Now that we can pronounce it

That historic Sesquicentennial is drawing to a close

DALLAS (AP) - To the 40 million people who came to help Texas celebrate its 150th birthday, the Lone Star State now is more than just cactus, cowboys and a prime-time soap opera.

And as the state winds up a Sesquicentennial party that lasted through more than 10,000 events staged in every corner of the state, it can safely be said that Texans have gotten to know home better, too.

"As far as we're concerned, the Sesquicentennial was a phenomenal success," says O.C. Garza, spokesman for the Texas Tourism Development Agency. "There was a definite increase in Texas pride as people learned more about their Consider Vasile Bolos, a Romanian native who was so happy to be living in Texas that he spent 150 days walking every inch of the state's 3,000-mile perimeter.

Then there were the dozens of hardy souls who weathered the sixmonth, 3,000-mile Sesquicentennial Wagon Train to experience - and teach - a way of frontier life long since past. Remember those beaming faces as the procession rolled into-Fort Worth back in July?

Harry and William, the sons of Britain's Prince Charles, now have Dallas Cowboys T-shirts in their wardrobe, souvenirs from their father's visit to pay his respects to America's second-biggest state. The accompanying herd of reporters focused an international spotlight that gave Texas publicity it couldn't have begun to buy.

Cities and towns throughout the state spent more than $100 million prettying themselves up for the party with projects ranging from treeplantings to complete community facelifts, says Sam Garner, spokesman for the Texas Sesquicentennial Commission.

A spectacular laser light show silhouetted Houston's skyline for the world to see, being the "biggest" translated even to the world's largest birthday cake, and the Alamo took a bow in yet another movie being made about Texas' most famous episode.

And, as the year wound to a close, most Texans finally learned to pronounce "sesquicentennial."

Yet though the year's big events are over, the fire's not completely out: Texans from Houston to San Antonio to Dallas will attend "Texas Admits To Being in the Union" balls New Year's Eve, and church bells will seal the celebration with birthday peals at the stroke of midnight.

The year wasn't without its problems.

Texas U.S.A., the Sesquicentennial bull with a Texas-shaped patch of fur on its forehead, died of a broken back, and the Texas Independence Express steam train gave up without so much as a puff. Today's rails weren't designed to accommodate a 19th-century steam engine, and a 19th century-style project couldn't survive today's liability insurance Worst of all, souring oil prices sapped the economy, forcing budget cutbacks everywhere from the state commission to the 2,700 groups organized all over Texas to celebrate the Sesquicentennial.

"We wish the economy would have

Abshire named point man on Iran-Contra deal

WASHINGTON (AP) - David Abshire, a veteran foreign policy troubleshooter responding to "an unexpected call to duty," will return from Europe to oversee the White House response to the furor arising from the Iran-Contra arms affair.

President Reagan announced Friday his appointment of Abshire, U.S. ambassador to NATO, as White House coordinator for inquiries into the arms sales and the diversion of funds to aid Nicaraguan rebels.

Meanwhile, a spokeswoman at Georgetown University Hospital, Robin Payes, said CIA Director William J. Casey "is fully conscious and able to sit up in a bedside chair" following surgery to remove a cancerous brain tumor. The statement marked the first time the hospital had gone much beyond describing Casey's condition as "stable" since the Dec. 18 operachief, 73, was able to talk, Ms. Payes said, "This is all we have so far." A source in the intelligence community, who declined to be identified, said Friday, "I understand that Mr. Casey is in very bad shape and is recovering very slowly." Casey, a key figure in the arms sale controversy, was hospitalized as he was about to testify again before the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Before assuming his NATO post in 1983. Abshire was president of the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington.

As an assistant secretary of state in 1970, he had the job of drumming up congressional support for then-President Nixon's policy of military raids on Laos and Cambodia, at a time of lagging public enthusiasm for U.S. involvement in the war in Southeast Asia.

And in 1975, he served on a commission that investigated the government's foreign policy machinery and recommended that Henry A. Kissinger's dual roles as head of the National Security Council staff and secretary of state not be repeated.

Now, he will again look into the role of the NSC staff as he handles requests for information from congressional committees, a presidential review panel and a court-appointed independent counsel. All are investigating allegations that NSC staffers ramrodded the arms sale policy and kept the president in the dark about the diversion of funds.

Abshire, 60, will have Cabinet rank and report directly to the president, not to White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, presidential spokesman Mark Weinberg said.

Abshire, interviewed on ABC-TV, said he "had good conversations with Don Regan and he told me when we first talked how anxious he was to see this separation."

Speaking to CBS-TV, Abshire called creation of the new post "a commonsense solution to the management of a very difficult situation, so that there is no distraction at the White House from its major business, whether it is foreign policy. defense policy or domestic policy, at a very important time."

In a statement issued through the public affairs office of the U.S. mission to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Brussels, Belgium, Abshire said: "This is an unexpected call to duty that I could not do other than accept.

He said he had a "good conversation" with Reagan, who telephoned him Friday morning.

"It is critical that these issues be resolved with bipartisan cooperation and to public satisfaction," Abshire

Bargain hunters swarm nation's retailers

By JOYCE M. ROSENBERG AP Business Writer

Christmas has come and gone, but as post-holiday bargain hunters jammed stores, many of the nation's retailers found the day after to be as lucrative as the day before.

Shoppers lined up outside some stores before they opened Friday. and many businesses extended their Bullock's-Wilshire, with 28 department stores on the West Coast, had its biggest day of the year in terms of transactions, and its revenues equaled those of the day before Christmas, said Jack McCarley, vice president for public affairs.

"It's every bit as busy as it was before Christmas," said Lonnie Dykes, security director at the Beverly Center in west Los Angeles. Stores reported that most customers were buying, not returning merchandise, and even those bringing gifts back were taking advantage of the sales.

Many customers headed first for the heavily discounted Christmas cards, wrapping paper and tree decorations.

'We opened (an hour early) at 9, and they were lined up around the block," said Sally Sargent, a spokeswoman for Bloomingdale's in New York. "Trim a Tree is

At Macy's flagship store in midtown Manhattan, customers pulled down the store's own decorations and bought them.

In Chicago, customers lined up outside Marshall Field for discounts of up to 70 percent on furs, said a spokesman for the store, Doug throughout the 27 Marshall Field stores in Illinois, Wisconsin and Texas, said Dome. All departments with sales going on were enjoying a good day, he said.

"Traffic is incredibly high"

Saks, Marshall Field and Bullock's-Wilshire reported men's items were selling briskly, and Bloomingdale's and Marshall Field reported their home entertainment sections were doing well.

But some retail chains found their downtown stores relatively quiet while business boomed in the suburbs, as many offices were closed and customers shopped near home.

In the Washington, D.C., area, Woodward & Lothrop's suburban stores were extremely busy, with customers waiting outside before the doors opened, said spokeswoman Robbie Snow. Woodie's downtown store had a slower start, she said.

In Atlanta, employees at Rich's giant downtown store had a chance to catch their breath.

"It's been slow today," said Jeff Pilgrim, assistant manager in the boys' department.

Some retailers, hurt by poor Christmas sales the past two years, stocked relatively lean inventories this year, according to Joanne Legomsky, an analyst with Standard & Poor's Corp.

As a result, some stores sold out their Christmas merchandise before the holiday and bargain hunters Friday did not find much to choose from.

Friday's heavy sales volume gave the retail industry a chance to revive its December performance, which generally had been lackluster, said Walter Loeb, an analyst with the Morgan Stanley investment firm.

More holiday traffic fatalities reported

By The Associated Press

At least 26 people, including a 2-year-old boy who was accidentally run over by his mother in the driveway of a Fort Worth home, have died in Texas traffic accidents during the Christmas holidays.

Twenty-one people were killed during the official Department of Public Safety counting period that began 6 p.m. Tuesday and ended midnight Christmas Day. The Associated Press' count extends through midnight Sunday.

