Allied bombers back after Israel attack

IN SAUDI ARABIA (AP) - Iraq hurled missiles at Israel again today, and allied bombers pounded Baghdad and Iraqi missile sites. Israel vowed vengeance - but said it would "keep Saddam guessing" about when and how it would strike.

The U.S. military command said today that U.S. forces took 12 Iraqi prisoners in an operation against Iraqi anti-aircraft positions on Kuwaiti oil platforms in the Persian Gulf.

They were the first known prisoners of war taken by allied forces.

Lt. Col. Greg Peppin told a briefing in Riyadh the guided missile frigate USS Nicholas last night engaged and neutralized Iraqi forces working from nine oil platforms.

The Iraqi attack on Tel Aviv today - the Jewish Sabbath - caused minor injuries and damage but no reported deaths. It was the second such attack in two days, and threatened anew to draw Israel into the Persian Gulf war.

Continuing an unrelenting allied offensive, waves of U.S. warplanes streaked north from Saudi Arabia today, and other American planes took off from the Incirlik air base in southern Turkey, according to reporters at the base.

British Royal Air Force fighter-bombers, meanwhile, attacked Iraqi missile sites, a British officer said, and French Jaguars destroyed a fuel and supply dump in Kuwait, France's defense minister said today.

"Bloody brilliant!" British squadron leader Mike Garden said afterward, describing an attack on a surface-to-air missile silo amid a storm of anti-aircraft fire.

Baghdad came under heavy allied bombardment early today, following up on devastating strikes that knocked out its telephone communications, electricity and water supplies. U.S. pilots say the Iraqis have been mounting a more vigorous defense than they did during initial allied strikes, directing heavy anti-aircraft and artillery and ground-to-air missile attacks at attacking warplanes.

Iraqi radio claimed today that Iraqi defenders had shot down a total of 101 allied warplanes, including seven overnight. The allies have put their aircraft losses at eight, including four American warplanes.

CNN's Peter Arnett, in Baghdad, said the surgical precision of the air strikes was "remarkable." He described the destruction of targeted buildings in residential neighborhoods that left nearby structures untouched.

Iraq moved today to cut short any more such eyewitness accounts of the bombings' effects. Authorities announced they were expelling the remaining three dozen or so foreign correspondents remaining in Baghdad, CNN said.

Iraq has been the war's main battleground so far, but some Americans in Saudi Arabia were looking to leave the desert kingdom, the main staging ground for the U.S.-led multinational force in the gulf region. The U.S. consulate in Saudi Arabia's Eastern Province said today it was arranging military airlift for Americans who want to depart.

Iraq, meanwhile, appealed to Muslims worldwide to attack Western targets.

"Let the aggressors' interests be set on fire and let them be hunted down wherever they may be in every corner of the world," said a statement from the ruling Baath party, read on Baghdad radio.

The Iraqi attack on Israel today - the Jewish Sabbath - followed three false alarms overnight. Dr. Dan Michael, director of Tel Aviv's Ichilov Hospital, said 17 people were brought in with minor injuries, mainly cuts, and that two others were treated for heart problems.

During the attack, Israelis were ordered to don gas masks and take refuge in sealed rooms, but the missiles did not carry chemical warheads. The modified Scud missiles that hit Israel on Friday were also armed with conventional explosive warheads.

U.S. officials have expressed fear that if Israel retaliates against Iraq, it could drive Arab allies out of the 28-nation anti-Iraq coalition. But Israel's deputy foreign minister, Benjamin Netanyahu, said that was not necessarily the case.

Growers, Holly celebrate

By JOHN BROOKS
Managing Editor

The Texas Sugar Beet Growers Association and Imperial Holly Sugar Corporation celebrated their partnership Friday at the annual TSBGA business meeting Friday at the Hereford Community Center.

A record crowd of over 200 persons jammed the center to hear about the latest research in cultural practices and disease control, and efforts by Holly Sugar to improve seed quality and to improve the processing plant in Hereford.

Roger Hill, Holly president, also spoke to the crowd. He congratulated growers for their efforts in making the partnership profitable for both the growers and Holly.

Hill used figures from the 1979 growing season and campaign and compared them to preliminary figures for 1990, the best year yet for the Hereford Holly operation and the growers.

In 1979, Holly contracted 21,445 acres of beets; growers produced 16.8

tons of beets per acre; and Holly paid $12.35 million to growers.

In 1990, Holly contracted 42,000 acres (a 96 percent increase); growers produced 24.7 tons of beets per acre (a 47 percent increase); and Holly will pay about $40 million to growers (a 330 percent increase).

Hill said he didn't pick 1979 because it was a bad year: it was similar to the years before and after. Instead, the increases have come through improvements by Holly in research and development, and an improved corporate structure with the merger of Imperial and Holly two years ago, and better farming by Holly producers.

Profits for Holly and the farmers could increase more as early as next year when a $13.2 million in exclusion facility being built at the Hereford plant comes on line. Hill said Holly looked at all of its plants before deciding to build the facility in Hereford.

Allied leader Schwarzkopf grizzly bear, teddy bear

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) - Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf III, the lifelong infantryman who is U.S. field commander in the Persian Gulf, sees two sides to his nickname, "The Bear."

On the one hand, the 56-year-old decorated Vietnam veteran has a nasty side he won't hesitate to show in a fight.

In his other persona, he relaxes by reading Field and Stream magazine while listening to tapes of geese honking. And, like many of history's notable military leaders, he has a deep affection for those who serve under him.

"If we have to go to war, there's absolutely no doubt in my mind that the image I'm going to portray to Saddam Hussein and the enemy is that of a grizzly bear," the four-star general said.

"I'm going to do everything I can to viciously destroy them as rapidly as possible."

"But the reason why I'm going to do that is because I'm also a teddy bear, and I love my soldiers and sailors and airmen and Marines, and I don't want to get them killed," Schwarzkopf said.

"If we're going to have to go to war, I want to get the damn thing over with. ... I won't hold anything back."

The 6-foot-3, 230-pound soldier, also known as "Stormin' Norman," will be giving battle orders to as many as 430,000 Americans.

He's a certifiable genius with an IQ of 170. He speaks French and German fluently and can curse in Farsi, the Iranian language.

His father, H. Norman Schwarzkopf Jr., became nationally famous in the 1930s when, as commander of the New Jersey State Police, he ran the Lindbergh kidnapping investigation.

During World War II, as a U.S. Army general, the elder Schwarzkopf served in Iran. He set up the Iranian constabulary that helped suppress a Soviet-backed Communist insurgency just after the war. The younger Schwarzkopf was in Iran with his father and got a first-hand view of the region.

Schwarzkopf, a 34-year Army veteran, graduated in 1956 in the top 10 percent of his class at West Point. (See GENERAL, Page 3A)

Shop fills unique niche

By DANEE WILSON
Staff Writer

Last year the Corona family set out on a wild goose chase that would eventually lead them to owning their own store. What were they looking for? Maybe it was gold, riches or... a dress?

The quinceanera is one of the most significant celebrations in a hispanic girl's life. The celebration requires intense planning with all the accessories a must.

After the planning of their daughters quinceanera, Ramon and Janie Corona searched the area, including Lubbock and Amarillo for their daughter's quinceanera dress. Finally, after taking a trip to the Rio Grande Valley area, they found the dress and accessories they were looking for.

Janie, upon returning from her trip, wondered how many other families spent all that time and effort looking for a dress. After asking around, she found several people shared her same experience. Instead of letting the situation get the best of her, Janie and her husband decided to open a quinceanera specialty store in Hereford.

"After all the trouble we had finding a dress," said Janie. "I did some research and found that a quinceanera specialty store was needed in the area."

The quinceanera celebrates the fifteen-year-old girls coming into adulthood and leaving her childhood behind.

Many symbols, which are available at the store, are used in the ceremony.

The doll represents leaving childhood; shoes, first pair of dancing shoes (traditionally, the first dance is with the quinceanera's father); ring, a sign of commitment; crown, a sign of victory in Christ, and the bouquet, symbol of joy in life.

The quinceanera is joined in the celebration by 14 male and female attendants and a male escort for the quinceanera. The female attendants are called damas and the males are chamberlains.

After the young lady is introduced into society, the celebration is continued with a religious mass, dinner and a dance with friends, family and loved ones.

"The celebration is one of unity," she said proudly. "It is a very beautiful time. It is a very beautiful tradition we hispanics have. I hope we can keep it going."

The 15' Anera Boutique will do its part to keep the tradition going strong.

"We have many quinceaneras in this area," said Janie. "I hope we can serve the people of the area as well as Hereford."

The Coronas hope their business will draw from other cities to help Hereford's economy.

"Since there is not a shop like this anywhere in the area, including Amarillo and Lubbock, I hope we draw area people into Hereford to shop," Janie said.

Corona's shop does not stock only for quinceaneras. They carry merchandise for the bride, communions and baptisms. Also, they stock hair bows and costume jewelry.

If one does not find what they are looking for in stock, Janie can order or make what is not readily available.

"I hope that I can start taking special orders and make the bouquets, bows and other arrangements myself," she said. "I also have a woman who will make dresses by hand, for those who want one special made. We hope to get new and different merchandise."

Presently, the shop carries (See 15th, Page 2A)

Iraqis recovering from shock, make new plans

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) - During lulls in the air raids, Iraqi troops recovering from the initial shock of relentless allied bombardment prepared to strike back, moving fully loaded mobile missile launchers out of Baghdad.

"We have hit Israel, we have hit Israel," a senior Information Ministry official declared Friday after several Iraqi Scuds crashed into Tel Aviv and Haifa. "Our holy war has really begun, we are going to hit them again."

