Cowboy poets to spice up All-Girl Rodeo

BY ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Songs and sages of the Old West will blend with the bucking broncs and bulls here next month at the 14th Annual Hall of Fame All-Girl Rodeo.

Headed by Jake Holster, who has offices in Hereford and Amarillo, a special Cowboy Poetry Roundup will be staged from the rodeo arena prior to the opening of the first performance on the evening of Aug. 11.

"We have scheduled this special attraction of cowboy poetry and cowboy songs to give our rodeo something a little different than in the past," said Susan Barrett, treasurer of the cowgirl festivities. "We believe this event just prior to the opening of the first rodeo performance will also give an extra attraction to the western celebration."

The Hall of Fame All-Girl Rodeo will be conducted in conjunction with the annual Hereford Town & Country Jubilee while will be highlighted with a downtown parade on Aug. 12. The Jubilee Junction will offer all kinds of food and game booths and non-profit organizations are invited to take part and reserve spaces. Hawk Kreig and Jim Ward are co-chairmen of the parade, with entries still being accepted.

The Cowboy Poetry Roundup will be conducted during a Fajita Cookoff that will be headed by Karen Keeling of Hereford. Mrs. Keeling said the Fajita Cookoff is another special event to give the western celebration an atmosphere of Southwestern culture.

Entries are now being accepted for the special Fajita Cookoff which is expected to attract western chefs throughout the High Plains. "This is the first time we've had a Fajita Cookoff," said Mrs. Barrett, whose husband, Bob, is president of the All-Girl Rodeo and manager of Barrett-Crofoot Feedyard East.

Holster, who has participated in several regional and national cowboy poetry events, said a number of persons have already agreed to be on hand for the Cowboy Poetry Roundup. These will include Buck Ramsey of Amarillo, a life-long writer and western singer who once worked as a cowboy on the Coldwater spread; Melvin Whipple of Hereford, a well-known cowboy poet of the Southwest who is cowboy boss at Sugarland Feed Yards; Buster and Sheryl Mc-Laury, who work on the JA Ranch headquartered in the Palo Duro Canyon; and Jerry Nine of Laverne, Ok., who has published a book on cowboy poetry.

Holster has written cowboy poetry and painted western paintings since his childhood days on the Red River in the North Texas cow country. During the past 25 years, he has maintained a feed business in Hereford and Amarillo, having had an office here on Park Avenue for 15 years during the 1960s and 1970s. He is now in the process of establishing an art display in downtown Hereford.

Hereford's college

Under various names, college served Hereford for 10 years

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

All that remains today are a stone monument and a few very distant memories, but there used to be a college in Hereford.

Known at various times as Hereford College, Add-Ran College and Panhandle Christian College, the school "graduated" 10 classes of students during its run from 1902-1911. Along with an elementary and high school that had opened in 1899, the educational institutions here gave Deaf Smith County one of the lowest illiteracy rates, less than two percent, of practically any town in the West.

The idea for a college here was sprung by the Rev. Randolph Clark, a minister in the Disciples of Christ, who had been president of a college in Lancaster. He visited Hereford in the summer of 1901 and helped organize a town meeting to launch the plans.

The effort was incorporated as the Hereford School Association, whose chief purpose was to raise $5,000 in order to build the school (a brick or stone building, not wood, would be built, according to the original plans) and to keep it debt-free.

One hundred acres of land was donated by S.S. Evans, and the Western Union Townsite gave eight blocks, but money was harder to come by. By January 1902, $4,130 was donated. More money was pledged, but the organizers would learn over the next 10 years there was a big difference between a pledge and cash-in-hand.

Although there was no building, the school opened in September 1902, teaching Mental and Moral Sciences, English, History, Latin, Greek, German, Mathematics, Science, Music, Elocution and Physical Culture. Classes were taught to about 50 students in the county courthouse.

Despite pledges to keep the college debt-free, the school owned more land than money. $5,000 was lent to the school to continue work on the buildings.

Although there weren't enough funds to go around for the first college, some boosters here got behind an effort to raise $7,000 for a second college, a proposed Baptist college in the Panhandle. Other towns, including Amarillo, Clarendon, Memphis and Quanah were also competing for the college, but the Brand said that Amarillo "was out of the question since it is such an immoral place."

The Baptist college was eventually awarded to Canadian.

Hereford's college

In this picture of Panhandle Christian College in Hereford in 1908, the college was near its best-ever enrollment. The "college" included classes for children from Kindergarten through the traditional high school. The college, opened in 1902, was located near the present location of Hereford High School, where a stone monument marks where the college was located.

Meanwhile, Hereford college continued to suffer from a lack of funds. There were thousands of dollars pledged when the effort first started, but many of those pledges never came in. An editorial in March 1903 in the Brand urged that the college be turned over to the Christian church, and cited the fact that the board felt it had exhausted its resources.

Shortly after that, the board turned the college over to the Christian Church.

Although the college never awarded degrees, students were awarded diplomas and certificates each year. According to the April 24, 1902, the certificates were just as significant as are bachelor's degrees today. Other classes were added through the years, including more religion courses, there weren't any "degrees," as we know them today, issued by the college.

In November 1903, a new building housed college and Kindergarten classes in the new building (made of brick, not stone) built near the present-day Hereford High School.

Also opened was a new girls' dormitory, the buildings were dedicated, two years behind schedule, on Thanksgiving Day.

Even with the newly-built facilities, the college continued having financial difficulties. There was a town meeting called to try to form a "guarantee committee" to pay off some of the debts, but only five persons volunteered, according to the Brand. During the fall of 1904, the money, and the students, were gone and the school closed, but the college was placed under the wing of Texas Christian University (then in Waco). TCU leaders promised to try to liquidate the debt.

Plans, in effect, turned what was now Panhandle Christian College into something of a prep school, where students would spend a year or two before transferring to TCU.

With leadership provided by TCU, the college began to grow. By the beginning of the fall term in 1905, over 100 students were enrolled in the college.

Footprints on the MOON

Today is the 20th anniversary of the day that a Saturn V rocket roared off a launch pad at Cape Kennedy (previously, and again, Cape Canveral), carrying three Americans over 250,000 to land on the moon.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

Twenty years have passed, nearly a generation, since Neil Armstrong called those momentous words down from the moon.

Two decades since Earthlings watched those flickering television images, saw that tentative first step on the dusty surface and looked on in wonder as two Americans hopped about in weak gravity, planted and saluted their flag, picked up bits of lunar treasure and spoke with their president a quarter million miles away.

Astronauts Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin - taking those first steps on the moon Sunday, July 20, 1969 - were realizing a goal that John F. Kennedy had set in frustration and desperation.

Kennedy came to office in January 1961 with a pledge to "get this country moving again." The economy was sluggish, Fidel Castro had taken over Cuba, and the United States trailed the Soviets in the highly visible arena of space.

The space chasm widened April 12, 1961, when Soviet cosmonaut Yuri A. Gagarin blasted into orbit, the first man to fly in space.

American prestige was rocked again five days later. On April 17, Cuban exiles, sponsored by the Central Intelligence Agency, stormed the beach at Cuba's Bay of Pigs in an effort to overthrow Castro. His forces routed the ill-equipped exiles, leaving the United States and its young president in shame and disarray.

Kennedy accepted the blame and decided bold action was needed to restore America's honor. Space was the answer, he concluded, and he gave Vice President Lyndon Johnson the task of determining what could be done.

On April 28, the National Aeronautics and Space Council, which Johnson chaired, issued a preliminary report: "The moon is a good target for us."

That report came even before the first U.S. man-in-space flight.

On May 5, after a three-day weather delay, astronaut Alan Shepard rode a slender Redstone rocket and a cramped Mercury capsule 115 miles up and 302 miles down the Atlantic tracking range on a 15-minute suborbital flight.

America heaved a sigh of relief. The Soviets were still ahead, but the United States was on the move.

To keep the pace going, Kennedy launched project Apollo - after the Greek archer-god, the god of light and truth, bright-shining, far-shooting.

Christopher C. Kraft Jr., who would become flight operations director for Apollo, was a NASA engineer working on the Mercury project.

"I thought he had lost his mind," Kraft said of Kennedy and his bold commitment. "We had a total of 15 minutes of manned spaceflight experience, we hadn't flown Mercury in orbit yet, and here's a guy telling me we're going to fly to the moon. ... Doing it was one thing, but doing it in this decade was to me too risky."

Despite the doubts of Kraft and others within NASA, America's biggest, costliest and most ambitious technological effort began with virtually no dissent. Before it was achieved, more than 20,000 industrial contractors and 420,000 technicians, engineers and other skilled persons would be involved.

While the hardware of Apollo was being developed and tested, Americans and Soviets were learning to live and work in space and to perfect the rockets, spaceships and techniques for going to the moon.

To a watching world, it was like a relay race in space. The Soviets, with their larger booster rockets and larger manned spacecraft, held the early lead.

John Glenn in 1962 was hailed as America's first orbital champion. Three more Mercury orbital flights proved man could survive and function for at least a short time in weightless space.

NASA moved on in 1965 to the two-man Gemini program, and 10 exciting flights in 20 months tested and proved all the rendezvous and docking and space walking procedures needed to travel to the moon.

The Soviets, too, were perfecting these techniques. But by early 1967, as the United States was ready to move into manned Apollo flights, America seemed to have a slight lead, based on superior computer and other technologies.

Then, tragedy. In a countdown test on Jan. 27, 1967, a month before the planned launch, faulty wiring released a spark that touched off an inferno inside the Apollo 1 cabin. The flames, intensified by the 100 percent oxygen environment, incinerated the three-man crew, Gus Grissom, Ed White and Roger Chaffee.

Three months after the Apollo fire, cosmonaut Vladimir Komarov rode into orbit in a new spacecraft named Soyuz, believed to be a test model for a lunar command ship. After a day in orbit, as he returned to Earth, Soyuz 1 tumbled, became tangled in its parachute straps and crashed. Komarov became the world's first in-flight space casualty.

Apollo was reexamined, rewired, redesigned and finally flew. Apollo 7 orbited the Earth for 11 days in October 1968, and then, in a bold move, NASA officials decided to fly the three-man Apollo 8 crew into orbit about the moon on Christmas Eve 1968.

They reasoned the flight would provide vital information about navigating around the moon and rob the Soviets of any glory they might reap by looping one man once around the backside of the moon on a translunar trajectory. There was a widely reported rumor the Soviets were ready to do that.

The mission was a huge, uplifting success, followed by two more flights, one in which two astronauts swooped to within 10 miles of the lunar surface.

Then on July 16, 1969, more than 1 million people came to watch the launch of Apollo 11 at the Kennedy Space Center. All eyes stared at the sheet of flame as the mighty Saturn 5 rose ponderously from Launch Pad 39A, precisely on schedule at 9:32 a.m., and sent a thunderclap across the scrubland.

In the spaceship on the tip of the rocket were Neil Alden Armstrong, 38, a civilian, the commander; Air Force Col. Edwin Eugene Aldrin Jr., 39, the lunar module pilot, and Air Force Lt. Col. Michael Collins, 38, the command module pilot - ambassadors from planet Earth headed for a target 250,801 miles away.

