford Reeves was hovering amidst the shadows beside the River of Death, the hearts of the people in Clarendon went out in anxious sympathy. For some hours they listened for every message, hoping for the best. But soon the Death Angel came—and Ekford was gone. A feeling of profound sorrow swept over the town, sorrow for the bright young life so soon ended, and a great sympathy for the aged father and mother who sat in desolation beside their youngest son.

Mr. and Mrs. Reeves moved to Clarendon a few years ago in order that Ekford might have the advantages of Clarendon College and still be at home with them. In college he was found to be a good student, faithful in his work, and gentlemanly in his conduct.

About a year ago he went to Dallas for a Commercial course. On its completion he came home and secured a position as bookkeeper in the First National Bank.

Here he might be seen from day to day giving his time and his energy to his work, becoming each day more proficient and inspiring his friends with greater confidence in him and pride in his work. Life seemed to stretch before him so full of promise. Every other child of a large family had gone out into homes of their own. Ekford alone was left with the father and mother, the pride of their declining years. The mother often followed him to the door to see that her baby boy had on his overcoat when the day was cold, and watched his manly form with loving eyes as he went off down the street to his work. The gray haired father who was growing feeble saw in this, his youngest son, his own life again, and lived in his boy. Yet they are left and their big, strong, broadshouldered boy is gone. Truly God's ways are often hard for us to understand yet we know that our Father doeth all things well.

As the shadows of death came he clung to the hand that had guided his baby feet—the hand that had never failed him. His loved ones were around him to the last and everything was done that love could do. The tenderest sympathy of our people is with them all, but especially with the father and mother in their lonely home. But in the midst of their grief they have much to comfort them in the thought of his manly upright character and his devotion to them.

The crowds at the funeral at the Baptist church before the morning train came that took his body to Plainview for burial, especially the long line of College boys who followed the hearse to the depot, attested the esteem in which he was held.

One of his friends.

The Ladies of the Presbyterian church will hold an "Apron Sale" at the Western Real Estate office Friday afternoon, April 30, 3 to 10 p. m. Ice-cream and cake, sandwiches and coffee will be served. An embroidered quilt will be for sale.

A Wedding Present.

By Martha McCulloch-Williams.

Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.

"I won't! I say it! I mean it! I won't! Not now, never, nor the next day! So there!" Adela cried, her fingers tight in her ears and stamping her foot hard.

"That's a pity! Such a pity!" Billy Bruce murmured, with his most engaging smile. "A pity you say it, I mean, because I know and you know perfectly that you will."

"Who's going to make me, or what? Certainly not you, not the little old scrap of a fortune," Adela retorted, sticking out her chin. Billy laughed softly, hardly more than a chuckle.

"True, we don't amount to much, the fortune and I," he said. "Still, there's rather more to us than you can get any other way."

"Oh, you think so! Your modesty won't kill you, not for a long time yet," Adela broke in, with a wicked toss of the head. Billy made her his best bow, saying half plaintively: "You didn't notice I held up my fingers for quotation marks. I was quoting—from Rob Torrens. He talked you over down at the hotel."

"I don't believe it! How dared you let him? What did he say?" Adela shot at him, a round red spot blazing in either cheek.

"He didn't say much—after I got to him. Benny Driggs was with him. They were going on at a great rate until I came. No, he spoke no harm of anybody. Indeed, he was more sensible than one might reasonably expect," Billy continued.

"Unless you tell me I shall go straight and ask him—ask him if he said anything at all about me," Adela cried, her lip curling faintly. Billy stood a thought straighter. "You can't do that. He's leaving on the evening train. It's due, just about," he said. "I don't think you can mean to imply that I'm lying. I wouldn't do that if it would make you love me. Torrens said this, as nearly as I can recall his words: 'It is a good thing the little Ware girl has her future all settled for her. She's pretty enough, madcap enough, to make history, lots of it, if she had a free rein. And really Billy Bruce, plus $50,000, ought to console her fairly for losing me.'"

"You—what did you say?" Adela demanded, sparks at the bottom of her eyes. Billy's mouth was set into a grimish smile. "It didn't seem to me a time for talking," he said. "I said nothing, but Mr. Torrens got off the piazza—and thought he was going to get off the earth about two seconds later, while I explained to the rest that I felt myself insulted by the color of his politics."

"Is that why he's going away?" Adela asked in a faint, small voice. Billy nodded. "I reckon so," he said. "Maybe he'll write and give you another reason. I think he had engaged to call on you tonight."