More Scuds hit Israel today. The large launchers were seen hauling what looked like Scuds out of the capital, a day after U.S. planes first attacked the city. One witness said he saw at least three launchers on the move, and a second witness said he saw another three.

constructed during the eight-year war with neighboring Iran, are heavily fortified.

In the city, thousands of men armed with AK-47 rifles roamed the streets early Friday vowing revenge for the air raids.

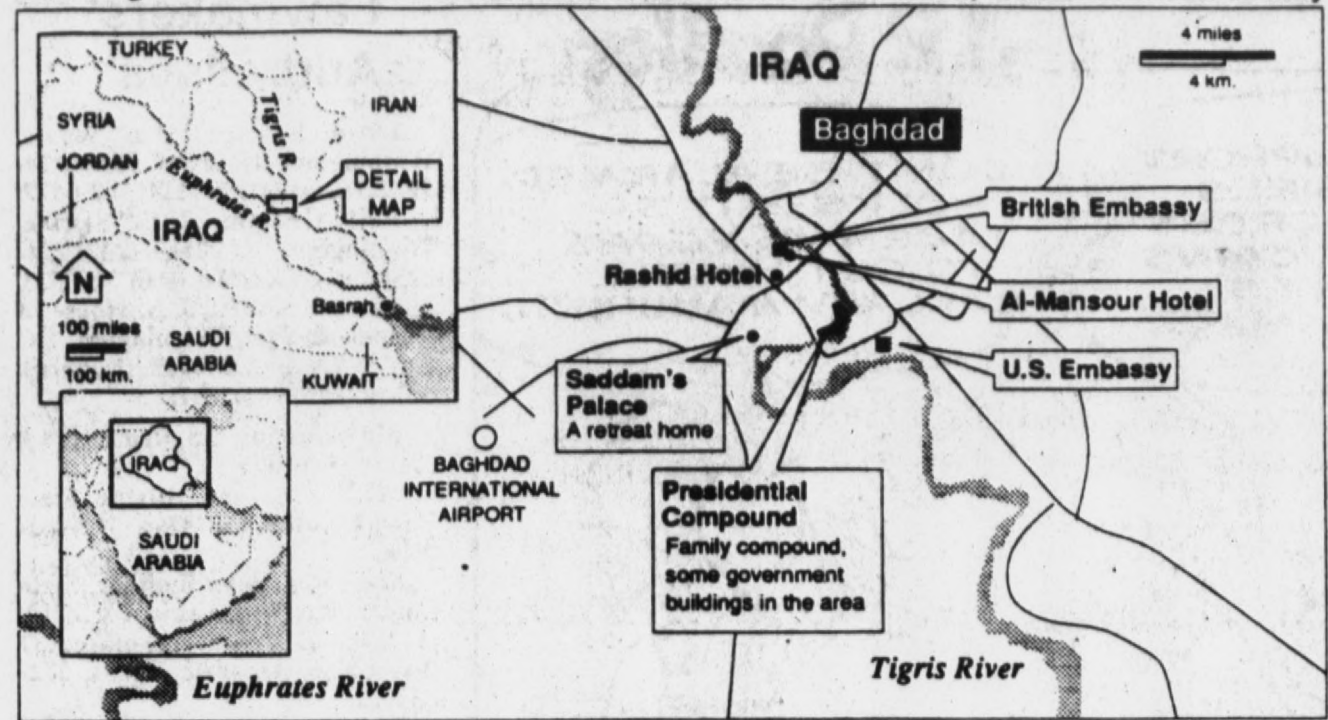

The men, from the Popular Army militia, are Saddam Hussein's fierce ground fighting force, which has been trained to fight a ground battle in Baghdad if necessary.

The U.S.-led attack caused fear among the Iraqis, but there was no visible sign Friday that it would snowball into an anti-Saddam Hussein movement.

A propaganda blitz by the state-run television and radio had created a false sense of confidence that Saddam's Iraq is invincible.

Iraqi officials generally refuse to comment on military matters. But one Information Ministry official said, "The tall claims of the United States are wrong. We have enough firepower left."

"They will soon see," he said without elaborating. Anticipating massive air raids, the Iraqis kept an undisclosed number of missile launchers loaded with rockets in underground bunkers, said Asian military experts attached to diplomatic missions. Most of the missiles escaped the air raids.

GENERAL

He learned about war in Southeast Asia, earning two Purple Hearts for wounds received in two combat tours in Vietnam.

As a battalion commander, he won three Silver Stars, three Bronze Stars and the Distinguished Service Medal.

Schwarzkopf was also deputy commander of the U.S. military invasion of Grenada in 1983.

He works 15-hour days, with a watch on Saudi time on his right wrist and another on his left wrist set to Washington time for night calls from the Pentagon.

His headquarters is the "war room" in a basement in the Saudi capital, where he oversees scores of personnel projecting intelligence reports and troop movements on four 10-by-10-foot panels.

Schwarzkopf took over as commander of the U.S. Central Command - the command responsible for the Middle East - at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla., two years ago. He is due to retire next year.

One of his proudest achievements is his design for a new desert combat boot with speed laces, ankle supports, lightweight nylon, an arch support and a lining that soaks up sweat.

He considers it a big improvement over the military's green canvas and black leather combat jungle boot. The dark footwear traps heat, and the holes in its side designed to let out water end up letting in sand.

Schwarzkopf, who has two daughters and a son, also has a word about the officers in command of America's other sons and daughters:

"The leadership today are not arch-right-wing military conservatives with crewcuts and jackboots.

The leaders in the American military are concerned human beings who generally do care about each and every individual man and woman who serves under their command," he said.

"We don't look at them as masses of formations that we throw into the jaws of death with glee to accomplish some great ambition."

Huskies "Sam" and "Yeager," part of the 1990 International Trans-Antarctica Expedition, are the only two dogs in history that have mushed to both the North and South poles.

War and values

Our sympathy and our prayers go out to those families who have loved ones serving in the Persian Gulf war. Those who are fortunate enough not to have a loved one engaged in the conflict can only imagine the stress and concern these people are going through.

With all the danger and perils of armed conflict, it is difficult for an individual to think of something positive about being involved in a war. We ran across a column by James Roberts, publisher of The Andrews County News, that speaks to that subject. Roberts, a veteran of World War II and former prisoner of war, says war does have a few positive notes for the individual serviceman caught up in the middle of the maelstrom.

"Most of us stumble through life questioning who we are, what we are, what we're made of, and where we're headed. Few are given the opportunity to find the answer to the question: do we have the intestinal fortitude to meet the major challenges of life?"

"A few find the answer in dramatic moments in some sports. Others may find it in extreme tragedy or disaster, but most of us go through our days without ever meeting a test that answers the question.

"War offers an almost immediate answer--and once answered satisfactorily, provides the individual with an inner confidence and serenity that stands him or her in good stead for the remainder of his days.

"Secondly, relationships formed with another individual during the heat of battle are like no other on earth. Veterans of war campaigns will attest to the special bond formed under fire with a friend or buddy that cannot be matched in civilian life. A relationship forged, honed and tempered in one battle after another is unique, special and one to be treasured always.

"Thirdly, battle provides an experience that--after it is over--you wouldn't have missed for the world...and wouldn't go through again for the treasures of the earth.

"It provides a lasting insight into human nature...it provides a maturity, an humbleness, a confidence, an appreciation for human life and the blessings that flow from a democracy that are everlasting.

"Lastly, and the most positive side of warfare, the heat of battle can bring about a unique, special relationship with one's God.

"Most battle-tested veterans, if they will admit it publicly, develop a special pipeline, a one-on-one daily relationship with their Creator that enables them to find an inner serenity, an inner calm, an inner peace that sustains and nurtures them for the remainder of their days.

"It is as if a special contract existed between them and God--a lasting contract of faith that both made in the heat of battle and is unshakeable, unbreakable.

"It is true that war is terrible but we would remind local families that it does have a positive side for the individual serving his country."

Rally around flag

BY LYNN BRISENDINE
The Brownfield News

I am against war...I am against the killing, the destruction, the fear, the hate, and the dreadful waste.

I protest these things as abhorrent to nature and to mankind. These statements are my right; they were won by men who fought a war. These rights have been protected by other men fighting other wars from time to time over 200 years.

It seems like yesterday...the peace symbols, flower children, the chants, sit-downs, massive demonstrations, draft card burnings. The people shouting their prerogatives and many times issuing their hate not to our enemy at the time but at our leaders and, even worse, the troops fighting in a hostile land.

I defend the protesters, at least their right to protest. In this nation any and every aspect of our society can and probably is protested by one group or another. But sometimes it seems to this writer that the protesters single out the wrong foe. They spout their slogans and hate in the wrong direction. I have seen huge crowds of Americans curse their president, demand change from their congressmen and even burn their own symbol of the freedom they are enjoying.

The protesters have returned. They have dug up the old ways of decrying the very reasons which allow them their protestations. They have that right.

But it seems possible to protest the Gulf crisis in a positive way. If we must carry a banner against someone, make it against the Butcher of Baghdad. If we need a chant to curse atrocities, then curse Saddam and his circle of tyrants. If we need to burn, or hang, an effigy then let it wear a bushy mustache and a grinning leer.

Rally against the idea of war. Rally against the violence. Curse the hate. But rally for our troops who once again fight for right. Pray for our president, our soldiers, and the innocent victims.

An AP News Analysis

New 'world order'--an elusive goal

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) - Afterward, when the shooting stops, the Persian Gulf war may ultimately be judged by the most elusive of the objectives President Bush set - a new world order.

It would have to begin in the least ordered of regions, the Middle East, where chaos is a cliché. And it would have to withstand the disorder gripping the Soviet Union.

Bush envisions a strengthened, active United Nations with its power to enforce the peace proven by war to drive Iraq from Kuwait, and thus enhanced to be used again. The stalemate of superpower Cold War had blocked that kind of concerted action for 40 years.

