Home plans for new beginnings

By JOHN BROOKS Managing Editor

A new ministry started in Hereford three weeks ago is already paying dividends among homeless persons who are facing large problems in life.

"We started in Hereford three weeks ago and our ministry here has grown by leaps and bounds," said Dorothy Francis, who started a similar "shelter" in her Littlefield home two months ago. "We have busted out at the seams."

Francis, who raised seven children while caring for an invalid husband who died a year age in Littlefield, originally planned to open her large home in Littlefield to abused and battered wives and children, but said God led her in other directions.

"The Lord had been trying to lead me, and I guess he let me think one thing so we could get started on this ministry. The first thing I knew, my house in Littlefield was full."

That, plus influence from friends in the Hereford area, led her to Hereford, where she found a house that was for sale at 610 E. Fifth. After a prayer session and a night's sleep, the house owner backed down on his "for sale only" proposal and rented the house to the ministry.

The ministry is not tied to any particular denomination or religious group, but instead uses Biblical principles in dealing with persons who are suffering from emotional or physical trauma, alcoholism, drug abuse, or any other problem, according to Francis.

One person at the local shelter with a problem was Kim, a man in his mid-30s who had tried to correct his alcoholism and drug abuse many times beforethrough Alcoholics Anonymous, five different halfway houses, three shelters, five alcoholism treatment facilities and a mental institution.

Each time, Kim said, he would eventually revert to using alcohol or drugs.

"Once, through AA, I was sober for nine months," Kim said. "But that was me, and others, doing it. I never had that special contact with God. I didn't pray, didn't go to church, and the people eventually let me down.

"Now, I've found God, and I (See NEW LIFE, Page 2)

Local Department of Energy officials mailed a draft of their land acquisition plan Tuesday to 180 landowners of property the DOE wants for the continuation of site characterization studies for a possible nuclear waste repository in northern Deaf Smith County.

A cover letter accompanying the draft says the plan is in accordance with the scope of the Civilian Radioactive Waste Management Mission Plan which DOE submitted last June.

Respondents are given until Nov. 6 to comment on the draft plan. At that time, the plan will be reviewed and commentary will be taken into consideration in writing a final plan.

Included in the draft is the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' Real Estate Planning Report (REPR), which area landowners have been awaiting. The REPR covers recommendations for acquisition of selected areas needed for site characterization studies.

The REPR recommends leasing most of the land; however, it recommends the purchase of 66 acres of land on which the central thrust of characterization activity is planned.

+Our original plan was to purchase 61 acres but the REPR recommendation included the purchase of five additional acres of the west section," Salt Repository Project deputy manager Robert Wunderlich said. "This was determined to be the best plan because if not acquired the narrow strip would be hard to farm and the expanded area will be of benefit to us by giving us direct access to the county road."

Though the document specifically recommends the purchase of 66 acres, Wunderlich says because of budgeting problems the DOE may negotiate a lease purchase agree-ment with the landowners.

"Due to our 1988 budget expectations, and some concern over upcoming Congressional actions on the program, the purchase could be deferred through a leasing arrangement," he said.

state taxes sta already collect sales taxes

AUSTIN (AP) - More than 64,000 businesses are expected to be added to the Texas tax rolls Oct. 1, when the state sales tax goes up threequarters of a cent and is imposed for the first time on many services and items

Bill Allaway, executive vice president of the business-oriented Texas Association of Taxpayers, said Thursday the increase "is going to affect all of us."

Businesses pay about half the sales tax, so their share of the tax increase to 6 cents on the dollar will be about $1.5 billion, Allaway said. More than 420,000 merchants and businesses

The sales tax increase and expansion of the tax base were major parts of the $5.7 billion tax increase enacted by the 1987 Legislature. The hike is to make up for the continuing economic effects of the oil and natural gas price slump and allows state services to continue at about the current level in the twoyear budget cycle that began Sept. 1, officials said.

"The unfortunate reality of the world is that every tax bill hurts, and state government costs money," Allaway said.

The cigarette tax also will go from 20.5 cents to 26 cents a pack on Oct. 1. Among the broad categories of services that will be subject to the sales tax beginning Oct. 1 are real property services such as landscaping and garbage collection, and security services, including private investigators.

