Primaries to be Tuesday

87th Year, No. 172, Deaf Smith County, Hereford, Tx.

Managing Editor Voters will go the polls Tuesday in Hereford, Texas, and 19 other states in the largest one-day primary election ever held to determine issues that could have far-reaching implications from the courthouse to the White House

Locally, voters will decide candidates for two county commission spots, help decide the Republican and Democratic nominees for State Sen. Bill Sarpalius' seat, and help choose an opponent for U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, a prohibitive favorite to dump Joe Sullivan in the Democratic primary.

Voters will also help determine the fate of 1988 presidential candidates in both parties. Up to 30 percent of all of the convention delegates will be selected based, at least in part, on Tuesday's elec-

Locally, the biggest race is in County Commissioner Precinct 1, where incumbent Bill Bradly is being challenged by Gloria Salinas Hubner, Lupe Chavez and John Stribling Jr. The winner will face Kim Blackwell in November's general election.

Precinct 3 Commissioner Troy Don Moore drew no Democratic opponents, and has no Republican opponent in November

In the 29-county 31st state senatorial district, three Democrats - Nancy Garms, Mel Phillips and H. Bryan Poff Jr. and two Republicans - Ron Slover and Teel Bivins - will battle for a spot on November's ballot.

Poff, 48, of Canyon, is a graduate of Texas Christian University and The University of Texas School of Law. He served as a state representive, 1971-74, and was 47th District Court judge from 1975 through 1986. He is now in private law practice.

Garms, 48, is a graduate of Hardin-Simmons University and received her law degree from Texas Tech University. She has also taught school, from fifth grade through college, and also worked as a psychologist.

Staff Writer Making a prediction as to who will emerge winner in the Democratic county commissioner race for Precinct 1 Tuesday isn't

Forty-five percent of the precinct's population is Hispanic, 52 percent is Anglo, and there are two Hispanic and two Anglo candidates. It makes for an interesting and hard-to-call race. Bill Bradly, the current Precinct 1 commissioner, wants the position for another four years. Those trying to take it away from him are Gloria Salinas Hubner, John Stribling Jr. and Lupe Chavez.

Anita Ramirez, who lives in Precinct 1, has made her choice. "I'm voting for Gloria. We have a lot of Spanish people in this precinct and I think we need a Spanish person to represent us."

This response might lead one to believe the hispanics will side with the hispanic candidates, but Bill Hutson, who lives a block from Ramirez, said he doesn't think so.

"I don't think our precinct will side up according to race," said Hutson. "We don't have a race relations problem here-not unless the media comes in here and stirs things up, making everyone pick sides.

Local, state and national decisions will be made

Mr. President!

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — On Star Wars and Contra aid, it is hard to tell one presidential candidate from another within his own party. But differences between the 13 begin to emerge on the critical issues of AIDS, education, arms control and the economy, according to a survey by The Associated Press.

Among the Republicans, all but Vice President George Bush and Senate Republican leader Bob Dole, oppose or have reservations about the Intermediate-range Nuclear Forces treaty with the Soviets. Former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont said it "endangers our freedom."

All the Democrats oppose military aid to the Contras, although Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee has voted for non-lethal aid in the past. They also support the peace plan proposed by Oscar Arias, president of Costa Rica. The Republicans called for continued aid for the Contras, and most expressed doubts about the Arias plan.

On AIDS research and education. Democrats Richard Gephardt, Paul Simon and Jesse Jackson said they would more than double the current budget of $950 million.

Two Republicans, Pete du Pont and Pat Robertson, said the current AIDS budget is adequate. Dole promised to spend whatever is necessary."

Here are summaries of the candidates' responses to the AP issue

INTERMEDIATE-RANGE NUCLEAR FORCES TREATY

All the Democrats and two Republicans, Bush and Dole, called for ratification of the treaty, which eliminates the U.S. and Soviet arsenals of intermediateand short-range nuclear weapons.

Bush said the treaty "shows that the U.S. and the Soviet Union can reduce nuclear weapons without upsetting the military

Dole, of Kansas, said, "I would oppose any effort to attach 'killer' amendments" to the treaty that would require renegotiation with the Soviets.

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., said: I would seek amendments in the Senate to preserve SDI and require the Soviets to live up to past

Robertson said the treaty would leave Europe "vulnerable to overwhelming Soviet conventional superiority" and "increases the likelihood of conventional war in Europe and thermonuclear war waged on the American homeland."

STRATEGIC DEFENSE

The Republicans voiced staunch support for SDI, and ruled out using the program, coined Star Wars, as a bargaining chip in arms control talks

The Democrats oppose deployment of a space-based missile defense, although most favor basic research in the field

TAXES

Four Republicans - Bush, du Pont, Kemp and Robertson flatly rule out tax increases. All six Democrats have either endorsed some higher taxes or held themselves open to the possibili-

Dole said he would close loopholes in the tax laws. Haig says he would look for savings in all areas of the budget to "minimize waste and any need for increased taxes.'

Babbitt wants a 5 percent national sales tax; Gephardt, Hart and Simon favor an oil import fee; Jackson supports higher corporate taxes and a 38.5 percent tax bracket for the 400,000 wealthiest Americans; Simon said that if needed he would seek a surtax on the wealthy; Gore has suggested a tax on luxury items and keeping corporate taxes at their current level.

Dukakis says, "No serious candidate for president can rule out the possibility of new taxes." But he says the first step is to "collect every dime we can of the billions owed to the IRS that are not paid each year." Any new taxes 'should be based on ability to pay," Dukakis says. In addition to a $10 per barrel oil import fee, Hart favors a top tax rate of 33 percent for the wealthy, taxing capital gains at death, taxing 85 percent of Social Security benefits for affluent retirees, higher cigarette and liquor taxes. and a 10 percent levy on furs, planes and other luxuries.

Hart says his plan would reap $43 billion in 1989 and nearly $70 billion in 1993.

Gephardt said an oil import fee, in addition to raising revenue, "also makes for sound energy policy. I do not support increasing

Candidates look at some of the issues individual tax rates but do support improving taxpayer compliance, and ... (closing) loopholes.

Jackson said, "My tax proposals call for fair taxes not more taxes." Among them: a 38.5 percent top tax bracket and raising the corporate tax rate.

Simon said he will support tax increases only as a "last resort" if he fails to eliminate the budget deficit by 1992. He said they would fall "on the wealthy."

Gore said, "If we are driven as a last resort to new taxes, I will fight to ensure that we turn first to those who can afford it." He suggests raising nearly $1 billion with a 5 percent tax on luxury items, $10 billion by keeping corporate taxes at their current level and $5 billion by taxing the sale of inherited stocks on the basis of their original value

AIDS

Gephardt, Jackson and Simon would spend $1 billion on research and, as recommended by the National Academy of Sciences, $1 billion on education and prevention. Dole promised to spend whatever is necessary to fight this disease."

Du Pont and Robertson said the government was spending enough on AIDS research and education.

Most candidates sidestepped the question of whether schools should teach "safe sex" practices, including use of condoms.

TRADE

Bush, du Pont, Babbitt and Gore criticized the House-passed trade sanctions authored by one of their rivals, Gephardt. Bush called it "protectionist, pure and simple.

Dole said he believes U.S. trade laws must be strengthened "to deal with unfair trade practices while at the same time stimulating an increased exchange of fairly traded goods and services around the world."

Kemp said he has sponsored legislation "to create a North American Free Trade Zone between U.S., Canada, and Mexico, to create the largest common market in the world, and allow us to negotiate reductions in trade barriers to U.S. exports."

Robertson said, "Nations that close their doors to our products and services will find ours closed to theirs."

Gephardt said his House-passed trade amendment would "give the president the tools he needs to open foreign makrets unfairly closed to American products."

Jackson said reducing the trade deficit will require "controlling U.S.-based multinationals which close U.S. factories and take jobs overseas ... increasing Third World living standards so they can buy more from us" and increasing productivity.

Simon called for "negotiation before moving to retaliation."

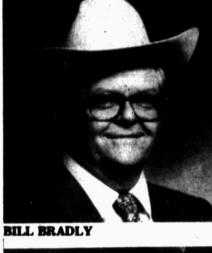

Gore said the Gephardt amendment and other "get tough" proposals "are likely to be economically counterproductive." He favors an alternative approved by the Senate that "targets our retaliation directly at the trade barriers themselves. Dukakis said, "The president has ample authority to combat unfair trade practices, he should use it." Hart's campaign said he "believes in strengthening sanctions, eliminating trade preferences, and cutting fair trade compensation for those who flout our trade laws."

EDUCATION

The Democrats oppose tuition tax credits and vouchers for private elementary and secondary education. Most of the Republicans favor some form of tax break for parents who choose private schools.

ing them another one.

-Lupe Chavez (juvenile officer for Deaf Smith County): I think the budget needs to be studied more closely to avoid having such a large increase before we talk about raising taxes. But I do think the county employees may deserve pay raises. The employees went nearly three years without a pay raise before, and if we want to maintain good quality personnel, we may need to give some consideration to giving them raises.

-Gloria Salinas Hubner (owner of Gloria's Custom Sewing and Alterations): I think a lot of spending needs to be checked over, and if cuts need to be made, they go first. Concerning pay raises, I realize the county has held back on pay raises in the past because I know some people that work there, but I will have to look at everything as a whole before I start promising any pay raises.

-John Stribling Jr. (owner of Valley Farm Service): I would want to prevent the increase from happening at all by holding the line on spending. Just because the business is there another year doesn't mean it has to operate on a bigger budget. For the pay raises, I may be in favor of some pay raises but probably not across the board. We should give the increases according to the work performed. I've made a payroll for the past 20 years, and the same thing that applies to the county budget applies here: just because an employee is there another year doesn't mean he needs a pay raise.

2. Are the roads in Precinct 1 in need of repair and if so, where would you concentrate your efforts?

-Bradly: Yes, the roads need repair, but we've been through two extra wet winters and a wet summer that slowed us down in repairing the roads. These past dry months we've improved the roads considerably. Some that had been in the worst condition are now in the best condition, and we're going to do the road that's in the worst shape next.

