Quayle, Bentsen in spotlight tonight

Ballot includes three amendments

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

Vice presidential candidates Dan Quayle and Lloyd Bentsen applied the final touches to their strategy for tonight's nationally broadcast debate as the two presidential contenders vowed to help America's forgotten class.

Republican Quayle promised to focus his attack on Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis, not his debate opponent Bentsen, when the two running mates clash at the Civic Auditorium in Omaha, Neb.

"Dukakis is running for president, and he's the one I'm very concerned about becoming president. It would be a very troubling notion for many Americans," Quayle told reporters Tuesday on his campaign plane from Washington, D.C.

Bentsen is hoping to counter what he believes are distortions of Dukakis' record, especially the Democratic presidential nominee's stand on defense and crime.

"Tomorrow night we're going to have 90 minutes to present Mike Dukakis' vision of America — an America on the move, an America that believes in excellence in education for all of our children," the Texas senator told a flag-waving crowd of more than 500 people at the Omaha airport.

Bentsen's running mate — the Massachusetts governor — was limiting his campaign appearances today, tending to gubernatorial duties in Boston and later attending a debate-watching party.

George Bush was speaking to high school students in Littleton, Colo., before addressing rallies in Denver and Oklahoma City.

The vice presidential candidates were planning walk-throughs at the refurbished Civic Auditorium around midday before their own last minute preparations for the debate.

Organizers said Tuesday that the 10,000-seat hall was ready for the debate after workers put the finishing touches on network anchor booths, patriotic bunting and even a red-carpeted "spin valley" where Democrats and Republicans will expound on their views of the debate for any reporter who wants to listen.

A national poll released Tuesday found Quayle's presence on the Republican ticket doing some damage to the GOP cause, and put the race for the White House at essentially a dead heat.

In the CBS News-New York Times poll, the Bush-Quayle ticket drew the support of 48 percent of the 1,034 probable voters surveyed while Dukakis-Bentsen got 46 percent.

When the respondents were asked about the presidential nominees, without their running mates, the support for Dukakis declined to 43 percent while Bush remained at 48 percent. The poll, conducted Saturday through Monday, had a margin of error of plus or minus three percentage points.

On Tuesday, the Bentsen campaign was setting low expectations for its vice presidential candidate in the debate, with aides to the candidate suggesting that he was not adept at boiling down his positions to one-minute sound bites. The campaign is trying to dispel the belief that the more experienced Bentsen would manhandle the junior senator from Indiana.

Bentsen, however, was buoyed by his chances.

"Are you going to be standing behind me as we open the Quayle season early tomorrow night?" he asked the airport crowd.

Quayle was providing few details on his debate strategy, but promised to "just be myself" as he "communicates with the American public in an unedited version."

Quayle's running mate Bush used a speech in Sacramento, Calif., to propose a $100 million program to encourage community volunteer service by young people.

"I want our affluent to help our poor," the vice president said of his Youth Engaged in Service to America plan. "I want the young men and women of our tree-lined suburbs to get on a bus, or the subway, or the metro, and go into the cities where the want is."

Dukakis, meanwhile, told a rally in Toledo, Ohio, that his White House would care about the plight of struggling families.

"I care about working people and working families and that's the difference between Mike Dukakis and George Bush, and Democrats and Republicans," he said. "We care."

While the presidential, senatorial and representative races on the Nov. 8 general election ballot draw most of the attention, Texas voters will get two ballots this year: The second will be three proposed amendments to the state constitution.

Drawing most of the limited attention to the amendments is Proposition No. 3, proposing the establishment of a Texas Growth Fund.

If approved, the fund would draw capital from the Permanent University Fund, the Permanent School System, the Texas Teacher Retirement System and other pension systems created by legislation or amendment.

No more than one percent of each of the funds could be "invested" into the Growth Fund, and any investment would be made at the discretion of the directors, trustees or overseers of the respective funds.

The one percent cap would make $285 million available for the fund. The Growth Fund would make venture investment and entrepreneurial loans of up to 10 percent of the funds available, but 75 percent of the funding for a new venture would have to come from private investors.

The Growth Fund would be set up for a 10-year life, but a second fund could be set up after the ten years with a two-thirds vote of the Texas Legislature.

The first amendment on the ballot is a "housekeeping" amendment that would allow federal highway funds to be used to reimburse the state treasury for purchase of right-of-way, construction, maintenance and policing of public roads.

The second proposition establishes an "economic stabilization fund" from unappropriated general funds and a percentage of Texas oil and gas production taxes. It would offset unforeseen shortfalls in revenues that create a temporary state cash shortage.

