Demos attack move to break treaty limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Democrats are ridiculing the Reagan administration's move beyond the weapons ceiling in the SALT II nuclear arms treaty, with some lawmakers insisting the action helps the Soviet Union.

The Democrats, who will control Congress next year, objected Friday after the United States violated the unratified treaty when an Air Force B-52 bomber, capable of carrying atomic-tipped cruise missiles, became operational.

"I believe the president's decision gives the Soviet Union a military advantage, with its near-term missile production capabilities, as well as a substantial world propaganda advantage," said Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., who will chair the Senate Armed Services Committee next year.

"It will cause our allies abroad considerable political discomfort and it will now be much harder to reach a bipartisan consensus on strategic weapons and arms control here at home," said Nunn.

The treaty forbids the United States from having more than 130 bombers equipped to carry cruise missiles unless it eliminates other nuclear weapons from its arsenal.

When an eight-engine B-52, modified to carry up to a dozen of the low-flying cruise missiles, landed at Carswell Air Force Base in Fort Worth, Texas, on Friday, it became the 131st U.S. bomber so equipped.

Local Roundup

Drug exhibit here Monday

A large drug abuse exhibit on tour from the Dangerous Drug and Narcotics Unit from Washington, D.C., will be in Hereford Monday under sponsorship of the Elks Club and local businesses.

Entitled "From the Beginning to the End—Is It Worth It?", the exhibit is scheduled for 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on the Community Center parking lot.

The exhibit, which took more than two years to assemble at a cost of more than $75,000, contains over 1,000 pieces of paraphernalia used in drug abuse.

Proceeds from the $1 admission fees will be used for Elks youth programs. The Elks have already distributed tickets for the exhibit to all 4th, 5th and 6th graders in Hereford. Merchants in the community purchased the tickets.

For more information, contact James Buxton, youth activities chairman for the Elks Lodge.

Local doctors receive vaccine serum to head off Taiwan flu

By DEBE GRAVES
Feature Writer

In an effort to head off an expected epidemic of "Taiwan flu," local physicians began receiving vaccine serum this week.

Generally flu shots are given in the months of September and October, well ahead of the flu season, to allow time for immunity to develop. But, this year after production of the vaccine was begun a new strain of influenza appeared in Samoa and Taiwan. It is for this virulent strain that the new injection has been made.

Influenza is a contagious respiratory illness caused by three viruses, A, B and C. It is type A which is able to change itself every year. When the virus changes its an-tigenic structure, then the body's host defenses do not recognize the virus and manufacture new antibodies to the new virus," explains Dr. Duffy McBrayer of the Hereford Family Clinic.

Since influenza is a winter disease, virologists have success in predicting the changes of the type A virus by studying the southern hemisphere during our summer. In this way new vaccines can be manufactured to allow for alterations of the virus since its appearance the previous winter.

There is no way to predict if this strain will be dominant in North America," says McBrayer referring to the Taiwan virus." The only prudent thing to do was make another one-virus vaccine to supplement the vaccine already out."

Most local physicians agree with McBrayer and have been receiving serum this week. But, Dr. Tim Revell is leery of the new vaccine. "I am not ordering the new vaccine because I don't feel it has been adequately tested. The government thinks it is okay but I am afraid of a repeat of the late 70's when Ford pushed through a vaccine and people taking the shot got sicker from it than they would have from the flu," he said.

Revell also notes that it takes 6 weeks for immunity to develop and by then the flu will be almost over." Most physicians are recommending the vaccine for those patients aged 60 or over, or with chronic diseases such as emphysema. Those employed in areas with a high level of public contact are also considered to be at risk.

McBrayer advises, "Treatment for influenza is limited. Type A does seem to be at least partially responsive to an antiviral drug, Symmetrel." He continues, "The only problem is that it is almost impossible to tell Type A from B during an acute attack."

Other therapy for the flu includes lots of liquids, McBrayer says. "Hot salty liquid seems to increase the rate of virus shedding." Aspirin or acetaminophen are recommended for relief of the fever and aching associated with the virus. McBrayer cautions, "Do not give aspirin to children with influenza, unless you check with your doctor, since there may be some connection with Reyes Syndrome."

A survey of local physicians shows that the new vaccine has been stocked by physicians at the Hereford Medical and Family Medical clinics.

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan will issue an executive order Monday giving a presidential commission carte blanche in investigating the troubled National Security Council staff, a White House spokesman says.

Spokesman Dan Howard said one of the first items on the president's calendar after he returns from California on Sunday will be a session with the three-member commission he appointed to look into the role and operations of the NSC staff.

"There will be an executive order issued giving them authority to do whatever they need to do," Howard said.

He did not describe the specific powers the commission might be granted.

The president and first lady Nancy Reagan will fly to Washington after a five-day Thanksgiving holiday at their ranch in the Santa Ynez Mountains.

The spokesman also announced that White House counsel Peter Wallison issued a memorandum in Washington on Friday instructing White House and NSC staff members to cooperate with the commission and the Justice Department.

The department is looking into whether any crimes were committed in connection with the diversion to Nicaraguan rebels of up to $30 million in profits from secret arms sales to Iran.

Vice Adm. John Poindexter resigned as head of the NSC staff and one of his deputies, Lt. Col. Oliver North, was fired Tuesday as Attorney General Edwin Meese revealed the diversion scheme.

Reagan appointed John Tower, a Texas Republican who is former chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, to head the review commission. Its other members are Brent Scowcroft, who was President Ford's national security chief, and Edmund Muskie, the Maine Democrat who served as secretary of state under President Carter.

Howard said he had seen a draft of the Wallison memo, but would not release copies of it.

"It acknowledges the fact there is a Justice Department investigation and a special committee set up and tells all the White House staff and the NSC staff to cooperate fully, to preserve any and all records, everything down to telephone logs, whatever, and make all the information available to both of these groups," he said.

Government investigators are trying to learn if North destroyed documents relating to the diversion of profits from arms sales to Iran to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Retailers begin Christmas promotions in earnest

By BILL MENEZES AP Business Writer

Shoppers armed with credit cards and cash have launched the holiday gift-buying season, rushing to malls and downtown department stores to stock up on things like "laser" guns and pink flamingo toilet plungers.

Retailers began their Christmas offensive in earnest Friday, with many stores opening as early as 7 a.m. to draw customers in for special sales and other events on what is traditionally the busiest shopping day of the year.

"This is what everybody does, and I like to follow the people," said Mike Nohl, 25, of Elgin, Ill., one of the thousands of shoppers jamming

State Street in Chicago. "The decorations put me in the holiday spirit."

Retailers around the country said high-tech stuffed animals that speak and infrared light guns were among the hottest items. Also popular were perennial favorites like clothes and electronics.

"I've read about (consumer) debt being high, but right now they're sure buying," said William Tobin, president of Kaufmann's, the largest department store in Pittsburgh.

Regional economic setbacks didn't deter many shoppers, who were buying big-ticket items as well as smaller goods.

The usual big demand for toys centered on infrared weapons.

Having a winning football team and advancing into the state playoffs is an exciting thing. It is good for our schools, and it is good for the community as a whole.

The only drawback we've ever heard, here or in other communities, is that the playoff games hurt business in the local retail stores. Why? Because some of the football fans take advantage of the out-of-town trips to do some Christmas shopping.

Of course, a certain amount of shoppers go out of town anyway, but let's all remember that local merchants deserve a shot at our Christmas purchases. After all, they're the ones who advertise in the football programs, attend class suppers, help purchase new band uniforms, and on, and on.

Loyalty and pride in our football team help make this a quality community. Loyalty to local merchants

Senators will use subpoenas in probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — The vice chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee says his panel will issue subpoenas in its probe of how profits from arms sales to Iran were diverted to Nicaraguan rebels.

"The committee will issue subpoenas to a number of people but there are also a number of other people within the administration who will testify without subpoenas because they normally do," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said Friday.

Leahy, speaking by telephone from his Middlesex, Vt., home, also said the panel would subpoena documents in the worst foreign policy crisis of Ronald Reagan's presidency. Attorney General Edwin Meese said up to $30 million in profits from the Iranian arms deal was diverted to the Contra rebels.

The investigation by the Senate panel, which the committee acknowledged has formally begun, is one of several probes by Senate and House committees. The House Intelligence Committee will also subpoena several people, said Capitol Hill sources speaking on condition of anonymity.

Three likely targets of the investigations are Lt. Col. Oliver North, the Marine officer who Meese said oversaw the Iran arms deals from his National Security Council post; Vice Adm. John Poindexter, the former national security adviser and North's boss; and Robert McFarlane, Poindexter's predecessor as Reagan's national security adviser.

North, who ran the program supplying money to the Nicaraguan rebels, was fired Tuesday by Reagan and Poindexter resigned as Attorney General Edwin Meese announced the link between the programs.

Leahy said Friday he believed that North "did not act on his own" in the alleged Iran-Contra scheme, although Leahy didn't say how he knew that or who gave North his orders.

"He got orders from higher authority. There are some in the administration who would like him to be the scapegoat for the whole matter but the fact is that he did not act alone," Leahy said.

Two other House committees increased pressure on the White House for more information about the case.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee wrote Reagan to ask that the panel be provided with relevant papers and the House Judiciary criminal justice subcommittee released a report supporting the panel's call for appointment of an independent special prosecutor to investigate possible violations of U.S. laws.

The panel is seeking a wide range of documents, including papers relating to a secret order signed by Reagan Jan. 17 detailing the arms deal and ordering CIA Director William Casey to keep the information from Congress.

In other developments: —Poindexter, who Meese said had general knowledge of the diversion of Iranian arms sale profits, is believed to have destroyed sensitive documents last weekend as part of a routine procedure, according to unidentified administration officials quoted in today's editions of The New York Times.

—Sources in Iran familiar with the internal workings of the government say that as many as 20 plane loads of American weapons were delivered to Iran in May when former national security adviser Robert McFarlane visited. In Santa Barbara, Calif., White House spokesman Dan Howard declined to comment, but said, "It sounds like hogwash to me."

—Published reports today indicate that senior White House officials are narrowing their choices for Poindexter's successor. The Los Angeles Times said David M. Abshire, former U.S. ambassador to NATO, and John F. Lehman Jr., the secretary of the Navy, are the leading candidates. But The Washington Post reported that Abshire "has emerged as the compromise choice" of senior administration officials.

—The Washington Post, in today's editions, citing an unidentified source, reported that then-Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in 1981 granted approval for Israel to ship U.S.-made military spare parts and fighter plane tires to Iran. A spokesman for Haig told the Post that the former secretary denied the allegations.

—U.S. officials reacted coolly to an offer by Hashemi Rafsanjani, Iran's parliament speaker, that Iran would still consider helping free U.S. hostages in Lebanon if the United States sends more weapons. "We are standing by the president's remark of last week" that no more U.S. arms would be sold to Iran, said a State Department official who spoke anonymously.

Best Christmas ever adds 45 names Friday

Forty-five more names went into the pot Friday for the big prize in the "Live for Free in December" giveaway being sponsored by the retail business committee of Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

Registration boxes for the holiday promotion can be found at 45 participating stores in Hereford, and shoppers can register each week. One name is drawn from each store on Friday, the box is emptied, and the registration starts again.

Names drawn each week go into the grand-prize box at the chamber office. The registration continues through Dec. 18 when the winner's name will be drawn from the box of weekly winners at each store. There will be some 225 names in the grand-prize box on Dec. 18, as there are three more weekly drawings to be held.

The winner will have his or her bills paid for December, or up to about $1,500 worth. Look for ads in through the key limits, the U.S. invites the Soviets to do so for the first time," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va.

The Brand or signs in store windows to find the participating merchants.

Byrd agreed with Nunn that the Soviets could reap benefits from the American action and said he was urging the administration "to take compensatory action which will keep us under the central limits."

The Pentagon said earlier this week that the Navy isn't retiring an aging Poseidon missile-firing submarine, which would have kept the United States under the total limits of various types of weapons permitted by the treaty.

In a statement, the Pentagon said the step reflects President Reagan's decision that "current and future decisions reflecting our strategic forces must be based on overall U.S. military requirements and the threat we face."

Although many in Congress have taken issue with the action, others, such as Sen. Dan Quayle, R-Ind., applauded it.

Quayle, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said this week the action is "six years overdue, and given Soviet cheating on SALT II, it is right on target."

But Rep. Jim Wright, the Texas Democrat who will become House speaker in January, called it a setback to the cause of nuclear disarmament and a further blow to the credibility of U.S. foreign policy.

But East faces storms

Winter in West should be mild

WASHINGTON (AP) — California and other Western states should enjoy a drier, warmer winter than usual, while the East and Gulf coasts will likely face more than the usual number of storms in the next three months, the government is forecasting.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said these weather patterns were being influenced by a warming trend in the Pacific Ocean that weather forecasters fear could be the harbinger of another El Nino episode, which three years ago disrupted world weather patterns.

The El Nino, which occurs with a warming of Pacific Ocean waters, caused problems from the severe drought in Africa to lower crop yields in the U.S. farm belt.

"This will be a winter favoring extra storminess and precipitation," NOAA long-range forecaster Donald L. Gilman said at a news conference Friday.

He predicted the band of stormy, wet weather would cover the Great Lakes states and the coastal states from Maine to Florida and across the southern part of Texas and into Arizona.

By contrast, NOAA's forecast said many states in the West should have less precipitation and warmer-than-normal temperatures over the next 90 days.

The chances of drier conditions were greatest for a region stretching from California northeastward through the states of Nevada, southern Oregon, southern Washington, Idaho, Montana and part of Wyoming, NOAA said.

All states west of the Rocky Mountains are expected to have temperatures higher than normal, the forecast said.

But an eight-state region centered around Arkansas is facing the prospect of a colder winter than normal.

HIGHER ED PANEL TO WRITE CHARTER

AUSTIN — As the Select Committee on Higher Education nears the end of its year-and-a-half-long study of Texas' colleges and universities, it has become increasingly clear there will be no major "shakeup" in higher education here.

By that, we mean the committee will recommend no massive mergers and closures among our post-secondary schools. The state will not go to sleep one night with 35 baccalaureate-level institutions and wake up with just the University of Texas at Austin and Texas A&M University.

Medical schools will not disappear off the face of the earth, nor will community colleges vanish into gaping holes in the ground. The various boards of regents will not be abolished and governance of our schools turned over to the private corporations for whom they do so much research and provide so much manpower.

Oh, the committee may yet recommend two or three mergers. A nursing school or two might be targeted for absorption by a larger system. UT—Austin and A&M always will be a little more equal than their brethren and our colleges and universities certainly will continue to play a major — though decidedly independent — role in the state's economic diversification and development.

The bottom line is that nothing overly dramatic is going to come of the select committee's deliberations. Instead, we are going to see the future of higher education shaped in a more subtle way, a way so elemental it surprises us it took until November for someone to suggest it publicly.

What the select committee will do is write a "charter" for Texas higher education.

This charter will be a mission plan for our colleges and universities. It will spell out in specific terms what the overall goal will be for higher education here, what role our schools will play in economic development, which universities will be assigned what task, what balance will be struck between research and instruction.

But don't our colleges and universities already have a mission plan, you might ask? Well, they do and they don't. Each school was assigned a role, scope and mission when it was created by the Legislature, but no one ever sat down and said, "Here's our grand scheme and here's how each school fits into it."

A well-written charter finally could do that and help a solid higher education system make those last few leaps to greatness. A poorly written charter could lead to a concentration of academic wealth in a handful of schools and, consequently, consolidation of economic clout into a few of the state's regions.

Fortunately, the select committee is made up of the state's foremost leaders in the fields of education, business and government. There is no reason the people on the committee can't see the needs of the entire state and write a charter that takes those needs into account.

It's our guess the proposed charter will be a good one, that it will result in a higher education system that has an intellectual and spiritual commitment from state government that is the equal of the already generous and physical commitment.

Let's hope our hunch is right, because if it is, great things may lie ahead for this state.