-Chavez: The roads do need improvements by what I've seen and the complaints I've heard. I plan to use the precinct foreman and the workers to their full extent to maintain and improve the roads, and those in the worst condition will have priority.

-Hubner: Yes, the roads need improving. One of the bigger wastes of money has been money spent on the repair of the roads. yet they haven't been maintained. They've been improved in the past and then neglected. I plan to put the roads on a rotational maintenance basis that would require less expense.

--Stribling: In the entire precinct the roads are deficient. I can't say where I'd start the improvements because I need some advice from the road people as to what each road needs.

3. How do you feel about economic development and, specifically, tax abatement?

-Bradly: We need quick- and long-term solutions to our economic blight-something that will attract large employers. My knowledge of tax abatement is still sketchy, but if we tell some business we'll forgive their taxes for 10 or 15 years, it will all even out because the tax roll will go up when the new business comes in.

-Chavez: I think if all three taxing entities could get together and work in a positive manner, we could bring in this new business to the county. Concerning tax abatement, I could see where it would be beneficial if we brought in businesses that employed around 300 people. If a smaller business wanted the tax break, I would have to give it more considera-

-Hubner: Economic development is needed. Agriculture by itself does not have the ability to absorb the total work force in this county. We need to get the people to work and lessen the county's tax burden. I also think bringing forms of recreation or entertainment would help. If these people put in a long day of work, they're liable to go out of town for entertainment because we are so limited in this area. In tax abatement, I would be tempted to say we're going too fast. Then again, you almost have to do it. I would just be careful-it's not good to get yourself in debt to dig yourself out of the hole.

-Stribling: I'm definitely in favor of bringing in new business and industry. If we're going to give tax abatement, it would have to show where we can recover the lost tax money in the future. But I can't say if I'm categorically for or against the thing until I look into it further.

4. What can we, as Deaf Smith County, do to improve race relations within the county?

-Bradly: This is a matter that needs to be addressed by forgetting there's a race difference.

-Chavez: We do have some prejudice in this community, but it's no worse than in any other town. -Hubner: We can improve race relations through education.

-Stribling: I'm not conceding that there are race problems, but if there are, they're probably magnified by the media.

GOP senate race draws crowd

AUSTIN (AP) - They aren't listed among the six men seeking the U.S. Senate seat from Texas, but the names of David, Goliath and Edward Kennedy come up frequently in campaign-trail rhetoric this year. Several candidates offer Davidand-Goliath scenarios. To his opponents, Democrat Lloyd Bentsen, the three-term incumbent and current chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is the as-yet undefeated giant.

"I know that it will be a Davidversus-Goliath battle. Like Goliath, Lloyd Bentsen has all the trappings of power," said U.S. Rep. Beau Boulter of Amarillo, one of four Republicans on the March 8 ballot for the senatorial

"People ask me if I know how difficult Lloyd Bentsen will be to beat. Sure I do. But I look them in the eye and tell them, 'I know Lloyd Bentsen can be beaten," Boulter said.

GOP candidate Ned Snead of Georgetown, an inventor and owner of Texas Crushed Stone, also has a big guy-little guy story.

"Do you know of anybody who has proven to be invulnerable? That's what they said about Goliath, wasn't it?" Snead said.

The two other Republicans hoping for a shot at Bentsen are former state Rep. Milton Fox, now of Austin, and Houston businessman Wes Gilbreath.

The Bentsen camp, which must first dispose of San Antonio College professor Joe Sullivan in the Democratic primary, has a David-and-Goliath story in which their man is the lightweight.

"There is a Goliath in the 1988 Senate primary in Texas. It isn't from Texas, though, but from Washington," the Bentsen campaign said in a release. The Republican National Senatorial Committee, which has pledged $1.1 million for Boulter if he gets the GOP nomination, is "this year's Goliath," according to the Bentsen campaign.

On the Republican side, it's a fight to get to the right. Boulter, Fox, Snead and Gilbreath all claim to be the most able to keep taxpayers' money in taxpayers' pockets.

"The difference between me and all of them is that they talk about what they want to do to balance the budget," said Boulter, whose two terms in the U.S. House have been dedicated to saving tax money. "I don't question their desire to do these things, but I'm doing them."

Fox, 61, a former seven-term Texas House member, also built a legislative career on public-coffer thrift, a strategy he said made him an outsider in the state House. "It's quicker and easier to build a career by spending money than it is by saying, 'No, I'm sorry but I'm not going to vote for your pet project," said Fox, an unsuccessful 1986 candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission.

Boulter, 44, offers a similar theory on Bentsen's popularity. Boulter said he does not call Bentsen a "liberal," preferring instead to refer to him as a "business Democrat."

"That means in Washington he takes care of a few business interests here at home, but in the vast majority votes with the people who control his party, and that's the left," Boulter said, making the Bentsen-Kennedy connection.

TRASH BAGS NOT FOR USE WITH FOOD

When working with food, it's wise to use only containers, cooking utensils and dishes designed for use with food.

For example, now that they come in so many sizes, plastic trash bags may seem to be convenient containers for any number of foodsquarts of popcorn for a party, a disposable container for marinating meat, or handy wrapping for picnic

Before you put food into a plastic trash bag, however, check the package label. Very often there will be a statement indicating whether the bag is approved for use with food. If there is no statement, assume that the product is not approved for food

Materials used in the production of trash bags do not have to be tested for eating safety if the product is not considered to be generally used with food. The chemical process for manufacturing plastic bags may not permanently bind harmful components in the bag material. So it's possible, for instance, that an acid in meat marinade could allow chemicals in the plastic bag to get into your food. Also, a deodorant product is sometimes used in trash bags and that could affect the taste of the

Some TV evangelists we can't stomach, a few we can tolerate, and one or two we listened to because we appreciated their speaking technique if not their message.

And Jimmy Swaggart was one of the latter.

As one who has faced an audience or two, we appreciate anyone who can stand up and mesmerize an entire audience with a combination of music, voice, and mannerisms.

Jack Kennedy could do it. Winston Churchill had the technique down pat and the former senator of Texas, Tom Connally, could do it.

But as a newspaperman, there's another thing we like about Swaggart—he stood up and 'fessed up and took it on the chin.

In the 38 years we have served as editor of this newspaper, we have received more flack from the courthouse news column than all the rest of the stories put together

Hardly a week passes, that we don't get a call from someone wanting us to leave some item out of the courthouse news: divorce, driving while intoxicated, hot checking or some other item on the official record.

And we have a pat answer: a news item is like a boil or sore on the arm. You can pick at it, fool with it, mess with it, and it will simply grow, become worse, and fester and spread.

Or you can gut up, lance the boil in one swift, quick incision, remove the core and it's over and done with. A news story is the same way. Try to hide or cover something up and it will simply spread, fester, and become worse in the long run.

Run all the facts, tell it like it is, and it's over and done with and the public moves on to something else.

A perfect example is the incident about Lt. Gov. Bill

A perfect example is the incident about Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby. Several years ago, he left a late night reception with one too many drinks under his belt and accompanied by one of the girls employed in his office.

He was picked up by Austin police, charged with DWI, and carried to the station where he made bail. Rather than coming up with lame excuses and a coverup, he immediately called a press conference, announced to all assembled that "he'd had one drink too many, made a dumb, stupid mistake, apologized to all Texans and to Austin people in particular."

The newspaper and TV stations carried the whole thing the next day—and it was immediately forgotten. Nothing is as old as yesterday's sin as long as it's out in the open.

Officer Gary McCarthy

Death hardly seems a proper companion for a police force with as much youth and vigor as that in Dallas. Yet life for this city's police took another turn for the macabre on Friday, when off-duty officer Gary McCarthy, 33, was gunned down as he tried to protect a supermarket manager carring $10,000 back to his store from the bank....

So the Police Department suffered a devastating loss of talent as well as life from its ranks this past weekend. It also sustained its third tragedy in six weeks: Officers James Joe and John Chase were killed in January. They too were young and promising. ...

It is time for everybody to go home — go home to the ethical values that inform every ethnic group in Dallas, go home to the spirit of civic collaboration across many cultures, go home to the understanding that the number one problem in this city is not racial but criminal. All are threatened. All must band together against chaos.

Tragedy Shows Need for License Checks

The Feb. 19 plane accident that took the lives of three (in El Paso) was a terrible tragedy for two families, and touched us all.

But it could have been lots worse. The end of rush hour traffic was on Interstate 10 — traffic barely missed by the crashing plane. It could have hit any of the many businesses on the south side of the freeway... And it could have hurt, perhaps killed, hundreds.

The reason? The pilot of the plane was not licensed to fly the one he was using. Licenses aren't checked before a plane leaves the ground at El Paso International Airport. With hundreds of private planes leaving and landing each day, the Federal Aviation Administration says it is impossible to check them all.

Most pilots are good about following FAA regulations. But it is the few who are a worry. This one accident in thousands of planes coming and going is a very minute percentage. But it only takes one to Checking every pilot would be impossible for the FAA. The structure simply doesn't exist for it. And creating one that did would cost a fortune. But this accident shows the FAA needs to investigate its licensing process and perhaps do some spot checking to see if unlicensed pilots are a serious problem. Only in that way can we know the extent of the problem and hopefully before that one-time accident becomes a reality.

Housing Issue Being Ignored

As warm weather comes, those who flood shelters during the winter begin returning to the streets and concern for their plight often wanes.

Attention, however, must remain focused on the problem, because rather than subsiding, it is increasing.

The problems are complex and range from providing care and rehabilitation for alcoholics and mentally ill people who find themselves without homes — to providing affordable housing for the working poor.

The housing issue is receiving little attention in the current presidential campaighn, though we will be watching for it to emerge. It's an issue worthy of more attention than it has received, one which will increasingly move to the forefront.

Facing Educational Facts Of Life
Sooner or later, Texas must face the educational facts of life. It must choose between hiring more teachers at lower pay of having fewer teachers at better pay.