The amount of the fund would be limited by law, and the Legislature could use the reserve funds to make up the difference between general revenues and appropriations by a three-fifths vote of each house.

New Deaf Smith County residents, persons who have moved from one precinct to another, married and changed their name, or are not registered to vote have until Friday to register to vote in the Nov. 8 general election.

The deadline for registering in person at the Deaf Smith county clerk's office is Friday, the last business day of the week for the county office. Residents who register by mail can be certified if the applications are postmarked by midnight Oct. 9.

Absentee voting will begin Oct. 19 and conclude Nov. 4. A statewide effort to register Texans for the 1988 election is being promoted by the secretary of state's office through newspaper, radio and television campaigns.

It's too late for this year, but some people may want to mark their calendar for next year's observance. Last Friday was the official observance of "Ask A Stupid Question Day, and most of us allowed the opportunity to slip by unnoticed.

It would have been a good opportunity to satisfy a burning curiosity about a number of subjects. For instance:

-How come there's always one more shirt than there are hangers in the closet?

-Why is there ever an excuse for not giving to the United Way?

-Why can't motorists park a car between two yellow lines?

-Has anyone ever ordered a Slim Whitman record?

-Why does the other line always move faster?

-When will construction start on the manure-fired electrical plant east of Hereford?

-How do they get those little Vienna sausages crammed so tightly into the can?

-Why have people quit asking Clint Fornby where he's been?

-Why do you always get into a checkout line where a new employee is being trained?

-Why doesn't Don Cumpton ever use any of the trick football plays we give him?

-What would really happen if the national debt went unpaid? Could the country be repossessed by the Indians?

-Why do people never believe anything that Carey Black tells them?

-Why should asking stupid questions be limited to one day a year?

House sharing Wright stuff

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House Intelligence Committee will grant limited access to its files and personnel for an ethics probe into whether Speaker Jim Wright violated House rules by disclosing a purported CIA secret operation in Nicaragua.

In a closed-door meeting Tuesday, the Intelligence panel voted unanimously to give the ethics committee information needed to determine whether Wright, D-Texas, could have based his comments about the CIA covert action on classified intelligence briefings.

Disclosing classified data given to the Intelligence Committee is a violation of House rules.

"The committee agreed to respond to the request and to make its members and staff available ... in connection with any information transmitted," Intelligence Committee Chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, said in a statement.

He termed the ethics committee's request for information "very preliminary" and added: "They haven't even started a real investigation yet."

The action appeared — at least for the moment — to satisfy Republicans bent on adding a new layer to the ethics probe already under way into unrelated charges against Wright of financial improprieties.

The initial request by the ethics panel — formally known as the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct — was for a simple yes or no to the question of whether Wright had access to classified information relating to CIA covert activities in Nicaragua.

"We'll see what the answer is," said Rep. John T. Myers, R-Ind., the senior Republican member of the ethics panel. "It may be that later we'll have to have documents" from the Intelligence Committee. "We'll have to work with them."

The ethics panel already is at work on an unrelated investigation into Wright's finances.

Rep. Dick Cheney, R-Wyo., a member of the Intelligence panel, said he no longer intends to force a debate and vote in the full House on a resolution intended to force the ethics panel to undertake an investigation.

"Our concerns ... I think have been satisfied," Cheney said.

Wright stirred up a tempest when he told reporters Sept. 20 that the CIA had placed agents in Nicaragua to foment demonstrations and civil unrest

Man is stable after stabbing

By ANDREA HOOTEN
Staff Writer

A Hereford man was stabbed at his apartment and a juvenile was beaten in an alley Tuesday in separate incidents of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Manuel Guerrero, 41, was stabbed in his side at 12:26 a.m. Tuesday at the Shiloh Apartments, 112 Ave. H, while talking with a neighbor inside Guerrero's apartment, police reports said.

Guerrera's girlfriend, who witnessed the stabbing, said a neighbor who lived five apartments away was making passes at her 14-year-old daughter. When Guerrero asked him to leave, the neighbor allegedly stabbed him.

Guerrera underwent surgery at Deaf Smith General Hospital and is in stable condition.

In another incident, a 15-year-old boy was hit in the head with a chain belt and kicked repeatedly by 12 or more other juveniles at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday in the 300 block alley between Sunset Drive and Texas Avenue.

The victim told police that he was watching another fight when the suspects jumped him.

He fled the assailants and jumped in a passing car. The driver took the juvenile to Northwest Elementary School where the principal, Gary Billingsley, called the police department.

Charges have been filed on the suspects.