"When we are successful, and we will be, we have a real chance at this new world order," Bush said as he announced the first strikes against Iraq Wednesday night, "an order in which a credible United Nations can use its peacekeeping role to fulfill the promise and vision of the UN's founders."

Attained, that new order would be a triumph for Bush, gaining a goal he once said had been sought by a hundred generations in a thousand wars - a durable system for peace.

But in the buildup to the war now raging against Iraq, there were skeptics who saw costly turmoil looming beyond military victory. Preparing for the conflict launched Wednesday to drive Iraq from Kuwait, the administration was silent on what the United States might do after a war.

Bush's spokesman said last Monday that the administration was looking at longer term questions about the Middle East. "There have been a number of deliberations on those kinds of points by government authorities and the State Department and Defense Department, the White House and other agencies," said Marlin Fitzwater.

He would say no more at the time, and discussion of those matters has effectively been shelved for the duration.

But they were discussed in Congress, both before and after Bush was authorized to go to war. Among the areas of concern:

-Civil collapse in a conquered Iraq, creating circumstances in which Iran, Syria or both might seek to gain territory or dominance.

-Pressures for an overall Middle East settlement that might work to the disadvantage of Israel.

-A postwar reconstruction effort involving heavy U.S. costs.

-Arab enmity that could reach widely across the Muslim world.

-A new Middle East weapons race, unless the United States can lead the way to regional arms control.

The Middle East future is only part of the challenge Bush will face in the quest for a new world order. The old order seems to be rising in Soviet military moves against independence movements in Lithuania and the other Baltic states.

That points to trouble in the partnership that was vital to Bush's policy of a 28-nation coalition demanding that Iraq abide by UN demands to leave Kuwait.

After a swift meeting with Mikhail S. Gorbachev to display U.S.-Soviet solidarity against the Iraqi takeover, Bush told Congress on Sept. 11 that a new relationship with Moscow would provide the underpinning of a new order against aggression.

Now that relationship is shaken by the Soviet military crackdown that killed at least 14 people in Lithuania, the threat that it may spread to the other two independence-bent Baltic states, plus doubts about Gorbachev's role and hold on power.

The administration has told the Kremlin that Soviet actions in Lithuania put the new, cooperative superpower relationship at risk.

The Senate adopted a resolution on Wednesday urging Bush to withhold trade and economic benefits until the Soviet Union withdraws forces from the Baltic states and ends the threat to the elected governments of the states annexed under Josef Stalin a half century ago.

That dispute is hardly promising for a new order that would require lasting partnership among the superpowers.

It adds to the agenda of challenges that will last beyond the war. As the fighting began, Bush said he would bring American troops home as soon as possible when they finish their work.

Even so, the administration said before war began that there will have to be a more lasting, if undefined, U.S. role. "This clearly is an area where we're going to spend a lot of time and effort and energy in the years ahead," Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney told the Senate last month.

And Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., speaking before the Senate approved the war resolution last weekend, warned: "Even victory has a high price."

Jan. 10
El Paso Herald-Post on cancellation of A-12:
Defense Secretary Dick Cheney showed a rare combination of fiscal discipline and political courage ... when he canceled work on the Navy's A-12 stealth bomber.

Radical surgery in the defense budget is unavoidable. Cutting the A-12 was a good start. It was tagged to replace the aging A-6 now used on carriers. But from the start it's been plagued with design flaws and cost overruns which have escalated in the past year. In the end, the project could have cost $52 billion.

The cancellation comes as a blow to contractors General Dynamics and McDonnell Douglas. Like other contractors, they have benefited from an unwholesome symbiosis with the Pentagon, in which both the buyer and seller countenance waste and mismanagement - at taxpayer expense.

Was such an arrangement unavoidable during the Cold War, given the cost of a strong national defense? Perhaps. But Cheney's cancellation signals that the gravy train is pulling up.

The Houston Post on Gov.-elect Richards:

Gov.-elect Ann Richards, who takes office Tuesday, has the opportunity to restore level-headedness to Texas government by working harmoniously with the Legislature to solve the state's problems. If she does, she will be a marked contrast to her predecessor, Republican Bill Clements, who often was more an obstructionist than an effective player.

The Post urges Richards to pay more attention to meeting Texas' needs than did Clements and not take unrealistic stands against new taxes. Sensibly, Richards has not, in winning the governorship, threatened to veto new taxes - as Clements repeatedly did, only to be forced by circumstances to break his promises. But the governor-elect has offered the voters false hope. The Post believes, that a tax increase can be avoided this year.

... What is really needed is reform of the whole tax system to make it fairer, more attuned to the modern state economy, and more productive of revenue. Richards should get the Legislature to quickly reactivate the Select Committee on Tax Equity, as she proposes, and push the Legislature hard to tackle tax reform in a special session a year from now.

This should have been done two years ago, but Clements - in one of his worst pieces of obstructionism - discouraged such action. If Richards can bring it about, that could be her crowning accomplishment.

Jan. 13
Houston Chronicle on congressional vote for force in Persian Gulf:
It is now in Saddam Hussein's hands.

The choice between war and peace rests largely with the Iraqi dictator following Saturday's narrow votes in Congress authorizing President Bush to use force to remove Iraq's army of occupation from Kuwait after the Jan. 15 deadline imposed by United Nations resolution.

Congress acted rightly in giving the president authority to use force; in so doing, it also did itself proud. The debate leading up to the votes in both houses was sober, thoughtful, deeply personal, often wrenching. It was an accurate reflection of the soul-searching that has been going on in living rooms and across breakfast tables in every corner of the country for weeks and months now.

We have to believe there is still time for peace. ... It's not too much to suppose that the support Congress has provided the president could be the club to get the mule's attention - to awaken the Iraqi dictator to the hopelessness of his position. ... Saddam ignores the message - and the mandate - at his peril.

Babbling Brooks

By John Brooks

Every generation has had a war. For the teens and young adults of the 90's, The Day We Bombed Iraq will live in infamy just as have other days.

Throughout our history, each generation has had an armed conflict: The Revolutionary War, the War of 1812 (which went three years); the War with Mexico; the Civil War; the Spanish-American War; World War I; World War II; the Korean War (I refuse to call it a conflict, a conflict sounds like something you and your wife have); the Vietnam War, and now Whatever We End Up Calling This.

I was pleased to hear and see a confident President Bush assure us "this will not be another Vietnam." Yes, Mr. President, we don't want to fight anymore wars with one hand tied behind our backs.

There have been many lessons learned from and since the Vietnam War. Perhaps the most important is that, no matter how we feel about this war, we welcome back our veterans with open arms.

Many of us felt we didn't belong in Southeast Asia. Many of us took that out on the veterans of that war. Veterans of other conflicts had been welcomed back with open arms; veterans of Vietnam were spat upon, cast out like filth from a vacuum cleaner bag.

The pangs of guilt over how we reacted to those soldiers are still enormous. Perhaps that is why we have built a beautiful memorial, a long, black wall in Washington with the names of every serviceman who lost his life in Vietnam. Perhaps that is why many states have built memorials to their Vietnam veterans (some of those states have Vietnam memorials and don't have WWII memorials).

Many of us have mixed feelings about why we are in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq. Kuwait is only as big as Deaf Smith, Oldham, Castro and Parmer counties. Yes, it's bigger than Rhode Island. It's still small.

Why are we there, fighting to liberate some itty-bitty country? Is it democracy? No, Kuwait was definitely not a democracy before this war, and I'll bet it won't be afterward. Is it about oil? Probably more oil than anything else. Is it about anything else? Who knows.

But no matter what it is about, let us not forget that none of our servicemen and servicewomen asked to go over there. Many of them, I'm sure, saw those catchy ads on television and saw a free college education down the road. I'm sure few of them thought they'd be going halfway around the world. People who read and write from left to right are fighting with and against people who read and write from right to left, and I would bet none of them bargained for that.

There are a few, I'm sure, that joined because they are by-God-we're-right-Americans. I hope that you and I will honor all of them when they return home. We don't have to agree with the cause.

And, if you don't want to honor them, if you're ready to spit in their face and turn your back, I hear there is lots of cheap, cheap housing available in Vilnius, Lithuania.

HOLLY

The ion exclusion plant will take molasses gleaned during the existing sugar extraction process and, through a variety of processes, get more sugar from the molasses.

"We felt very confident we would be here, sugar beets are here for the long term, we have a good relationship with the community, and we have a good market for our by-products," Hill explained.

Hill also commended Dr. G.B. Thompson and his staff at the Texas A&M Experiment Station at Bushland for their ongoing research to improve beet yields and quality in the area. Holly and the TSBGA each contribute five cents a ton to research. That will amount to over $100,000 this year.

"I can't see anything but a great future for this area and Holly Sugar," Hill said.

Stan Bichsel, the head of research and development for Holly in Colorado Springs, reviewed the companies new efforts to improve production including the ion exclusion facility and beet pile ventilators that will likely cut down on the amount of sugar lost in beets when they are placed in outdoor piles waiting to be processed.

"If we put more sugar in the bag it's more dollars for all of us," Bichsel said. He also explained that the ion exclusion plant will reclaim 75 percent of the sugar in the molasses, the major by-product of the refining process. Currently, 22 percent of the production of beets is molasses, while 73.5 percent of the beet is converted to sugar. With the ion exclusion plant, the percentage jumps from 73.5 percent to 90 percent.

That equals 480,000 more bags of sugar a year produced at the Hereford plant.

"This is a giant step, and it makes for a stronger Holly Sugar that is able to dedicate more money to benefit growers," Bichsel said.

