Amarillo man victim in accident near Dawn

A 27-year-old Amarillo man was identified Friday as the man who was killed in an accident west of Dawn sometime Thursday night or Friday morning.

Manuel Rocha Aguilar was found Friday at 7:20 a.m., a mile west of Dawn along the Santa Fe Railroad tracks. Personnel on a passing westbound train saw the man's body and notified authorities.

Officials speculate the man may have tried to jump onto, or from, an open car on a slow-moving train on the siding. Authorities think the man may have slipped on rain-slickened rails or a railcar and was killed under the wheels of the train. Justice of the Peace Johnnie Turentine ruled the death accidental. The man died of multiple injuries.

After investigation at the scene, the man was taken to Amarillo for an autopsy by Dr. Elizabeth Peacock. Because the man had no identification, officials feared they would not be able to identify him. However, police officials in Amarillo knew the man and were able to identify him through tattoos and fingerprints.

Weemes flying high with hobby

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

When Tommie Weemes flies his Curtiss Hawk 75, the craft soars through the air, responding to his every command.

But Weemes isn't sitting in the cockpit. He's standing on the ground, holding a radio transmitter that controls the movement of his model aircraft.

Built on a one-fifth scale of the original, the Hawk 75 is the aircraft of choice for Weemes in radio-controlled competition these days. Before he finished the Hawk, he flew a Gee Bee Model E Sportster, a model of a civilian aircraft.

The Hawk is a built-from-scratch model that Weemes made by drawing plans from a picture and dimensions of the original.

Although some radio-controlled aircraft enthusiasts construct their models from kits, Weemes likes to build from his own plans.

"I chose the Hawk because it is unique," Weemes said about his decision to construct this particular model. "The other reason is the original plane had a fixed landing gear and I liked that."

Weemes prefers the fixed gear, primarily, because he must do his practice flying in pastures instead of paved runways.

"It's really hard on the retractable gears when you land them in a pasture," he explained, noting that breakage is not unusual in that situation. In a fixed gear craft, sufficient support is provided.

The fixed gear was appropriate in the countries that bought the full-sized Hawk for their air forces in the days prior to World War II, Weemes said.

"There were few paved and improved airstrips where those planes went," he added. The second prototype of the Hawk 75, built in 1936, was sold to Argentina, along with a license to manufacture the aircraft.

For that reason, Weemes chose to use the markings of the country that purchased the airplane on his model, Argentina, Siam, now Thailand, and China used similar aircraft.

The Hawk was a forerunner to the airplane that the famed Flying Tigers piloted to hold off the Japanese in Asia during World War II.

Working only when he had some spare time, Weemes spent five years building his Hawk, and flying another model. Since he put the Hawk in the air for the first time in competition in 1989 in Scale Masters in Kansas City, the model has 60 flights to its credit.

Accidents are not unusual with scale models, Weemes said, and he's no stranger to mishaps. Last November at the U.S. Scale Masters Championships in Las Vegas, Nev., he saw his Hawk plow into a chain fence.

"It was on a take-off," Weemes recalled. "There was a chain fence at the end of the runway and I tried to abort the take-off but the aircraft overshoot the runway and struck the chain."

A video of the incident would lead an observer to think that the little craft was very badly damaged but Weemes is grateful that was not the case.

"The rudder was torn up but I was able to put it back together and have it ready to go again in about two hours," he said.

Jubilee ready for big week

Events are planned throughout this week, climaxing Saturday, during the annual Town and Country Jubilee in Hereford.

"Makin' It Happen" is the theme of the 1992 Jubilee, which will include a special concert and street dance among new activities this year.

The annual Jubilee Parade will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday down East Park and south along Main, with Jubilee Junction to follow in Dameron Park.

Organizations and businesses can still plan to be involved in the Jubilee

Parade and Jubilee Junction. Entries for both are available at the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce office, Seventh and Main.

Jubilee Junction will feature a variety of game, food and giveaway booths from organizations and businesses. A full day of music and fun has been put together by Connie Walker, The Walker Sisters and The Country Opry at Jubilee Junction's stage. Entertainment will include Mountain Man Dave Yeager, Animacion, The Walkers, Texas Drifters, the cast from "Billy the Kid" at San Jon, NM, Country Six, the Garretts and Okie Bill Ross, and Now and Then. The pickin' and grinnin' starts as soon as the parade is over at Jubilee Junction.

One of the new events will be a free concert Thursday at 7 p.m. at the HHS auditorium featuring Kevin McHann. The contemporary Christian musician from Starkville, Miss., is involved in youth rallies and other ministries and retreats in many southern states.

Another new event is the Jubilee Street Dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. August 15 at St. Anthony's Church. The dance will feature the Clyde Legg Band.

Several stand-bys are back to make this year's celebration one of the biggest in the 12 years of the jubilee.

The Jubilee kick off Tuesday with an open play-day at Hereford Riders Arena at Veterans Park. Books open at 6:30 p.m. with games at 7 p.m.

On Thursday, events include the Back-to-School Style Show, with fashions from local merchants, at the Hereford Country Club; Team Roping at 7 p.m. at Riders Arena; and the Kevin McHann concert.

On Friday, a city-wide sidewalk sale will be held, and the third annual Jubilee Softball Classic will be held at the Nazarene Church Softball Complex. Hereford Cattlewomen are still accepting entries for the Jubilee Beef Fajita cookoff at Veterans Park.

Friday is the first day of the Jubilee of Arts, featuring dozens of booths with arts and crafts, at the community center. At the Senior Center, quilts will be registered for the Saturday quilt show.

Saturday kicks off with the Greg Black Memorial 10K, 2-mile Fun Run and 2-mile walk at the YMCA. The Jubilee Home Run Hitting Contest will be held at noon at the Nazarene Church, and the second annual Women's Jubilee Softball Classic will be held at Veterans Park.

Registration schedules set at schools

Registration schedules have been released for Hereford public schools for the term that begins August 19.

New freshmen at Hereford High School may attend orientation at 3:30 p.m. Monday at the HHS auditorium. Freshmen will get an overview of HHS and a walking tour of the school to make sure new students are familiar with the campus. Schedules for all students can be picked up this week, or August 17-18, from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

New seventh grade students at Hereford Junior High must attend an orientation meeting with their parents at 7 p.m. Thursday at the HJH cafeteria. Parents may pick up schedules at the meeting; students

County plans hearing Monday

Public hearings on a grant application for water, sewer and street improvements in an area adjacent to the City of Hereford will be conducted Monday at two times.

The hearings will be held at 10 a.m., during a meeting of Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court, and again at 7 p.m., in the county courthouse.

Funds are being asked to finance improvements in the Campbell Street area, located outside the Hereford city limits, south of Bradley Street. Estimated cost of the improvements is more than $350,000.

Residents of the area approached the city in early May, seeking annexation and connections to city services.

The city commission agreed to consider annexation but asked for an engineering report on estimated costs of extending water service and sewer lines as well as installing curbs, gutters and paving on two streets.

A report from the city engineer at the June 1 commission meeting effectively ended the annexation proposal because of expense. Officials said there were no funds to provide the services and annexation would require that the services be extended within a specified period.

Water line costs were estimated at $81,568; sewer, including a lift station to move sewage into city lines, $176,967, and curb, gutter and paving, $98,356.

After the city tabled the project, residents were advised to consult with Deaf Smith County officials about grant possibilities. County commissioners agreed to pursue that course of action.

An application for funding will be made to the Texas Department of (See HEARING, Page 2A)

As the new school year for 1988-89 began, quite a change took place in grades seven through nine in Hereford. That year was the beginning of Hereford Junior High for grades seven and eight. Ninth graders became the new under-classmen at Hereford High School.

Thus was the end of an era of two competing junior highs and the beginning of a new junior high with only two grades. Very probably teachers were affected more by the change than were students, as students usually adjust to change more readily than do adults. The last class to have attended both junior highs will graduate this school year.

The 1992-93 school year at Hereford Junior High is having an exciting beginning with a new principal, Marilyn Leasure and a new assistant principal, Sara Lawson, as well as several new classroom teachers.

Registration for seventh graders and parent orientation will be Thursday, August 13, at 7:30 p.m.

Two persons arrested Friday

Hereford police arrested a man, 30, for public intoxication on Friday. A 17-year-old man was also arrested for evading arrest in the 600 block of Blevins. An officer received a report of a fight at Blue Water Gardens. Four men were seen fighting; three escaped, but the fourth was caught.

Police are investigating an attempted arson in the 400 block of Ave. I. A grass fire was reported at a house, a police found gasoline poured on the back door and fence at the house.

Police are also investigating a report in the 800 block of N. Lee where a person said she found a wallet inside a car that did not belong to her, and feels someone has been inside her car.

Other reports include a criminal attempt in the 800 block of E. Park; unattended child in the 300 block of Sunset; theft of a bike in the 100 block of Lake and 600 block of Ireland; assault and criminal trespass in the 300 block of Ave. I; assault in the 800 block of 14th; civil problems in the 200 block of Lawton; theft of services with five movies and a VCR rented and never returned; criminal mischief in the 100 block of Ave. G; theft at Sugarland Mall, with tennis shoes stolen by two persons; forgery in the 300 block of Ave. H; and harassment in the 200 block of Brevard.

Police issued nine tickets Friday and investigated a minor accident.

County commissioners to meet

Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court will continue work on a budget for the next fiscal year at the end of a 9 a.m. meeting Monday. Prior to the budget workshop, commissioners will authorize advertising for an outside independent audit, for proposals for fuel bids and for bids for seal coating in Precinct 2. A computer system proposal also is listed for discussion.

Rhizomania found in Nebraska beets

Rhizomania has been found in a single field near Scottsbluff, Neb., the first case of the sugar beet disease in the North Platte Valley.

Rhizomania has been identified in the past in Texas, California and (a few weeks ago) in Idaho.

Rhizomania is caused by beet necrotic yellow vein virus (BNYVV). The virus lives in the soil and infects roots, which become necrotic and die. The virus is introduced to the roots by a soil borne fungus common to most soils which have a history of sugar beet culture.

Infection occurs only in the very young tap root. As the tap root ages and beings secondary growth, it will no longer be infected by the pathogens. The disease causes the most damage in a very young crop and in wet, warm soils. Soil temperatures usually must be around 70-85 degrees with moisture at or above field capacity.

Rhizomania is spread in soil, and any operation that moves soil between fields can spread the virus. Soil can be moved on trucks and machinery; returning tare dirt to farmable acreage is discouraged. Irrigation water also has the potential to infest a field. Tail water from an infested field, applied to a sugarbeet crop in another field, can carry the pathogens to a healthy crop.

The disease has the potential to cause a 100 percent loss. Control is through an integrated approach: soil fumigants, use of resistant varieties of sugar beets and proper agronomic techniques can allow the production of economically successful sugarbeet crops.

Producers with questions about rhizomania may contact the ag staff at Holly Sugar, 364-6475.

Blindness, seashells go together

Researcher able to find more than sighted scientists

EDITOR'S NOTE - Geerat Vermeij, an expert on seashells, has just come into a fortune. But he has no intention of forsaking shoreline, swamp or lecture hall for the good life. The poet Milton could understand why. He, too, was blind.

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent
DAVIS, Calif. (AP) - "I do not think of blindness as an advantage," the professor was saying the other day, in all seriousness. Well, of course not.

But neither was Geerat Vermeij, the blind professor, speculating on possible reasons why he was chosen just recently for a $280,000 grant to use as he pleases, no strings attached.

There's no reason to suspect the award was for anything other than solid scientific accomplishment. That and the safe bet that with financial distractions removed, further meritorious research would result.

Vermeij's curious remark was in response to an even more curious comment on his blindness by a colleague. The man was admiringly puzzled by Vermeij's almost uncanny perception of subtle differences in the structure of seashells.

He had watched Vermeij turn shells in his hands, inspecting each tiny ridge and crevice with patient fingers, and had wondered if his insight could be in part because Vermeij was, as he put it, "unencumbered by sight." Unlike others, Vermeij did not rely on color, often an un dependable clue to identification, and seemed to see more.

Geerat Vermeij (his name is pronounced Ver-MAY; his friends call him Gary), a professor of paleobiology at the University of California at Davis, is a world authority on mollusks, animals that build shells.

Scientists know him as the one whose work has moved the understanding of mollusks from the merely anatomical to the analytical. Vermeij's research has uncovered the ways shells work, why some species have survived their predators and others become extinct.

Thus he has added a significant line of inquiry into the study of evolution. One of his books, subtitled "An Ecological History of Life," is considered a large contribution in the field of marine conservation.

life, Weemes began building models when he was 12 years old and advanced to radio-controlled models in 1967. He didn't enter national competition until 1981.

He calls radio-controlled flying a hobby sport, one that carries with it frustrations of any competitive activity.

"Competition is fierce," Weemes said, adding that a total of 200 points can be accumulated. "I was 28th, but within seven points of first place in one competition."