Adela put both her hands over her face and for a minute cried stormily. Billy watched her with something big and hard in his throat. Suddenly she flung down her hands and faced him, teary and woebegone. She was badly spoiled, impatient withal and selfish with the selfishness of eighteen.

"By all the rules of the game I ought to give in to you at once," she said, snapping out the words. "But I won't do it. Go away! I hate you—almost as much as I hate that," stopping and choking. "I don't want to see you—ever again—not unless my mind changes. I do not want to see any man at all."

"All right, I'll vanish," Billy said half wistfully. "But, Dell, have you thought of this? If you mope at home, seeing nobody at all, the town will have it you're breaking your heart for Torrens. Now I think of it, my going will help a lot. You can reasonably be supposed to be grieving after me."

"Oh, you'll kill me!" Adela moaned. "But where are you going? Not that it matters—if only you stay away!"

"I shall stay a couple of years. It'll take about that time for leisurely globe trotting," Billy said craftily. "I've all along had it in mind, though I didn't mention it. I hoped so much we could go together."

Adela stared at him, forgetting in her amazement to cry. "Of all things!" she ejaculated. "Why, Billy! I never thought you'd care to go a hundred miles from home. You—you've been always so careful about money. Not that you were mean, but you didn't—"

"Make a splash," Billy supplemented as she stopped for a word. "No. That always seemed to be foolish and in mighty bad taste. But I shall be able to afford a lot of things now. You see, I began to let the rents of my farm accumulate as soon as granddad's will was read, giving us to each other. Money grows a lot when you leave it for ten years and put more to it every little while. I kept my mouth shut about it, but many a time I've told myself, 'This is to give Dell the wedding present she'll like best in the world.'"

"Why didn't you tell me?" Adela said fretfully. Billy smiled, but drew a long breath.

"Telling would have broken the charm," he said. "I wanted to surprise you, and I didn't want to bribe you into taking me. I shouldn't be telling you even now if you hadn't made me see there is no chance of our coming together."

"Then why don't you go away?" Adela said more than ever fretful. She was on the verge of fresh tears—tears she would not for the world let him see. If life had depended on it she would not have admitted, even to herself, that they were more for the hurt to her pride involved in his going without her than for the crushing out of what but yesterday she had fancied was her one true love.

Torrens had awakened it—Torrens, with his gay elegance, his careless, easy assumption of authority, so unlike Billy's respectful adoration. Billy was the inevitable, the commonplace. Therefore she had resented him even more than she had resented the family disposition of her hand.

Torrens had fascinated her from the beginning. She had felt it would be so finely romantic to fling away a lover and a fortune for his dear sake. And he had asked her to do it—a hundred times at least—as plainly as anything could be asked without words.

And now he had gone, at Billy's bidding—gone without a word to her. Sharp across her consciousness had come the whistle of the departing train. In a passion of anger and humiliation she turned again upon Billy, saying in her hardest voice:

"Go tell everybody you threw me over—because of the other—and don't let me see you ever again!"

She was sorry for the speech before the gate shut behind Billy, sorer still as the days drew into a week—a week full of stir and wondering over Billy's approaching departure. She had not seen him again, even at a distance. Daily he walked a block about rather than pass her gate. He did more—gave up his share in the money, putting the whole of it safely in trust for Adela. When word of it was brought to her she turned away her face, ran upstairs and was invisible until next day.

Torrens had written—a light, graceful, lying letter, pleading imperative business in excuse for his seeming rudeness, and at the very end hinting at wishing her joy with Billy. She tore the letter furiously into small bits and next minute wished she had sent it to Billy instead.

Billy was going that night—upon the same train that had taken Torrens away. All day Adela thought of him. All day she fought with herself.

At 5 o'clock she began furiously to make some small preparations. At 6, cloaked and bonneted, with a traveling bag clutched in her hands, she stole down side streets to the station and shrank into hiding there.

Billy would not come for half an hour. The train came at 7, but she must be in time. She had on a thick veil and had chosen the most unflattering of her wraps. Thus nobody recognized her, not even Billy when he came in, the center of a hearty group.

They laughed and jested with him, all talking at once and very fast. They slapped him on the shoulder and poked him in the ribs, but somehow they were not very merry. Billy himself was not merry, though he kept up his part manfully.

