Fumigant Victim Saved By Man's Heroic Effort

BILL SOOTER ... rescues a man

QUICK RESCUE work by three of his co-workers probably saved the life of Manuel Serano, a laborer at Continental Grain Co., Thursday morning.

Serano, 61, had been overcome by a fumigant in a tunnel beneath the grain firm's warehouses and was unconscious when he was dragged to safety by Bill Sooter, Jim Gandy and Garland Carter.

According to Sooter, the four men were going to do repair work in the 240-foot tunnel and Serano started walking from the west end to the east end. About 40 feet from the eastern exit he collapsed.

The warehouse had been fumigated last week and the heavy fumigant had settled and displaced the air in the narrow tunnel.

Sooter, Gandy and Carter went around to the east door of the tunnel. Three times they went into the suffocating darkness after Serano and three times they had to turn back for air.

An ambulance, the police department and the fire department had been called and Clay Angelo, fire marshal, brought an oxygen tank and mask.

SOOTER STRAPPED on the bulky tank and again went in after Serano. Gandy, without an air supply, held his breath and followed him. Carter, almost overcome by the fumigant himself, waited at the mouth of the tunnel.

The husky Sooter had dragged Serano about 10 feet when Gandy arrived to help. Together they pulled the unconscious worker to the exit. Carter helped them tie a rope to the man and Serano was lifted to the surface.

He was rushed to Deaf Smith County Hospital and given oxygen. He revived and after being treated Thursday and Friday, was released Saturday.

Sooter, 39, and Carter, 46, were treated for after-effects Thursday and again Friday. All three men suffered from "intoxication" from the fumigant, which was a mixture of 81 per cent carbon tetrachloride, 12 per cent carbon bisulphide and two other chemicals.

Gandy, 46, was slightly ill but back at work Friday morning.

The attending physician said the fumigant could have killed Serano had he remained in the tunnel much longer. The doctor said a higher percentage of carbon...

NewTornado WarningSirens Considered Fairly Adequate calls which poured into the City Hall Thursday morning after practice sounding of two new tornado warning sirens which were only recently installed.

However, it was learned that there are several "dead spots" in the city and immediate area which are not being reached by the sound waves because of blocking obstacles.

Bill McMorris, city consulting engineer from Amarillo, was present for the testing and stated after most of the calls were in that he thought it would be a mighty good investment to invest another $1,000 to put another up on the west side close to the Lucky U Motel and one on the eastern side, along the highway.

Buildings such as Pitman Elevator and trees were blamed for blocking the sound waves away from certain areas, and the additional two sirens would "almost certainly" cover what dead spots that are now not being reached.

Baby Business Hits 2 Billion

By DOROTHY ROE

Associated Press Women's Editor Today's babies are the best-fed, best-dressed, healthiest, happiest babies in history. They're also the wealthiest. That new king of big business, the American baby, spends more than two billion dollars a year for products and services, and statisticians estimate that by 1965 the figure will be close to three billion. Baby may not go out and do the shopping in person, but this is the amount of money spent annually to keep him in the pink.

Today's baby is a lucky character. He has a better chance than ever before not only to survive the adventure of birth, but to come safely through childhood illnesses. In general he is stronger, taller and healthier than his parents or grandparents.

All this is due to the remarkable advances made in baby care in the last generation, and to the new sciences and services available to today's young mothers.

Grandma may feel that she knows all about raising babies, but she's not half so smart or competent as the modern rookie mother, on the record. Grandmas may have had nursemaids and domestics to help with the chores of baby care, but today's mother has the benefits of the pooled knowledge of modern scientists, plus an array of conveniences that take the drudgery out of raising healthy children. There are scores of industries today devoted exclusively to the well-being of our infant population. These industries employ a vast force of scientists, technicians, researchers, designers and medical consultants to make life easy and safe for baby — and for his mother. Time was when the young mother spent hours just in the preparation of baby food — slow cooking, laborious sieving, mashing, scraping, squeezing and straining. Today she buys precooked, processed and pureed vegetables, fruits and meats prepared according to the most exacting standards, with all the vitamins and minerals intact. A generation ago she washed baby's diapers at home, boiling, sucking, rinsing and hanging out the baby wash daily. And no matter how careful she was, she couldn't get the clothes as scientifically clean as do the technicians of today's diaper service industry, which now serves more than a million babies a year.

A recent study made by this industry shows that the great increase in baby business is due not only to the booming post-war birth rate, but also to a new American way of life. Today's young mother is likely to live in her own home, away from the helping hands of mother, grandma, sisters and aunts. She's on her own, unhampered by old wives' tales. And instead of enlisting the aid of loving relatives, she relies for help on modern scientific conveniences and services.

She has at her disposal not only all the ready-processed baby foods but also the latest discoveries in the fields of vitamins and medicine to keep her baby well-fed, happy and healthy. Her baby has every modern aid to comfort and well-being, from unbreakable plastic bottles to a vast array of powders, oils and lotions; from special non-allergic mattresses to new scientific toys; from hygienic diapers to soft, comfortable, easy-care garments turned out by famous fashion designers.

Today's young mother has no maid, but she has at her command the best brains of science, medicine — and industry to help raise her baby. And the result is a new crop of model American babies, bursting with health, with more bounce to the ounce than any previous generation.

tests, principle Bill Stanford, announced.

The tests, which will be in two parts, will be given under the direction of a director of safety of the Texas Farm Bureau Safety Department.

The first section will be a lecture, while the second will be a demonstration in the street next to the school building. There will also be demonstrations on the correct and incorrect driving habits.

High point of the demonstration will come, however, when driving tests are made with various students and faculty members in the specially equipped car. An electric detonator which is mounted on the front bumper of the car will fire yellow paint bullets to indicate the distance required to stop the car in an emergency.

The driver being tested will be signalled to stop by the report of the first shell. The second will be fired automatically when the brake is applied and the third when the car halts. Distance between the spots of paint will then be measured to determine the reaction and braking distances.

Tests will be limited to 20, 30 and 40 mile per hour speeds because of the danger in making emergency stops at higher speeds. Police officers will be used as drivers in the high speed tests.

As part of a program for safety on the highway, the Texas Farm Bureau Safety Department is presenting this driving demonstration and test before the high schools of this state. The program is being brought to Hereford under the sponsorship of Deaf Smith County Farm Bureau. The public is invited to attend the lecture as well as the demonstration.

Some Local Notes And a Travelogue IT'S: HER POINT OF VIEW

By BETTY BABIONE

WELL, I NEVER! KPAN has come up with a program idea that beats all I ever heard (except when the Toastmasters read the comics on Sunday mornings). A group of Hereford's more uninhibited citizens make up a round table for airing news and views daily at 7:45 a.m. My use of the word "uninhibited" should give a clue as to the informality of it, and I foresee the program's becoming a listening habit for people like me, who enjoy a little nonsense along with information.

It would appear that the county commissioners have become a dedicated crew in their revival of the County Jail issue. I wonder if they have thought of holding open house at the jail sometime between now and the time the bond issue comes up, so voters could see how conditions really are. Am sure that a body would be welcome to visit the jail any time, but voluntary visiting of a jail is not something one often does except for very personal reasons.

AND WHILE I'm making suggestions, I'll make one to Florence Traweck, our acting postmaster. Would it be too much trouble for someone down at the Post Office to make out a schedule of post-marking times and train departures so that we could tell the particular time that a letter going a particular direction would have to be mailed in order for earliest possible delivery? There'd be lots of people who'd appreciate it.

The Cancer Crusade has started in our county this week. County Chairman, Mark Woodall, says to be on the lookout for the Neighbor envelopes which are to be circulated, again this year in conjunction with the Cancer drive.

SAY, THERE has been some enthusiastic response to my idea of a poll for the best dressed men. I should be ready to make a report next week — there is still time if anybody would like to make a nomination or two.

PART II

Note: Those of you who aren't interested in a rather frivolous account of Pardy Lner's California adventure may as well turn to the funnies now.

THERE HAVE been a few to ask why I hadn't, as promised, written more about my little sojourn to California — am I the type that has to be begged? or did I do something I'm ashamed of?

Well, no — I sure don't have to be begged. As for doing something I'm ashamed of — to be perfectly frank, I did! As I look back on it, it kinda gets me that I acted so "Texan" — something I had sworn I'd never do.

Now I don't mean I paraded around in boots and a 10-gallon hat (tho I must confess I might have if I'd had the equipment with me).

Nor did I flash a big roll of greenbacks at every opportunity (one has to possess a roll of greenbacks before one can do that). Nor did I strut, or swagger, or go "round saying "you all" (with emphasis on the "all").

What I did do, was a lot of plain ole Texas bragging. And I never thought I'd see the day! Not being an out-n-out liar (if I can help it) I couldn't very well brag about the usual things like my oil wells or my million-acre cattle ranch or my own importance in the scheme of things. But I did find myself talking, without being prompted, about such things as how wonderful the people are and how just plain fine it is to live in Texas. It seemed I didn't miss any chance to let folks know that I was proud of where I came from.

Only once or twice did I find it necessary to quote facts such as: Love Field at Dallas handles more air traffic than any other terminal in the world, and other impressive items. I thought I was real nice not to argue with a Californian who claimed that his state produces more cotton than any other state (I was NICE 'cause he was RIGHT). When questioned about the tornadoes and dust storms, I just said we got em bigger and better... and let it go at that. But for the most part I confined my bragging to Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

are fed by pipes from rivers and mountain streams — all very interesting, but you don't get the thrill that comes with watching water gush from the underground wells we have.

And yes, I did some bragging about our water, and our soil — the bone and teeth-building value and so on. (I'll sure feel silly if the Shrine Hospital project here doesn't materialize, because I spread the news all the way to San Francisco and back.)

And at last, I've come around to the subject of San Francisco, which is really what I've wanted to talk about all along. Dear people, you can have New York, Chicago, New Orleans, Paris, Rome and even Dallas. I'll take the fabulous city of hills and bay bridges.

SAN FRANCISCO doesn't have anything in particular that other comparable cities don't have one kind or another of. But there is an indescribable "something" about S. F. which is distinctive and wonderful and, to choose my own adjective, catching! To me, the experience of merely being there was buoyant and exhilarating and to put it mildly, enjoyably interesting.

To begin with she is such a beautifully picturesque city. And there are breath-taking views anywhere you turn — whether at the top of a hill looking down or the bottom of a hill looking up — whether looking across the waters of a bay or across the park in Union Square. Of course the most famous view is the one from the top of the Mark Hopkins Hotel — the renowned "Top o' the Mark" and it's everything I'd heard and read it was supposed to be — unbelievably beautiful. To be sure, it is a main tourist attraction but the natives also frequent the place — just to sit and gaze at the wonder of the world around.