If you have questions about the select committee's work, or other issues, please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, Texas, 78711.

Interior plastic storm window reduces heat loss

If you're looking for a way to reduce winter heating costs, without a big investment, interior plastic storm windows may be the answer.

Windows make up between 5-25 percent of the exterior wall area in most homes, says housing specialist Dr. Susan Quiring.

Since single- and double-glazed windows have a low insulation value, the amount of heat loss through them can be significant, emphasizes the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist.

For older homes, a new aluminum and glass storm window may cost $35-$45.

"Although storm windows can be a good long-term investment in the house, the same amount of energy can be saved by seasonal use of an interior plastic storm window you can install yourself," Quiring says.

According to the specialist, the procedure involves applying double-stick tape to the window trim or wall to hold the plastic in place. Then press a slightly oversized piece of plastic against the tape without stretching.

Use a hair dryer to heat the plastic and cause it to shrink. The heat-shrinking eliminates all the wrinkles and leaves a clear, taut, interior storm window that can be removed in the spring.

It typically costs $1-2 window to install plastic storm windows, and kits which will cover 1-5 windows are available at home improvement centers, she notes.

The interior plastic windows have an advantage over placing plastic on the outside, Quiring says, since they eliminate the cost for nails and the nail holes that are left on the house.

Before installing interior storm windows, the specialist cautions homeowners to check the effects of the double-stick tape on walls and woodwork.

Abundant Life

MAKING CHANGES

By Bob Wear

MAKING CHANGES is part of the growing and improving process. In fact, it is essential to the fullest appreciation of the on-going living experience. Living is not static, it is not standing still. We are moving forward with the onward movement of time, or we are slipping. The point is that we are changing. We can just let these changes happen, or we can be in control. The inevitable changes which come can be accepted graciously, and we can plan and control the other changes.

WE CAN CHANGE as we see the need for change, in the sense of making corrections and improvements. This capability is one of life's greatest blessings. This is not the change of fickleness, but the change of substance and quality. It is the change of personal growth and personal improvement, and is being made within the structure of truth and reality. It is the change of refinement and enhancement.

CHANGING just for the sake of changing is not recommended. There must be a good reason for change, and once this reason is recognized and the desire for making the change is formed we are ready to begin. We see the need, we have the desire, we have made the resolve, and now we are ready. It is hopeful to have a very definite and well thought out plan of procedure, but most of the profitable changing we do will involve some trial and error. Of course, in all of this we must be sensible and reasonable.

WE WILL REMEMBER that some things, once made part of our lives, must not be changed. We may improve the way in which we manage these good and true values, but never change in the sense of giving them up. The only justified change in these areas is the improvement we may be able to make in quality. Nevertheless, some of our ideas and notions should be changed with the changing times; but we must make sure that these are justified adjustments, and that the changes are being made without giving up anything of value.

JUSTIFIED CHANGES must be made as quickly and graciously as possible.

Each year thousands of tons of extraterrestrial material breaches Earth's atmospheric shield, but most burns up before impact.

Accent on Health

Influenza—the flu—is an inevitable part of the winter months for many. Its very name derives from a Latin phrase meaning "the influence of the cold." From December through April in a normal year, flu virus may infect 20 percent of the population. Some cases may occur even in warmer months.

According to the Texas Department of Health (TDH), the number of flu cases in Texas may be high this year, unless more people are vaccinated. In October alone, Texas physicians reported some 3,130 cases of influenza or flu-like illnesses.

Flu causes upper respiratory distress, fever, headache, and body ache, and it may be complicated by stomach upset, diarrhea, and general malaise. Severe cases may lead to pneumonia or may be fatal to persons with weakened conditions.

Robert D. Crider, director of the TDH Immunization Division, said, "High risk individuals should be immunized every year. By high risk, we mean persons 65 or older, and persons with chronic respiratory and cardiovascular problems. Even children can be at high risk because of weakened health."

"A personal physician is still the best source of advice on the types of vaccine you need, as well as how to treat the symptoms if you should catch you need, as well as how to treat the symptoms if you should catch the flu," Crider said. In general, flu lasts for five to seven days, and physicians usually recommend bed rest, fluids and sometimes prescribe drugs.

Value each day to fullest extent

By CARLEEN EVERETT
Big Spring Herald

BIG SPRINGS, Texas (AP) - My life has changed. It has changed for several reasons, but most of all because I have learned to value each day for its fullest potential.

I remember, not too long ago, how I couldn't wait until Friday, or my next trip to California to see my family and friends.

Now I have learned to appreciate each and every day. The change was prompted by a tragic event.

On Oct. 23, at 2:30 p.m., I received a call telling me that my cousin, Tammy, had been murdered in Lubbock.

Murdered? No, it couldn't be true.

It couldn't be Tammy. Not Tammy, my 23-year-old cousin; my best friend; and my prospective maid-of-honor for my wedding in June.

No. It couldn't be her.

I thought my denial stage would end after I saw her lying there in her casket.

And yet, after I went to her funeral, I still can't believe it's true.

It wasn't the Tammy that I knew and loved lying there. It was some other girl who had been beaten, whose nose was broken, whose face was puffy and so black and blue that the make-up couldn't hide the horrible scars, whose lips were swollen and expression was sad, because she died a horrifying, terrible, violent death.

Tammy always was smiling and happy. She giggled about silly things and had friends of every race, color, creed and species.

Her love for animals wasn't limited to everyday pets, she also enjoyed little rodents she'd find on the road, and raccoons, including one named Billy that she and her family adopted and fed Captain Crunch cereal.

She appreciated the beauty of life. She loved nature and enjoyed walks in the country. She'd swoon over a beautiful sunset, a moonlit night, or a rainbow.

Tammy was special and talented. She was artistic and had the voice of a songbird. All she wanted in life was to sing.

Why did she have to be taken away so soon?

That's a question I have a hard time dealing with. I find comfort only in knowing that she is with God now. She had a special relationship with God and recently wrote a song titled, "Jesus Is My Friend."

I'll never forget the day she sang it to me. It brought tears to my eyes and goosebumps down my spine. Then she sang it again that night for a group of us to hear. She made us go outside to hear it because she had composed it one day in the park, under a tree.

Tammy, I know you're safe and no one will ever hurt you again. I want you to know that the man who killed you is in jail, and I pray that they don't let him out to hurt anyone ever again.

I also want you to know how much I miss you, and that I'm trying really hard to be strong; like you'd want me to be.

I just miss the special times we shared. I guess I thought they'd never end. I just knew that we'd grow old together and share experiences with our families, children and grandchildren. Now I must go on without you.

I don't know when I'm going to see you again, but it's a day that I'm looking forward to.

God Bless you, Tammy, I love you.

WHITE'S POLITICAL REVENGE

We view with alarm the actions of Gov. Mark White to lift the hiring freeze he ordered imposed on state agencies.

Unless we've missed it, there has been no drastic change in the state financial situation, and the move smacks of political revenge against newly elected Gov. Bill Clements.

It certainly gives the appearance that White is attempting to load up the state work force before Clements takes office, forcing the new governor to have to fire state workers which would boost the state's unemployment rate.

We believe the move is financially irresponsible and could bring about additional problems in attempting to solve the continuing budget crisis.

Perhaps it's worth considering a new law: That once a politician is fired by the voters, he leaves office immediately.

FELON PAYMENTS OUTRAGEOUS

When the federal government tells a taxpayer he owes taxes, the taxpayer had better pay or else.

When the federal government is reminded about how it throws the same taxpayer's money away, it could care less. The government just carries on.

An unpublished audit, according to Health and Human Services Department officials, shows that more than $900,000 in Social Security payments have been made yearly to felons serving time in state and federal prisons.

It's been three years since Congress enacted legislation forbidding payments to jailed felons. It's been three years and Social Security checks are still being mailed to jails and prisons across this land.

Think about it next time you get a notice of intent to levy from the Internal Revenue Service on a delinquent tax bill.

Bootleg

Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Deaf Smith grass farm comes up with a sports idea this week.

Dear editor:

Among all the records, statistics, awards and honors in sports, one record has been completely overlooked.

Sure, in baseball there's the Cy Young award, the Most Valuable Player award, etc. There's the home run record, the record for most bases stolen, the most strike-outs, earned run average, batting average, number of walks allowed, etc.

In basketball there's also the Most Valuable Player award, records for most points scored, most shots blocked, most free throws made, etc.

In football there's the record for most passes caught, most touchdown passes thrown, most yards gained rushing, most field goals kicked, most games won, most Superbowls won, etc.

The overlooked record I'm talking about is in professional football. There's no record of the most flags thrown by an official in one season.

Now there's a record that certainly ought to be in the record books. Who, at the end of this season, will have thrown the most flags?

This might need some refinement. The sheer number of flags thrown might not be the most accurate criterion for finding the truly champion official.

There ought to be a point system. For example, a flag thrown at mid-field for off-sides gets 1 point for the flag-thrower. A flag nullifying a 10 yard gain and a critical first down gets 2 points for the official. And a flag calling back a 50-yard touchdown run with less than 2 minutes to go gives the flag-thrower a whopping 10 points, with special police protection when the game is over.

At the end of the season, add up all the points of all the officials, and the one who has thrown the most flags at the most crucial times that produced the most howls from the fans will be honored at a public ceremony, if they can catch him.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

Paul Harvey

Billy Graham got the usual "unwelcome" by the cynical media of Paris, France, as soon as his crusade there was announced.

Before he arrived, a Gallup poll showed only 15 percent of the French population had heard of Billy Graham.

French media treated the upcoming crusade meetings like a carnival sideshow. A "Bible-thumping Southern preacher" was coming to town to preach "instant salvation" with showbiz razzmatazz and screaming loudspeakers, "all helping to hypnotize crowds to a fervor which has little to do with religion."

But then, sure enough, as has happened time and again, the media skeptics came, saw and changed their tune.

Soon the evangelist's simplicity and sincerity began to win respect and admiration.

And by the time 100,000 people had filled Bercy Stadium in Paris and 175,000 others had listened in satellite cities - and when the attendees turned out to be 80 percent young people - responding to the invitation in double the numbers seen in most stateside crusades - by then Paris papers are heralding "a demonstration of God changing peoples' lives."

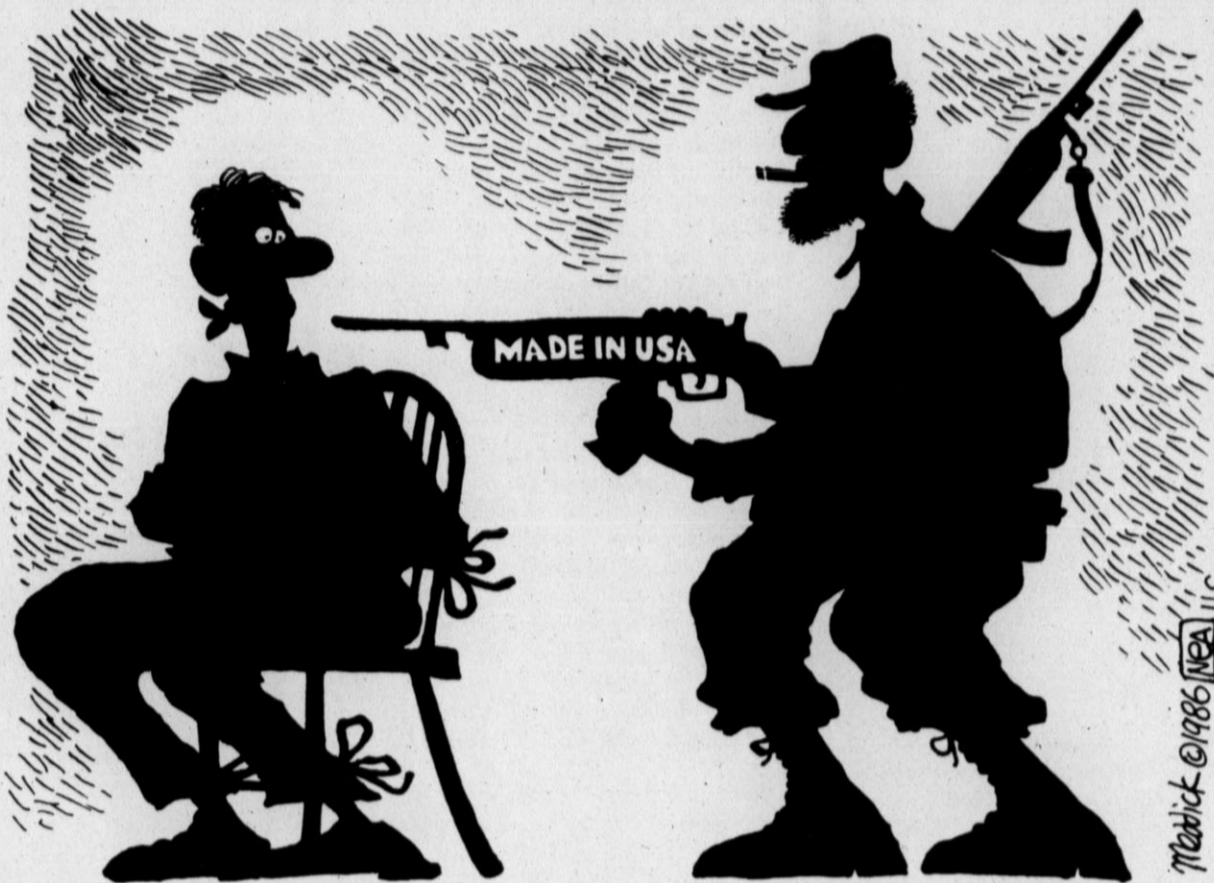

France was being terrified by terrorists when Billy Graham arrived in early September.

Against this backdrop of violence, local church leaders were anxious about the fear which might keep people home.

The religious editor of Le Monde was incredulous about the idea of "a Protestant evangelistic crusade in Catholic France." He suggested the evangelist "turn right around and go back home."

But on the eighth day of Billy's eight-day mission 7 percent of the entire audience responded to the invitation "to re-start their lives with Jesus leading."

Bob Evans, former head of the Greater Europe Bible Mission, has lived in France for 40 years. He says, "The response is a surprise to us all. There is such heavy secularism in France; it is not fashionable to be religious here. But Billy Graham has obviously proved that underneath it all people are longing for something else."

The Penultimate Word

THANKS

Evidently there are a lot of myths about the first Thanksgiving. The Pilgrims may not have been the first ones to have a feast to celebrate a harvest in the new country. Some researchers now think another group had a feast a year or two earlier. They even had Indians present and all of the other things we have always honored as the first Thanksgiving feast.

I read a long article designed to explode all of these myths. The author somehow thought it was necessary to educate us about these facts. Somehow I was not impressed. It does not matter who had the first feast. It does not matter what they had to eat. It matters that somehow these folks found out how to be grateful for very small favors. There was not a whole lot to celebrate over that first Thanksgiving. They were alive and that is about all. They barely had enough to eat and had no way of knowing if they had enough to last through the winter. They had no way of knowing if any of them would be alive for the next harvest. They majority of their group had already died. And yet they celebrated and gave thanks.

It dawned on me, as I read the article, that I was going about this Thanksgiving thing all wrong. I usually make a list of all the things I have to be thankful about. The list usually consists of the material blessings I have received in the past year and all of the good experiences I can remember. The problem with my list is that I do not count the other side. I forget to be grateful for the other experiences. The tough times that produced growth. The hard times that brought toughness. The sad times that made all of the happy times memorable. To miss these is to miss the things that go together to make me a complete person. It is not only the good times. It is not only the material things that come my way. It is not only the times when my prayers are answered. Most of the growth times of my life have happened when it was tough. Most of the celebrations of my life have been made great by comparison to a lot of other times that seemed to have no joy or meaning.

This Thanksgiving I am not going to make a list. I am not going to try to work up some special feeling. Nor will I try to fake deep gratitude that is not there. I shall try to be grateful for the shot. Just having the chance to be me and see if I can become a better me is enough.