At least four people died in accidents on Friday, including a Houston mail carrier killed Friday while making her rounds. U.S. Postal Service carrier Trina

Denise Mitchell, 31, was thrown from her delivery truck about 10:30 a.m. Friday when it was struck by a car that was attempting to pass in southwest Houston, police said.

Cory Welfel, 2, and his brother, 6-year-old Aaron, died when their mother's car collided with a truck in Victoria Friday morning while on the way to a babysitter's house. The mother, Debra Ann Welfel of Victoria, was hospitalized in serious condition. Ella Mathis of Fort Worth got off work from her hairdresser's job Friday afternoon and telephoned her four young children that she was on HEREFORD - The Golden Spread grams for children. Foster Parent Association, a volunteer organization working to make Christmas a brighter day for Foster children, received $2,500 donation today from the Furr's Foundation.

The money will be used to provide Christmas gifts for 27 children now in foster care and to purchase recreation equipment.

The Furr's Foundation, a Philanthropic arm of Furr's, Inc., has raised hundreds of thousands of dollars this Chritmas season to help underprivileged children in 44 cities in Texas and New Mexico. The check to the Foster Parent Association is one of 23 donations that will be used to provide gifts and food for hundreds of kids this Christmas. The remainder of the funds will be distributed early in 1987 to groups and organizations with on-going pro-

The Furr's foundation began its fund-raising effort in October with the sale of share bear - a 24" plush toy complete with jaunty red Christmas cap and scarf-and the campaign will continue through the holiday season. Five dollars from the sale of every share bear (Purchase price $12.99) goes directly into the share bear Christmas fund to be distributed in the cities where share bear is sold. In addition, the Furr's corporation, operators of Furr's supermarkets, Save 'n' Gain, and Bag & Save will donate an additional $5 to the fund for each share bear that is sold.

More than a hundred different grocery stores in two states support the Furr's Foundation effort by displaying and selling share bear. Store employees wear buttons that say "Ask me for the bear facts," and many employees have used their time away from work to tell the share bear story to local groups and organizations.

Roland Hasenoehrl, president of Furr's, Inc., said, "We have been extremely pleased with the progress of the share bear fund raising drive. Thousands of people have opened their hearts to the plight of underprivileged children by purchasing share bears. And now we are returning that generosity so that children in need can enjoy the magic of Christmas."

Hasenoehrl added, "For every child that received a share bear This Christmas, there is a less fortunate child who will benefit from the sale of that toy. This is a season of giving, and the gift of a share bear is a farreaching blessing indeed."

been better, but there really isn't much for us to belly-ache about," Garner says. "We're tickled to death with how it turned out."

Besides, says historian T.R. Fehrenbach, "what Texas is, what Texas stands for, has nothing to do with the economy. On the edge of an economic precipice, I think that this is a very, very valuable test of courage.

Garza's tourism agency projects a $2 billion increase over the record $14 billion tourists spent here in 1985, and preliminary figures indicate more than 40 million visitors vacationed in Texas in 1986.

That performance made the state the third most popular tourism destination in the country, and more than $900,000 in royalties is rolling in from the sale of Sesquicentennial souvenirs, Garner says. (Early projections, however, had put that figure as high as $20 million.)

"We hope that momentum will carry us through the summer, but it's then we start getting worried," Garza says. "It was a matter of pure fortune that our biggest year ever came about because the Sesquicentennial got us national and international exposure without us having to pay for it."

Virtually every Texas community got involved in the celebration, but some haven't finished their struggle to pretty up for the party.

In the Houston area, the $26 million Texas Museum of History and Technology and the $18 million beautification of miles of parkway along Buffalo Bayou both need to raise millions of dollars in a donation-poor economy, officials

"The recession hadn't started or we weren't aware of it when we started the (museum) project," said June Holly, spokeswoman for the Harris County Heritage Society. "We have not gone extensively into the campaign because of the economy."

El Paso Mayor Johnathan Rogers says his West Texas city was "probably more fortunate than most" because El Paso's sister city of Marion, Australia, also was celebrating its 150th anniversary this

"And we haven't finished celebrating," Rogers says.

Says Gov. Mark White, whose tenure is ending along with the 150th birthday fete: "I'm struck by the feeling that we have not so much celebrated the closing of an era but rather the beginning of a new and exciting chapter in our bold and colorful history."

Swift reports net earnings for 1986

Dallas-based Swift Independent Packing Company (SIPCO) announced this week that it earned $12.8 million on a before-tax basis on revenues of $2.8 billion during the fiscal year ended Oct. 25, 1986. This compares vary favorably with 1985 revenues of $2.9 billion and a pre-tax loss of $3.9 million. Net earnings for 1986 totalled $4.4 million compared with a loss of $550,000 in 1985.

For the fourth quarter of 1986. Swift Independent Packing Company had pre-tax earnings of $6.4 million on revenues of $748 million in comparison with pre-tax earnings of $9.3 million on revenues of $673 million in the same period of 1985. On an aftertax basis, SIPCO earned $2.0 million in 1986's fourth quarter compared with $8.3 million in 1985.

"The improved operating results for 1986 primarily reflect continued strong performance in our Pork Division," said Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Edwin L. Cox, Jr.. "All of our operations were profitable and contributed to our results in 1986. The improved pork earnings are directly related to the elimination of losses from closed pork plants and improved operating margins at our remaining plants. In addition, the earnings for the Beef Division showed a significant improvement in 1986 compared with the previous

She said she pulled him from beneath the car and rushed him to a hospital, where he died a short time later, his chest crushed by the weight of the car.

"I was looking at where the dogs had strewn trash over the yard so when I drove up the driveway, my windows rolled up ... maybe that's why I didn't see him."

Ten of the 21 victims on the DPS count died inside city limits. Of the 11 killed elsewhere, five died on state or U.S. highways, five died on ranch or farm-to-market roads, and one on an interstate highway, Wells said.

DPS officials had forecast that 23 people would be killed in its 54-hour counting period.

"We're certainly pleased that the death toll did not reach 23," DPS spokesman David Wells said. "One reason we didn't have as many fatalities as predicted is because there weren't as many four- and fivecar accidents."

Wells said 12 of the victims were killed in either one- or two-car accidents. Although final reports were not yet complete Friday, Wells said he expects alcohol played a role in some of the accidents.

"I don't think we'll see a decrease compared to alcohol-related deaths last year," Wells said.

Wright, Bentsen give Texas powerful duo in Congress

By ANDREW MANGAN Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) - The most powerful Texas duo to hit Congress since Lyndon B. Johnson and Sam Rayburn applied their collective muscle were swept into power in this fall's elections, capping a legislative year flavored with success for the

Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth moved to the forefront of Democratic politics with a unanimous nomination to succeed retiring House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

The 63-year-old veteran from Fort Worth follows in the footsteps of his mentor, Rayburn, and those of former Rep. John Nance Garner of Uvalde, becoming the third Texan to hold the powerful speakership in the past 55 years.

Victories in the November elections swung Demcrats back into control of the Senate and vaulted Lloyd Bentsen of Texas into the chairmanship of the powerful Finance Committee, which has jurisdiction over all trade and tax legislation in the Senate.

"The Finance Committee has the most wide-ranging and allencompassing jurisdiction of any committee in the Senate," said Bentsen, who is in his third six-year term. "It raises all the money and spends over half of it."

Moving into the House tax and trade counterpart, Ways and Means, was Rep. Mike Andrews of Houston, who joined Jake Pickle, D-Austin, and Bill Archer, R-Houston. With all four in place, Texas will be the strongest trade-oriented delegation in the upcoming 100th Congress.

The Bentsen-Wright team already has shown how it can work to help

One of the most impressive successes came in March, when the pair led the entire delegation in pressuring for an agreement with the U.S. Interior Department to split offshore

The $424 million Texas received from the new offshore formula was a welcome relief for the state's treasury, which faced a multibilliondollar deficit largely caused by the price of oil plummeting from $30 a barrel to as low as $10 a barrel this

Oil problems shoved Texas' economy in the throes of a recession for the first time since the 1950s, and each of the state's congressmen was scratching his head trying to figure out a way to provide some relief.