It can't have it both ways. And the sooner teacher organizations, school administrators, boards of trustees, judges and legislators face up to this fact, the better it will be for the school children and taxpayers of Texas.

Reducing class sizes, rather than using technology to help teachers do a better job with larger classes, is counter-productive. The money pie is just so big; the spiral in tax rates must end.

Our suggestion is to compress the 12-year curriculum into 11

This would require fewer teachers, who could be paid for teaching more days per year increasing their incomes while students

30 more days per year, increasing their incomes while students receive more days of schooling in 11 years than they now get in 12.

That and better management of financial, facility and personnel

That, and better management of financial, facility and personnel resources, would benefit the teachers, the taxpayers and the students. It is a solution the Select Committee on Education should

The Penultimate Word

I SHOULD'A SAID!

Any time someone insults us or smarts off to us we have three possible answers: What we wanted to say, what we should have said, and what we said. What we wanted to say is our first reaction. We do not use this answer often and it is just as well. If we all said what we wanted to say there would be a lot more murder in this world.

What we should have said is never used. It is not used because we do not think of it in time. "Should'a saids" are thought of two days after the event. "Should'a saids" are always the funniest and the best answer. "Should'a saids" tend to creep into our stories. Often we use the should'a said answer as if it were the one we actually used. Some folks might think that is lying, and maybe it is, but it sure helps out some otherwise dull stories.

What we actually said is usually too boring for words. By the time we have calmed down our anger, thought through all of the consequences and figured out how to best say it, there is little left.

I received a letter from a minister last week. I always flinch when a letter starts with faint praise. I know there will be a BUT followed by some pretty strong criticism. The guy liked my book, but.

I wanted to say: (Well, I can't tell you what I wanted to say, this being a family newspaper.)

I should'a said: "Why is it folks who have never written a word always know how everything else should write?"

I did say: "Thank you for your letter. It helps to hear constructive criticism from fellow ministers. I will give your words serious consideration."

It is no wonder I have ulcers. Nothing creates ulcers like excessive tongue biting. I will get over the stress. All I have to do is tell the story about twenty times and use the "Should'a said" version.

President
WASHINGTON -- Those who thought 1987 would bring a turnabout in the declining fortunes of organized labor were grievously disappointed.

True, the unions had reason to be optimistic. After losing about 360,000 members annually for three consecutive years, the unions recorded a relatively small loss of 21,000 members in 1986. That was a remarkable improvement and seemed to suggest the unions had hit bottom at last.

Forget it. In 1987, the unions resumed their downward course, losing 62,000 members. In 1979, unions represented 24 percent of this country's full-time workers; today they can barely claim to represent 17 per-

Keep in mind that the unions lost 62,000 members during a year when our economy was creating 2.5 million new jobs. Perhaps the most sobering numbers of all, from the viewpoint of organized labor, were the union manufacturing jobs that were lost. During a year that saw 400,000 more workers on the job in manufacturing,

Dear Mr. Brooks:

Isn't it true that there is no man who has not sinned, that God just sent one perfect man to Earth, His Son?

All of these pastors and church people get me confused. They all say we have a loving and forgiving God, that God will forgive us from all sins, then we are to live in his image. Preachers tell us all we need is to confess our sins.

I don't want to mention any names, but there was a man who spoke the word of God and along the way he failed and committed a sin or an act against God.

But he did what he thought he had to do. He confessed to the world on television, to his wife, to his church, to his son, to God's people — oh, yes, to God himself.

Let's don't forget we are Christians. Theis man is my brother. I will stand behind him and I hope one day I can even meet him and shake his hand. I love him. I forgive him.

But if what I have seen is what Christianity is all about, just pretending on sunday and not living and forgiving every day, then I don't think I would want to be one.

Man destroys man, not God. Let's give this man a chance. I know God has forgiven him. I have, a million others have. He is my brother and I love him.

Good luck, Jimmy Swaggart.

Bootleg Philosopher Editor's note: The Bootles

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek may have been listening to too many political debates on television, his letter this week suggests.

Dear editor:

Viewpoint

One thing about the candidates for President is that they apparently have had training in not answering questions.

Ask them how they'd balance the budget and they say they'd cut out the fat and leave the muscle. Ask them to list some of the fat and they asnwer with a fourteen-sentence discussion of their hopes for the future of America.

This is the reason I figure the TV program "Face The Nation" should be called "Two-Face The Nation," and "Meet The Press" should be called "Dodge The Question."

Anyway, after listening to the debates the candidates have had and trying to figure out which one takes the longest time to not answer the moderator's questions, I got to wondering how they answered questions on exams when they were in school.

Question: Explain our foreign policy leading up to World War II.

Answer: There are those who say one thing about our foreign policy and some who say another, and there are those in high places who don't say anything, along with others who say too much, but I agree with the President—was it Rutherford B. Hayes or was it Woodrow Wilson?—who said our foreign policy should not consist of open loans openly handed out.

Question: What was the cause of the Civil War?

Answer: First I want to say I am not a Southerner or a Northerner, there was right on both sides and the past should remain the past. Now that we've erased the memory of that long-ago terrible conflict we can look forward with confidence and enjoy these modern times when we've forgotten the past and can now agree that a house divided against itself is a duplex.

Covetousness or Contentment
"Covetousness is one of the greatest sins in the world. ... Paul says that covetousness is idolatry, and thus he gave it his strongest condemnation. ... Covetousness has produced the greatest crimes in history.

"There is nothing more irrational and absurd than covetousness. This is made evident when we consider the intellectual and moral powers of man. By these powers he becomes acquainted with the material and moral universe.

"More sad, indeed, is it for him to dwarf and debase those God-given powers by the sordid spirit of avarice. He defeats the purpose for which God created his intellectual and moral nature. There is nothing more degrading to man's higher nature than covetousness."

---J.W. Lowber, Austin Daily Statesman, Aug. 18, 1902.

TODAY'S INSIGHT: If covetousness is one of the greatest sins in the world, then contentment must be one of the great virtues. Contentment helps produce some of the greatest happiness in one's life, because the intellectual and moral powers have been used with spiritual purposes.

Lowber also said, "The covetous man only thinks about his own desires, and ignores the rights of others." (Austin Daily Statesman, Sept. 29, 1902.) Covetousness manufactures selfish desires that in turn produce crimes, and the committing of crimes is a sign that one is ignoring the rights of others.

Contentment is shown in thanksgiving unto God for the spiritual treasures of life, recognizing that those treasures, as well as material blessings, come from the Giver of all good. In contrast, "Human greed is a bottomless appetite." (Dallas Morning News, March 6, 1903.) No matter how far one goes into the bottomless pit of greed, he will never be satisfied or happy with what he has.

Stanton FHA members attend meeting in Lubbock members attended the FHA/HERO (Future Homemakers of America/Home Economics Related Occupations) regional meeting held in Lubbock on Feb. 20 at the Civic Center.

The theme for FHA/HERO this year is "A Lifetime Adventure" and the opening session and guest speaker reflected this positive idea in their messages. Students were encouraged to fill their lives with concern and caring for others.

After the opening session, the members attended different interest

Stanton Junior High FHA sessions where they met teens from other schools. Over 1,000 members were present at the meetings.

Those that represented Stanton were Stephanie Arellano, Claudia Garcia, Sharon Kindrick, Raina Arroyos, and Cris Morales and were accompanied by the club sponsor Mrs. Kris Dollar.

To be able to go to the conference, students had to meet these requirements: passing all classes, club dues paid, and parent's permission. To top the day off the students went shopping and had lunch at the mall.

Apples, grapes, cranberries, plums and cherries should be stored in the refrigerator immediately after purchase and are best eaten within a week.

Irregular soil surfaces, created by reduced tillage operation, add additional challenge. Residue should be cut into short lengths and partially mixed into the soil. Too much residue in the seed furrow can prevent seed-to-soil contact. If tillage does not mix the residue deeply and uniformly enough, the seed will be planted in residue, not soil. If there is quite a bit a residue, planter press wheels must often have more down pressure to firm the soil around the seed. Reducing speed may help if the planter is jumping over residue and rough field areas. State's leading scorer averaged 35.8 points per game

By CHARLES RICHARDS Associated Press Writer

Houston Bellaire coach Gene Haffington beams when he talks about Elmer Bennett - his 6-foot, 185-pound guard whose 35.8-point average made him this season's leading scorer among Texas' more than 1,000 high schools.

"He's a dream come true for a coach, a once-in-a-lifetime player, the best kid I've coached in my 14 years," Haffington said.

"He's an outstanding shooter from outside the 3-point range, but that's not his best shot. From 15 feet on in, when he shoots, you can just write it in. He's got a great jump shot, and he's a good leaper. He dunks with two hands. He can dunk it any way you like it," Haffington said.

Bennett, who has already committed to Notre Dame, scored 1,110 points in 31 games during the 1987-88 season for Bellaire, raising his fouryear total to 2,930 points, a Class 5A record in Texas. He scored 1,003 points and averaged 30 points per game as a junior.

Runner-up to Bennett among Class 5A scorers this season was Tony Terrell, averaging 33.9 points a game for a San Antonio East Central team that was undefeated and ranked No. 1 in the state going into the weekend.

Terrell scored 56 points Tuesday night in a wild, 129-121 state playoff victory over Victoria that set a Texas high school record for combined points in a game. It broke a mark set during East Central's 129-113 victory over San Antonio Highlands earlier in the season.

"When we're ahead, we don't go to no four corners, or stall. We just keep trying to score to close the door for sure," said Terrell, who scored 18 of his points in the final quarter of the Victoria game.

In Glass 4A, the state's top scorers were Jeffrey Shelley of Dallas Adamson, who averaged 27.7 points, and Cedric Mason of Lamesa, who averaged 27.3 for the Golden Tornadoes.

Bennett, the only senior starter on a 14-17 Bellaire team, has been compared to LaBradford Smith, now playing at Louisville after a great high school career at Bay City.