Four days later they were in lunar orbit, 60 miles high, ready for the descent to the surface.

Armstrong and Aldrin climbed through a tunnel into the spider-like lunar module they called Eagle, while Collins remained in the command module named Columbia.

The two craft separated behind the moon, out of radio contact with Earth. Tense minutes passed on the ground until the two ships emerged from behind the moon and Armstrong reported: "The Eagle has wings."

Once they reached this closest approach, Armstrong had five seconds to decide whether to fire the descent engine again or to abort and fly back to Columbia. He pressed the button to restart the engine.

Landing on the Sea of Tranquility was 12 minutes away.

Suddenly, guidance computer alarm lights began to flash in the cabin. The computer was overloaded and Eagle was rapidly approaching an abort situation.

A young guidance engineer in Houston, 26-year-old Stephen Bales, saw the computer was being asked to solve too many problems, but by checking altitude and other radio data, he recognized that it was solving all the right problems.

Bales, through capsule communicator Charles Duke, passed this information to the astronauts in a series of dramatic "go's."

But there was more trouble ahead. Because Eagle was moving 15 mph fast due to a navigation error, its landing target was 4 miles west of the intended spot. Armstrong reported they were headed into field of large boulders and craters.

Armstrong needed 90 seconds to find a smooth touchdown spot. The maneuvering dropped the fuel supply dangerously low, and Eagle had only about 12 seconds to spare when Armstrong shut off the engine.

"Houston, Tranquility Base here. The Eagle has landed," Armstrong reported.

Man landed on the moon at 4:17 p.m. EDT on Sunday, July 20, 1969. That was just 164 days before the end-of-the-decade goal Kennedy had set eight years earlier.

In London's Trafalgar Square, crowds screamed and applauded. In Houston, mission control workers breathed a huge sigh of relief.

"That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind."

It was a sentence he said later had come to him after he was on the moon. "It was a statement that was natural in the sense of the time," he said.

For several minutes, Armstrong carefully tested the firmness of the soil and his ability to move about in a gravity field only one-sixth the strength of Earth's.

He said Tranquility Base was strewn with boulders and pocked with thousands of small craters.

"Magnificent desolation," Aldrin exclaimed after following Armstrong to the surface.

A television camera they mounted on a post 60 feet away provided more than 500 million viewers with a ringside seat to history.

Armstrong and Aldrin planted a 3-by-5-foot American flag, and Aldrin stepped back and saluted it. Wire stiffeners enabled it to stand out in the airless vacuum. But they made it plain they came as representatives of all nations when they unveiled a stainless steel plaque bearing these words, "Here men from the planet Earth first set foot on the moon, July 1969 A.D. We came in peace for all mankind."

President Richard Nixon spoke to the moonwalkers from the White House, telling them their mission "inspires us to redouble our efforts to bring peace and tranquility to the world."

The astronauts gathered more than 50 pounds of rocks and set up three scientific experiments.

It was after midnight and time to return to Eagle's cabin. Aldrin had been outside 1 hour 44 minutes, Armstrong 2 hours 14 minutes.

After several hours of fitful rest in the uncomfortable cabin, they fired Eagle's ascent engine and blasted off and caught up with the orbiting Columbia.

Early the next morning, Collins triggered Columbia's engine and drew a bead on planet Earth.

On July 24, eight days after launch, Columbia splashed down in warm Polynesian waters, landing just nine miles from the carrier USS Hornet.

After the astronauts' release from quarantine Aug. 10, millions turned out to hail the new heroes during tours that took them to cities around the world.

But space officials misread the national mood. The public followed Apollo as a race with the Soviets and, with Apollo 11, perceived the contest was won.

The country was torn by Vietnam. The racial and campus turmoil of the late 1960s had prompted some to view the space effort and its $20 billion price tag as a symbol of misplaced national priorities.

NASA's dreams were derailed by Congress and the Nixon administration. Only the space shuttle survived, first flying in 1981.

COLLEGE

With more students here, an athletic program was started with a baseball diamond, tennis courts and a basketball court built. Although the college provided no funds for athletics, the students built all of the facilities, bought their own uniforms and furnished transportation, and solicited donations from townspeople to defray expenses.

The biggest sport at the school was baseball, and the team played high school, area town teams, and teams from Goodnight and Canadian Baptist colleges. According to stories in the Brand, the town followed the team rather well.

Another, more popular event was the Faris Literary Society, which met each Friday evening. Topics and debates centered on the Civil War, which had been fought only 40 years earlier; Russia; protective tariffs; and whether or not Cuba should be annexed by the United States.

Attendance became so large that only members could attend most of the meetings. Once a month, the meetings were opened to townspeople.

Fine arts also came into vogue, with an orchestra, glee club, and theater. Twenty of the students put on a minstrel show in Canyon (which was still Canyon City).

While the Christian Church controlled the strings, the college repeatedly insisted that it would not be a "sectarian" school. There was a daily chapel service, as there is at most religion-sponsored schools, but at Hereford Christian College the assemblies included special music, magazine reviews, readings, papers and speeches. There were many programs on Prohibition, and it was pointed out many times that Hereford was "dry and moral."

Although enrollment was dwindling, the first football team was formed in 1909.

For a first-time team, it was fairly successful. Although "longer experience and more practice" allowed Amarillo High School to beat the locals 13-3, according to the Brand, the team used trick formations and drop kicks to record a win over Lowery-Phillips College of Amarillo and to take a 23-11 win over Goodnight College. In 1910, the team defeated Clarendon, Amarillo High, West Texas Normal and Phillips-Lowery, but lost to New Mexico Military Institute.

The team's success was greater than what the college was experiencing. Faced with dwindling enrollment and pledges that weren't followed up with hard cash, Hereford's college held its last commencement in May 1911. The buildings were shut until 1916, when they were sold to the Hereford school district for $13,000. The main building served as the high school until a new high school (now the Stanton Special Programs Center) was built in 1926. The old college building served the school district until 1937.

(Note: Much of the information in this story was originally compiled by Dr. Fred Stoker, retired dean of the College of Education at West Texas State University. His paper, written in 1971, was based on accounts from the Brand and from a few personal interviews with persons who attended the college.)

WTSU-A&M merger bill goes to governor

AUSTIN--A bill authorizing West Texas State University to join the Texas A&M University system won final approval Friday in the House and was sent to Gov. Bill Clements's desk.

The governor has expressed support for the merger and is expected to sign the bill, said State Rep. John Smith of Amarillo. Clements opened the special session agenda to the merger issue just three hours before the House voted on the bill.

Smith noted the bill requires the merger to be approved by the WT and A&M regents as well as the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board. He said former House Speaker Billy Clayton, a member of the A&M Board of Regents, deserved a lot of credit in helping pass the bill.

The bill encountered no opposition in the House. One representative asked if the bill passed, would the WT school yell become "Gig 'em Buffaloes?"

Smith said he didn't think that was the case, "but at least they won't have to change school colors. They're both maroon and white."

HELPING PEOPLE HELP THEMSELVES

Panhandle Community Services report

The Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Section 8 program is vital to our community. There are many steps to be followed in order to determine eligibility for prospective tenants and landlords, and we would like to inform current and prospective landlords about qualifying houses for the program.

After prospective tenants have been determined eligible, they are issued a Certificate of Family Participation. The prospective tenant then has 60 days from the date the certificate is issued to find a house that is "decent, safe and sanitary."

When a house is found the tenant will give a HUD Section 8 Request for Lease Approval to the landlord. The landlord has the option of putting the house in the program.

If the landlord chooses to participate in the program, we will send an inspector to the house. If the house does not pass the initial inspection, the landlord has 30 days to make the necessary repairs.

If the house passes the second inspection, an appointment is made for both the tenant and landlord to meet with a housing representative. The HUD Section 8 rules and regulations will be explained and a contract will be signed.

Louise Young, director of housing, and our housing inspectors will hold a special meeting July 20 at 7 p.m. in the Energas Flame Room to inform all interested persons about the HUD Section 8 procedures. All landlords currently participating in the program and other interested persons are urged to attend.

Library displayer

Jennifer Lyons, 11-year-old daughter of Jo Nell Freethy-Lyons, has been chosen as the Deaf Smith County Library displayer for July. She is exhibiting her bird and duck miniatures which she has been collecting for a year.

The longest sermon on record lasted 48 hours and 18 minutes. A congregation of eight was still present at the sermon's end.

At one time in ancient Rome, it was forbidden to eat eggs. The egg was regarded as a potential chicken, therefore too valuable to be eaten.

YOUR EYES

ULTRAVIOLET PROTECTION

Several groups have been identified as particularly prone to the suspected hazards caused by overexposure to the sun's ultraviolet rays.

A recent symposium of the American Optometric Association listed: people developing cataracts, aphakics - those who have had cataracts removed already -, workers in welding, electronics, dentistry, medical photography and printing, and anyone who spends seven or more hours in the sun daily.

Are you in the high-risk group? Overexposure to the sun may speed up a developing cataract, or even cause one to form. Post-cataract surgery patients experience discomfort and glare sensitivity unless they protect their eyes with quality sunglasses. In some cases, unprotected eyes have difficulty seeing. Overexposure to sunlight may also cause retinal problems that affect night vision.

That's why quality sunglasses are recommended for anyone who spends periods of time in the sun. Your optometrist will know what kind of sunglasses are best for you and your eyes.

EQUAL HOUSING OPPORTUNITY

Hereford Bull

By Speedy Nieman

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says in spite of the cost of living, it remains popular.

If all the cars in the country were put end to end, 90 percent of the drivers would pull out to pass the car ahead.

Swallow your pride occasionally, it's non-fattening.

Summertime is traditionally a slow time for community activities, but a number of "newsy" events are on the local calendar in the next month.

The annual Hereford Lions Club Carnival starts Tuesday and continues through next Saturday, as Lions bring in the Pride of Texas and man their own food and game booths as a fund-raising project to help fund local worthwhile programs.

The Farmer's Market is scheduled to open July 27 at a location to be announced next week. The chamber's ag committee sponsors this program and all local gardeners and farmers are invited to participate in the market, from 5 to 8 p.m. each Thursday.

And, of course, Hereford's Town & Country Jubilee is coming up Aug. 7-13. The Hall of Fame All Girl Rodeo will be held during Jubilee week, with performances set Aug. 11-13. A new "Jubilee Road Rally" is being planned to launch the celebration.

On the local business scene, the C of C bulletin reports that The Vogue will reopen Sept. 1 under the ownership of Cynthia Miller. Berta Ottesen and Lou Davis have sold the store after many years of operation.

After almost a year of seeking to attract a new bowling alley to Hereford, the chamber reports that an announcement is forthcoming on that project. The old Safeway building is the apparent site for the bowling alley, which may also include an indoor miniature golf course and other games.

And, Hereford Meat Market is making plans to relocate near the Exxon station on N. Hwy. 385. Gilbert Tijerina says the new facility will include more than 3,000 square feet of floor space. A building has been moved in and will be remodeled.