Bob Atwood, vice president of sales for Imperial Holly, said the company has now completely combined the sales and marketing efforts of the old Imperial Sugar, a cane refiner for 143 years in Sugarland, and Holly, a far-flung beet sugar empire.

"We have come together as partners to improve both our businesses," Atwood said. "It is absolutely essential to provide a quality product and quality service, and we are doing that."

The company sells sugar in everything from 1/10th-ounce packets to 190,000-lb. railcars. Much of the sugar produced in Hereford goes into 5- and 10-pound sacks: 40 percent of the locally-produced sugar is sold to grocery stores, a very high figure according to Atwood.

Dennis Printz, agricultural manager for Holly in Hereford, also recognized growers who produced the highest quality beets at each of the receiving stations in the area. Honored were Mark Urbanczyk, Charles Schlabs, Dan and Corky Nelson, Joe Carthel, Roddy Berend, Charles Hough, David Norton, Mark and Gregg Howard, Kevin Riley, Darrell Buckley, Kevin Urbanczyk, Rodney and Chad Straffuss, Duane Allred, Ricky Mitchell, J.C. Pohlmeier, Kenneth Sjogren and Larry Nelson.

Growers who produced very high yields were to be recognized at the TSBGA banquet Saturday night at the Bull Barn in Hereford. Also, the Hereford Brand was to recognize the "Ag Man of the Year" at Saturday's banquet.

Brand sports editor takes WTSU post

Sam Waller, sports editor of the Brand, has been named sports information director at West Texas State University in Canyon.

"My time in Hereford has been more than enjoyable," Waller said. "Having the opportunity to cover one of the most successful athletic programs in Texas will always be a special memory. But the chance to go back to school and work for a college athletic department is something I can't pass up."

"Probably the best thing about covering the Herd was being able to develop a close relationship with both coaches and students. That wouldn't be possible in a lot of cities and I'll be leaving behind many close friends."

Waller will be returning to WTSU where he was editor of the student newspaper, The Prairie, before coming to the Brand in May 1989, and plans to finish work on his degree.

"We hate to lose Sam, but we know that pursuing his degree is very important for him," said Brand Managing Editor John Brooks. "Sam has been a very valuable member of our staff and our community. Very few people know how many late nights and all nights that Sam has spent covering local sports of all sorts here at the Brand. This is not an easy job, and we appreciate Sam's efforts."

Waller will take over the SID position Monday, but will continue with the Brand on a part-time basis.

"We're glad that Sam will be with us for a while," Brooks said, "filling in when he can so we can cover local sports as well as possible. We remain solidly committed to covering all of our local sports, at all levels. We know that Sam's shoes will never be filled, and we appreciate the time and effort he has expended on our behalf."

WTSU announced in December it is dropping its football program because of financial difficulties, but will remain in NCAA Division II for all sports with soccer expected to be added for the 1991 season. Schools are required to field four teams in both men's and women's sports for Division II membership.

Other athletic teams at WTSU include women's volleyball as well as tennis and riflery for men and women.

The volleyball team claimed the 1990 national title and both men's and women's basketball teams hold national rankings.

Experience favors LA

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (AP) - Howie Long knows. Bob Golic doesn't. Neither do any of the Buffalo Bills.

Riki Ellison also knows about playing in the Super Bowl. So do Willie Gault and Max Montoya. They all wear the Silver and Black of the Los Angeles Raiders.

The guys in blue, the host Bills, have no experience with the circus that is Super Bowl week. But first, they've got to win Sunday's AFC Championship game.

"They have a number of players who have been a lot further than us," said Bills defensive end Bruce Smith, the NFL Defensive Player of the Year. "They have an advantage and the fact we made the playoffs the last two years does not make a difference."

"It's a known fact we've not been able to do it when it counted, and it counts now."

The Bills got this far in 1988, losing to the Cincinnati Bengals. The only other time they were as close was in 1966, when they lost to the Kansas City Chiefs.

"It isn't promised to us next year we will get this far," Smith said. "So we have to take care of it now."

The Raiders haven't been in the playoffs since 1985. Their last Super Bowl trip came in January 1984, when they beat the Washington Redskins for their third NFL title.

"You work from summer to winter to get to it," said Long, the star defensive lineman who was on the last Raiders championship team. "Then you get even more serious."

Golic played in two AFC championship games with the Cleveland Browns, losing both.

"Howie keeps reminding me of that fact," Golic said. "It is frustrating. It's devastating, as opposed to being on a team that knows it doesn't have a chance from the beginning. I don't want that to happen any more. It's happened too many times."

Ellison was with the San Francisco 49ers for three Super Bowls, playing in two. The linebacker came to the Raiders last May as a free agent after spending 1989 on injured reserve.

"The Super Bowl is the ultimate," he said. "There's no greater experience in your lifetime. You take it to your grave."

The Raiders probably will have to face Buffalo without running back Bo Jackson, whose hip injury is expected to sideline him Sunday. They also must deal with the elements and the Bills, who are 9-0 at home.

"They're coming in here to take away our shot," linebacker Darryl Talley said. "A lot of teams have come in here and not gotten it done."

"They're an excellent team. They wouldn't have gotten here if they weren't. But we're here, too, so we're in the same class."

The game is at Rich Stadium because the Bills went 13-3 in winning the AFC East, while West champion Los Angeles was 12-4. The difference: Buffalo's 38-24 home victory over the Raiders Oct. 7.

Hostetler adds dimension to NY

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - The San Francisco 49ers did a good job last year containing Randall Cunningham of the Philadelphia Eagles. They didn't do as well against Chris Miller of the Atlanta Falcons or John Elway of the Denver Broncos during the regular season.

Which makes Jeff Hostetler the unknown factor when the 49ers and New York Giants meet at Candlestick Park Sunday in the NFC championship game. A victory would put San Francisco a game away from becoming the first team to win three straight Super Bowls and five overall.

Hostetler replaced Phil Simms, who is out with a severely bruised left foot. Simms has the experience, Hostetler has far more mobility, having run six times for 43 yards last week in the 31-3 win over Chicago.

"He brings a different dimension," San Francisco coach George Seifert said. "You have to design your pass rush to contain him in the pocket."

Hostetler is 29 and in his seventh

NFL season, although he's only made five starts in those seven years.

A third-round draft choice in 1984, he was the second quarterback chosen behind Cincinnati Bengals' Boomer Esiason. That was after he had transferred from Penn State to West Virginia, when he was stuck behind Todd Blackledge at quarterback and balked at coach Joe Paterno's suggestion that he become a linebacker.

So he got stuck behind Simms and Jeff Rutledge before he had taken a snap. Then he caught a pass as an extra pass receiver and blocked a punt on special teams after he requested to play anywhere to get off the bench.

"If you look back at my whole career, nothing's come easy," Hostetler said. "I just believe if you work hard and continue to work hard and believe in yourself, good things happen. That's what keeps me going."

The Giants are 5-0 in games he's started, although last week's game against the Bears was his first shot under playoff pressure. In five games this season, including the playoffs, he's rushed 30 times for 179 yards, a 5.9-yard average.

New Jersey knocks off Celtics

By The Associated Press

Eleven was the number that put the Detroit Pistons' season back in gear and the New Jersey Nets' playoff hopes on hold.

On Friday night, the Pistons' failure to score in the final 3:05 ended their 11-game winning streak with a 103-102 loss at Phoenix, while the Nets snapped an 11-game losing skid with a surprising 111-106 victory at Boston.

The Nets hadn't won since Dec. 21 and saw their record drop to 10-25 before the upset over the Celtics, who have lost two straight at home after winning 18 in a row.

"We've played so well in this streak," New Jersey coach Bill Fitch said. "It's been the best basketball this team has played (in the two seasons) I've been here."

Boston (29-8) lost its third straight game and is 3-3 since Larry Bird was sidelined indefinitely with back problems.

"We'd love to have Larry Bird back," Kevin McHale said, "but we're a better team than we showed" against New Jersey.

Elsewhere, it was Utah 106, Cleveland 99 in overtime; Miami 107, New York 86; Golden State 141, Philadelphia 138 in overtime; Atlanta 114, Chicago 105; the Los Angeles Clippers 119, Dallas 112 in overtime; Charlotte 117, San Antonio 110; Milwaukee 125, Orlando 106; the Los Angeles Lakers 105, Seattle 96; and Portland 123, Washington 99.

Nets guard Mookie Blaylock matched his season-high of 26 points. Boston was led by Reggie Lewis with 31 points.

Suns 103, Pistons 102

Jeff Hornacek's two free throws for Phoenix with 1:57 left were the final points in the game against Detroit.

Tom Chambers and Kevin Johnson had 27 points apiece for the Suns, who won their sixth consecutive game.

Lakers 105, SuperSonics 96

Magic Johnson scored 24 of his 33 points in the second half as Los Angeles beat Seattle for the 13th straight time at the Forum.

Vlade Divac added 20 points and 14 rebounds for the Lakers, who have won six straight overall and ninth in a row at home.

Trail Blazers 123, Bullets 99

Cliff Robinson matched his career high with 22 points, 15 in the first half, as Portland clinched the West All-Star coaching berth for Rick Adelman by routing Washington.

Hawks 114, Bulls 105

Dominique Wilkins scored 17 of his 34 points in the third period as Atlanta snapped Chicago's seven-game winning streak.

Michael Jordan had 30 points for the Bulls, who lost for only the third time in 18 games.

Warriors 141, 76ers 138, OT

Tim Hardaway scored a career-high 40 points, Mitch Richmond added 35 and Chris Mullin had eight of his 29 in overtime for Golden State at Philadelphia.

Hersey Hawkins had 30 points for Philadelphia.

Heat 107, Knicks 86

Sherman Douglas had 20 points and 11 assists, and Miami opened a 20-point lead before holding off a late New York rally.