Even more exciting than looking at San Francisco is getting around in San Francisco. It's a matter of going up and down hills, and the hills are really amazing. It is unusual if anyone walks more than two blocks distance at a time and I can readily understand why. Also, I think that San Francisco drivers must be the most daring auto drivers in the whole world. . . can you imagine having to use the hand break at every red light? or driving your car on an incline so steep you can see for 12 blocks if you look below? I drove a car for three blocks and felt like I deserved a medal for courage. But people who live there do it as if it were nothing, and I guess it's all a matter of what you're used to.

S. F. had had a rainy spell before I arrived (they call it rain — we'd call it fog) but the sun shone brightly all the time I was there. About the only time I got cold was the day we went down to the docks near the Oakland Bay Bridge (the Oakland Bay Bridge, by the way, is prettier than the Golden Gate Bridge). At that time in March, the temperature doesn't differ much from what it is here. As I expected, the grass stays green all winter and there are an abundance of flowers in bloom all year around.

I was captivated by the multitude of little flower stalls on the downtown streets. They were quaint and colorful and offered such bargains as two dozen carnations for a dollar and giant orchids for $1.50. Window shopping was the only kind of shopping I did, but the shops and stores were all intriguing.

Oh, there is so much I could tell ya about if had the time. And some of it would be personal stuff . . . such as attending a luncheon where a gorgeous swimming pool was the background setting for the first course. . . going to a party in the unique International Room of the fabulous San Francisco Air Terminal . . . my first tour of a military ship. . . or that last night of my visit there, when some professional "show people" dropped by the cozy little cafe which my group had happened onto by chance — it's a long story in itself but it was the grand and perfect climax to a most marvelous adventure.

Like I said — there's lots more I could tell but can't take up any more space here. And now that LeRoy and Margaret Aven are back from New Orleans and Jack and Julia Bradley are back from Europe, I won't have a chance to get another word in edgewise. But then it's really nice to hear other folks tell about their travels anyway.

DIRTY JOB—Onias Carroll of the city water department found a dirty job awaiting him when he started cleaning out water and debris from the local swimming pool this week. More than six feet of water stood in the deep part as result of recent rains. A few of the items, other than water, to be removed were: two barrels, life preserver, dozens of rolled newspapers, balls, parts of the metal fence, dead cat, several hundred pounds of leaves and dirt, and six keys on a broken chain. # Grass-Seeding Methods Vary

By MAX SCHRADER
The different methods of establishing a dead litter cover for the seeding of grass have been under discussion recently. Each of these methods has its advantages and disadvantages. The disadvantages, however, vary a great deal more than the advantages.
In selecting what may be the best method to use, one must consider which of these has proved most successful over a period of years. In other words, we have to consider what has been tried and proved the greatest number of times.
Grass has never been a crop that has been planted yearly or

A cover crop which will provide most of the elements necessary to the establishment of grass is the one to use. Small grain is a very good cover crop, but it still isn't the type of cover that has made for successful grass plantings. The reason being it's production of a volunteer crop the following spring. Instead of seeding in a dead litter cover the seeding would occur in a fast growing volunteer crop. Even preventive steps such as mowing will, often as not, fail to prevent a volunteer small grain crop.

George Warner, who has had considerable practical and experimental experience in working with grasses states that "volunteering of any type of cover presents a severe problem."
The experiment station at Bushland has used all types of cover in the seeding of grasses. Van Doren has stated they have had some success with all types of cover, but some were the exception rather than the rule. He recommends planting cane, Atlas Sorgo or Sudan. The planting of a good cover crop does much to offset adverse weather conditions.

Many of the failures of our grain sorghum cover crops can be attributed to time of planting. Planting late in order to avoid maturing the grain has caused the greatest part of the failures. Comparisons made between fields planted at the regular time and the ones made in late July and August show a considerable difference in cover developed.
Van Doren recommends that cover crops be planted no later than June 20 and preferably before June 20. He feels the earlier the better when trying to develop a good sturdy stalk. Planting early in rows not exceeding 26 inches will produce the most satisfactory longtime results. Regular width rows leaves too much of the soil unprotected.

A CROP THAT just provides cover alone isn't good enough when planning to use it to plant grass in. It should serve a dual purpose in that it must contribute to the establishment of the grass. In checking the various cover crops it has been found that where a satisfactory cover was developed the weeds have been held in check to a great extent. This type of cover makes possible the maximum use of our rainfall by retarding runoff and decreasing evaporation. Rapid loss of moisture from the surface of the soil can spell sure-death to small grass seed-

By JIMMIE GILLENINE
Did you ever notice how many people have given up smoking these days? Mostly, the ones I see are men — and the same may be true of women. When you get three of four people in a crowd, it is highly probable that one or two has quit smoking within the past 12 to 18 months. Invariably, they seem to be having weight problems, and those who have quit recently will either be chewing gum or sucking mints. The three big reasons most men quit smoking are: publicity connecting smoking with lung cancer, doctor's orders, and the expense of the habit.

Another growing bad among our male population seems to be the electric razor. At least half of the men you meet these days shave with an electric razor of some sort, and the percentage seems to run even higher among the non-smokers.

Despite all of this, however, N. D. Bartlett was busy Friday passing out cigars. N. D. is a new grandfather and was celebrating the occasion. The only person with more enthusiasm about grandchildren than a grandfather is usually a grandmother.

Beginning tomorrow, Deaf Smith County will open its annual Cancer Crusade. Mark Woodall is chairman this year, succeeding Wayne Thomas, who slipped in on Mark's blind side and unloaded a cargo of material. As you may recall, Cancer declined to come into the United Fund, chiefly because they felt that publicity accrued during the drive is worth as much to the cause as the money collected. Great strides are being made in combating cancer. Certainly, the drive is one which all of us will want to consider seriously — and help in every possible way.

GEORGE STAMBAUGH was showing me one of the new "Ericofones," a horn-type extension phone available on West Texas Rural Telephone connections. They are made in Switzerland, have the dial built into the base, and stand up on tables. No bells, just extensions. They are real slick deals, and come in "six delightful colors," according to George. Drop in and see one next time you are out around the REA office.

Remember Roy Clark, former Brand news editor who pulled up stakes a few months back and took off for Corpus Christi and higher education? Roy, in addition to being a topnotch photographer and newsmen, was also a confirmed Democrat and "Benson hater." However, the sea breeze and salt water must have softened his head, because word arrived this week that he has joined forces with Benson, having accepted a federal appointment as Information Director in the Great Plains Conservation Program. He may not really work under Ezra T. but, so far as I am concerned, I will always accuse him of it. The Clarks are slated to leave Corpus April 26, and to be "at home" in Washington, D. C., on May 1. All kidding aside, Roy is reported to have an unusually good job — and I know all of his old friends will be happy, regardless of whether they are Democrats or Republicans.

The rain Thursday, though not unusual around here anymore, was unusual in view of the fact that it conflicted with a "Free Show" and the opening of the drive-in theatre. It would be just my luck to have fair weather on the free show dates, then have the rains start when the customers pay. Francis Hardwick said that more than 800 people showed up, despite the rain.

TELEVISION, meanwhile, is moving in on our youngsters. A recent survey in Snyder, N. Y., showed that kindergarten tots spent 14.2 hours in classrooms each week — and 14.2 hours at the TV set. Sixth graders spent 27.4 hours in class and 26 hours watching TV; 51 per cent preferred a spanking in preference to a TV blackout and 43 per cent had to be threatened and nagged to wrench them from their favorite program at mealtime; it also took drastic measures to lure 46 per cent of the youngsters away at bedtime. The survey didn't mention it, but I would guess 100 per cent had to be nagged at bath time.

As one educator puts it: Television is changing American children from irremovable forces into immovable objects.
The police recently rescued a badly beaten man from the sidewalk and, after helping him to his feet, asked: "Can you describe your assailant?"
"That," replied the victim, "is exactly what I was doing when he hit me."

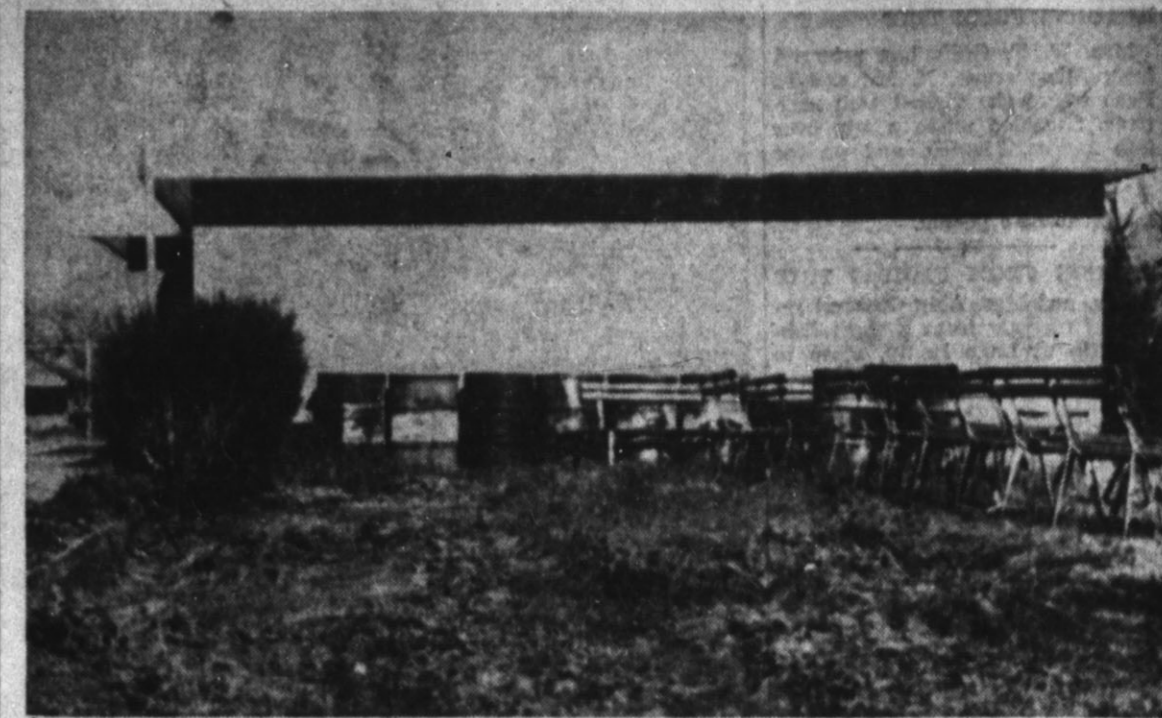

SACK DRESSES are growing in popularity, despite male complaints. I heard a fellow (name withheld for obvious reasons) say, Friday that his wife went out and bought four of the latest things in sacks.
"The thing that really makes me mad, though," said the husband, "is the fact that they fit her so perfectly."
Earnest Joiner over at Rails says he used to forecast the town population by the number of maternity dresses worn up and down Main Street, but the new sack models have completely ruined his accuracy.