Kelvin Betzen, district manager here for Energas, has been promoted to the district manager's job at Lubbock. He will be replaced by Lanny J. Webb.

What's the best job in the country? Except for attending state funerals, some might guess that it would be the vice president of the United States.

Although it is a standing joke that the VP's biggest job is representing the U.S. at last rites for heads of state, vice president Bush went almost four full years without attending a funeral service.

The best job, however, may be that of a former president. If you can live through the four or eight years, the retirement benefits are terrific.

When Ronald Reagan headed west, the former president and Nancy should be pretty comfortable. Reagan will draw $130,000 a year in state and federal pensions, and he'll get another $300,000 to cover his expenses, and also an advance of at least $2 million on his memoirs.

And, for pocket change, he'll get $50,000 every time he makes a speech.

The Penultimate Word

HARRISY

Her name was Mrs. Harrison. She was a tiny lady with white hair and skin as thin as paper. She was a member of the first church I ever served. Her pew was the second on the right where she always sat, usually accompanied by a young person from the Sunday school class she taught.

The kids called her Harrisry. They had no idea how near the title fit. Harrisry would sit with her eyes fixed on the ceiling and repeat the words, "Yes, Master" over and over throughout the service. Her false teeth did not fit right, so she whistled her S's. All the congregation could hear was two toots from a false-teeth whistle.

The problem was she had done this so long it has lost all meaning. Even praise can be done so much it becomes a habit instead of a response. The whistling was disconcerting to the pastor because she would "Yes, Master" the wrong things. If he asked if anyone wanted to go to Hell, there would be two toots on the whistle.

One Sunday the pastor told me to watch Harrisry. He started out preaching about Heaven. Harrisry loved to think about Heaven. The whistling became louder and louder. I think Harrisry even raised the pitch an octave or so.

Without warning or transition, the pastor switched subjects and began preaching on tithing. The whistling stopped. The silence became deafening. The congregation sat stunned for a moment and then a giggle started in the back of the room.

Giggles are contagious. All chance of worship was gone. It was worth it.

Slumbering giant

The recent flaps over the firing of Tom Landry, the proposed changes for the Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders, and the ruling of the Supreme Court on the legality of the burning of the American flag, show one thing.

Every now and then, the silent majority of this country can get stirred up to the point they speak out.

For the most part, the majority goes along to get along. They refuse to make waves. They acquiesce in leaving the headlines and the two-minute tv bits to minority newsmakers.

The majority has watched in silence as tiny segments of the population have captured the spotlight for homosexuality, for abortions, for raiding the federal treasury on behalf of every crackpot social do-gooding scheme imaginable, for federal baby-sitting, for wild numbers of homeless.

We've tolerated illogical bookkeeping maneuvers at the federal level to create funny money that future generations will have to pay; we've avoided balancing budgets, and we've leaned over backwards to yield and cede rights to those minorities that want rights and no obligations or responsibilities. For the most part, we've turned the country over to the kooks.

But every now and then, the kooks and their fearful reps in Washington go too far, too fast and too far-out. Then the sleeping, slumbering hulk that is the majority awakens.

And when that silent, muted hulk comes off the couch in righteous indignation, the mountains tremble, the grounds shake, the skies cloud over, the hail of wrath falls, and Washington discovers anew how little it knows about the rest of the nation.

The hullabaloo over the flag brought the majority off the couch--and now most of Washington is running around trying to overturn the Supreme Court decision.

Our government reminds us of the huge log that the current is moving slowly but surely downstream. On the log is a 100,000 pissants and each one thinks he is driving, until the log rolls or stops.

A big logjam by the sleeping giant could correct about 90 percent of the ills of this nation. Righteousness reasserts when the majority believe right is might . . . and say so.

Editorial opinion from around Texas

By The Associated Press

Here is a sampling of editorial opinion from around Texas:

Space Program Natural For Texas Schools

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, not surprisingly, is pushing for a Texas education consortium to receive the first space grant.

Bentsen is the author of the National Space Grant College and Fellowship Act of 1987.

The consortium would consist of 21 Texas universities and 18 companies involved in more than 200 research tasks and projects for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Texas has always been one of the leading states in space exploration. Many of the graduate programs in this state have been geared toward expanding aerospace technology. A commercial aerospace industry has evolved as government programs have grown. And Texas has provided tremendous talent and products to NASA programs.

We hope Bentsen's leadership in this area pays off and that Texas becomes home of the first education consortium to receive the national space grant.

Legislators Accept Too Many Gratuities

Rep. Ron Lewis of Mauriceville defends cross-country trips paid by lobbyists as "one of the things about this job that's fun."

Where did Rep. Lewis get the idea that voters in his district elected him to go to Austin and have fun, paid for by special interest lobbyists who want Rep. Lewis' vote?

In recent months, Lewis said the Texas State Troopers Association has paid his way on three trips, including a skiing trip and a vacation in Acapulco.

Said Rep. Lewis: "We get $600 a month for this job. If you take away my golfings, if you take away my outings, my hunting trips, then what's fun about this job anymore?"

Letter to the Editor

Dear editor:

As a newcomer to Hereford, I have been very impressed with the prevalent attitude of giving in this town which is being expressed through a deep concern for those in need.

There are so many scriptures in the Bible that tell of the blessings to be received by helping the poor and needy.

In Judaic teachings, not meeting the needs of others for the basics necessities of life (food, shelter and clothing) is considered to be breaking the commandment Thou Shalt Not Kill.

I have traveled a lot and have never been in a town where Jesus Christ is so boldly proclaimed not only in word but in deed. Don't you know that makes the heart of God rejoice?

I think a word of commendation is in order for all of those that deal directly with the people in need. I have found them to be very special in their abilities to minister benevolence without making the people they are helping feel humiliated.

I applaud all of those that are involved in helping the needy. The pastors, church secretaries, all of those who contribute money and goods to make it all possible, all of those that work behind the scenes to help and all of the volunteers who give cheerfully of their time and energy.

The San Jose Outreach, the American Red Cross, Panhandle Community Services, Good Shepherd, the tireless efforts of Judy Baker, Eloise McDougal, Betty Henson, Bill Devers and Linda Howard of Sunshine Acres, and Doris and Gene Dickerson of The Ark Shelter are just some of those who are working hard to help others. God bless you all.

There is no need to be apologetic, Hereford, for what you do not have. You are rich in the thing that really counts: love. Be proud to live here. I am proud and happy to have spent time here. I am sure you have God's favor and that He will richly bless you in the future.

Most sincerely,
Victoria Gilley

Thanks, but no thanks, Rep. Lewis, for that line of bull.

Do such trips influence legislators in any way? Of course they do. And the junkets and other freebies are so common in the Texas Legislature that voters can no longer be sure whose vote is being bought, consciously or unconsciously, by monied lobbyists. The state Legislature is a laughing-stock in this regard.

And if Rep. Lewis decides he is not having fun any more, maybe he could retire back to Mauriceville.

Pump Up Patrol Budget

The bad news first came from our representatives - the Border Patrol's budget had been slashed, forcing some units along the border to ration gas.

Now confirmation - and a reason - come from the Justice Department, which oversees the Border Patrol. The flood of Central American refugees this spring cost the feds more than $30 million, depleting its immigration budget.

Even under a normal budget, the patrol is stretched to the limit to provide services. This budget cut makes the job nearly impossible. Reports say some border sectors of the patrol have had to scale back operating budgets by up to 50 percent. Without more money soon, the cuts may go as high as 62 percent ...

The Justice Department has asked the House's immigration subcommittee to allow it to transfer funds within the department to help make up for some of the cuts. That request should be approved as quickly as possible.

Legislative Handouts: Pilgrim Should Stick to the Chicken Business

Lonnie "Bo" Pilgrim speaks in his television commercials about how many years he has been "messing with chickens." He probably should have stuck with the birds. His heavy-handed attempt to "mess" with state legislators this week proves he has much to learn about political acumen and possibly Texas campaign contribution laws.

The northeast Texas chicken magnate handed out $10,000 checks on the state Senate floor Wednesday. The giveaway was so blatant it shocked some lawmakers and prompted a probe by the Travis County district attorney.

One recipient of a check, Sen. John Whitmire, D-Houston, said Mr. Pilgrim mentioned the serious problems his company was having with the state's workers' compensation laws, which are the primary issue before the special legislative session. Others said he attached no strings to the money, saying only that he was a frequent contributor to people and causes that promote good politics, religion and education.

Whatever Mr. Pilgrim's motivation, his passing out checks in the Senate was highly inappropriate and could further erode public confidence in the political process ...

Legislators should surmount this embarrassing incident by developing a workers' compensation reform plan that truly is in the best interest of the entire state - not just those who are working feverishly to influence this session's outcome.

-The Dallas Morning News, July 8.

Do Nothing For Now

Sometimes, the best thing to do is nothing. This is such a time for Gov. Bill Clements. Since the Supreme Court decision on abortion was handed down last week, the governor has been pressured to include the subject in his special session call. He wisely has said no to that. Good for him; the last thing the Legislature needs is to be tossed the political equivalent of red meat while it tries to come to some compromise on workers' compensation. And the governor should likewise put abortion off-limits for any subsequent special session. The more time that passes before the Legislature gets itself embroiled in this emotional issue, the better for the state.

Thyroid trouble treatable

Are you one of the three million Americans with undiagnosed thyroid problems?

If you've had unexplained weight loss, insomnia, increased sensitivity to heat, a bulge in your throat or eye problems; or if you frequently feel chilled, fatigued, gain weight despite a loss of appetite, have trouble hearing, feel a tingling in your hands and have dry, brittle hair and nails, you should see your doctor about having the simple blood test that helps doctors diagnose thyroid disorders.

While untreated thyroid trouble can be dangerous, modern medicine has a variety of ways to help thyroid patients. These thyroid conditions generally fall into two categories:

-Graves' disease, which causes hyperthyroidism, is a condition known to affect about a million Americans, mostly women in their 30s and 40s. This condition, for which the First Lady was recently treated, occurs when the body inexplicably overproduces the critical hormone thyroxine. Produced by the thyroid gland, this hormone regulates virtually every organ in the body.

Commonly, Graves' disease is treated first with an antithyroid drug. If the drug does not work, as in Barbara Bush's case, the thyroid is treated with radiation; this stops the thyroid's hormone production.

After treatment, many Graves' disease patients take the synthetic thyroid hormone, levothyroxine, distributed as Synthroid by the Boots Co. (USA) Inc.

Hypothyroidism, known to affect some 5 to 6 million Americans, is the most common thyroid disorder—a condition in which there is little or no thyroid hormone production.

Hypothyroidism can occur either as a primary condition or as a result of the radiation therapy for Graves' disease. The treatment in both cases is the same; replacement of missing natural hormone through daily therapy, with a synthetic hormone. Synthroid, the leading brand of synthetic thyroid hormone, is a well-proven, relatively inexpensive medicine that helps millions lead normal lives.

For a free booklet on thyroid disorders, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to Thyroid Disease, Suite 700, 145 E. 57th Street, NY, NY 10022.