Debt services, including repossessions, and information furnished by credit bureaus will be under the sales tax that also applies to information services, including financial research, and insurance services such as damage appraisals.

A plan to tax insurance premiums failed to win final legislative approval when insurers mobilized a massive campaign against it.

Items that will be subject to the sales tax include custom computer programs, labor on installations to tangible property, telephone services and membership and dues to private clubs.

There is no increase in the 1 percent local option tax collected in some areas of Texas.

"Businesses need to reprogram cash registers and alert workers and staff of the new rate taking effect Oct. 1," Comptroller Bob Bullock said.

Alma Faulkner of the Texas Association of Business, which fought a proposed large increase in and prepayment of the corporate franchise tax, said, "I don't know that the sales tax is going to hurt us.

"It's a necessary evil," she said. "But (taxes) have to be placed in a way that does not hurt one person or one group more than another."

The franchise tax is scheduled to go from $5.25 to $6.70 per $1,000 of taxable capital and surplus on Jan. 1. A proposed higher increase and tax prepayment failed in the Legislature.

The sales tax also will be extended to data processing services, payroll and business accounting, timesharing and computer management on Jan. 1. Taxes also will be due starting Jan. 1 on repair and remodeling services, except on new construction and owner-occupied residences.

The state's motor vehicle sales and hotel-motel room taxes were increased Sept. 1, when a fee also was instituted for businesses to obtain a sales tax permit.

Legislators also canceled a planned Sept. 1 rollback in the state's motor fuels tax.

Wunderlich said that dealing with the use of land through leasing ar-(See DRAFT, Page 2)

DOE reviews processes

A review of the decision-making process to determine changes in the site characterization program being conducted by the Department of Energy was the main topic at an early morning briefing today by Salt Repository Project Deputy Manager Robert Wunderlich at the Hereford Community Center.

Wunderlich reviewed the department's control of the program through the "baseline" method. "The use of the baseline gives us the assurance that all 2,000 people working on the three site characterization projects are using uniform standards, data and decision making

Clements, Lewis team up for SSC

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Bill Clements and House Speaker Gib Lewis are making a bipartisan pitch for voter approval of a $500 million bond issue to attract the "super collider."

"By all accounts, the super collider will be a tremendous boost to the Texas economy," the Republican governor said at a Tuesday news conference with Lewis, a Democrat, and Houston businessman Jack Blanton.

Blanton is chairman of the $800,000 campaign to pass the bond proposal on the Nov. 3 ballot.

The $4.4 billion atom-smasher would create thousands of jobs and make Texas a leader in scientific research, the officials said. It would pump about $20 billion into the state during the life of the project, they said.

"This once again proves that we are Texans above party when it comes to doing what is truly best for our state," Lewis said of the bipartisan campaign, which is supported by U.S. Sens. Lloyd Bentsen. D-Texas, and Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

"The passage of Proposition 19 will send a clear message to Washington that Texans support and want this project in their state," Lewis said. Proposition 19 would authorize the state to issue $500 million in general obligation bonds to help prepare the site if Texas wins the federal research project.

"Sunday, I was with some friends and had an opportunity to drink. I just told them I didn't have the desire. I now have faith, given to me through Jesus Christ that I can remain sober and spread the word to other people who are less fortunate."

Francis said Kim's testimony was unrehearsed.

"He just says what he now feels, and that's the direction we want to lead these people, toward God, toward establishing their faith.'

Not all of the people Francis is helpign have problems with drugs or alcohol or abuse. Some have epilepsy. Francis is all to familiar with their plight, having an epileptic son.

"Their problem is that, no matter how well-trained they are in certain areas, there is a fear," she said. "Once they have a seizure on the job, it's all over for them."

Her own son has had, and lost, several jobs, including a post at a state-operated shelter and an assistant supervisor's job for Goodwill Industries.

"Our own son opened our eyes and hearts," Francis said. "We had an epileptic man at our shelter in Littlefield who had all kinds of training-he even had rangements would make it a reversible process as opposed to the nonreversible process of an outright purchase, when DOE would probably sell the land on the open market if the program in Texas is stopped.