Come to think of it, that may be the spirit of the first Thanksgiving, no matter who had the feast or who was there.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Congress has failed to control public spending

By CESAR V. CONDA
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Conventional wisdom in Congress is that the 1981 tax cuts are the source of today's $200 billion federal budget deficit. Consequently, the conventional "solution" is to raise taxes and close the gap between revenues and spending. But, in this case, an examination of the facts shows that conventional wisdom is nothing but a smokescreen to hide Congress's failure to control public spending.

During the late 1970s, rising marginal tax rates on personal income reduced the incentive for individuals to work, save and invest. High inflation and inadequate capital cost recovery allowances for investment in plant and equipment reduced the incentive for businesses to reinvest. As a consequence, economic growth ground to a halt.

The 1981 Economic Recovery Tax Act dramatically reduced taxes on individuals and businesses. By increasing the after-tax return from productive economic activity, the tax cut set in motion a dramatic improvement in the U.S. economy, paving the way for the creation of almost 11 million new jobs and an increase - not a decrease - in total tax receipts.

In 1981, the federal government collected $600 billion in taxes; this year it will collect $777 billion. Today's tax revenues are 18.6 percent of the nation's gross national product, a level consistent with most times in recent history and slightly higher than the average of the past 25 years. There have been times, such as during the 1969 tax surcharge of the Johnson administration, when

During the late 1970s, tax revenues rose again as the combination of high inflation and steep marginal tax rates - commonly referred to as "bracket creep" - pushed tax revenues to over 20 percent of GNP in 1981. The 1981 tax cuts helped put a halt bracket creep and returned the tax burden to its historic levels.

However, much of the 1981 tax cut already has disappeared because of tax increases in the intervening years. These include the 1977 Social Security tax rate increase which took effect after 1981, the 1982 tax increase bill, the 1983 Social Security amendments, the 1983 gasoline tax increase and the 1984 tax increase bill. Consequently, of the $1,488 billion tax cut for fiscal years 1981

A tidal wave in the Dutch West Indies claimed 1,200 lives in 1907.

Mount St. Helens volcano erupted in 1980 for the first time in 120 years.

A MESSAGE FROM THIS NEWSPAPER AND THE DPS TROOPERS through 1989, only $12 billion remains.

This can lead only to one conclusion: excessive federal spending, not tax cuts, is the source of today's deficits. In 1981, the federal government spent $678 billion. This year, the government will spend just over $1 trillion. Federal spending as a percentage of the GNP is far above historic levels. It was 23.8 percent of GNP in 1984 and 24 percent in 1985. This compares to the 20 percent average from 1964 to 1979.

The only solution for the budget deficit is to reduce federal expenditures and this year Congress finally has taken some positive steps toward fiscal responsibility. The spending restraints imposed by the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-cutting law has forced Congress to reduce spending growth. Consequently, federal spending has fallen slightly to 23.7 percent of GNP.

Congress must continue to pursue prudent spending restraint in order to reduce the deficit and eventually balance the federal budget. of key importance in this task is maintaining a prosperous economy. Raising marginal tax rates - as some in Congress have recently suggested - would result in a return to the economic malaise of the late 1970s and exacerbate the deficit problem.

As Rep. Jack Kemp R-NY recently put it, "A tax increase would sap economic vitality, erode the tax base and allow Congress to spend more." Although a serious problem, the budget deficit is manageable and does not warrant the current hysteria. It certainly should not be managed by raising taxes.

Witness recalls 61-year old murders

By SHERRY WEBB
Stephenville Empire-Tribune

STEPHENVILLE, Texas (AP) - Sixty-one years ago on Thursday, three members of an Erath County family were slain in a gruesome series of attacks at a farmhouse about eight miles southeast of here. The horrifying memories still are vivid for a 79-year-old man who figures he may have helped thwart the killer.

F.W. Snow was convicted in the slayings and executed. Authorities said Snow first bludgeoned his wife, Maggie Poston Snow, to death with a two-by-four and then went after his mother-in-law, Mrs. S.A. Olds, with an ax and nearly severed her head. After he killed both women, he cut up their bodies and burned portions of them in the family fireplace, authorities said.

Later that same day, Snow shot his stepson, Bernie Connally, in the back with a Winchester and then chopped off Connally's head. He dumped the head in an old cellar with the intention of coming back to get it some time later, authorities said.

Jesse Elvis Riggs, 79, of Erath County, says he believes he messed up Snow's plans.

Riggs stumbled on the severed head before the killer could retrieve it. The discovery unleashed one of the most sensational murder investigations in the area's history.

"It was 18 years old when all this happened," said Riggs. "I was in the 9th grade at Pony Creek School and I took off at dinner time to go set some traps out with Ben Aycock." Aycock ran a neighborhood store and sometimes bought furs from local trappers, Riggs said.

"Well, we went to what I now call the 'old place.' It was my grandfather's cabin..." Riggs said.

"I crawled down in the cellar of that old house to set some traps. That's when I saw this old tow sack. It was real bloody...and it was sort of hanging in mid-air.

"I started yelling at Ben to come take a look at his bloody sack and he said he would when he got through setting his traps outside."

The top of the sack was anchored by two logs on the top side of the cellar and the rest of the bag was pushed down through the cellar so that it "just sort of hung there," Riggs said.

"Well, when Ben got through with his traps he began to pull and tug on that sack. I was still in the cellar when he finally started pulling it through the hole in the top of the cellar towards the outside. It went right by my face and that's when I realized it was an EAR that was showing through a big hole in the sack.

"I began to holler, 'It's somebody's head! It's somebody's head!'" said Riggs.

"Well, I don't think ol' Ben believed me at first. But when we opened that sack, sure enough I was right and that head was staring straight at me.

"I began screaming, 'I know who it is!' I said, even louder, 'It's Herman Starnes!'"

Riggs said he and Aycock ran for their car to get help. "But then we turned around and went back for one more look just to make sure about what we'd seen. When I looked a second time at that head, I realized it wasn't Herman Starnes." Riggs added, "But, I've been kiddin' Herman about it ever since."

But it wasn't a joke at the time. Riggs recalls, "I was so scared myself that every time I closed my eyes I'd see that head with those eyes staring straight out at me. I finally made a pallet on the floor of my mother and father's bedroom so I could sleep."

Snow was arrested by Sheriff D.M. Hassler and Ranger Stewart Stanley as he attempted to escape by driving south to Hico.

"They'd been watching Snow for a few days and knew that he always carried that Winchester. When the cow that he was toting behind his wagon got loose, he jumped down from the wagon to catch it and that's when the law moved in on him. Snow didn't grab his gun when he jumped from the wagon," said Riggs.

Starnes, who owns and operates the Old Place Antique Shop in Stephenville, says he remembers the Snow case very well. "It was really something. Why, people came from all around for that trial. Folks were standing knee-deep to try to get a glimpse of the courtroom."

"Yeah, I was the star witness in the case," Riggs said.

"I was the first one called to the stand and after that, they wouldn't even let me stay in the courtroom for the rest of the trial. It lasted nine days."

Riggs said several accounts have been written of the case. "Some of them...I wouldn't ever read because they were so far from the truth," he said.

"Most of the stories mention Ben as the first one to find the head, but he wasn't," Riggs said.

"A lot of the stories kept mentioning that the dog was with us, like it was a hero," Riggs added, laughing. "Why, that ol' dog was a bulldog, not a hound dog like one story said, and he didn't discover anything. He wasn't even around me when I found the head."

"Oh, I guess it doesn't really matter now," Riggs said, "but things sure have a funny way of getting all mixed up."

Cats can now join the party

By JONALYN SCHUON
Dallas Times Herald

DALLAS (AP) - Now even teetotaling tabbies can take a swig of Christmas cheer.

Catnip liqueur, a non-alcoholic brew from the finest Texas vines, is a new after-dinner drink designed for felines by Dallasite Jenny Distler.

(Humans can nip at the slightly sweet, tea-flavored libation, too. Ms. Distler said, but the ingredient in catnip that stimulates cats makes people sleepy.)

Recommended mixers are milk or cream. And Ms. Distler suggests that the concoction be served in a shot glass.

The 16-ounce decanter of liqueur retails for $11.95 and will be available in local stores early next week. It is the newest product of Dallas-based CatHouse Fashions, which also manufactures and markets cat jewelry, clothing, perfume and furniture.

It was a void in the cat couture market that spurred Ms. Distler to start marketing feline fashions and accessories, she said.

"I had tried to find something fashionable for my cat," she said. "But there was nothing out there."

CatHouse Fashions won't put your puss in boots, but it will outfit him (or her) in a motorcycle jacket, velveteen fur cape or oversized turtle-neck sweater. And that's just for winter. Ms. Distler, 34, plans to design a line of clothing and accessories for spring, summer and fall as well, using different colors and fabrics. Prices for the winter line range from about $9.95 for a bow tie to $40 for the skunk or rabbit cape to $45 for the biker jacket.

Although she admitted it was unusual, Ms. Distler said she has had reports of cats who actually like to wear clothes. Comfort is a primary consideration in her designs, Ms. Distler said.

Like most of CatHouse Fashions' clothing and accessories, the company's jewelry is available in large sizes for the truly fat cats. "There are a lot of cats in large sizes (that) never had anything," said Mrs. Distler. "Never even a rhinestone collar," she added, earnestly.

Gold beads are the jewelry of choice for calicos, while silver looks best on siamese, she said.

The jewelry costs between $8 and $15, except for genuine silver and turquoise pieces, which can run a dotting pet owner between $40 and $60.

Marketing experts might quibble with the name of CatHouse Fashions' new perfume, but Ms. Distler said "Rappelle" is much more pleasant than it sounds. It has a cedar base, and is repellent only to fleas, not people. "It makes your cat smell just like a cedar closet," she said.

For a cat who's like a member of the family, Ms. Distler has designed a highchair that boosts the beast to table level and costs about $85. All of CatHouse Fashions' products are manufactured in the Dallas area, Ms. Distler said.

CatHouse Fashions will stage fashion shows with live models this weekend (Nov. 29 and 30) in the Dallas Convention Center, as part of the Dallas Cat Show.

Ms. Distler, a former computer programmer, started marketing cat products in September, after a necklace she designed for her own cat proved popular with friends and friends' felines. She is designing full time now.

Cat apparel allows pet owners to indulge their fashion fantasies, Ms. Distler said. "People frequently will put much wilder fashions on their cats than they will wear themselves."

South Texas farm co-op unites for change

SAN JUAN, Texas (AP) — Julio Castilleja steps out of his makeshift office and looks over farm machinery that glistens with the wetness of dew from a cool fall morning.

"This is it," he said. "This is our last chance to stay in farming. It's now or never."

For nearly 40 years, Castilleja and his family have tilled the Valley's soils and reaped its harvests. But now the years of profits have been replaced by hardships and mounting debts that show no mercy.

The ever-changing dynamics of the world's farm economy have made the American small farmer a bit player in a complex game that's trying to squeeze him out. It has left the small farmer confused and troubled.

"All we have is through farming,"

Castilleja said. "We don't know what else to do."

In June 1985, Castilleja decided he wasn't going to accept going broke without a fight. He talked to surrounding Valley farmers he had known for decades and who also were on the brink of financial ruin.

"We just didn't want to quit and give up," he said. They didn't.

Traditionally, farmers are a fiercely independent lot, but when faced with impending bankruptcy, tradition can be quickly set aside.

Castilleja and five other farmers knew they couldn't make it individually anymore.

There was really one option to bankruptcy, Castilleja says, and that was to band together and pool their resources and years of farming knowledge. The farmers knew how to work the land. Now they had to learn the hard-edged business of staying financially afloat.

In what Castilleja says amounts to one last collective stab at financial survival, the farmers formed their own company — the Valley Farmers Co-op.

"We know we have to trust each other," he said. "We don't have anywhere else to turn."

With the help of Valley Interfaith and the Texas Department of Agriculture, the co-op was chartered last December.

The first step was to borrow $40,000 to buy the needed machinery to process vegetables.

Later, the co-op was given a $10,000 grant from an organization of Oblate fathers from the Roman Catholic Church, and then last spring came the biggest gift of all — a $15,000 grant from Willie Nelson's Farm Aid organization.

The co-op's first harvest was grown by six farmers. Eight more Hidalgo County farmers have since joined the co-op.

Castilleja, who's 56, is the co-op's manager, and his brother and oldest son are also farmers who are members of the co-op.

The fledgling organization is headquartered in a small office adjacent to Castilleja's San Juan home. On the office walls are letters from state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower that exhort the farmers to keep up the fight to stay in farming.

A wood-bench warehouse that has only a cement floor is located next to the office. Machinery stands ready to process the co-op's crops of various vegetables.

The co-op's farmers are small vegetable growers who own a combined 1,600 acres of farm land that is scattered throughout Hidalgo County.

"To a lot of buyers we don't exist," Julio Castilleja said. "We're trying to beat the clock while we get established."

Getting established has meant learning about marketing strategies and other business areas farmers don't always know much about.

"A farmer doesn't want to be tied to an office," Castilleja said, "but these are areas we've had to learn about."

The co-op has endured the hard work and the ups and downs, but there have also been pleasant surprises along the way, especially the one provided by Nelson's organization.

"One day last spring a person from Farm Aid gave me a call," Castilleja said. "She said they had heard of us and suggested we send an application for aid."

Castilleja did just that, and a few weeks later, the co-op received the $15,000 check from Farm Aid, an organization started by Nelson to help farmers in financial trouble.

"We're just so grateful to Willie," Castilleja said.

"We wish we could do something for him, but what could we do?" he asks as he looks out over a field being harvested by farmworkers.

It is in these fields of green where Castilleja has made his living, first as a farmworker and then as a farmer in his own right. It is in these fields where he wants to stay.

He's convinced that this season's harvest, the co-op's second, is crucial to the organization's survival.

"If we can just make it through this crop, I think we'll make it," Castilleja said.

"There are bad moments, but we're going to stick it out."

Some mothers choose abusive boyfriends over children

HOUSTON (AP) — The pictures of 2-year-old Christopher Kalmbach's body marked with bruises and cigarette burns nearly caused members of a jury hearing his case to weep.

The little boy had died after pepper was forced down his throat by his mother's boyfriend.

In what a judge called the worst case of child abuse he had seen in almost 10 years, the jury heard in vivid detail the case against the mother's boyfriend, Raymond Edward Coffey, 26, and convicted him of injury to a child. He was sentenced to 50 years in prison.

The case is a harsh example of the rise of reported cases of men abusing their girlfriends' children, said State District Judge Michael McSpadden who presided over Coffey's trial in October.

"We're seeing a lot of cases of a live-in boyfriend or a stepfather abusing," McSpadden said. "The frustration is out there — and they're taking it out on smaller people."

"It represents a tremendous problem for us in working with families," said Gene Daniel, regional director of Harris County Children's Protective Services.

He estimated 240 to 300 reported child abuse cases a month involve an abusive boyfriend, about 30 percent of all Harris County reports. Mothers account for most abuse cases, he said.

But, in some years, boyfriends have accounted for half the deaths of abused children, Daniel said.

The problem occurs across the state, Galveston County assistant District Attorney Mike Clark said.

In August, he obtained a 10-year prison sentence for Richard Norwood, 33, who admitted to repeatedly spanking his girlfriend's 6-year-old daughter and strapping her up in a closet by her ankles to rid her of evil spirits.

The next month, Clark prosecuted a case in which Dennis Joseph Florio, 22, was convicted of injury to a child by omission of adequate care and sentenced to 60 years in prison for the death of his live-in girlfriend's 2-year-old son, David McComb.

The child was found with several bruises on his body, bites to his right cheek and a leg, a torn rectum and bare spots on his head where hair had been pulled out.

In both cases, the mothers were aware of the boyfriends abusing the child, Clark said.

Susan Heitman, 29, was convicted of helping her boyfriend abuse the girl, Clark said. Cheryl McComb, 20, was indicted in her son's death but was given a probated sentence in exchange for testifying for the state.