Ginger Ale Sherbet

The special blending of juices and ginger ale create an iced treat you'll want to eat often throughout the summer. Go ahead and enjoy — it's low-salt, no cholesterol and has only a trace of fat.

- | | |
|------------------------------|-------------------------|
| 1/2 cup water | 1 cup orange juice |
| 1 1/2 cups sugar | 1/2 cup lemon juice |
| 4 egg whites, stiffly beaten | 1/2 cup pineapple juice |
| | 3 cups ginger ale |

In a saucepan, heat the water and 1 cup of the sugar to the boiling point and cook until the syrup reaches the soft-ball stage — 234° F. to 238° F.

Beat the egg whites until stiff. Continue beating while gradually adding 1/2 cup of the sugar. Slowly pour the hot syrup into the egg whites, beating constantly until mixture has cooled. Then gradually beat in the ginger ale and fruit juices.

Place in the freezer until partially frozen, then remove and whip quickly. Pour into freezing trays, cover and return to the freezer. The texture should resemble that of an Italian ice.

Yield: 8 Servings

Cooking Tip: Raw eggs separate more easily when they are cold, but to get maximum volume from egg whites, beat them when they are at room temperature.

People in the Texas Panhandle area have been receiving mail from an organization called the Federal Benefits Assistance Corp. offering to assist them in filing for Social Security retirement benefits for an $18 fee, Jim Talbot, Social Security manager in Amarillo, said today.

The Federal Benefits Assistance Corp. is not connected with the Social Security Administration or Federal government.

First, Talbot said, there is no need to pay any firm money to help you file a Social Security application.

Second, you may actually lose money and delay the processing of your claim by sending your application to a private company. Social Security applications are not officially filed until they're actually received in a Social Security office.

The representatives in any Social Security office will provide free all of the service you need to file your claim for benefits, including: giving you the proper application form; helping you complete the form; and telling you what documents you need and how to obtain them.

Help maintain carpet's appearance

Remember how wonderful your carpet looked when it was new? No doubt it was worth every cent you invested in it. Unfortunately, over time, stains made your carpet look dull and dingy.

Although the beauty of your carpet can be prolonged with regular vacuuming and prompt cleanup of spills, periodic professional cleanings are recommended for all carpets to remove tiny particles of damaging grit and soil that even vacuuming won't remove.

Here are some things you can do to maintain your carpet's appearance in between professional cleanings:

-Treat accidental spills promptly, removing as much of the material as possible.

-Blot the area with paper towels. Start from the outer edge of the stain and move towards the center. Don't scrub.

-Wet the area with cold water, but do not allow it to become overly wet, as this may saturate the carpet backing.

-Blot up excess water again with paper towels. Don't use a brush or a sponge.

-If the stain remains, apply a mild solution of non-bleach laundry detergent (one tablespoon detergent in one quart of cold water) to the stained area. Rub it deeply into the carpet. -Rinse the area repeatedly with cold water, blotting thoroughly with paper towels, until all detergent and water is removed from the carpet.

-Place more clean paper towels over the stained area and let them remain overnight.

-Once the area has dried completely, vacuum the area and brush the pile to restore the carpet texture.

Some foods, such as herbal teas and mustard, contain strong natural dyes. These stains should be removed by a professional carpet cleaner.

Contact lenses join disposable society

By RANDOLPH PIGHT
AP Business Writer
ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) - Soft contact lenses, those floppy pieces of plastic that help people see without wearing eyeglasses, have reached a popular American culture benchmark. They've become disposable.

That could mean a lot of changes involving the way people view the little lenses that make things clearer for 23 million Americans.

Hundreds of thousands of people are already wearing disposable lenses, even though up to now they've been available only on a limited basis. Eye doctors are flocking to lectures about them, and consumers are wondering what's going on.

"They've really captured the interest of the American public," says Dr. Scott MacRae, an ophthalmologist from Portland, Ore., who is also a consultant to the Food and Drug Administration for ophthalmic devices.

He speaks from experience. He wears a disposable lens in his right eye.

"I don't think we've ever seen anything, in my experience, that gained this kind of acceptance," says Hal Johnson, president of professional products at Bausch & Lomb, the nation's leading seller of contact lenses. "We're in high gear. And I mean high gear."

It hasn't been too long ago that basketball games were stopped while players scoured the floor for a missing contact lens. Most people still coddle and clean their lenses, treating them like tiny treasures.

They even buy insurance policies to protect them from loss or damage.

Now, along come some lenses that can be worn for a week AND TOSSED IN THE TRASH. If they hurt your eye, just take them out and put in a new pair. No more expensive cleaning solutions. No more tender-loving care.

Is "wear 'em and toss 'em" the wave of the future?

Probably not, say officials at Bausch & Lomb and other eye care experts.

The main reason is that most of the lenses available can only be worn by patients who are nearsighted. Another negative factor is the cost - between $300 and $500 per year.

Disposable contacts were introduced in the United States in July 1987 by Vistakon Inc., a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson, which up until March was the only maker of a disposable lens with national distribution. Vistakon's throwaway lenses are called Accuvue.

Bausch & Lomb started selling disposable contacts nationally in March and CIBA Vision, the second-leading maker, has started selling disposable contacts in California that can be worn by both nearsighted and farsighted people.

CIBA's Kim Little says lenses, called NewVues, should be available nationally later this year.

Johnson says Bausch & Lomb expects that between 10 percent and 20 percent of all contact lens wearers in the country will switch to disposable lenses.

But even that small percentage will have astounding business implications for the contact lens industry.

Consider that a patient who normally would have walked into an optometrist's office and left with a new pair of lenses could now walk away with up to 52 pairs of lenses.

The average disposable customer, using either a one-week or a two-week replacement schedule, will use 39 pairs of lenses a year.

That means that instead of selling four million lenses a year to the roughly 2 million disposable customers, eye doctors will sell 156 million lenses a year.

More important than the business implications, disposable contact lenses are going to play a key role in ushering in a whole new era in eye care among the many wearers of contact lenses in the United States.

"One of the things that we're seeing is that with the introduction of disposable lenses people are understanding that frequent lens replacement is a viable option," says David Archer, director of marketing for Bausch & Lomb's professional products division.

The average contact lens wearer replaces one lens a year, Archer says, and usually suffers some discomfort or some difficulty with a lens before deciding to replace it.

If people begin to think that contact lenses are expendable, he says, they will be more likely to replace them, as often as every week or at least once a year.

The only real difference between a daily-wear soft contact lens and a disposable lens is the recommended wearing time. Both are made of flexible plastic.

Disposable lenses and extended-wear lenses are slightly thinner than daily-wear lenses, making them slightly more comfortable but slightly less durable.

The label on the disposable lens container notes the lenses are only FDA approved for a maximum of two weeks at a time. Doctors were concerned that people wouldn't comply with the recommended wearing time, but so far studies are indicating that the compliance rate is very high.

As far as cost, Bausch & Lomb has streamlined the technique used to make a contact lens and can now manufacture lenses 70 percent faster than several years ago. The increased volume has allowed the price to fall.

Bausch & Lomb also offers a frequent lens replacement program that allows patients to get new lenses at different intervals, such as once a month or once every three months, and requires them to stick the discarded lenses on a card and mail them back to the company to ensure compliance.

Archer likens it to the dental care industry's effort that started three decades ago to promote the benefits of regular checkups and teeth cleaning to prevent tooth decay.

Studies have shown that frequent replacement of lenses - at intervals suggested by eye doctors - can greatly reduce the risk of getting a severe eye injury from a contact lens, MacRae says.

"If disposable lenses get people to change their lenses more often, then they've probably done a good thing," he says.

But MacRae, and many other eye doctors, still are not convinced that extended-wear contact lenses, like disposable contacts, are completely safe, no matter how often you replace them.

He said a new study of 22,000 extended-wear contact lens wearers indicates that they are three to five times more likely to suffer a serious eye injury than someone who takes his lenses out at night.

Franco pushes Sierra to be himself

By STEVE CAMPBELL
Fort Worth Star-Telegram
ARLINGTON (AP) - Julio Franco has this to say about his good friend: "He's a -----."

The good friend, in turn, has this to say about Franco: "He's a -----."

Franco and Ruben Sierra look at each other for a moment, fighting to hide smiles, locked in a standstill.

That won't do. Sierra and Franco are Texas Rangers teammates, amigos, partners in all kinds of crimes against American League pitchers, and they have an unspoken pact not to be undone by anyone.

Franco points at Sierra and takes the offensive again.

"Why does he wear No. 21?"

Franco asks, already knowing the answer. Twenty-one, of course, is the number that belonged to Sierra's idol, the late Roberto Clemente.

"Why can't he be Ruben Sierra?" Franco asks. "Why doesn't he want to be his own man? He even makes sliding catches like Clemente. Copy Roberto Clemente? Roberto Clemente didn't copy anybody. Ruben Sierra should want to be Ruben Sierra."

Franco pauses long enough to catch his breath.

"He's not going to be Clemente," Franco says. "There's only one. They say he's the reincarnation. There's no such thing as reincarnation. That's why I've got to keep him straight. I just want Ruben to be what he is, and I'm going to keep him that way."

This is the way it has been since the Rangers traded for Franco in the off-season. In their spare time - between barbs and batting practice and visits to the weight room - Sierra and Franco give the Rangers the most potent 1-2 combination this side of Ex and Lax.

Sierra is near the top of the American League in batting, runs, doubles and slugging percentage. Franco was around the top in batting, RBIs, on-base average and slugging.

Both were selected to play in the All-Star Game, Franco as a starter and Sierra as a reserve.

"They argue all the time," Rangers hitting coach Tom Robson says. "Not strictly from the baseball standpoint.

Who has the best car? Who eats the most? It's not, 'I've got more RBI than you,' or that stuff. It's everything."

Franco is 27 and from the Dominican Republic, Sierra 23 and from Puerto Rico. They signed professional baseball contracts as teenagers, and they speak the same languages - Spanish, English and All-Star.

"He doesn't have no respect for me," Franco says, shaking his head.

"He doesn't respect me," Sierra counters.

The truth, of course, is just the opposite. As if to prove his image in Cleveland as a bad boy was a myth, Franco has emerged as a clubhouse influence beyond what Rangers manager Bobby Valentine could have hoped.

"I always wanted internal competition here, and I had internal jealousies," Valentine said. "That's one of the healthiest things you could have. A guy gets two hits, you've got to keep him up with the Joneses. There's never room to settle for mediocrity."

Franco and Sierra hesitate to describe their relationship as competitive. "We push each other," is the way the fast-talking Franco puts it. Explains Sierra in halting English, "We try to get two hits, and if we can, three or four. And we try to drive in runs because that's what we have to do. That's how we're going to help the team."

Sierra provided 53 homes and 200 RBIs worth of help in 1987-88, battling himself every bit as much as opposing pitchers in the process.

"When he gets more discipline at the plate, he's going to be a superstar," Franco said. "But he has got to stay level. He's a nice guy. A great talent. When he grows up, he's going to be a superstar, but he'll have to go to English school."