BILL HARGETT, who lives in South Hereford — or North Dimmitt if you prefer — is in hot water. Bill started a baseball team and wound up with 22 enthusiastic youngsters. He is asking for help and says it would be ideal to have at least one coach who "knows something about baseball."
The REA is putting the little pot in the big one this year for their annual meeting. They expect 2,000 people if the weather is bad, maybe only 1,500 if it is pretty. Fair weather these days, says Manager Leo Forrest, is a signal that most of the farmers will be

Which reminds me of Friday, when Leo Forrest asked Lowell Sharp the difference between "illegal" and "unlawful." Lowell's sheriff experience came to the front and he was explaining in detail with examples of how it would be unlawful to sell beer in Hereford, and illegal to sell it in Amarillo without a proper license. At this point, Leo interrupted and said:
"I guess that's right, but I always thought an ill eagle was a sick bird."

Society Dance Bands Thrive In Midst of Rock 'n' Roll

By HUGH MULLIGAN AP Newsfeatures Writer
Playing dance music for people who hate to dance has long been a survival formula for the leading society dance bands across the country, enabling them to co-exist with every major dance craze from the black bottom to rock 'n' roll.
Whether it's a Princeton prom, an Atlanta cotillion or a posh Newport lawn party, the musical menu is always the same: liberal portions of Berlin, Rodgers and Porter, served with gusto in a bouncy two-beat that makes the old kick up their heels and the young feel even younger, despite the vintage melodies.
Waltzes, tangos, sambas are all delivered in the same democratic beat; faster than a foxtrot and just a shade slower than a can-can.
The aim of the society band is to get everybody dancing and any interference on the part of crooners, blues shouters or hep quartets is strictly considered bad form, old boy.
Prior to the advent of hi-fi, society band leaders like Meyer Davis and Lester Lanin were little known outside of the select circles in which they beat out their amiable two-beat. But now, smack in the middle of the rock 'n' roll frenzy, they've suddenly become big record sellers without altering their formula or tempo. Teen-agers, strange to say, are among their biggest fans. Elvis may be the most, but Davis is the most-est and Lanin, at the moment, the most-est.
Lanin, whose Epic album "At The Tiffany Ball" is a best seller throughout the country, is more or less the General Motors of the society band business. If the Philadelphia Mellons, the Newport Vanderbits and the new Jersey Whiteys all gave parties on the same night, Lanin would be more than equal to the challenge. At his call are some 500 musicians, formed into 25 units ranging from a 60-piece orchestra to a 3-piece combo, and all playing his smooth, distinctive beat.
Meyer Davis, famous father of famous world citizen Gary Davis, operates in a similar fashion, with numerous satellite bands

'58 Cancer Society Goal Set at $1,900

The 1958 fund-raising drive by the American Cancer Society, Deaf Smith County chapter, begins Monday and will last through Saturday. Goal of the campaign is $1,900.
As a part of the drive Xi Epsilon Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi Sorority, will conduct a neighborhood distribution of material on cancer.
Enough material for all the houses in a block will be left at one home and then passed from house to house.
The Cancer Society did not participate in last fall's United Fund Drive, saying it needs an individual drive to distribute material and literature on cancer.
Brief talks will be made to service and civic clubs during the drive and literature will be distributed to club members, according to county chairman Mark Woodall. Dr. A. T. Mims is medical director for the county chapter.
A campaign for advance gifts was conducted this past week.

carrying his name and jivery style into the nation's most exclusive salons and saloons. His latest album, also a big seller, is "On With the Dance" (ABC-Paramount).

Both Lanin and Davis bring the same mass production methods to their very listenable albums, offering as many as 20 to 25 different tunes on each side. Except for an occasional chorus by the already over-worked band, there are no breaks for vocals.
Out on the West Coast, from San Francisco's Fairmount Hotel, Verve Records has recorded Ernie Heckscher and his orchestra in a tuneful, danceable album called "Dance Atop Nob Hill." Again, there are no vocals, but the beat is fast and catchy. Heckscher, like his Eastern counterparts, whips up enough music to fill an entire dance card, some 34 songs ranging from Irving Berlin's "Alexander's Ragtime Band" to Cole Porter's "I Get a Kick Out of You."
What caused the sudden boom in society band albums?
Heckscher, who now thinks as much of his listing on the record charts as he does his standing with the Social Register, credits Midwesterner Lawrence Welk, a graduate of the society band circuit, with creating a demand for straight instrumental numbers through his TV successes.
Other top and recent dance band albums that deserve mention include Mitchell Ayres "Having a Wonderful Weekend" (RCA Victor), The Plaza Hotel's Ted Straeter in an album called "Come Dance With Me" (Columbia), Ray Anthony's "The Dream Girl" (Capitol), Jackie Gleason's "The Torch with the Blue Flame" (Capitol), Jimmy Palar's "The Palmer Method" (Mercury).

If you want to cut a run in hi-fi, these are the boys who will help separate the warp from your woof.

Store Home Furnishings And Clothing with Care

AP Newsfeatures
Women are a moth's best friend. Every year they prove it by treating the little pests to a spring meal costing more than $5,000,000,000.
This annual feast takes place in the best households. The most fastidious housekeepers neglect to store home furnishings and clothing properly.
Recent opinion polls revealed that some 80 per cent of 4,000 women queried did not use moth preventives correctly, if at all. Some women are under the impression that the odor of moth preventives send the moth winging away.
How then should we protect up holed furniture, rugs, blankets, sweaters, other woollens, and furs?
Before packing items, make sure they are not infested. If you see white worms' or little webs, take everything that was within the area of the piece that was attacked, and brush off each article, sun it, clean the closet, and drawer or area that housed the item.
If you can spare one closet for the summer, store all moth proofed items in it. First, spray it with moth preventives. Some vacuum cleaners have sprays for this purpose.
Dry cleaning will kill all stages of moths, experts say, so if the items are stored as nearly airtight as possible, there should be no problem.
A blanket that has been washed or dry cleaned may be stored this way:
First sprinkle a sufficient quantity of moth preventive on the garment and wrap it carefully in aluminum foil. If you want to make the package absolutely airtight, seal folds and edges with masking tape. The masking tape makes a good label for a description of the article that is put away. Use a big crayon and label the package — blanket, comforter, area rug, etc.
Items that are individually wrapped are best stored in a closet, chest, box or drawer. Airtight wardrobe bags are good, too, for storing blankets because the blankets may be wrapped in a long length of foil and masking tape, and then hung up in garment bags.
A closet may be mothproofed by using two pounds of paradichlorobenzene to 100 cubic feet. Double the amount for naphthalene.
Upholstered furniture that is exposed to sunshine, light and air will not require special treatment. But if a house is to be locked up for any length of time, the upholstered furniture should be thoroughly cleaned either with dry cleaning fluids or soap and water. Put some paradichlorobenzene crystals around chair cushions to combat mildew.
It's a good idea to brush and vacuum furniture and rugs regularly, especially dark corners under heavy pieces or deep folds of furniture. To eliminate possible breeding places, seal cracks in the floor with putty or a heavy coat of paint or masking tape.

THE ROSE AND ITS CARE

(EDITOR'S NOTE: By request, Mrs. O. H. Herring, horticulture chairman of the Hereford Garden Club, tells about roses, how to select and plant, how to care for and what to do about them now. In answer to the many requests for information, Mrs. Herring prepared the article from special study of the rose and from wide experience in growing varieties suitable to this area.)

By MRS. O. H. HERRING

The rose is the world's favorite flower. Wherever gardening is practical, in every garden, in every region of the world, roses will grow. They vary so widely in habits of growth that except for dense shade there seems to be a type for every situation in the home garden.

Good quality plants are essential to success, and regardless of where plants are purchased, be sure to get dormant two-year-old, number 1 grade, field grown stock.

DO NOT WORRY about fertilizing the soil when first planting as a newly planted bush does not require extra food until the root system is developed. While the best time for planting bare-root roses is from Feb. 15 to April 15, potted plants may be put out as late as May, leaving the ball of earth intact so as not to disturb the roots.

Use care in selecting a plot for the rose-bed, being sure it is well drained and situated so as to get at least four or five hours of sun each day.

If you haven't already pruned your bush, do so now—Remove all old non-producing canes, all injured and dead wood and enough of the green growth to leave a symmetrical plant, having no cross canes. Use sharp pruning shears so as not to bruise or split the canes.

The once-a-year-bloom climbers should be trimmed lightly in the spring before blooming just enough to get winter-killed and injured canes out and to improve the shape. Immediately after they have finished blooming give them a major pruning, cutting back all canes that have flowered to near the ground as they produce new canes from the base of the plant each year.

THE PERPETUAL or ever-blooming climbers are more restricted in their growth and require less pruning; the bush type of pruning is best for these.

All roses require dusting or spraying with appropriate materials. These all-purpose materials for spraying may be found at any garden center or seed store, and will control the common diseases and insects in one operation. However, should the weather or some other factor become especially favorable to one insect or disease, then a special spray for that particular situation is needed.

For instance, aphids are killed by contact insecticide and they are very persistent and require repeated spraying or dusting at short intervals. A spray containing pyrethrum or malathion is more effective for aphids than a nicotine spray. Spraying roses should start early when the leaves first show and be continued every 10 days until frost.

Leaf cutters, bees which cut circular pieces from rose leaves, and the leaf hopper are other insects to combat. Isotox is the spray for these.

Other enemies of roses besides insects are fungus diseases such as mildew, black spot and rose rust. Mildew starts on young leaves which soon become coated with a grayish, white, powdery growth on one or both sides. This is caused by frequent late-summer showers or by sprinkling the foliage of plants in the late afternoon or evening. It is a good policy to spray water roses. Mildew or rust are both good sprays for mildew. Black spot and rose rust should be treated with Fermate and Captan.

MULCHES ARE valuable in the life of a rose. Mulching helps to keep down weeds, reduces the loss of the surface moisture, prevents crusting of soil, keeps down soil temperatures and delays infestation from black spot.

Various materials may be used for mulching — cotton seed hulls, dried grass clippings, peat moss, peanut hull, shredded leaves, well rotted manure or shredded alfalfa hay. Apply two or three weeks before roses come into first bloom. After removing all weeds and raking soil smooth — use at least two

ON THE HOUSE

By JOHN O.B. WALLACE

AP Newsfeatures

Consider the lay of the land, literally, in picking a site for your future home. Because, says one of the nation's top site developers and planners, the site or plot is the factor most neglected by home buyers.

A. Carl Stelling, whose New York site engineering firm has won national awards for planning subdivisions, offers this down-to-earth advice to prospective home owners:

"The plot's location in the community, its shape, size, topography and facilities are more important than closets in the house — but they get far less attention."

"Alterations, even additions, to houses can almost always be made, but it is rarely feasible to change the lay of the land."