"It is government policy that if we make improvements, such as placing buildings, on the land we must own it," he said. "However, we can lease the land while we perform certain studies and then look at purchasing it prior to seeking licensing for the facility from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission."

As outlined in the REPR, the seven-year site characterization project would involve a nine-square mile controlled area for primary characterization activities; a sixsquare mile border used for seismic surveys; 800 acres of limited access area which includes 100 acres of security buffer zone; 700 acres for the repository surface facility; and 61 acres (plus the recommened five extra acres) for the exploratory shaft facility. Only the 66 acres would be purchased during site characterization.

you imagine that? "Epilepsy and other diseases are not just disabiling to the per-son afflicted-they can be disabiing for the employer and the coworker."

Francis and houseparents Gene and Doris Dickerson, who moved to Hereford three weeks ago to open the house here, said several individuals and local businesses have been kind in their contributions to the shelter, but more help is needed. "Many of our residents need a job." Francis said. "They are well-screened before they come in-even though we've never turned anyone away-and there are many jobs the men can do. We have one working as a janitor, and another at Excel.

"We have a girl who is working here, and have several girls in Littlefield who could move here if someone could offer them work." More than finding work for the residents at her shelters, Francis is interested in doing what is described in Isaiah 56: "The Bible says we are to take them from the bondage they are living in and feed the hungry, clothe those that need closthes, and bring into our homes the people who are helpless and poor. God will then bless us.

"He has already blessed us in Littlefield and in Hereford."

Lease agreements will be limited to one year or less, according to the draft, and leased properties would be placed under some use restrictions.

Also found in the abandoned van were a litter of six puppies, two Claymore anti-personnel mines and a poster of the "Grim Reaper" that was plastered on the dashboard.

Stewart then rode his motorcycle to Hulcher, a company specializing in cleaning up railroad accidents where he had worked until a few weeks ago, police said. There, he shot and killed Dennis James Wade, who had been his foreman, and stole a company truck, police Sgt. Lewis Palos said.

Stewart drove to the Western Sizzlin' steakhouse, where Mrs. Stewart, 34, was a manager. He brandished two pistols, a .22-caliber automatic with a 50-shot magazine and an antique breech-loading .38-caliber for which he prepared his own loads, Hensley said.

Stewart threatened the steakhouse's assistant manager, demanding to know where his wife was, police said. She told him she didn't know, and he fired several shots into the air but left without injuring anyone.

With police in pursuit, he then drove to a mobile home where his wife lived, shot 30-year-old Edward L. Persons Jr. of Louisiana 10 times, cornered his wife in a bathroom and fatally shot her before walking outside and shooting himself in the right temple, Palos said.

Mona, a waitress at the steakhouse who asked that her last name not be used, said the gunman "came in yelling and screaming and waving a gun. He yelled at everybody to get out. He shot a few times up at the ceiling.

"He went to the window where I was standing and said, 'Mona, get out.' Then he went to the back office where his wife worked. She wasn't there and he left," the waitress said. "He was probably despondent," Palos said. "I don't know what loss of job, estrangement of wife. We just don't know yet."

REVIEW

methods," he said.

Under the baseline guidelines the program evolves as required when technical findings differ from expectations. Before changes in the program are made to reflect the new evidence, the technical information is passed through a series of evaluations to determine credibility.

"This allows our plans to evolve in response to the actual data we find as opposed to what we expected to find," Wunderlich said.

The Environmental Assessment and the revised Mission Plan serve as bases for the program. As more information becomes available the plans are revised to meet specific requirements of the program.

"If we are working on an aspect of the project and find we need to make several small changes, we look at the changes individually and then collectively to determine the advisability of the changes," Wunderlich said.

Examples he cited were changing traceable through a process of identification and assessment of impacts. This formal change process has been followed for recent program modifications including the decision to move four stratographic boreholes outside of the perimeters they were in-a change of location.

Baseline tracking was also used in the decision to change an activity by reducing the number of wells drilled during the project. "We found that shaft monitored wells could perform the function of freeze wall design wells and so we increased the number of shaft monitored wells and cut out the freeze wall design wells. Overall, we reduced the number of needed wells from 16 to 12," Wunderlich says.