Clean air law not updated

Congress fails again

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Congress split by economic and regional differences has proven again that cleaning up air pollution from vehicle tailpipes and industrial smokestacks remains the nation's toughest environmental problem.

Only once since the Clean Air Act was enacted in 1970 has Congress been able to agree on major amendments to strengthen the basic law, and that occurred 11 years ago.

Two years ago, environmentalists in the House and Senate renewed the campaign to escalate the battle against urban smog, acid rain caused by coal-burning factories and power plants and toxic fumes from chemicals.

On Tuesday, they tossed in the towel, vowing to try again next year.

"There has not been sufficient willingness to compromise," said Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, who spent much of 1988 trying to put together a consensus on a clean air bill. "As a result, we will do nothing."

Mitchell, citing this summer's smog alerts around the country, said the technology exists to control air pollution. "All we lack is the political will to do so."

Among those he cited as resisting compromise were the environmental lobby and the two behemoths that would be most affected by such legislation: electric utilities and the auto industry, domestic and foreign.

Sen. Robert Stafford, R-Vt., a veteran of clean air wars, pointed his finger at Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., who held the Environment Committee's bill off the floor for 11 months while he pushed for concessions for West Virginia's coal.

The bill's death left the nation with no new tools to combat the ozone and carbon monoxide — chiefly from vehicle emissions — that has grown to the point that upwards of 100 urban areas are violating air quality standards designed to protect human health.

Also left in the dust was any new plan to deal with toxic fumes from chemical plants and the acid-rain chemicals produced by coal-burning power plants and factories.

Last month, Mitchell and Richard Trumka, president of the United Mine Workers union, worked out an acid rain plan that favored West Virginia's high sulfur coal industry and mandated the use of expensive stack gas scrubbers by about two dozen large utilities.

The proposal infuriated senators from Western states with cleaner burning, low sulphur coal. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., threatened to filibuster. The environmental lobby's Clean Air Coalition also criticized the plan, saying that no bill was better than a weak one.

Southern lawmakers were unhappy because the proposal would have forced some of their power plants to install scrubbers to solve what is generally seen in the Capitol as a problem of Midwest utilities polluting the Northeast.

For its part, the utilities' lobby, the Edison Electric Institute, consistently said "no" to acid rain controls. It cited scientific disagreements over the problem and said controls should await development of clean-coal technology, which is expected to be cheaper than scrubbers.

Byrd issued a statement saying he was "disappointed that a compromise on acid rain could not be reached this year that would both enhance the environment and protect the economies of coal-producing states like West Virginia. ... I will continue to work to resolve this issue."

The fight over acid rain was just part of the complicated closed-door negotiations over the clean air bill.

Another major factor in its demise was a proposal to help combat urban pollution by forcing reluctant automakers to produce vehicles with cleaner exhaust emissions.

House sustains Reagan textile veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supporters of a bill to impose tougher restrictions on textile imports, after failing to override President Reagan's veto, promise to renew their efforts when Congress returns next year.

"We'll be back," Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said Tuesday after the House voted 272-152 to override Reagan's veto but fell 11 votes short of the two-thirds needed to enact the measure over his objections.

The action appeared to close the book on the battle for textile legislation this year, with two weeks at most remaining before lawmakers adjourn to campaign full time.

The bill, designed to protect American industry from foreign competition, would freeze current textile and apparel imports at 1987 levels and limit future increases to 1 percent annually. The same would apply to non-rubber footwear except that no future growth would be allowed.

Countries that increase their purchases of U.S. farm goods would get larger shares of the U.S. textiles market. A pilot program would be established, allowing the government to auction off import licenses. A special quota would be created for imported silk neckties.

Reagan vetoed the measure Sept. 28, saying it represented "protectionism at its worst" and would not only narrow consumer choices but inhibit trade and cost America overseas sales. Sponsors said it would save American jobs now in jeopardy because of a wave of Asian textiles and apparel crowding U.S. merchandise out of stores.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, lobbied furiously for the override and sponsors said they were close to two-thirds at one point. "But we had some guys we just couldn't pull across," said Rep. W.G. Hefner, D-N.C.

"Obviously, I'm disappointed," Hollings said in a statement. He claimed the bill was similar to provisions endorsed by Reagan several years ago before the president became critical of "this protectionism nonsense."

"The failure to override the veto means that the next Congress or the next administration must act to restructure our current inefficient textile policy," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said after the vote.

Textile and apparel workers bused in for the occasion from various East Coast cities held a flag-waving rally on the steps of the Capitol at noon, chanting, "Save our jobs, save our jobs." Some then watched glumly from the House galleries as the legislation met its doom.