As a guide to potential home buyers in their evaluation of sites, Stelling's firm has prepared a nine-point checklist. The list ranges from taxes and municipal facilities to future zoning prospects and so-called premium price corner lots. This is Stelling's checklist:

1. If possible, pick your home site in or near an established area. If the surrounding community has "aged" gracefully — that is if its homes have been well maintained and landscaped — you can be fairly confident about the future of the neighborhood.

2. Determine what municipal facilities apply to the site, keeping in mind that those not currently existing may be the basis for future assessments. Seek a neighborhood with as many of these facilities as possible — paved streets, street lights, snow removal service, adequate fire and police protection, adequate schools, sanitary sewers, storm sewers, public water, refuse collection and mail delivery. Look also for a nearby shopping area, houses of worship, parks, theaters and transportation.

Good sources for this type of information are local real estate agents, banks and builders. Also talk to families already living in the neighborhood. Their opinions and knowledge can prove invaluable.

3. Check the taxes on the potential site — and find out from the local planning board or your attorney if new schools, or other locally-financed improvements, are planned. They are apt to boost taxes on your property in the future.

4. Look toward the future. It would be profitable to visit the local town-planning commission to find out about zoning, or the lack of it, in the area of the site. Find out, too, about any plans for highways or other projects which would affect the value of your prospective property. If the community has a master plan, find out what it holds in store for your selected neighborhood. Your attorney will be a good source for this information.

5. In evaluating the size of a lot, think in terms of usable space as well as total area. Generally, the space behind the house will be used for family activities, and it should be adequate in most cases for your needs. But be certain the site allows room for future expansion — for example, for the addition of a garage, a workshop or an extra wing. If the lot is not served by a public sewer, it should be no less than half an acre in size. In such a case, to be completely safe, try to find a site of an acre or more. Septic tanks sour the soil, and the more land you have the safer you will be where there is no public sewer.

6. In evaluating the shape of a site, remember that the primary function of the lot's frontage is to provide access to the road. Also remember that frontage in most communities determines the assessments for sewers, sidewalks and other municipal facilities. A frontage which is one third the depth of the plot generally provides a proper proportion. If your site is wider at the back than at the front, you're in luck because it will give you a higher proportion of usable space.

7. Avoid sites which are below the level of surrounding streets.

Such sites are subject to many annoyances, such as poor drainage and extreme automobile headlight glare from roads and highways. Low-level sites also create difficulties in tying into public sewer systems.

8. Always be wary of water on or near a site. There is a possibility of flooding and wet cellars. Lakes and streams also represent a danger to young children. Water in heavily populated areas tends, too, to become increasingly polluted and therefore less useful for recreational purposes.

9. Think twice before paying a premium price for a corner lot. While such lots usually are upgraded on the basis of "prestige," the facts seldom justify the added cost. In many communities, both frontages of a corner lot are subject to assessment. More important, a second "front lawn" takes the place of usable space behind the house. Also, traffic noise and headlight glare come from two sides instead of one — and privacy is reduced.

The Rose...

inches deep all around roses, covering the bed.

Don't let your rose-bed get too dry. It is necessary to irrigate (unless there is sufficient rain) slowly and deeply at least every two weeks. Water should penetrate the soil from eight to 12 inches and in midsummer water every week.

Established roses need not be fed a balanced fertilizer. The first feeding should be after the spring pruning. Cotton seed meal, Bactex, Ammonium sulphate or home made compost can be used. Apply in small amounts in a circle six inches from the plant — then work in soil and water well. This will give a quick boost in plant energy.

A second feeding should be applied at the end of the first blooming season, usually in June. Then from Aug. 1 to 15, another feeding to give good fall blooms. A tablespoon of superphosphate to each plant added to the last two feedings will help develop larger blooms.

IT IS A common error for rose growers to cut too many long stemmed flowers, especially from a new plant. The fewer blooms cut during the first flowering period of the plant, the better. Do not cut longer stems than you will actually need for an arrangement. Conserve foliage of the plant where it will produce more growth and blooms.

My favorite roses are Hybrid Teas, Peace, Mirandy, Mojave, Tiffany, Charlotte Armstrong, Chrysler Imperial, Grandiflora and Queen Elizabeth.

The Hereford Garden Club chose the Peace rose for the Memorial Peace Rose Garden at Hereford High School. The Memorial Garden was in full bloom for the first time last summer, providing a gorgeous array of color and beauty.

Progressive H.D. Hears Miss Felizia

The Progressive Home Demonstration club entertained the North Hereford Home Demonstration Club with a social in the home of Mrs. T. J. Parsons Tuesday. Miss Silvana Felizia, exchange student from Italy, was guest speaker.

Miss Felizia talked mostly on foods, studies and types of entertainment in Italy. She also mentioned clothing.

"Foods of Italy and America are a lot the same but are cooked differently," Silvana said. "We drink hot tea in my country but I had never heard of ice tea until I arrived in America. After watching the bus driver order a hamburger and ice tea for a snack I decided to try ice tea for breakfast. That caused amusement for the Americans who were watching me."

"I like the USA and especially the colleges. I was very much amused at the girls wearing bobble sox and the boys wearing jeans and t-shirts to school. The girls in Italy wear hose and high heels to school and the boys wear suits and usually white shirts and ties."

After the talk Mrs. Leon Coffin had charge of the recreation. Refreshments of punch and cookies with May flower baskets filled with nuts and mints were served by the hostess club.

Bay View Club Concludes Its Study of World Unity

The concluding program of the year on "World Unity" was presented Thursday afternoon at the Bay View Study Club meet held with Mrs. J. W. Kirby.

During the season programs have dealt with Individual Responsibility, United Nations, World Council of Churches, Threats to Unity in the World, Russia, Gandhi and Christianity and World Unity. Thursdays program dealt with China which Lin Yu-Tang says is the "Greatest mystifying and stupefying fact in the modern world, and that not only because of her age or her geographical greatness."

Mrs. D. H. Alexander gave a discussion of the people of China from Pearl Buck's book "The China I Knew," revealing something of the inner nature of the Chinese people as she knew them from childhood. "Her love for the Chinese people caused her to develop what is known as "The Welcome House" in Philadelphia for half-Asian children, and many children are adopted from that home," Mrs. Alexander said.

Mrs. Paul Mathers gave a brief "Resume of History" of China, telling of the dynasty before Christ and tracing the dynasties to the present Russian domination. She explained, in part, how China is ruled and how her government is still influenced by strong family ties.

The next and final meeting will be in the form of a tea given in the home of Mrs. Max Drever on May 1.

Members attending the meeting were Mesdames Max Drever, Leo

Forrest, D. H. Alexander, Howard Gault, A. M. Jones, W. S. Kerr, J. W. Spradley, Paul Mathers, J. C. McCracken, Ansel McDowell, Eugene Naugle, Carl Ferrin, and Mrs. Essie Cardwell, a honor member of the club. Borneo is the third largest island in the world.

Mrs. George Olson and Mrs. Doc Carter presented a program on "Teaching Children Manners" Tuesday evening when members of Les Meres Study Club met with Mrs. Charles Packard, Mrs. Ervin Robinson was assisting hostess. During the business session Mrs. Clifford Kerr was welcomed as a new member and plans were made for the next meeting which will be held in the home of Mrs. Eugene Noel on May 6.

Mrs. Olson stressed teaching children to observe manners while they are very young saying "Only slowly do children learn to think of others and it is by constant repetition that they become mannerly and polite."

Mrs. Carter reviewed a part of Dr. Benjamin Spock's column in a recent issue of The Ladies Home Journal, which said, in part, "Manners bring out the best in children and win friends for them, but don't push party-manners on small children. Casualness has been pushed about as far as it can go and soon good manners will be given again the respect they deserve."

Those present included Mesdames Roy Boyer, T. E. Brisendine, Doc Carter, Dick Gholson, Eugene Noel, George Olson, Nelson Reiger, Ervin Robinson, Larry Summers, Delma Williams and the hostess.

SUBSTITUTE HAM
NEW YORK — The new Broadway trend of having alternates appear in place of lead performers at certain performances each week has spread to the animal kingdom now.

Robert Weede, of "Most Happy Fella," and Rex Harrison, of "My Fair Lady," who began the time-off schedule, have been joined by Salomey of "Li'l Abner." Each Wednesday matinee another porker substitutes on-stage while Salomey appears before the camera for a series of film shorts.

ON THE HOUSE

By JOHN O.B. WALLACE

Chicago (U) — Architects, interior decorators and furniture designers are integrating their efforts and foresee the time when American homes will have more built-in units.

A group of designers meeting here discussed trends in American living and found that millions of middle class people move each year. They agree that stationary furniture and fittings are in sight. "The kitchen sink is taken for granted as part of the house," said Larry Peabody, a Boston furniture designer.

"Closets will have built-in chests and drawers. A bedroom need not remain a bedroom in appearance," he said.

Designer John Van Koert of New York says we can lavish more attention on the little things — a painting that can be transported, a piece of sculpture, silverware. These are personal attachments. "We are shipping around a lot of sentimentality in furniture," Van Koert said. "I don't think we ought to become neurotic because we give up something we've sat on for a couple of years."

Designers envision a library of changeable parts — and panels in color and fabric for decorating built-in cabinets and interior walls of homes. These could match upholstery in chairs and sofas.

To achieve this, the designers suggest that a home may have furniture built into it according to specifications from an architect. The designers suggest this as one method of solving the moving problem.

Bernard Bruening of Staunton, Va., says home furnishings have reached a high state of artistic and cultural excellence.

"It seems to me in our acceptance of design, informality is associated with our modern way of living," Bruening said. "The sterile modern of the late 1930's and early 1940's is history. New patterns from all designers are new and not a return to traditionalism. The new creation is warm, charming and liveable," he said.

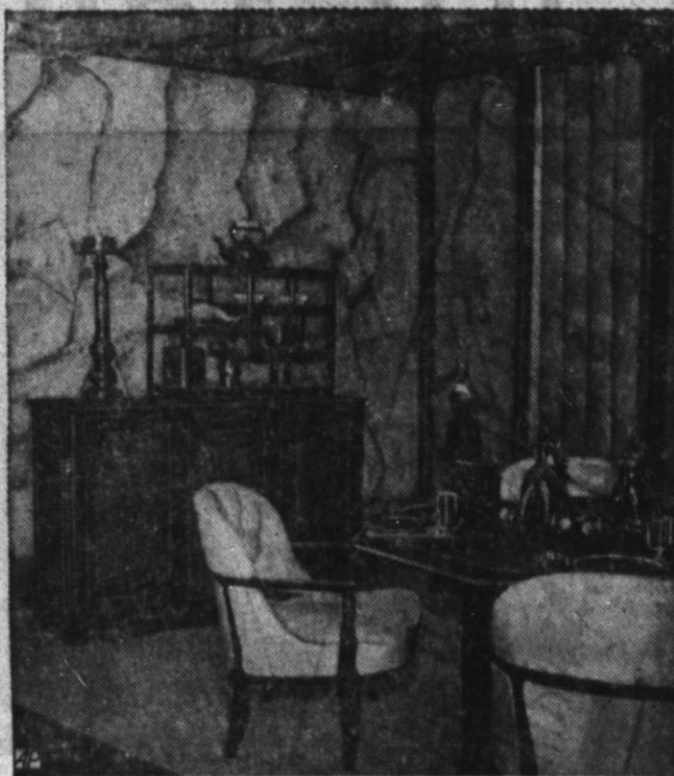

Henry Glass of Chicago says American design is taking the direction of greater personal expression. The field of invention is pointing the way.