In the Southern Scale Masters competition in Dallas early in July, he qualified for the U.S. Scale Masters Championships in Irving in mid-September. He earned high awards in the July event.

In competition, each entrant makes six flights. Scores of the top three are Indeed, a glance at Vermeij's production makes you wonder not whether blindness is an advantage but even a disadvantage.

He has written three books and about 90 research papers. He edits "Paleobiology," the premier journal in that field, and will take over in the fall as editor of "Evolution." He also teaches several geology courses at the university.

Scientists across the world know Vermeij not just from his work but personally. His field trips have taken him to about 40 countries whose shorelines have become as familiar to him as the shells he brings back. He is equally at home on a reef or in a mangrove swamp as in a lecture hall or museum.

The $280,000 fellowship from the MacArthur Foundation, he says, will allow for even more travel.

"When there's an opportunity to go I can just go," he says. "Money is valuable, but time is even more valuable. Now I can buy an occasional bit of time."

But why? The blind poet asks, "Doth God exact day labor, light denied?" Vermeij's reply, like Milton's, is his work schedule. Like Milton, he has neither time nor inclination for self-pity.

"Blindness is a nuisance that can be largely overcome," Vermeij says. "It is not a disaster. It is not to be pitied or revered. It is just a condition that has to be dealt with as you get on with life."

Geerat Vermeij is 45, of average height, lean, with sharp facial features and a thin reddish beard and mustache.

He was born in a small town in The Netherlands where doctors diagnosed his poor eyesight as infant glaucoma. "I remember seeing colors, although shapes were never very sharp," he says. He remembers the colors, also the pain from pressure that would have caused brain damage. At age 3, "quite sensibly," he says, they removed his eyes.

He had his 9th birthday on a ship bound for the United States, specifically to New Jersey, a state which his parents found to have a most enlightened program for the blind.

"I had been in a school for the blind since I was 3," Vermeij says. "It was a boarding school. It was horrible to be away from home, but there was no alternative.

"In New Jersey, the state commissioner for the blind believed - as did my parents, and I agree - that the blind should go to public schools.

"So I did, and also took extra classes with a special teacher. I had to learn both English and English braille, which put me a year behind others my age."

By the end of third grade he was fluent in both. The state provided corresponding textbooks in braille and he caught up quickly. He graduated from Nutley, N.J., High School first in his class, the 1965 valedictorian.

"Back in fourth grade," Vermeij recalls, "I had a teacher who was directly responsible for one of the most important turns in my life.

"Her name was Caroline Colberg. She came back from a vacation in Florida that year with a bunch of shells and put them on the windowsill to decorate the classroom. When I saw them I was astonished.

"When I was a kid I collected things as kids do - pine cones, acorns, leaves, all of it, including shells.

"But those Florida shells were so much more elegant in shape and texture than anything I'd seen before. To me they were works of art. I still think so.

"The first scientific question I think I asked myself was, 'Why are these shells so much prettier than the shells in Holland? Why don't they have the same chalky texture?'"

"The question is still valid. I've gone some way to answering it but I don't have the complete answer by any means."

Questing after the answer, Vermeij took a bachelor's degree, summa cum laude, from Princeton in three years and went straight into the doctorate program at Yale, which he also completed in three years.

"My thesis compared tropical snails with temperate ones. It was an OK study. It got published," he said, and added, smiling, "like many other unimportant studies."

Vermeij has considerably higher regard for the papers he has published since, at a pace that causes other scholars to blink.

"I believe in the publish-or-perish system," he says. "Scientists who don't publish are shirking their responsibility. Many who don't are afraid to be wrong, a misplaced fear. You're apt to be wrong sometimes. So long as you're not wrong all the time it's OK."

Seashell expert

Geerat Vermeij is an expert on seashells and has been given, basically, a fortune for research. What makes Vermeij so special in his research, and so different, is that he is blind. He is not making prejudicial judgements by sight, which hampers other researchers.

Vermeij comes right out with what some researchers might also consider a heresy, their obligation to teach.

"The research certainly enriches my teaching," he says, "but it also works the other way around.

"Sometimes I give a lecture and a question will arise in my own mind that I don't have an answer to, or just an interesting problem. If I didn't have to teach, they probably might not have occurred to me."

Vermeij taught for 17 years at the University of Maryland, the last nine as a professor of zoology, before moving to the University of California three years ago.

His years at Maryland, he says, gave him the enviable opportunity to work every Saturday in the world's largest collection of crustaceans at the nearby Smithsonian Institution's Natural History Museum.

Even so, to live in California with a whole ocean at his doorstep had been his ambition.

(See BLINDNESS, Page 3A)

averaged and added to the static score for the total. The static score results from judging of the craft on the ground.

During a flight of no more than 12 minutes, each contestant must put his aircraft through mandatory and freestyle maneuvers.

Weemes operates the controls on the aircraft but at his shoulder is his "ground crew," his wife Clea.

"I call out what he's supposed to do next," she said, "from the sheet with the list of maneuvers on it."

The Hereford couple enjoys the sport for several reasons, not the least of which is the opportunity to meet new R-C enthusiasts and renew acquaintance with others.

They expect to be in Irving next month for the U.S. Scale Masters Championships where the Hawk will compete with 75, or so, other radio-controlled craft.

The Weemes Hawk is an authentic replica of the aircraft built by Curtiss before World War II. Materials used by Weemes are balsa, plywood, fiberglass and styrofoam.

The finish is simulated metal, an effect achieved by buffing a mylar covering to look like aluminum. Down to the simulated rivets, the pilot's control panel and the fixed gear, the Hawk is as authentic as it could be. It's powered by a 1.5 cubic inch engine that uses an alcohol-base fuel. The engine is about the size of a chainsaw engine.

With an 80-inch wingspan, the radio-controlled model soars with all the beauty and grace of a bird, responding to the radio commands transmitted from the ground.

Tommie and Clea Weemes have transported the Hawk around the country, flying in such diverse climates as Louisville, Ky., and Phoenix, Ariz.

The place doesn't matter, they said. The people they meet do.

HEARING

Housing and Community Affairs. However, approval first must be given by Panhandle Regional Planning Commission.

The hearings Monday are required as a way to gather information from residents about their views and other proposals.

Public participation in the hearings is encouraged, said County Judge Tom Simons.

The area has come under scrutiny of the Texas Water Commission.

Houston ready for storm

HOUSTON (AP) - If it's August, then it's prime hurricane season for Houston-area residents.

But this August there's a storm of a different sort gaining momentum to strike the city.

The Republicans are coming.

And Houston asked for it.

In the wake of the four-day Republican National Convention that begins next Monday, city boosters hope the GOP and thousands of media types and political junkies who follow such shows will leave behind more than $100 million.

The Houston Astrodome, the site of the event, is undergoing a metamorphosis as it's transformed from a 60,000-seat sports arena into a cozy TV studio with a live audience of 35,000. For two weeks, construction crews have been working nearly around the clock to put up a podium, hang flags and special lighting, erect television anchor booths and install a media village in the Astrodome next door.

"There are certain things you don't want to get too far ahead with because the longer they are up there the greater the chance to get it messed up," Mike Miller, director of operations for the convention, said.

The final touches go in this week even as Republicans begin showing up in town for discussion of the party platform.

Ironically, the platform hearings are scheduled for the George Brown Convention Center in downtown Houston, the brand-new center that was built for a national political convention but was shunned in favor of the Astrodome.

"I think we're going to have a great convention," Robert Mosbacher, chairman of the Bush re-election campaign, says. "The president and everybody in Washington really knows how much that means.

"Houston has done a better job than any other city in getting ready for a convention. People who have worked on the convention (from Washington) and the president always tell me that Houston has done a superb job."

The road to nomination for a second term certainly changed for Bush, however, since Jan. 8, 1991 when Houston was selected as the convention site over San Diego and New Orleans.

Eighteen months ago, the likelihood of war in the Persian Gulf was on everyone's minds. The war came and went quickly. Almost as quickly, Bush's standing in polls soared and then crashed. The Democrats went from a half-dozen candidates to a solid ticket headed by Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton, whose fortunes rose as fast as Bush's cratered.

Among the first speakers to address the convention will be former President Ronald Reagan.

"I think what Ronald Reagan started around the world - the fall of communism, the fall of the Soviet Union - George Bush completed," Mosbacher said. Reagan's appearance, he added, is "a great way of reminding them of the team effort."

BLINDNESS

"This is where I've always wanted to live," he says. "I couldn't be happier."

In his university office are a bank of drawers containing his precious shells and fossils and others, newcomers, on his work table waiting to be studied, classified, stored away. "They give me inspiration."

Shelves hold 150 bound volumes of his own braille notes of the 10,000 papers and books he has read, cross-referenced so he can locate citations for his own writings. Colleagues are astounded by his recall of everything he has read or heard.

His home is a 10-minute bus ride from campus. His wife, Edith, whom he met at Yale where she was a molecular biology student, is equally content. They have a 10-year-old daughter, Hermine.

The new federal law to ban job discrimination against the disabled may help advance a quiet crusade Vermeij has been waging all his life. But the problem, he says, begins long before the first job application.

"One of the general sadnesses is that the blind are discouraged by presumably well-intentioned people from pursuing what they want to pursue."

"I was discouraged at every turn from going into science. My counselors said absolutely not, it was too difficult and how could I expect any kind of employment? It took a great deal of help and persuasion to overcome that barrier. There have been many others."

"I was turned down for a trip to the Aleutians aboard a boat owned by the University of Alaska. Too dangerous. Insurance and all that. But I had met the person who turned me down aboard the same boat in New Guinea."

Vermeij wrote about his boat fight (he finally went) for a publication of the National Federation of the Blind, which he supports.

"I'm not exactly an activist, but I've written a few articles, mostly for the blind themselves - ourselves, I should say - about what you can do when people say no. The federation is good, not only about educating the public at large but about educating the blind."

"Many blind people feel themselves terribly inferior as a consequence of having been told that so many times. A very important first step is to make people feel it's OK to be blind."

Actually, he says, in his opinion sight is not the most inconvenient of the five senses to lose. "Hearing would be worse, although a deaf person might not agree. Or touch."

Nobody, he feels, should be denied a chance at the fullest life possible by someone else's notion of what's good for them.

"They should have equal opportunity. That, of course. But not," he said, groping for the term, "you know ... affirmative action. Not that. People shouldn't have to wonder, or have others wonder, about their true merit. I believe that can only hurt the people it's designed to help."

"I see it as my main mission to be as successful as I can be at my chosen profession and that it represent real scientific accomplishment. If that rubs off on the blind, that's fine."

Geerat Vermeij, then, appears to have a further response to that colleague who was puzzled by a sightless professor's uncanny grasp of the remarkable beauty of a seashell:

No, there is no advantage to being blind. Nor should there be.

Remembering those who made it fun to learn.

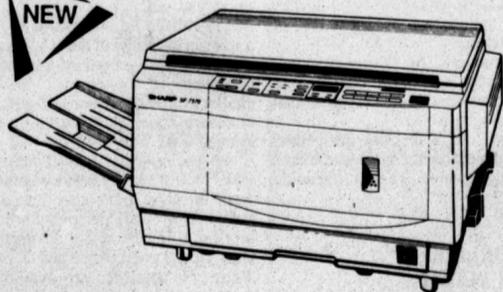

Everyone can remember the excitement and the dread as a new school year emerged, but it's also easy to remember those teachers who turned that uncertainty into bold new confidence.

Good teachers engrave a part of themselves into everyone's life. They are the individuals who have found a way to make learning fun, who fill young hearts with pride and encouragement, and who recognize accomplishment in gains large or small.

We at Hereford State Bank regard each educator in our school system with high esteem, and we commend your efforts in providing each student in our community with the desire to learn new and wonderful things.

Bottom Line

Two mistakes were made by the Hereford school board at last Monday's board meeting.

The first mistake was that board member Steve Wright should not have been allowed to address the position of First National Bank on the TexPool issue. Mr. Wright should have removed himself from the discussion. Mr. Wright is an honorable man, but he can no more speak as "not a school board member" than I can speak as "not as the editor of the newspaper." The association remains. It would have been better if the bank had sent someone else to represent its position on the TexPool issue.

The other mistake: the board needs to strongly consider the opportunity to invest in TexPool. Investments in TexPool are backed "only" with the full faith and credit of the United States government. I know, the government may not be as good as we'd like it to be sometimes, but, if these fall through, well, we really won't care, will we...

We're all out here watching out bottom line. If the school district has a chance to make another $10,000 or $40,000, or $1 or $4, that would sure help the sore backs of all of us taxpayers, not to mention that it might improve some child's education. The bottom line is important.

Government layoffs

Drowning in a sea of taxation, regulation and debt, American corporations have been laying off thousands of workers. The latest round saw Unocal drop 1,100 employees, Amoco eliminated 8,500 jobs and Mobil pared 2,000 salaried workers from its payrolls.