With that, Julio Franco gets up to leave the room. "Clemente," Franco says. "Roberto. Let's go. C'mon. We've got work to do."

Ruben Sierra looks away, pretending not to listen.

New owners putting hold on Finks

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Nothing much has changed since 11 clubs abstained each time Jim Finks' name came up as Pete Rozelle's successor as NFL commissioner - a sort of not-so-silent protest at being cut out of the selection process.

That was last week, and the leaders of the palace revolution vow it will stay that way until their complaints are addressed. There appears to be an all-for-one, one-for-all musketeer mentality among them. All that is missing are the sabres raised in triumph after they prevented the election of Finks last week.

The NFL musketeers have an agenda and, until it is addressed, they seem determined to remain in their contrarywise configuration. The 11 want some substantial changes made in the way this league operates. They want to be part of the crowd, not just silent partners who are invited only to rubber-stamp the decisions of others.

One place to start, they said, would be in the expansion of the commissioner search committee. For the moment, though, the original committee remains intact with six old-line owners in place and no representation for the new generation faction.

So, the two sides remain at loggerheads and that means if another vote were taken on Finks today, the results would approximately be the same.

Sixteen for. None opposed. Eleven abstentions.

Oh, sure, there have been some peace overtures. Two of the abstainers - Minnesota's Mike Lynn and Victor Kiam of New England - sat in on meetings this week with Pittsburgh's Dan Rooney to discuss the NFL's new international football venture. With Rooney doubling in brass as a member of the search committee, you can assume that subject came up, as well.

And it is entirely likely that Rozelle, always a persuasive sort, has been lobbying the recalcitrants. The faster they come around, remember, the faster Pete can retreat to San Diego, where he plans to spend his retirement years. His post-NFL calendar includes considerable time at Del Mar, which opens for racing July 26. Tempus fugit.

There was one other curious development at the non-coronation. Among the owners voting with the majority was Al Davis, the NFL's original iconoclast. Things have come full circle in this league when Davis casts his ballot with the establishment.

Caught in the middle of the Maelstrom is Finks, who still happens to have a franchise to run as president and general manager of the New Orleans Saints. Training camp opens next week. The Saints have a dozen unsigned veterans and have not signed any draft choices. Meanwhile, Finks is in limbo, waiting for the league's power brokers to settle their intramural squabbles.

"I don't want to talk about it or hear about it," he said. "There is plenty to keep me busy without worrying about what's going to happen with that."

What did Finks ever do to deserve this headache? Nothing, really. He is merely a victim of circumstances, a guy even the abstainers agree is a fine candidate for the commissioner's post.

He will eventually be appointed, too, once this nasty little fire fight is settled. That assumes, of course, that he still wants the job. After watching the internal tug of war, though, he might not be quite so anxious to take it.

Check out some of the nay-sayers. They included new owners like Jerry Jones of Dallas, who conducted a coldly efficient front office purge of the Cowboys that would have made Stalin and his Bolshevik buddies proud, and old owners like Joe Robbie of Miami, who runs the Dolphins in Steinbrenneresque style.

This is a tough crowd.

Then there is the matter of the commissioner's pending file. The new man must deal with the recently revealed drug problems of Cleveland running back Kevin Mack, the continuing adversarial relationship between the league and its players union and other troublesome bits of business.

Attractive, it ain't.

For a man made to wait too long, it could make the Louisiana Bayou seem mighty appealing.

Oriole rookie keeps streak alive with save

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Gregg Olson is still perfect in relief for the Baltimore Orioles, although for a while there manager Frank Robinson wasn't so sure.

Olson, a standout rookie who has been one of the reasons the Orioles find themselves on top of the American League East these days, was called on to save another one Friday night in a tense situation with the California Angels.

He didn't make things easy for himself, walking the bases loaded in the eighth inning and then putting two runners on in the ninth. But he stayed tough and helped the Orioles pull out a 6-4 decision, marking his 15th save in 15 opportunities this season.

In other AL action, Kansas City beat New York 14-5 in the opener of a doubleheader before the Yankees won the nightcap 9-7, Toronto beat Oakland 4-1, Boston stopped Minnesota 5-0, Cleveland routed Texas 11-5, Seattle crushed Detroit 13-0, and Chicago turned back Milwaukee 6-4. Royals 14, Yankees 5. Yankees 9, Royals 7. Bill Pecota hit two of Kansas City's five home runs and Bret Saberhagen won his sixth straight decision as the Royals routed New York in the first game of their doubleheader.

The Yankees salvaged the second game on Jesse Barfield's dramatic, three-run homer in the ninth off Steve Farr.

Blue Jays 4, Athletics 1. Dave Stieb allowed three hits over 6 1-3 innings and Kelly Gruber went 3-for-3 with a homer and two RBI, lifting Toronto over Oakland.

Stieb, 9-5, struck out two and walked four before giving way to Duane Ward with one out and two on in the seventh.

Red Sox 5, Twins 0. Mike Boddicker pitched a three-hitter and Nick Esasky hit a two-run homer as Boston beat Minnesota and handed the Twins their eighth straight loss.

Boddicker, 7-7, struck out four and walked four in recording his third straight victory and first shutout of the season. His last shutout was Sept. 29, 1988, in a 12-0 victory at Cleveland.

Indians 11, Rangers 5. Brad Komminsk knocked in five runs, including the tie-breaker with a sacrifice fly, as Cleveland beat Texas.

Komminsk hit a two-run homer in the fourth, a sacrifice fly in the seventh to break a 5-5 tie and a two-run single in a five-run eighth.

Mariners 13, Tigers 0. Brian Holman pitched a three-hitter and six different players collected two hits apiece in a 17-hit attack as Seattle beat Detroit and handed the Tigers their ninth straight loss.

White Sox 6, Brewers 4. Harold Baines hit a two-run homer and an RBI single to lead Chicago over Milwaukee.

Baines had an RBI single in the first and then a two-run homer in the second that gave the White Sox a 5-0 lead.

Braves drop Mets, 3-2

By The Associated Press

Lonnie Smith is not only comeback player of the year, he's the comeback player of the decade.

Smith, who was almost out of baseball after battling a drug problem, led off the ninth inning with a home run off Sid Fernandez Friday night as the Braves beat the visiting New York Mets 3-2.

The homer spoiled a 16-strikeout performance by Fernandez, a club record for a left-hander.

It was the 14th homer of the season for Smith, who had never hit more than eight homers in 11 previous major-league seasons.

In three previous at-bats against Fernandez, Smith had struck out three times.

"I didn't want to strike out for the fourth time," Smith said. "I knew I hit it well enough, but I didn't think at first it was going to be out."

Elsewhere in the National League, it was Montreal 1, Cincinnati 0; Philadelphia 4, Houston 2; San Diego 7, Chicago 4; St. Louis 7, Los Angeles 2, and Pittsburgh 7, San Francisco 4.

Fernandez had retired 16 batters in a row, 12 by strikeouts, before Smith's homer.

Expos 1, Reds 0. Bryn Smith allowed six hits in 8 1-3 innings as Montreal beat Cincinnati at Riverfront Stadium, sending the reeling Reds to their fifth straight loss.

Smith, 9-3, outpitched Tom Browning, 7-8, to give the Expos their 13th victory in their last 17 games.

The only run scored on Spike Owens' RBI grounder in the second.

Pirates 7, Giants 4. All-Star Game starter Rick Reuschel struggled against Pittsburgh and the Pirates survived Kevin Mitchell's 32nd homer to beat San Francisco at Candlestick Park.

Reuschel, 12-4, is winless in his last four starts since beating Houston on June 21. In five innings, he gave up five runs, eight hits, and walked five.

The Pirates used only four batters to take a 3-0 first-inning lead, battering Reuschel hard for two triples, a double and a sacrifice fly.

Padres 7, Cubs 4. Ed Whitson won his 12th game and drove in a run with a double and Garry Templeton homered, leading San Diego past Chicago at Jack Murphy Stadium. The victory snapped the Padres' seven-game losing streak to Chicago.

Whitson, 12-6, struggled in the ninth inning and Mark Davis relieved and got his 23rd save in 26 opportunities. Whitson pitched eight-plus innings and allowed nine hits.

Cardinals 7, Dodgers 2. Terry Pendleton sparked a six-run third inning with a three-run double and Tom Brunansky capped the rally with a two-run homer as St. Louis beat Mike Morgan and Los Angeles at Dodger Stadium.

Scott Terry, 7-7, allowed five hits in 7 2-3 innings, including Kirk Gibson's ninth homer in the first. Ken Dayley finished, allowing no hits.

Morgan, 6-9, had his earliest exit of the year en route to his fifth defeat in his last six starts. Morgan allowed six earned runs as his ERA ballooned from 1.79 to 2.21.

Phillies 4, Astros 2. Dwayne Murphy's run-scoring, single broke a seventh-inning tie as Philadelphia beat Houston at Veterans Stadium.

Reliever Larry Andersen, 2-2, retired the first batter in the seventh and then walked Von Hayes. Ricky Jordan grounded to Caminiti, who booted the ball for an error. Murphy then singled to score Hayes and Darren Daulton followed with an RBI single.

Double Carport Available if Lot Width is Sufficient

PLAN FOR YOUR NARROW LOT

By W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

A stoop entry is to a surprisingly large great room which flows to a full size dining area and L shape convenient kitchen. Carport access is here too, providing just a step or two for carrying in groceries.

There are three bedrooms all in the rear of the home plan, the master bedroom being a very comfortable size and enjoying the luxury of a bath with garden tub, separate shower and twin lavatories. The washer-dryer area is accessible from the central hall as is the central full tub bath for daytime use and convenience to the remaining two bedrooms. Closet space is excellent throughout.

The exterior is constructed of horizontal wood siding. The roof style is gable affording greater economy and the windows are multi-lite and shuttered.

This is a computer generated plan.

The plan is Number 291. It includes 1,244 square feet of heated area. All W.D. Farmer plans include construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write to W.D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Here's the answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q - The aluminum siding on our house has faded somewhat. It also has become mildewed and dirty in spots. Is there anything I can do short of replacing the siding?

A - Yes. Aluminum siding - as well as vinyl, hardboard and steel siding - can be repainted with very good results. As with any kind of painting, it is important the surface be prepared properly. Simple rinsing with a garden hose may be all that is needed to remove a minor accumulation of dirt. Mildew can be removed with a commercial mildewicide or a solution of household bleach and water. John Oberle of Benjamin Moore & Co. cautions that all grease, excess chalk or scaling paint must be removed. Glossy surfaces must be dulled. And areas protected from the weather, such as eaves and overhangs, should be washed with a detergent solution and rinsed with a strong stream of water to remove excess surface salts that can interfere with proper adhesion. Where excessive chalking is a problem, priming before painting is recommended by Oberle.

Q - What should we do about protecting a house against termites? The house is only in the blueprint stage now, but we expect to have work started on it soon.

A - Since you mention "the blueprint stage," it is probable you have hired an architect to design the house. If so, accept his advice about termite-protection, since the laws have changed in recent years about what can and cannot be done to prevent termites. Certain chemicals are banned or must be applied by a licensed professional. If you have no architect, talk to your contractor about the matter. No matter what you decide, somebody must check with local authorities about the regulations in your community.