Critics portrayed the measure as guaranteed to spur price increases that would amount to a fresh tax on consumers.

"Stand up for consumers, stand up for America, support your president's veto," urged Rep. William Frenzel, R-Minn.

Rep. Sam Gibbons, D-Fla., another of the bill's fiercest critics, said "it imposes a tax on consumers of about $20 billion a year."

Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., sometimes said to occupy "the textile seat" on the House Ways and Means Committee, scoffed at the notion of new price hikes under the bill and added that import curbs are common in Asian countries.

"They have quotas all over Asia," Jenkins said.

Imports surged into the U.S. market in the early 1980s, and Congress responded with a textile bill that Reagan vetoed on similar grounds in December 1985. An override attempt failed in the House in August 1986.

The textile industry, already protected by 1,400 tariffs, undertook a wave of modernization as a result and there were many layoffs as aging plants closed and new ones were automated. Earnings were up last year, and critics of the bill say the industry is flourishing.

But earnings fell 12 percent in the first quarter of this year and layoffs have increased over the last 12 months.

Chileans to decide their future, Pinochet's fate

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Power outages blamed on terrorist bombings plunged the capital into darkness on the eve of today's national referendum on whether Gen. Augusto Pinochet should remain as president.

Troops were posted at 1,000 polling places throughout the country and other police and army units patrolled the streets late Tuesday night. Their numbers increased after blackouts struck Santiago and other cities in a 1,300-mile stretch of the country.

At least eight explosions were heard in Santiago moments after the power outage.

Police blamed the blackout on a terrorist bombing of at least three electrical towers, but said they had no reports of damage or injuries from the subsequent explosions, indicating they may have been noise bombs intended to frighten but not harm.

The blackout interrupted an election eve marked by relative calm, with many residents filling theaters and restaurants late Tuesday in anticipation of a day off on election day, declared a national holiday.

The nation's long-idled election machinery has been put back in place for today's referendum on Pinochet, who lifted emergency rule and loosened his tight grip on the opposition in the months preceding the balloting.

Voting was scheduled from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., with the first unofficial returns to be released about an hour after polls closed.

A coalition of 16 opposition parties, distrustful of the Interior Ministry's tabulations, planned a separate vote count. The group says it will accept as official the results of the National Electoral Service, which are to be disclosed on Friday.

Patricio Aylwin, president of the centrist Christian Democratic Party and spokesman for an opposition coalition, predicted Pinochet's downfall.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Although I have been an avid reader of your column for 20 years, I have never written to you.

This morning I received a letter and pictures of animals being tortured in the name of science that made me sick. I cannot believe that such atrocities are being permitted in this country. What can we do to put a stop to it?

When I saw pictures of those adorable monkeys and precious dogs in cages my heart just broke. Animals are God's creatures, too, and we cannot allow this to go on. Please, Ann, use whatever influence you have to put an end to these cruel experiments.—Pauline F., Island Park, N.Y.

DEAR PAULINE: It's madness all right, but it's some of the "animal rights" activists that ought to be looked into.

Extremists have infiltrated laboratories posing as volunteer workers, destroyed records, bombed and vandalized research facilities, damaged computers and poured blood on the files. Research on infant blindness was halted in California for eight months while claims of animal abuse were investigated. The charges were found to be false.

The mischief visited on science has cost millions of dollars. In April, 1987, the Animal Liberation Front claimed responsibility for the fire that destroyed two-thirds of the veterinary diagnostic laboratory at the University of California at Davis, which resulted in more than $3 million in damages.

Dr. Michael DeBakey, chancellor of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, a world-renowned pioneer in heart surgery, asks these questions: Would animal rights activists refuse to accept a kidney, heart or liver transplant if these alone could save their lives? Such advances would not have been possible without animal research. Would they refuse preventive measures against polio, measles, diphtheria and whooping cough, or treatment for strep throat, ear infections and pneumonia—all made possible through animal research? Do 11 million diabetics deserve the right to life that insulin has given them? Are cancer patients entitled to the benefits they receive from radiation and chemotherapy?

It was in monkeys that the AIDS virus was first identified. Should we halt all research on this deadly plague because monkeys are "adorable"?

It was in monkeys that the AIDS virus was first identified. Should we halt all research on this deadly plague because monkeys are "adorable"? There is no way a vaccine or a cure for this devastating disease can be found unless we use animal models for experiments. Computers won't do.

I am an animal lover, too. But when forced to make a choice between rats, mice, monkeys, rabbits, cats and dogs, and humanity, I choose humanity.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'd like to knock your block off. Again I read a column where you advice a 15-year-old girl to give her child up for adoption. I have to admit the advice is right, but reading it makes life rough for me.