Last month, the economy as a whole lost 117,000 jobs. Since 1990, almost two million American workers have seen their jobs eliminated. At the current rate, 1,500 workers a day receive the bad news that their services are no longer required.

In industry after industry—electronics, industrial machinery, construction, food services, retailing, insurance, oil and gas production, transportation, utilities, etc.—payrolls have been cut to reduce expenses. The high costs of taxation, state and federal regulations, and long-term debt have forced companies to employ fewer people to produce more products.

Global competition will not permit corporations to continue to operate as they did in the past. The new watch-word for the new worldwide economy is "lean and mean," at least for private industry.

In these changing times, how has the government reacted? Have they also become lean and mean?

Just the opposite has occurred. As private businesses have trimmed their payrolls to stay in business, government—at the federal and state levels—has added employees.

Today, the federal bureaucracy is growing at the rate of 20,000 new positions a month. During this fiscal year, regulatory agencies will hire 8,000 additional people, the judicial branch will hire 4,413 and Congress will create 1,155 more positions.

The explosion in government hiring is not limited to Washington. The State of Texas added more than 6,000 new employees last year. Health and Human Services increased workers by almost 3,000 and the corrections system added almost 1,000 employees. Our Legislature had the highest percentage gain by adding 442 new positions for an increase in employment of 25 percent.

It is outrageous that government continues to grow at such a frantic pace. The tax dollars used to fund those new positions would better serve the economy if they were returned to the businesses and individuals who paid into the government coffers. That would stimulate the economy and put people back to work in private industry.

Notes On The Law

Have you ever wondered where heaven is? Well, you do not need to wonder anymore, because there is a court decision which rules on the location of heaven.

It seems that, in 1882, Jesse Ellis moved from the Land of Dixie to New Mexico, where "he did then and there consecrate his life, his labor and all his worldly effects and prospects" to the furtherance of the "Faithists." The Faithists were a communal group of persons dedicated to following the teachings of the Gospel of Oahspe.

The Gospel of Oahspe set forth a "sacred history of the dominions of the higher and lower heavens on the earth for the past twenty four thousand years," amongst other answers to mysteries which had theretofore eluded mankind.

The Gospel of Oahspe reached Mr. Ellis with "siren notes, which, sweeter and more seductive than the music that led the intrepid Odysseus to the Isle of Calypso," and induced him to travel from his native land of Georgia "to the shores of the Rio Grande, in the County of Dona Ana, in the valley of the Mesilla." Having reached this purported "New Arcadia," Mr. Ellis, as has been noted, consecrated himself to the cause of the Faithists.

Not long after joining the Faithists, Mr. Ellis unfortunately became disillusioned and brought suit against the Faithists for the return of all his worldly possessions, which he had signed over to the Faithists.

One of his claims appears to be that the commune was not the site of a lower dominion of heaven on earth so that he had been defrauded into the belief that, upon joining the commune, he would live in the perfect and true harmony associated with heaven.

Thus, it became the mortal judge's task to determine if the following description identifies that part of Dona Ana County, New Mexico, where the commune was located.

"In the high north lay the kingdom of the Olegalla, the land of giants, the place of yellow rocks and high spouting waters. The great city of Olegalla with the four and twenty tributaries spread along the valley of Anemoosagoo."

After deliberation, which the judge admitted was not divinely inspired, the Court determined the location of the lower dominion of heaven by pronouncing, "This unquestionably refers to Chicago."

Since this was obvious to the Court, it should have been equally obvious to Mr. Ellis and it was his own fault that he allowed himself to be duped into thinking that heaven was near Las Cruces, New Mexico. Thus, the Court ruled against Mr. Ellis on his claim for the return of his worldly possessions.

Wind sprints good for economy

An AP News Analysis
By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent
DAVENPORT, Iowa (AP) — According to the Bill Clinton theory of football and economics, forget fancy helmets; concentrate on weight-lifting and wind sprints.

"It's the same deal," the Democratic presidential nominee claimed of his unlikely comparison. In translation, expensive helmets that don't help win are like Republican trickle-down economics, "a fool idea" in which tax breaks and incentives at the top are supposed to help everyone. Clinton calls that a proven failure.

Wind sprints and strength training, on the other hand, represent the kind of planning, education, training and investment policies followed by U.S. world competitors like Germany and Japan.

Strained, perhaps, but purposeful. The point of Clinton's exercise was to salute the popular, winning football coach in East St. Louis, Ill.

In 16 years at East St. Louis high, Bob Shannon has coached 16 state championship teams with his motto, "Get it done." Clinton adopted the slogan as his theme and the game as his image in a campaign appearance at the primarily black school on Wednesday.

Local heroes and legends, athletes, authors and politicians, were featured talking points as Clinton and vice presidential nominee Al Gore campaigned along the Mississippi River at the head of an eight-bus caravan. They were at it again on a tour that wound up in Minneapolis on Friday.

"Mark Twain once said that petrified opinion, old ideas, never did anything to break a chain or free the human soul," Clinton said in Hannibal, Mo., Twain's home town. "That's what we've got in Washington, today, petrified opinion. We're going to shake up the government."

Harry Truman, the Democratic president from Missouri, was a Clinton staple, too, as he accused Bush of trying to evade responsibility for the economic problems facing the nation.

"Can you imagine what would have happened if Harry Truman had a sign on his desk that said the buck stops someplace else?" Clinton asked.

"This crowd in Washington, they wake up every day and try to think of somebody else to blame," he told a riverfront rally in Burlington, Iowa. "Honestly, they act like little kids." Clinton said he used to get spanked for trying to blame others but it happens in Washington all the time.

At the high school gym in East St. Louis, the banner proclaiming it the home town of Olympian Jackie Joyner-Kersey was bigger than those for the candidate.

Gore and Clinton got the message. "I know that East St. Louis is proud... not only for that gold medal but also for what she is as a human being," said Gore.

"And we ought to recognize," Clinton added, "that the best thing we can learn from the Jackie Joyner Kersey of the world is that if you apply that level of effort to other areas of life, we can all succeed, not everybody can be an Olympic gold medalist, but everybody can succeed in life with organized effort."

Clinton's campaign route from St. Louis to Hannibal and on to Davenport, Iowa, drew clusters of people along the highways and bigger crowds in town. He and Gore made three unscheduled stops in Missouri, four more in Iowa, to shake hands and sign autographs. In Wayland, Mo., the crowd rivaled the posted population of 391 people. A Democratic councilman helped organize that turnout. The folks at a truck stop in Bowling Green said the local radio station had urged them to go there, saying Clinton might stop if enough people came. They did and he did.

With or without that encouragement, a bib-overalled farmer said, the folks in small towns in northwest Missouri seldom get a chance to shake hands with a man who might become president, and he didn't want to miss it.

It was after midnight when Gore and Clinton arrived at their hotel in Bettendorf, Iowa, at the end of nearly 18 hours of traveling and campaigning. And a crowd of well over 1,000 people rallied was there, too, despite the hour, and despite the fact that the candidates were more than two hours behind schedule.

"I know you didn't wait for us," Clinton told them. "You waited cause you want your country back and we're going to do our best to give it to you."

Gore said the crowds along the way, and the unscheduled finale in Bettendorf, all were spontaneous and unexpected.

Perhaps some were. But there was a row of portable toilets set up to accommodate that last crowd.

Editorial opinion around the state

Aug. 3
The Corpus Christi Caller-Times on Texas teachers:

As you would expect, the biannual survey of Texas teachers released last month by the Texas State Teachers Association was something of a mixed bag. Out of all the data, however, two chunks of information - one encouraging, one downright appalling - stood out:

-Very much on the positive side was the finding that support for the no-pass, no-play rule, one of the centerpieces of the 1980s school reform movement, has risen to record levels. ...

-The other datum all but defies belief: In Texas, in 1992, some 20 percent of the teachers surveyed indicated they had no health insurance coverage. None whatever. Granted, the cost of insurance has skyrocketed to the point that it is difficult for many districts to cover the expense, and in some instances teachers may turn down coverage because they cannot cover their share of the premiums - but it would seem that in any moderately enlightened state, adequate health care coverage would be taken as a given. ...

Austin American-Statesman on Council on Competitiveness

The Council on Competitiveness led by Vice President Dan Quayle has developed a reputation for operating in secret to change federal agency rules and undermine the intent of legislation ...

Members of Congress are preparing legislation designed to force the council into the open. That is a good move ...

The Council on Competitiveness should meet democratic standards of open government. That it is objecting to the proposed legislation is testimony that the council has gone far afield from its concept and needs to be brought back into line.

Dallas Morning News on women in combat:

Though the Tailhook scandal was a stain on the honor of the U.S. Navy, that particular record of caveman etiquette is apparently being challenged by the actions of certain members of the U.S. Army during the Persian Gulf War.

According to the Army Times, at least 24 U.S. Army servicewomen were raped or otherwise sexually assaulted by male personnel while serving in the Persian Gulf during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. No statistics are available regarding the disposition of these cases because judicial proceedings are not yet complete. If the Tailhook affair warranted serious reflection about attitudes in the Navy, the Army must now do some soul searching as well. To begin with, such outrageous and intolerable conduct must be prosecuted to the fullest extent of military law. ...

The disturbing revelations emanating from the Persian Gulf will doubtless intensify the debate over whether women should be allowed to serve in combat. ... The message should be that sexual assault is illegal during a military operation as well as in peacetime.

As September approaches, moms all over the country suffer the universal anxiety of getting the kids ready for school. Back-to-school shopping can be an exhausting and frustrating experience - especially if you have children of different ages to shop for.

You know the story...your darling four-year-old is, at a stage where she only wears "pink!", your 10-year-old son says all he needs is six pairs of sneakers and a baseball cap, and your teen-age daughter thinks your fashions sense is positively pre-historic. Well, to make your shopping easier, the folks at Kmart conducted an informal poll of U.S. youngsters ages 4 to 17 to find out what they really want to wear this fall.

For Little Kids...
Novelty tees, fleece tops, socks and shoes featuring the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Ren and Stimpy, Batman, Trolls and Barbie, plus lots of Beauty and the Beast, Mickey and Minnie Mouse and Dalmations...stuff.

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Q. If I decide to pay down my mortgage will my monthly payment be reduced?

A. Not if you have a fixed rate mortgage. Your payments will stay the same but the number of months left to pay will change. If you have an adjustable rate mortgage, your monthly payment can be reduced by paying down the mortgage when the normal adjustment time rolls around. It's also possible by paying an extra $20.00 per monthly payment to help reduce the monthly payment at each adjustment. This is one of the most overlooked differences between an adjustable rate mortgage and a fixed rate mortgage. It results in one of the important choices facing you when you decide which mortgage to take on. Do you want to be able to reduce your monthly payment or would you prefer to reduce the term of your loan? It's up to you! If you read our column, we appreciate your comments.

Upsets rule at Olympics

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) Sergei Bubka had a lock on the pole vault. Gold was guaranteed by the U.S. men's volleyball team and women hoopsters.

Steffi Graf get beat by Jennifer Capriati? No way. Same with Dave Johnson, a sure bet in the decathlon. Kim Zmeskal couldn't lose in gymnastics, nor could Janet Evans in swimming.

But upsets and the Olympics go together, as all the above favorites learned to their chagrin, and the essence of sports is uncertainty. Except Saturday night.

When the Dream Team takes the floor against Croatia in the gold-medal basketball game, 24 hours before the Summer Games end, the chances of an upset are zero, zip, nada.

Bet the house on this one, if you can find a bookie who will even take the action. Halley's comet has a better shot of zooming by as a special effect for the closing ceremonies than Croatia does of beating Team NBA.

"The semifinal game against the Unified Team was really the final game for us," coach Petar Skansi said. "We tried a week ago to play the U.S. team, but everyone must understand that we have finished our Olympic competition. The Americans are out of competition. We want to play them, but winning is impossible."

Bubka and Jackie Joyner-Kersey were beaten down, in part, by tricky winds.

Bubka, the defending Olympic champion, world record-holder and first man to clear 20 feet, astonished everyone when he failed to clear any height.

The Ukrainian missed his first two attempts at 18 feet, 8 1/2 inches, passed until the next round at 18-10 1/2, then knocked the bar off with his shin on the way up.

"Most of us had problems with the swirling winds in the run-up, and I was definitely one of them," Bubka said. "Maybe I took too long to prepare for each jump. But of course, it could have been my nerves playing me up."

Giants may be moving, but not in NL standings

By The Associated Press

The San Francisco Giants may be going places. Not in the standings, though.

"Everybody has downplayed it, but this has been a big distraction," Will Clark said.

Clark spoke in the Giants' locker room after a 4-3 loss in Cincinnati, their sixth defeat in seven games. However, the bigger news was the announced sale and move to St. Petersburg next year, pending the owners' approval.