Hornets 117, Spurs 110

Rex Chapman had 35 points and Johnny Newman scored 11 of his 30 in the final 3:36 as Charlotte stunned San Antonio.

The Spurs, now 15-3 at home, were led by David Robinson with 26 points and 16 rebounds.

Clippers 119, Mavericks 112, OT

Los Angeles handed Dallas its fifth consecutive loss as Benoit Benjamin scored 27 points and Danny Manning had eight of his 25 in overtime.

James Donaldson and Rolando Blackman scored 25 points each for the Mavericks.

YOUR EYES

POST-CATARACT CORRECTION

When the clear lens of the eye becomes clouded over, quite common as we grow older, it must be removed. After the procedure, another lens must replace it in order that the patient see clearly. The eye doctor will recommend the appropriate type of lens for the needs of the particular patient. The choices are:

- Glasses: These can take over the work of the missing lens. They enlarge the image that one sees, but restrict side vision.
- Contact Lens: Worn in the affected eye, it replaces the lens that was removed. Soft lenses are usually prescribed, except where hard lenses would be more effective. Extended-wear lenses offer certain conveniences.
- Lens Implants: An intraocular lens, placed in the eye during surgery, permanently replaces the lens which was removed.

Even when contacts or implants are used, it's likely that additional correction will be needed in the form of eyeglasses to provide sharp post-cataract vision.

IRAQ T-72 Tank

The Soviet-built T-72 is the Iraqi army's best armored fighting vehicle, but its technology is 20 years old.

The tank is armed with a 125mm smooth-bore cannon and can carry 18 armor-piercing rounds and 21 high-explosive anti-personnel shells. It also has one 7.62mm machine gun 152mm Self-Propelled Gun

Mounted on a tracked vehicle, the 152mm artillery piece can fire up to four high-explosive or chemical shells a minute.

The conventional round has a maximum range of 26,256 yards, but a rocket-assisted shell can increase the range to 40,748 yards.

Anti-Aircraft Missiles

The Iraqis have three missiles to defend against air attacks.

The tractor-mounted SA-3 "Goa" missile has a range of up to 18 miles and carries a 132-pound warhead.

The SA-6, the supersonic "Gainful," can attack planes at high altitude up to 37 miles away and can hit targets at low altitude at half that range. It carries a 176-pound warhead.

The SA-7, a hand-held missile known as "Grail," has a range of up to 6.25 miles. The 5.5-pound warhead is lethal only to small planes.

MiG-29 "Fulcrum" Fighter

The MiG-29 is an all-weather fighter that also can be used to attack ground targets.

The Fulcrum is highly maneuverable and is thought to be comparable with top U.S. fighters. As a fighter, the MiG-29 is armed with six medium-range, radar-guided air-to-air missiles or close-range air-to-air missiles.

For ground attacks, it can carry bombs, rockets and a 30mm cannon. Al Hussein Ballistic Missile

The Al Hussein, an Iraqi version of the Soviets' Scud B intermediate-range ballistic missile, can carry high-explosive fragmentation warheads up to 400 miles and is considered accurate within a half-mile of its target.

It also is capable of delivering a chemical warhead.

Biological and Chemical Weapons

Iraq is believed to have been working on biological weapons based on airborne strains of anthrax-N, botulism, plague and cholera.

Chemical weapons may include mustard gas, phosgene gas, tricothecene toxin and nerve agents. Such weapons were used by Iraq in 1982-1984 against Iran and were delivered mainly by bombs, but they also can be delivered by missiles and artillery shells and as an aerosol spray from planes.

U.S. Air Power In the Gulf Region

An air attack is expected to be the key to any U.S.-led offensive because it would clear the way for allied ground forces. Here is a brief look at some of the different functions of aircraft that may be used in the Persian Gulf.

BOMBING

At the outset of an attack, bombers would strike deep into Iraq. The supersonic F-111F features a variable-sweep "swing wing." The plane can operate from treetop level to altitudes of 60,000 feet. It was used in the 1986 bombing raid on Libya.

F-111F
Wingspan:	70 ft.
Length:	73 ft. 6 in.
Maximum speed:	1,320 mph
Range:	2,925 miles

U.S. bombers in the Gulf include: F-111F, F-117A stealth fighter-bomber, B-52G, F-15E, A-6

AIR SUPERIORITY

The F-15 is a single-seat, long-range air-combat fighter. Each F-15 C Eagle interceptor is armed with eight air-to-air missiles, including four AIM-7F Sparrows which can be fired at up to 30 miles' range.

F-15 C/D Eagle
Wing span:	42 ft. 9 3/4 in.
Length overall:	63 ft. 9 in.
Maximum speed:	921 mph
Range:	2,878 miles

U.S. air-superiority fighters in the Gulf include: F-15B/C, F-14

TANK ATTACK/TROOP SUPPORT

The A-10A is designed to operate from short unpaved runways, withstand prolonged exposure to gunfire from the ground and hit tanks with its powerful Avenger 30mm cannon and 16,000 pounds of ordnance.

A-10A Thunderbolt II
Wingspan:	57 ft. 6 in.
Length:	53 ft. 4 in.
Maximum speed:	423 mph
Range:	1,240 miles

U.S. attack and dual-role aircraft in the Gulf include: A-10, V-22 Osprey, F-117A stealth fighter-bomber, F/A-18, F-16C/D, A-7E, F-4G Wild Weasel

Hereford shows its support

Local residents and businesses have been displaying yellow ribbons to show support for the servicemen who are stationed in the Persian Gulf. In conjunction with the project, members of the Hereford Support Group, sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross, will be responsible for flying the American flag at Mother's Park. Raising the flag, which was donated by Jimmy Bell with West Texas Rural Telephone, are, from left, Linda Maeder, Pablo Villareal, Lupe Chavez, Bell and Tom Harguess. Abundant Life

BY BOB WEAR

The living experience will eventually come to a close, but until it does, we must not give up. Of course, we find many of the living experiences very difficult but, with this, there are many blessings, too. Besides this, we human beings have great possibilities and potentialities which can be developed so that they better equip us for coping successfully with life. We must never stop trying and this should involve our best efforts. We should move along in life with the attitude, "we won't give up."

We cannot do everything, but we can do the things which become essential to our well-being. We can also continue to learn and to improve, and even become able to do things which once seemed impossible. Too many folk seem to give up, they seem to stop trying. Of course, there will be times of great discouragement and we may often feel like giving up but we should let these be times of challenge rather than stumbling blocks. There will be some things that we must accept and we should do so as graciously as possible, but never give up.

We must persevere. This means that we must continue to try, learning from our mistakes, being uplifted by our successes, and reaching out to what lies ahead. "Perseverance gives power to weakness, and opens to poverty the world's wealth. It spreads fertility over the barren landscape and bids the choicest fruits and flowers spring up and flourish in the desert abode of thorns and briers." -S.G. Goodrich.

Much is being done today that is designed to kill the spirit of mankind. If not kill it, then to corrupt it so that it no longer moves in constructive and wholesome channels of human action.

We human beings are the custodians of an unconquerable spirit which, if nourished and cherished, will never give up.

Creativity course planned

The department of art, communication and theater at West Texas State University has combined subjects and talents and will offer a special spring semester course titled "The Art of Creativity."

Participants meet Tuesday evenings from 7-9:40 p.m. beginning Jan. 22 and will be introduced to a new and creative subject each session. The course will be taught by a rotation of various faculty members and guest instructors. Specific topics to be discussed include inventions; creativity after retirement; art education/history; graphic design; three-dimensional art; speech communication; mass communication (print and broadcast); acting and directing; playwriting; costuming and makeup; scene design; and light design.

The for-credit course, ART 491 or ART 5491, was introduced last spring and was met with an overwhelming response. According to Vartabedian, interest in this year's class has more than tripled.

Night-class registration is scheduled from 6-7 p.m. Jan. 17 and Jan. 21-23. Late registration ends at 5 p.m. Jan. 25.

For more information about "The Art of Creativity" course, call the department of art, communication and theater at 656-2799.

BURGLARS AT WORK

HAGERSTOWN, Md. (AP) - Burglars are busier than ever these days.

Government statistics show that three out of four American homes will be burglarized one or more times during a 20 year period.

Households in urban and suburban areas run the highest risk of break-ins, according to Dynamark Security Centers, with rural homes a close second.

Most burglaries, 53 percent, occur at night, says Dynamark, and law enforcement agencies solve only 14 percent of the crimes annually.

Fight cost of glaucoma therapy

Americans are concerned with prescription costs and those on low and fixed incomes often feel trapped. Senior citizens suffer more than any other group from the high and rising costs of healthcare. Those on long-term therapy and multiple medications may even try to cut costs by not taking medications as often as prescribed to postpone the next prescription purchase.

In the case of glaucoma, where more than half the patients are over the age of 65, restricting medication use because of cost is a real concern. Since eye drops must be used daily to halt the decrease in vision, patients who reduce usage because of cost of overlooking the purpose of the prescription. At present there is no known cure for this disease, and, left untreated, glaucoma can lead to blindness.

Now, however, there are new lower-cost alternatives for glaucoma treatment. The Medical Letter, a well-respected medical publication, recently stated that a new prescription beta blocker called OptiPranolol, can provide patients with as much as 46 percent savings over previously available glaucoma medications.

Now doctors have another alternative to help fight healthcare therapy costs, which is especially important to patients on multiple medications and long-term therapy. So see you ophthalmologist, and don't be among those who risk blindness from undiagnosed or untreated glaucoma.

CONSIDERING THE DISABLED

HOUSTON (AP) - Under the newly-enacted Americans with Disabilities Act, companies must consider the disabled when making any decisions concerning office design and furniture purchase, says Christine H. Neldon, president of the International Facility Management Association in Houston.