"There are a lot of human problems that have to be met," Glass said. "There are some things that should stay in a home and some things that should go."

Among the things that could stay is a new sliding-door mirror, E. F. Gardner says this invention will revolutionize home interior styling.

"By using large panels of mirror that reflect a major portion of a room, builders will be able to create a new dimension in space, giving small areas a feeling of greater height and depth," he said.

The six by eight-foot mirror is a packaged product complete with aluminum frame and equipped with all hardware for hanging. It is delivered to the building site in a single carton.

Local Women at District P-TA

Representatives from the five local P-TA organizations were in Canyon Tuesday to attend the 35th Annual, Eighth District Parent-Teacher Assn. workshop session. Theme for the days activities was "Education is Life in the Making" with speakers including Dr. Joseph Ray, president of Amarillo Junior College; Dr. John McFarland, Superintendent of Amarillo

Another idea of interior decorating was advanced by Edward Wormley who used discarded flank leather on walls and the ceiling of a room. The idea achieves a rustic texture effect now prominent in architectural design.

Even the kitchen sink has become decorative.

Margaret Sedwick fashioned a casual patio setting featuring a console kitchen sink unit covered in black tropical leather and lined with mandarin red leather.

Complete with range, water outlets and refrigerator, the sink unit when closed resembles an innocent cabinet in a casual arrangement of wicker chairs, upholstered bright yellow wrought iron chair and walls of blue pecky cypress.

schools; Mrs. Bill Wood, Mrs. Nelson Welch, Mrs. T. A. Swenson and Bob Wear, minister of the Canyon Church of Christ, and Dr. James Cornette, president of West Texas State College.

Charles Eads served as moderator for the general workshop. Representing the Hereford High School P-TA were Mesdames Don Guseman, Colby Conkright, Joe Reinauer, W. H. Patton, H. E. Wester and Roy Calvert.

Central School was represented by Mrs. Chester Wiggins and Mrs. J. B. Noland. Junior High School representatives were Mesdames Russell Ingalls, and M. T. Rutter. Shirley School, Mrs. Joe Reinauer; and Mrs. T. B. Thomas and Mrs. Glenn Allred represented Aikman P-TA.

Others attending were Mesdames Henry Sears, Elmer Patterson and Merlin Kaul, District Eight officers.

HALE-AIKIN STUDIES DESERVE 'E FOR EFFORT'

Recommended Improvements Appear Sound, But Gain Little Public Interest

Climaxing several months of intense study on the part of 60 members, the Hale-Aikin committee met Tuesday night to summarize findings and make public reports. Attending the meeting were 38 people, including three persons not on the committee.

If you assume the sole purpose of the Hale-Aikin studies to be that of finding out what the people actually want, it can only be classified as a 100 per cent flop. On the other hand, those who take the time to read the report will discover that the study groups seriously considered several pertinent questions and, in general, came up with some sound recommendations. This is true on the local level, as well as on a state-wide basis.

Seen from the standpoint of the average parent, several of the recommendations should fall in line with general thinking. This, of course, includes improved methods of teaching spelling, reading, writing and other elementary subjects. The "6-3-3" plan was also given a green light, and the proposed kin-

Jail Problem Is With Us Again

Deaf Smith County will once again face the question of building an adequate county jail. Such, at least, was intimated by members of the commissioners court at their meeting Monday.

The question appears following refusal of voters to endorse a $175,000 bond issue in 1957 and, it is logical to believe, the issue will face many opponents in this second round.

Our commissioners court—and certainly no one could accuse that body of being anything but ultra-conservative—appears thoroughly sold on the need for a new jail. The same can be said for most officials who are familiar with the present situation; a few even fear that the old jail may collapse and result in bodily harm to inmates.

Whether people disapproved the plans offered by the court last election, or if the objections centered around the courthouse yard location, we do not know. Unquestionably, however, something went wrong. Financially, Deaf Smith County is in an enviable position. Cost of a new jail should, naturally, be held to a minimum, and the location should be adopted which will best serve the county.

If the commissioners follow this line of thinking, then they deserve the backing and the support of the property owners and tax payers. We never heard of anyone who went to jail by choice. If we put people in jail against their wishes, then the least we can do is to provide a safe place, sanitary to the point of meeting minimum health standards, and meeting requirement of state specifications. Our present jail fails on all three counts.

Most citizens and tax payers, we sincerely believe, will see the jail project in the same light.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

F. L. Pinckerts Were Wed in Minnesota

By MRS. R. L. CRIBWELL Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Pinckert, 1014 E. Third, were married on Oct. 10, 1903, in Longview, Minn.

"I met her at a party given by a neighbor in the early spring of 1903," said Pinckert. "She was a lovely girl and I was very definitely interested. I was very bashful and did not know many girls. My father had married twice and my stepmother and I were not happy together so I ran away from home when I was very young. I knew the woods, but not girls. You know if you want anything very badly you will have enough courage to try for it."

"We did our courting in a canoe, but we had to depend on a friend to take us to town to be married. We went in a buggy. My canoe was good one on the lakes, was not dependable to go on land. I gave the Justice of the Peace $2 and he said that was the most money he had ever received for reading a marriage ceremony."

"I was a guide for hunters in both the Wisconsin and Minnesota woods. I made my living by taking our hunting parties. We did not mind the weather. It was often 52 degrees below zero, but there was no wind and we dressed for the weather. I worked in a lumber camp in the winter time as it was too cold to hunt. There were 150 or more men in a crew. These union laborers should have worked with us then."

"We worked from dawn to dark and sometimes eleven o'clock or later, if we did not have our quota ready to go. We used kerosene torches if we worked at night. These torches were factory-made and were three to five inches in diameter and from eight to 10 inches long. When lit they made a flickering light, yes, but it was also bright enough to work and work we did until we reached our quota. Sometimes we set our own quota just to see how much we could cut in a day. We worked for the love of work and we enjoyed it. We were young and it was fun to swing an axe to bite into the wood of those giant trees. At night each man took turns at the grindstone to sharpen his axe. One man would turn the Grindstone and the other sharpen his axe then he turned while the other sharpened.

"The bunkhouse was 40 by 80 feet, with bunkbeds all around the walls and a huge stove, round or square, in the center that would burn cordwood without cutting. When the temperature was below 30 degrees, it was kept red hot to heat this large room as there were no partitions. There was a wire strung around the stove with clothespins attached to hang the heavy wet socks and mittens to dry. The mittens and socks were heavy woolen and took several hours to dry."

"There was a cook with several helpers for preparing the meals for the men. We used oxen in those days and there was a bull cook to feed, water and clean the barns. He also kept the bunkhouse clean and kept the water barrels filled for the men to use to clean up as they came from work. There were at least a dozen or more washpans and large roller towels. We worked for $30 per month, bed and board."

"I will remember when I first went to Minnesota. There had been some trouble with the Indians of the Chippewa tribe from the Leech Lake Reservation. Uncle Sam had sent 40 soldiers by steam boat to quiet them. Seven soldiers were killed but only one Indian could be located and he was their interpreter. They were still on the warpath. I was walking along a path and met an Indian chief. His name was Bucamagetic. He was in full war dress. A tall feather headdress and warpaint. He came to meet me saying, Seema, Seema, Seema. I had no idea what he was saying but jerked my Bull Durham out of my pocket, gave it to him, and hurried on."

"I was never so scared in my life. I was just a kid and had never seen an Indian of any kind, much less one in complete war dress. Later I learned to know him and we were friends. He often laughed about my being so frightened and not knowing his language. I also learned that Seema, Seema meant tobacco. Bucamagetic would sit under a large tree and I would take the hunters by to talk with him and take his picture. If they did not drop a quarter into his palm he would cup his hands over his face."

Bucamagetic loved liquor. Once he was arrested and jailed for 90 days. The officers turned him loose and did not give him any money and he had to walk all the way home. This made him very angry and he said they would never arrest him again and his word was true. He lived to be 110 years old."

"I also knew a medicine man. He was a colorful figure. He wore little bells made of silver thimbles, around his shoulders; with a very fancy vest. He came to see me one time when I was sick with a cold. He only stayed a moment and left for the woods. He soon returned with a handful of saffron colored roots. He broke them in short pieces and boiled them, then gave me a cup of the broth. That was the bitterest medicine I ever drank but it got rid of the cold. He also gathered Balsam Pitch from the Balsam trees. These trees would develop blisters about the size of a dollar. He would take the black pitch from these blisters and give it to the Lumber Jacks to heal their ankles and toes that had been burned by their wet woolen socks."

"A friend talked me into coming to Texas. I thought this was the coldest place I had ever seen. I had never lived in a place where the wind blew so hard and was so cold. I wore my North woods clothes for 52 degree weather; when it was only 10 or 12 degrees. A merchant helped me load coal on my wagon for family use. After we had finished, he turned to me and said, 'Aren't you from the North?' I answered, 'Of course,' thinking he was going to say something about my clothes, but he had not noticed them and he said, 'I thought you must be as you talk so funny.' He talked funny to me too."

"Another thing that worried me, was the way Texans used the word carry. I would hear someone say he had carried a team to a neighbor as he was so far behind with his work; or 'I carried his

CENTER VOTES TO CONSTRUCT SWIM POOL The second major facility at Olton Recreation Center was virtually assured by action of the Center board of directors Monday night. The group voted to start construction of a swimming pool at the earliest possible date. If plans progress unhampered, the pool will be completed by early June. Bids for construction of a fan-shaped pool, approximately 20 by 40 by 75 feet in size, are being studied by a committee appointed Monday night. It is anticipated that a contract will be let within a few days, according to Carroll Cox, Center president.—THE OLTON ENTERPRISE

The BOOTLEG Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his bindweed farm turns his thoughts to a world problem, his letter this week indicates. Anything to avoid farming.