Schedule changes in the Mission Plan account for changes in timing, according to Wunderlich. Some activities had previously been figured to take more, or less, time than now estimated and the overall timetable of activity has slipped approximately one year. Some activities planned to begin in the fall of 1987 are now projected to begin in the fall of 1988. Many changes already made in the timing of the program are reflected in the latest DOE publication, the draft of the land acquisition plan, released on Tuesday. Wunderlich stressed that the project is constantly changing and evolving as technical data becomes available and that, though this may cause some frustration, it is a necessary part of the program so that data gained from actual field tests may be compared to estimates and appropriate measures taken to correct potential problems, or to rule out the Deaf Smith County site as a contender for the placement of a permanent nuclear waste storage facilitv.

The report says that project per-sonnel would have some flexibility in arranging scheduled testing and drilling activities around the needs of the landowner in regards to farming

Wunderlich says DOE would also make arrangements to keep the soil in good condition and to keep weeds and other problems from taking over. The report states that DOE would be responsible for any damages to the land and will be responsible for restoring the land to crop-producing capacity. As the schedule now stands,

"We would look at such things as a change in the amount of machinery being used at the time and possible effects of having too high of a concentration of nitrous oxides released into the air by the machines. Then we would ask for figures on the amount of nitrous oxides that number of machines would release and estimates of concentration. We would take these figures and compare them to Environmental Protection Standards, and then make any other program changes we would need to make so we would be in compliance."

Wunderlich said that throughout the program there will be incremental changes in the baseline plans and that the changes will always be

The 1987 Legislature already has authorized $500 million in revenue bonds to attract the super collider.

Texas is competing with 24 other states for the project. The state has proposed sites near Dallas-Fort Worth and Amarillo, and sites near El Paso and Midland have been proposed independently.

A final decision is scheduled to be announced in January 1989.

Stories argue about richest persons

NEW YORK (AP) - A Japanese landlord is the richest person in the world, says Forbes magazine, which places his wealth at $20 billion. Not so, says Fortune, which put the Sultan of Brunei at the top of its list of fatcats and potentates.

Forbes gives the golden laurels to Yoshiaki Tsutsumi, but Fortune credits Tsutsumi with a meager $2.5 billion and said Brunei's "freespending sultan of oil," Hassanal Bolkiah, has a net worth of $25 billion.

Forbes, however, said it disqualified the sultan and others 'since their power is political first and economic only secondarily."

The sniping broke out last weekend as the rival business magazines issued news releases on their for-theoming issues.

Fortune said Monday that Forbes, in a "bizarre move," rushed its list into print this week to beat Fortune to the newsstand by a week. Forbes admitted it, but noted that it has been printing its own list of the 400 richest Americans since 1982.

Fortune struck back when it caught wind of the Forbes list and issued a press release Saturday promoting its Oct. 12 cover story. Forbes' news release on its Oct. 5 cover story came out a day later.

Calculating the wealth of billionaires seems to be more art than science, judging from the discrepancies between the magazines' calculations. Forbes' list is heavy with Japanese, while Fortune's is strong on Arab royalty and North Americans.

Tsutsumi, No. 1 on the Forbes list, is the 53-year-old head of Seibu Railway Group, Japan's biggest and richest landlord. The empire consists of railways, more than 30 hotels, 25 golf courses, ski resorts and other land.

Fortune's choice, the 41-year-old sultan, owns practically everything in the Delaware-size country of Brunei on the island of Borneo.

Forbes' cover story includes only foreign billionaires, but the magazine issued a statement Monday with the names of the top 49 Americans on its annual Forbes 400 list, which will be in its Oct. 26 issue.

Only three individuals or families make the top 10 on both magazines' lists of combined U.S. and foreign billionaires. They are Albert, Paul and Ralph Reichmann, Canadian real estate, newsprint and oil magnates; Kenneth Roy Thomson, a Canadian with interests in news media and real estate, and Sam Moore Walton, the discount retailing king from Bentonville, Ark.

Fortune's list also included American publishing magnates Samuel I. Newhouse Jr. and Donald E. Newhouse; Queen Elizabeth II. and candy makers Forrest E. Mars Sr., Forrest E. Mars Jr. and John F. Mars of Mars Inc.