Three years ago (I was also 15) I had an out-of-wedlock child. I decided to keep her, which turned out to be a big mistake. I hate being tied down and my mother refuses to help. She says, "I raised mine, now you raise yours."

OK, I was stupid. So what am I supposed to do now? Throw the kid out the window?—No Fan in Philly

DEAR PHILLY: Now you can get some counseling and learn how to be a better mother. The YWCA has excellent counselors. And please look into Parents Anonymous. Angry mothers are often child abusers. Good luck.

Do you have questions about sex, but nobody you can talk to about them? Ann Landers' newly revised booklet, "Sex and the Teenager," will give you the answers you need. To receive a copy, send $3 plus a self-addressed, stamped business-size envelope (45 cents postage) to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562.

BIZ MEETINGS PROLIFERATE
NEW YORK (AP) — More than 1 million meetings and conventions are held each year away from headquarters locations by America's corporate and association executives, according to a report issued here.

The meetings are viewed by nearly 48 million attendees, notes The Meeting Makers, a producer of a variety of business meetings, corporate and industrial trade shows and international symposiums.

Ben Franklin's weight loss program sensible

By News USA—When you stand in front of the mirror, do you curve in all the right places or do you seem to be overflowing?

If you've tried diets without success, you need the common-sense help Benjamin Franklin suggested two centuries ago.

By the time Franklin reached middle age, he'd developed a number of bad habits. One was eating and drinking too much.

Franklin decided to invent a common-sense way of changing his bad habits. To change old habits, Franklin realized, he'd have to take it slow.

He made a list of 13 changes he wanted to make and then set aside one week to work on each. At the end of thirteen weeks, he started over.

If cutting down on pizza and donuts and eating more fruits and vegetables is your goal, just spend one week every three months following this practice. During that week avoid pizza and donuts as often as you can, and make a point of eating one more fruit or vegetable every day.

During this one week, if you've had a family-size pizza with the works, just make a little note of it on the calendar. No scoldings, just a note. If you've eaten two pieces of fruit, make a note of that, too.

Four weeks a year you'll make an effort to improve. The rest of the year you can eat anything.

The odd thing is, you'll lose weight without working at it.

The reason is simple. If you want to do something, and you plan to do it, your mind will often take charge of getting it done when you aren't thinking about it at all.

The funny thing about common sense is that it works where fancy theories and complicated strategies don't.

Write and tell us how Franklin's advice worked out. Send your comments to Food Editor, News USA, 1199 National Press Building, Washington, D.C. 20045.

HHS volleyballers toughout Borger win

The Hereford High School varsity volleyball team improved its overall record to 13-5 and its District 1-4A record to 6-1 with a tough 15-11, 12-15, 15-3, 12-15, 15-8 in the preliminary match.

The Hereford junior varsity wasn't as fortunate, falling in three games, 15-3, 12-15, 15-8 in the preliminary match.

"We really had to work for every point in the varsity match," said Hereford coach Brenda Reeh. "Borger played really well. They hit hard at us and served very well, and they had a big crowd which pushed the momentum toward Borger."

"Our overall play was up and down. We missed some serves and service receptions. We got a little out of control at times, too."

"Libby Kosub had a tough match at the net with several kills, as did Cande Robbins."

"Overall, we played well enough to win, and fortunately that's what goes down in the books."

"The JV had a good serving match. We had a goal concerning serving, and they worked hard to achieve that goal."

"Robbin White played well offensively for the junior varsity."

Saturday, Hereford will travel to Dumas for their most important match to date. Dumas is in first place in District 1-4A, one game ahead of the Whitefaces. In the last Texas Girls Coaches Association-Baden state volleyball team, Hereford was No. 2 in Class 4A and Dumas was No. 3.

"Both teams have to sharpen before we get to Dumas on Saturday," Reeh said. "We have to hope everyone stays healthy and working hard. If we do, we'll have two good matches."

The JV will begin Saturday's play at 2 p.m., with the varsity match to follow at 3 p.m.

Ninth teams 1-2 at Dumas

The Hereford freshman Maroon and White volleyball teams placed first and second at the Dumas volleyball tournament last weekend.

The Hereford Maroon unit defeated the White squad, 15-8, 15-11. The White team defeated Valleyview, 15-5, 15-8, and Pampa, 1-7, 15-6, and the Maroon team downed Perryton, 15-6, 15-0, and Borger, 15-5, 15-10, to earn their spots in the championship game.