Incorporating barrier-free designs into buildings will not only help the disabled, she says, but will also help attract and retain skilled workers. Barrier-free design will help reduce work absences caused by temporary physical impairments, she adds.

Neldon says the Internal Revenue Service offers a business incentive tax that allows business operators to deduct some expenses incurred for making a facility more accessible to the handicapped and elderly.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When my mother was 18, she became pregnant and married my father. They stayed together four years and were divorced. Two years later, when I was six, Mom met a man she liked and he moved in with us. I thought he was wonderful until he began to abuse me sexually. I knew what he was doing was wrong because he gave me candy and little gifts for keeping "our special secret."

The molesting continued for eight years. When I was 14, I felt secure enough to tell my mother. When she accused me of lying, I insisted she confront him in my presence. Even though he admitted everything, she stayed with him. From then on Mom was very cold to me, as if I were the one who caused the problem. I moved out the day I turned 16.

I am 20 now and find it difficult to be around my mother. I feel that she abandoned me to save her marriage. Her husband will not allow my name to be spoken in their home. I cannot telephone her for fear that awful man will answer. He treats her like dirt but she refuses to leave him.

Ann, isn't it wrong for my mother to stay married to this animal after what he did to me? Please respond in print. I want several people to read this. -Mary in Michigan

DEAR MARY: I can understand your anger and frustration. I know, too, that it is extremely difficult to comprehend why a woman would stay with a man who abused her child and treats her so shabbily.

Unfortunately, your mother probably has a pathological fear of being alone. She is willing to tolerate anything, rather than be on her own. Sad to say, unless she gets professional help she is doomed to spend the rest of her life in that hellish relationship. Please try to understand that it is not a matter of right or wrong, it's the tragedy of a woman who is an emotional cripple.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your recent column answering the question, "What happens to the drugs after a bust?" was excellent.

In the past six years, we have confiscated over $1.5 billion from drug traffickers and other criminals. Over 35,000 parcels of real and personal property worth more than $1.3 billion have been seized and are being held pending forfeiture.

It is only fair that these assets be re-invested in law enforcement. We have shared over $560 million with state and local police agencies, while another $491 million is being used to build prison cells. Another $268 million has helped finance the anti-drug operations of the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the U.S. Marshals Service and other federal agencies.

We are proud of our forfeiture program. It cripples drug syndicates and saves taxpayers hundreds of millions of dollars a year by supplementing law enforcement budgets out of the pockets of criminals. Thanks for helping get this message out. -Dick Thornburgh, attorney general, Washington, D.C.

DEAR ATTORNEY GENERAL: The facts and figures cited in your letter were not only informative but very reassuring. Thank you for writing.

Jan 29. deadline to signup for Fiestas Patrias contest

The Hereford Fiestas Patrias Committee is now looking for queen candidates for the upcoming 1991 celebration. Young Hispanic women from area communities, ages 15 to 22, are encouraged to participate as contestants for this historic celebration.

The queen contest is sponsored annually as a means of educating and inspiring the contestants, the Mexican-American people, and all of the Panhandle's varied cultures as to the real meaning of the Fiestas Patrias tradition, as well as the value and proud heritage of the Mexican-American culture that exists in the United States of America.

This contest educates the young women who participate in it by engaging them in a fundraising project to raise scholarship money, thereby building up their confidence in their own skills and talents. The education reaches a deeper level as contestants are required to explore a certain aspect of the rich Mexican-American culture. At the conclusion of the contest, the contestants become the story-tellers of the Hispanic people.

Scholarships are awarded to the four highest-ranking finalists. The queen's scholarship has been increased this year to $1,000, with the next three places receiving $700, $400 and $200, respectively.

Young women interested in participating as candidates may receive more information by calling Virginia Artho at 364-5429.

Deadline to signup for the contest is Tuesday, Jan. 29.

Donated books examined

Deaf Smith County Librarian Rebecca Walls, at left, Genealogical Society President Mildred Sheffy, and the society's reporter Jeanette Ramey check newly donated books to the library. Members of the Genealogical Society hope to acquire more space for the genealogy collection in the library.

Workshop planned Monday

The public is invited to attend a workshop sponsored by members of the Deaf Smith County Genealogy Society. The event, which will feature Sylvia Murray of Amarillo, will be held from 7:30-9 p.m. Monday at the Deaf Smith County Library.

Murray, an accredited genealogist will speak on "How To Research in the Carolinas." All interested individuals are urged to attend. To help defray the cost of handouts and Murray's expenses, a $2 donation will be accepted.

The speaker has taught genealogy for 17 years on the college level, 11 of those at Amarillo College. She is the director of LDS libraries in Amarillo, Borger and Tucumcari, N.M. She also writes genealogy columns for area papers and conducts workshops and seminars throughout the Texas Panhandle. Murray is a well-known problem solver with a great sense of humor making her both instructional and entertaining.

Hints from Heloise

Q. Recently I had a fire in my home which left my clothing smelling of smoke. Can you tell me how to remove the odor from them?

Thank you for your cooperation. — Gloria Straughter, Youngstown, Ohio

A. According to our friends at the International Fabricare Institute, you will be able to get the odor out of most of your clothing with repeated washing.

Certain fabrics, however, are going to be more trouble. For example, a wool coat if sent to the dry cleaners is going to come back looking and smelling better, but the first time it gets wet the smoke odor usually comes back.

The only way to completely get rid of the smoke smell in difficult fabrics is to send the clothes to a dry cleaner who uses an ozone generator.

Since not all dry cleaners have this type of special equipment, ask to be referred to one who does. Good luck. — Heloise

SILVER BRACELET

Q. My daughter's beautiful sterling silver bracelet is tarnished. Do you have any suggestions on how I clean it without ruining the finish? — Roseanne Laurice, Bloomfield, N.J.

A. Wash the bracelet often with mild soap and water and clean all crevices with a soft toothbrush. Use a soft cloth to polish it to a high luster.

In most supermarkets there are many good silver polishes that will get rid of tarnish. Using chemical dips may ruin the finish if used improperly and too frequently. — Heloise

HARD TO HOLD

Dear Heloise: Because of arthritis, I had trouble holding a pen to write. My grandson came up with the idea of putting a ballpoint pen through a small rubber ball. The ball fits easily in my hand and has made writing a lot easier. — John W. Merrillville, Ind.

Abortion is the leading cause of death in Texas

Each day in Texas 17 people die in accidents, 22 die from strokes, 69 die from cancer, and 110 die from heart disease. But each and every day in our state... 226 unborn babies are killed by abortion.

Between the Covers

BY REBECCA WALLS

This week there are several books by little known authors that I think you might enjoy. Falconridge by Jennifer Wilde is the story of young Lauren Moore who is left penniless upon the death of her mother. She arrives at Falconridge, the residence of her only living relative, and must count on their charity for her survival.

It isn't long before Lauren is caught up in the strange happenings; locked rooms, mysterious footsteps in the night, and unexplained disappearances. Norman, the darkly handsome cousin, seems to be the evil force behind it all.

"Something was wrong. It was silent, and the silence was terrifying. I whirled around. He was leaning in the doorway, his thumb hooked in his belt... I stepped back, and the boards creaked. The water behind me slapped loudly against the wood. 'Two more steps back,' he said quietly 'and you would be in the water. It would carry you out to sea. No one would ever know what happened to you.'"

Norman had wanted to be rid of Lauren ever since she had arrived. Only after a long, lovely night and a terrifying close escape from death does Lauren begin to unravel the secrets of Falconridge.

In the Blue Light of African Dreams by Paul Watkins take the reader to a sleepy outpost in the Moroccan desert. Charlie Halifax, a highly decorated American pilot who flew for the French during WWI, was banished to Africa after trying to desert. He is haunted by the memories of a plane engulfed in flames, a long plunge toward a black lake and a face, his own, burned beyond recognition.

Now in 1926 Halifax is once again flying for the French in their war with Arab tribesmen. All that keeps him going is his love for flight. Then Halifax learns of the Orteig Prize to be given to the first man to fly between Paris and New York. Along with his mechanic Ivan, a former Russian cavalry officer, Halifax begins to plan his escape from Africa and attempts to win the prize. This is his chance to return home with honor.

William Wooding is the unlikely hero of the timely hilarious and surprisingly gripping novel Tango by Alan Judd. Thirty-five, overweight, sedate Englishman, bored with his life, wife and job, Wooding finds himself transferred to South America to run a moribund bookshop and papermill. His life seems to settle in the same old rut until he sees and falls in love with Teresa, a beautiful prostitute.

Teresa just happens to be the favorite of the newly elected South American country. At William's first meeting with Teresa, the president suddenly appears and recognizes William as an old schoolmate from England. The only thing William remembers about President Calvaros is that he does not like him.

This chance meeting is witnessed and later William is approached by a mysterious man named Box. Box insists on drafting William into the British Special Information Services. Despite his protestations that he doesn't really know the president William finds himself involved in Mr. Box's plans for a coup. The story becomes more complicated when William's wife becomes involved with the CIA, and Teresa becomes involved on William's behalf. The unexpected climax is highly satisfying.

Betty Crocker's Cooking Tips

Q. Does margarine or butter substitute for shortening in pie crust recipes? J.D., Porterville, CA

A. We don't recommend this substitution. Both butter and margarine have added water. The added water replaces fat and fat is what makes the crust tender.

Q. What causes the top of my fruitcake to be crusty and crumble. S.M., Jackson, MI

A. If a recipe has a high proportion of sugar to flour, the excess sugar may separate and rise to the top, leaving a crystalline layer. Fruitcake may become crumbly if it's baked in unlined pans or in too hot an oven. We recommend lining pans with aluminum foil and baking in a 300 degree oven. Finally, a too fresh fruitcake is more likely to crumble.