For months, a debate raged over how oil and gas interests would fare in the comprehensive tax overhaul bill, signed into law by President Reagan on Oct. 22.

The House version sought increased taxes on oil and gas amounting to $1 billion over the next five years, while the Senate bill, shepherded by Bentsen, kept the current system of taxation on those industries in place.

Republican House members Beau Boulter of Amarillo, Tom DeLay of Sugar Land, Larry Combest of Lubbock, Joe Barton of Ennis and Steve Bartlett of Dallas were part of a GOP group that met with President Reagan to urge him to veto any tax overhaul bill that increased taxes for oil and gas. In the end, a compromise was reached in which the major oil and gas companies shouldered the bulk of the tax increase, amounting to Mrs. Mathis said. "I did not even see $850 million, while independent producers received only $100 million more in taxes.

> Oil also won out in the renewal of thanks largely to Bentsen, who held out in a House-Senate conference pesticides," EPA said Friday.

committee until its members agreed to abandon an across-the-board increase in oil taxes to help pay for the $8.5 billion program.

Supporters of an oil import fee found ammunition in a Congressional Budget Office study that concluded such a fee would be the best way of lessening the country's dependence on foreign oil and raise money to trim deficits. However, that idea still didn't go anywhere.

Republican Phil Gramm, the state's junior senator, came out against an oil import fee or any other fees that could be construed as taxa-

His mind continued to be on reducing the federal deficit through the Gramm-Rudman budget-cutting initiative, which lost its teeth this summer when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled its provision that would trigger automatic budget cuts if Congress failed to meet stringent yearly reductions was unconstitutional.

The former Texas A&M economics professor said he would attempt next year to win approval of legislation that would restore some form of automatic spending cut mechanism of Hunt.

Gramm joined a majority of the Democratic and Republican Texans in Congress in denouncing the revised immigration law, which passed over their objections and was signed into law this fall by Reagan.

The law granted amnesty to illegal aliens who can prove they have been in the United States continuously since 1982 and imposes criminal and civil sanctions against employers who knowingly hire illegal workers.

Bentsen and Wright also worked with Pickle, Mickey Leland, D-Houston, Ron Coleman, D-El Paso, and Jack Fields, R-Houston, to pass a measure requiring the federal government to calculate its share of welfare and Medicaid matching payments due states every year, rather than every other year, which saved the Texas taxpayers $44 million in 1986.

The only freshman congressman joining the Texas ranks in Washington this year was Lamar Smith, R-San Angelo, who defeated Democrat Pete Snelson for the seat vacated by Republican Tom Loeffler

Older Texans can get tax deferral

Texans aged 65 or older can postpone paying delinquent property taxes on their homesteads by taking advantage of a tax option called over-65 deferral. The elderly homeowner simply signs a deferral affidavit at the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District office.

This special form of tax relief can also halt a lawsuit already filed to collect delinquent property taxes on an older Texan's homestead, accorthe Deaf Smith County Appraisal District. To stop a delinquent tax suit, Fox said, the over-65 homeowner files the deferral affidavit with the court in which the suit is pending.

Homeless couple weds in shelter where they met

DALLAS (AP) — A homeless couple recited Christmas wedding vows in front of 1,000 cheering spectators in the same shelter where they met.

Marvin Savad and Mary Roark first saw each other four weeks ago when they met at the Dallas Life Foundation, a shelter for the city's homeless.

"In a big city when you're all alone, you want someone to care about," said Savad, 49. "It's nice when you find them."

Savad, from Denver, and Ms. Roark, from Wyoming, said they came to Dallas to start a new life after falling on hard times in their respective hometowns.

"I wanted to live in a new place and build a new life," said Ms. Roark, 33. "A husband was the last thing I expected to find."

AUSTIN (AP) — In a year when the former governor became the governor-elect and the current governor was dispatched to has-been status, one fact of political life didn't turn topsy-turvy.

. It still cost big bucks to become Texas' chief executive.

Dallas businessman Andrew Briscoe, one of six Democrats to enter the primary, had thought otherwise when he brought a famous surname and his checkbook to the race.

Announcing his candidacy, the distant cousin of former Gov. Dolph Briscoe declared: "Money isn't everything in a campaign."

It isn't. But it helps.
While Briscoe got clobbered, Democratic Gov. Mark White and Republican former Gov. Bill

$23.5 million.

For Clements, who spent about $10.9 million ousting the Democrat who defeated him in 1982, revenge was sweet.

For White, who spent about $12.6 million on his first losing campaign, it may have marked the end of a public career that began in the 1960s as an assistant attorney general.

Many reasons were cited for the outcome, but most analysts said the state's record high unemployment rate, two major tax increases and dissatisfaction over the no-pass, no-play rule, teacher tests and other school reforms crippled White.

At year's end, while looking for a job, White declined to rule out another try for the Governor's Mansion

Almost immediately after the election, he appointed task forces to examine the state budget and seek ways of creating jobs.

The Nov. 4 elections saw a few other developments.

Republicans held onto their 10 U.S. House seats, including those of five congressmen who were elected with President Reagan in 1984. They also picked up one seat in the Texas House, for a total of 56, and gained some additional county offices.

GOP Chairman George Strake considered that list significant.

"When you see a gain of 70-plus seats in county courthouses, that is big," Strake said. "When you see, in an off-presidential year, that Republicans can add or hold our own in the (Texas) House of Representatives and the Congress, that's genuine."

Many years ago, I faced a decision-whether to pursue my journalism career in the community newspaper field or move on to the big city paper. I chose community journalism and I believe it's a choice

A friend once defined the difference between the two kinds of journalism: "Community journalism means writing about neighbors and their accomplishements and ideas and dreams. Big city journalism is a lot of writing about strangers and how they connect with other strangers."

I've found a lot of truth in that definition. Reporters on big metro papers are writing about strangers, so they don't worry about personal feelings. Some of them even have the attitude that you should "go for the jugular" in each interview.

People on smaller papers are not just bylines. we are people and generally not very intimidating. So, our readers call us and come by and sometimes ask for favors with their pet projects. Getting to know each other, we consider each other's feelings.

That doesn't mean that we forget about professionalism or that we bend our policies for friends. It means that community journalism has more heart, more soul than our big-city brothers. We're not as concerned as the big city papers or television stations about slanting a story so that it sells more papers or improves our rating.

We focus on what's happening at home, and we approach it with a positive attitude. We look first for the stories that build up the community, not those that tear it down. Naturally there is bad news and can't overlook it, but we don't dwell on it. Stories can be factual and not be true; we strive to report it both ways. As reporters, we have to retain a certain degree of skepticism, but we don't have to be cynical.

We try to remember that there are no routine stories. Every story we write is important to someone. It is a big deal for most people to get their names in the paper, and we shouldn't treat that lightly. Our readers know we are human beings who try and care, and they know that we make mistakes. We hope they know that we really try not to blunder but when we do, we admit it.

Sometimes we get discouraged and wonder if what we are doing relly counts for anything. Well, I believe it does count. It's important because it affects people directly. Our readers take us seriously because we are important to their lives.

It's a responsibility we don't take lightly.

Dad wouldn't talk about World War II

Dad wouldn't talk about World War II.

Growing up, I had to put it together from fragments, from reading between the lines. Like how it ticked him off when we kids played war games. Or how he kept his medals at the back of his dresser drawer, hidden but in easy reach. Or the way he showed me how to use tools, but not firearms.

It wasn't until I learned to read that I got anything approaching a real picture of what Dad and his lot had done; the St. Lo Breakthrough after the Battle at Normandy, the evacuation of Metz, assaulting the Siegfried Line, the winter march into the Battle of the Bulge, crossing the Rhine, taking Bavaria - Dad's army fought from Normandy to the Czech border.