The eighth grade Maroon team defeated Perryton, 15-9, 15-12 in the first round, but lost to Dumas Black, 15-2, 15-4. The eighth grade white team lost to Dumas Orange, 15-6, 15-11, then fell to Borger, 15-4, 10-15, 15-10.

The seventh grade White team lost to Borger, 15-12, 15-5, before coming back to defeat Valleyview, 15-5, 15-0, then winning consolation honors over Perryton, 15-11, 15-8. The seventh grade Maroon squad defeated Perryton, 15-7, 15-10, then lost to Pampa, 6-15, 15-8, 15-5.

"Coach O'Rand and I felt we taught a big goal by taking to teams to the tournament and placing first and second," said Hereford freshman coach Jill Pickens. "These girls proved that after all is said and done they are all players — athletes who just want to be involved and to compete. We are very proud of these girls and the fact that we have a strong program to feed to the junior varsity or varsity next year."

Landry praises Pelleur

IRVING, Texas (AP) — While the Dallas Cowboys own a 2-3 NFL ledger, coach Tom Landry says as far as he is concerned they are 5-0 in hustle.

"This is the best team I've had in the last six years in effort," Landry said. "This team goes out to play football with no problems. It should benefit more from his efforts. But it's not over the hump yet."

New Orleans beat the Cowboys

20-17 on Monday night with a last-second field goal despite quarterback Steve Pelleur's performance in which he hit 23 of 35 passes for 271 yards and a two touchdowns.

"Steve played one of his best games in the fourth quarter," Landry said. "He has done an excellent job at the end of the game the last two weeks."

Landry said Pelleur reminded him of the retired Roger Staubach with some of his scrambling runs which netted 54 yards on six carries.

"Steve has a great knack in the pocket," Landry said. "He's so quick. He's a lot like Roger was. Steve wants to win the game himself."

LA finds way to lose, 3-2

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There seemed to be no way Los Angeles could be beaten after eight innings of the opener of the National League playoffs. But when it comes to playing the New York Mets, the Dodgers always seem to find a way to lose.

A three-run rally in the ninth against a pair of pitchers who had been virtually unshakable since August gave the Mets an improbable 3-2 victory Tuesday night.

The underdog Dodgers know they'd better win tonight's game or they're in big, big trouble.

"If we don't bounce back, it's going to over quick," Dodgers outfielder Mike Marshall said. "We played a good ballgame, things just slipped away in the ninth inning."

Run-scoring singles by Marshall in the first inning and Alfredo Griffin in the seventh gave Dodgers' ace Orel Hershiser what appeared to be an insurmountable lead entering the ninth.

The lead appeared safe because Hershiser finished the season with an all-time record 59 consecutive scoreless innings, not allowing any scoring since Aug. 26, and had continued his incredible pitching into the postseason.

Hershiser scattered five hits over the first eight innings, but he finally gave up a run in the ninth on a leadoff single by rookie Gregg Jefferies, an infield out and Darryl Strawberry's RBI double to right-center.

"That at-bat was the most important of the year for me and could turn the series around," Strawberry said. "Even when I had two strikes in the ninth, I just kept hanging in there. I knew I wouldn't get anything to pull, so I just went up the middle with it."

Hershiser was removed — a decision he supported after the game — in favor of Jay Howell, who hadn't allowed a hit in his final 7 1-3 innings of work — since Aug. 29 — and hadn't given up a run in 18 straight innings.

Howell walked Kevin McReynolds, but struck out Howard Johnson for the second out of the inning. Up came Gary Carter, a veteran who has delivered many clutch hits in his career but suffered through a season of frustration.

The first two pitches to Carter were strikes, and the Mets catcher appeared overmatch and swing defensively. The third was a breaking ball, down and away, and the lunging Carter blooped it to center.

Playing deep, Dodgers center fielder John Shelby didn't appear to get a good jump on the ball. He made a dive, the ball glanced off his glove and dribbled a short way away from him.

Strawberry scored easily from second and McReynolds raced around from first, barely beating Shelby's throw home as Carter chugged into second with a double.

Winning pitcher Randy Myers retired the Dodgers in order in the bottom of the ninth to complete the comeback as the Mets broke a five-game losing streak in playoff series openers.

Howell felt the pitch to Carter was a good one.

"I made the pitch I thought would win it for us and I came up empty," Howell said. "I've got to give the guy (Carter) credit. It was a pitch down and away. I did what I wanted to do with it."

Shelby didn't second-guess himself on the decisive play.

"I felt it hit my glove and I missed it," he said. "I knew he didn't hit it hard. If I think I can catch the ball I'm going to dive for it. When he hit it I thought I had a good chance, so I dove. I made the best play that I could. I tried to catch it. I can live with it."