Adela, watching from her covert, saw lines in his face unseen before. Otherwise she might have lacked courage for the desperate thing she had to do. It was a desperate thing, considering what had come and gone, to walk out and say in a weak, small voice, but so all could hear: "Billy—I—have changed my mind. I—I want my wedding present after all. Yes, there's time. I—I sent word to the minister to have everything ready, you see. I knew I could depend on you."

A Famous Reply.

The career of Axel Oxenstjerna is a proud chapter in the history of Sweden. In 1611 Oxenstjerna became the chancellor of the Swedish empire, under Gustavus Adolphus, and much of the glory that befell the reign of that remarkable monarch was due to the masterly diplomatic ability, great courage, resource and moderation of his prime minister. For in the days of Oxenstjerna Sweden was one of the "powers" of Europe, and the Swedish dominion for a time extended over Prussian territory. During the entire period of the Thirty Years' war in Europe Sweden, through the instrumentality of her "mighty man in peace," maintained an enviable place in the council of nations. And when in 1648 negotiations for a general continental agreement began at Osnabruck the Swedish chancellor appointed his own son, Johan, as the Swedish representative, the son expressed his distrust of his ability to properly serve his country in so responsible a capacity. To this natural diffidence of youth the father made his famous reply:

"Dost thou not know, my son, with how little wisdom the world is governed?"

The Doctor and the Dog.

A family that live in a detached house out in the suburbs telephoned for their doctor. The call was urgent. It was late in the evening.

When the doctor arrived at the gate the family dog was there ahead of him. The dog did not like the looks of a man with a triangle shaped bunch of whiskers and black shapet.

The doctor started to brush by the dog and go in. But the dog soon showed him that he wasn't joking.

"Maybe they'll hear the dog and call him off," thought the doctor, and he waited. But they didn't.

There was just one thing for the doctor to do, and that was to go to the nearest telephone and call up the family. But he learned that it was no easy job to find a telephone. It was then pretty late, and he had to go half a dozen blocks back toward town before he found a place where he could get a phone.

"Dog," repeated the man at the other end. "We haven't any dog. You must have stopped at the place next door. They have a dog. Now, hurry back here."—New York Press.

Easy Confinement

If you have cause to fear the pains of childbirth, remember that they are due to weakness, or disease, of the womanly organs, and that healthy women do not suffer, like weak ones.

"Before my confinement," writes Mrs. Rose Schubarth, of Monument, Colo., "I had such bearing-down pains I didn't know what to do. Cardui quickly relieved me. Some months later I had a fine 12-lb. baby, was sick only thirty minutes, and did not even have a doctor."

Charlie Beverley and J. J. Gouldston Think Bond Issue Should Carry.

Charlie Beverley and J. J. Gouldston were in the city this week and spoke decidedly in favor of the bond issue for good roads.

They think the voting of bonds to build good permanent roads would be the best thing the citizens of Donley county can do. Mr. Beverley said by voting bonds to build our roads the railroads and nonresidents will help, in fact do a large share of the road making. He thinks the only way to have good roads is to issue bond, and pay for them. He also thinks the carrying of the election tomorrow will be a great advertisement for Donley county which is undoubtedly true.

BIG FINE PAID TOMORROW

The State Will Receive $1,808,753.95 From the Waters Pierce Oil Company.

Everything is ready and tomorrow the Waters Pierce Oil Company will pay into the state treasury the big fine of $1,808,753.95, which the faithful work of attorney Davidson and his helpers secured in the district court of Travis county, and successfully fought through all the courts of the country.

The final triumph of the state in this famous case or rather these famous cases, is a great victory for Texas, the Attorney General and his helpers.

The money is to go into the general fund and comes in good time, enabling the tax board to reduce the state tax to almost nothing.

The state receiver, Robt. J. Eckhardt, is now in charge of the property of the Waters Pierce Oil Company.

W. D. WILLIAMS APPOINTED

The Mayor of Ft. Worth Appointed to The Place Made Vacant by the Death of Hon. J. L. Story.

Governor Campbell has appointed William D. Williams, Mayor of Fort Worth, to the vacancy caused by the death of Hon. J. L. Story, on the railroad commission. Mr. Williams is well known in Texas, having made a race for railroad commissioner three years ago. He is well qualified to fill the important place to which he has been appointed. His appointment came as a surprise to most of the people. He was the first man thought of when Judge Story died but after he was elected mayor of Fort Worth he was not thought of in connection with the filling of the vacancy. The governor is liable to do the unthought of things but is generally right.