The last big flare-up between the two magazines was when Forbes designed the cover of its June 15 issue to resemble Business Week's in an effort to draw attention to its allegations that Business Week had pied its idea for reports on executive pay.

it for vio new ban on drinking alcoholic beverages while driving because the wording of the statute makes enforcement difficult, law enforcement authorities say.

"We observed that even before the law went into effect, it would be difficult to enforce," David Wells, a spokesman for the Department of Public Safety in Austin, said Monday.

"In order to issue a ticket, we have to actually see someone putting an alcholic beverage to his lips and taking a drink," Wells told the Austin American-Statesman. "If someone wants to drink an alcoholic beverage, they can put a cover over it to conceal it. And the law is difficult to enforce at night."

Troopers in Travis and Hays counties have issued four citations since the law went in effect Sept. 1, DPS officials say.

Austin police and Travis County officers say they know of only one ticket that has been issued.

Around the state, law officers in San Antonio, Houston and Dallas say they have issued less than 25 citations combined.

The law mandates a maximum $200 fine for persons caught drinking while driving.

DPS Trooper Tom Mobley said the four citations "are maybe a little better than we expected because of the way the law is written."

"It's a less-than-favorable situa-tion," Mobley said. "Our troopers could say that they have seen someone drink a beer, and the driver could say it's a Coke, and he could have a Coke can in his car. That makes the law kind of unpleasant to enforce."

The statute is still a good first step in gaining control of drinking drivers and the problems they cause, Mobley mediately clear whether he had been fired or had resigned. A preliminary check revealed no previous criminal record, Palos said.

Neighbors said Stewart often wore camouflage fatigues and told them he had been wounded in Vietnam. Police said he apparently served in the Marines for two years.

"(He) was into that Army stuff bad," said neighbor Judy Brown. 'He always wore camouflage. He was always bragging about how bad his dogs were."

She said Stewart was referred to by his neighbors as Rambo.

"He was always messing around with his pit bulls," said Duane Evans II, another neighbor. "He was just a crazy type we stayed away from. He had a lot of weapons and we'd hear gunshots all the time from him hunting rabbits."

Meanwhile, police are investigating allegations that the gunman may have slain three people in Missouri last week, Sykes said.

"He told two people he didn't have much time because he had killed three people in Missouri and was wanted there," he said.

Stewart had left Corsicana to visit his parents in Missouri earlier this month and had returned Friday, police said.

Investigators have asked Missouri police to supply them with any information to corroborate those statements and fingerprints will be sent to the FBI, Sykes said.

Steve Vestal, 38, of Conway, Mo., and George Brewer, 43, and Carol Brewer, 36, who both lived in nearby Niangua, were killed Sept. 16 with the same .22-caliber gun.

Ruland represents county at meeting

American Cancer Society volunteers from 25 counties, including Deaf Smith County, attended the 1987 District 15 annual meeting of the American Cancer Society (ACS) in Amarillo on Saturday.

Kee Ruland of Hereford represented the Deaf Smith Unit of the ACS. The annual meeting serves as a kick-off for ACS volunteers preparing to inform their local communities of ACS programs and services.

Speakers at the meeting included Brian Pruitt, M.D., oncologist and assistant professor from Texas Tech School of Medicine/Amarillo who reported on the year end wrap-up. He gave year end totals for crusade, public education, and service/rehabilitation and reported on the special projects for the 1967-87 fiscal year. These projects included a Reach To Recovery Forum and training, colorectal, breast, and uterine screenings, the tenth anniversary of the Great American Smokeout, and the Texas Breast screening project. The Texas breast screening was a statewide project in which 2,780 women in the Panhandle alone responded to an offer for a reduced rate mammography.

Local representatives discussed the latest project of the ACS, the Honor Gift Program. A program which honors those special in our lives by helping support the important programs of cancer research, education, and patient services.

Myron Dees, Ph.D. of West Texas State University, a volunteer from Canyon and Chairman of the Board of the Texas Division gave the closing challenge to volunteers. Dr. Dees encouraged them to work cooperatively with other agencies in order to get the necessary information to the public so that "together" we can conquer this indiscriminate disease.