Dwight Gooden pitched the first seven innings for the Mets, allowing only four hits and one walk while striking out 10.

"That's probably the hardest I've ever seen him throw," said Dodgers second baseman Steve Sax, who scored the first Los Angeles run when he singled, stole second, went to third on an infield out and scored on Marshall's hit.

It remained 1-0 until Mike Scioscia led off the seventh with a double down the right field line, went to third on an infield out and scored on Griffin's line drive into right over a drawn-in infield.

October proclaimed Apple Month

Ever since that famous day in the Garden of Eden, the apple has woven its way into a clever tapestry of expressions, sayings, myths, and proverbs.

It may be sliced and diced in kitchens across America, but let us—for a moment—take the apple out of the kitchen and place it on its own well-deserved pedestal, as a truly expressive fruit since October is National Apple Month.

Back in the "olden days" of early America, when times were hard and supplies were often scarce, the women of the household often had to scrimp and save on cooking ingredients. Apple pie was a favorite dish but to save on fat and flour, only a bottom crust was made. In more affluent houses, both an upper and a lower crust was prepared for the pies, and those families became known as "the upper crust."

Americans may profess to be the original creators of apple pie, but the history books trace pie as far back as 14th-century England. Pie-making skills, as well as apple seeds, came over with the Pilgrims, and as the country prospered, the rather slim apple pie soon became the deep-dish apple pie we know today.

Through the 19th and early 20th centuries, apple pie became the symbol of American prosperity and one newspaper in 1902 even went as far as to proclaim, "No pie-eating people can be permanently vanquished."

"The Big Apple"—this beloved nickname for one of our nation's greatest cities, New York, dates from the 1930s and '40s when jazz itself a truly American musical genre—jived and jittered in clubs across the country. But the smoky clubs of New York City were the favorite hotspots for the likes of Charlie Parker and other jazz greats, and Manhattan soon became known for having "lots of apples on the tree," that is, lots of places to play. Faster than a trill on a trumpet, New York was crowned The Big Apple.

The custom of "apple polishing" hail from the little red schoolhouses of yore. Young children, whose math skills were less than exemplary, sought to win their teacher's favor instead with a gift of a bright, shiny apple. Remember this song? "An apple for the teacher will always do the trick when you don't know your lesson in arithmetic."

The 'apple of my eye' expression dates back to ancient Greece and Rome, when people conceived the pupil of the eye to be, like the apple a global object. The word apple itself comes from the Anglo-Saxon "aepel" which literally meant both "eye" and "apple." In addition to providing the literal, vital sense of vision, the pupil also was regarded as the figurative "window" to the treasured secrets within each of us. Thus, the "apple of the eye" meant someone very beloved.

Although the original author remains unacknowledged, "An Apple A Day" is a phrase that has been in regular use since the 19th century. Today, the expression rings truer than ever in both medical and consumer circles, as the number of health and nutritional benefits of the apple increases. Potassium and vitamins A and C, boron which may help retain calcium, and water-soluble fiber that helps rid the body of excess cholesterol—these perks and more make an apple a day the healthy way.

The "Adam's Apple physiological terminology sprung from the conception that the protuberance on a man's throat was caused by a piece of apple lodged in Adam's throat, rather than the thyroid cartilage of the larynx. The phrase, pardon the pun, stuck.

ASK DR. LAMB

What Foods for Diverticulosis Sufferers? BY LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I am a 60-year-old lady. I have been having a lot of trouble with my colon. My doctor says I have pockets of the colon, diverticulosis. All he told me was, "Don't eat anything that comes out the same way it goes in, like corn, peanuts and lettuce." I have been avoiding all these, but I'm still having severe pain. Do you have a list of foods that you could send me of what I can eat or what not to eat? Is there any kind of medication or anything I can do to relieve the terrible pain? I asked my doctor and he said I would have to watch more carefully what I ate.

I do need help desperately and can't seem to get the information I need.

DEAR READER: Today, most doctors believe that the proper diet for a person who has colon spasms and diverticulosis is one that provides lots of bulk. Something that comes out the way it goes in is bulk — undigested food residue. Wheat bran is one such item. The undigested fiber in vegetables, raw fruit and other cereals are other sources. One theory is that the lack of bulk causes colon spasms and contributes to the little ruptures of the wall of the colon that form the pockets. These are called diverticula.