"The thing LaBradford has on him, he's 6-4 and a better leaper. But as far as handling the ball and seeing the floor and shooting the ball, my kid's better, I think," Haffington said of Bennett. "It's amazing the way he handles the ball, the way he's able to penetrate and find the open man. That's going to be his biggest asset when he gets to Notre Dame. Between his scoring and assists, he's going to account for 35 to 40 points a game for them," Haffington said.

Bennett is happy just to be compared with someone like Smith.

"He was a great player. Probably he was a better athlete, but he's like a 2-guard and I'm like a point guard, if you go by position. I'd say I pro-bably have a better outside shot, but he has that great leaping ability," Bennett said.

Bennett scored 49 points in a Dec. 31 game against Santa Fe and also had five rebounds, five assists and four steals.

"He was unbelievable, but that might not have even been his best game," Haffington said.

Haffington said Bennett narrowed his choices to Notre Dame, Purdue, South Carolina, DePaul and Duke before deciding on the Fighting Irish.

"He was going out of state from Day One. The Southwest Conference is not noted for its basketball, and I guess that's what it boils down to. He wanted to go to a school where basketball is king and not overshadowed by football," Haffington

"And academics at Notre Dame is tremendous, and they pretty well promised him a starting spot as a freshman, replacing David Rivers. It looks like a deal that was meant to 37 points and pulled down 25 rebe," he added.

Bennett, a good student with a 3.69 grade point average at Bellaire, had no trouble with his college SAT test.

Bennett has been selected to play in two all-star games - the McDonald Kentucky Derby Classic in Louisville on April 1 and the Dapper Dan Classin in Pittsburgh on April 8.

"I'm excited about those because it will let me finally go out and take a peek at other players across the nation and see how I can do against them," Bennett said.

Shelley, Class 4A's leading scorer, is only a junior for Dallas Adamson, which went 15-14 this season.

Shelley, although only 6-foot-3 and 185 pounds, has had to play center for Adamson, but dominated games in which he was outsized, Adamson Coach Bob Allen said. Shelley scored bounds in a holiday tournament game against Dallas Pinkston, which had 6-8 Anthony Snowden and two 6-5 players, Allen noted.

Snowden averaged 25.8 points a game and finished among Class 5A's top scorers and rebounders in Texas.

"There's no doubt Jeffrey is going to be a Division I basketball player. He's originally from Louisiana, and he loves LSU, so he's leaning toward there," Dallas Adamson Coach Bob Allen said.

Because Shelley probably will have to play guard in college, Allen has him working on his ball-handling

"Jeffrey is a quick jumper, and he is exceptionally quick. It's like he has a sixth sense to know where that ball is going to come off, as far as getting the rebound. He's real good in getting position, and he's quick. Lots of times, he just beats people to the ball," Allen said.

Most of Shelley's points, Allen added, "come from inside the paint area, and on rebounds, second shots. Jeffrey is good at getting 'garbage' baskets. He just cleans up everything around the basket."

Here is an unofficial list of Texas' top Class 5A and 4A schoolboy basketball scorers this season, as compiled by The Associated Press with calls to coaches and media across the state:

Georgetown coach is feuding

AP Sports Writer

While his Georgetown basketball team battles with Big East opponents, John Thompson is waging a verbal war with CBS Sports.

The feud started when CBS commentator Bill Raftery criticized Thompson on the air after a fight broke out near the end of the Georgetown-Pittsburgh game Feb. 20. Raftery said Thompson had to do a better job of controlling his team, which has been involved in a few fights over the years.

"John Thompson's got to do something," said Raftery, a former coach at Seton Hall. "There have been too many of these (fights) where Georgetown has been involved. I don't care how competitive the game, John has to control his team."

Thompson struck back on his weekly Washington television show.

"Who's he to editorialize on how I should control my team?" Thompson said of Raftery. "Here's a guy who's perceived as being an authority. How can that be when he was completely incompetent at the profession that he's now reporting on."

The dispute mushroomed when Brent Musburger, CBS' No. 1 sports personality, defended Raftery during an interview on a New York cable network.

"The question is, why is Georgetown involved so often in these things?" he said. "It goes further now. What about Thompson as a coach of the (1988 U.S.) Olympic basketball team? Do we now have to worry that our Olympic team will get involved in such incidents?"

Musburger also wondered whether Thompson, who is black, would put any white players on the Olympic

"Is that a question that can be asked?." Musburger said. "Certainly it is. I mean, take a look at his team down at Georgetown. I think a lot of people wonder about that."

In his latest counterattack, Thompson called Musburger's statements "ignorant" and "dangerous."

Thompson said questions about the

Read labels for oils

If you think you're avoiding saturated fat by buying food products that are advertised as "made with 100% vegetable shortening,' think again.

The term "vegetable shortening" on food labels also includes the highly saturated tropical oils, such as palm oil, palm kernel oil and coconut oil, according to Marilyn Haggard, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"Of the fatty acids in coconut oil, 92% are saturated, 86% of those in palm kernel oil are saturated, and 51% of those in palm oil," Haggard remarks. "By contrast, 41% of the fatty acids in lard are saturated, andonly 9% of those in safflower oil."

"Because saturated fats have been of coronary heart disease, consumers are naturally interested in cutting back on this type of fat," she

Deanna Hughes became the bride groom's cake was served by Anof Ruben Vargas, both of Hereford, during an afternoon wedding ceremony Saturday in First Christian Church with the Rev. Mack Mc-Carter, pastor, officiating.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hughes of Perry, Okla., and the bridegroom's parents are umnade cake, which was topped with Mr. and Mrs. Pedro Vargas of 1103

E. Park Ave. Clusters of Boston fern decorated the church altar and mauve bows were arranged on the church pews.

Mrs. Mike Pantlik of Oklahoma City, Okla. served as matron of honor an the groom's cousin, Ricky Castenada, was best man.

Guests were escorted by Edward Lindeman of Midland and the groom's brother, Pete Vargas Jr. of Arizona.

Organ music was played during the wedding ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal-length white satin gown fashioned with a lace cameo neckline with a fitted bodice forming a V-neckline trimmed in delicate lace and miniature seed pearls. The natural waistline was accented at the front by heavy lace and bead work which extended from the V-nekline. The satin sleeves were pouffed at the top and were designed fitted to points over her wrists. Scallops of lace and miniature beads accented the lower portions of the sheer fitted sleeves. The full skirt, accented by scattered lace appliques, was scalloped at the hemline which also featured deep lace scallops forming a chapel-length train.

The fingertip-length bridal illusion veil was gathered at the back of a halo of miniature roses and seed pearls which was intersperced with baby's breath. She carried a nosegay of white roses and rosebuds, pearl leaf accented with pearl streamers and mauve and white lace and satin ribbons. The bouquet was designed by the groom's sister, Grace Gamez. The bride's jewelry consisted of diamond earrings. Bridal attendants wore satin mauve dresses fashioned with front box pleats, sashes at the waists, and puffy sleeves. They carried small bouquets of white roses and rosebuds accented with white and mauve rib-

Mothers of the bridal couple were each presented with a single fresh rose before the conclusion of the wedding ceremony. The bride's mother was attired in a pastel pink straight shift and a jacket featuring cap sleeves. The bridegroom's mother chose to wear a royal blue tea-length satin dress with a lace overlay. Both wore corsages of white lilies enhanced with mauve ribbons.

The groom's niece, Trisha Munoz of Hereford, invited guests to register at the reception held in the Hereford Country Club. The entry way was decorated with Boston fern, ficus and corn plants.

Church music theme of recent program

St. Anthony's Women's Organization met for Mass and a meeting Tuesday evening with Father Hector Madrigal as celebrant of the Mass. Francie Farr served as minister of the word and ministers of music were Ann Lueb, Sister Nancy, and Kathy Revell.

The business meeting was held in the music room of St. Anthony's School. Sharon Cramer, director of music for St. Anthony's Parish, presented a program on church music. She discussed church music from the time of the early Christians through the reformation period and Vatican II until the present time.

The early Christians participated in the music but during the 10-12th centuries there was no participation by the people. It was more of a contemplative exercise between clergy and choir. Gregorian chant was considered the best style of music but was not conducive to full active participation. Following Vatican II with the change from Latin to the vernacular, there was a period of indecisiveness and experimentation in church music. At present there is new development and the text of the music is based on scripture and liturgy and is becoming more inspirational again.

Music is the most appropriate form of praise of God. Points were illustrated with songs by the church adult choir. The choir was represented by Yvonne Elliott, Angeline Reinart, Ralph and Judy Detten, Don and Ann Meyer, Gary and Betty Kriegshauser, Violet Reinauer, Jean Reinauer, Roger Albracht, Randy Farr, and Mark Peiffer, Cheryl Betzen accompanied the coir singing "Gather Us In," "Adoramus Ted", "Love of the Lord", "One Bread, One Body," and "Holy God, We Praise Thy Name." She also accompanied Angeline Reinart who performed "Ave Maria" on the violin.

The business meeting was conducted by Francie Farr. The group was advised that the Public Utilities Commission is accepting recommendations on two propositions concerning 976 service numbers. Proposition I would ban all services; Proposal II would make the service available by subscription only. All present were advised to act by March 25. Write to Public Utilities Commission,7800 Schoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. (512-458-1223).

The new cookbooks of St. Anthony's Women's Organization, entitled "Recipes from the Heart' are now available and can be purchased from any member. It was also announced that a special event, "Prme of Live", is planned for church members 45-64 years of age at 7 p.m. March 12. This will be a supper and entertainment will be pro-

Applications for pageant available

All young ladies from Hereford are invited to enter the Women's Division's annual Miss Hereford Scholarship Pageant planned Saturday, April 30.

If interested in becoming a contestant, applications are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office and the office at Hereford High School. Each contestant will have the opportunity to share in the fun, money, scholarships, and prizes in the upcoming pageant, as well as being involved in a gala entertainment evening for the entire community.

This year's pageant theme is "Down Under" in honor of the Australian Bicentennial and the Hereford Chamber Singers' trip to World Expo '88. A special guest appearance by "Crocodile Dundee" is expected and everything from kangaroos to koalas will be featured.