"So the child's really out in the cold," Clark said. "There's no one really backing him up."

Generally, women who are involved with men who abuse their children are isolated, passive and have few friends, Daniel said.

"These women are obviously very lonely people," he said. "They are looking for companionship. They take the path of least resistance. They want the security of someone to tell them what to do."

"One thing important to understand, child rearing is an extremely difficult task," said Pam Cole, assistant professor of psychology at the University of Houston.

The women tend to have few examples of good parenting because they often lack loving parents themselves, Ms. Cole said. They often do not choose mates well and may move in with men they may have known for only a few weeks, she said.

"The boyfriend is prematurely put in the role of surrogate father," said Patrick Brady, chief psychologist for the Houston Child Guidance Center.

"It's an explosive situation." In other cases, abusive men may seek out passive women to take advantage of the children, said Trudy Davis, state Child Protective Services supervisor in Galveston County.

The women feel they cannot interfere with their boyfriends' disciplining even though the children may cry out in pain, Ms. Cole said.

In some cases, the mother may feel ambivalent as the child may be unwanted or the result of an unhappy relationship, she said.

Both the mother and abusive boyfriend tend to have flat personalities and an inability to respond to others' sufferings, Brady said.

Poverty, unemployment and lack of community or family ties may fuel frustration that is taken out on a child, they said.

Ms. Cole and other psychologists stress most women and their abusive boyfriends can be counseled to become non-abusive parents.

"Most people view child abusers as extremely mentally ill," Daniel said. "Only 5 percent fall into that disturbed category. It's often the case of fairly normal people overreacting to a normal child's behavior."

But in a few cases, the abusive boyfriends show no remorse and deserve a long prison sentence, prosecutors said.

Coffey, who faces a 50-year prison sentence, told police he forced pepper down the 2-year-old's throat and beat him with a paddle to discipline the child for cursing.

Patty Ann Kalmbach, the 21-year-old mother, is charged with murder by omission and will stand trial later under a law that allows prosecution because a mother is held responsible for her offspring, Clark said.

On the day of the boy's death, Coffey told police he was angry when the boy used a swear word Coffey had just said.

"He never showed any emotion through the trial, even when the jury looked at the pictures of the child and all the injuries," McSpadden said.

"We're not dealing with the same type of people. They don't feel like you and I would. That's a shame."

In amateur wrestling, before the rules were modified, contestants could be locked in holds for so long single bouts lasted 11 hours.

IT'S ALMOST TREE TIME

NEW YORK (AP) — The Metropolitan Museum of Art says its annual Christmas tree and Baroque creche display will be ready for visitors Dec. 5-Jan. 4.

The museum says the display has become, "during the last 23 years, a firmly established holiday tradition for New Yorkers and out-of-town visitors."

The tree is a brightly lit 20-foot blue spruce and is decorated with angels and cherubs as well as with a lively assortment of Neapolitan creche figures at its base.

On May 1, 1986, five men and a woman became the first people since 1909 to reach the North Pole by dogsled without resupply, says National Geographic.

Today's Army is high-tech all the way, from the ground up. If you're fascinated by satellite systems, you can actually learn to operate or repair the equipment that "speaks" to these satellites.

High-tech communications is just one of many advanced fields available for Army training. There are also skills in areas like air defense, armor, or avionics. Using equipment that utilizes lasers, computers, radar, or sophisticated electronics.

The future belongs to people with high-tech knowledge. And the Army's a great place to get it. To see what you qualify for, contact your local Army Recruiter.

Herd loses to Horns

AMARILLO - Hereford's Carmen Brockman led all scorers Friday night with 15 in the Herd's 49-36 loss to the Lady Longhorns of Caprock in first round action of the Amarillo Invitational Girls Basketball Tournament played at the Amarillo High School Gym.

The Longhorns took an early 6-0 lead before Hereford could manage to get their first two points of the night with almost four minutes ticking of the clock.

After the first quarter of play, the Herd trailed Caprock 8-6, but in the second quarter, Hereford took a 1-point lead with 4:54 left in the half. Hereford's Kamile Martin hit a jumper to give the Herd an 11-10 advantage.

But Hereford's lead only lasted 24 seconds.

Caprock's Shelia Roan gave her team a 12-11 lead and the Lady Longhorns never looked back.

Caprock led by as much 17 points during the fourth quarter.

Tricia Kahlich chipped in 8 points for the Herd while teammate Amy Coneway contributed 5.

Martin added three points and the Herd's Whitney Whitaker and Katie Ramey each scored 2 points. Carolyn Rieves also tossed in a free throw attempt.

Hereford's next opponents were to have been El Paso Austin Saturday afternoon.

Austin dropped a 49-42 decision to Dumas to send them to the losers side of the bracket.

Other first round winners were Lubbock Estacado and Amarillo High.

Estacado defeated El Paso Burges 69-61 and Amarillo High defeated Clovis 74-69.

Boys advance in tourney

BORGER - The Hereford varsity boys' basketball team used a strong second and fourth quarter to defeat Stanford-Fritch 71-53 Friday night in first round action of the Borger Holiday Tournament.

The Herd and Stanford-Fritch were tied at 17 at the end of the first quarter, but Hereford scored 23 points in the second quarter, compared to Fritch's 12, to take a commanding 37-26 lead into halftime.

In the third quarter, the Herd could only manage to add 10 points to their score, but they held Fritch to only 11 points.

Going into the fourth quarter, Hereford held a 10-point advantage at 47-37.

But Hereford, led by David Manchec's game high 18 points, buried Fritch by scoring 24 points in the final quarter.

Hereford will next take on the highly rated Borger Bulldogs in the second round of the tournament.

Borger defeated Mineral Wells 94-66 to reach their semi-final game.

The winner of the Hereford-Borger matchup will take on the winner of the Lamesa-Clovis contest.

Lamesa defeated Tulsa 69-62, and Clovis got by Canyon 56-63.

The Herd's Todd Weaver was also in double figures as he scored 16 on the night. Kevin Hansen chipped in nine points and Bobby Robbins scored eight.

High point man for Stanford-Fritch was Todd Morgan, who scored 17 on the night.

Akers awaits decision on future

AUSTIN (AP) — Fred Akers says he expects to be back as head football coach at the University of Texas next season, and several Longhorn players say they hope he is.

Akers' fate will be decided today when Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds meets with the school's athletics council. The 10-year UT coach has been the subject of firing rumors throughout the season, which ended as the Longhorns' first losing campaign in 30 years.

Texas A&M beat Texas 16-3 Thursday to give the Longhorns a 5-6 season mark.

Throughout the season Dodds said Akers' performance would be reviewed after the final game.

Akers sounded upbeat at his Thursday post-game news conference. "Thanks for being here. See you next year," he told reporters.

Asked if he felt he had earned another year at the UT helm, Akers said, "Of course I do."

"If it's up to me, I'm going to be back. We have gotten used to rumors around here and we try to tune them out," he said.

Longhorn defensive tackle Brian Espinosa said "it would be a crime" if Akers did not return as coach.

"He's taken a lot of heat for our losses. It's not that man's fault. He's a good coach, a very good coach," Espinosa said.

Tailback Eric Metcalf said Akers talked to the team about next year as if it would have the same head coach.

"He said we fought hard and it's rough losing. He told us we've got to keep our heads up and get ready for next year," Metcalf said, adding that Akers has adeptly handled a season of speculation about his future.

"A lot of people would just break down and quit. But he's the tough kind. I can't tell you how much I respect that," Metcalf said.

Placekicker Jeff Ward said, "These guys have handled everything that has been said concerning coach Akers incredibly well.

This is a young team. I think it would be a mistake to make them have to start over again with a different coaching staff. I don't know what it would help to change."

Quarterback Brett Stafford said the season-long speculation about Akers was difficult to ignore.

"But Coach Akers and the staff encouraged us to try to play our game. We played pretty good football. We were very close in a lot of games and we have got the talent coming back to be an excellent team next year," Stafford said.

Defensive back John Hagy said "everyone would be a little upset" if Akers were fired.

"But it doesn't really matter who the coach is because of the willingness and determination we have to win. I think we're going to win the conference next year. Whoever the coach is, we're going to make him look awfully good," Hagy said.

Lions replay last year's defeat, drop Corsicana

By CHARLES RICHARDS Associated Press Writer

For the second year in a row, McKinney kicker Jay Bob Harris has ended Corsicana's football season.

Harris nailed a 31-yard field goal with 24 seconds remaining Friday night in Texas Stadium to give McKinney a 24-22 victory over Corsicana, which ended the regular season as No. 1 in the state among Texas' Class 4A football teams in the AP Schoolboy Poll.

A year ago, Harris beat Corsicana, 9-7, with three field goals.

Corsicana ended the season with an 11-1 record. Allen and Wilmer-Hutchins played Saturday to determine who would meet McKinney, 12-1, in the quarterfinals next week.

Elsewhere, Daingerfield, ranked No. 1 in Class 3A, won its 29th straight game and ran its record to 13-0 this season by defeating Springtown 28-13 in Garland; but Valley View, the No. 1 team in 1A, was upset 28-19 by Burkeville.

Daingerfield scored all of its touchdowns in the first half, all on explosive plays. David Mims scored on runs of 40 and 75 yards, Jimmy Morrow raced 70 yards, and Jaime Evans threw a 74-yard TD pass to Steve Stutsman.

Jayton, the two-time defending state champion in six-man, stayed unbeaten this year by crushing Guthrie 55-22, while last year's runner-up, Christoval, advanced with a 70-57 quarterfinals victory over Newcastle.

San Antonio Holmes, No. 1 in Class 5A, was paired against Converse Judson Saturday afternoon in San Antonio.

Corsicana led McKinney 22-21 and was trying to increase its lead, but McKinney's Sammy Walker intercepted at the McKinney 25 with five minutes to play. Star runningback Randy Simmons, who had 152 yards on 22 carries, sparked a drive that got the ball to the 14, setting up the winning kick.

"Once we got that close, I knew the ballgame was over," McKinney Coach Ron Poe said.

Each team called a timeout before Harris finally got to kick.

"I was concentrating and I was praying," said Harris.

Corsicana jumped out to a 15-0 lead in the first quarter on Daniel Morgan's 41-yard run, John Lawhorn's 31-yard field goal and Shannon Paschal's 31-yard pass to Keith Moore, but McKinney battled back.

Simmons returned a kickoff 87 yards, and the Lions cut the deficit to 15-13 at the half on Walker's 33-yard interception and return.

Cardinals to reunite in NFL showdown

By CHUCK MELVIN
AP Sports Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — Ernest Givins and Frank Minnifield both played football at the University of Louisville. Their common interests end there, Givins says. Minnifield, now a cornerback for the Cleveland Browns, will be covering Givins, a wide receiver for the Houston Oilers, when the NFL teams meet Sunday at Cleveland Stadium.

"There's no love lost between us," Givins said. "We try to stay away from each other. I don't dislike the man, but I don't try to work out with him, either."

Givins, a rookie second-round draft choice, said Minnifield, a three-year veteran, succeeded in rattling him when the Browns beat the Oilers 23-20 in the Astrodome in September. Minnifield played bump-and-run coverage on Givins and distracted him by constantly talking to him at the line of scrimmage. "He almost talked me out of my game last time," Givins said. "With me going out there as a rookie, I didn't think a professional would talk as much as he did. But this time, I'm not going to say anything back to him."

"As long as I play the correct way and run my routes and catch the football, everything else will take care of itself. As long as I keep my cool and don't do what I did last time we played, I'll be OK. Last time, he came up to me with a couple of cheap shots to the head. I got frustrated and started messing up my routes and I didn't catch the ball very well."

Givins has since blossomed into one of the top rookies in the NFL. He has caught 46 passes for 803 yards, and he teams with Drew Hill to give the Oilers, one of the better sets of starting receivers in the league. "I think their receivers are comparable to Mark Clayton and Mark

Duper (of the Miami Dolphins)," said Cleveland Coach Marty Schottenheimer. "That'll be an interesting matchup this week — our cornerbacks against their wide receivers."

The Browns, 8-4, are tied with the Cincinnati Bengals for first place in the AFC Central Division. The Bengals play at Denver on Sunday.

The Oilers, 3-9, would seem to have little motivation, but Givins said their two victories in the past three weeks have inspired them.

"We can't back up now," he said. "We have to keep moving forward. And we have nothing to lose."

Although he has great respect for the ability of Minnifield and the Browns' other cornerback, Hanford Dixon, Givins said he enjoys playing against man-to-man coverage.

"I feel if I can beat them in the bump-and-run, I have a very good chance of a big play," he said. "And I feel bump-and-run can make me get respect out of a person."

Wolfpack sinks Texas in shootout

By BRUCE BARTLEY
Associated Press Writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Walker Lambiotte sank two free throws with no time showing on the clock Friday as 17th-ranked North Carolina State held off Texas 69-68 in the opening round of the Great Alaska Shootout.

In the first game, 10th-ranked Iowa used a balanced scoring attack to offset a 37-point performance by Alaska-Anchorage's Jesse Jackson for a 91-81 victory.

In other games, defending NCAA champion Louisville, ranked second, met Northeastern, and Utah State played Washington.

North Carolina State trailed Texas 66-55 with 4:40 to go, but the Wolfpack then found the three-point range. Two free throws by Bennie Bolton gave the Wolfpack a 67-66 lead with 1:25 left.

A drive down the lane by Alex Broadway put Texas back ahead with 22 seconds left. After a timeout with 11 seconds to go, North Carolina State missed two shots before Patrick Fairs was called for a foul in a scramble for the loose ball as the clock ran out.

After another timeout, Lambiotte, a 6-foot-7 sophomore from Woodstock, Va., sank both ends of a 1-and-1. Lambiotte finished with 13 points, 11 of them in the second half. Bolton led the Wolfpack with 18.

Fairs scored 25 points, including three three-pointers.

After trailing 5-0 in the early going, Texas pulled to 15-9 lead with 11:04 to go. The Longhorns hit four three-point goals in the first half, but the Wolfpack countered with 13-15 from the free throw line to close it to 37-35 at the half.

North Carolina State scored the first four points of the second half to take a brief 39-37 lead, but Texas pulled away with strong play by Raynard Davis, who finished with 18.

Red Raiders edge Cal-St. Fullerton

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Guards Wendell Owens and Sean Gay scored 20 and 18 points respectively, including 19 of Texas Tech's final 21 points, to lift the Red Raiders to a 70-69 nonconference college basketball victory over Cal State-Fullerton in the season opener for both teams Friday night.

Trailing 32-30 at halftime, Tech used a pressing man-to-man defense and fast break to open a 60-50 lead with 7:36 remaining.

Fueled by Henry Turner and Richard Morton, the Titans rallied to pull within one point with 50 seconds remaining.

Gay then hit a driving 7-foot jumper with 37 seconds left to ice the victory.

The three-pointer was the seventh of the game for the 6-foot-7 Paddio, a transfer from Seminole, Okla., Junior College. He made consecutive three-pointers to rally the Runnin' Rebels from a 71-68 deficit to a 74-71 lead with 1:15 left.

Paddio scored 15 of his team-high 23 points after intermission. Gilliam added 17 points for the Rebels, who improved to 3-0.

Cowboys hope to regroup after loss

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys have seven days to figure out what went wrong with their NFL season, but it could already be too late for them to find a magic key to the playoffs.

The Seattle Seahawks inflicted a 31-14 Thanksgiving Day lashing on the Cowboys only four days after Dallas was humbled 41-14 by Washington.

Dallas' defense collapsed in both games and the Cowboys, 7-6, have lost four of their last five games. They still have an outside chance at a second wild card in the NFC East.

"I don't think we really know what's going on," said linebacker Jeff Rohrer. "These guys are going out there and really trying hard. And the coaches are doing what they can. It just seems like we can't get anything going for us."

"It is true one of the mysteries of sport. There isn't anything we can hang our hat on. The other teams seem to be hitting us right where they should be. We are just snakebit."