About 4 1/2 hours before the game, players were told of the planned move in a team meeting in the visitors' clubhouse. Asked if the announcement had cleared the air, Clark said, "It isn't making it any easier."

Manager Roger Craig said he didn't think the tension surrounding the sale has hurt the Giants, who trail Atlanta by 15 games in the NL West.

"I haven't seen any difference at all," Craig said. "We haven't been winning, but I don't think anything that's happened with the ballclub had anything to do with it."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Pittsburgh 5, St. Louis 1; Atlanta 6, Los Angeles 2; Chicago 9, New York 1; Philadelphia 3, Montreal 1, and San Diego 4, Houston 2.

Glenn Braggs and Reggie Sanders hit two-run homers to enable the Reds to bounce back from a three-game sweep in Atlanta. Sanders' shot in the seventh off Bud Black (9-5) broke a 2-2 tie.

Jose Rijo (9-8) struck out five, gave up six hits and walked none in seven innings before getting relief help from Norm Charlton and Rob Dibble, who recorded his 14th save.

Randy Tomlin pitched eight innings of five-hit ball to win for the first time since June 22 as the visiting Pirates beat the Cardinals for their eighth straight victory.

The Pirates moved 3 1/2 games ahead of second-place Montreal and knocked the sagging Cardinals 10 games back.

Braves 6, Dodgers 2

Terry Pendleton drove in three runs with a pair of singles to lead the Braves past the Dodgers in Atlanta.

Pendleton, who has 10 RBIs during his latest eight-game hitting streak, knocked in two runs in Atlanta's three-run first inning and his 69th of the season in a two-run second inning.

Cubs 9, Mets 1
Doug Dascenzo, starting in place of injured Sammy Sosa, hit a two-run double that highlighted a wild seven-run fourth inning, leading the Cubs over David Cone and the visiting Mets.

Phillies 3, Expos 1
Rookie right-hander Ben Rivera earned his first major-league victory and Ricky Jordan homered and scored twice as Philadelphia defeated visiting Montreal, ending the Phillies' five-game losing streak.

Padres 4, Astros 2
Jim Deshaies pitched five-hit ball over 8 1-3 innings against his former team as the Padres beat the Astros.

Deshaies (2-2) walked four of the first 10 batters he faced, yet held the Astros hitless until Rafael Ramirez singled in the fifth inning. He finished with five walks and three strikeouts before leaving in the ninth, when Houston scored both its runs.

Randy Myers finished up for his 11th straight save and 24th overall.

Gary Sheffield had two hits, including an RBI single, to help the Padres claim their fourth victory in five games.

Astros starter Pete Harnisch (4-9) was the loser.

Take Jose Canseco out of the lineup and the Oakland Athletics don't seem to skip a beat.

The A's slugging right fielder was ejected Friday night for the second straight game for arguing balls and strikes. But with Mark McGwire and Carney Lansford in the lineup and Dennis Eckersley waiting patiently in the bullpen, he wasn't missed.

McGwire hit a pair of home runs, his 34th and 35th. Lansford added a grand slam and Eckersley stretched

Cotton Bowl will be hard to recognize in '93

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - There's one thing that won't be changed about the Cotton Bowl this year. It will still be played on Jan. 1. That's about it.
 From the grass on the field replacing the artificial surface to the new starting time to the parade that won't be to the new network televising the game, changes abound in the old Dallas institution at Fair Park.

SMU looking for SWC win

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer
DALLAS (AP) - It last happened on Nov. 15, 1986 in Lubbock. The Southern Methodist Mustangs held on for a 13-7 victory over the Texas Tech Red Raiders.
 It was the last Southwest Conference victory for the Mustangs. They were knocked out of collegiate football for two years because of the NCAA death penalty. Since then, SMU is 4-29 but the Mustangs are 0-24 in conference games.

SMU had its chances last year and coach Tom Rossley expects the Mustangs to finally get back into the victory column against its SWC brethren this season.
 SMU lost 17-6 to Arkansas and 18-10 to Texas Christian. Both games the Mustangs could easily have won.
 In a season closer against No. 22 ranked Tulsa, SMU led for most of the game but lost 26-22.
 "That last game probably summarized about where our program is right now," Rossley said. "We're right on the edge of getting there. We went into the fourth quarter in several games with an opportunity to win."
 "We've thought about that a lot in the offseason and how we're going to react next season when we get to that point in a game. We have to force things to happen in the fourth quarter and follow through with a win. We need a little confidence to put us over the edge."

Rossley's goal in the offseason was "to become quicker and thicker."
 For the first time since 1986, SMU will have four full classes on the team. There are 35 seniors on the preseason roster.
 "Having four full classes should help in several ways," Rossley said. "We should be able to keep fresh people on the field, particularly late in the game when people get tired. Hopefully, having a fourth class will help us get through the fourth quarters with wins."

SMU is hoping its run-and-shoot offense will click this season. It was decimated last year by quarterback injuries.
 Mike Romo and Dan Freiburger went down with knee injuries.
 Todd Ritz, a junior, finished out the last three games of the season.
 "Our biggest question is the quarterback position," Rossley said. "We've got to solidify that spot. Freiburger missed spring practice but should be ready for the fall. Romo probably will not be back. Ritz got a lot of work in the spring but hurt his knee. Todd should be ready for the season."

"Calvin Burdick (a sophomore) had a good spring game but he hasn't played in a regular season game. We'll just have to see what happens."
 Rossley believes his defense could be solid.

"We could be a good defensive team," he said. "If we can win the turnover war we should win some games."

Rossley said the Mustangs will have to run the ball better.
 "One of our goals is to have a better running game," Rossley said. "Rongea Hill made second team all conference and gained a lot of confidence in himself."

SMU's only victory in the 11-game season was over Tulane. The Mustangs have a soft schedule to get the season started in 1992.

The first three games are against Tulane, North Texas, and New Mexico.

Then the Mustangs hope they are ready to win their first conference game in six years when they meet TCU.

The grass is being put in for the World Cup soccer tournament; Dallas is scheduled to host quarterfinal games in 1994.

There have been complaints for years about the Cotton Bowl surface so it's doubtful many coaches or players will mourn the passing of artificial fibers.

However, there are a lot of kids and parents shaking their heads over the demise of the annual Cotton Bowl parade.

CBS televised the parade for decades and it was where the high-stepping Kilgore Rangerettes were introduced to the nation.

NBC has the Cotton Bowl contract now and will continue televising the Rose Bowl Parade but not the Cotton.

One would think a city with the pride of Dallas would do something on its own by financing the parade.

Does Ross Perot know about this? Ross could get this baby back on its feet with pocket change.

"NBC told us they don't have a place for it," said Jim Brock, committee chairman of the Cotton Bowl.

Notice Brock no longer runs the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association. That job has been handed over to Rick Baker, who is the new general manager in a power coup that took away Brock's vice president title.

NBC getting the Cotton Bowl opens up another box of stale cereal. Just how big a financial hit did the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association take when CBS told the CBAA it didn't want to dance with it anymore?

The exact figures aren't known, but what is known is that the Cotton Bowl lost money off its old deal with CBS.

How much?
 "The Cotton Bowl took about a million dollar haircut," one source said.

The Cotton Bowl can't afford many more such haircuts.

Its lawyers are still wrangling with the IRS over whether sponsor money should be tax exempt. Congress is getting into the act and there has been a favorable shift in sentiment toward the bowls.

However, recent low TV ratings have hurt the Cotton Bowl and that's why CBS wanted out.

The new bowl alignment should help the Cotton Bowl.

The Cotton, Orange, and Sugar Bowls are the heart of a new coalition that includes other minor bowls plus the Southwest, Big Eight, Southeast, Atlantic Coast, and Big East conferences and independent Notre Dame. Other bowls are involved in a second coalition, too.

The Cotton Bowl has a chance for a national championship, depending on how the Southwest Conference "host" team performs.

It's a complicated procedure, but if the Cotton Bowl has a team ranked higher than the Orange and the Sugar it gets first pick from a pool that includes the ACC (Florida State is now a member), the Big East (Miami is now a member) and Notre Dame.

"We could have a dynamite game," Brock said, "depending on how our champion performs."

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum said he likes the new bowl setup.

"There's more order to it and it takes the politics out," Slocum said. "And you still have a chance to be part of a national championship game."

The final Associated Press poll will determine how the teams are treated by the coalition.

Oh, there's another change about the Cotton Bowl. The starting time will no longer be 12:30 p.m.

It will either be noon or 3:30 p.m.

If the Fiesta Bowl, a member of the coalition, has a Pac-10 team, then the Cotton Bowl kickoff will be at 3:30 p.m. The Pac-10 won't let its members play against each other on television.

A late starting Fiesta Bowl kickoff would put a Pac-10 against the Rose Bowl which always features the Pac-10 champion.

Pull for no Pac-10 team in the Fiesta Bowl.

Just imagine. Dallas in January. A game ending around 7 p.m. in darkness with a cold wind out of the north. Bring your longjohns.

Punt, Pass, Kick
NEW YORK (AP) - The Punt, Pass and Kick competition, long a feature in the NFL, will be restored in its entirety this season.
 After being dropped for several years, it was restored partially in 1991 with five cities competing. All 28 will take part this fall.
 Among youngsters who attracted attention in competition in the past and later became NFL stars were Jim Kelly of Buffalo and Bernie Kosar of Cleveland.

Any coach would love Slocum's problems

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer
COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP)
-Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum has happy problems to discuss.

He's happy to talk about the growing numbers problem he has at quarterback, bolstered by the return of Jeff Granger.

There's another problem of finding enough playing time for two good running backs, Greg Hill and Rodney Thomas.

Then, there's the problem of high expectations the Aggies face, being picked to repeat their 1991 SWC championship with ease.

These are the problems that make a coach giggle.

"It's a challenge for the coaching staff to make sure we play with our feet on the ground every game," Slocum said. "There are no guarantees that we'll win a game but given my preference, I'd rather be picked."

"The good programs around the country don't sneak up on people. Miami and Notre Dame get everyone's best shot when they play. I hope we have that type of program."

It would be hard to exclude the 1992 Aggies from the elite list. Despite several notable losses, (quarterback Bucky Richardson, cornerback Kevin Smith and linebacker Quentin Coryatt) the Aggies are double-tough.

Slocum has 16 returning starters that made the Aggies favorites to repeat as SWC titlists that's underscored with the addition of Granger, who changed his mind about giving up football to concentrate on baseball.

Granger likely will start but Slocum won't hand him the job.

"I haven't seen Jeff do anything in football since last fall," Slocum said. "He obviously has more experience than anyone we have. He's had two years of coaching and played as our backup last year. He adds experience to the contest."

Granger played in nine games last season. He hit 22 of 48 passes for 395 yards and five touchdowns. He was unexpectedly cut from the U.S. Olympic baseball squad and elected to rejoin the football team.

Senior Kent Petty and redshirt freshmen Matt Miller and Tommy Preston are the other quarterback candidates. True freshman Cory Pullig also is a part of the mix.

"I'd say the position is still up in the air," Slocum said. "At this point, we'll start and see where Jeff is and how he compares to the other guys but he's already been through a lot of quarterback meetings."

Hill got his Aggie career off at a record pace in 1991. He gained 1,126 yards on 240 carries and scored 12 touchdowns, becoming the first freshman in SWC history to gain 1,000 yards.

Richardson and right tackle Keith Alex are the only offensive losses, giving whoever plays quarterback the hope of strong protection. The top three receivers from last year, Tony Harrison, Brian Mitchell and Ryan Matthews, also return.

There are able replacements on defense for the big-play artistry of Smith and Coryatt.

But here's where Slocum has a problem that really does bother him.

"Think of all the big plays you can remember last year," Slocum said. "The punt returns and interceptions by Kevin Smith, the big hits by Quentin and the runs by Bucky."

"Most of those plays are made by guys who are gone now. Several of those guys are once-in-a-lifetime players. No one has the depth to replace those guys."

Cornerback Derrick Frazier, free safety Patrick Bates and linebacker Marcus Buckley will help Slocum forget his 1991 lineup.

"What you hope for is that a guy like Derrick will come out of the shadow and emerge as a good player," Slocum said. "Patrick Bates has a chance to become a premier player and so does Buckley."

"They'll be comparable to the players around the country at their positions."

The Aggies finished last season 10-2, including a 10-2 loss to Florida State in the Mobil Cotton Bowl. They'll open this season Aug. 26 against Stanford in the Disneyland Pigskin Classic.

Applications for employment for the upcoming season will be made through the Texas Employment Commission at 700 25 Mile Avenue, Hereford his major-league record with his 40th straight save as the A's held off the Kansas City Royals 8-6 for their sixth straight win.

Home runs are expected from McGwire, who has five multiple-homer games this season. But Lansford?

"Every time I hit a ball up in the air like that, it surprises me," said Lansford, who has only four home runs this season and just 16 since 1987.

The slam was the third of his career and first since 1983, back in the days when he was averaging 15 homers a season.