The pageant is divided into three areas: interview (to be conducted the morning of the pageant) and talent and evening gown. Pageant activities include an entire week of rehearsals beginning April 25-29. Rehearsals are required because of the time needed to practice the opening number involving all of the contestants and the individual talent practices. "The pageant is a great opportunity to make new friends and be a part of an exciting production," explained steering committee member, Donna West.

A get-acquainted coke party will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 10, at the Hereford State Bank for the girls and their mothrs. Steering committee members will be on hand to answer questions. Interested mothers and girls may call Donna West at 364-3740 or Betty Taylor at 364-4621 or other committee members: Kathy Allison, Judy Barrett, Betty Drake and Debra Perry.

Off to one side was a unity candle also decorated with the bride's chosen colors.

Wendy Reid of Canyon served as maid of honor. Bruce Setliff of Stinnett, brother of the groom, served as best man.

Bridesmaids included Shelly Bedwell of Plainview, Lisa Biddle of Canyon, and Kaylene Morrison of Lubbock. Serving as groomsmen were James Green of San Antonio; Craig Setliff of Turkey, the groom's brother; and Kip Savage of Hereford, brother of the bride.

Principal selections included "A Long Line of Love," "The Wedding Song," "Doubly Good to You," and 'Household of Faith."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a traditional wedding gown which was worn by her mother at her wedding 25 years ago. The dress was composed of candlelight satin covered with lace, had long sleeves of lace, and flowed into a full skirt. Q. How can I prevent cheesecake from cracking on top? F.S., East Rockaway, NY

A. Bake cheesecake at a low temperature (300 to 325 degrees) and be sure that oven maintains an accurate temperature to allow proteins in the eggs and cream cheese to coagulate slowly and evenly. Also, place cake on middle rack of oven for ven heat distribution. Q. Is it safe to microwave popcorn in a paper bag? A.P., St. Paul, MN

A. Probably not. Most microwave oven manufacturers do not recommend popping corn in a paper bag. Either use a popper or packaged corn designed for microwave use or pop the corn conventionally.

Coming to a television near you: Reality

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The firstrun situation comedy may have peaked in the television syndication market, and "reality" programming - talk and information shows seems to be the trend for the fall.

The National Association of Television Program Executives has just concluded its 25th-anniversary convention in Houston, and a number of the new programs being offered are reality based, such as "USA Today," a news show designed to be a TV version of the newspaper.

An estimated 8,000 people attended the five-day meeting at the George for the convention. "It seems to be bigger than any move in that direction we've had in the past."

Other "reality" shows being offered include "Group One Medical," from MGM, "Public People, Private Lives," from Orbis Communications, "The Howard Cosell Show," from Casablanca, and "On Trial," from Republic. "USA Today" is from GTG Entertainment.

"I think this trend will pick up speed if any of these shows are successful," said Corvo. "Another trend said in an interview before leaving I see is that some shows are leaning toward horror and science fiction."

Lorimar has "Nightmare on Elm Street" and MCA has "The Munsters," a revival of the horror spoof from the 1960s. Already o the market are Paramount's "Star Trek" and "Friday the 13th." Another new show will be Paramount's 'War of the Worlds," based on the novel by H.G. Wells and the award-winning 1953 movie by George

MGM has 30 new episodes of "The Twilight Zone," in addition to 64 vinR. Brown Convention Center. The convention is the major arena for producers to show off their new programs and for station program executives to pick and choose syndicated shows for the next television

Altogether, between 300 and 400 shows are being offered to the program executives. The shows include reruns of network shows and packages of motion pictures.

"What I see is a movement toward reality programming," A. Philip Corvo, executive director of NATPE classic series.

By far the most successful of the distributors is King World, which has "Wheel of Fortune," "Jeopardy" and "The Oprah Winfrey Show."

"There doesn't seem to be a dent in the popularity of those shows," said Corvo.

That doesn't mean reruns of network comedies aren't selling, however.

"Bill Cosby is going into syndication in 1988 or '89 with the highestpriced off-network show in the history of television," said Corvo. "Who's the Boss?' is also going into tage shows from the Rod Serling syndication and that is getting some very high prices. In fact, the offnetwork stuff is so expensive that it's helping the sale of first-run syndicated shows. It's making them more attractive economically.'

Corvo said he also sees renewed interest in hourlong, off-network shows, which have not done well in syndicated sales in recent years.

"The USA Network has picked up 'Miami Vice' and 'Murder, She Wrote,'" he said. "This is a cable network, but it programs just like an independent station and sells commercial time. It's just like a superstation."

Peebles surprised by reaction

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Mario Van Peebles, making his first real venture into television, is amazed that producers and network executives are listening to his suggestions and putting them on the screen.

Van Peebles stars in the NBC comedy-adventure series "Sonny Spoon" as an unorthodox detective who is part con man, part actor, and regularly slips into other characterizations to get the job done.

Last year, he appeared in about six episodes of NBC's "L.A. Law" and won the NAACP Image Award as best supporting actor for his role in "Heartbreak Ridge."

Brandon Tartikoff, president of NBC Entertainment, called him in for a meeting and asked him to do a series. Producer Stephen J. Cannell saw a short film he did and wanted to work with him. So Tartikoff, Cannell and Van Peebles went to work on the idea of "Sonny Spoon."

Van Peebles suggested some scenes for the show. "One is that I hide out in a Baptist church dressed up as a big lady in the choir," he says. "Then the choral director points to me and I have to sing a solo. They used my suggestion.

"In another show, a friend of mine steals some jewels from a mobster, not knowing he's a mobster. When he finds out, I dress up like a priest and return the jewels.

"Sonny's like a chameleon. He can plug into any character. In the episode we're doing now I go undercover as a white yuppie. I have blue

Reynolds heads 'Channels'

"It's exciting for me as an actor. You get to play so many different roles. I can cross age lines, sex lines, race lines."

Until about two years ago, Van Peebles was working mostly in the theater as an actor, writer and director. He grew up in show business as the son of director-actor Melvin Van

A short film he wrote, directed and played in, "Juliet," attracted some attention. "It's about a girl who goes through a bunch of guys," he says. "I played all the guys. Cannell saw that and wrote some of those characterizations into 'Sonny Spoon.'

Van Peebles says that both Tartikoff and Cannell encouraged his suggestions about the show.

"To tell the truth, I wasn't sure anything would come out of it," he says. "That's why I was so bold in speaking up. For instance, I said I didn't want my character to carry a gun. I called him a 'finagling humanitarian.' It's like when Bugs Bunny comes up against the Tasmanian Devil. He has to get out of that situation on his wits alone.

"That makes it a little tougher to write. It's easy to write that a character gets out of a car and pulls a gun. It's much harder to have him suddenly become a Hispanic taxi

Van Peebles got a degree in economics at Columbia University and went to work as a budget analyst for the city of New York.

"I figured if I could do Mayor (Edward) Koch's budget I could do a movie budget," he says. "I thought it was time to get back into acting and thought dad would help out. I took him to his favorite Chinese restaurant. I said, 'I've got my degree, are you going to help me

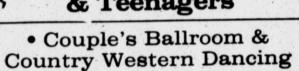

"He said, 'No.' He said the restaurant was full of people who were waiting for a break. It was up to me to go out and make my own breaks. But mom and dad were very supportive. They came to see me in every little play I did. Now I meet some kids of famous people who can't do anything on their own.

television. Changing from a Chicago newspaper to a satellite news network does surprisingly little damage to the timeless "Front Page" plot. If anything, the deadline urgency is more pronounced, given the com-

Many people make the mistake of walking in shoes that are constructed for running, tennis or other activity, says Dr. Fred Stutman, a former researcher in exercise physiology at the U.S. Naval Air Development Center.

"A walking shoe should have a wide, flexible toe box and stronger heel support than an aerobic or running shoe," explains Stutman, the author of seven books on fitness walking who also has been a consultant for Hush Puppies.

"An ideal walking shoe should be curved on the bottom like the sole of your foot. This creates a comfort curve that is essential in maintaining a smooth rocking motion and stability in your walking gait."

Other features to look for in a good walking shoe, Stutman adds, are real leather uppers, the portion of the shoe above the sole. Synthetic materials should be avoided, he says, because they are not porous enough to breathe or flexible enough to bend with the foot.

YOUR BABY'S EYE

If your baby is less than six months old, it is not unusual for his or her eyes to cross or turn occasionally. Your baby has not yet developed full eye muscle control.

If the crossing or eye turn continues, however, or increases in frequency, the baby's eyes should be examined. Children do not outgrow crossed-eyes, or an eye that turns outwards to the side of the head. The earlier treatment is started, the better chance exists for straightening out the eyes.

Many cases of crossed eyes, or eyes that turn out, can often be corrected through a combination of prescription lenses and vision training. Any visual acuity weakness will be corrected at the same time that the eyes are being straightened. In time, the child is taught to use the two eyes together, so that the eyes remain straight and in alignment. Surgery is only recommended when other methods of correction are unsuccessful.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been reading and hearing a lot about how taking an aspirin every other day might help prevent a heart attack. Since heart attack is the No. 1 killer in the United States, this is wonderful news if true.

Will you please answer some questions? I'm sure many others are wondering about the same things.

How legitimate were the experiments? Who conducted them? It occurred to me that this might be a wonderful promotion stunt to get people to buy aspirin. Nothing was said about women. Will this work for them as well? Could other painkillers such as Tylenol, Nuprin and Advil be taken as substitutes by people who can't take aspirin because of stomach trouble?

Thanks for the information, Ann. We trust you.-D.R. (Mitchell, S.D.)

DEAR MITCH: The experiment to determine if one aspirin every other day would reduce the incidence of heart attack was conducted by the Physicians Health Study Group at the Harvard Medical School with a big assist from the American Medical Association.

The experiment began in 1983 and 22,071 male physicians participated. One group took an aspirin every other day and the others took placebos, tablets that looked the same but had no active ingredients.

The results were spectacular. The risk of heart attack was substantially lower among those who took the aspirin. There was no change in the group taking the placebos.