The Cowboys yielded 415 yards to Seattle and quarterback Dave Krieg threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score. Running back Curt Warner gained 122 yards rushing and scored on a 9-yard run.

It was the Cowboys' first

Thanksgiving loss since 1970 and only their fourth in 19 holiday games. Dallas meets the Los Angeles Rams next Sunday night in Anaheim.

The Cowboys, who are seeking their 21st consecutive winning season, close the year with two home dates. Dallas hosts the Philadelphia Eagles on Dec. 7 and the Chicago Bears on Dec. 14 and will have to win their last three games to have even a remote chance at the playoffs.

"A 10-6 record might not even make the playoffs this year," Coach Tom Landry said.

Players and coaches of the defensive unit say they will have to figure out what the problem is before they can fix it.

"I'm just as baffled as everybody else," said cornerback Everson Walls.

Secondary Coach Dick Nolan said, "It's frustrating but we just have to regroup. It's not just one thing."

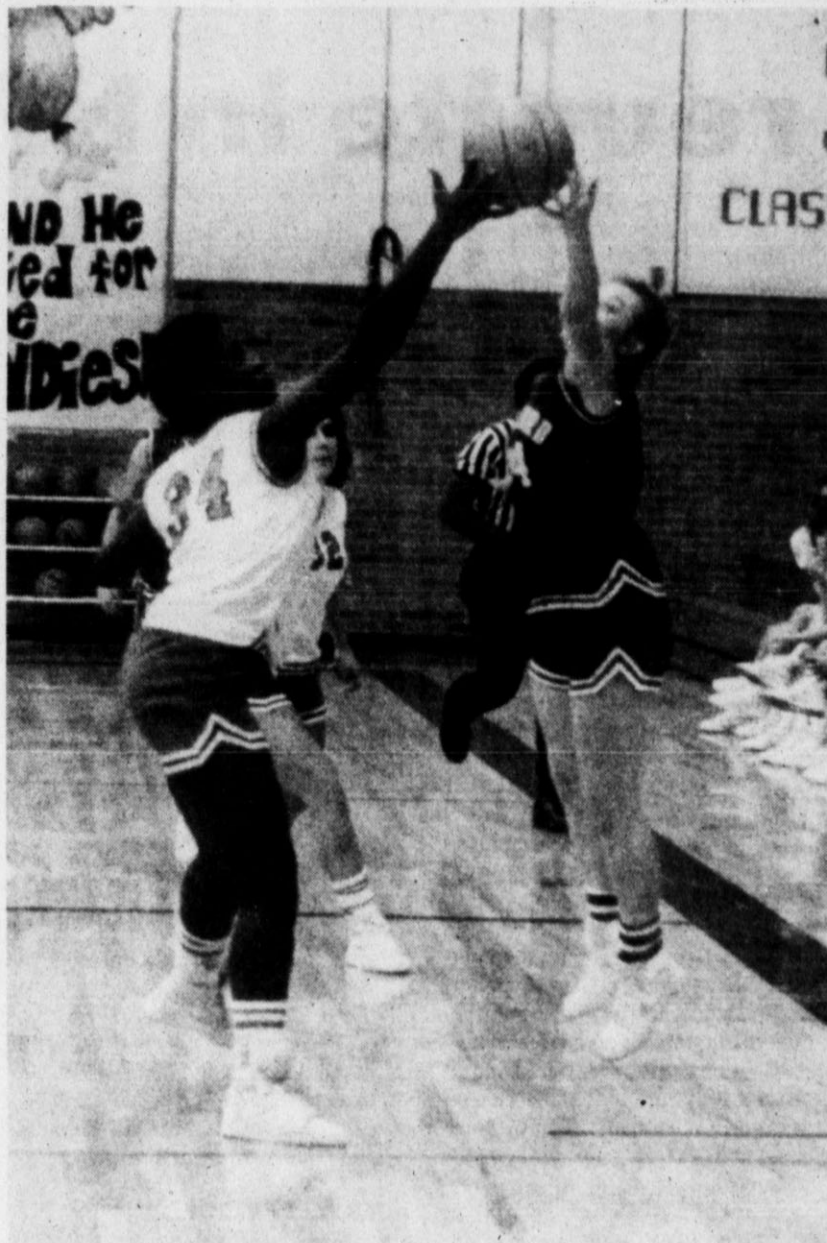

Defensive coordinator Ernie Stautner said, "There were some areas where we miscommunicated several times. We got hit every time. Seattle did a great job but we also helped them."

"It's hard to put your finger on why it's happening but any time you give up the big plays you are going to put yourself at a big disadvantage," said defensive tackle Randy White.

HEY, THAT'S JAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jay Schroeder found life vastly different when he took over as quarterback for the Washington Redskins, replacing the retired Joe Theismann. The 1986 season was Jay's first as the signal-caller from the word go.

"Things changed so quickly for me," Schroeder said. "You go from a nobody to being a somebody who drives down the street unwittingly causing a three-car collision because people are trying to see you."

Big Mac advances

ATLANTA (AP) — John McEnroe easily defeated Brad Gilbert 6-1, 6-2 and France's Yannick Noah, who threatened to quit after a dispute over a line call, calmed down and trimmed Miloslav Mecir 6-4, 6-2 Friday to join Ivan Lendl and Boris Becker in the semifinals of the $500,000 AT&T Challenge tennis tournament.

McEnroe and Noah won in afternoon matches, while No. 1-ranked Lendl and No. 2 Becker won in the night session.

Lendl needed only 53 minutes to down Sweden's Mikael Pernfors 6-1, 6-1. Becker beat third-ranked Mats Wilander of Sweden 7-6, 6-3.

Lendl will meet McEnroe in a 1 p.m. EST nationally televised (ABC-TV) match. Becker will meet Noah in the night session.

Lendl was the only undefeated player in the eight-man round-robin portion of the tournament with a 3-0 record. He had clinched a place in Saturday's semifinals before powering past Pernfors, the former University of Georgia star who is ranked 11th in the world.

Lendl was never in trouble against the Swede, ripping seven aces in overpowering his opponent, needing only 29 minutes in the first set and 24 minutes in the next.

Becker overcame a triple-set point in the opening set, down 5-4 and trailing love-40 on his own serve. The 19-year-old West German, however, won five straight points to gain a 5-5 tie before winning the tiebreak.

Becker wrapped up the match with his 14th ace of the night.

Sunday's title match, worth $150,000 to the winner, also will be televised by ABC, beginning at 4 p.m. EST.

McEnroe, the world's 12th-ranked player, had five aces on the Supreme court surface at the Omni and never let Gilbert in the match. The 27-year-old left-hander broke Gilbert's serve in the second game, held his own and breezed to the first-set victory in 26 minutes.

Iowa plays North Carolina State and Northeastern plays Utah State today, while Alaska-Anchorage takes on Texas and Louisville plays Washington in the consolation bracket.

Walker Lambiotte hit two free throws after time expired to lift N.C. State over Texas.

Roy Marble scored 18 points as Iowa took advantage of some early jitters on the part of Alaska-Anchorage to run away in the early going. Anchorage guard Jessie Jackson scored 37 points.

NIT
Junior college transfer Gerald Paddio hit a three-point goal at the buzzer to give Nevada-Las Vegas its two-point victory over Temple, earning the Rebels a trip to the NIT final against Western Kentucky. The three-point goal was Paddio's seventh of the game, and he finished with a career-high 23 points.

Mike Vreeswyk had 24 for Temple. UNLV is now 3-0.

Kennard Johnson's free throw with one second left gave Western Kentucky a 68-67 victory over Memphis State.

Spartan Cutlass Classic

Forward Carl Liebert scored 25 points, and center David Robinson had 13 to lead Navy over Utica. The Midshipmen are now 1-1.

Navy will face Michigan State in the tournament final. The host Spartans defeated Eastern Michigan 99-83 in the other first-round game.

BYU-Hawaii Thanksgiving

Ken Norman scored 24 points, and Illinois built a 65-55 lead before holding off a late New Mexico State charge. Two New Mexico State players, Jeff Williams and Pierre Smith, were suspended before the game. Honolulu police were holding them on shoplifting charges.

In the other game, Duke beat BYU-Hawaii 85-68.

Hilo Classic

Reggie Williams scored 22 points to take Georgetown to victory over Quincy, an NAIA school which has yet to win in three games this season.

Celtics streak to 48 straight

By DAVE O'HARA
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics built a whopping lead in the first half and then survived their "waltz" game Friday night in streaking to their 48th consecutive home court victory, a 111-96 NBA romp over the San Antonio Spurs.

"After we get a lead, our minds seem to click off competitively," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "It's what we call the ups and down."

"We got up by 20 and got into our waltz game. We start playing like its garbage time."

"When we get a big lead, we have a tendency to let up," center Robert Parish said. "But when they closed to 10 or 12 points, we got it back."

Despite some fine spurts, San Antonio was unable to get within 10 points in the second half and Boston's long unbeaten home streak never was in danger.

Larry Bird scored 31 points and his four starting teammates also hit in double figures in leading the Celtics.

Kevin McHale, who has scored at least 20 points in all of Boston's 14 games this season, connected for 23, Dennis Johnson had 21, Danny Ainge 15 and Parish 12. The Celtics won their 15th consecutive game against San Antonio in a streak dating to April 1, 1979.

The Celtics, 7-0 this season and unbeaten at home since last Dec. 6, spotted San Antonio a six-point lead but then outscored the Spurs 18-7 for a 31-26 first-period advantage.

With Bird scoring 18 points, McHale 16 and Johnson 13, Boston virtually wrapped up the game in charging to a 64-44 halftime lead.

The Celtics widened the advantage to as much as 22 points before encountering a letdown in the third period. The Spurs closed within 76-65 before Boston regrouped and took an 88-73 lead into the fourth period.

San Antonio got to within 11 again midway through the final period, but Bird hit on a 25-footer for three points and Parish hit from the baseline to kill the Spurs' last hopes.

Officials excused by press box monitors

judging the replay

MURRAY OLDERMAN

On sports

By Murray Olderman

The critics who denounce instant replay of controversial calls as taking the human element out of pro football should be advised that the new system really divulges human frailties.

The major weakness of this inaugural test of electronic second-guessing has been the men upstairs in the booth — former field officials and football men from the league officiating department put out to elevated pasture. They have goofed a couple of times in relaying their messages to the umpires, once costing Denver a touchdown because the replay monitor couldn't get the call through, and the other garbling a communication that should have nullified a Los Angeles Raider touchdown.

But those instances are just matters of getting the bugs out of the system and shouldn't be the basis for judging its worth.

I see nothing wrong in using technology to buttress the officiating of a game. The way this was devised, the seven men on the field still go about their business as normal. Early on, they were a little tentative because of the electronic presence upstairs.

On the very first series of the season, Referee Ben Dreith didn't call a touchdown call for Cleveland (vs. Chicago) until he received replay confirmation. That was wrong. The official rules on the play immediately, and only if there is "indisputable visual evidence" to the contrary does the man up in the booth, buzz the umpire to countermand the decision.

I think the NFL was remiss in not laying down firm guidelines for the process of reversing calls.

The Raider touchdown was allowed to stand because the replay official said, "Pass incomplete," and the umpire interpreted it as "Pass is complete." The Denver touchdown was disallowed because the replay official was studying the play and neglected to press the button in time to have the game stopped before another play could be run.

Those glitches have led to new procedures. Now the replay guy uses only three words: reversed, confirmed or inconclusive.

In making contact with the field, the replay official, while occupied, can use a league representative in the booth to alert the umpire. A third man, a technician, makes sure the equipment is working correctly. "The mechanical glitches are over," insists Val Pinchbeck, the NFL director of broadcasting, who serves as one of those league reps during games. "The equipment does work well. We can get replay decisions in four seconds."

The three networks, whose feeds are used for these post-judgments, were vocally opposed to their equipment being used as an official element of the game. They thought they would be blamed for any hassles that arose. And many of their announcers still rail against using the "eighth official."

But the fact is, in none of the three controversial instances that cropped up in the first six weeks of the season have the networks been criticized for their roles in "Limited Instant Replay," as the NFL calls it. (It's "limited" because it applies only to situations of catching and possession and out-of-bounds or touchdown calls, and never on judgments of interference or holding infractions.)

"I think we've made progress week by week," adds Pinchbeck. "The positive thing is being able to change obvious mistakes. In the New England-New York Jets game, two errors involving possible fumbles were corrected that, if allowed to stand, would have had an impact on the result."

In a recent league meeting, Art McNally, the chief of officials, reported to the owners on Limited Instant Replay and encountered no strong sentiment against it. The owners, of course, have to ratify it for further use at the spring meeting of the NFL.

Rod construction is more than just hobby

By DAVID CORTES
Amarillo Globe News
AMARILLO, Texas (AP) - For 12 years Milton Billingsley has designed and crafted custom fishing rods to meet his customers' specifications.

In less than a week, Billingsley can transpire several strands of thread into colorful, elongated patterns. If properly cared for, a custom made rod could become a part of someone's family heirloom.

Billingsley uses threads to wrap the butt on a rod. His works include such designs as the U.S. flag, University of Texas color patterns, fish patterns, diamond and chevron patterns, and the St. John's cross, the most popular of his orders.

"I sell no factory rods," said Billingsley, a retired postal worker since 1980. "Everything is made to exact specifications in length and action according to what that fisherman might want to use it for."

Word of Billingsley's work passes quickly among his customers. He's crafted rods for several out-of-state customers, and hides no secret of his trade.

"The whole secret of rod making is where the guides on the 360-degree axis of a rod are placed," he said.

For example, if a rod is bent down, and the line touches it, it wouldn't be in equal stress distribution, he said.

An avid angler, Billingsley decided 12 years ago to make his own rod from a kit, and he's been hooked ever since.

After joining the National Association of Rod Crafters, an association of 600 members, his business started to boom, and he now designs 50 rods a year.

But that's not to say Billingsley is burdened by nine-to-five hours.

"If I want to go fishing for two weeks, I'm closed," he said.

Prices for a custom made rod range from $40 to $160. A customer, he said, must decide from the type of rod (trotting, casting or spinning), the physical makeup (fiberglass, graphite or boron) the specific type of guides (about eight to choose from) and an endless number of designs to choose from.

But selection of a specific rod isn't difficult. Billingsley has pictures of all of the designs he's made. He also offers suggestions and advice to make customers' decisions easier.

Billingsley said there's a big difference between custom made rods and those sold in discount stores.

"Say a guy is in a boat and wants to cast sixty feet. With a custom made rod, his cast carries straight. A store bought rod can be five or ten feet off in either direction," he said.

"A tournament fisherman with his custom made rod can cast 60 feet with little effort, while a beginner who uses a cheaper rod casts only 45 feet, and he'll cast twice as hard to do it."

Most of Billingsley's customers are tournament fishermen or people who are serious about their fishing.

Holidays, anniversaries and birthdays are the time Billingsley is busiest. Other than the five to 10 rods he usually has for sale in his shop, Billingsley said he needs at least five or six days in advance to craft a special design.

It takes five days' curing time for colors to be preserved on the wrapping threads. The final top finish, he said, takes 48 hours.

Nuptials repeated Saturday

Standing beneath an archway of white and red carnations, greenery and baby's breath, Lori Lynn Albracht and Michael D. Page recited nuptials Saturday morning in Wesley United Methodist Church.

Officiating at the wedding ceremony was the Rev. Lanny Wheeler, pastor.

The church altar was decorated by white and red carnations, two spiral candelabra and two 15-branch candelabra. Tapers were arranged along the communion rail.

Deann Harris of Hereford served as the bride's maid of honor and the groom's son, Cody Page, was best man.

Michael Albracht was a groomsman and guests were escorted by T.J. Head, Matt

Bromlow, Paul Ramirez and Chad Redwine.

The bride's nieces, Ericha and Nichole Albracht, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Duane Albracht, served as flower girls and Cookie Reyes lit candles.