Q - I expect to do a considerable amount of caulking on the outside of our house. Is it better to use the caulking compound that comes in large containers or the kind available in cartridges?

A - Bulk compound is cheaper, but the caulking cartridge and the necessary "gun" are usually best for the homeowner. It is important all old caulking material be removed from previously caulked areas. The gun is held at a 45-degree angle while the trigger is squeezed with a steady pressure. Before you buy a caulking cartridge, read the label all the way through to be certain the product suits your purpose.

Q - We recently saw a design in a magazine for a gazebo. We would like to put one on our property, which is nearly four acres in size. Is it possible to get plans for such a project?

A - Yes. Many organizations have them. The one that comes to mind is Western Wood Products, Yeon Building, Portland, OR 97204. There is some nominal mailing charge such as 50 cents or a dollar. Be sure to specify exactly what you want.

In Copenhagen, Denmark, some brides rent wigs with tresses eight feet long to wear for their weddings.

AGRICULTURAL MILESTONES

For more than a century, scientists with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) have been helping livestock producers with the problem of poisonous plants encountered by their grazing animals.

A great deal of research was brought together in 1964 and published jointly by the TAES and the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in the comprehensive Bulletin No. 1028 on "Texas Plants Poisonous To Livestock."

The introduction defined a poisonous plant as one that causes chemical or physiological disturbances when consumed by livestock. It described effects varying from mild sickness to death. Loss from poisonous plants was one of the major economic problems in livestock production. A compilation of numerous reports indicated that the annual loss from poisonous plants in Texas was between $50 million and $100 million.

Bitterweed is one of the plants that causes widespread poisoning of animals. In relatively recent years, TAES scientists have discovered the chemical that is the toxic agent in bitterweed, its antidote, and a variety of ways to reduce toxicity problems.

Nearly everyone has heard of loco weeds. Locoine was discovered by TAES scientists to be the poisonous principle of loco weeds. They also have researched and published information on the mesquite; the toxicity of broomweed for sheep, cattle and goats; lechuguilla poisoning in sheep, goats and other livestock; poisoning in sheep and goats by sacahuista buds and blooms; the toxicity of red-stemmed peavine; fern poisoning in sheep, goats and cattle that causes "jimmies"; the toxicity of the ripe fruit of blackbrush or tarbrush for sheep and goats; the toxicity of the carpet weed for sheep and goats; and smallhead sneezeweed, which has a toxic constituent called helenalin.

Wheat estimates encouraging

WASHINGTON (AP) - The 1989 wheat crop is turning out better than many believed possible a few months ago, but it still is far short in many areas where last year's drought lingered on.

New Agriculture Department estimates put the harvest at 2.12 billion bushels, a 17 percent increase from last year's 1.81 billion bushels and the most since 1985 when farmers produced 2.43 billion bushels.

For the first time this season, the USDA estimates issued Wednesday included durum and "other" spring-planted wheat, in addition to winter wheat planted last fall.

Reggie Wyckoff, president of the National Association of Wheat Growers, said the USDA estimate was "a little higher" than he had expected and that there will be adequate supplies through the 1989-90 marketing year if the current projections are correct.

"But it also shows evidence that there is disaster in many areas" where wheat yields have tumbled, Wyckoff said in a telephone interview. "It's pretty rough in hard, red winter wheat areas."

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said the average yield, based on indications as of July 1, was estimated at 33.4 bushels per acre, down from 34.1 bushels last year.

But farmers are expected to have about 63.5 million acres of wheat for harvest this year, up from 53.2 million in 1988, the board said in its report.

The USDA's first official estimate of 1989 production of corn, soybeans and some other major spring-planted crops will be issued on Aug. 10, along with revised figures for wheat.

However, the July report did show new figures for 1989 plantings of major crops. Corn plantings were estimated at 65.8 million acres for harvest, up from 58.2 million acres in 1988, and soybeans, 60.2 million acres, up from 57.4 million.

Cotton plantings were estimated at 10.5 million acres, down 16 percent from 1988. That was also 5 percent below a preliminary forecast in March.

Winter wheat production was estimated at 1.46 billion bushels, down 6 percent from 1988, reduced sharply in Kansas and some other parts of the Great Plains by lingering effects of last year's drought. It makes up about three-fourths of total U.S. wheat production.

The Kansas wheat crop estimate, however, was boosted slightly to 211.2 million bushels from the June forecast of 202.4 million. Even so, it was down by more than a third from last year.

Winter wheat fared better in 1988 because most was harvested or had matured before the full impact of heat and drought was felt.

Durum wheat production was estimated at 111.3 million bushels, up from 44.8 million in 1988, and "other" spring wheat was indicated at 544.1 million bushels, compared with 205.5 million last year.

The age recorded on a whisky bottle refers to the number of years it's aged before it's bottled.

Department economists say the decline in wheat supplies since last year's reduced harvest is having only slight effect on consumer food prices, which are expected to rise an average of 4 percent to 7 percent, compared with a 4.1 percent gain in 1988.

A related supply-and-demand report showed that U.S. wheat inventories may total 592 million bushels by the end of the current marketing year next May 31, down from 694 million bushels this June 1.

Last month, when the crop was thought to be smaller, analysts projected inventories could decline to 500 million bushels next spring.

The report showed wheat prices could average $3.75 to $4.10 per bushel in 1989-90, down from the range of $3.80 to $4.20 projected in June but still above the $3.72 average for last season.

Wheat exports were projected at around 1.23 billion bushels, down from 1.44 billion bushels in 1988-89.

Corn production, based on past trends and the current outlook, was projected at 7.45 billion bushels, up from last year's drought-shrivelled 4.92 billion bushels.

But the July corn outlook was down from June's projection of 7.85 billion bushels, due partly to late plantings in the eastern Corn Belt and "continued limited moisture" conditions in the west.

The soybean crop was projected at 1.95 billion bushels, unchanged from the June forecast and up sharply from 1988 output of 1.54 billion bushels. The price outlook also was unchanged at $4.75 to $6.25 per bushel, compared with an average of $7.35 in 1988-89.

Without obstacles, US wheat farmers are tops

WASHINGTON (AP) - If all countries removed farm subsidies and opted for free trade, the American wheat farmer would eventually come out on top, according to Agriculture Department researchers.

But there are some catches. It also would depend on production costs and relative prices domestically and overseas. And some wheat farmers could go broke, meaning the survivors would be fewer and larger.

If U.S. acreage programs were phased out, including the long-range Conservation Reserve Program, wheat production "would rise somewhat" in the short run, a report by the department's Economic Research Service said.

"But if a large portion of cropland re-entered production, average U.S. wheat yields would fall because the land currently idled is less productive," the report said.

If government support to agriculture is completely removed, U.S. farm prices and incomes "may fall somewhat and become more variable" in the short run.

"This likely would cause land prices to fall," the report said. "But a rise in export demand over the long run - or government assistance not tied to production - may offset land value declines and result in more stable incomes."

The report, published in the July issue of Agricultural Outlook magazine, is the first of a series by the agency about efforts to liberalize world agricultural trade. The first analysis deals only with wheat.

An editor's note said that while theorists claim that free trade benefits society, there are adjustment costs, and gainers and losers. And because "there never has been free trade in agriculture," the findings are speculative, it said.

"Several studies indicate that world prices could rise considerably in the long run, and that the distribution of production and consumption across countries would change significantly," the report said. "However, total world trade in wheat is unlikely to change substantially, researchers generally agree."

An overhaul of global trade and farm policies is being discussed by the United States and other countries under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. One of the U.S. goals in the so-called Uruguay Round of talks is long-range reform including the gradual elimination of all "trade-distorting" subsidies and other programs.

Negotiators in April agreed on a framework for both long- and short-term reforms. The short-term measures include freezing support and production levels, followed by unspecified reduction in 1990. Long-term measures call for "substantial progressive reductions" in farm supports, including all measures directly or indirectly related to trade access, internal supports and export competition.

The United States "probably has a long-term comparative advantage in wheat production because of its climate, soil fertility and well-developed production and distribution system," the report said. "Trade reform likely would enhance the long-term U.S. position, since the most efficient producers would gain the most from substantial trade reform."

But agency analysts said not all

U.S. wheat farmers would benefit from trade liberalization if all government supports were removed. Even so, producers would have several choices.

"Farmers could find that using wheat land for cattle grazing or other farming operations would earn an acceptable return," the report said. "They could subsidize wheat production with other income, hoping that their wheat production would become more profitable over time; or they could leave farming."

In the absence of federal income supports, farmers with heavy debt loads would be in trouble.

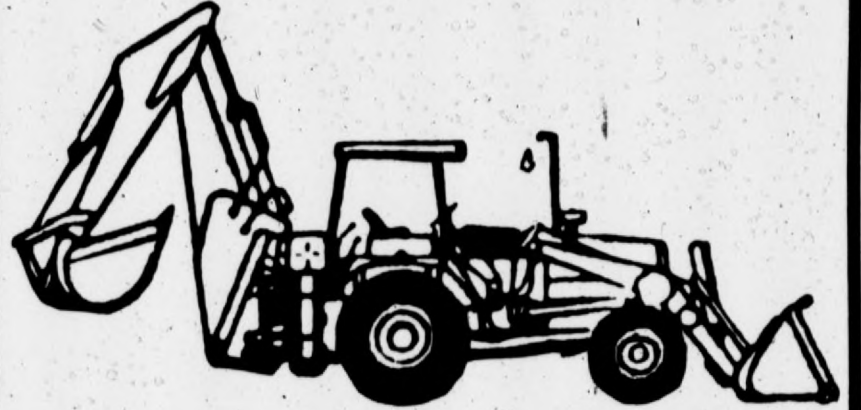

"The U.S. wheat sector likely would become increasingly concentrated," the report said. "Over time, the costs of production may fall as farmers spread the fixed costs of machinery and equipment over a larger number of acres, while using management and labor more efficiently."

Between the Covers

BY REBECCA WALLS

I want to thank you all for your support of the Creature Feature Summer Reading Club. This year's program has been a smashing success with 979 children enrolled and 505 completing to date.

Tuesday, July 11, was our last activity day celebrated with a film, games and a watermelon feast and 336 children participating. I hope everyone has had and will continue to have a reading fun summer. Thank you for all your support and help.

One of the books featured this month was written by a local person, Kathryn Chapman, entitled Life Line. Life Line is a Bible study with a unique approach. It is progressive through time and links together events of past, present and future. Patterns and themes established in the very beginning are traced through all the ages to the end of Revelation. Actions and choices made in Genesis explain events of the New Testament and even some of today's news. Mrs. Chapman said, "For instance Adam's choice in Genesis 3 and the entrance of sin into the world is the reason for the cross 4,000 years later. The animosity between Arabs and Israel began more than 3,000 years ago and is written in the Bible. We would understand more of today's news if we knew the Bible better."