An Appreciation.

Saturday evening, April tenth, Mr. Anderson sang at a recital in the College Auditorium where he made an impression by his artistic work. His singing was pleasantly and eagerly anticipated by all who knew him then, and by those who desire to know now, for his reputation as a singer is established. Equipped with thorough musical understanding, depth of conception, a sure and facile technique and possessing an abundance of temperament as well as fine sensitiveness, Mr. Anderson's singing was most satisfying.

The voice is full, large, flexible and thrilling and the ease and simplicity with which he sings is charming.

His diction is pure, tone quality rich and abundant and the shading most excellent.

He interpreted the varied songs with poetic insight, dramatic power and lyric charm but the pure baritone quality of his voice was first shown in Buck's "Fear Ye Not, O Israel," of which he gave a broad interpretation replete with vitality. With telling effect he sang "O, Mother of Mine," Tours, and "Gypsy John," Clay, which were enched to the echo. Truly this is a divine art, divinely given.

A very enjoyable Whist party was given last Tuesday evening by Miss Kittie Fleming, in honor of her guest Miss Gertrude Hoopengartner of Cuyahoga Ohio. Seven tables were filled with enthusiastic players. Mrs. F. D. Martin captured the ladies prize, a beautiful rose jar, which she presented to the honoree. M. J. G. Martin was the lucky winner of the gentlemen's prize, a handsome stamped leather belt, while Robb Sawyer Jr. was awarded the consolation prize, a large shower bouquet of red carnations, which he of course, immediately and graciously, transferred to the guest of honor, Miss Hoopengartner, as guest, received a pretty Wedgewood vase as a souvenir of the party on occasion. Dainty refreshments, consisting of chicken patties, cream potatoes, bread and butter, pickles, olives and coffee, ice cream and cake, were served after the game. Goodnights were said at a late hour, and the happy guests departed, carrying with them most pleasant recollections of an evening delightfully spent in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Graef District No. 8.

(Crowded out last week)

Everybody is jubilant over the crop prospect since the snow has put the ground in a fine condition for planting.

Misses Eva and Jessie Burt formerly students of Graef school left a few days ago to spend the summer with their sister who lives near Waco.

Such girls are an acquisition to any community, and they will be greatly missed here.

On the 4th of this month while trying to pen some yearlings Roy Beverly received a very painful injury in his leg which was the result of his horse falling down with him. On account of this, Roy's brother "Will" has to do the plowing and Roy uses a walking stick to facilitate locomotion.

Some people in this community are highly elated over the reelection of H. Bascomb Thomas from Sulphur Springs.

The fact that he was expelled from the senate for the reason that Mr. Thomas was trying to expose certain members of the legislature charging them with irregularities, and illicit proceedings reacted in his favor and made him more popular than ever among his constituents.

The public weal needs an expose where anything is wrong, and if the yeomen of this country submit without a murmur to such proceedings influenced by lobbyists, the next thing we hear of The Alien and Sedition Laws, or some other law similar to this may be enacted into law by our Texas Legislature in order to put a curb on free speech thereby preventing the people from criticizing members of the legislature in their official capacity. An officer is a public servant and as such his record should be open for public inspection.

The weal of a nation depends upon the just and honest administration of governmental affairs therefore every man should take a sufficient interest in public affairs that he might vote intelligently for good government by electing upright and trustworthy men who have the courage of their convictions and who will "Dare to do right."

Rev. Dubbs of Clarendon preached here last Sunday at 11 A. M. and 4 o'clock P. M.

Both discourses related to the divinity of Christ and the authenticity of the scriptures. The services were gratifying to all and want Bro. Dubbs to come again.

School will close here this week.

Will write again when anything new happens.

Success to the Banner-Stockman.

A young man living in a neighboring town who does not believe in patronizing home merchants, some time ago, sent to a mail order house for a suit of clothes. In the pocket of the trousers he found the following note: "Should this fall into the hands of a good looking young man who desires to correspond with a young lady of sweet disposition, kindly address," etc. The aforesaid mail order friend promptly sent a letter to the address and in a few days received the following reply: "Sir my wife has received a letter to the address of her maiden name. Twenty years ago. When she worked in a clothing factory, she might have written the note. She is now the mother of seventeen children, and my lawful wife. If you do not cut out writing to her I will take a trip to your town and make you look like two cents worth of dog meet."