Principal wedding selections included "My Only Love", "God, A Woman and A Man" and "Friends and Friends Forever" vocalized by Darla Stengel.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a two-piece white suit and navy blue blouse. She carried a fan adorned with blue and red carnations, baby's breath and blue and red ribbons. She also wore diamond earrings.

The honor attendant wore a red tea-length dress and carried a fan designed similar to the bride's fan.

The flower girls carried miniature fans and wore coordinating pinafore dresses designed and made by Jill Gregory.

Leaving for a wedding trip to St. Marteen in the Caribbean Islands, the bride wore a denim skirt with a plaid blouse.

The couple will make their home at 326 Centre.

The bride graduated from Hereford High School in 1982 and attended West Texas State University and Amarillo College. She is presently employed at the Hereford Brand as a compositionist.

The bridegroom graduated from Monzano High School in 1964 in Albuquerque, N.M. He attended A.A.N.M. Military Institute and received his bachelor of science degree in agriculture from Texas A&I University. He is a member of Alpha Gamma Rho Fraternity. He is currently employed at Tri-State Chemical as a salesman.

Examining New Skirting

L'Allegra Study Club members have been busy making new skirts for the Project Christmas Card canisters which are located at several local businesses. Money received from the annual event will be used to purchase diagnostic equipment for Deaf Smith General Hospital. Contributors will have their names printed in a full-page Christmas greeting which will appear in The Hereford Brand's special Christmas edition. Looking over the skirting are club members, Mary Kay McQuigg, at left, and Jan Weishaar, who is also serving as the 1986 Project Christmas Card co-chairman.

Christian music to be used during Y fitness classes

Susan Marnell, fitness director of the Hereford YMCA, has announced that fitness classes in December will be choreographed to Christian music. Marnell says, "This is a continuing effort on the part of the Hereford YMCA to maintain our founding goals of spiritual growth through physical well-being."

The songs of popular Christian Rock singers will be interwoven with contemporary secular music chosen for values expressed in the lyrics.

A special addition to the Hereford YMCA fitness class schedule will be 10 a.m. Saturday class. Participants enrolled in weekday classes will have no extra charge for the Saturday morning workout.

Due to the holidays, Marnell has canceled classes on Dec. 25-27 and Jan. 1-3.

Plant shallots for spring crop

By Polly Fisher

DEAR POLLY — Is it possible to grow shallots at home? I've never seen the seeds advertised in my seed catalogs. I love to cook with them. — MARYANN

DEAR MARYANN — It is certainly possible to grow shallots at home. Since you live in a fairly warm climate as you mentioned in your letter, you can plant shallots now, let them grow until frost, then allow them to winter over. In the spring, the shallots will start to grow again and you'll have a bumper crop of delicious bulbs for cooking. In colder climates, shallots may also be planted in the fall, but early enough to allow them to get a good start before the ground freezes. Shallots can also be planted in the spring.

The bulbs should be planted four inches apart and an inch deep. Next summer, harvest the shallots when the green tops have started to die down.

You can purchase shallot bulbs for growing from Kalmia Farm, P.O. Box 3881, Charlottesville, VA 22903, or Southern Exposure Seed Exchange, P.O. Box 158, North Garden, VA 22959. Both companies offer a variety of types. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — When it's time to replace the box of baking soda in your refrigerator with a fresh one, don't dump the entire box down the sink or garbage disposal all at one time. Keep it nearby and use it a little at a time for scouring the sink. It does a good job of cleaning and leaves the sink and your dishcloth smelling sweet. Baking soda won't scratch the finish, either. — M.L.

DEAR POLLY — I love the look of unpolished fingernails, but mine are so weak they break if I don't keep a couple of coats of polish on them. Is there any way I can strengthen my nails without using nail polish? — MRS. B.L.

DEAR MRS. B.L. — Of course a good diet is essential to strong nails (and glossy hair and glowing skin, too!), so you might look over your eating habits to see if you're neglecting some essential nutrients. However, the best thing I know of for strengthening unadorned nails is to give them a colorless base coat. This will not only strengthen the nails, but give them a slight, but attractive, shine.

Even if you only use colorless polish on your nails, be sure to leave them totally without polish for a day or so every few weeks. This will let the nails breathe naturally, which is necessary to maintain strong, beautiful nails. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I receive quite a few letters from family and friends who do not live near me. My letter-writing has become much easier since I started making notes on the envelope as I read their letters, noting questions to answer as well as things that come to mind I want to tell or ask the writer. This really does help when you have several letters to answer. I also write "answered" on the envelope when I've mailed my reply. — MRS. R.B.

DEAR MRS. R.B. — Your method certainly makes answering those letters more of the delight it should be than the chore some folks think it is! Your helpful Pointer earns you the Pointer of the Week award, a copy of my book "Polly's Pointers: 1081 Helpful Hints for Making Everything Last Longer." Others who would like this book can order it for $6.50. Make check payable to POLLY'S POINTERS and send to POLLY'S POINTERS, Box 1216, Dept. 55, Cincinnati, OH 45201. — POLLY Polly will send you a Polly Dollar ($1) if she uses your favorite Pointer, Peeve or Problem in her column. Write POLLY'S POINTERS in care of this newspaper.

Thames accepted into school

Dr. David LaBrie, chairman of the department of biology and geosciences at West Texas State University, reports that all eight of the university's pre-pharmacy students were accepted in the pharmacy school of Southwestern Oklahoma

State University this fall.

Among those accepted was Laura D. Thames, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Thames of Hereford. She is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hank Williams, also of Hereford.

Quarterback-place kicker George Blanda played 26 years in the professional leagues, scoring a record 2,002 points.

A member of the House of Representatives is paid $75,100 annually, while the speaker of the house gets $97,900.

Texas holiday baking just wouldn't be the same without Texas pecans. Texas give pecans as gifts, serve them at parties and bake them in fruitcakes and other holiday cooking traditions.

The Texas pecan tradition goes back a long way. Indians who roamed Texas first ate the fruit of these native trees and were helped through many a long hard winter by its supply of protein, minerals and oil. As settlers arrived, they too incorporated the rich tasting nuts into their diet. Since harvest took place during the autumn, pecans naturally became a part of the holiday traditions. This custom has continued to present time.

Many people have great family stories and traditions about pecans. Whole families would sit and crack open pecans roasting them in the fireplace. They would usually go out before Thanksgiving to gather the pecans for their holiday cooking.

This season more than 60 million pounds of pecans are being harvested. The Texas harvest will have pecans from both native and improved trees. "Improved" does not necessarily mean better. It refers to the varieties that have been developed and cultivated in recent years for the commercial market.

Native pecans originated here. More than half of this year's crop is expected from native trees. They produce a nut that is high in oil which gives pecans their rich taste. They are usually smaller than the improved variety and they have harder shells.

When selecting whole pecans look for nuts that are free of mold, holes or cracks. They should not rattle when shaken. A rattle indicates that the nut meat has shriveled. Shelled nutmeats should be plump and uniform in size and color.

Because pecans are high in polyunsaturated fat, they should be stored carefully to prevent shrinkage and drying out. Refrigeration and freezing helps pecans retain flavor and freshness. Whole pecans will keep two years or more when frozen. For more information on Texas pecans or a free "Get Cracking" pecan cookbook write the Texas Department of Agriculture, 3652 N. Dixie, Odessa Texas 79762.

A Flair for Design

If you're looking for something unusual to decorate walls, perhaps you may find it in Grandmother's trunk. We are finding out that old-fashioned hand crocheted doilies are experiencing a revival in their decorative use. Once they were considered protection for the upholstery on chairs and sofas and table covers. Today we frame many of them for use as wall decor. Framing is an excellent way to protect delicate pieces and it enhances their intricate stitching and fine quality. A brass name plaque can assure that future generations will remember the special lady who worked so beautifully and tirelessly creating this special work of art.

We specialize in needleworks of all kinds at FINISHING TOUCHES. Come see us at 501 E. Park and we'll be glad to help you.

Bestselling non-fiction books are available this week at the Deaf Smith County Library. They are "Pat Nixon" the untold story by Julie Nixon Eisenhower and "Across China" by Peter Jenkins.

Pat Nixon is instantly recognizable anywhere in the world, but very few people have ever known what goes on behind her elegant and attractive public face. Even if she had not become First Lady, Pat Nixon's story would have been fascinating. Born in a miner's shack in Nevada in the dead of winter, she was orphaned before she was out of high school and left with the care of two brothers, the house and the family truck farm. Fiercely independent, she enjoyed herself enormously in New York but finally there was enough money for her to return to California and college where she carried a full course load as well as juggling several jobs. After graduating, she accepted a teaching position in Whittier, where she met a young lawyer named Richard Nixon.

The rest, literally, is history. We all know the public facts, the landmarks of Richard Nixon's long political career, but only Julie Nixon Eisenhower could show us the vital and less-well-known role Pat played in the Nixon story. It is not only Pat's story, it is also the story of an extraordinary family. We see what it is like to grow up in politics. The flesh-and-blood, three-dimensional character in these pages is a tribute both to Pat Nixon who lived this life and to Julie Nixon Eisenhower who was able to write it.

In "Across China," you can join Peter Jenkins on a trip to Shangri-La and gaze across a land that few Westerners have ever seen. Stand with him as he bargains in sign language at the Lhasa bazaar while marveling Tibetans tug at his red beard. You can also travel with Peter and his interpreter, Ranying, across China to the vast northern grasslands of Inner Mongolia.

"Across China" is the fascinating journal of a don't-fence-me-in American, far away from home. Peter Jenkins lives with his wife, Barbara and their three children on a farm in Tennessee. They are co-authors of THE WALK WEST and THE ROAD UNSEEN.

Other new books available this week at the library are "The Cosby Wit:" his life and humor by Bill Ader, "More Than An Ark on Ararat" by James B. Irwin, and "I Touched The Future..." by Robert T. Hohler, which is the story of Christa McAuliffe.

KIDS RETURN, PARENTS DON'T OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Adult children may tend to move in with their parents, but the reverse isn't true, according to a recent survey.

The survey, made for ERA Real Estate by Opinion Research Inc., polled more than 400 real estate brokers. Twenty-two percent of the brokers said they had seen an increase in the number of grown children returning home. The trend was most noticeable in New York where higher real estate prices stop some young people from affording a home. There, 64 percent of the brokers noted the trend.

Only 4 percent of the brokers nationwide perceived an increase in senior citizens moving to the homes of their children.

Alternate holiday foods

You don't need to give up favorite holiday foods to follow today's dietary guidelines, says a Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service nutritionist.

Dr. Alice Hunt notes that dietary guidelines from the U.S. Departments of Agriculture and Health and Human Services, and those from major health organizations, recommend reducing consumption of fat, sugar and salt while increase the amount of fiber in our diets.

"Making an effort to eat nutritiously doesn't have to put a damper on your holiday season," she adds, "since relatively simple modifications can reduce the fat and total calories in many favorite foods, without significantly affecting their taste."

She says sugar can be reduced by a third in many holiday desserts. If a recipe calls for 1 cup sugar, for example, use 2/3 cup. This works best in fruit-based recipes and in making puddings and custards. The sugar in cookies and cakes can also be reduced, but requires some experimenting to find an appropriate level.

Likewise, fat can be reduced by a third in gravies, sauces, puddings and quick breads.

The nutritionist suggests omitting salt or reducing it by half and adding more herbs and spices to increase flavor.

To increase fiber intake, substitute whole grain flour for 1/4 to 1/2 of the refined flour in holiday baking. If a recipe calls for 3 cups all-purpose flour, use 3/4 whole grain flour and 2 1/4 cups all-purpose flour.

Yogurt or cottage cheese may be substituted for sour cream in some recipes for sauces, dips, dressings and main dishes.

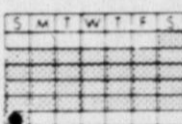

She also recommends using skim rather than whole milk and in some recipes calling for whipped cream, substituting evaporated milk.

"Take the time to modify favorite holiday recipes this year and you'll have a healthier alternative to hand down as part of your family tradition," Hunt remarks.

DR. GOTT Letter raises serious questions

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Valium, the No. 1 prescribed drug, what does it cure? What does it help? Nothing! So, UP YOURS, you drug pusher. UP YOURS! See you in court! Fool!

DEAR READERS — These unprofessional comments on the stationery of the Dopps Chiropractic Health Clinic in Wichita, Kans., seemed to represent the views of crackpots. Therefore, I wrote a personal letter to the organization requesting clarification. I asked whether their opinions fairly represented the Dopps Chiropractic staff and the chiropractors of Wichita. Their written response was not surprising and, once again, consisted of, "UP YOURS, drug pusher!"

To begin with, Valium is useful in alleviating anxiety. Although, in my opinion, it has been prescribed too freely by health professionals, it is an effective medicine when taken according to the manufacturer's directions for short-term treatment of many conditions, including alcohol withdrawal, painful muscle contractions, spasticity (from cerebral palsy), acute convulsions and anxiety disorders. It is also used to reduce tension in patients undergoing surgery. Valium is helpful in preventing the discomfort of cardioversion, when electrical shocks are delivered to regulate a failing heart. So, like most medicines, Valium is not meant to cure, but to control troublesome symptoms. It can be extremely effective when used under close medical supervision.

Second, I — like other practicing doctors — am licensed to prescribe a wide variety of drugs. We are not "drug pushers." In fact, my responsible colleagues and I take great pains to tailor our prescribing to each patient and explain the reasonable effects, complications and hazards of the prescription and non-prescription medications we recommend. We do not deal with, prescribe or sell illicit substances.

Finally, the Dopps reaction seems particularly crude and childish. I hope that the Dopps staff does not treat patients in a similarly unprofessional manner. I want my patients to receive appropriate and courteous care. I daresay that most chiropractors, if asked, would express the same wish for their own patients. I believe that vulgarity and name-calling do not reflect well on the motivations and competency of the Dopps clinic. I am reminded that, unfortunately, there is a lunatic fringe in every profession.

Perhaps other chiropractors, some of whom have been kind enough to write me their support, would be embarrassed by the Dopps display — one that certainly does not help the image of the chiropractic profession as a whole.

I've decided to address the Dopps comments in the hope that I can educate patients into being cautious about using health services that are provided by apparently unstable practitioners. I don't choose to be intimidated by chiropractors — or M.D.s, for that matter. I hope that my consumer-oriented column will help patients resist intimidation, too.

DEAR DR. GOTT — This problem started when my son was a toddler. He started rubbing women's legs and, at the same time, always managed to get his pelvis on a hard surface. Now, at age 5, he goes after legs of any kind: male, female, clothed, bare, children, adults, even dolls and dogs.

My husband and I are at a loss about how to handle the situation. We've tried talking to him and punishing him, but it's getting worse. I'm afraid to let him out of my sight when other kids are around for fear that he will ask to "play with their legs." He's adopted — could this be something he inherited? We know something's wrong, but don't know what to do next. I'm embarrassed to discuss this with his pediatrician.

DEAR READER — Your son appears to be developing a fetish for legs — that is, an inappropriate sexually-oriented obsession. This condition can probably be helped by counseling. Ask the pediatrician to become actively involved in this problem. What you need now is professional help, don't be embarrassed to ask for it. The problem has progressed beyond the point where it can be managed by the family alone.

DEAR DR. GOTT — I swim daily for fitness. How can I prevent the terrible haystack condition that my hair is in? It also is developing a greenish tinge. What can I do about this? Variation here, but we can't blame our woes entirely on the weather. Still, it's hard not to be depressed after a 7-day nor'easter ... or to be elated by a bright sunny morning.

DEAR DR. GOTT — Can you get septicemia from poor living conditions? What happens if it is left untreated?

DEAR READER — Septicemia is a bacterial infection that is spread from an infected portion of the body through the bloodstream. Septicemia is often fatal unless treated with antibiotics. The illness is not necessarily a consequence of poor living conditions, although poor personal hygiene may allow the infection to begin and spread. Septicemia can be started by a minor (or major) injury, a surgical procedure or a longstanding urinary infection.