Explaining why she wrote the book, Chapman stated, "For years my husband I have taught Bible studies in several different denominational churches as well as small group meetings in homes. About 12 years ago we became aware that most laymen have received their Bible knowledge in bits and pieces with little understanding of how the pieces fit together. To give our classes a clearer, more cohesive understanding of the Bible, Jack started a time line. I began more intensive research and study of the main events, prominent persons and key scriptures. Those three things bring together the pieces which we've been receiving through the years. They fit together like a string of pearls."

Another book available this week is Ask the Bible by R.T. Brooks. It is an alphabetical guide to answers and inspiration for everyday life. "Using the scriptures as a source of insight, Ask the Bible puts Biblical inspiration into your hands at your time of greatest need." Improving family relations, marital problems, child rearing and overcoming the many difficulties that can weaken faith in the family unit, trust, judgement, health, and money are a few of the areas covered in this text.

Others books of interest include: Rightfully Mine, a novel by the bestselling author of First Born, Doris Mortman; The Collaborators by Reginald Hill which encompasses the divided sympathies and choices made in the face of the German Occupation of France during World War II; Daddy's Boy: A Son's Shocking Account of Life With a Famous Father by Chris Elliott with rebuttals by Bob Elliott (you may be surprised with this one); and October Surprise by Barbara Honegger which raises the question, "Did the Reagan-Bush election campaign sabotage President Carter's attempts to free the American hostages in Iran?"

"Once Upon A Time" was the theme of the Deaf Smith County 4-H Fashion Show held Monday, July 10, in the Heritage Room of Deaf Smith County Library.

The stage was set with a pink and lavender turret castle and amid this backdrop fashions constructed or purchased with comparison buying techniques were modeled.

Receiving first place senior awards were Cheryl Schlabs in speciality wear, Jennifer Hicks in tailored wear and Jill Dutton in non-tailored daywear.

Intermediate contestants with first place winnings were Kinann Campbell in dressy daywear, Lori Urbanczyk in buying and Lee Harder as alternate in buying.

Junior contestants included: Amber Brumley, first place winner; Cindy Harder, alternate; and Tawanna Drager, second alternate in casual daywear. Julie Schlabs placed first in speciality wear with Janna Brumley as alternate. Karon Harder placed first in dressy daywear with Jami Parker as alternate winner.

Special awards included: Jill Dutton, Kinann Campbell and Cindy Harder with best written records representing the three age divisions.

Creativity Award was presented to Cheryl Schlabs with Jennifer Hicks receiving the Wool Award and Karon Harder the Cotton Award.

Receiving the Theme Award representing outstanding growth in the clothing and textiles project was Tawanna Drager.

The special gift awards were made by Charla Schlabs. This year's fashion show committee included Brenda Campbell, chairman, and Charla Schlabs and Darliss Peabody. The committee planned two workshop activities focusing on making accessories and home decorations.

First place winners will be advancing to the district competition on Monday, July 24, in Borger.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Monti of Houston and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Peeler of 132 Liveoak, Hereford.

Karen Monti of Hartford, Conn. served her sister as maid of honor and best man was Lynn Gravley of Gunter, Texas.

The French pouf sleeves were tapered in English net with medallions of matching lace and fastened with satin buttons and French loops. The basque waistline flowed into a full satin skirt and cathedral-length train which was elaborately trimmed with a border of scalloped lace. Windowpane cutouts of English net and lace accentuated the train's intricate pattern of motifs to complete the look.

The wedding reception was held at the Northgate Country Club in Houston.

The couple are making their home in Duncanville.

The bride graduated from Spring High School in Houston in 1981. She graduated from Baylor University in 1985 and from the Texas Tech School of Medicine in 1989. She is currently employed at Baylor Medical Center in Dallas where she is an obstetrics and gynecological resident.

Residue from pesticides can often be picked up on the clothing you wear while spraying in the yard or garden. Because some pesticides can enter the body through the skin, it's important to pay special attention to clothing that could be contaminated by drifts or spills. The clothes you wear while applying pesticides should be washed daily or stored in a plastic bag to await laundering. Don't mix pesticide contaminated clothes with other laundry.

Laundry procedures for heavily soiled clothing will usually remove pesticide residue from your garments:

—Wash contaminated clothing separately from the family clothing.

—Pre-rinse clothing outdoors by spraying or hosing it; or pre-soak it in a suitable container such as a large bucket or tub; or use the pre-wash cycle of an automatic washer, with detergent.

—Wash clothes using hot water, the highest water level, and a regular or super wash cycle. Use heavy-duty detergents; for EC and other oil-based formulations, use a heavy-duty liquid detergent. Wash only a few contaminated garments at a time.

—Wash contaminated garments at least twice; then thoroughly rinse the washer by running through another entire cycle using detergent.

—Line dry to avoid a buildup of pesticide residues in the dryer.

HIGHEST FALLS

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Angel Falls, the highest waterfall in the world, is located on a remote plateau in Southeastern Venezuela.

In 1949, an American expedition explored the canyon and measured the falls, which are twice as high as New York's Empire State Building.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Today must be Beat Up a Veterinarian Day!

First, on our local radio talk show the host bemoaned the fact that he took his animal to an emergency pet hospital and was charged more than when he went to his own doctor. Then, in your column, "J.B. of Barberton, Ohio," complained that he was unable to get emergency treatment for his dog without paying $38 cash up front. He chose to treat the animal himself.

I'm not a veterinarian, but I know someone who is. In fact, he has treated my animals for 10 years. Would he extend me a few days' credit? Of course he would. Why? Because he knows me and my animals. He also knows the history of my pets. This dedicated doc made a house call to put our beloved 15-year-old springer to sleep. He has earned our respect.--H.R., Redding, Calif.

learned later that the owner could not afford to pay the bill, nor did he want to keep the dog. When I asked what they planned to do with the little guy I was told that they were in the process of finding him a caring home.

We have some lovely folks in Burlington.--K.R.

DEAR READERS: I could have done an entire week of columns on the glowing praise I received on veterinarians in the U.S. and Canada.

Thanks to all who wrote such heartwarming letters and a ton of orchids to you great doctors of veterinary medicine who rated such kudos.

Planning a wedding? What's right? What's wrong? "The Ann Landers Guide for Brides" will relieve your anxiety. Card of Thanks

We wish to express our sincere thanks to everyone in this community who reached out and helped our family in our time of loss. The visits, calls, food, compassion, flowers and many other indications of your concern for us and honor of Charlie meant much more than we are able to express. An extra thank you to the church family at First Baptist Church who provided an excellent meal as well as a place for the family to share. May God richly bless each and everyone of you.

Ice cubes make the difference

The secret to our full-flavored iced coffee is in the ice cubes - they're made from coffee, too, so they don't weaken the flavor as they melt.

ICED COFFEE: At least 1 day before serving, pour coffee into an ice cube tray and freeze. For each serving, place frozen coffee cubes into a tall glass. Pour room temperature, fresh-brewed coffee over them. Serve with cream and powdered sugar, if desired.

CINNAMON ICED COFFEE: Before brewing, sprinkle ground cinnamon over the grounds, using 1 teaspoon spice for 10 to 12 cups coffee. Brew; serve at room temperature over coffee ice cubes.

VANILLA ICED COFFEE: Before brewing coffee, sprinkle vanilla over coffee grounds, using 1 teaspoon vanilla for 10 to 12 cups coffee. Brew; serve at room temperature over coffee ice cubes.

MOCHA ICED COFFEE: Before brewing coffee, stir presweetened cocoa powder into coffee grounds, using 2 tablespoons cocoa powder for 10 to 12 cups coffee. Brew; serve at room temperature with milk and sugar over coffee ice cubes.

INSULATION INFORMATION

ATLANTA (AP) - Energy conscious homeowners can save money by owning a house built of wood.

A wood home often requires 30 percent less energy in summer and 20 percent less energy in winter than a house made of other materials, says Georgia-Pacific Corp., a forest products firm.

Because of its high density, wood can insulate a home from extreme summer and winter temperatures.

DEAR RED: The mail is running 50 to 1 in favor of the veterinarians. Read on:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: As I read a letter today from J.B. of Barberton, Ohio, I was reminded of my experience five years ago in Knoxville.

Our adorable mini dachshund was struck by a truck in front of our house. We were new in town and I didn't know a veterinarian, but I remembered seeing an animal hospital near the store where I shopped for groceries. I gently placed "Erik" in the car, asked my new neighbor to watch my three young children, and off I went with fingers crossed.

I arrived at the clinic, in tears, with Erik cradled in my arms. I was greeted by a receptionist who rushed me back to an examining room. Seconds later, two doctors came in and hurried Erik to the operating room.

Unfortunately, Erik was so severely injured that he couldn't be saved. The receptionist never left my side. These people didn't know me or my dog, but they cared. They didn't ask for money. Two days later they telephoned to see how we were doing as asked if it would help my children's grief if they called to explain how they had tried to save their pet.

Nobody can tell me that all vets are money-hungry and heartless.--Mrs. S.W.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This message is for J.B. of Barberton, Ohio: If you love your dog, move to Vermont.

We had a similar situation with our pet. We rushed him to our vet, who, after examining him and diagnosing the problem, discussed the operation required and the cost so that we could make a decision. It was quite expensive, and we worked out a payment schedule.

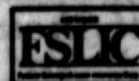

While visiting our pet during his recuperation we noticed a small mixed breed mutt with a cast on his leg. We learned that a stranger had brought the dog in after he had been hit by a car. Not knowing the owner, our vet patched him up and Installing a heat pump is much more costly and complicated than putting in a high-efficiency air conditioner.

And a heat pump doesn't cool as well or operate as economically, either.

A set of cookingware was given to the bride by hostesses: Marlene Nielsen, Watts, Kelley, Nancy Ruckman, Castlebon, Audrey Rusher, Alice Lueb, Nola Drager, Jan McConnel and Helen Armit.

Wedding date set

Robert Castro and Yolanda Ceja, both of San Antonio, plan to wed Aug. 5 in St. Mary Magdalen's Church in San Antonio.

The bride-elect is the daughter of Mrs. Socorro Ceja of San Antonio and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Noe Castro of 821 Blevins.

Miss Ceja graduated in 1985 with honors from St. Gerard's Catholic High School. She is presently employed at Bank Plus Mortgage Corp. as an escrow processor in San Antonio.

While attending Hereford High School where he graduated in 1981, Castro was a three year National Honor Society student and graduated fifth in his class. He graduated from West Texas State University with a bachelor of arts degree in mass communications. He is currently employed at Cal-Fed Credit in San Antonio as a credit manager.

Two Hereford students are Mesa Scholarship recipients

A total of 67 West Texas State University students have been selected to receive a Mesa Scholarship for academic excellence for the 1989-90 school year.

Mesa Scholarship recipients from Hereford include Kyle Andrews, a freshman, and Robyn Kaye Inmon, a senior majoring in psychology.

Established from funds provided by Mesa Limited Partnership, the scholarships are intended to reward and recognize freshmen and continuing undergraduate students who promote and exemplify high academic standards. The awards are made in increments of either $500 or $1,000.