I was reading in a newspaper I borrowed out of my neighbor's mail box the other day and returned before he got there—there's one thing you can say for reading a neighbor's newspaper, it's like looking at a sunset, your looking at it doesn't lessen the fun he can have from looking at the same thing, although I'll admit you don't have to subscribe to the sun, however on the other hand you'd miss a lot of information by confining your reading to it—at any rate, to get on with this I was reading how Russia has scored a great propaganda victory by announcing it is suspending all atom and hydrogen bomb tests, which I suspect is sort of like a man's saying he's suspending plowing on this year's crop, along in the fall of the year when it's already in his barn.

This news has upset a lot of people, who are afraid it will sweep the world and convince everybody Russia is a dove of peace and the United States an ogre out to poison the atmosphere.

Well now I'll tell you, I don't believe it. In the first place, anybody who believes Russia, on anything she's unwilling to let free men check up on, is a mighty poor prospect for basing the foundation of world freedom on. If Russia can sweep you off your feet with boasts, you were tottering already and probably don't know the difference between up and down. There's a difference between conquering space and the hearts of men. And in the second place, a propaganda victory is one of the most temporary things there is.

I've seen politicians who rode into office on propaganda, like the people who invariably vote for the last man they heard speak just before the election, you haven't won much when you win a propaganda victory over them. You'll lose 'em the next time somebody else speaks. Understand, I don't know anything about testing hydrogen bombs. I don't even know how to test for a stuck valve on my tractor or guess what a teenager will do next, but I learned long ago the only satisfactory way to get along in life is to figure out what is right for you and go ahead, regardless of what anybody else thinks. I don't care how shining a speech a man makes at a luncheon club, if he doesn't pay his bills, most folks soon catch on he's a deadbeat. You can borrow money on promises, but you demonstrate your worth only when you pay it back in cash.

Any nation you can win by propaganda alone, well, you ain't won much when you get it. There's nothing under the sun or in the newspapers Russia can say that'll sweep me off my feet. I'm the one that decides when I'll get off my feet, and I decide it frequently.

Yours faithfully, J. A.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor: I wonder if the people of Hereford know how fortunate they are to have a music director in the Hereford Schools as fine, capable, and well-liked by the pupils as Mr. Don Moore. I would like to see the Music Department in the Hereford Schools, both vocal and band, become as important to the people of Hereford as the Athletic Department.

To be able to direct and produce the musical, "OKLAHOMA," in three months time with such outstanding results took a lot of skill, knowledge, understanding, and WORK—above and beyond the call of duty—in spite of the fact that he did have a lot of remarkable talent with which to work.

His accomplishments in the music contests over the years are worth mentioning also. Tuesday at Canyon his music groups won five firsts out of a possible six.

So this is just to say "Bouquets to Mr. Moore!" And "Thank You!" from a parent who hopes he will be teaching music in Hereford Schools for at least 16 more years so all my children will have the opportunity of singing under his direction.

Sincerely, Mrs. Herbert D. Boardman

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Opinion is Divided on Licensing of Bicycles

Do you think bicycles should be licensed?

- W. W. WELLS—No, I don't think that should be necessary. I think they should be inspected but I don't think the licenses would be necessary.
MRS. JAMES WILDE—No, I don't. It would be at an advantage if they were stolen but otherwise, I don't know what good it would be.
CARL HOLLINGSWORTH—I don't think so. I think they should be checked to see if they are safe, but I don't think they should be licensed.
MRS. ROY HILL—Well, I think children ought to be more careful on bicycles and if this would help, I think they should. Some children are careless and I think it might help them to be more cautious about riding the bicycles.
DALE TACKET—Yes, I do. If they were stolen that's one way of checking back on them.
MRS. CLAUDE NORTH CUTT—Well, I don't know. My children don't own a bicycle so I wouldn't know. Looks like it would be a good thing.
GENE BROWNLOW—I think they should. I think it should be done for safety reasons.
MRS. EARNEST ROBERTS—No, I don't think they should. It is a lot of extra expense and since bicycles are ridden mostly around the children's own neighborhood and don't think it would matter too much.

SECOND OF A SERIES

Treatment of Delinquents Varies from Case to Case

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second in a series of three articles on juvenile delinquency by Dr. Elmer H. Knowles, head of the department of child development and family relations at Texas Tech College in Lubbock.)

I'm thinking of a boy about 14-years of age who made one major mistake. He stole a college student's car (the keys were left in the car) one day after school, picked up a friend and drove around town for an hour or so. When he returned the car to the place from which he took it, police officers apprehended him.

Questioning revealed that the boy was healthy, intelligent, curious and extremely bored. He was an Eagle scout, an "A" student with too much time on his hands with "nothing," so he said, "to do." He tried out for the football team but had failed to qualify because he started late. Both his mother and father were working so the boy shifted for himself after school looking for... he wasn't sure, just looking mostly. That's when he saw a car with the keys inside.

The boy's smother was an insurance person. Most of the time she was just plain tired. His father was termed by the boy to be very strict, uninterested and uninteresting.

Counseling was provided by a group of concerned persons from various agencies. A job was found for the boy after school as well as a full-time summer job. The next fall the boy made the football team and became interested in acquiring some new friends. His home conditions became more livable. To this date the boy is making a good adjustment.

"Right" and "wrong" are important concepts to learn.

Children should have learned the difference between right and wrong by the time they are eight-years of age, according to Dr. Gesell who is famous for his research on thousands of children of all ages.

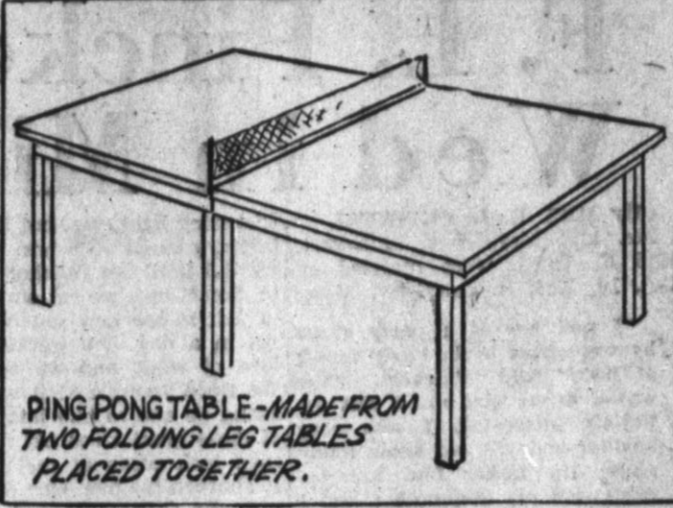

The refinement of these concepts may go on throughout one's lifetime. Honesty is honesty regardless of age, color, class or creed—whether we are at home, at school, at church or just around the community.

Every person in the community is responsible to teach honesty as well as to learn and practice its virtues. Juvenile delinquency and honesty can scarcely stand each other company.

Here's the Answer

By ANDREW C. LANG AP Newsfeatures

cessfully. Do you know anything about this?

Question: I have some three-quarter-inch plywood from which I plan to make a ping pong table for our recreation room. I want to make it regulation size, which is 5 feet by 9 feet, but there will be times when something of this size will be in the way. How can I make the table so that it can be easily taken down and put out of the way when it is not wanted?

Answer: There are several different ways in which this can be done. One of the easiest is to make 2 tables, each 4 1/2 by 5 feet. Make separate leg stands for each top, using the kind of folding leg braces you see on card tables. Put the tables together and you will have a fullsize regulation table. You can buy and use special-type hinges to hold the tables together as a single unit while the top is being used for a game. The hinges have pins which are easily removed when you want to separate the tables. You can then fold each part and place it against a wall. Or you may want to use the parts separately as snack or card tables.

Answer: The finish your friend spoke of was made years ago from red pigment and buttermilk. Somebody apparently discovered that this combination covered wood imperfections and gave a mahogany-like appearance to certain kinds of soft woods, such as pine. The mixture is a sort of combined paint and stain and is extremely difficult to remove, as your friend pointed out. If you decide to go ahead with the refinishing job, put on the paint remover according to the directions of the brand you purchase and scrape it off. Apply a second coat and, when it starts to pimple and blister, immediately apply a third coat. Scrub this third coat with a fine grade of steel wool. Wipe off with a cloth and apply a fourth coat, again rubbing down with steel wool. Next moisten the surface of the wood with denatured alcohol and steel wool it once more. Repeat the alcohol-steel wool process as often as necessary. A lot of trouble? Yes, it is. But it's the only way to get off that particular type of finish, assuming that's what it is.

JUST A MINUTE, PODNUH! LONDON, Ky. — When the Indian threw the heroic cowboy to the ground, 11-year-old Leroy Young reached for his BB gun and fired. The whole show disappeared from the television set amid a tinkle of broken glass. Leroy got a spanking; his father an unexpected repair bill.

Question: We have an old pine bureau that has a reddish color to it, something like mahogany or cherry. I had planned on taking out the color with a paint remover and then applying a clear finish to it. However, a friend of mine, a retired woodworker, says it looks as though the wood is covered with an old-time finish made from red paint and butter-milk, something I never heard of. He says this type of finish cannot be removed suc-

I thought the people meant the word in its literal sense, as you lift a rock or something to carry it to another place. I could not for the life of me, see how one could carry a team of horses or mules anywhere, to a town or city: It did not take me long to learn that it was a colloquialism and not to be taken literally.

"We lived in a log house," said Mrs. Pinckert. "We did not have very much furniture, a dining table and chairs. We made bunks for beds and used boxes and small stumps for extra chairs. We did not need much money for if you ran out of root vegetables a neighbor would give you a sack or two, or you would give it to him if he ran out. We stored food in a root cellar and I canned all the fruit we used. There were blueberries, blackberries and raspberries. Mr. Pinckert and the boys would go to the swamp and in a short time they would have a townsack of cranberries.

"I have a butter paddle that Mr. Pinckert made for me more than 50 years ago. It is of bois'd'arc and the wood is beautiful. I enjoyed making butter with it over the years. I could wish for the fine flavor of the butter we had in those days. We went 14 miles for coffee and tea. We crossed four lakes while on our way. I put out a line of spoons on our way home and caught five of the largest bass you ever saw. They averaged over five pounds each.

"We could go thoroughfare for four or five hundred miles without portage. This may sound impossible but if you knew the lakes as Mr. Pinckert knew you knew just where each lake joined the other and you did not have to portage from one lake to the other. Of course you could go for a thousand miles if you portaged a few miles between the lakes. The children loved it and we thought we would never leave the plains. So much space; miles and miles, no trees, nothing but distance. We have learned to love it and are happy to be living in Hereford that has really grown and prospered along with all the changeable weather," she said.

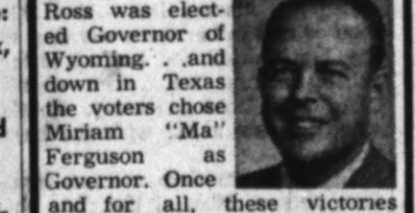

LUNT-FONTANNE BIOGRAPHY NEW YORK — The first major life story of America's most famous acting couple, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, has been written by George Freedley, curator of the New York Public Library's Theater Collection. The volume will include 40 pages of photographs, will be published in London.