The lost art of ironing

When synthetic fabrics became all the rage, permanent press clothing made it very easy for us to look our best. With the help of spray starch or sizing, only an occasional touch-up with the old iron made our clothes look as good as new.

Sizing takes out the wrinkles and restores the newness that washing depletes from synthetic fabrics and cotton blends. Spray starch not only keeps fabrics looking crisp and smooth, but prolongs the life of clothes by adding protection from wear and dirt. Both products offer convenience and make touch-up ironing a breeze.

But what about fabrics that are not permanent press? Natural fabrics such as cotton are back in vogue, and touch-up ironing is no longer enough. We now discover that we never learned the fine art of ironing a cotton shirt. Don't despair.

If it has been some time since you purchased an iron, you may want to investigate some of the new lightweight models with special features available. One actually shuts itself off if you forget, which is a nice safety feature.

Before you begin ironing, make sure your ironing board is adjusted to a comfortable height and the cover is well padded and clean. Turn on your favorite radio station, and you are ready.

To get that cotton shirt looking its very best, follow these easy steps:

-Spray starch entire collar and cuffs and iron, smoothing out puckers as you iron.

-Use spray starch for sleeves and shirt body. Lay sleeve flat on ironing board along bottom of sleeve seam. Spray entire sleeve evenly and iron. Do not over spray. Too much starch can cause scorching or flaking.

-Place shoulder portion or yoke of shirt over the narrow end of the ironing board, spray and iron.

-Again use starch for placket (button area of shirt). Smooth out puckers as you iron, being careful not to iron over buttons.

-To iron the body of the shirt, place one side of front portion on the ironing board. Spray and iron. Move shirt away from you to next section to be sprayed and ironed. Repeat until shirt is completely ironed.

-Place on hanger, inspect your work and touch up any missed spots. Wear your shirt with confidence and pride because you know you will look your best and enjoy the comfort of smooth, cool natural cotton.

Willson Lecture Series set Feb. 12

The 43rd Annual Willson Lecture Series, featuring noted psychologist and author Dr. Robert E. Hemfelt, will be presented Tuesday, Feb. 12, on the West Texas State University campus.

Hemfelt, a licensed staff psychologist with the Mirth-Meier Clinic in Richardson, specializes in the treatment of codependency addictions and adult-children abuse issues. He has co-authored five best selling books, Love Hunger: Recovery From Food Addictions, Kids Who Carry Our Pain, Breaking the Cycle of Codependency for the Next Generation, No Language But A Cry: Recovery For Adult Children of Alcoholism and Other Abuses and We Are Driven: The Compulsive Behavior America Applauds.

Hemfelt will present four lectures on the WTSU campus beginning at 11 a.m. in Room 101 of the Classroom Center with "Love is a Choice," a discussion of the 10-stage recovery process for those whose happiness depends on people, behavior and things. All lectures are free and open to the public. Dinner will be served at the 5:45 p.m. program at a cost of $8 per person.

The Willson Lecture Series is sponsored by West Texas State University and is made possible by gifts from Mrs. J.M. Willson and the late J.M. Willson of Floydada. The series is presented annually by lecturers selected on the basis of ethical ideals, human experience and scholarship.

Bernsen trades ritzy lifestyle to prosecute KKK members

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Corbin Bernsen took a break from playing divorce lawyer Arnie Becker on "L.A. Law" for a movie role as a lawyer of a different stripe.

He stars in "A Human Tragedy - The Morris Dees Story," based on the life of the Alabama civil-rights attorney who took on the Ku Klux Klan. NBC will televise it on Monday, Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

"The biggest difference is that Arnie is motivated by money and those rewards, whereas Morris is driven more by principle and, I really believe, a true desire to help the underprivileged," Bernsen says.

"Still, they do have some similarities. Both are very charming men. When a woman comes around they both light up. Morris is very Southern and Arnie is very Californian, but they both like attention."

The movie relates how Dees, representing the mother of a young black man who was lynched, took the KKK to court to hold it accountable for teaching violence. Dees and his daughter, Ellie, became targets for the Klan.

"The subplot is his relationship with his daughter," Bernsen says. "His daughter can't understand why he lives with these constant threats of death when he has the money to pursue other avenues."

The story is set in 1981, but earlier Dees had established a mail-order business (which he later sold) and handled direct mail for George McGovern's campaign for the presidency in 1972. He later established the Southern Poverty Law Center.

Bernsen, now in his fifth year in "L.A. Law," says he wasn't just looking for something to do when he took the role of Morris Dees.

"I'm slowly moving toward an area of trying to put something back into life," he says. "I'm finding human rights to be an area that interests me."

"Other people are working for the environment, but I believe until human beings respect one another I have a pessimistic view about the environment. I don't think we can protect a tree if we can't protect each other."

"I also approached this movie from a business level. I think after 'L.A. Law,' if I want to do feature films, people need to see a growth in my career. On 'L.A. Law' I'm basically the comic relief."

The focus on Arnie Becker this year is more on his personal life. Becker is now married to Corinne, played by Jennifer Hetrick.

"We've already established that he's a rat and a womanizer," Bernsen says. "Now we really get to investigate his being and find out why he's the way he is. Later, we'll see him take what he's learned in his personal life and apply it to his career. We'll see how it's affected his view of the law and whether he's still a steamroller who cares only about winning."

"I could have turned him into a caricature of a rat. Instead, we decided to peel back the skin and see what's inside."

Bernsen was interviewed in his office at Paramount Studios, where he has a deal to develop feature movies. He's had some career discussions with his father, Harry Bernsen, a producer and former agent. His mother, Jeanne Cooper, is on "The Young and the Restless."

"I have to demonstrate an ability for dramatic roles," Bernsen says. "People tell me I should do the Cary Grant stuff. With all due respect to Cary Grant, that doesn't fly today."

"Mel Gibson and Harrison Ford proved themselves in dramatic roles before they tried the other. I'm looking for a career where I can go from 'Witness' to 'Indiana Jones.' The Morris Dees movie will help me in this goal."

"My father and I are working on a script that was originally written in 1972 for Steve McQueen and Ali MacGraw. I played a small part in a film called 'Fatal Inheritance' he (Bernsen's father) produced in Ireland. I'm developing theatrical films but I wouldn't mind doing more TV after 'L.A. Law.' I'd love to see more miniseries."

Bernsen also has a role in "Shattered," which stars Tom Berenger, Greta Scacchi, Bob Hoskins and Joan Whalen Kilmer.

In June he and his wife, Amanda Pays, who stars in the CBS series "The Flash," will be seen in the movie "Dead on the Money" for Turner Network Television.

Bernsen describes it as a suspenseful black comedy.

"This will be my first time with Amanda, and quite frankly it wasn't something I was thrilled to do," he says. "She knows all my magic and tricks. I enjoy acting best when it's my magic, my stuff. I want that new mystery. It's hard to look into my wife's eyes and lie."

"She knows you're not real. You really have to concentrate. I really like acting to be my private time. When I finish my scene I don't want to talk about who's coming over for dinner Saturday."

"Not that I didn't enjoy working with her. We had a blast."

Cotton supply dwindling

WASHINGTON (AP) - If the dwindling U.S. cotton supply was a new shirt, it would be short-sleeved, tight around the middle and too small in the collar.

Last year's harvest is supposed to take care of 1990-91 marketing needs until the new season begins Aug. 1. The Agriculture Department says it'll be a tight squeeze.

The latest supply and demand projections show that about 2.5 million bales of cotton will be left in the U.S. inventory by Aug. 1, down from 3 million bales last year and more than 7 million on Aug. 1, 1989.

Production from the 1990 crop is at 15.6 million bales, a 28 percent increase from 1989 and the largest cotton harvest since 1981.

Rising demand the last couple of years have pulled down the cotton inventory. Total use was about 13.9 million bales in 1988-89 but jumped to more than 16.4 million in 1989-90 as domestic mills and foreign buyers stepped up demands.

This season's use will be about the same at around 16.2 million bales, according to USDA economists.

In any case, the year-end cotton carryover now projected at 2.5 million bales will be the smallest in 10 years and equal to less than 16 percent of the total amount needed during the year.

The farm price of cotton has reflected the tight supply and general outlook. In mid-December, upland cotton averaged 67.3 cents per pound, up from 61.9 cents a year earlier.

A report this week showed the global situation in a similar light - a "close balance" between world production and use.

Overall, the world output is estimated at 86.9 million bales, up 9 percent from 1989-90. Total use is projected at 86.7 million bales, down only slightly from last year's record of 87.2 million.

China is the largest producer at 19.3 million bales, followed by the United States, with its output of 15.6 million bales; the Soviet Union, 12.4 million bales; and Pakistan, 7.03 million.

Total U.S. consumption of cotton - projected at 16.2 million bales this year - will include about 8.4 million bales for domestic mills, down slightly from 1989-90, and 7.8 million bales as exports, a slight increase.

Stock show meeting scheduled

A stock show travel meeting for all Deaf Smith County 4-H'ers has been scheduled for 7 p.m. Tuesday in the concession stand area of the Bull Barn.

Wade Shackelford, assistant county extension agent, urged all persons entering the Fort Worth, El Paso and San Angelo livestock shows to attend and bring at least one parent.

Joshua C. Stoddard of Worcester, Mass., received a patent in 1855 for the first calliope.

Sarpalius, farm experts discuss 1990 farm bill

U.S. Rep. Bill Sarpalius and a host of farm experts will discuss the impact of the 1990 farm bill at the 18th annual Texas Corn Growers Association meeting Tuesday at 9:30 a.m. at the Expo Building in Dimmitt.