Then they pointedly shucked off any glory, and immediately after the last shot was fired, they were agitating to go home and get on with it.

They had grown up during the hand-to-mouth years of the Depression, and so their priority was to win the security of an education. After that, the big push was to start a family.

More than 40 million of us were born during the 15 years following the war. Dad's generation - mothers and fathers - worked like ants and shelled out their earnings for long-range improvements in their children's lot in life.

Grousing all the while about the advantages they'd never had, the World War II vets built colleges into universities, turned clinics into hospitals, laid out highways and airports, erected cities on what had been rural villages and supported scientific research on a stunning scale.

They had only just arrived in the upper-middle class, and they were already showing all the generosity of Renaissance nobility. And they were citizens like we hadn't seen since the Founding Fathers, passing progressive laws at home, keeping the peace abroad.

There was even enough energy left over to give my generation a 20-year childhood, which took most of us virtually unencumbered through college.

It wasn't until I'd been to Vietnam that I truly understood what Dad's bunch had gone through, and why I couldn't get him to talk about it.

And after Vietnam, I also understood the impulse to just sit back and coast the rest of the way, and I began to appreciate how much stamina it must have taken to press on with their extraordinary vigor.

Some say there never has been a bunch like the World War II generation, that they're as good as America will ever get. They'll get no argument from

(In addition to his salary, of course, a Congressman gets free office space, free telephones, free mailing privileges, free airplane trips back home, half-price meals, and thousands of dollars to pay a staff to do his detail work.)

The commission justifies the Congressional raises, along with 100 percent raises for Cabinet members, Federal judges and other high Federal officials, by arguing that present governmental salaries do not attract the best brains in the country.

I don't understand this. Even at the present salary of $75,000 a year, or at lower salaries a few years ago of $40,000, never in the history of the country has a Congressional seat gone vacant because no candidate thought it paid enough. No pay raise for federal employees

The American people ought to keep their eye on this

A presidential commission has recommended pay raises of 46 percent for Cabinet secretaries and 55 percent for members of Congress and directors of agen-

The symposium will emphasize the issues in the education of Hispanics at all levels, from kindergarten through graduate and professional schools. Of special interest is the high public school dropout rate for Hispanics-estimated at 45 percentand possible methods for reducing that rate.

Participants from cities and school districts from throughout the state will be asked to review for others their planning, any programs that have succeeded and their suggestions for additional programs that could improve the retention rate for Hispanic youth.

The first statewide symposium on Hispanic Educational Issues was held in April 1985 at Texas Tech University. At that time public school and city officials from throughout the state discussed the educational implications of a growing Hispanic population.

Dean Richard E. Ishler of the Texas Tech University College of Education, chairs the coordinating committee for the conference.

"One concern, of course," he said, is the limited number of Hispanics who complete degrees in higher education. This limits the numbers of leaders who can develop out of the Hispanic culture in our society.

"Some social scientists and educators feel," he said, "that limited participation by Hispanics in higher education is related, at least in part, to problems at the elementary and secondary school level."

He pointed out that fewer than half the Hispanic population in the United States hold a high school diploma, and a recent survey of Hispanic high school students showed that less than 8 percent had any interest in further education. With only 55 percent remaining in high school until graduation, the pool of possible college students from this group is extremely limited, according to Ishler.

Working with him on the coordinating committee are education Professors Clyde E. Kelsey Jr. and Herman Garcia. In a paper written by the three educators, they pointed out that, while Hispanics live in every state, about 60 percent of the U.S. Hispanic population is concentrated in five Southwestern states. Approximately 21 percent of the Texas populatin is Hispanic.

Moreover, they reported, in Texas only about a third of the Hispanics who are 25 years old or older have completed high school and only about 6 percent have completed four or more years of college.

Ishler said that financial and academic problems which might hinder Hispanics who want to pursue their education apparently are being addressed. Issues not being addrssed are largely personal problems.

"These include such things as lack of motivation; a lack of a feeling of accountability for educational funds that do not come from family or personal sources; and a lack of understanding of the level of personal commitment required to achieve academic success," Ishler

"These are not easy problems for educators to resolve," he said, "but they will be addressed in the March symposium. Participants will be asked to help find useful avenues for helping Hispanics to recognize the real values in education and to alter their priorities to give education a considerably higher rating than it now has in their culture."

Bosworth professes guilt, innocence

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) - All-American linebacker Brian Bosworth, banned from playing for Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl for taking steroids, professes both guilt and innocence.

The colorful Sooner star said he is guilty of taking steroids early this year to aid in recovery from a football injury. But he said he is innocent of drug abuse, having taken the steroids by doctor's prescription.

Anabolic steroids are used by athletes to build muscle and bulk. They also are prescribed in cases of anemia, bone disease and in some cases to aid in recovery from muscle ailments.

Steroids, which can have harmful side effects, were banned by the NCAA last January in rules that set up drug tests for all starters and other selected players in college football bowl games.

Bosworth's test showed traces of steroids, and the NCAA banned him from playing for the third-ranked Sooners in the Jan. 1 game against Arkansas.

Bosworth said Friday that he took nandrolone, an oil-based steroid, from early January to mid-March for injuries to both shoulders and his thigh. His progress was monitored weekly and he was taken off the drug when his body was fit again, he said.

Bosworth finished fourth in the voting for the Heisman Trophy, was a finalist for the Lombardi Award and won the Butkus Award for the second year in a row. Jets, Chiefs feel they will contend EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) - The New York Jets and Kansas City Chiefs see no reason to defend themselves as NFL playoff participants. Both insist they belong, despite glaring weaknesses.

For the Jets, a five-game losing streak caused by a burgeoning injury list, sputtering offense and leaky defense, with a resultant loss of confidence in their abilities, is, they say, in the past.

For the Chiefs, in their first playoff game in 15 years, the league's lowest-ranked offense isn't so worrisome with defensive and special teams that force turnovers and score

On Sunday, the slumping Jets host the Chiefs, winner of their last three games in a late-season surge to the playoffs, in the AFC wild-card game. The winner moves on to face the Browns on Jan. 3 at Cleveland.

"It's tough to win in this league and there are only 10 teams in the playoffs," Jets Coach Joe Walton said. "We are one of them. There are 18 other teams who wish they were in our position.

'We should feel real good. They're not having any celebrations for us in a lot of other cities, but we're having our own private celebration."

The Jets were 10-1, holders of the best record in the league, when everything went sour. On Sunday, they'll go with Pat Ryan as their quarterback, ahead of Ken O'Brien, who fell from the NFL's top-rated passer after 11 weeks to No. 6 at season's end. Walton made the switch in hopes of sparking the dormant offense, which has scored a mere 61 points in the five losses after 303 through 11 games.

Taking charge at quarterback for Kansas City will be Todd Blackledge, who replaced injured Bill Kenney. Blackledge was the starter for seven weeks before his ineffective play forced Coach John Mackovic to start the veteran Kenney.

A Kansas City spokesman said Friday Blackledge would likely start, but Kenney would test his injured throwing hand before Sunday's

Rams hope to rebound Sunday

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Los Angeles Rams must battle their immediate and distant past, as well as the Washington Redskins, in the NFC wild-card game.

The Rams have lost two straight and four of their last seven. Coach John Robinson admitted Los Angeles was "lousy" last week in a 24-14 loss to San Francisco, but he's not worried about carrying reverse momentum into RFK Stadium on Sunday.

"It's just as deadly waltzing into the playoffs," Robinson reasoned. "The way I see it, the 10 teams in the playoffs are all 0-0."

Rams quarterback Jim Everett said against San Francisco, he felt like the rookie he is for the first time in his brief NFL career. But he added, "It wasn't as disastrous as the media made it out to be."

Robinson dismissed as "meaningless" the fact that Los Angeles hasn't beaten Washington since 1974 and has lost its last three games to the Redskins by a combined 123-34 total, including 51-7 in the 1983 wildcard game.