PROTESTANT INFLUENCE DOWN NEW YORK — An American Baptist leader says that the current religious revival has not increased the influence of Protestant churches as previous revivals have done. The Rev. John W. Thomas, newly named head of the denomination's Council on Christian Social Progress, said a major reason for this is that "our churches have been reluctant to deal with questions relating to the social order" — such as racial integration.

PROVING A POINT CROSS PLAINS, Wis. — A portable television set on display in a local hardware store turned out to be just that. Thieves broke a hole in the plate glass show window and carted off the set valued at $128.

REMEMBER WHEN? By CHARLIE SEEDS This was the first year in American political history that a woman had ever been elected Governor of a state. And the strange thing was, it happened in two different states that same year.

Nellie Taylor Ross was elected Governor of Wyoming... and down in Texas the voters chose Miriam "Ma" Ferguson as Governor. Once and for all, these victories seemed to bury the traditional male idea that "a woman's place is in the home."

There was one consolation for a man in Texas, though. Before "Ma" Ferguson was elected, she had had to get the permission of "Pa" Ferguson in order to run! Remember the year? Women became governors that year for the first time... but when it came to buying a car, that was still a man's job. Women didn't have much say about cars.

The year was 1924. Today's housewife and mother casts an important vote when a new car is bought. And women like the beauty and handling ease of our new 1958 FORDS. Economy minded wives like our convenient terms, too, and our higher trade-in allowances. You'll both like the deal at CHARLIE SEEDS MOTOR CO., INC., 146 E. Second, Phone EM 4-2727.

TELEPHONE TALK by W. L. Leavy, Manager

FIFTY YEARS OF SERVICE Recently five girls marked their 10th anniversary with the telephone company in Hereford. Together they represent fifty years of telephone experience. They are Mrs. Alma Wallace, Mrs. Bobbye Riddle, Mrs. Bernice Johnson, Virginia Wallace and Mrs. Lura Twiner.

THE LATEST THING The latest thing to use with direct distance dialing is the Dialophone. It's a little plastic machine about the size of your telephone. Up to 850 names in Hereford or out of town may be placed on the alphabetical index. To call the party you wish, just turn the crank to his name and press the button. The machine dials the number without a mistake. It's a wonderful time saver for people who do a lot of calling. For more information on this gadget, give us a call at the business office.

Whether you use a Dialophone or your "pointin' finger" it's still a lot of fun to dial your own long distance calls. If you don't know the number, let the operator get it for you—no charge.

SPRING HOUSE CLEANING Is spring house cleaning under way at your home? And are you planning to do a little redecorating, too? I have a suggestion that will help add a little color to your home whether you're cleaning or redecorating. It is this: Put some color telephones in your home.

We now have nine attractive colors plus black. The colors are: white, cherry red, pastel yellow, ivory, moss green, rose pink, aqua blue, light beige, light grey.

From this variety you can choose one or several to blend or contrast with any colors in your home.

Color extension telephones are practical too. You'll be surprised at the steps they save: No more running from one end of the house to the other to answer. And, an extension telephone will give you more privacy on calls.

Color extension telephones are economical, too. Here in Hereford they cost only $10.00 (one-time charge) plus a small installation charge. The monthly extension charge is only $1.00 a month.

GOING SOMEWHERE? Some people I know have started planning their vacations because they know planning ahead can make a vacation more fun.

They've found, too, that calling ahead makes a vacation even more fun. No worry about whether you'll find accommodations. No guessing as to whether the people you want to visit are home. Calling ahead on your vacation trip or on any trip makes it more fun, gives you more peace of mind.

And, don't forget that the people at home like to hear from you too. A telephone call is a personal, easy way to keep in touch.

Next time, call. Take the worries out of travel. Call by number. It's twice as fast. SOUTHWESTERN BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP PHILADELPHIA — Although official figures show only 103 million Americans are affiliated with churches, a leading religious journal says that the number actually surpasses this by 25 million — for a total of 128 million out of the country's 170 million population. The magazine, Presbyterian Life, in a detailed analysis of membership computation systems, says additional church-affiliated persons are under age 13, but not counted under policies of some denominations.

U.S. Fashions Go to Fair

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor
American fashions will see the world, and vice versa, this summer as typical outfits, from Bermuda shorts to evening gowns, are modeled continuously every day in the American Pavilion at the Brussels World's Fair.

Four different collections of about 60 garments each will be shown at six-week intervals during the six months' life of the fair. The clothes have been selected by the editors of Vogue Magazine, at the request of the U. S. State Department, and are chosen from the entire roster of American designers.

In charge of the fashion showings and on hand daily at the American Pavilion will be Mrs. Lee Canfield of Vogue's New York staff.

The object of the showing is to display the American look to the world, the fashions being chosen as typical of the clothes worn throughout the United States. All price ranges are included, as well as outfits for all occasions — swim suits, golf and tennis clothes, dresses for going to the supermarket, town suits, country casuals, pants of all lengths and dance dresses.

All the clothes are from the regular collections of U. S. manufacturers, none having been specially designed for the show. Miss Jessica Daves, Vogue's editor-in-chief, describes the fashions as a "slice of life" chosen to show the world how the American woman looks at work and play.

The clothes will be modeled by 12 European mannequins, now being trained to "look American."

AMERICAN LOOK—Typical fashions worn in the U.S.A. are off to the Brussels World's Fair. Here Mrs. Lee Canfield, of Vogue Magazine, who will be in charge of daily fashion showings in the American Pavilion, checks a rack of Belgium-bound dresses with model Renee Breton, wearing Originala's long evening coat over Ceil Chapman's white organdy evening gown. Among fashions to be shown at the fair are: 1. Rose Marie Reed's knit maillot swim suit. 2. Favorite weekend costume of sweaters and skirt by Goldworm. 3. Striped T-shirt with shorts by Evan-Picone. 4. All-American shirtwaist dress in orange chiffon, by Talmack. 5. Glitter-trimmed short evening dress, by Galanos. 6. Dry-off dress for beachwear, by John Weitz.

FOLLIES ON TOUR

NEW YORK (AP)—The "Ziegfeld Follies" is circling out from Broadway this summer on a jaunt that is expected to bring it back to Broadway.

Producers Mark Kroll and Charles Conaway are revising almost completely the content of the revue which recently closed here, and the travelling troupe will retain only one member of the Gotham company, singer Micki Marlo.

NEW LOOK IN BATHROOMS—High-fired vitreous china basin has hand painted scroll motif, marble sink top, gold plated Dolphin faucet, and towel bar; a Louis XVI white and gold dressing table with marble top and vinyl floor melon colored rayon area rugs. Designed by Sherle Wagner.

Men Like Lively Bath Decor

AP Newsfeatures
When redecorating your bathroom, include your husband in the act, advises Rose Wagner who with her husband Sherle makes a career of coordinating closet, boudoir and bath interiors. "Some women ignore the man of the house when decorating a bathroom, but his ideas usually can be as definite about that as anything else. Why not let him have a voice in the matter?" she asks. The tipoff she's found is when a man shops for his own decor at their 57th street showroom in New York, he is more fastidious usually, than a woman, following up the most minute detail of his decorating plan.

man's taste is black, gold and white. It's a color combination that appeals to any man usually. Mrs. Wagner says she is happy to say that peach, Nile green and powder blue, popular bathroom colors when she started in business 15 years ago, "are now virtually extinct."

One man wanted wood paneling in his bathroom, so we got it for him — waterproofed laminated plywood. Another man wanted a bathroom done in Mexican hues, the scheme devised from a ring he wears. Green and brown grained marble formed the nucleus of the color scheme.

Monograms are on the wane too, she says, and it is no longer considered chic to use "HIS" or "HER" motif. The most popular motif now is the cherub. Nautical designs — fish, sea horses and seashells — appeal to sophisticated types, too. French designs such as Empire patterns have an irresistible elegance for people who have good taste.

Contrary to popular opinion, men do not object to pink bathrooms, she says. They may act like they tolerate the feminine shade, but secretly they like it. Too many women, she says, stick to clinical white bathrooms, underestimating their husbands love of color.

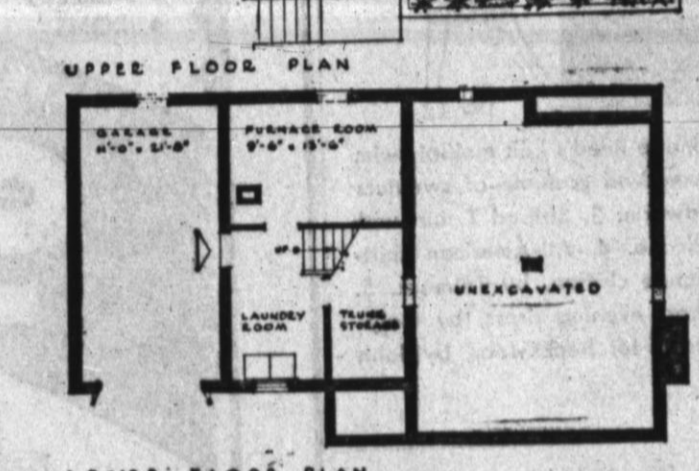

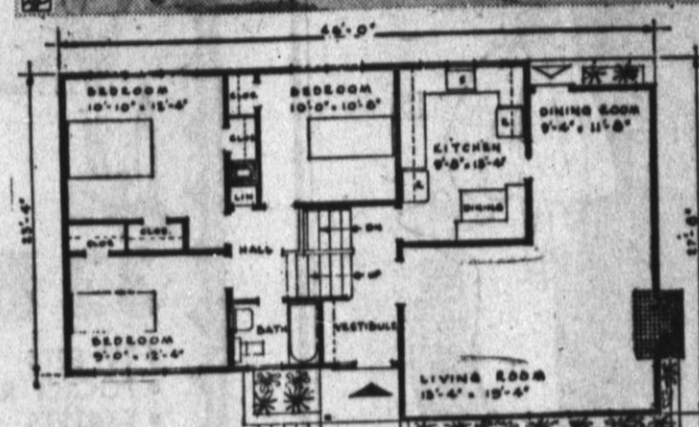

Materials have been so waterproofed that anything goes in the bathroom. There are plastic-coated papers that look like leather, waterproof fabric shower curtains and carpeting.

"We were decorating a bathroom for one couple. The wife selected a very conservative pattern for the walls, and was overwhelmed when her husband rebelled, preferring a more flamboyant pattern in gay reds."

There is no admission charge and the public is invited to attend.

You never can tell she says, but a safe bet if you don't know your

S. Hereford H.D. Studies Furniture

The South Hereford Home Demonstration Club met in the home of Mrs. Ethel Layman Tuesday for a program on "Selection of Furniture for Your Home." Mrs. Argen Draper was the speaker.