Sarpalius (D-Amarillo), a member of the House Agriculture Committee, will be the keynote speaker. He voted against the final version of the 1990 farm bill because it was unfair to area agriculture. He is expected to address the farm bill and other federally-related topics.

Also speaking will be David Senter, executive director of the American Agriculture Movement; John Ford of Washington, D.C., who will discuss agriculture policy and the 1990 farm bill; Mark Ritchie, who will address the General Agreement or Trade and Tariffs (GATT); Weldon Davis, chairman of the Texas Corn Producers Board, and Carl King, president of the Texas Corn Growers Association.

After a lunch prepared by members of Women Involved in Farm Economics (WIFE), speakers will include Pat Bagley, WIFE president; Lois Wales, who will report on ethanol research and development; and entomologists Dr. Pat Morrison and Dr. Bob Glodt.

"If you grow corn in Texas or have an interest in corn production, this meeting should certainly be at the top of your priority list," said King.

USDA searching for research scientists

WASHINGTON (AP) - Wanted: 100 scientists who are beginning their research careers to work for the Agriculture Department. Salaries negotiable, but in the range of $31,116 to $37,294 per year.

The job offering, an annual quest by USDA to gain help with major research projects, calls for applicants to have doctorates and less than four years of postdoctoral experience. The appointments as research associates will be for as long as two years.

R. Dean Plowman, administrator of the department's Agricultural Research Service, said Wednesday that the scientists will work on various projects, including food safety, global change, biological control of crops pests, and genetic engineering of plants.

The agency's program, in its 11th year, costs about $4.5 million annually.

"We have seen some significant developments emerge from this program, including a technique to diagnose trichinosis in swine, a method of estimating the probability of rainfall, and ways to control toxin-producing fungi when crops germinate," Plowman said.

Applications are being accepted now, he said. Each associate will work on one of 100 projects selected from among 445 proposals submitted by agency scientists.

Plowman said application forms and descriptions of positions are available from: Nancy L. Bakes, Personnel Division, USDA-ARS, 6305 Ivy Lane, Room 139, Greenbelt, Md. 20770. Telephone 301-344-2797.

US milk production increases

WASHINGTON (AP) - Milk production last year was estimated by the Agriculture Department at a record 148.6 billion pounds, up 3 percent from 1989.

The department's Agricultural Statistics Board said Wednesday that production in December in the 21 top dairy states was 10.5 billion pounds, a 4 percent increase from a year earlier.

If production in the remaining 29 states not included in the monthly survey followed the same pattern, total U.S. milk output last month would be about 12.4 billion pounds.

Thus, the report said, the annual production was about 148.6 billion pounds, compared with less than 144.3 billion in 1989. The previous high was 145.2 billion pounds in 1988.

Department economists have projected a further increase of 1 percent to 2 percent in milk output this year.

Gregg Rainwater feels duty with 'Young Riders' role

Actor brings sensitivity to role as native American

By Mary Ann Townsend

Gregg Rainwater is as in tune with nature as his character Buck Cross on ABC's The Young Riders.

Before moving to Tucson last year for the show, Rainwater enjoyed seeking out quiet, natural environments in and around L.A. They say the grass is always greener on the other side of the fence, and that's the case with Rainwater. Now that he's in the serenity of the desert around Tucson, he has a new pastime.

"Right now I'm trying to understand this computer 'thang,'" he said, discussing the new computer equipment he had just bought. "I understand kindergartners are learning computers these days, and here I am totally computer illiterate."

But the Young Rider does have several other passions: his Humane Society adoptee, a chow/malamute or husky mix named k.d. (after k.d. lang), and involvement in the Earth Communications Organization. E.C.O. consists of members of the media who try to get ecological messages across through their work. An example he gave of how the group works is the episode of Murphy Brown in which the F.Y.I. staff begins recycling.

One effort he made last year was to use china plates on the set of The Young Riders instead of the styrofoam plates provided by the caterer. Fellow cast members once thought him strange, he said, but this year the caterer offers a choice, and many cast members are selecting china.

"What this group is trying to do is to sort of weave environmental messages into the fabric of peoples' psyche through the media, through print," he explained.

The young actor takes that sensitivity about the world into his role as mixed-breed Indian Buck Cross on ABC's The Young Riders. Buck is the product of a Kiowa Indian mother and a white trapper father. He understands both worlds, but doesn't quite fit into either.

"I like his coming from both sides — the white part and the Indian part. He has a wider perspective than a lot of the other riders have. He's had to; he's seen both sides.... He's actually more on the stabilizing side of the characters," Rainwater said.

Rainwater in real life is part Indian. The grandson of a Cherokee and Osage Indian, Rainwater believes he has extra responsibility to provide a positive role model through the character. His fan mail seems to suggest he is succeeding.

"It definitely will give you a boost when you read something about how somebody thinks differently because of a character you portray. People are seeing Buck and saying, 'He's a great guy and I just met another Indian guy who's just like Buck' or 'I never talked to him in school and now I just find out he's a really nice person.' Things like that are great," the actor said.

The series has been noted for its authentic depiction of the Old West with an Emmy for costuming and an American Western Heritage Award.

Female fans of Rainwater's may be interested in knowing that, at present, he is not romantically involved. He's still looking for a woman who's more earthy than glamorous. "I've met many of them, but not her. That will come. Whatever will be will be," he said in an uncomfortable pause that lightened up with, "Right now I have a dog."

A white southern lawyer takes on the Klan in the true-life drama A Season for Justice: The Morris Dees Story, Monday on NBC. Corbin Bernsen plays the title role.

True story marks Day

Arnie Becker gets a conscience

By Christy Bergslien

In the spring of 1981, a young black man named Michael Donald was murdered in Mobile, Ala., and hung from a tree. On behalf of Donald's mother, attorney Morris Dees, founder of the Southern Poverty Law Center, filed a civil suit against the United Klans of America and won. The landmark case proved the killers carried out a policy advocated by the Klan, and therefore, the Klan itself was responsible.

This is the compelling story behind NBC's A Season for Justice: The Morris Dees Story, broadcasting Monday, Jan. 21, on the birthday of Martin Luther King Jr. Actor Corbin Bernsen, well known for his role as Arnie Becker on L.A. Law, will play a more serious attorney when he depicts the courageous Alabama lawyer.

"There's a certain breed of people, and you've got 250- or 400,000 of them over in the Gulf right now," said Bernsen. "And Morris' life, as you may or may not know, is pretty much threatened day in and day out. And yet he's still defending human rights, and these kids in the Gulf are defending freedom.... I'm very impressed by people who do that," said the actor.

Bernsen also said filming the movie made him take a good hard look at his own prejudices — prejudices we all possess.

During the 1960s, Morris Dees became active aiding minorities in court. In 1971 he opened the Southern Poverty Law Center, a non-profit legal organization handling cases dealing with employment discrimination, hazardous working conditions, tax inequities and the death penalty. In 1980, the center founded Klanwatch, which monitors hate groups and develops legal strategies for protecting citizens from violence-prone groups. Most recently, Dees was successful in prosecuting White Aryan Resistance leaders Tom and John Metzger in a highly publicized trial in Portland, Ore.

"I hope the spirit of the civil rights movement is revived in those who see this movie," said Dees.

SOAP TALK

Eileen Fulton on extended leave. By Candace Havens. Dear Candace: I have watched As the World Turns for many years and now wonder what happened to Eileen Fulton, Lisa from way back. Also, on China Beach I read where Dana Delany at one time was on ATWT. Could you tell me what part she played? —Thank you, Henretta. Dear Henretta: Eileen Fulton is on an extended leave of absence from the show due to illness related to a recent surgery. After her recuperation, she should be returning to the show. You are correct about Delany. She played the character Haley Wilson on ATWT during 1981. It was one of the first television roles she played, and she wasn't really on the show all that long.

Dear Candace: What has happened to Mason on Santa Barbara? I liked him on The Young and the Restless and was amazed how soon he became Mason on SB. The Mason they have now is a good actor, I guess, but why mess around with the viewers like this? Just when we get used to good actors, whom, they are gone! —Thank you, Bea Emery, Duncan, Okla. Dear Bea: Terry Lester left SB of his own accord when his contract was up this past October. He surprised everyone — especially the show's execs — with his decision to leave, and he cited only that he wanted to go on to do other things. This decision was made just one year after his messy departure from Y&R. Dear Candace: I watched General Hospital the other day and was surprised to see Dr. Steve Hardy on. Is the woman who played his wife, Audrey, still on GH? How about nurse Jessie? —Thank you, Myra Martin, McMinnville, Tenn. Dear Myra: John Berardino (Dr. Steve Hardy), Rachel Ames (Audrey Hardy) and Emily McLaughlin (Jessie Brewer) are all still on the show. They just haven't had storylines that are on the front burner lately. It should be interesting to see if the return of Gloria Monty, executive producer of the show, brings about some new storylines for these favorites. I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to sound off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, TX 76102-0748.

NEW YORK (AP) - Ryan O'Neal says he and daughter Tatum have not gotten along well since he began living with Farrah Fawcett more than a decade ago.

Tatum, now 27, had been living with O'Neal since she was a child and her parents divorced.

"I had to make a choice between Tatum and this girl - and I chose Farrah," O'Neal, 49, said in the February issue of Vanity Fair. "Tatum made me choose. I said, 'That's a bad idea. I sleep with this girl, Tatum, I don't sleep with you.'"

O'Neal, who with Fawcett stars in a new TV series, "Good Sports," said of his daughter: "I picked her up and I made her a movie star and an Academy Award winner and rich. And I loved her, too. And I never violated her or any of the possibilities. I took care of her. And then I finally found someone who was dear to me, and she couldn't have it, she couldn't deal with it."

But O'Neal had some kind words for his daughter, who has two children with her husband, tennis star John McEnroe.