Bob Welch (10-5) pitched five innings and allowed just one run on five hits. Rookie left-hander Dennis Moeller (0-2) was tagged for seven runs and eight hits in just 4 1-3 innings.

In other games, New York topped Boston 7-5, Detroit knocked off Toronto 7-2, Cleveland stopped Baltimore 5-4 in 13 innings, California beat Chicago 3-1, and Texas outlasted Seattle 7-6 in 11 innings. The Brewers-Twins game was postponed by rain and was to be made up Saturday as part of a double-header.

Tigers 7, Blue Jays 2

Skeeter Barnes hit a three-run homer to help the host Tigers snap a four-game losing streak and win for only the third time in 14 games.

Yankees 7, Red Sox 5

Matt Nokes drove in four runs - three with his 15th homer - as the host Yankees withstood a five-run Red Sox rally in the eighth inning.

Indians 5, Orioles 4

The Indians used their first triple play since May 23, 1981, and Paul Sorrento's RBI single in the 13th inning to win.

Angels 3, White Sox 1

Rob Ducey had two doubles and scored twice as the Angels ended a three-game losing streak.

Rangers 7, Mariners 6

Monty Fariss hit a two-run homer in the 11th inning as visiting Texas ended a four-game losing streak and handed the Mariners their sixth straight loss.

Fariss's second homer of the season came against Russ Swan (3-8). Todd Burns (3-4) was the winner.

Rafael Palmeiro snapped a 4-4 tie in the eighth with his 13th home run, but Ken Griffey Jr. tied it at 5 in the bottom of the ninth with his 19th homer.

Jeff Huson also homered for the Rangers.

OLYMPICS

His Unified teammates, Maxim Tarasov and Igor Trandekov, won the gold and silver. Both cleared 19-0 1/2, but Tarasov got the gold because he needed only one jump to clear that height while Trandekov needed three.

The medals helped boost the Unified Team's total to 100, four more than the United States. The Unified Team has 42 golds, the United States 31.

Joyner-Kersey, the women's long jump gold medalist in Seoul, had similar wind problems and settled for bronze behind gold medalist Heike Drechsler of Germany and silver medalist Inessa Kravets of the Unified Team.

"I've jumped in conditions with the wind in my face before," Joyner-Kersey said. "That's no excuse."

Jennifer Capriati gave her best shots to Steffi Graf, beating her for the first time and pulling off one of the biggest upsets of the Olympics to take the women's singles gold, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Capriati, ranked No. 6, now has beaten each player in the top five.

The two-time defending U.S. men's volleyball champions, after all their bravado and bald-headed protests, practically beat themselves, losing in four sets to Brazil in the semifinals. They'll play Cuba for the bronze Sunday, and Brazil will play the Netherlands for the gold.

The U.S. men's freestyle wrestling team felt much better, ending up with three golds, two silvers and a bronze.

The U.S. women's basketball players came here certain they would win their third straight Olympic gold. But despite the presence of six players from the team at Seoul, they lost in the semifinals to the Unified Team and settled for bronze with an 88-74 victory over Cuba.

The Unified Team won the gold, beating China 76-66.

The women's volleyball team beat Brazil in straight sets for the bronze, one day after losing to Cuba in the semis. Cuba won the gold, beating the Unified Team in four sets.

Preparing your child for school

Beginning school can bring many mixed feelings. Encouraging children to talk about what they might be thinking is one of the best ways to help prepare for their first days at school. Here are three tips to help you help your youngsters cope with the classroom, long before they enter one:

1. If your child has friends in the neighborhood who will be beginning to the same school, you might arrange with other parents for the children to get together and play.

2. An unhurried morning routine at home can help your child get ready for school without haste or anxiety. And sending him or her off with a cheerful "Have a good day at school" is much more encouraging than a warning such as "Be good".

3. Encourage your children to watch, and join them in watching, a special August series of MISTER ROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD programs on PBSA devoted to preparing children for school. August 10-14 focuses on STARTING SCHOOL. August 17-21 includes a three-day musical story about a School for Growing, and August 24-28 features the newest week of programs about LEARNING. Mister Rogers reassures his young viewers that school is "an exciting new adventure and something to look forward to-a milestone in growing up." For a free booklet, "When Your Child Goes To School," send a self-addressed, business-size, stamped envelope to: School, c/o MISTER ROGERS' NEIGHBORHOOD, 4802 Fifth Avenue, Pittsburgh, PA 15213.

By BEVERLY HARDER County Extension Agent HOME CANNING DOES IT PAY OFF?

People home can foods for many reasons. Those often cited include to save money, to have healthier food, to know what's in the food, to can for special diets and for personal satisfaction. For those who also enjoy gardening or producing their own, it often becomes a way to relax and gives a sense of pride to enjoy or share with others the bounty of their efforts.

But does home canning really save money? A study done at Pennsylvania State University found that home canners could save half the cost of buying commercially canned foods only if they produced their own garden vegetables and fruits and discounted the value of their labor. If produce is bought at farmer's markets, roadside stands or pick-your-own operations, the home-canned items would cost about the same as similar canned items in the supermarket, particularly those on sale. And of course, the initial costs of purchasing necessary equipment must be considered by the "new" home canner. Basically, however, of the three major methods of preservation, canning is the least expensive followed by drying, then freezing.

Is home canned food more nutritious than commercially canned food? The answer may depend on how the produce is handled between harvest and canning. In many cases, vegetables begin to lose vitamins immediately after harvest. As many as half of the vitamins may be lost within a few days unless produce is cooled or preserved. Even refrigerated produce loses many vitamins within a week or two.

To maintain maximum nutrient content, a good practice is to rush vegetables from "vine to jar," work only with quantities as you can handle quickly and refrigerate what you can't preserve and use or can it as soon as possible. In commercial canning, produce is quickly canned to address this problem. The advantages of home canning may be lessened when poor quality foods are used. Canning does not improve the quality of foods. Also prolonged storage can decrease quality, flavor, texture, color and nutrients. For best quality retention, store in a cool, dark place and use within a year.

The heating process during canning does destroy some of vitamins A, C thiamin and riboflavin. Once canned, additional losses of these are from 5 percent to 20 percent a year.

Is home canning worth it? It depends. But it may be well to remember that produce in supermarkets, because of length of time from harvest to distribution to markets and increased handling, may not be as nutritious as home or commercially canned foods.

Guests were escorted by the groom's brother, Jim Hund; the groom's brother-in-law, Joe Hochstein; and the bride's brother, Kenneth McPherson.

The bride's niece, Kenzie McPherson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McPherson, was flower girl. The bride's nephew, Matthew McPherson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis McPherson, was ring bearer.

Candles were lit by Hilary McPherson.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white bridal satin floor-length gown with a chapel-length train. The hemline of the gown and train were edged with scalloped lace and a large satin bow accented the back waist. The satin bodice was decorated with schiffli lace and pearls, and the Queen Anne collar was created from schiffli lace and pearls with dangling pearls on the center front resting on sheer fabric forming the top of the bodice. The short, puffed sleeves featured schiffli cuffs and were accented with pearls. Three scallops of lace and pearls formed the V-shaped dropped front waist.

The three-layered tulle bridal veil with ripple edging was made by the bride. It was attached to a crown of silk flowers and pearls. She carried a cascading arrangement of cream roses and cream carnations accented with mauve pixi carnations and baby's breath.

The matron of honor wore a mauve satin dropped waist dress fashioned with puffed sleeves and a full-gathered skirt with a high-low hemline lined with burgundy satin. A soft burgundy bow decorated the side front of the dress and the bodice was designed with a jeweled neckline.

The bridesmaids wore the same style dress as the matron of honor. The dresses were made of burgundy satin with mauve lining and featured mauve soft bows at the side fronts.

The flower girl's dress, designed with a full gathered skirt, was made of mauve satin and featured a jeweled neckline and puffed sleeves. It was trimmed with two rows of lace and ribbon and the overskirt of sheer cream nylon was edged with mauve ribbon. Tiny mauve bows accented the center front and the sleeve cuffs. In her hair, she wore a wreath of white flowers trimmed with a tulle bow, pearls and ribbons.

The candlelighter was attired in a cream cotton moire dress featuring a jeweled neckline, puffed sleeves, and a full gathered skirt with an overlay of cream moire pulled back and secured with burgundy satin bows. The bodice was also decorated with burgundy satin bows. She wore a wreath of white flowers adorned with a tulle bow, pearls and ribbons.

Altar servers included Julie, Truett and Janae Schlabs, the groom's cousins and children of Ray and Charla Schlabs.

Gift bearers were Rose and Frank McDonald, the groom's sister and brother-in-law; Carol Hund, the groom's sister; and Sherri Hund, the groom's sister-in-law.

Scripture readers were the groom's sister, Pat Hahn, and the bride's uncle, Steve Couch.

The reception was held in St. Anthony's cafeteria, gym.

Mrs. Glenn Watson invited guests to register at a table covered with a mauve satin cloth. It was decorated with a basket of moire roses filled with birdseed, wedding bear figurines and a hat trimmed in burgundy.

Angela Hochstein, Amy McPherson and Kelly Watson served cake.

The groom's chocolate cake with chocolate icing was decorated with the symbol of Texas Tech University and fresh fruit.

Other tables were covered with white cloths and centered with burgundy edged cream mums arranged in pots.

Leaving for a cruise to the Bahamas, the bride wore a cream linen sleeveless dress fashioned with a large collar edged in lace. The flared skirt gathered at a princess waistline.

The couple will make their home in Lubbock.

Accent on Health

Summer heat, combined with humidity, poses a potentially deadly threat to Texans.

Health officials warn that heat stress, or hyperthermia, causes about 200 deaths and thousands of illnesses each year in the U.S. The victims are usually the elderly, the very young, or people weakened by other illnesses, although prolonged heat stress can be fatal to anyone.

Dr. Erik K. Svenkerud, medical consultant for the Bureau of Disease Control and Epidemiology at the Texas Department of Health (TDH), said that high temperature alone is physically tolerable to most people. Combined with high humidity though, heat can cause a person's natural cooling system, perspiration, to work overtime. "If a person fails to replace fluids and salts they lose during perspiration," Dr. Svenkerud said, "dehydration can

The symptoms of dehydration include muscle cramps, dizziness, nausea, low blood pressure and headaches. "These are serious warning signs," Dr. Svenkerud said. "Anyone with these symptoms should immediately find shade, ventilation and fluids--preferably water--to drink until the symptoms subside."

He explained that if fluids are not soon replaced, heat stroke can follow, causing sudden weakness, headache, confusion leading to loss of consciousness, brain damage and death.

To avoid overheating, Dr. Svenkerud said, people should wear light-colored, loose-fitting clothing and drink more than their normal intake of water. Those with heart or respiratory conditions or who take medications should be alert to any signs of physical problems.

The bride is the daughter of William E. (Bill) and Barbara Allen of 203 Sunset Drive and the bridegroom is the son of Kenneth and Shannon Hagar of Yucca Hills. Grandparents include Audrey Allen, W. P. (Hap) and Mary Kay Hagar and Reba Watson, all of Hereford. Honorary grandmothers are Vinita Wear and Gladys Setliff.

The church was decorated by candelabra, accented with greenery and Queen Anne's lace, arrangements of white gladioli, and ficus trees with the bases flanked in waverly floral print. Moire pew bows lined the center section of the church. Guests were invited to register by the bride's cousin, Jennifer Bays, at a table covered with linen and decorated with roses, baby's breath and baby pictures of the bridal couple.

Bridget Baker of Austin served as maid of honor and Bobby Robbins of Idalou was best man.

Laura Kerr of Abilene and Alissa Hambright of Midland were bridesmaids. Junior bridesmaids, who also lit the candles, were the bride's cousin, Julie Emory of Lubbock, and the groom's cousin, Laura Carver of Dalhart.

Serving as groomsmen and ushers were Brent Dunn of Wichita, Kan., Heath Crenwelge of Fredricksburg and Brandon Pinson of Lubbock. Also, escorting guests were the bride's brothers, Brent Allen of Austin and Blake Allen of Atlanta, Ga.

The Capella Chorus of Central Church of Christ, under the direction of Dale Hollingsworth, sang "Walk Hand in Hand" as the candles were lit and "Whither Thou Goest" which was the song played at the groom's parents' wedding. "There Is Love" was also performed and "Sunrise, Sunset" was sung as the bride entered. The chorus also sang the prayer, "Agnus Dei."

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin designer gown fashioned with a Seville lace overlay and a schiffli lace bodice. The gown was entirely sprinkled in pearls and sequins and featured Ricocco sleeves and a detachable train with a peplum. The hem of the train was edged in pearls and sequins.

The fingertip bridal veil featured a pearl tiara with sequins. The bride carried white roses.

As good luck pieces, the bride had a sixpence given to her by close friend, Gladys Setliff; her mother's wedding ring; and an antique handkerchief furnished by Costaline Lee.