If you're having an operation, you should know all you can about it. Dr. Gott's new Health Report, AN INFORMED APPROACH TO SURGERY, covers everything from second opinions to outpatient surgery. For your copy, send $1 and your name and address to P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to mention the title.

Benefit Beans

Leona Sowell and Lucy Martin sift through part of the 200 pounds of beans the Senior Citizens sorted for a beans and cornbread supper to benefit Girlstown. The supper will be from 5:30 until 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Hereford High School cafeteria. A minimum donation of $3 is requested and children under 6 years of age eat free.

TODAY'S BARBS BY PHIL PASTORET

Fairy tale for grownups: Once upon a time a magazine printed a holiday recipe in time for you to use it yourself that same year.

It's said that there are definite night-people and day-people types, but the truth is that most of us wander around in a sort of twilight zone.

According to Ralph Waldo Emerson, "The grandest homage we can pay to truth is to use it."

Preparations Being Made

Suzanne Hewitt-Knorpp with the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum in Canyon and Becca White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alward White of Amarillo, are shown preparing for the Santa bean bag toss, one of the events planned during the Christmas open house Dec. 4-7. Mrs. Knorpp is a former Hereford resident.

The oldest known ball game and team game is polo which, though of Tibetan origin, was first recorded in Persia in 525 B.C.

The name "Liberty Bell" was first used in reference to the large bell in Independence Hall, Philadelphia in the year 1848. It appeared in an article written by Benson J. Lossing.

Annual open house slated in Canyon

The Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum will celebrate its 10th annual old fashioned Christmas Open House from 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday and Friday and from 2 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 7, according to Suzanne Hewitt-Knorpp, who is coordinating the event.

"This year's entertainment includes an expanded list of activities and games for children," she said. "For kids of all ages, there'll be 'Reindeer Ring Toss,' 'Snowflake Penny Toss,' 'Dunk-the-Scrooge,' 'Decorate the Tree,' and 'Enchanted Forest' games. For six-year-olds and under there's the 'Jingle Bell Jump' 'Santa Bean Bag Toss,' and 'Chim Chimney,' and for ten-year-olds and older, there's a Turkey Shoot activity.

A "parent corral" will be provided, so that the children can play the games without worrying about their parents.

Tickets for these activities are 10 cents, and games will cost one or two tickets, said Knorpp. Face painting will be done again this year, also. All children's activities will take place in the basement of the main building. Santa will be in his sleigh, in the Main hall, and his elves will assist the kids in telling Santa their Christmas wishes.

In the new Petroleum Wing, various entertainment has been arranged for adults and young people. Pioneer crafts demonstrations will be grouped around the oil derrick in the Derrick Room, and from the balcony, carolers will perform every thirty minutes.

The Village will be decorated in pioneer fashion, with yarn dolls, candy canes, and greenery. Cookies will be served from the kitchen of the "four-room house."

This year's coordinating committee chairmen are: Kim Young, special events; Mary Clugy, greeters; Claudia Russell, hostesses/hosts; Carolyn Sherrod, entertainment; Joy Fassauer and Roxie Moser, children's game area; Betty Burtz, craft demonstrations, and Helen Fassauer, servers.

The old fashioned Christmas Open House is open to the general public at no charge.

Visitors welcomed at council meeting

Members of the Extension Homemakers Council met in regular session Monday in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library.

Chairman Johnnie Messer opened the meeting and asked the members to join her in reciting the T.E.H.A. prayer. The pledge of Allegiance to the American and Texas flags followed.

Roll call showed nine clubs represented with five having 100 percent attendance. They included Bippus, Cultural, Draper, North Hereford and Wyche Extension clubs.

Messer welcomed visitors, Tom and Argen Draper, and Mr. Draper gave the opening exercise entitled "A Visit To Grandma's House." He was the guest of the Wyche Club, whose members served as hostesses.

The chairman gave a report on the results of the cake walk held at the Bull Barn and a bazaar booth. She extended thanks to all who had helped with the two projects.

Sherri Blackwell, recreation committee chairman, reminded everyone of the Christmas covered dish luncheon and party planned

Dec. 8 at the library. All club members were encouraged to attend.

Beverly Harder, county extension agent, requested all officers of the council and clubs to attend the officers training Tuesday at the library. She also reminded the group of the ladies program to be held in conjunction with the Vegetable Growers Convention. This meeting is planned Jan. 20 at the Community Center. Further information will be sent out from the office.

The nominating committee presented a slate of officers. They included Johnny Messer to serve as chairman; Carol Odum, vice chairman; Maudette Smith, recording secretary; Kathy Hammock, corresponding secretary; Mary Carter, treasurer; and Grace Covington, reporter. The report was accepted and the officers were elected for 1987.

Plans were made for the district training meeting to be held in Hereford Jan. 22, 1987 at the Community Center. The Council will be in charge of the arrangements and special duties will be assigned.

Messer appointed Kate Bradley, Bertha Dettmann and Edith Hunter to the auditing committee.

Refreshments were served by members of the Wyche Extension Homemakers Club from a table decorated with a Thanksgiving motif of Pilgrims and harvest materials.

Social Security Benefits

People in the Hereford area who wish to file for any of the various benefits offered by the Social Security Administration may do so by telephone, according to Jim Talbot, District Manager for the Social Security Administration in Amarillo.

"This special service is being offered to the public to provide a more efficient, confidential means of filing a claim for benefits. There are several advantages for the public. Persons who file by telephone can do so from the privacy of their home, without waiting in long lines at the courthouse or making the long drive to Amarillo," said Talbot.

"Filing a claim for Social Security or Supplemental Security Income benefits by phone is easy," Talbot said. "Simply call the Amarillo Social Security Office at 806-376-2241 and tell the employee that you wish to file a claim. Our appointment clerk will set up an appointment for a representative to call you back. The application will be completed by phone and mailed to you for review and signature. Any required documents can be returned by mail to be certified and placed in your file. Your original documents will be returned to you by mail."

If you have any questions about filing a claim for benefits, please call the Amarillo Social Security Office at the number shown above. We will be glad to answer any question you may have.

To remove loose or old veneer, Wood magazine suggests you start by working an edge loose with a thin-blade putty knife or drywall-taping knife. Then, squirt vinegar under the veneer to help release the old glue (give it a few minutes). The veneer should pop off in large sections.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE

DENVER (AP) — Water is the most commonly found and easily recognized substance on earth.

It covers 70 percent of the planet, and commonly occurs in any of three forms — liquid, solid or gas. It's produced continuously. About 4,200 billion gallons a day (bgd) cascade over the continental United States. Some 1,400 bgd are available for use; the rest evaporates. According to the American Water Works Association, the United States uses nearly 106 bgd.

Water is completely recyclable. There is as much available today as there was centuries ago.

Wet fields damage sugar beet crop

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Harvest operations made some progress the past week in western areas of Texas although scattered rains at mid-week again caused problems, said Dr. Zerle L. Carpenter, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton harvesting was getting into full swing in the Panhandle and South Plains while sorghum harvesting remained active, Carpenter said. However, rains again brought delays, particularly in the Rolling Plains and West Central areas where a lot of cotton and sorghum also remained in the field.

Farmers in far western Texas and the Trans-Pecos region also have a lot of cotton to harvest due to rain delays. Crop quality and prospective yields have continued to decline, Carpenter said.

Much of the peanut crop also remained to be harvested in West Central Texas due to wet fields, while harvesting continued active in Southwest Texas. Peanut harvesting in central areas is essentially complete, but rain delays continued to slow harvesting in the Upper Coast regions where some soybeans also are still in the field.

Wet fields and recent cold weather have damaged the sugar beet crop in the Panhandle and South Plains — about half the crop remains to be harvested. At the other end of the state, sugar cane harvesting remained active in the Rio Grande Valley, with good yields, and carrots harvesting has started in the Winter Garden area of Southwest Texas. Harvesting of peanuts, cabbage, and pickling cucumbers continued in that region.

Pecan harvesting continued over the state and is about 75 percent complete despite recent rain delays. Although yields are about 40 percent of normal, the crop is of excellent quality, Carpenter said.

Stockmen over the state have started feeding hay to livestock with the recent cold weather. Due to a bumper hay harvest this year, supplies are excellent throughout the state; a little harvesting continued in some eastern counties. Livestock are in good condition going into the winter season, and many are getting good grazing from small grain pastures, said Carpenter.

Reports from the district Extension directors showed these conditions.

PANHANDLE: Farmers made some progress with cotton and sorghum harvesting despite a few rain delays. About 80 percent of the sorghum crop has been harvested while the cotton harvest is just getting started. Peanut harvesting is about complete and the sugar beet harvest is at the halfway point; the recent hard freeze damaged some beets. Wheat is making excellent progress.

SOUTH PLAINS: Although light rains caused some delays, cotton and sorghum harvesting is in full swing. Pecan harvesting also is active across the region. Most producers have completed planting wheat, with early fields making excellent progress.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton harvesting is under way but scattered rains are continuing to cause some delays. Most counties will only have a fair to poor harvest although good yields are expected in a few locations. Wheat is making good growth but greenbugs, grain mites and leaf rust are causing some problems. Stocker cattle continue to be shipped into the region to graze wheat.

NORTH CENTRAL: Farmers are continuing to put the finishing touches on peanut, cotton and sorghum harvesting in a number of counties. Wheat and oats continue to make good progress, with greenbugs causing some problems. Livestock feeding has started due to the recent cold weather.

FAR WEST: Cotton farmers are looking for open weather to harvest their crop. Boll weevil control efforts are under way in the El Paso Valley on the Mexican side of the Rio Grande, where weevils were discovered recently. A good pecan harvest continues. Livestock and deer are in excellent condition.

WEST CENTRAL: Farmers are trying to harvest sorghum and cotton although scattered rains are causing some delays again. Yields of both crops are better than expected considering the adverse fall weather. Peanut and pecan harvesting also is active. Wheat and oats are providing good grazing for livestock which are in excellent condition.

CENTRAL: Farmers are trying to complete peanut harvesting; prolonged wet conditions have extended the harvest season and reduced yields and grades. About 75 percent of the pecan crop has been harvested; yields are short but quality is good. Hessian fly damage is heavy in some wheat. Some livestock have suffered prussic acid poisoning from grazing freeze-damaged Johnsongrass and sudan.

Surge of bankruptcies expected by FmHA under new federal law

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Farmers Home Administration has instructed its field offices to read up on the new Family Farmer Bankruptcy Act and be prepared for an influx of bankruptcy applications by hard-pressed borrowers.

Congress created a new chapter in federal law allowing farmers holding as much as $1.5 million in debt to declare bankruptcy and seek protection from creditors under a streamlined procedure similar to those already used by small businesses.

The bill creating a new Chapter 12 of the bankruptcy code was signed by President Reagan on Oct. 27 and went into effect the day before Thanksgiving.

Although the new law applies to farm debt regardless of lender, the FmHA is one of the largest, with a total farm loan portfolio of about $30 billion. Of 274,145 active borrowers on Sept. 30, 79,320 or 28 percent were behind on their payments.

In the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, "acceleration" notices were sent to 7,593 borrowers demanding payment, a step toward foreclosure if some arrangement is not forthcoming.

The new bankruptcy law could turn into a shelter for some of those FmHA borrowers who otherwise would be faced with foreclosure.

Vance L. Clark, administrator of the FmHA, often called lender of last resort for farmers who can't get credit elsewhere, notified agency state directors in a memo dated Nov. 24 that Agriculture Department lawyers have gone over the new law with agency officials.

"We have been advised that the regional attorneys should be familiar with Chapter 12 and can advise field offices on issues which may arise concerning Chapter 12," Vance told the state officials.

Under the new law, a bona fide family farmer burdened with debt — owed to banks and others, as well as FmHA — can file an initial bankruptcy petition. The farmer must follow the petition with a plan within 90 days, and a confirmation hearing must be held within 45 days after the plan is submitted.

"While extensions of both of these dates are legally possible, if the courts adhere to these dates, FmHA must make sure that it timely receives and reviews the plan and provides OGC (the department's office of general counsel) with any objections to it," Clark said.

The memo included a six-page explanation of the new law. It said FmHA can expect many cases under the new Chapter 12 provisions that would have been filed under Chapter 11 in the past or, in some cases under Chapter 7. However, the agency said it had no idea how many cases might develop.

"We also have no way of knowing how many cases will be filed under Chapter 12 by farmers who otherwise would not have filed bankruptcy at all," the memo said.

State officials were also told FmHA does not expect any greater losses than if Chapter 12 had not been created.

The memo said a family farmer is defined as "an individual or a closely held corporation or partnership whose aggregate debts do not exceed $1.5 million, with 80 percent of the debt arising out of a farming operation."

Further, if the farmer is an individual, 50 percent of his gross in-

Tips on keeping top-notch herd

COLLEGE STATION — To stay in the beef cattle business, a cow-calf producer has to maintain a top-notch cow herd.

To do this, he must select top replacement heifers to take the place of poorer producing cows culled from the herd each year, points out Dr. Larry L. Boleman, beef cattle specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

To make rapid and accurate improvement in the beef herd, use all information available to get the maximum selection response. Pedigree, performance information and visual appraisal are generally used in selection of heifers, Boleman points out.

Pedigrees provide family information and generally tell you what an animal should do because of what is known about the parents and their performance.

Individual performance information is the most relevant requirement to effectively select beef cattle for genetic progress, notes the specialist.

Visual appraisal is an important tool for selecting heifers for many functional economic traits such as muscling, frame, structural soundness, udder and general female reproductive characteristics.

The most economically important beef cattle production trait is that of reproduction, Boleman emphasizes. The young heifer has to sexually develop and calve as a two-year-old and continue to calve every year of her productive life to be considered a proficient breeder.

To select a breeding beef heifer for an economically productive mother cow, Boleman offers these tips:

1. Study the pedigrees and performance information on the cows of the heifers in question.

2. Select only those heifers from cows with demonstrated reproductive ability, longevity, and proven milking and mothering ability.

3. Select heifers on the basis of sound quality and functional conformation.

According to Boleman, an efficient and functional cow must do the following:

—Grow quickly and reach sexual maturity at an early age.

—Breed early and produce, unassisted, a live, salable calf every 12 months.

—Wean off a calf whose weight at seven months of age equals 60 percent of the cow's weight and test pregnant at weaning time.

—Wean off at least 360 percent of her own body weight by her eighth birthday.

—Be quiet and easy to work around but maternal enough to bear, protect and mother calves with little or no assistance.

New cropping system may boost profits. Farmers in Missouri are experimenting with a new idea for planting soybeans called "relay intercropping." They are trying to harvest two crops in one season without using the more conventional, but risky doublecropping system. Doublecropping can be risky if an area can get too hot and dry at planting, hindering the crop from emerging. Also, doublecropping crops may mature later, adding the risk of frost. Intercropping gets around these problems by planting the soybeans into standing green wheat. In last year's experiment, the intercropped beans matured two weeks before doublecropped beans. Three years of testing have shown intercropped bean yields equalled or surpassed those of doublecropping, with minus wheat losses. Experts believe intercropping may be a favorable alternative for areas where doublecropping is not successful.

ALLERGIES ARE MYSTERIOUS

DENVER (AP) - The fundamental causes of allergies are still not known to medical science, though allergies clearly tend to run in families.

But, according to medical authorities at the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine here, non-hereditary factors also play a part in human allergic reactions.

Among the remaining basic mysteries about allergies:

- Why an individual becomes sensitive to some substances and not to others.

- Why some allergy attacks occur immediately after exposure to an offending substance, while others take minutes, hours or longer.

Think ahead when storing leftovers

Some families enjoy leftover turkey from Thanksgiving and in information surveys many families report enjoying the leftovers better than the holiday meal itself. The key to using leftovers of any kind effectively is to plan ahead when packaging.