The brand of aspirin used in the experiment was Bufferin. Tylenol, Advil and Nuprin will not work for this purpose because they contain no aspirin.

The experts say an aspirin every other day may work as well for women but since no women were included in the experiment no one can yet say for certain.

Although aspirin is the safest (and most widely used) drug in America, it should not be taken for this purpose without consulting your doctor. And remember, aspirin will not substitute for regular exercise, cutting down on fat in your diet and not

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to woman who was propositioned by the repairman. He inquired if her husband was at home. When she told him that he was in the Navy he asked if she would like to go into the bedroom.

I'm sure such things happen, but

Finalizing Convention Plans

Much work has gone into planning the 42nd Annual Convention of District 1, Texas Garden Clubs, Inc. which will be held March 14-15 in the Hereford Community Center. The spring convention, called "Western Round-Up, Hereford Style", is being hosted by Hereford Garden Club and Bud to Blossom Garden Club. General chairman Patricia Robinson, center, looks over Jerri Jackson's plans, left, for packets, door prizes, props and staging while general co-chairman Ursalee Jacobsen, right, offers suggestions.

I would like to take this opportunity to tell you a little about a unique organization in our community. This organization is only 13 years old and yet is becoming a vital support group. Right now the membereship numbers a little more than 100. This organization is the Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library.

The Friends group has been instrumental in helping the library gain equipment that it would otherwise not have been able to purchase. Its financial support has also enabled the library to offer special programs for the community, such as, a babysitting clinic, discussion groups, book reviews, a greatly needed literacy training program for tutors, and special speakers such as John Erickson and Dan True.

The Friends have also supported the development of a talking book, or books on tape collection for the person who is unable to read for some reason, or for the commuter who would like to be able to read and drive at the same time. This group has also sponsored the Family Film, so that a family can come together as a family unit and enjoy this time together in a wholesome atmosphere.

The Friends group helps pay for the distribution of any publicity that is sent out for special programming available through the library. But even more than all of this, at a time when the Texas Legislators were discussing and developing a bill that would have left more than 25 Panhandle libraries with no director, thus forcing them to close their doors, this Friends group took action. Those Friend members wrote letters, made phone calls, and even sent their library director to Austin to speak. When the library director arrived in Austin, she was stricken with such a terrible case of laryngitis that her husband and Friends member had to speak in her place. These brave people with the tremendous support succeeded in reversing this legislative decision. From this action a Texas Panhandle Citizen for libraries has been organized so that the libraries in the Texas Panhandle nave representation in Austin

The Friends of the Deaf Smith County Library receives the money necessary for these projects through the October book sale, adn the annual membership drive in March. There are currently 4,356 library card holders at the Deaf Smith County Library, and only 141 members of the Friends group. The Friends of the Library organization is open to any citizen who is interested in keeping an active library in their community. I do encourage each of you to become a library supporter through this organization. To become a member all you need to do is come by the library or send your membership fee to: Deaf Smith County Library, Individual membership - $2; Family membership - $5; Organization & Business Membership, $10; Lifetime membership $100. or more.

As a Friends member you will receive a monthly calendar of all the activities that are to take place and any special programming we have planned. You will also be able to attend the presale before the October book sale is opened up for the public.

Judge Robert Bork to lecture

The Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecture Series will present Judge Robert Bork at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, March 30 in the Virgil Henson Activities Center Ballroom on the West Texas State University campus.

Bork, a circuit judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia from 1982-88, received national attention following his July 1987 nomination to the Supreme Court. Bork's nomination was rejected by the Senate on Oct. 23 by a vote of 58 to 42, the largest vote in history against a Supreme Court nominee. His March lecture before the Panhandle audience, "Remarks by the Honorable Robert Bork," will include such subjects as the U.S. Constitution, the U.S. Court system and the Supreme Court confirmation

Tickets to the lecture are complimentary and will be distributed on first-come, first-served basis beginning Monday, March 21. Approximately 1,500 tickets will be avaiable from the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce, the Canyon Chamber of Commerce and West Texas State communication services. Written requsts, accompanied by a self-addressed stamped envelope, should be mailed to Bork Tickets, West Texas State University, Communication Services, Box 788, Canyon, Texas 79016.

The Bea and Boone Pickens Distinguished Lecture Series, designed to provide a positive enrichment experience for West Texas State University students and the surrounding community, was initiated April 9, 1987, with the best selling author of Megatrends, John Naisbitt.

WTSU President Ed D. Roach was inspired to establish the guest lecturer program while reading about the Lyceum Series in J.A. Hill's book, More Than Brick and Mortar.

The series was revived and named for Bea and Boone Pickens in recognition of their contributions to the University.

A generous donation was arranged by Melvin and Mike Isley of the Amarillo Credit Association to cover the expenses of procuring quality lecturers.

Ruland to chair Cancer Crusade

"The breakdown of how American Cancer Society funds are spent in Texas represents one of the best returns on the dollar that I know of." said Kee Ruland, chairman of the 1988 educational and fund raising crusade in Hereford.

In preparing for the April Crusade, Ruland feels it is important for the community to realize ACS expenditures. "It is one part of the ACS we're most proud of and I think our friends and neighbors will be more willing to give to cancer control if they know how well their money is being spent," she said.

The following represents the breakdown of how each dollar raised in 1986-87 by the ACS was invested during the last fiscal year (September 1, 1987-August 31, 1988) in Texas:

Cancer Research $.37, Professional Education, .10, Public Education, 30, Service/Rehabilitation, .24, Program Development Administration, .13, Crusade .13. Total is $1.19.

This $1.19 percent expenditure reflects increased research allocations to Texas by our National Socie-

"The ACS is currently sponsoring research investigations in 11 major Texas hospitals, medical schools and universities totaling over $6.9 million," said Ruland. "Because Texas has so many research institutions, the National society allocates additional funds here.'

"Programs that help people are our priority. We keep a tight control over our administrative costs and keep them within acceptable limits as this breakdown indicates," Ruland commented.

ACS programs such as patient service and rehabilitation (Reach to Recovery, volunteer transportation, etc.), public education (films, pamphlets, exhibits, the Great American Smokeout) and professional education for the medical community are mainly administered through the Society's volunteer system. Volunteers help maintain these impressive figures," said Ruland.

Emotional responses vary

It is almost time for an important job interview when, just a few miles from your destination, you have a flat tire. The sheer inopportunity of the situation leaves you immobile, just staring at the tire in disbelief. You are sure you have lost any chance of getting the coveted job.

It is almost time for a tie-breaking baseball game to begin when you realize you have a flat tire. The anger you feel propels you into action allowing you to change the tire in record time. You make it to the game

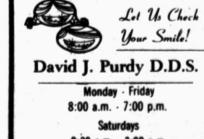

The varying responses to the same unfortunate happening are caused by how an individual handles emotions, said Dr. Roger Thomas, assistant professor of psychology at Texas Christian University.

"Everyone has learned various ways to react to different emotional circumstances," explained Thomas. "If we know how individuals are going to react under certain circumstances, whether they have a tendency to blame themselves or external factors, we can predict how they might react and teach them to react more productively." To understand better the role emotions play, Thomas explained four different characteristics of moods. The arousal level experienced from an unexpected event is the first characteristic. The second is evaluation, deciding whether the arousal experienced is good or bad. A person's attention is directed and focused during the third step. How the situation is evaluated and where the attention is focused, the fourth component, is based largely on learning history.

"If you focus on the negative, you don't have the cognitive attention, the resources to give to the situation. This is directing the emotion inward, which often leads to depression," the TCU psychologist stated. "You need to direct your focus outward in order to change the circumstances at hand."

In 1986, the combined effect of smaller volume (a decrease of 3.6 percent) and lower export prices (by 12.7 percent) reduced the value of Latin American exports by 15.8 percent, according to the Inter-American Development Bank.

Drive Chairmen

The annual Cancer Crusade has been scheduled for April 24-31 with the door-to-door campaign planned from 2-5 p.m. Sunday, April 24. President of the Deaf smith County Unit of ACS, Kee Ruland, is the residential drive chairman, and Richard Ottesen, at left, and Jim Arney, are serving as the crusade chairmen for local businesses. Hereford residents will be given the opportunity to donate the ACS and will also receive information packets from volunteers. In conjunction with the Cancer Crusade, local board members are planning a benefit spaghetti supper from 5-7 p.m. April 22 with the location to be announced at a later date.

TANNER SHAD MURPHY West Central - Fourth Grade

I think teenage pregnancy is a national problem that is creating an economic, social, physical, and emotional crisis. Every day more than three thousand teenagers become pregnant. At this rate 39 out of 100 girls who are fourteen years old today will become pregnant at least once before they reach the age of twenty.

Twenty-one of these teenagers will give birth at least once, 15 will have at least one abortion, and 6 will have at least one miscarriage or stillbirth.

Most of these pregnancies are unintentional. Not only is childbirth more dangerous for teenage mothers than for mothers in their twenties, but the first-year death rate for their babies is also higher.

Teenage mothers tend to drop out of school to take care of their babies. Frequently unable to work because of lack of education, thy eventually become dependent upon welfare. Fifty percent of young people between the ages of fifteen and nineteen are sexually active. But younger teenagers should know that they have a choice of whether or not to become sexually active and that sexual activity demands responsibility.

TEEN SUICIDE Belinda Ortiz

Suicide at any age is a crime, but when teenagers commit suicide, it's a tragedy. Teenage suicide is increasing daily. It is the eighth major cause of death in the United Statesranking second after accidentsamong adolescents and young adults.

Most suicide cases are caused by depression. Depression is the number one cause of teen suicide. What brings on this depression? It may be the loss of a loved one, a the emotional stress of a "break-up" and turn to suicide as an "escape." Divisions in the home can trigger depression which can lead to suicide, and the lack of communication can be a contributing factor also.

A person thinking about committing suicide often exhibits warning signals, such as anxiety, hostility, or anger. Experts agree that some suicides can be prevented if the warning signs are detected soon enough.