The bridesmaids wore teal linen suits accented with off-the-shoulder sleeves and fashioned after the bride's gown. The junior bridesmaids wore dresses fashioned similar to the bridesmaids' dresses in waverly floral. All bridal attendants wore pearls, the bride's sorority jewel, and carried long stem roses. He is a member of Who's Who in American Colleges & Universities, Alpha Chi, Alpha Lambda Delta, and Alpha Mu Gamma Honor Societies. He also served as student body president at ASU. He will attend Harvard Law School this fall where he will study tax law.

Heed safety tips

Computers are part of classroom life now, but with them comes concern about eyestrain from using the machines.

Some safety tips from the American Optometric Association:

- Lower overall room lighting and use a desk lamp for reference material.
- Don't let lamps reflect on the screen. Draw shades or curtains to reduce window glare.
- Adjust screen brightness to three or four times the brightness of the room.
- Use monochrome - not color - screens for easier eye focusing.
- Equipment and furniture should be adjusted for children so they can avoid awkward head or body movement.
- Place reference material as close to the screen as possible to minimize head and body movement.
- Let children take 10- to 15-minute rest breaks at least once every two hours, or whenever their eyes feel tired.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My mother, who is in her early 70s and lives in another city, has become so fearful of crime that she now carries a gun. My sister and I love her very much and we want to have her visit us, but this gun has us terrified.

Mom had a stroke and takes medication that has slowed up her reflexes. Her eyesight has diminished and even under the best of circumstances, she should not be handling a weapon. Also, she has no license so carry a gun, which means she is breaking the law.

Both my sister and I hate guns and are afraid to have them around our children. When Mom comes to visit, she brings her gun into our homes. She also has a loaded gun under the seat of the car.

We've tried telling Mom that if sh wants to keep a gun in her house, it's her business, but to keep it away from us. We've told her in a no-nonsense way that we don't want her to bring a gun into our homes but she laughs it off and brings it anyway. On a recent visit, she was almost arrested at the airport when they discovered that she had a pistol. She got off because, luckily, the gun wasn't loaded.

What can we do, Ann? We love Mom and know that she's afraid to be defenseless. We know, too, that she watches those sensational shows on TV and reads about a lot of crime in the newspapers. I'm envisioning headlines that say, "Distracted Grandma Mistakes Grandchild for Burglar."

Please help us.--GunShy in Rhode Island

DEAR RHODE ISLAND: Your mother has no business bringing a gun into your homes when she knows you don't approve. And for that matter, she shouldn't be driving with poor eyesight and slowed reflexes. You and your sister have every right to frisk Mom before you let her in the door. If this sounds cruel, let me assure you that it's better than having her "accidentally" shoot one of your children.

P.S.: A can of Mace in her purse can give her all the protection she needs and it won't kill anybody. (Check to see if Mace is legal in your state).

Gem of the Day: Education is a wonderful thing. If you couldn't sign your name, you'd have to pay cash.

Put your best foot forward

School bells will be ringing soon. And for many parents throughout the United States, it's time to get their children off on the right foot.

In pursuit of President Bush's goal of "Building a Better America," an army of about 46 million kids will be attending classes - 17 percent for the first time, in pre-kindergarten, kindergarten, and the first grade.

Foremost among the pre-school priorities for parents is the need to get their children properly immunized. The first step is to contact the local health department for immunization schedules regarding the required vaccinations - especially DTP (diphtheria, tetanus, and pertussis) and polio, both of which require a series of doses.

The importance of maintaining full immunization is as great today as it ever was, according to Kenneth Anderson, a public health advisor at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. He warns that some children's diseases, particularly measles, are on the increase.

Of course, preparation also includes such varied chores as purchasing school supplies and making arrangements for car pools.

Not to be overlooked is the high-priority item of a wardrobe. No easy task, clothing shopping requires many hours to get the proper sizes and accessories.

Although Johnny and Susie are not always needed at the clothing store, their presence at the shoe store is essential. Many of the things that can go wrong with our feet begin in childhood.

To avoid problems, selection of proper-fitting shoes is of the utmost importance. Ill-fitting shoes can deform feet and aggravate existing problems. Shoes should be at least a quarter inch to a half inch longer than the longest toe of the larger foot.

Betty Crocker Tips

Q. I have an hors d'oeuvre recipe that calls for "Taramasalata." What is it and where can I find it? L.D., Ft. Myers Beach, FL
A Taramasalata is a creamy Greek ad Turkish specialty made from tarma—a dried, salted, pressed fish roe—mixed with lemon juice, olive oil, garlic and sometimes milk-soaked bread. The combination is served with bread and crackers or as dip for crisp vegetables. Tarma can be found in Greek or Italian specialty foods shops.

Q. Do you recommend freezing pizza before or after baking? R.D., Falconer, NY
A. You'll get best results if you partially bake the pizza wit its toppings. Bake pizza for about half the recommended time and cool completely on wire rack. To freeze, place pizza on a cardboard circle.

WE'VE DONE IT!! After months of promises, the Deaf Smith County Library now has VIDEOS!! Now don't expect Friday the 13th or Home Alone...we're not out to compete with local rental stores. We prefer to fill a niche with literary and educational videos that are not widely available on the retail market. The library's videos, by the way, are being provided by local businesses through the efforts of the Friends of the Library. Here is a list of what has been provided so far, and who has provided them:

- Cathedral - Gilliland Insurance Associates
 - The Age of Flight - Kitty Hawk - Gilliland Insurance Associates
 - Visions of Adventure (Maps & Globes) - A.O. Thompson Abstract
 - Remember Pearl Harbor - Plains Insurance Agency
 - The Draw Squad, Volume 1 - Mom & Me Photography & Frames
 - Miss Manners on Weddings - Wishes
 - The Chronicles of Narnia (Parts 1-4) Edwards Pharmacy
- For a complete list, as well as a description of subject matter, come by the library. We also have several other videos that were given by individuals or were acquired by the library through more or less "normal" means. Which brings up a point...if YOU have any videos around the house that you feel you have gotten your use out of, bring them to the library! (No pirated copies, please). OR, if you would like to donate the money for a particular video, or just donate to the Friends of the Library Video Fund, you may do so at the library. We deeply appreciate the generosity of all donors.
- This is probably as good a time as any to briefly explain the video policy. Patrons may check out two videos per library card. Videos will be checked out for a two-day period, renewable once (barring outstanding requests). Overdues are charged $1.50 per day per title and there is a $1.00 charge if they are not returned. A copy of the complete policy is available at the circulation desk.
- Here's a cheery thought: if you check out a book tomorrow, it will not be due until after school starts! And here are some of our new books to keep you occupied until then:

Colony by Anne Rivers Siddons has been on the best-seller list for several weeks now. Ninety year old Maude Chambliss, waiting for her granddaughter to take her home from a summer colony in Maine, looks back on her rich life and the friends, family and their problems with which they have dealt. The jacket notes read like a soap opera and promise a lot of "intense and powerfully appealing" reading.

Cairo, 1942 is the setting for City of Gold, Len Deighton's latest spy thriller. Captain Bert Cutler, late of the Glasgow police, has been brought to Egypt to find Rommel's spy and plug the intelligence leak that threatens the success of Allied attempts to stop the Axis juggernaut. Aristocrats, black marketeers, arms dealers, Tsarists, and who-knows-what-all mingle in an atmosphere of social gaiety, explosive politics and sudden violence.

Non-fiction books include The Working Mother's Guilt Guide, The Ultimate HORse Book, To The Promised Land (a photographic essay of Mexican immigrants), and Fire in the Wind, a biography of Dickey Chappelle, one of the leading female war photographers of the last fifty years.

For the first time in several months, we have an artist displaying at the library. Augustine Castillo III is exhibiting his reproductions of comic book characters. Now don't look for Mickey Mouse or Bugs Bunny, although there's no doubt he would excel with those subjects, too. These are "super-hero" types, an the artist has done an outstanding job, especially for a fifteen-year old. Augustine has been drawing since he was four and has only had a few art lessons. He is the son of Augustine and Lupe Castillo and a sophomore at HHS. He plays trombone in the Mighty Maroon Band and is active at St. Anthony's Church. Stephen King is his favorite author.

We'll tell you about another displayer next week. In the meantime, keep cool with a book (or video) from the library.

— YOUR EYES —

HOW OLDER DRIVERS SEE

Many older drivers feel constrained when the sun goes down because they can't see well enough to drive at dusk or after. There's a reason: older eyes need more light to see by -- whether just reading in a chair or on the road. As the years progress, the driver may have more difficulty shifting from near-vision to distance, differentiating colors or reading signs.

In response to an aging populations, the Department of Transportation has recommended easier-to-read signs and better configuration of traffic and left-turn lanes.

What the older driver can do to help: get a stronger eyeglass prescription for night driving than the glasses used during the day; choose frames that don't interfere with side vision, and keep eyeglass lenses absolutely clean so more light comes through. Similarly, they may find it easier to drive at night if the car windshield is not tinted.

Morris, Beene vows spoken

Tracy Dawn Morris and Robert Murray Beene, both of Oklahoma City, Okla., were united in marriage Saturday afternoon, Aug. 1, at Penn Avenue Church of the Nazarene in Oklahoma City. Officiating at the marriage was the Rev. Harlan Buettner of the church.

Parents of the bride are Mr. and Mrs. William R. Morris of Oklahoma City, Okla. and the bridegroom's parents are Mrs. Jean Beene of Hereford and W.C. Beene of Amarillo.

Decorating the church were two spiral candelabra which flanked an arch candelabrum, all accented with English ivy. White bows marked the pews and further enhancing the wedding setting were the kneeling bench and a unity candle.

The bride's sister, Tammy M. Hauser, served as matron of honor and the groom's brother, Jay Beene, was best man.

Bridesmaids included Tammy M. Hauser, Kari Weir, Rachel Meador and Shelli Todd. Groomsman were the groom's brothers, Jay and Steve Beene, and Robin Zwirtz.

Escorting guests were Dan Hauser, the bride's brother-in-law, and Brian Stanaland of Oklahoma City, Okla., a former Hereford resident.

The groom's nieces, Kylie and Kandice Culp, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Culp, were flower girls. Ring bearer was Ryan Buettner, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Harlan Buettner.

Lighting candles were John Summers and Micah Klussmann, both nephews of the groom. They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. David Summers and Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Klussmann, respectively.

Kari Weir sang "Love Will Be Our Home" and "There Is Love" was sung by Monty Nichols. The couple also performed a duet, "Household of Faith." Nichols provided accompaniment.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white satin designer gown fashioned with a lace wedding ring collar and modified sweetheart neckline with a fitted bodice, all heavily encrusted with seed pearls on delicate scalloped lace appliques. The long fitted sleeves were accented with beaded lace cutout appliques as was the full skirt which featured a back peplum at the basque waist. The skirt swept into a chapel-length train which was edged with matching scalloped lace. The open back neckline of the gown was draped with strands of pearls.

The bridal illusion tiered veil and blusher were attached to a forehead headband of small pearls. Sprays of lily-of-the-valley cascaded down one side of the beaded band.

She carried a cascading arrangement of red and white American beauty silk roses accessorized with gold fans and wedding color ribbons. To complete her ensemble, the bride wore pearl earrings.

Bridal attendants were attired in iridescent taffeta burgundy and midnight blue designer gowns. They carried American beauty silk red and white roses accented with English ivy and baby's breath and entwined with burgundy, white and navy ribbons.

The groom's sisters, Christie Culp and Elise Klussmann, invited guests to register at the reception held in Stearman Hall of the church.

Cari and Pam Reeds served the bride's cake and the groom's cake was served by the groom's sister, Cynthia Summers. Punch was poured from a flowing silver fountain.

The bride's three-tiered ivory cake was decorated in burgundy trim and placed above a flowing fountain. It was topped by crystal wedding bells hanging from a crystal heart accented with burgundy ribbon bows. Three satellite cakes, arranged on crystal columns, were also accented with burgundy trim. The bride's table, which was covered with a white cloth with burgundy and navy trim, was further enhanced with fresh ivy, red and white roses and baby's breath. The groom's cake was deep chocolate.

Leaving for a wedding trip to Myrtle Beach, S.C., the bride wore a white two-piece dress styled with a sweetheart neckline, petite side standup collar and white accessories.

The couple will make their home in Oklahoma City, Okla.

The bride is a 1986 graduate of South Stokes High School in Walnut Cove, N.C. She graduated from Surry Community College in Dobson, N.C. in 1988 and is a 1991 graduate of Southern Nazarene University in Bethany, Okla.

The groom, a 1987 graduate of Hereford High School, is a 1992 graduate of Southern Nazarene University where he majored in information systems. He is currently employed by CMI Trade Programs Inc. as a systems administrator.