The outcome of Sunday's game could well hinge upon the performance of running back Eric Dickerson, who also has a less-than- the ball. impressive history of success against Washington.

The Rams are 10-6 overall this season but 9-2 this season in Dickerson's 11 100-yard games.

"He's the best running back in the NFL," Washington Coach Joe Gibbs said.

Robinson says his team has become more balanced since Everett took over at quarterback late in the season. But the coach said he intends to "go back to the basics" this week, meaning Los Angeles will likely give the ball to Dickerson until the Redskins prove they can stop him.

Although Dickerson rambled for 1,821 yards this season, Washington has had success bottling up the All-Pro runner in the past. The last two times the teams met, in 1983, Dickerson got 37 yards in a regular-season matchup and 16 yards in the 51-7

On offense, the Redskins, who bring a 12-4 record into the 4 p.m. EST contest, have won 30 straight games when a rusher has exceeded 100 yards, including nine in which George Rogers has reached that plateau

Robinson said it is essential that the Rams control Rogers, who gained 1,203 yards this season despite sharing time with Kelvin Bryant. If Rogers is stymied, that would make it that much tougher for Redskins quarterback Jay Schroeder to throw

Top franchises miss playoffs

By HAL BOCK AP Sports Writer

There are some things in pro football that are viewed as givens, as automatic as an extra point - unless it. One of them is the postseason appearance of certain playoff peren-

This year, though, the Pete Rozelle Invitational will have to get along without the Miami Dolphins, Dallas Cowboys, Pittsburgh Steelers and Los Angeles Raiders, a most unusual circumstance. It marks the first time in two decades that none those franchises, winners of 11 Super Bowls, including 10 in a row at one stretch. have been around for postseason ac-

The streak started in 1966, the year of the NFL-AFL merger, when the Cowboys made it for the first time. those teams were included in the postseason party.

In three cases, the breakdown began early. The Raiders opened at 0-3, the Dolphins at 1-4, the Steelers Max Zendejas happens to be kicking at 1-6. The Cowboys started strong at 6-2, then fell apart in the second half, finishing 7-9, their first sub-.500 season since 1964. The symptoms were similiar. Injuries. Inconsistency. Age. Those are burdens even the best teams cannot overcome.

Consider that Miami lost linebacker Hugh Green for the season in the third game and that entering the final game, he still was tied for the team lead in sacks with four. That tells you what kind of defensive pressure the Dolphins managed after he got hurt.

Miami's offense has depended almost entirely on quarterback Dan Marino. When he had bad days, like Every year after that, at least two of four-interception games against Atlanta and San Francisco, both at home, the Dolphins lost.

Despite all the problems, Miami came this close to the playoffs. Had the instant replay confirmed a controversial near-fumble by the Jets on the overtime kickoff in a 51-45 loss, the Dolphins might have won that game. And had they won that game, they would have gone into the final game with a shot at their division ti-

Can Miami turn it around? "We think we know how to do it," Coach Don Shula said. "But we've got to get the people and they have to work and get the job done.'

The Raiders actually had a pretty good year - if you eliminate the beginning, when they dropped three straight, and the end, when they lost four in a row.

Los Angeles also discovered that, at age 39, Jim Plunkett could not rescue Marc Wilson at quarterback forever. And in a league in which careers average 41/2 years, an offensive line that includes 13-year veteran Henry Lawrence and 10-year man Mickey Marvin may finally require some replacement parts.

Dallas' defense struggled, too, and injuries limited the production of the Heisman Trophy running back combination of Herschel Walker and Tony Dorsett. When quarterback Danny White went down for the year with a broken wrist, backup Steve Pelleur lost seven of eight games and the last five in a row.

"I hope this season won't have a lasting effect on him," Coach Tom Landry said of Pelleur. "I hope his confidence isn't gone.'

Perhaps none of the unfortunate four suffered more than Pittsburgh, eliminated earlier than any year since 1969, when the team was 1-13. The Steelers lost six games by six points or less, including a pair in overtime to division champions Cleveland and Chicago.

"Close is terrible," Coach Chuck Noll said. "I hate it. The thing you have to live with is the reality of where you are.'

The sad reality for this team is that some stores in Pittsburgh reported fewer sales of Steeler souvenirs than they did of NHL Penguin merchan-

Gary Lucier of USDA's Economic Research Service says the decline in world oil prices has been a major factor in a sharp reduction of farm production costs in the United States. But if OPE is successful in curbing production and boosting prices, the effect could bring a revision in 1987 farm income expectations.

"It could go lower, definitely," Lucier said in an interview. "But it depends on how much prices go up and how quickly.'

Lucier said that if oil price increases are delayed or minimal until mid-year, most 1987 crops will have been planted. But even then, he said, higher oil prices would be felt later on, in 1988 for sure. As it stands now, without an OPEC price increase, the figures for 1987 point to a further decline in farm production expenses. This year, those costs are down around $1.5 billion from 1985.

'The lower energy prices will likely have secondary impacts on farm expenses into 1987 as fertilizer prices fall and the overall inflation rate in the economy is slowed," Lucier said in a recent outlook report. "Fertilizer prices fell 8 percent in 1986 and are forecast to fall a similar amount

Net farm income this year is expected to be around $28 billion, down from $30.5 billion in 1985, Lucier said. The forecast for 1987, without an OPEC oil price increase, is about $32

Jack McEowen, agribusiness specialist at Michigan State University, said earlier this month that energy costs will continue to bear heavily on the financial returns of farmers in the coming year.

"If reason prevails in the U.S. and does not or cannot within OPEC, continued favorable price levels of fuels can be expected to the coming crop season and subsequent seasons," McEowen said. "This will also exert downward cost-price pressures on other inputs such as transportation, (crop) drying, and nitrogen products for both feed and fertilizers.'

McEowen, added: "Only a unified OPEC could substantially raise fuel prices during the next crop year."

University researchers are already seeking to introduce disease resistance into lines of animals, and one day breeders may be able to "make" cattle with physiological advantages in feed conversion, size, or carcass characteristics.

Massey was among speakers at a special "breadkout session" that also included a presentation by Claude D. Dollins on balancing professional and family life.

Dollins, a business and management consultant from Lubbock, said changes in American society and lifestyle are placing new stresses on individuals taht can be damaging if not recognized and dealt with.

interest in small farms and their role According to AFT, the study showed that the key to understanding the The private, non-profit group said role of small family farms lies not in how much they produce, but in what they consume and how much land toried in the 1982 census of they hold.

"For instance, in 1982, small farmers owned over half the nation's tractors," the AFT report said. "The value of all their farm equipment was four times as great, per dollar of agricultural sales, as that of larger producers."

What that means, it said, is that small farms appear to enable equipment manufacturers to lower prices for all farmers.

"The effect is similar to what you see in the auto industry, said AFT study director Edward Thompson. "If GM or Ford only made a few big cars, they'd be very expensive."

Land ownership is another area in which the importance of small farms stands out, the report said. Nationally, small farmers hold roughly a third of the farmland, about triple their share of actual food production.

"This has tremendous implications, not only for the availability of agricultural resources and open space, but also for the property tax system," Thompson said. "If small farms were swallowed up or developed, I think we'd see more of the local tax burden shifting toward homeowners, because of a reduced base due to fewer farmsteads and greater public service costs."

One cautionary note raised by the study showed that small farmers "tend to use fewer soil conservation practices" than larger farmers, a factor the AFT said it plans to look at

Baby boomers to cause rise in costs next century

CHICAGO (AP) - American society has two generations to get ready for a dramatic rise in healhcare needs that will accompany the twilight years of the millions of Americans born in the baby boom era, a financial analyst says.

"Most people think we're going to be facing tremendous pressure (to spend more on health care) in the next couple of years," says Jeff C. Goldsmith, a senior adviser with Ernst & Whinney accountants in "My point is we're going to face the real pressure when the baby boom generation becomes elderly."