To be eligible, entering freshmen must have a composite score of 23 or higher on the ACT or a combined verbal and math score of 950 or higher on the SAT and must also rank in the top quarter of their graduating class. Continuing students must have a 3.40 or better grade point average on all college work attempted.

Applicants were required to submit two letters of reference with their applications as well as a brief essay outlining their educational plans, career objectives and personal goals.

Include children in planning

Every family should have a planning session long before a vacation begins, said Dorothy Taylor, family life specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Even though parents may have the final say about vacation plans, they should listen to their children, she said. Each family member should have the chance to express his or her wishes.

If children don't want to go to the same place as their parents or are not having a good time, it could ruin the holiday.

"It's not just, 'It's a good idea. Let's go for it,'" Taylor said.

Families should always consider the developmental stages of its different members and the amount of money and time spent on the vacation when planning, she said.

Professional-looking photographs are easier to come by if you don't pose subjects that look contrived, says Bob Goldblatt, president of K+L Custom PhotoGraphics. "Try to get the spontaneity of the moment and don't ask people to smile," Goldblatt says.

Lenz stars in USA's new murder mystery

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Kay Lenz's problem as a police psychologist in "Murder By Night" on the USA Network is that Robert Urich is the only witness to the murder and he can't remember a thing.

An even bigger complication is she's falling in love with him and at the same time is becoming suspicious that he's the killer.

"He has amnesia and she's trying to get him to remember," said Lenz. "He doesn't know who he is but everything points to the fact that he's a wealthy but reclusive restaurant owner. We go through his things trying to jog his memory."

"Murder By Night," which will be seen next Wednesday, is part of a package of 24 original motion pictures for USA World Premiere Movie on the cable channel.

Lenz plays Karen Hicks, a police officer and psychologist. Urich is Allan Strong, a man without a past who's found at the scene of a murder, and Michael Ironside is Detective Lt. Carl Madsen, Karen's former husband. Paul Lynch directed on location in Toronto from a screenplay by Alan B. McElroy.

"When Karen starts to fall in love with Allan he begins to have nightmares that he may be the killer," she said. "It becomes a problem that attracts the attention of her former husband, who's still protective of her. He feels she's putting her feelings above her better judgment as a police officer."

"As it goes along we do come to find out that Allan is not who we think he is."

Lenz said that because Toronto was standing in for New York in the movie the production company had to take its own garbage along on location filming.

"Toronto is a very clean city," she said. "We took the garbage with us in bags and would scatter it around. After filming, they'd clean it up and take it to the next location."

Lenz has been in about six movies in the past three years, but said before that she had been in a slump.

"It happened when I was getting divorced from David Cassidy," she said. "I was in a movie with James Woods called 'Fast-Walking.' After that I didn't work for 2 1/2 years. It happens, you know. You wake up one day and say, 'I haven't worked for a year.'"

"Without the support and love of family and friends I might not have made it."

Wha broke the slump was a call to do an episode of "Insight," the television series produced by Paulist Productions.

"It's done by the Catholic Church and most people donate their salaries," she said. "I was so broke that when they gave me the check I said, 'I'm so sorry, I can't give it back.' After that I did episodes of 'Hotel' and 'Simon & Simon' and then some movies."

She made her movie debut as a teen-age hippie in "Breezy" in 1973, which starred William Holden and was directed by Clint Eastwood. On television, she starred in the 1976 miniseries "Rich Man, Poor Man" and in the regular series spinoff later that year.

'License to Kill' 16th, or 18th, Bond movie

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

Forget those low-number Roman numerals on this summer's movie marcees. Here comes James Bond for the 16th time. Make that 18th, counting two maverick films ("Casino Royale," "Never Say Never Again") outside United Artists' control.

And welcome he is, with his new duds, up-to-date situations, a loathsome villain and two drop-dead Bond beauties. "Licence to Kill" ranks among the best of the 27-year series.

The locale could hardly be more contemporary: the drug world of Latin America. Bond (Timothy Dalton) comes to Key West for the wedding of his old comrade, Felix Leighter (David Hedison). The happy event ends in tragedy because of a vicious drug czar, Frank Sanchez (Robert Davi).

Bond loses his esteemed cool and embarks on a campaign of punishment and revenge. His Secret Service boss M (Robert Brown) arrives to reprimand 007 for operating independently. The agent is forced to relinquish his cherished Walther PPK and hence his licence (British spelling) to kill.

So James Bond is on his own. Well, not entirely. He has the support of a former CIA agent and jill of all trades (Carey Lowell) and Sanchez's mistress (Talisso Soto). After some maritime adventures, Bond enters the drug boss' lair, Isthmus City (guess where).

The intricate plot is not always clear or logical, but you don't have time to reflect on it. One action scene follows another in breathtaking style.

Dalton in his second outing almost makes you forget Sean Connery and Roger Moore, not to mention George Lazenby. He is more ruthless than his predecessors (among his executions: a death by electric eel and another by maggots), and lacks their sophisticated humor. But he is more believable as the cold enforcer of justice.

As a supreme menace, Robert Davi with his craggy face and ice-cold cruelty ranks up there with Goldfinger, Oddjob and Jaws. The canny inventor of lethal devices, Q (Desmond Llewellen) is more present than usual, and he supplied a needed light touch. Alas, Miss Moneybags (Caroline Bliss) appears only briefly.

Lowell and Soto are both gorgeous and credible. The oddest casting is Vegas' Wayne Newton as an unctuous television evangelist whose telethons convey signals for U.S. dope buyers.

John Glen's direction is stilted in the exposition scenes but sure-handed with action. The final sequence of 10-wheel tanker trucks loaded with explosive narcotics careening down a mountainside is a heart-stopper.

Michael Wilson and Richard Maibaum wrote "Licence to Kill," and Wilson produced with Albert Broccoli. The MGM-UA release is rated PG-13 for minor swearing and major sadistic violence. Running time: 132 minutes.

'Booker' may be lone 1989 TV hit

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The only "hit" of the fall television season predicted by the nation's largest advertising agency is "Booker" on the Fox Broadcasting Co.

The fact that a Fox show was selected, but not one show from the three networks was listed as a hit, says something about the changing face of television.

The 1989-90 networks schedule is cautious, conservative and comfortable, according to the report. More shows than ever have been renewed, there are fewer programs that might be considered troublesome and a heavy reliance on stars and programs that have worked well in the past.

The annual preview of the fall season by Saatchi & Saatchi Advertising, however, gives ABC's "Chicken Soup," starring Jackie Mason, a nine on a scale of 1-10.

Other highly-rated network shows are: NBC's "Nutt House," CBS' "The Famous Teddy Z" and ABC's "Family Matters," all eights.

The Saatchi report cites "dramatic shifts in the business of television itself: competition from independents, cable and VCRs" and wonders if the "economics of television can continue to support big events - from miniseries to the Olympics."

Calling competition the major source of network pressures, it said that during the writers' strike last year viewers did not turn away from television. "Instead they turned their dials to Fox broadcasting and ad-supported cable," the report said.

Fox improved its average ratings by almost 50 percent with "some of the most talked about shows on television" and is expanding its programming to Monday nights in September.

"Booker," a spinoff from Fox's "21 Jump Street," stars Richard Grieco as private investigator Dennis Booker. The character was noted for his renegade street tactics and unconventional style on "21 Jump Street," which has a large and loyal following of young people. "Booker" will open the Sunday night schedule and "21 Jump Street" will open Fox's new Monday night programming.

"Chicken Soup" stars comedian Jackie Mason as a man forced to retire at 52 from his job as a pajama salesman who finds satisfaction helping inner-city kids at a local community center. It takes on an "Abie's Irish Rose" aspect with the Jewish character's love affair with a gentile woman played by Lynn Redgrave.

The comedy follows "Roseanne" on Tuesday night, which is a big ratings night for ABC. "Roseanne" has consistently beaten NBC's "The Cosby Show" for first place in the Nielsen ratings in recent months.

"Chicken Soup" could find itself in the same situation that "A Different World" has enjoyed on NBC. Following "The Cosby Show" has placed "A Different World" near the top of the ratings, although the quality of the show doesn't merit it. "Chicken Soup" lacks both humor and charm, and the relationship between Mason and Redgrave fails to light a spark.

CBS' "The Famous Teddy Z" stars Jon Cryer as a mailroom clerk in a talent agency who suddenly becomes a hot agent.

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I had an examination of my colon and it showed that I had a polyp. It was removed and the medical form said it was an adenomatous polyp. What does that mean? The doctor said I did not have cancer, but it was important to remove such polyps because it could become cancer. He said I would have to have regular checkups to detect any changes that might occur. That is an upsetting thought, particularly since my mother died of cancer of the colon.

Is this inherited or was it caused by something I did or did not do? I include lots of fiber in my diet, so that can't be the reason. I have never suffered from constipation or bowel problems. This was a routine examination because of my age.

DEAR READER: Adenomatous polyps are small growths that originate from one of the cells in the glands in your colon.

They are associated with an increased risk of colon cancer and that is why your doctor wants you to have regular evaluations. Don't let that frighten you. You are probably better off than the many people who do not have such a warning. When cancer of the colon is detected early, it can be cured. That is why screening programs are so important for the general population. With the close follow-up I'm sure you are scheduled for, if you do develop cancer it can be easily cured. The people who have real problems from colorectal cancer are those who are not detected early.

Colorectal cancer is the second most common cause of cancer deaths in the United States. 150,000 new cases each year. And there appears to be a gene that you inherit that at least increases your risk of colorectal cancer. People who have such a gene need more careful and early supervision. A family history certainly is important. Often colorectal cancer will not cause any symptoms at all and may become advanced before it is found unless an adequate screening program is followed.

Everyone needs to be well informed about this common cancer.

You will understand the situation much better after reading Special Issue 33-10, Colorectal Cancer Is No. 2 Killer, which I'm sending you. It includes the current thinking on preventing this common problem which you may want to follow. Others who want this special issue can send $1 with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER 33-10, P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713.

DEAR DR. LAMB: I have had no acid in my stomach for many years. My doctor told me that when I got older I would have to take some hydrochloric acid or I might develop cancer of the stomach. I talked to my doctor the other day and he said I didn't need any. I don't have any stomach problems except some burning I eat an orange, which helps, but after a time it starts again. What would you suggest for this problem? I'm 72 years of age and would like to stay healthy as long as possible.

DEAR READER: A lack of stomach acid, called achlorhydria, was once a popular diagnosis, but it has fallen out of favor. Better diagnostic methods have shown that it usually does not cause any significant problems. The symptoms attributed to it are often caused by something else. A lack of stomach acid does not cause stomach cancer, although a stomach cancer in advanced stages may cause it.

Achlorhydria may be a sign of other diseases or part of other diseases, such as pernicious anemia.

Your burning symptom may not be from achlorhydria. It can be from regurgitation of bile or stomach contents. Ask your doctor about that, but I would think you need not concern yourself about your decreased stomach acid itself.

Dr. Lamb welcomes letters from readers with health questions. You can write to him at P.O. Box 19622, Irvine, CA 92713. Although Dr. Lamb cannot reply to all letters personally, he will respond to selected questions in future columns.