The pain is more likely to be from the colon spasms that go along with the condition. Other than avoiding coffee, tea, caffeine-containing beverages and alcohol, there is really no good reason why a person can't eat what he or she wants — unless a food is found to be irritating to the colon. Spasms or irritable bowel may be from lactose intolerance from the lactose sugar in milk. Try increasing the bulk in your diet by using whole-wheat cereals and leafy vegetables. If you need more bulk, try one of the bulk formers such as Metamucil. If your colon function improves, you will probably stop having so much discomfort.

Also read my new Special Report, About Diverticulosis: Pockets of the Colon. I'm sending you a free copy. Others who want this report can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/94, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DR. LAMB: For years I have had trouble gaining weight. I am a 19-year-old male, 5 feet 8 inches and weigh 125 pounds. I don't have any fat on my body even though I eat a lot. Every two hours I must have something in my system to keep me alive. I average about four decent meals a day and have to have snacks in between. Something must be wrong.

I have heard about tapeworms and hookworms. Could that be my problem? How do I get rid of the worms without any help from a doctor?
DEAR READER: Either you are not absorbing food, which should cause symptoms such as diarrhea, or you could be losing glucose in the urine, which would cause symptoms you don't mention, or your metabolism is markedly increased. That may mean you have an overactive thyroid condition. I'm not impressed that your problem is worms.

The average American eats eight-and-a-half pounds of pickles a year.

Preventing sports injuries possible

By News USA
Each year the fun and excitement of sports leads to thousands of injuries. In contact sports like football, basketball, and soccer, the injuries can be fatal. Even in sports where contact is rare, like baseball and tennis, serious injuries can occur. Considering the millions who participate in sports, the number of injuries each year is not surprising. Still, to avoid broken bones and eye injuries, or much more common strains and sprains, you should take action now.

Too Hard, Too Tired
Two factors contribute to the danger of serious injury: trying too hard and playing when you are too tired.

Some athletes don't know their limits. Others are pushed too far by well-meaning parents, coaches, or friends. Fast starts and stops, twisting, turning, and getting into awkward positions can cause sprains, strain, and back and neck problems.

Many people are injured because they don't know when to quit. When we are too tired, the danger of injury increases dramatically. To perform well and to stay healthy, our minds and bodies must be fully alert and reacting properly.

The secret to outstanding performance is to train and practice over a long period of time. This assures confident and skillful play. An added benefit of careful preparation is that it conditions the body and the mind without the dangers and stresses of actual competition. The investment in training pays off in winning and in avoiding injuries, too.

Tips For The Child Athlete
The American Chiropractic Association suggests the following sports tips for those with children:

1. Let your child, not you, pick the

- sport he or she wants to play.
2. Don't criticize your child for his lack of skill.
  3. Don't push your child to play harder.
  4. Make sure a responsible adult is keeping an eye on the players to be sure there is no rough-housing and that rest breaks are taken.
  5. Tell your child to report strains, pains, or injuries immediately. Don't let your child's pride get in the way of prompt treatment and continued good health.

Check-Ups

Before beginning any sports program, a physical check-up is a must. Minor problems can be detected before they become serious. Have medical and chiropractic examinations before you begin any program of exercise or athletics.

Virtually every child, and most adults these days, are active in physical play, so regular physical check-ups should be seen as a necessity. Like a good training program, a good check-up can save pain and expense later.

Hints from Heloise

CAR CARPETING

Dear Heloise: I just had my car re-carpeted. There were so many carpets to choose from that I became confused.

The salesman was very helpful. I was ready to choose a carpet made from polyester (it looked beautiful), but he told me even though it is beautiful, it won't last as long as 100 percent nylon. Polyester deteriorates faster than nylon.

I do a lot of driving and I need a carpet that will last a long time. It's durable and looks beautiful. — Toni

Kelsey, Miami, Fla.

LETTUCE LEAVES

Dear Heloise: I always threw away quite a bit of the outer leaves of lettuce, but I learned that the outer darker green leaves are higher in nutrients than the leaves closer to the core. Now I remove any brown tips on the leaves and use every one of them. — Millie Bruno, Beaumont, Texas

Coins cannot be made of pure gold or silver because they are not durable and wear out rapidly unless alloyed with another metal.

Thank You

The family of Willie Mae Coffey gratefully acknowledges all the flowers, cards, memorials, food, visits, and expressions of sympathy upon her passing. Special thanks to Rev. Steve McElroy and his ministry to the family, and special thanks also to the staff of Westgate Nursing Home, who made a second home for her.

The word "canopy" comes from the Greek word konops meaning "gnat." The story goes the fishermen of ancient Egypt would sleep undisturbed by gnats by sleeping under canopies of fishing nets.