By the year 2000, U.S. society will be about 50 years into "digesting" the 78 million people born during the years after World War II, Goldsmith wrote in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

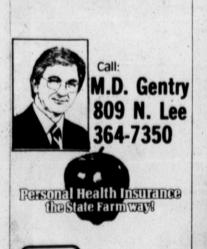

Long-term and acute-care medical needs will spiral as this generation becomes "caught up in the coils of degenerative illness," he wrote. "The percentage of the U.S. population older than 65 years will climb moderately from 11.3 percent to 13.1 percent between 1980 and 2000, but by 2030 will exceed 21 percent,"

Goldsmith said. Despite this growth, however, the number of people hospitalized will fall sharply, he predicted.

He also said competition among physicians will become keener and government and private insurers will try harder to control costs. But rationing is not inevitable nor school attendance for the year,

The increase in membership continues a trend of slowed growth that began three decades ago, say officials at the Nashville headquarters of the Southern Baptist Convention.

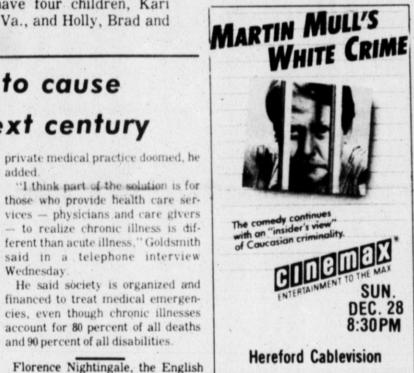

Baptisms this year were estimated at 364,400, compared to 351,000 in 1985. Officials attribute the increase to a nationwide series of revivals last spring called "Good News America God Loves You," which was sponsored by 27,000 churches.

"I felt Good News America kept the priority of evangelism visible in Southern Baptist churches;" said Bobby Sunderland, of the Home Mission Board in Atlanta. "And it created pride among Southern Baptists, a healthy pride in a high-class project.'

Church officials are dismayed, however, in the decline in Sunday school attendance

Robots

After nearly 200 years of counting people, the U.S. Census Bureau in 984 measured production of robots for the first time. Some 75 companies shipped 5.535 complete robots in 1984, valued at $306.7 million. Robot accessories, subassemblies and components added another $51 million. The automobile industry is the chief customer for industrial robots

'That's disappointing to me," said Harold Bennett, director of the SBC Executive Committee here. "I see Sunday school as the major outreach arm of the church.'

Sunday school enrollment was 7.95 million this year, a drop of one-tenth of a percent, or 7,900 people from the year before.

Bennett said the decline may be tied to changing worship habits.

"It used to be that people came into the church through Sunday school," Bennett said. "They'd be invited to Sunday school by people of their age group who were in a Sunday school class. But now people seem more attracted to the 11 a.m.

Many observers have blamed the recent sluggish baptism and Sunday school figures on the denomination's continuing theological-political controversy between conservatives and moderates. Critics say the decadelong controversy drains pastors of their energy and disillusions prospective members.

However, Bennett said the real problem is society's hectic pace hospitalization needs 364-1070 Martha Jones

"It's a basic problem churches face," Bennett said. "People are busy doing things, and they're not visiting others and inviting them into church as they once did.'

The statistical projections, compiled by the Baptist Sunday School Board, are based on information submitted annually by SBC churches. About 29,300 have returned the letter

According to the figures, Southern Baptists spent $635.7 million in home and foreign missions, an increase of 4.1 percent over 1985.

POLLY'S POINTERS

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — How can I soften material that is obviously composed of polyester and cotton to make the fabric more absorbent? I wanted to use it for towels, and right now, it just pushes moisture around. - J.P.

DEAR J.P. — Unfortunately, polyester just isn't absorbent. The more polyester in a polyester-cotton blend, the less absorbent it will be. That's why polyester clothing tends to be somewhat warm and clammy to wear (moisture isn't absorbed by the fabric and stays on your skin) while cotton is generally considered to be cool and comfortable. Cotton-polyester blends with higher percentages of cotton tend to be more absorbent.

The only thing I can suggest is to wash the fabric in plain soap flakes with a little vinegar added to the rinse water. This will at least maximize whatever absorbent properties the fabric does have. Don't ever rinse it with fabric softener, which will decrease the absorbency of even usually thirsty cottons.

I'm sorry I can't give you a magic formula to make this fabric more absorbent, but that's just the nature of the synthetic fiber. - POLLY

Blevins, Berryman vows exchanged

During an early afternoon the groom's brothers, Mark Berceremony Saturday at First Christian Church, Carol Sue Blevins and Randall Berryman were united in marriage. The wedding was officated by Bill Devers, community pastor and director of Operation Good Shepherd.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Blevins of 225 Elm and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Berryman of Route 5.

The sanctuary of the church was decorated with traditional holiday greenery. Two candelabra flanked the altar and were accented with white and gold floral garland and large plaid bows.

Kathy Matthews was maid of honor and Richard Berryman, father of the groom, was best man.

Bridesmaids included Darla Newton, Monica Devers and Brenda Bell. Serving as groomsmen were Guests were escorted by the bride's twin brother, Darrel Blevins, and Willie Jaggers, Frank Hutson and Blane Province.

The groom's brother, Samuel Berryman, lit candles.

The bride's sister, Sheri Adams, sang "What a Difference You've Made In My Life" and Kim Donnelly of Levelland vocalized "The Wedding Song". They were accompanied by Elva Devers.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal wedding gown of bridal satin designed with a sweetheart neckline and off-theshoulder puffed sleeves. The fitted bodice was accented by a diagonal arrangement of silk roses on the front of the dress and tiny covered

The bride's cake was served by Sheri Adams and the groom's cake by Kelly Berryman. Punch was ladl-

Other members of the houseparty included Karen Curtis, Linda Minchew, Carolyn Evers and Shannon

Homeless declare

'We don't really know who we are'

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AP) -Red Wheater doesn't know where he will sleep tonight. But to him it doesn't really matter.

"I never stay in the same place two nights in a row," he explained.

One night he could sleep in a vacant building, another in a park. When the temperatures recently dipped into the 30s, he says he "acquired a bedroll." Some of his less fortunate friends slept in the large garbage bins, buried under the rubbish to keep warm.

Wheater, 40, calls himself a 'tramp." He says he had been on the road for 12 years, riding the trains from coast to coast, staying where he wants and taking off on whim.

He claims he has a "free life."

"If I decide to take off this afternoon, I can go," the former Houston mechanic boasted. "There is nothing to hold me back.'

Despite his bravado, Wheater also is introspective and articulate. He apparently understands his situation all too well.

My life ain't worth a damn," he said. "We road people really don't know who we are.

Wheater is not alone in his plight. He is one of about 100 homeless in Brownsville at any given time, according to statistics compiled by Good Neighbor Settlement House Director Evelon Dale

Most of the area's homeless are single males. About 25 percent of Brownsville's homeless are locals, while the remainder are people who are just passing through, she says.

"I see people who are badly broken, emotionally and economically," she said. "These people have lost their drive in a life, after so many defeats and psychological pro-

tronic parking meter systems are beginning to replace traditional coinswallowing mechanical units, reports American Metal Market.

The weekly industry journal says Ann Arbor is widely regarded as the first American locality to install electronic-based, coin-operated meters. The units operate on a batterypowered microcomputer that has a 100-hour range. The electronic meters also have a discriminating sensor ability to recognize slugs.

The publication also notes that electronic systems, utilizing either coins or credit cards, have been used in Europe for a decade.

Such a system would be similar to the one in use by commuters on the Washington, D.C., subway system.

Brownsville is expected to soon reach its peak. As the weather gets colder farther north, more of the nation's homeless migrate to milder climates like South Texas, Ms. Dale explains.

But there is no overnight shelter for these people in the Valley. The closest shelters are in Corpus Christi and San Antonio.