In 1984, close to 2000 Americans between the ages of 15 and 19 committed suicide. Will we allow this tragedy to continue despite the warning signs, or will the cry for help be answered?

Dear editor:

We need more buses in Hereford, Texas. How many times do my parents have to drive me to school,9 months out of the year.

I'm at La Plata Junior High, and my brother goes to Northwest. He gets a bus and I do not. The distance is way too far, 18 blocks from Quince Street. What if all of the parents cars quit? Can you imagine how many kids would have to walk to get to school. It should not be the parents responsibility to find transportation for their child. In bad weather conditions, why should students have to walk to school and miss the next day anyway because they are sick?

The reasons above show why busing is so important and how much trouble it causes by not being there in the Hereford Community.

five-story parking garage. The first tevel will be for teachers parking, so that the students will be able to gain the physicl benefits of the extra walking.

The second and third levels will be open for students to use as they please. Both the fourth and fifth levels will be under construction, unfortunately, leaving only half of each level open for parking. Doubts as to whether or not the front gate will be allowed to be closed still exist, but it will be installed nevertheless.

It is not known if sufficient funds will be available to complete the construction, but the problem is expected to be solved at least half way into the project.

Rivalries Between Schools Brenda Greenawalt

Rivalries between schools always seem to bring out people's worst characteristics, such as rowdiness and poor sportsmanship. There are, however, some very good aspects of rivalry between schools.

First of all, rivalry brings unity among the students. Everyone has the same hope and goal: victory. Rivalry brings students together when nothing else will. Secondly, rivalry improves school spirit. School spirit is much greater when the opponent is a rival and not just another team. Thirdly, a winning spirit makes everyone, the players and the spectators, feel good, not only about the team, but about themselves too. Players fight harder to win, for themselves and the crowd when there is a winning spirit in the atmosphere. Rivalry and a winning spirit is part of the tradition of sportsmanship in Hereford, and part of Hereford's reputation is the respect for opponents.

Stereotypes In Hereford High Monica D. Grotegut

"A standardized mental picture held in common by members of a group and representing an over simplified opinion is what we in Hereford High know as sterotyping. Students at Hereford High place other students in several different categories. These categories include: Preppies, Jocks, Stoners, Rednecks, Nerds, and the average people.

Preppies, the students who get all caught up in the world of high fashion, make up the largest clique. Athletes generally occupy the jock category. Stoners consist of the people who engage in the illegal use of drugs. The students who consider themselves to be cowboys classify as Rednecks. Nerds, are the people at school who have a hard time fitting in with the rest of the students. Finally, we come to the people who do not necessarily fit into one certain category, the average people. Unfortunately, this group does not have a specific name; however, these people usually tend to associate with members of several of the other cli-

Sometimes people take stereotyping too far but for the most part students do not mind being cast into these groups. To some extent it helps them to feel as if they fit in with the rest of the students.

Many Hispanics have dropped out of school. There are many reasons for this. One such reason is that some parents believe education isn't important. Those parents believe that they can earn money by doing things the old fashion way, working hard labor. This attitude is then picked up by the child. The child then drops out of school when they have the chance to do so.

Another reason is the need for money. As the family grew, so did the need for money. Those who could work did work and sometimes those who weren't old enough did also. A third reason is that the family migrated. This made it difficult for the child. As they got further behind in their studies they lost interest in school. They felt that they were not smart enough for school. So they dropped out of school. I believe a person who works hard to achieve their goals will be a better person for it. They will learn that good things are worth working hard for and not to give up when times are hard. With a good education, Hispanics and others will at least have a chance at a better

If that's what you want to do go ahead, but that is not a reason to drop out of school.

Parent-teacher conferences important

Sooner or later nearly every parent has a conference with his or her child's teacher. When we have a conference, we want to get the greatest possible value from it for our children and for us. To do so, it is important that we understand the purposes of the conference and the responsibility we have for making it

Every parent-teacher conference has three major purposes: first, to secure information about our children's progress in school; second, to provide information about our children that may be helpful to the teacher; and third, to work with the teacher to resolve any problems that stand in the way of our children's learning.

When we have a conference with our child's teacher, we must be clear about the specific objectives of the conference. We need to tell the teacher at the start of the conference what our objective is. To decide exactly how we will state our objective, we need to ask ourselves, "What specifically do I want to know? Do I want to know how my child compares with other children in the class? Do I want to know how I can help my child expand his or her circle of friends? Do I want to know what academic growth has occurred in my child during the last grading period? Do I want to know why my child is having problems in learning or behavior? Do I want to know what I can do to help my child have the most valuable school experience

Regardless of what we want to know, we must be specific about our objective-and ask that the teacher talk with us about it. We should realize that the teacher will also have a specific objective in mind that he or she wants to talk about and it may be different from ours. If so, we can agree at the start of the conference that we will devote some time to both objectives. The amount of time allocated for the conference is sometimes limited. As a result, there is not always sufficient time to address fully both the parent's and the teacher's objecties. If there is not enough time, then we should ask the teacher to schedule another con-teacher and talk openly about concerns and problems our child might be experiencing. We need to be willing to give the teacher as much information as possible to help the teacher achieve his or her objective. If we do, the likelihood of the conference being a fruitful one is greatly enhanced. How do we get the most out of a parent-teacher conference? We can begin by knowing what we want to get out of it and then addressing that point. Focusing on the objective leads to the most effective use of the limited time available. Going to the conference witha positive attitude also increases the possibility of a successful conference. If we have a successful conference with the teacher, we will know that we have done our part in helping our children to have the best possible learning experience at school.

Proper action can settle differences

When you believe your child has been treated unfairly at school, you can choose from two courses of action. You can share your concern and neighbors and tell them about that "stupid" teacher or administrator, or you can seek some resolution of the problem by contacting the anger with your friends and, teacher or administrator.

that many parents avoid contacting the school. Why don't we contact the teacher to learn the details of the situation and work out the problem? Many parents say, "I won't contact the school, because if I do the teacher will take it out on my child." This could happen, and perhaps it has happened in some instances. But that's not the way the vast majority of teachers behave. Make no mistake, parents should contact the school when they have a concern about their child's education. If contact is avoided, the problem is unlikely to be resolved. Worse, both the parents and the child may develop negative attitudes about teachers and schools. And negative attitudes and resentment

Unfortunately, experience shows are never conducive to good school experiences, much less school suc-

When you have a question or a concern about your child's education, you have an obligation to your child and yourself to contact the school. Your first contact should be with your child's teacher so that you can discuss the problem and hear the teacher's explanation. Your questions and your comments should be made in a calm and reasoned manner. If your concern is legitimate, a calm and reasonable demeanor will most likely secure cooperation, help, and a resolution to the problem. And if your concern is not warranted, the teacher will feel good about both you and your child after you leave the conference-and your behavior will set the stage for better communication in the future.

If the conference with the teacher does not result in a resolution of the problem to your satisfaction, the next step is to contact the principal of the school. If you still feel that the problem is not resolved, contact the central office personnel or even the board of education. We live in a democratic society, and a parent always has the right to appeal to a higher level of authority in working out a problem.

Know this: Teachers, principals, and superintendents are not always right in dealing with students' educational problems, even though they try to be. But remember this as well: Parents are not always right either. They sometimes jump to the wrong conclusions and make mistakes when considering their child's education. But overriding these realities is a firm truth. Both the teacher and the parents have an obligation to do what is best for the child. Fortunately, teachers and parents understand this obligation. However, unless parents and teachers fulfill the responsibility by talking and sharing their concerns, the child is the one who will lose.

When you are concerned about your child's experiences at school, exercise the one best option. Contact teachers and school officials so that you can discuss and resolve the problem. But do so with the idea that both you and the teacher are committed to the same goal: to help your

Honors, awards draw attention

A great deal of attention is afforded to elementary and secondary students who participate in athletics, drama, music, and debate. They are given medals, certificates, letters, banquets, and much attention by the media. By the time these students graduate from high school, they usually have many honors and awards. But the students who do not participate in these and similar activities often receive little recognition. Indeed, most students complete their academic studies with no honors, awards, or celebration other than the high school graduation exercise.

At a time when academic achievement is being emphasized, many parents are puzzled as to why this condition exists. It's true, if a student is elected to the National Honor Society or is the recipient of an important scholarship, he or she may receive a certificate and some media attention. But few students are elected to the National Honor Society; and few students receive scholarships. So, most students are left out of the limelight.