"District 15 raised over $174,000 by Panhandle volunteers which include volunteers from Deaf Smith," stated Ruland, President of Deaf Smith Unit. "The money will be used to support the American Cancer Society's attack on cancer." .... wonx food

THE GOOD WE DO

By Bob Wear The Good We do may not be much, when compared to the total of all the good being done; however, we must remember that the total or the whole is nothing more than the sum of its parts. Whatever it may be, the 'good we do' counts, and most of us do some good and would like to be able to and know how to do more good. Perhaps it should be noted that this is not a reference to the 'do-goode "the earnest, impractical-minded humanitarian bent on promoting one thing or another; commonly with a derogatory implication of naivete or blundering ineffectualness." Doing good, in the true sense of doing good must not be confused with the 'dogooder' problem.

No human action is more ennobling than doing good, in the right way, for and to others. "he who does good to another, does good also to himself, not only in the consequences, but in the very act; for the consciousness of well-doing, in itself, ample reward."-Seneca. The wisest of teachers has said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." The benefits resulting from the right kind of 'doing good' are constructive, in at least two ways. The one receiving the good is encouraged and upbuilded, and the one doing the good is blessed. One good deed, and it may be mine or yours, or both, often marks the beginning of a chain-reaction force that moves on and on among human.

The need and the opporutnity for doing good are all around us each day. They are easily recognized if we are looking for them. They appear in many forms, and are hidden from no one, except those who refuse to see. We may not be able to do everything, but we can do some things, we can do our best. It may be that we will never be able to do what some folk call the big things, but when we do good as we have the opportunity we never know how 'big' it is, or how much it may lift the spirit of some weary soul.

No human behavior is more ennobling and enriching than 'the good we do' to brighten the way or share the load of some one else.

The flying fish, when pursued b enemies, can soar above the water from two to 15 seconds and cover distances of 45 to 200 yards.

Luncheon meeting held by Wyche Club

A visitor, Bertha Thiele, was recognized. She was a charter member of Wyche Club when it was organized in 1929, and she is the aunt of Mrs. Hewitt.

Committee reports were given. Clara Trowbridge reported Laverene Worley helping her with the recreational party at Westgate, one of the club's projects. Also members signed a cheer card to be sent to Camelia Jones.

Bay View Study Club met Sept. 17 at 2:30 p.m. in the Deaf Smith County

Members of the social committee, Ouida Halbert, Nancy Josserand, Ruth McBride, Betty Rudder, and Lois Gililland, hosted a Constitu-tional Tea. The table, covered with a lace cloth, featured a many-colored bouquet of zinnias in a crystal vase surrounded by lighted votive candles.

Refreshments included chicken sald in pastries, open-faced crab, cheese and cucumber tea sandwiches, scones with apricot preserves, Devonshire cream, lemon tarts, bon bon cakes, punch, mint tea and coffee.

After the members and a guest, Juanita Phillips, executive-director of the Museum, were served, Nancy Hays introduced Berta Ottesen of The Vogue, who discussed the new fall fashions.

Her models, Mrs. Darwin McGill and Mrs. Dwight Colville, showed fashions in natural fibers that looked much like the 1910-20 fashions in the museum cases, and fashions that were a contrast to the early styles and fabrics.

In closing, all members were invited to attend a brunch set for Wednesday, Sept. 23rd at King's Manor. The Vogue is sponsoring a Style Show that morning to benefit the Manor and its activities.

Hays called the meeting to order. The minutes of the May 7th meeting were read and approved. All members were encouraged to support the United Way Drive.

Helen Langley introduced the 1987-88 Yearbook, The theme is "Renew the Spirit ... ' in order to form a more perfect union ... "". Yearbooks were distributed and a bill for costs was approved.

The membership voted to give the Museum a gift for hosting our meeting.

Hays reported that the Deaf Smith County Library has selected "This I Can Leave You" by Maime Burn for our memorial gift for Clara Gillentine. She read a letter of thanks from Jimmie Gillentine.

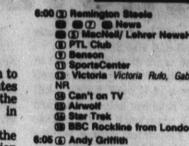

The meeting adjourned.