The Helping Hand Rescue Mission in Harlingen used to house 15 to 20 people a night, its director Jerry Smith says.

"Apathy is leaving people in the streets. The need still is here and is greater than ever," Smith said.

The mission had funding problems with only five of Harlingen's 70 churches supporting it - and conflicts over providing shelter for illegal aliens, Smith explains.

The Salvation Army would like to provide a shelter, but it doesn't have the money. The group estimates it would cost $1 million to open a shelter and $150,000 a year to operate it, says Lt. Terence Thomas, in charge of the Harlingen branch of the organization.

Ms. Dale says she wants a shelter in Brownsville. City Commissioner Susan Austin says the city can't afford it.

When the bitter Northers pass through, the settlement house is able to put people up for a night or two in a hotel, although that funding also is limited, Ms. Dale notes.

Despite the lack of shelter, the homeless here are able to obtain a shower, clothing and one hot meal a day from the settlement house. In addition, some area churches regularly donate food and clothing.

The settlement house serves about 60 lunches a day, charging 25 cents a meal. Most people collect cans or do odd jobs to pay for the meal. If they can't, the settlement house will let them work to pay for their food, Ms.

Wheater is one of the homeless who

And the number of homeless in regularly eats at the shelter. He wolfs down his food, as though it is his only meal of the day. But he won't admit it.

> "On the road you might go for three days with no meal, or you might get five meals in one day," he

As he finishes eating, Wheater pulls tobacco from his pocket and begins to roll a cigarette. Just as he takes his first puff, a friend, Fred, walks in with news of some work.

"Watch those four letter words in front of me," Wheater responds jok-

Fred adds that he thinks he knows how they can get a "jug."

Wheater's eyes sparkle and his attitude changes.

'Look here," he said, as he begins to leave the table. "Me and my partner are looking for some money to come up with a jug."

To Wheater, a jug means vodka. He openly admits that one of his main goals daily is finding a "jug" of vodka.

"I'm almost dead from the neck down. And I'm already dead from the neck up," he said of his drinking habit

Ms. Dale explains that not all homeless have drinking problems like Wheater's. Some have little education and have lost the only work they were able to find.

A homeless person doesn't have the proper clothes for a job interview, a phone to receive a follow-up call, or the regular transportation needed to maintain a job, she adds.

Wheater claims that the life of a "tramp" isn't that bad and he doubts he ever will have a stable job or home again.

"Life on the road has good points and bad points. I wouldn't take a thousand dollars for what I have seen, but I wouldn't give a nickel to

Shutters reduce heat cost

A do-it-yourself insulating shutter 14 to 34 inch less than the dimensions can be a low-cost method for reducing heat lost through windows, advises a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service housing specialist

For about 40-50 cents a square foot, you can use foil-faced insulatoin board, foam weather-strip and duct tape to make a pop-in shutter that reduces heat loss dramatically," explains Dr. Susan Quiring.

The shutter pressure-fits inside the window casing or trim and is typically installed at night and taken down in the morning.

The specialist suggests using 34-inch thick insulation board which can be purchased at most lumber yards. Use a razor blade and metal straightedge to cut the board about

In 1985 and 1986, sales of home computers fell short of earlier expectations. The industry was faced with oversupply of product and overcrowding of companies in the market. Foreign competition is also seen as a major factor in the U.S. computer in-

Wrap a continuous roll of 34-inch wide by 1/2-inch thick sticky-back foam weatherstrip tape around the edge of the board. Then cover the weatherstripped edge with duct tape to hold it in place and make a durable edge. This will provide a good compression seal when the board is pressed into the opening.

To improve the appearance of the insulating shutter, the specialist suggests covering it with fabric

Awards highlight state's arts scene

DALLAS (AP) - Texas film and literature sparkled with honors in 1986, but the arts didn't escape the budgetary shadow hanging over the rest of the state.

It was a year in which two Texasproduced movies won Oscars, author Larry McMurtry won the Pulitzer Prize for fiction, and literature and film representatives used the Sesquicentennial as an excuse to take a closer look at the state's state of the arts.

It also was a year in which the collapse of oil prices prompted a 15 percent budget cut for the Texas Film Commission and in which the Texas Commission on the Arts' budget dropped because the sale of Sesquicentennial souvenirs didn't live up to projections.

Downtown Houston was turned into a stage as 1.3 million people watched a multimedia show devised by Jean-Michel Jarre. The April 5 lights, fireworks and music concert celebrated the state's Sesouicentennial and Houston's certennial and featured laser lights and slides screened on the city's mostly chrome-and-glass skyline.

Texas also was the site for 28 major projects this year, compared to 27° movie and television projects in 1985, film commissioner director Dana

Although the state has posted an average of 28.5 major projects for the past four years, tight funding has cramped the commission's style, relegating Texas to the role of service center, rather than allowing an aggressive marketing operation, Shelton said.

This year's 15 percent budget cut dropped the spending plan to $229,000, and Shelton said he doesn't know what will happen when the

NEW YORK (AP) - Despite a trade

Legislature meets again in January, although agency officials will appeal for money

The need to maintain funding was pointed out in September when representatives of film and literature met for the Governor's Sesquicentennial Conference on the Literary Arts at North Texas State University in Denton.

Conference speaker Don Graham, author of "Cowboys and Cadillacs: How Hollywood looks at Texas," said the state cannot continue to rely on the Texas mystique to bring in Texas' claim to being the "third coast" of moviemaking has been eclipsed by hot competition from Illinois and Florida, Graham said.

"It's probably time to stop bragging and start using our brains," he

Shelton agreed that lack of funds hampered the commission's ability to scout for new business in 1986, saying, "There are states whose advertising budgets for their film commissions exceed our annual budget."

Movies in Texas this year had gross production budgets totaling $102.1 million, about half of which went to the Texas economy, he said.

Films made in the state included the CBS' television movie "Justice Delayed: The Lenell Geter Story" and a futuristic thriller called "Robocop," both in Dallas, "Extreme Prejudice," in El Paso, and "Nadine," in Austin and San An-

"I think we could certainly do more aggressive marketing than we are able to do now," Shelton said. "We are very much in a 'Let the business come to us mode.""

The Texas film industry got a boost at the Academy Awards in March when two Texas-produced films won William Hurt won the best actor award for his performance in "Kiss of the Spider Woman" and Geraldine Page won best actress for 'The Trip to Bountiful," which was filmed in Irving and Waxahachie.

Both movies were produced by FilmDallas Investment Fund and Sam Grogg, managing general partner of the group, greeted the awards as a sign that Texas is a mainstream player in the film community.

Texas' arts were in the spotlight again in April when McMurtry won the 1986 Pulitzer Price for fiction for his book, "Lonesome Dove," a novel about a 19th-century cattle drive.

McMurtry talked about his work at the literary arts conference in Denton, which also included appearances by playwrightscreenwriter Horton Foote and actor Robert Duvall in a series of lectures and discussions about the myths and realities of the Texas mystique.

McMurtry said Texas writers are heirs to the images forged by the pioneers' struggle to tame the land and he credited much of his success to the setting for his novels.

"The necessities of the kind of struggle that it took to settle this place and civilize it produced strong. forceful, vivid, real people," McMur-

U.S. doctors get royal treatment

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

This past August, Britain's Prince Andrew married Sarah Ferguson. For society-watchers, the ceremony had the usual jubilation and fascination of any royal wedding, the event was dutifully detailed in the world's press.

Five years ago, when Prince Charles wedded Lady Diana Spencer, the ceremony was solemn and dignified, as befitted the apparent heir to the monarchy. Judging from news reports, the most recent celebration was "a down-home royal bash," full of jollity and conviviality.

The English, who seem to have an insatiable appetite for this type of pageantry, turned out in record crowds to wish the new couple well. A sunny day, somewhat unusual in summertime Britain, helped. So did the queen. She proclaimed the young newlyweds the Duke and Duchess of York, not a bad wedding present for a young woman who had, moments before, been simply Miss Ferguson - "Fergie," as the press reiterated again and again. I guess Prince Andrew was permitted to marry this uncommon commoner because his older brother, Charles, probably will be the next king and, with Princess Di becoming 'a global symbol of glamour," the royal family could afford to let its hair down a bit.