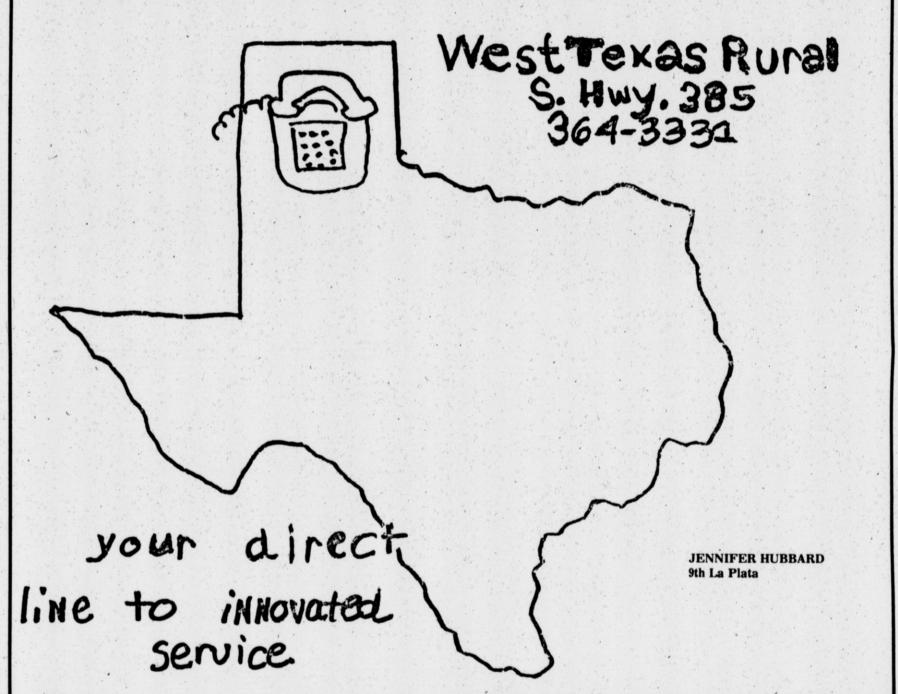

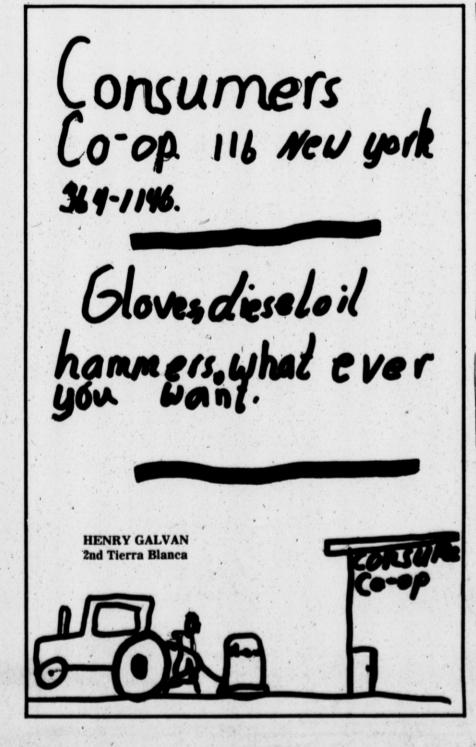

There is a news media truism that' if a dog bites a man, that isn't news. That incident isn't newsworthy because it happens too frequently. But should a man happen to bite a dog, the incident may well warrant a headline. The purpose of the schools is learning. And learning is part of the ordinary routine. That doesn' always make it newsworthy, even though learning is always good news. But we, as parents, would do well to remember that learning is its own honor and reward. It is more important than any ceritificate, medal, or news coverage that students might receive. Once we learn something, no one can take it from us. And we can benefit from it all of our lives. That is a true honor and a real

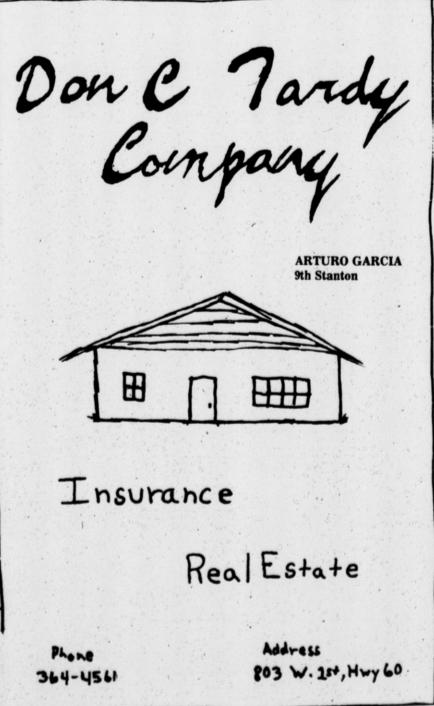

The certificates, medals, and letters a student receives are packed away. The banquets are soon forgotten, and what seemed important at the moment fast loses any real significance. Our learning, however, is not put away. We carry it with us at all times. It is available for use twenty-four hours a day every day of the year.

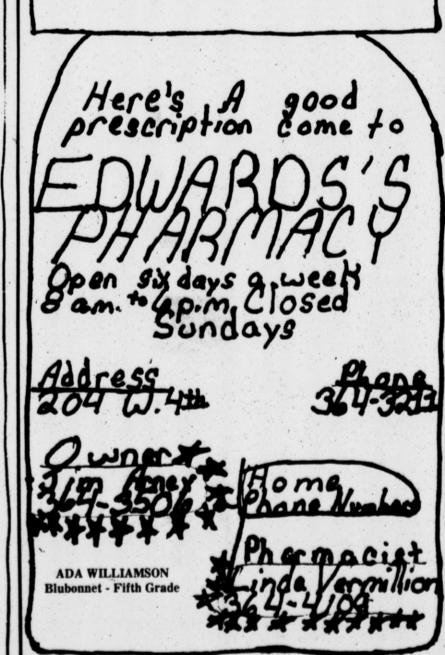

As parents, we are sometimes upset that so much attention is paid to the extracurricular successes of students while so little is given to academic achievement. It is a characteristic of human society to honor those who entertain us and amuse us more than those who labor day after day to keep civilization on course. That reality shouldn't disturb us. It is much more important that we as parents honor our children for their academic achievement in school rather than lament the absence of honors and awards for academic achievement.

The most significant adults in any child's life are his or her parents. If we cherish learning for ourselves and our children, and if we praise our children for their learning successes, we bestow upon them the greatest honor and the finest award. This may be our greatest obligation.

Number of tests increases

The number of tests that children must take at school has increased substantially in recent years. Only a few years ago, parents might have expected their child to be tested only two or three times during the school years to determine his or her intelligence quotient. And the child migh be given an achievement test perhaps once every other year.

These tests are still being given today. But in most schools a number of other tests are being given as well. These include competency tests in reading, mathematics, and other subjects as well as tests to help determine if some children need to be placed in special programs for the handicapped or the gifted.

Additionally, other tests may be used by teachers in order to determine the correct level of difficulty at which to offer instruction to each child. And teachers use their own tests to measure the degree of students' mastery of the skills or subject matter being taught.

Much of the increased use of tests has come as a result of a national emphasis on academic excellence and a desire by lawmakers to measure the extent and amount of our children's learning. As parents, we often have strong feelings about tests. Some of us are convinced that more testing is needed. Some of us are equally convinced that none of the testing is really even necessary. Before we hold too firmly to one opinion or the other, however, we ought to understand what tests are designed to do. A test simply measures achievement at one point in time.

The appropriate way to look at tests is to view them as indicators. Indeed, a test score is only one measure of how a student performed at one given point in time. The test dent was not feeling well, and the result was a low test score. Or the test results might represent an extraordinary performance because the student was rested or highly motivated the day the test was taken.

Although test results may accurately reflect a student's ability, there is no guarantee that they do. thus, a test score should not be regarded as a hard and fast report of ability, intelligence, or any other characteristic.

The purpose of tests is to gain a better understanding of the individual student. Tests are best used to help teachers design appropriate educational programs for a student because they uncover areas of strength and weakness. Tests also provide the student with an opportunity to apply what he or she knows about solving problems in a new situation. Some tests provide information that teachers and parents can use when discussing a child's school performance. And tests can provide information about areas in which the child may need extra support or praise from parents. Looking at the results of a child's tests over a period of time can provide parents with some notion of their child's ability and achievement.

It must be emphasized again that test scores are only indicators. They are not infallible measures of intelligence, ability or performance. That is whey we must be careful to use them only for designated purposes. And we should never use them to label a child with a tag that may last a lifetime. If we keep the limitations of tests in mind, however, they can be valuable tools in providing the best possible education for every child, and that is something we all

Plan for college, training in advance

All parents want to provide their children with every possible advantage to live useful and productive lives. For many parents that means making plans for sending their children for college, vocational, or technical training after they graduate from high school. That training can be expensive. Tuition rates at public universities continue to rise, and those at private college are extremely high. It's nearly as costly to send a student to a vocational or technical school. Added to tuition charges are the costs of housing and meals during those college and voational school years. That's why many families claim, "We can't children." It is a well-justified claim.

There are two questions that must be considered as our sons and daughters near the end of the high school years. The first question is "Do I want my son or duaghter to student, there are many scholarships continue in an educational program?" And the second is "Does my son or daughter want to continue in an educational program?" If the answer to both questions is yes, then a significant part of the problem is solved. Making a firm commitment to further education often opens up many avenues for financing it.

Ideally, a family should begin to put money aside for higher education afford further training for our when the children are very young. No matter the amount, a few dollars set aside each month for a child's further training will provide a good

> For the able as well as the needy and grants. That is a reason for every family to check with the school counselor about scholarship help, as well as with colleges and universities.

Beyond grants and scholarships are special loans that are available to students who plan to attend institutions of higher education. A university admissions office or school counselor can direct a family to possible sources. These loans usually do not require repayment until graduation or until a student withdraws from school. Thus, a combination of savings, scholarships, loans, and part-time work may make it possible for a student to finance further education.

Undoubtedly, there are exceptions. But the reality is that nearly anyone who really wants to attend college or secure further training can do so. Many people now past middle age can attest to that truth. They managed to secure their further training by supporting themselves-even though it required five or six years to complete a four-year program. Getting further education requires commitment and hard work.

But the benefit: accrued from that decision can be significant.

Grade systems vary greatly isted, there have been methods for reporting to parents the progress their children make in school. Many different methods are used, but all of them involve assigning a mark that indicates a level of progress.

Some schools use a check mark, a simple pass-fail mark, or an "S" or a "U" for satisfactory or unsatisfactory. Many schools use an "ABCDF" reporting system, and many schools combine the grade report with a parent-teacher conference. Regardless of the system used, all these methods were designed so that parents could undertand clearly the progress their children are making in school. Almost every parent thinks he or she is fully aware of the message a given grade conveys, especially when the letter-grade system is used. But even though we have some knowledge of what a grade means, the truth of the matter is that two parents will seldom agree upon what information it conveys.

As an example, to some parents a "B" on a report card means that their child is doing exceedingly well

For as long as schools have ex- in school. Other parents may feel that nothing less than an "A" denotes satisfactory progress.

It's unlikely that a grade-reporting system will ever be devised that is so precise that there can be universal agreement on what a grade means. But the grading system our schools use will become much clearer once parents understand the elements that usually go into determing the grade a student receives.

Because grades contain both objective and subjective elements, we should view them as general indicators of student achievement and progress at a particular time - and not as a precise measure of how well a student is doing in school.

When parents have questions about what a grade means, they should ask their child's teacher to explain the teacher's grading system. It's infinitely better to know than to guess when our children's education