Mrs. Draper told the group, "Furniture is a year round item and it may prove more satisfying and more practical to buy it when it is needed. Certainly there will be greater possibility of buying the "right" piece and less likelihood of compromising on an unneeded and unsuitable article because it is a "bargain."

Mrs. Pat Patterson joined the club as a new member. Present were Mesdames S. S. Williams, John Hacker, Ada Hollabough, J. E. Moody, Alua Neal, Clara Shore, J. P. Slaton, Eldon Craig, A. C. Flowers, M. L. Hardy, Tom Draper, Ethel Layman and Pat Patterson.

Crown Gall Can Hamper Plants

COLLEGE STATION — When plants die or fail to make satisfactory growth, Harlan Smith, extension plant pathologist, says that crown gall may be the trouble maker.

He says that this bacterial disease attacks peach, apple, begonia, blackberry, camellia, carnation, chrysanthemum, euonymus, dewberry, forsythia, grape, ligustrum, honeysuckle, pear, pecan, phlox, rose and many other plants. Young plants are more often attacked than are older ones, he says.

The disease gets its name from the large, rough, roundish, woody swellings or galls it produces. The galls are found on the stem or trunk of the affected plants just below or at the soil surface or they may also be on the roots.

Smith advises the removal and immediate burning of small plants which are infected with the disease. He says to avoid setting known susceptible plants in soil where the disease has been found and to examine all nursery stock carefully for galls before making a purchase. He points out that some trees may outgrow early infections.

The pathologist cautions against damaging the crown or roots of plants during cultivations. Also that soil insects and nematodes which feed on roots be controlled. Wounds of any type will increase the possibility of infection.

To help prevent infection, the roots of most nursery stock or rose cuttings may be treated before setting. Treat the roots for 10 minutes, except those of peach and apple, in a solution of corrosive sublimate or Semesan, recommends Smith. Use one part of cor-

The Burner-With-A-Brain puts on and to pot watching... makes every pot and pan an automatic utensil.

The meat thermometer supplements the automatic control of your Gas oven for perfect roasting results.

Closed door broiling is advisable only when you cook with Gas, because only Gas consumes cooking vapors.

You say how and when, and Gas obeys! There's a lot more to a completely automatic Gas oven than the timing device that turns it on and off. With Gas, thermostatic control is precision control... Gas is flexible enough to respond immediately. Gas can maintain the set temperature within a margin of five degrees. That's why your Gas oven cooks better, and also looks better. Modern, functional design reaches a new peak with Gas built-ins that will fit any floor plan, blend with any decor. Besides all this, Gas costs less to buy, less to install, less to operate. # Italian Way Found Worthwhile

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

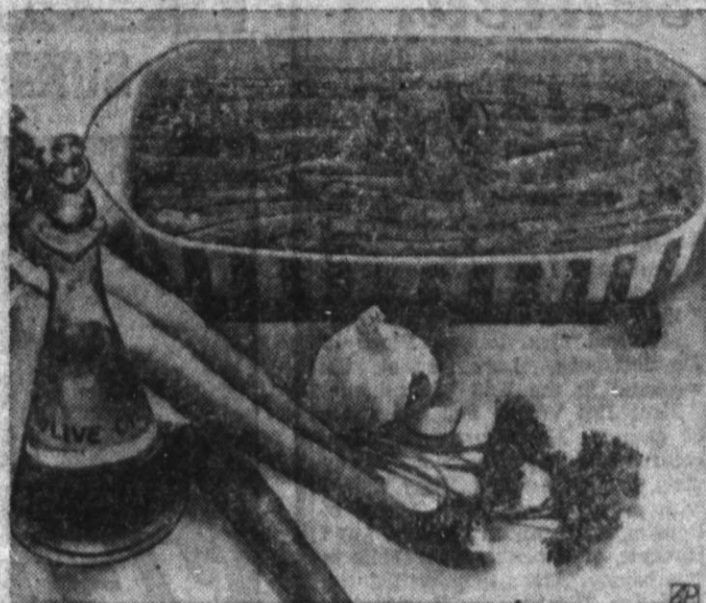

THE ITALIAN WAY of marinating cooked vegetables and serving them cold is worth adopting.

We first came on snap beans prepared this way when we went, years ago, to a small Italian restaurant on New York's East Side. There the owner's whole family cooked and served dinner to paying guests who made reservations to dine at seven or nine o'clock. At both sittings family-style platters came to each table. The meal began with stalks of celery and whole tomatoes, melon, veal in tuna sauce and went on to soup, pasta or risotto. Then came the main course — roast beef or veal with potatoes and a huge bowl of cold marinated snap beans.

When we staggered home after this meal we looked into our Italian cook books and found it common practice to marinate cooked vegetables. As readers of this column know, we've passed along variations of marinated snap beans. Recently we marinated lightly-cooked carrot sticks with equal success. The carrots may be served on a platter of antipasto or be offered with hot or cold roast meat or poultry.

MARINATED CARROTS

Ingredients: 6 large or 8 medium-sized carrots (about 1 1/8 pounds without green tops), 1 cup boiling water, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1/4 cup olive oil, 3 tablespoons cider vinegar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, white pepper, 1 small garlic clove, 1 bay leaf, 2 tablespoons minced parsley, extra salt.

SNAPPY TREAT—Snap beans, marinated the Italian way and served cold, dress up the meal's main course.

Method: Pare carrots; cut into sticks about 3 inches long and 1/2-inch thick. Cook rapidly, covered, in 2-quart (wide bottom) saucepan with boiling water and 1/4 teaspoon salt; turn once and cook until tender but still crisp — about 8 minutes. Drain. Turn carrots into a shallow container. Beat olive oil, vinegar, 1/2 ts. salt and a dash of pepper together with a fork; add garlic clove (cut in half) and bay leaf (broken into several pieces). Pour over carrots and mix well. Sprinkle with parsley. Refrigerate, covered, overnight. Remove to room temperature shortly before serving. Sprinkle lightly with extra salt if needed. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

CARD OF THANKS

I want to thank my friends and loved ones for doing so much for me during my stay in the hospital. For the prayers, beautiful flowers and get well cards, I want to thank the Rev. Weathers and the Rev. and Mrs. Scott for their faithfulness. I especially want to thank Dr. Nobles and the nurses for their untiring care. I also want to thank all of the hospital staff. They were all wonderful to me.

"BUTTERFLY" FACE LIFTING

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the hardest staples of the Metropolitan Opera repertoire, "Madame Butterfly," is going to have a face lifting. The famous Broadway auditorium has retained Yoshio Aoyama of Tokyo's Kabuki Theater to restage the Puccini opera in a thoroughly Oriental setting designed by Motohiro Hagasaka.

Wheat Referendum Set for June 20

COLLEGE STATION — Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson has proclaimed marketing quotas on the 1959 crop of wheat; proclaimed a national wheat acreage allotment of 55 million acres, the minimum permitted by law; set June 20 as the date for a grower referendum in which growers will approve or disapprove quotas and announced that the minimum national average support price for 1959 production will be determined before the June 20 referendum.

Cotton Planting Hints Offered

COLLEGE STATION — Cotton planting will become widespread in Texas as conditions become more favorable for good germination and stands. And as Fred Elliott, extension cotton specialist, studies the situation, he emphasizes the importance of getting the desired stand with the first planting since high quality planting seed may not be available for excessive replantings.

Elliott offers the following suggestions for increasing the chances of getting a good stand with the first planting. Whenever possible use certified seed of a variety recommended for the area and make sure the seed has been treated with the proper fungicide. For seed treatment, he adds, will help control seed and soil borne diseases. Planting should be done in a well-prepared and firm seedbed when soil moisture and temperature are favorable. Germination will be reduced, he says, if the seed are planted in soil which has not reached the proper temperature of 70 degrees F. at a 3-inch depth for three successive mornings at 7 a.m.

The seed should be planted at the depth and rate considered best for the area; says the specialist and fertilizer, if used, should be at the proper depth and distance from the seed. Elliott suggests that care be exercised in early cultivations in order not to damage the stand. He points out that properly operated rotary hoes do a good job of breaking up heavy soil crusts, thus permitting soil ailing and drying and aiding in the control of seedling weeds and grasses and cotton seedling diseases.

A high yield of quality fiber, the major objective of every cotton grower, can be expected if recommended production practices, including insect control, are carried out during the growing season. Elliott suggests a visit with the local county agent for more detailed information on all phases of cotton production.

TALKED INTO JOB

NEW YORK (AP) — Actor Karl Malden is a director now because Richard Widmark, his long time friend, got tired of listening. "He told me to put up or shut up," grins Malden, explaining how he got the assignment to boss "Time Limit," the first movie produced by Widmark. The film releases soon.

Malden, one of Broadway's busiest performers and the possessor of a Hollywood Oscar, has been eyeing the directorial chair for years but hesitated to make the switch.

Now he is convinced that an actor makes a good director "because he understands the performer's viewpoint."

"I learned also as a director when to keep my mouth shut," adds Malden. "If you have to explain too much you find that the communication was faulty. Keep quiet, and nine out of 10 times it works out better."

LILLIAN ROTH BUSY

Get a Playpen Early for Baby

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.

"A playpen now? But Molly can't even turn over yet," Mrs. Edgewood was surprised at my suggestion. Even little babies like a change of scene. As soon as your baby is old enough to have long waking periods it is wise to have a special place for him to look around at the world. He is not really old enough to play yet, but he likes to watch things.

Of course he can watch many things from his crib but he likes new and different things. You can put him on a blanket on the floor — and this is all right in the very early months — if the floor is not draughty. But before you know it he can turn over and you will find him a long way from the safe spot where you put him.

If you accustom your baby to the look and feel of the restriction of the pen he will accept them as he grows a little older and will be willing and happy to go in his pen. However, if you postpone the playpen until he has learned to creep around the room the chances are pretty good he will not be pleased to be restricted.

When a baby is old enough to have real play times he is old enough to begin to have a real bedtime too. It's a good idea for the baby to associate sleep and crib; so he knows that when he is put into his crib he sleeps. If the crib is used both for playing and sleeping the baby all too often decides he is going to play instead of going to sleep when you lay him in his crib.

While a playpen is a most useful piece of baby equipment, don't overdo it. When your baby gets a little older, he will, hopefully, be happy in the pen for considerable periods so you can get your work done. But you cannot expect him to stay there all the time. Have periods every day when you give him free rein, to explore. You will, of course, have to be with him every minute of this time unless you can fix up a larger area than the playpen that is safe for his exploring fingers.

WITHERSPOONS HOST Mrs. T. E. Cowart and daughter, Mrs. Fred Drake of Plainview, spent Tuesday in the home of Mrs. Cowart's niece, Mrs. Buddy Witherspoon.