Out of town wedding guests included Dan and Tammy Hauser of Walnut Cove, N.C., the bride's sister and brother-in-law; Jay Beene of Austin, the groom's brother; Steve Beene of Dallas, the groom's brother; Mr. and Mrs. David Summers and John of Amarillo; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Klussmann, Rebekah and Micah of Waco; Mr. and Mrs. Mike Culp and Kandice, Kylie and Kirk, all of Hereford; and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Humphries of Edgewood.

The rehearsal dinner, hosted by the groom's parents, was held at the Embassy Suites Hotel ballroom in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Area 4-H members vie for fashion awards

Karon Harder, a Deaf Smith County 4-Her was one of more than 100 youth from across Texas competing for "best dressed" honors July 30 through August 1 at the State 4-H Fashion Show in Houston. Harder, who won county and district honors to earn the Houston trip, began a series of interviews and competitive events at the J.W. Marriott on Thursday. The activities culminated in a fashion show and awards program open to the public on Saturday, August 1.

Over 9000 youth statewide participate annually in 4-H Clothing projects. Working under the leadership of an adult volunteer, 4-H'ers learn not only garment design and construction, but wardrobe planning, fabric care and how to be a good shopper. Participants are interviewed by panels of judges to assess their clothing knowledge, which, along with the practicality, style and fit of their garment, determines the winners of the county, district and state contests.

The fashion show is just one of the educational activities of the total 4-H clothing project. 4-H'ers may participate by entering outfits they sewed for themselves or those they bought after comparison shopping.

In addition to learning sewing construction and shopping skills, the youth develop poise and grooming skills by modeling in a public fashion show. Clothing skills are taught by volunteer leaders, older 4-H member, or the county Extension agent. More than 9,000 Texas youth participate in 4-H clothing projects.

This year's state fashion show was held at the J.W. Marriott Hotel in Houston. Participants were treated to a special lunch and awarded gifts from a number of sponsors.

Others participating from District I include Shawn Burrow of Randall

County who won first place in Buying Evening Wear; Regina Brittan and Stephan Harden of Carson County; Juanita Diaz of Potter County; and Laura Williams and Holly Abbot of Gray County.

The doer alone learneth.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Two years ago, my husband and I invited his brother, "Joey," to move from California and live with us. Joey was heavily into drugs and we thought our love and guidance might help him.

Well, he got over the drug habit but unfortunately he became addicted to something else—sex with our 15-year-old daughter from my first marriage. Joey was 36 at the time.

Needless to say, I was so angry I wanted to kill him. I insisted that Joey was old enough to know right from wrong and taking advantage of a teenage girl was pretty rotten. My husband kept saying, "It takes two."

It started some time back when I went downstairs at 1 o'clock in the morning to find the lights out, the TV off, and the two of them wrapped up in each other's arms. My daughter, "Betsy," said they had fallen asleep watching television. After that episode, there were other incidents, such as catching Joey in Betsy's room wearing only his underwear. Quite a few mornings I would wake up at 3:00 a.m. to the sound of Joey's alarm. I assumed he was going fishing. I later discovered he had been crawling into Betsy's bed in the wee hours of the morning.

Finally I told my husband, I'm not putting up with incest under my roof. Get your brother out of here." Joey then moved in with his mother and father.

Betsy continues to deny that they were ever lovers. She also insists that Joey isn't her real uncle. I say when I married my husband, his brother became my children's uncle.

Betsy is now 18 and Joey will be 39. They are still seeing each other.

Don't try to change a truck tire yourself if you're not a trained mechanic.

Betsy has moved out and is living with a girlfriend. Ann, I will never be able to accept their relationship and I know my in-laws won't either, if they ever find out about it. I don't have the courage to break their hearts with this mess and Joey doesn't have the guts to tell them himself.

What's going to happen to our whole family when this is finally out in the open?—Destroyed Family in Missouri

DEAR FAMILY: Betsy is of age now and free to see whomever she pleases. If she should decide to marry Joey, hold your nose and accept him.

Sometimes when the guy who was labeled "unacceptable" gets the stamp of approval, he suddenly loses his appeal. With a little luck, this might happen to Betsy. Keep your fingers crossed and I will, too.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been happily married to the greatest man in the world, but we now have a problem that is a threat to our lovemaking. He's grown a moustache.

That darned moustache is so sharp and prickly that kissing him is downright hazardous. I have tried to tell him how much it annoys me but he thinks it's a joke. Is it possible that your readers have some suggestions on how to make a sharp, prickly, skin-piercing moustache soft and "scratch-proof"?—Blotchy-Faced in Vestal, N.Y.

DEAR BLOTCHY: I'm printing your letter in the hope that some kind soul will come to the rescue.

I've never gotten chummy with a man who had a moustache but I imagine it would be like kissing a pincushion. How about it, women? Can you help this reader?

Gem of the Day: Good lighting is the next best thing for women who can't afford cosmetic surgery.

Drugs are everywhere. They're easy to get, easy to use and even easier to get hooked on. If you have questions about drugs, you need Ann Landers' booklet, "The Lowdown on Dope." MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

FAILURE FACTORS

I have never met an entrepreneur who planned to fail. They are usually very optimistic and prove to see only opportunities for success. However, in spite of the optimism, small business failures are common.

Depending on whose statistics you wish to believe, between 50 and 80 percent of all businesses started today will fail before their 5th anniversary. The causes for small business failures have been studied for decades. The studies identify several common factors. There are four that occur most often

Lack of planning

The No. 1 failure factor is lack of planning. Only a few of the more than 1,500 existing businesses and pre-venture entrepreneurs we have counseled, have a current, written business plan. Most who created a plan initially, have never updated it.

There are several advantages in creating a business plan for your firm. A well-written plan will focus the efforts and resources of your business. Choosing a mission and establishing goals and strategies will guide you in getting from where you are to where you want to go.

Your plan should include a description of the business and its markets and an analysis of the competition. You should set your goals and calculate start-up and operating costs. It is also wise to create financial and cash flow projections and determine alternative strategies.

Once you write your plan, you can use it as a benchmark to measure your progress. Checking actual operations against projections can reveal deviations early enough to avoid problems.

The No. 2 most common reason for failure is under-financing. Most businesses lack cash and equity when they start. Often they consume their initial cash in the early stages of start-up.

Borrowing after the fact, is much more difficult than properly assessing cash needs early in the game. Most banks are justifiably reluctant to loan money to a business that has consumed much of the original equity through operational losses early in the business cycle.

Under-financing is actually a result of poor planning as most businesses lose money during the first few months of operation. Therefore, a well-planned venture would use financial and cash flow projections to secure additional equity or lines of credit.

Operating blind

The No. 3 major failure factor is the lack of adequate information for good decision making. Many entrepreneurs are operating blind. The information needed to give the firm proper direction either does not exist or takes too long to get into the decision makers' hands.

Every business owner should compare current revenues and expenses to previous periods. Records should track the monthly profit or loss and the current cash flow position. The cost of goods sold, represent inventory level and the status of accounts receivable and payable should be readily available.

The No. 4 failure factor is that many entrepreneurs underestimate the tasks of managing a small business. Often business owners feel that they must do everything themselves, and this causes a pattern of stress that leads to costly errors. Long hours are required; paperwork is complex and unrelenting; and unanticipated problems constantly arise.

Common judgement errors include trying to grow too fast, selecting the wrong products or lines, carrying too much inventory, overestimating sales and underestimating expenses. Another error is buying equipment that promises efficiency but requires too much time to learn and operate effectively. Computers and software packages often fit into this area.

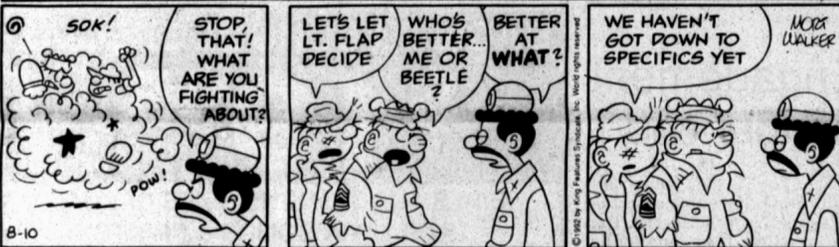

In summary, careful planning, adequate financing, staying on top of financial information and avoiding serious mistakes will improve your chances for success. AUSPICIOUS DESIGN ISOLATES THE MASTER BEDROOM SUITE

Screened Porch, Sun Deck And Hot Tub Too

© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

The kitchen, breakfast room, great room and master bedroom all have immediate access to the ultimate in casual living. The screened porch and sun deck with hot tub may be accessed from exterior doors provided in the breakfast room, great room and master bedroom. Many homes are provided with these amenities, but rarely are they so convenient as shown here. The entry foyer is flanked by a daytime half bath and a coat closet but your first impression is to the great room through the half partitions with 8" columns. The great room is embellished with a tray ceiling, wood burning fireplace and a wet bar.

The large kitchen with island cabinet, generous cabinet storage and work surface extends to the light and airy breakfast room.

The master bedroom is luxury exemplified by the availability of two walk in closets, compartmented bath with a garden tub and separate shower. The bath is topped off by a sloped ceiling and the bedroom is topped off by a tray ceiling. The sun deck is conveniently available to the master bedroom suite.

The formal dining room is totally separated from the main body of the plan but very favorably located to the kitchen. There are two bedrooms that share a central bath located at the opposite end of the plan from the master suite. An isolated laundry room, central basement stair and disappearing stair are also shown in this area. Garage access is through the laundry room.

The exterior is constructed of brick. Enhancements are corner quoins, combined hip and gable roof design, recessed entry, ornate window treatment and multi-lite shuttered windows.

The plan is Number 2553. It is a computer generated plan. It includes 2,512 square feet of heated space. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Question/Answer

Q: In 1990, we bought a new home with double-pane windows. I accidentally cracked the inner pane on one of the windows. This allowed moisture into the pane, causing fogging. I would like to know how to repair it. Two separate glass companies said it would cost several hundred dollars, but I'm skeptical. Can you help?

It's not as simple as removing one of the panes, replacing it with a new pane and then sealing it with a caulk gun. Double- and triple-glazed windows have an airtight seal between the panes. This is achieved under carefully controlled conditions at a factory, where the panes are cleaned and sealed together.

A: Unfortunately, there is no way to fix the pane. It must be replaced.

It's unlikely that a homeowner can duplicate this.

COLLEGE STATION--Anyone interested in selling Texas real estate for a living first must obtain a state real estate license. The steps involved are outlined in an updated report from the Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University.

"Obtaining a Texas Real Estate License" incorporates real estate license rules and regulations as amended in September 1991 by the Texas Legislature. The report covers licensing procedures and educational requirements necessary in acquiring either a salesman's or broker's license.

A comprehensive directory of educational institutions offering real estate courses and a list of current examination locations are included. All license applications are handled by the Texas Real Estate Commission in Austin. TREC is the regulatory agency responsible for administering the Texas Real Estate License Act.

"Obtaining a Texas Real Estate License" can be ordered from the Real Estate Center, TAMU, College Station, Texas 77843-2115. Cost is $1 for Texas residents and $2, out-of-state. A $1 handling charge should be added per order. The order should request publication NR-627.

The Real Estate Center was created in 1971 by the Texas Legislature to meet the needs of many audiences, including the real estate industry, instructors, researchers and the general public. The center's program of research and education offers publications, audiovisuals and computer software.

Casual look still "in"

Hereford High School students, Justin Griffith and Katerina Malouf, make a casual statement in school clothes for the fall. Justin is attired in the ever-popular jeans and T-shirt and Katerina wears green plaid city shorts and a deep green shirt.

SOAR should be a hit

One of the most effective programs in the Hereford public schools probably won't be used for the first few weeks.

After a while, though, officials think SOAR High will be a hit.

SOAR is an acronym for Step Out And Reach. The new program is designed for students in junior high and high school who have problems dealing with "regular" school.

Officials believe it will take at least two weeks, maybe a month, before referrals are made to the program. It will be taught at the Stanton Special Programs Center.

"This is a program we have needed for a long time," said Mal Manchee, who will oversee SOAR High and the new Prime Time school. "We probably should have done this 10 years ago. There's been a need for it for a long time."

Instead, Hereford will be one of the first schools to set up a program.

SOAR High is not a punishment, or a detention center. Instead, it is designed for students who may need a more structured environment to concentrate on academics while working on social and coping skills needed to get back to "regular" school.

(See SOAR HIGH, Page 5C)

Prime Time sets a new course here

Ask any student in the Hereford public schools about Alternative School.

You are likely to see a strange look on their face and comments ranging from "Ugh!" to an expletive.

There is no more Alternative School.

Make room for Prime Time.

Prime Time is still a discipline unit, like Alternative School. The school is not purely a punitive detention center; instead, it's a contrasting educational setting with a very rigid schedule and very concrete goals for each student.

Prime Time will be very structured to give students a chance to focus on academic and social skills. It will also help students master course requirements so they don't fall far behind in school.