I am most intrigued by the queen's wedding present of a title for Fergie. Like other monarchies, England is a two-class society - despite the socialists. You are either born to royal blood or you're not. It's true that you can earn a title, but I believe that is largely viewed as an honorarium. You are really royal (or common) depending on your ancestors' choice partners. Nonetheless, it must be comforting to the average Briton to know that you can go to bed a Miss and wake up being a duchess. This is the theme of fairytales. And, I suspect, many a winsome common girl dreams of it.

On further reflection, I've concluded that this Cinderella fantasy doesn't happen just on rare occasions and in English weddings. It's not a fantasy at all; it's real. Take American medicine, for instance. The M.D. degree certainly elevates the commoner to an elite and privileged position. An insecure, woebegone, immature medical student goes to bed the night before graduation. The next day, after a few speeches delivered by sagacious medical priests to cheery, proud, beaming parents, the student is awarded a degree. Within the space of a few seconds, the scruffy post-adolescent becomes a trusted healer, a priest in his own right. He or she suddenly has more power and respect than a duke or dutchess.

The new doctor doesn't undergo an immediate physical transformation not yet, that will come later. But as that degree is delivered into his hand, he feels ... well, different ... immensely satisfied and sure of himself. Although he is no more masterful, regal and bright, he becomes stellar. The drab starling changes into a stunning

This is our own brand of homegrown royalty and most doctors are all for it. Unlike the Duke and Duchess of York's once-in-a-lifetime titling, the M.D. ritual goes on annually, year after year, for thousands of commoners, many of whom actually take seriously the whole issue of medical royalty. It's heady stuff. You can get a title and can, by decree, look down your nose at everybody But there is a hitch. In order to be royal, you have to act royal. Most young doctors haven't had much experience with this sort of thing. Perhaps this is what the "practice" part of medical practice refers to. In any case, we try like crazy to live up to this terrific image. And, boy, what a truckload of headaches. No wonder the unusual doctor requires many vears of experience before he can accept the fact that he is, after all, common. Rather than being a means to attain instant status, the M.D. degree is really just a permission, a testimonial that the holder has some special skills which he or she is expected to put to good use for the benefit of society.

A duchess can learn and grow into her privileged role, but a good doctor may spend his life trying to grow out of it. Some do, some don't. That's the way with fairy stories.

I have to go now, but, as I leave, I'd like to see you genuflect. No, you don't have to kiss my ring. Just a curtsy

Most drugs arriving in the United States enter through Florida or are brought across the Mexican border. Florida's indented coastline exceeds 8,000 miles; the U.S.-Mexican border bisects a vast, empty desert. This means customs officials are overmatched in their efforts to defend the U.S. borders.

days ago my sister-in-law called to say she had canceled her appointment for a mammogram because she read in Ann Landers' column that with the new equipment, the procedure was very painful. I told her to go back and read that column again. She did and called to say she hadn't read it properly - that while some women had said the mammogram was excruciating, otheres claimed it wasn't the least bit uncomfortable.

You concluded by telling the readers that the discomfort level depends on the expertise of the technician, also the time of the month. You urged all womento listen to their doctors. Some women should have a mammogram every year, others every second year, depending on age and family history.

Now for the rest of the story: This same sister-in-law had the mammogram and reported almost no pain, just a little pressure. Three days later her doctor called to inform her that the mammogram showed a very small mass that never would have been picked up with the old equipment. Within a week she had a lumpectomy (NO MASTECTOMY) and the prognosis is excellent. I hope you will print my letter so your readers who were frightened of the pain and canceled their appointments will get rescheduled. It could save their lives.-BOSTON

DEAR BOSTON: Here's your letter and an added word from me: Get with it, ladies. Don't you know that every individual has his or her own threshold of pain? Some people tell the dentist, "No novocaine," for 15 minutes of drilling. Others nearly pass out when they have their teeth cleaned.

A mammogram with the latest equipment should produce only momentary discomfort in the most sensitive women if done a few days after the menstrual period by a competent technician. If she goes three

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several days BEFORE her period and the technician is a clunker, I can make no promises.

Even under the worst of conditions, it is far better to have the mammogram than to risk breast cancer, which is the greatest killer of women under age 55. If you don't believe me, talk to a woman who has had a mastectomy. She will set you straight.

This year breast cancer will be discovered in 120,000 women, and it will claim 40,000 lives. Over 50 percent of breast cancers are discovered only after they have spread to other parts of the body. The survival rate under such conditions is 10 percent. The chance of survival when the cancer is detected early is 85 percent.

With these odds it is sheer lunacy not to be checked periodicall. Any woman over 50 who hasn't been screened in two years should get on the phone and make an appointment NOW. I know it takes time and you are busy, but I can think of nothing that is more important than this.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We hear a lot about Alzheimer's disease these days. So many people are afraid they have it when they can't find their keys or forget the name of their favorite high school teacher who died 20 years ago.

I was unable to remember whether I had mailed a letter and was truly depressed when it showed up in the fridge. Ten minutes later I read something that made me laugh. Will you please share it with your readers:

Prescription for a carefree old age; If you can't recall it - forget it.-H.R.G., DURHAM, N.C.

As the new year rolls around it has again become time for the Hereford Young Farmers Stock Show.

As many of you know, the Deaf Smith County 4-H Parent-Leaders Association make the most of the stock show through its fund raising conceession stand project. What you may not know is exactly where the money goes. Through this past year the 4-H Parent-Leader Association Budget exceeded $4,400. These funds allowed over 200 youth to participate over 700 times in 23 different Parent-Leader sponsored activities. Some of those activities included shooting sports, camps, food, fashion and bake shows, swimming party, awards at the Banquet, livestock judging contest, County and State Round-Ups, 4-H Congress, and 4-H Bucket Calf program. Why is this important to know? So each parent of 4-Hers will realize that the stock show concession stand is a project that benefits any and all 4-H youth. not only stock show participants. So when you are asked by the 4-H organizational leaders to assist this year with the fund raising project, you will know that your 4-H'er can and will benefit through this project.

The County 4-H Christmas party was held on Dec. 15 in the Ballroom of the Community Center. The party was hosted by the county 4-H Council with drinks provided by the Parent-Leaders Association. Seventy-eight 4-H'ers and parents attended the party and all enjoyed the refreshments. and gift exchange. Chris Grotegut and Jim Bret Campbell served a Cochairman for the event.

Pioneers 4-H Club I and II had a Christmas party at the Community Center on Tuesday. Approximately 59 4-H'ers and guests enjoyed Christmas games and refreshments. The 4-H collected items for Christmas basket donations as part of a community service project.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socio-economic levels, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

Don't prescribe own diet

self-diagnosed medical problems usually don't work, are often costly and can be harmful.

If you have a medical problem that requires a special diet, such as hypertension, diabetes or heart disease, the only proper way to get that diet is from a physician, says nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten.

"Because special diets are used to treat or manage medical problems, they should be prescribed by a doctor and be considered a part of your medical treatment," advises the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service specialist.

Borrowing or sharing special diet plans is not recommended, she says, even if a family member or friend has the same medical problem.

The nutritionist notes that some people adopt special diets for selfdiagnosed problems. They select their menus and diet plans based on magazine articles, advertisements or recommendations from friends. These self-prescribed diets can Do-it-yourself special diets to treat make any medical condition, such as diabetes or high blood pressure, worse, she cautions.

Once a doctor prescribes a diet, or refers a patient to a registered dietitian for a particular diet, the diet plan becomes just as important as prescribed medicine, Sweeten says.

"Follow the prescribed diet, and if there is something you don't understand, ask your doctor, before making any changed," states the nutritionist.