If your family prefers turkey sandwiches and creamed turkey dishes, you can freeze the leftovers in slices and small pieces. If possible, cover the slices and pieces with broth or gravy to prevent contact with air. This also lengthens storage life. Package in air-tight, meal-sized packages or containers and freeze quickly. Frozen turkey doesn't improve with age, and it doesn't retain good eating quality for as long as some other meats. If you're going to freeze turkey, remember this storage guide: one month for slices or pieces, six months for slices or pieces covered with broth or gravy and six months for turkey casserole dishes.

Tasty casseroles can be prepared by combining cubed turkey with vegetables, sauce, seasonings, cooked spaghetti, macaroni, noodles or converted rice. Regular rice and potatoes become mushy after freezing. Prepare the turkey casserole, cool it quickly and place it in a meal-sized freezing container. Cover tightly with moisture-vapor resistant wrap and freeze immediately.

By planning for leftovers, you can spread the enjoyment of turkey over a longer period of time and save food preparation time later during the busy holiday season.

KEN ROGERS

Ken Rogers named as director

Ken Rogers, president of Lone Star Agency, Inc. of Hereford, has been appointed a member of the Hankamer School of Business Advisory Board at Baylor University.

Rogers and five other new members of the 33-member board attended their first board meeting at the school recently. They were welcomed by Dr. Richard Scott, dean of Hankamer.

The board meets twice a year, in the spring and fall, to discuss the school's financial and academic condition and to assess future direction and development.

The majority of the 33 board members are Baylor graduates, representing the world of commerce, banking and industry in a seven state area nationwide. They are appointed to serve a three-year term on the board, and can be reappointed to a second term.

Rogers received an associated arts degree in 1959 from Southwest Junior College in Uvalde, Texas, and a bachelor of business administration degree from Baylor in 1961.

He has also served as president of the Hereford Rotary Club, the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce and the Friend of the Library. He now serves as the national area director for the Association of Redshaw Insurance Agency System, Inc.

He is married to the former Lucy Jane Hunt. They have two children, Melinda, of Wilmore, Kentucky, and Blair, a sophomore at Baylor.

CANCER PROJECTS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A total of 44 cancer research projects in 12 states are being underwritten by the National Foundation for Cancer Research.

New York is the leading state for the projects with 13, followed by California, 8, and Massachusetts, 5.

The NFCR, a private, non-profit organization, says it has allocated more than $50 million to cancer research over the past 10 years.

EAST IS EAST SOMETIMES

SKOKIE, Ill. (AP) — Highway signs may sometimes be misleading, according to the editors of the 1987 Rand McNally Road Atlas.

Designations such as "west" or "south" on highway signs only mean that throughout its length the highway is predominately an east-west or north-south route. For example, out of Chicago, a motorist following the "I-94 West" to Milwaukee would actually be traveling about 87 miles almost straight north.

Reminiscing good therapy for elderly during holidays

The simple things can often bring the most joy at Christmas - especially for elderly people confined to nursing homes and other institutions.

Clinical instructor Mary Slater of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center School of Nursing said that talking about past Christmases can do a great deal to brighten the holidays for the elderly. Reminiscing, whether with other residents, or with visitors allows the elderly to take a trip outside of where they are now to past happy times, she said.

"It can bring a great deal of joy for people to remember a favorite Christmas, their first toy or a typical holiday dinner," Slater said. "When you consider the amount of history these people carry in their memories, it can be startling what you can learn about an era or an area."

Slater also said with the large kitchen facilities available in nursing homes, holiday baking is another option to draw residents into the Christmas spirit.

"Everyone has a need to feel helpful and to give at this time of year. Baking candies and cookies to give to the staff, visitors or some other group fulfills that basic need."

Not only does giving the baked goods away provide a holiday feeling, the very odor of baking cookies and cakes can add to the holiday feeling, she said.

"The smell of fresh baked goodies and holiday table decorations and table clothes can help remove the dull institutional atmosphere of the nursing home that the residents live with year around," Slater said.

Slater said that family and friends can find out the older person's favorite holiday recipe in advance and surprise them with the treat.

Another way to involve residents in the holiday spirit is to organize a group to repair toys to be given to needy children's programs, she said.

Slater said the staff can also add to the festive mood by commenting on cards or gifts that residents may receive and by wearing Christmas buttons or corsage.

Many churches, social and civic groups often visit nursing homes to sing carols or read Christmas stories, Slater said. Individuals wishing to participate in some form of Christmas programs with the elderly should contact a facilities administrator or program coordinator to see how they can fit into already scheduled activities or to volunteer to organize a Christmas program.

"The most important thing is to inspire as many residents as possible to get involved," she said. "To make the Christmas season special, residents have to feel like it isn't just another day."

Red Cross Update

Applications for the Christmas stocking fund and the Christmas Toys Program will be taken Monday through Dec. 19, at the Red Cross office. The office is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Those persons coming in to fill out an application are asked to bring a utility bill, rent receipt or other statement with the persons correct name and address on it. Toys may be brought to the Red Cross office or anyone or group that would like to clean, sort and repair can call the office at 364-3761 for further information.

A class on repair and cleaning CPR mannikins will be held Friday, Dec. 12, at the Amarillo Chapter House. Anyone interested in attending is asked to call the local Red Cross for further information.

A SECOND CHANCE

NEW YORK (AP) — A second marriage can be a new chance for happiness as well as a chance to correct the errors made the first time around.

"Identify patterns of behavior that occurred in the past, then make an effort to react differently," says psychologist Judith Kuriansky in Family Circle magazine.

"If you complained a lot, make an effort to be more cheerful," she says. "Most important, take the emotional risks you probably avoided the first time by openly expressing your good and bad feelings. Nothing bonds people better than honesty and sharing."

PRIVATE TREES

BAY SPRINGS, Miss. (AP) — Individuals own more acres of commercial forest land in the United States than the government and industry combined, according to Georgia-Pacific Corp.

Commercial forests are all forest lands that grow a specific amount of timber per acre each year for harvest.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Hire all the extra help you can get. You're going to need it when the ferret owners land on you. There are now several hundred thousand of them in this country.

I was opposed to our son getting a ferret because I was not familiar with them. I relented and am now convinced that you couldn't ask for a cuter, more lovable or more affectionate pet. The only drawback is that they must be de-scented surgically. They smell as bad as skunks if they aren't "fixed."-SANTE FE, N.M.

DEAR SANTA: You weren't just whistling Dixie. I was swamped with mail. Here's another one of the 6,000 letters I received from devoted ferret fans.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I couldn't believe it when I read your advice to the parents of the 11-year-old boy who wanted a ferret to replace his deceased cat. You said, "Ferrets have been known to attack children and inflict serious injuries, according to the Veterinarian Medical Association. Get another cat."

Those vets must be thinking about the (almost extinct) blackfooted ferret, not the domesticated fitch ferret sold as a pet in the United States and abroad. We recently had to put our darling ferret, "Bandit," to sleep. He had kidney failure and was beyond help. Bandit was the darling of the household for almost five years. He kissed us when we came home, and was extremely playful, unlike cats who are arrogant and moody. We know from experience that ferrets make wonderful pets. You goofed, Ann.-CHUCK M. (PA.)

Thanks for the testimonial, Chuck. Read what a Chadwicks, N.Y., reader has to say:

DEAR ANN: We bought a 3-month-old ferret when our children were 10 and 15. He has been neutered, de-scented and given rabies and distemper shots. He does not have a cage, is litter trained, makes no noise, does not climb or claw furniture and sleeps in our beds. We adore him.-THE G.C.'S

DEAR G.C.'S: Glad your ferret is bringing you so much pleasure. Read on:

DEAR ANN: All you need to keep a ferret well and happy is some cat food, a can of flea powder (just in case), a little box with a scoop and shavings, puppy toys, a soft brush to keep the coat soft and shiny, and a heart full of love.-VERMONT

DEAR V.: Sounds simple, doesn't it? Hang around.

From Shawano, Wis.: Your column knocking ferrets came out just about the same time the Wall Street Journal did a piece on those furry adorables.

The WSJ said that there are now 400,000 ferret owners in the United States as compared with 14,000 only five years ago. They are big business. Pet stores offer ferrets for $100 but more exotic breeds, especially those with fur in "designer colors" such as blue, chocolate, or sterling silver, cost more.

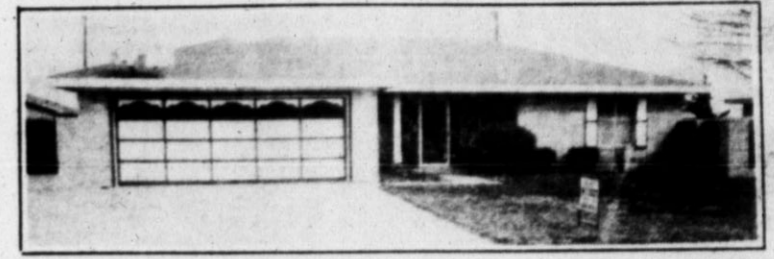

That's the glamorous news, but the Wall Street Journal had more to say and it scared the hell out of me. I quote: "Ms. Coffee, a Carson City detective, said, 'Ferrets DON'T make good pets.' Last September Ms. Coffey investigated an attack on a 29-day-old infant whose face was mauled and whose nose was bitten off." This happened in Springfield, Ohio. According to the County Health Administrator J. Dean Dodge, "When these animals are kept in captivity, they probably get enough food, but they are still wild carnivores. It's natural for them to hunt up live meals. It's their instinct." So, folks, obviously while most pet ferrets are cuddly and adorable, it is not safe to assume that they all make wonderful pets and there is no need for concern. I like cats myself.

Poll says cut spending, no income tax

LUBBOCK — When it comes to dealing with the state's budget problem, Texans feel strongest about state spending — cut it — and a state income tax — forget it.

Those are the findings of a survey conducted by the Institute for Communications Research (ICR) at Texas Tech University. Survey participants were given six options for dealing with the state's fiscal problems and more than 75 percent favored cutting state spending and opposed instituting a state income tax.

Other fiscal options put to the 387 Texas residents in a mail and telephone survey during September and October included cutting college and university spending, increasing sales taxes, instituting a state lottery and initiating legal parimutuel betting.

Participants were given the fiscal options and asked how strongly they agreed or disagreed with them "in order to reduce the state's budget problem."

Of the respondents, 75.3 percent favored cutting state spending. Of those, 50 percent agreed with the option and 25.3 percent strongly agreed. Only 14 percent did not favor state spending cuts while 10.7 percent of those surveyed were unsure.

Though persons making above $20,000 a year were more than twice as likely as persons earning less to favor a cut in state government spending, persons in all income categories approved a spending reduction.

Males and females favored spending cuts in comparable percentages. And, comparison of responses by education level, age and length of residency in Texas shows across the board support for spending reductions.

Initiating a state income tax was frowned on by 75.3 percent of the respondents with 38.2 percent strongly disagreeing and 37.1 percent disagreeing it was a viable option. Only 12.8 percent favored a state income tax while 11.9 percent remained unsure.

While most respondents opposed a state income tax, the older they were, the wealthier they were or the longer they had resided in Texas, the more opposed they were to instituting the tax.

The survey's closest division of opinion was over increasing the state sales tax. On the issue 45.7 percent of the participants agreed it should be increased while 45 percent disagreed with the option. Another 9.2 percent remained unsure.

Responses to increasing the sales tax broke down by age with 26.7 percent of those 45 and under opposing it, compared to only 18.7 percent approving. By contrast, 27.2 percent of those 46 and over favored increasing the sales tax, compared to 18.4 percent opposing.

John F. Kennedy held the first U.S. Presidential news conference to be televised live, on Jan. 25, 1961.

Though participants in the survey favored cutting state spending, they generally felt those cuts should not come at the expense of the state's colleges and universities. Only 17.5 percent of the respondents favored college and university cuts. By contrast, 69 percent were against cuts in higher education. Unsure responses came from 13.5 percent of the participants on the option.

The greater the income, the more likely respondents opposed cutting college spending. Female respondents were more likely to oppose college spending reductions than male survey participants.

On issues related to gambling, about two-thirds of the participants approved of revenues generated by those methods. Some 66.6 percent favored a state lottery and a slightly smaller number, 62.7 percent, liked parimutuel betting to generate funds. Only 21.9 percent of those questioned opposed a lottery and 28.2 percent opposed horse race betting as a way to reduce the state's budget problem.

Men favored the gambling issues more than women. Instituting a lottery drew favorable responses from 70.9 percent of the men and 63.2 percent of the women. Horse betting was favored by 68.2 percent of the men and 58.2 percent of the women.

Survey results were announced by ICR Director H.J. Hsia. The survey had a margin of error of plus or minus 5 percent.

While 1985 was tough year for Texas farmers, '86 receipts may be less overall

COLLEGE STATION — While 1985 was a tough year economically for Texas farmers, 1986 likely will be worse.

That's the projection by a Texas Agricultural Extension Service economist, Dr. Carl Anderson.

"Preliminary data show Texas farm receipts far below levels of the first half of 1985," says Anderson. "When the final bell rings in 1986, I expect overall cash receipts to be considerably less than in 1985, even with some improvement in livestock prices over the last half of the year."

A look at crop prices in the U.S. during the first half of 1986 shows a 13 percent decline from levels a year before, the economist points out.

However, all is not bad on the farm front, notes Anderson. Lower fuel and interest costs may partially offset the drop in total cash receipts so that net farm income may be down only slightly from 1985.

And he offers a positive outlook for the coming year. "1987 promises to be a better price and income year than 1986," says Anderson. "The main thing producers need to do is to build their business around financial and price risk management."

Anderson also foresees an end to some of the world's best food bargains for U.S. consumers, especially in meat prices, as the market begins to make a turnaround.

Looking at the last 12 months, the economist notes that crop prices have continued to fall while livestock prices registered gains over 1985 levels. Farmers at mid year got more for hogs, cattle, broilers, potatoes and eggs but less for corn, oranges and wheat.

At the same time, prices paid by farmers averaged just under levels of a year ago. Lower prices for feed and fuels were offset by higher prices for feeder livestock and building materials. Fuel prices were the lowest since September.

"Cattle and hog prices in July averaged 10 percent more than a year earlier," Anderson points out. "Hog prices were the highest they have been in four years."

He adds that poultry and egg prices were up 24 percent compared to a year ago. Broiler prices jumped 8.4 cents a pound to 42.4 cents from June to July, the largest gain since records began in 1940.

Check Safety To Make The Holidays Bright

- Before hanging strings of lights, spread them on the floor and check for frayed or bare wires, cracked insulation, loose connections, and damaged plugs or light sockets.
- Check extension cords for wear or damage and don't run them across walking areas.
- Test lights before putting them on the tree. Unplug them before making repairs or replacing bulbs.
- Overloading circuits with too many lights can cause fire. Follow manufacturer's instructions about the number of lights allowed on one circuit.
- Choose a fresh, green tree, trim its base and keep it in plenty of water. If the needles are brown and break off easily, it could be a fire risk.
- If you buy an artificial tree, make sure it has been tested for flammability by Underwriters Laboratories (UL).
- Place your tree away from the fireplace or other heat sources and out of the traffic pattern.
- Never string lights on a metallic tree. Light strings with damaged insulation can electrically charge a metallic tree. Instead, shine unattached colored floodlights or spotlights on the tree.
- Always turn off lights before leaving home or going to bed. You'll save money and be safer, too.
- Never use lighted candles on a tree or near evergreens. And don't burn evergreens in the fireplace.
- Do not use inside lights on the outside. All outside lighting equipment, including lights, cords and plugs, should be waterproof and made for outdoor use. Also, hang sockets downward and don't leave a socket empty.
- When hanging lights on the rooftop or in tall trees outdoors, stay clear of electrical lines. Make sure you or your decorations don't come in contact with them.
- Should you receive a CB radio or television this Christmas, let a qualified serviceman install the CB base unit or television antenna for you. This delicate job is best left to the professionals.
- Be sure electrical toys are tested for safety. Look for the UL mark.

Wishing You A Safe, Happy Holiday