Students in grade 5-12 will be recommended for placement in Prime Time only after all other alternatives (except expulsion) have been exhausted. Fifth and sixth graders will not be put together with older students. The classes will be held at the Stanton Special Programs Center.

Students will usually go to Prime Time for 15 days, but the length of stay in Prime Time will vary from a few days to the remainder of a semester. A student may stay longer than a semester based upon behavior while in Prime Time.

Prime Time teachers will meet with parents and students when a student enters Prime Time to look at the program and expectations.

Prime Time classes will begin each day at 8 a.m., and end at 3:45 p.m. Students who are tardy will lose PE and activity privileges for the day. Students are not admitted after 8:30 a.m. and will be considered truant if there has not been a call from a parent before 8:30 a.m.

Prime Time teachers will work with the student's home school teachers and administrators to figure a schedule of work.

While under Prime Time restrictions, students may not participate nor attend any school sponsored or extracurricular activities. They will also be expected to bring a lunch or pay for a lunch from the high school cafeteria.

A new Plexar phone system will be installed in the Hereford public schools this weekend, and almost all schools and school officials will have new phone numbers.

Many of the new numbers have a "363" prefix. That's part of the Plexar system that is made possible by the digital switch installed a few months ago by Southwestern Bell. The new service begins Tuesday.

Here are the new phone numbers, and a list of principals and officials, since many of those have changed in the past year.

Reviewing reading skills

Hereford children are preparing for the start of school which will resume Wednesday, Aug. 19. Although Jimmy Cook, who will be a first grader at Northwest School, doesn't read very well yet, he's excited about attending "real school." He is the son of Kenneth and Linda Cook.

To all the new teachers and students, we say WELCOME!

Comfort is the name of the game

Jami Parker, a student at Hereford High School, looks cool and comfortable in jean shorts with a matching striped T-shirt. Hereford stores carry the latest fall and winter fashions for all ages of youths.

Most kids dress for social effect

Okay, Mom and Dad, the baggy jeans with holes in the knees, the neon-colored sneakers and the baseball cap tilted backward are not your idea of attire to be worn in the serious pursuit of knowledge. But give the kids a break. Their clothing selections - especially for the first day of school - probably are calculated for social effect. Just think back to your own time and admit your own gear was off the wall, too.

Some funny knockoffs of menswear for kids show up in the McCall's pattern catalog this season. The "Jumping Beans" unisex patterns (6117 for sizes 2-6 and 6118 for sizes 7-14) include a menswear-inspired vest, pull-on pants or shorts and a long- or short-sleeved T-shirt. A girl's outfit (6122) includes a vest and tie, front button blouse and stirrup pants, or pull-on pleated skirt. They're shown done up in menswear fabrics (perhaps Dad's castoffs can be recycled for the materials).

Nonetheless, kids' tastes vary, and it may be that your little girl is an incipient princess and will be in her element with pretty prints and traditional designs from Laura Ashley. One three-piece outfit has a Bavarian flavor with floral corduroy skirt and matching suspenders, a red check ruffled-collar blouse and a crimson wool-knit jacket with navy piping. Another ensemble is a mix-and-match pinafore in colorful floral stripe that can be worn with a matching knapsack. In the sporting mode, there is a navy boiled wool jacquard jacket that can be worn with jodhpurs.

There are pretties in western-prairie style, for teen-agers and college-bound women, at J.C. Penney. A ruffled peasant blouse can be paired with an ankle-length chambray skirt that has its own flounced petticoat. "This look is always popular in the Southwest," observes Lucille Klein, women's fashion director for the department store chain. "Now, however, it's back on the fashion forefront with designers adding Native American and prairie influences."

The country-western classics that have become mainstream fashion are, of course, jeans. Penney's offers relaxed, outdoorsy versions for both sexes, including the five-pocket standard. These are a bit roomier than in previous years, with straighter legs and slightly wider bottoms to accommodate cowboy boots. Fabrics are stonewashed, acid-washed, and, according to Penney's, "literally beaten up." They also come in several colors in addition to blue.

From Bonjour comes a European interpretation of these American mainstays. Five-pocket jeans for girls are offered in basic blue and bright colors, and the boys' line includes rich dark colors like black, burgundy, mustard and the basic blues.

Country-style clothes can be given authentic touches with accessories like boots. True cowboy boots for boys and and round-toed toper or lace-up boots for girls are marketed by Justin Boots of Texas. The Lace-R boot with kiltie fringe for girls is a foil for prairie fashions.

A dressier, but still casual, look for teen-age girls is the buffalo check blazer from Kmart's B.E. Collection. This can be worn with turtleneck tops, stretch twill skirt, and tights. Also at the store are sophisticated black and white houndstooth check stirrup pants, which can be paired with a zippered tunic in bright red knit.

Watch for eye problems

The child who avoids books and the one who devours them may both be motivated by the same thing: an eye problem.

It isn't the same eye problem, however. Children who prefer reading to active play often do so because they are nearsighted. They can see better up close than at a distance.

Those who dislike books and schoolwork tend to have problems with farsightedness, eye coordination and eye movement skills, which make reading difficult. Words may blur or appear double. The eyes may jump across the page, missing words and skipping lines, or words and letter may appear jumbled.

School screenings are not a reliable way to check a child's vision, says the American Optometric Association. Many still use the eye chart, which checks distance vision but no other vision problems. The chart may pick up nearsightedness but children can sometimes pass the screening by squinting or memorizing lines they hear classmates read.

A thorough back-to-school eye examination is recommended. The optometrist should evaluate not only how well a child sees up close and at a distance but how well the eyes work together as a team, eye/hand coordination and several eye movement and eye focusing skills. An eye health examination is also important.

Glasses are usually all the help a near sighted or farsighted child needs to see well. The prescription may need changing periodically, particularly for nearsightedness because it tends to get worse until late teens or early 20's, when it generally stabilizes, optometrists say.

Children with eye coordination, eye movement and eye focusing problems may also be helped with glasses but, more often, will benefit from a treatment program called vision therapy, which teaches them how to use their two eyes together among other vision skills.

An eye examination is an investment not an expense, says the American Optometric Association, because good vision helps children get more out of school and play.

Check with optometrist

Parents of school-age children are urged to have their children's eyes tested. If your child needs glasses, ask one of Hereford's optometrists about the function of the frames and the ones that would best suit your child's needs.

SOAR

The school is basically designed for students:

- Unable to cope with larger school environments after going from intermediate school to junior high, or junior high to high school.
- Students with several tardies or absences.
- Over-age students, or student who have dropped out and want to return.

The Northern Lights have been seen as far south as Florida.

The smooth softshell turtle of North America can often outrun a man on level ground.

Learn the sweet magic of a cheerful face; not always smiling, but a least serene.

--Students who are a grade level behind in basic skills.

Students will usually be selected for the SOAR program based upon a recommendation by a teacher, counselor or parent. The students will be screened for eligibility.

It's not designed as a long-term program, and may not be used by a student for a full day. Classes will also be available in combination with the vocational program at HHS.

Students will get individual attention as needed in the program, with parents urged to participate in information and counseling sessions. Students will also be tested several times to measure progress.

"We will try to add to their self-esteem by giving them a positive atmosphere where every success is honored," Manchee said.

Checking out snack machines

Candi Pankey and Wade McPherson, who will be freshman students at Hereford High School this fall, get a sneak preview of the high school grounds. Although the school layout may be different from junior high, these students have no trouble quickly locating the snack machines, a popular "water hole" for HHS youths.

Well fitting shoes a must

Because of summer wear and tear on your child's shoes and because of his or her growing feet, it's a good idea to discard the old and start with a new pair as school begins, advises Dr. Richard J. Haynes, a Phoenix orthopedic surgeon.

Fit is critical, he says. "When you buy shoes for your child, make sure the shoe fits to the longest and widest part of your child's feet," he says. "The toe box - that's the area at the tip of the shoe - should be wide enough to allow the toes to wiggle and should provide enough space for growth. Depending on your child's age and rate of growth, extra space about the width of your finger should allow for three to six months of growth."

Don't be tempted to buy shoes too large to make them last longer, he advises. The child's feet will slide around in the shoes, possibly causing blisters.

Shoes should fit the heel carefully, and the child's foot should not slip out of the back of the shoe.

When buying shoes, make sure the salesperson measures each foot. "Many people have feet of different sizes," Haynes says. "The shoe should fit the largest foot."

He says that athletic shoes, properly fitted, are just as good as leather shoes for your child's feet. High-top models don't offer any better support, though they will stay on small chubby feet better, and they do give some ankle support.

Don't harm your child by assisting with homework

BOSTON (AP) - When your child has homework to do, butt out.

"Parents ought never to do the work," says Linda Braun, family studies professor at Wheelock College. "Neither should they nag or punish in ways that destroy self-esteem and foster rebellion."

Positive strokes and setting up structured times and places to work will be more effective, she says.

Praise work that is well done. "Instead of focusing on a subject or activity that isn't going well, focus on those that are," she advises.

And establish a routine around the house for all activities. "There should be a set time when people eat together, when chores get done and other tasks are taken on, which should include homework."

She advises setting aside a place with the child's things where homework normally will be done. "It could be a corner of a room, or their own room, but some place where the child is comfortable working."

Dealing with older children about homework neglect requires a lot of thought and restraint, the professor says.

Sometimes these youngsters haven't been successful at school, and they don't see that there's anything in it for them, she says. They may be reacting to established patterns, to nagging, or looking for attention. Or it could be simply that their schedules are overloaded.

Resist the urge to say, "No telephone until your homework is done," or "you're grounded."

Local private schools unique

Hereford is unique among communities its size, with three private schools offering instruction through at least the sixth grade.

The private schools include St. Anthony's, Nazarene Christian Academy and Community School at Community Church. A kindergarten program is offered by First Baptist Church.

Although the three stem from different denominations (or non-denominational), they are based on the principals of God's world, according to officials from the schools. The schools provide an instructional program emphasizing the basics of education, but also encourage religious development of students.

Students in parochial schools, according to the Association of Christian Schools International, score significantly higher on standardized tests than do students in public schools.

The three parochial schools may legally do some things public schools may not. Parochial schools can revolve around Christ and include religious teaching in their curriculum. All three schools, in material made available by the schools, include:

--Teaching the message of Christ and the truth of scripture.

--Building a community based on absolutes taught in the Bible.

--Learning to serve the needs of others and understanding those needs in a Christ-like fashion.

--High moral and social values. Christian schools also work with the home in forming a three-legged tripod of home, church and school. Parents are encouraged, and at times required, to participate in their child's education through special programs.

Hereford's private schools are also able to tailor programs to particular classes. Most have class enrollments below those in the public schools, helping to tap the full potential of each student.

Private schools being considered by many parents

By The Associated Press

If you don't think your local public school is up to standard, your alternative is finding - and paying for - the right private school for your youngster.

"Few parental decisions will have the far-reaching impact of where a child attends school," says Ronald Stewart, dean of York Preparatory School in New York City.

The choice may be more important than picking a college or university later on, adds Barbara Scott, financial aid director at Kent School, a coeducational boarding school in Kent, Conn.

"That's where they learn to study as well as increase their knowledge. With the right attitude and well-developed habits, they can get as much out of a good state university as any of the Ivy Leagues," she says.

Middle income parents should look into financial aid if they feel the cost is beyond them, says Scott. Her school is a member of the Student Service for Financial Aid, and money is available. "Many factors are considered, including the number of children in the family, yearly income and total assets. That doesn't mean they won't have to make some sacrifices in their disposable income, but the point is there's a lot more flexibility than most people think in arranging for tuition."

She adds that aid is tied only to need, not academic achievement. And supplementing loans can be arranged as well.

Stewart recommends making a thorough check of the private school before deciding to enroll a youngster, starting with the accessibility of the headmaster. His or her personality often sets the overall tone of the school, he says.

Other points:

- What percentage of lower classmen stayed through graduation?
- What percentage of graduates are accepted by their first-choice colleges?
- What colleges send representatives to visit, and does the school deal with a wide range of colleges?
- What is the average SAT score of graduates?
- What degrees do the teachers hold? (Stewart says at least half should have master's degrees or more.)

Liver will be more tender if you soak it for two to three hours in milk or tomato juice before broiling or frying.

- What is the teacher-student ratio? (A teacher for every ten students is recommended.)

- What kind of accreditation does the school hold?

- What kind of discipline and dress codes are there, and are you comfortable with them?

- Is the school upfront about drug, sex and moral issues?

- Are students rewarded for positive attitude, sportmanship, and citizenship as well as for academic achievement?

- How often does the school communicate with parents? Are there regular parent-teacher conferences? Are there at least four report cards during the year? Are parents allowed to visit while school is in session?

Stewart also recommends you ask for a class list so you can get comments and evaluations of the school from other parents.

Planning can cut college tuition costs

Many parents and college bound students are discouraged by the skyrocketing cost of college--and rightly so. According to the U.S. Department of Education, costs at four-year colleges have more than doubled over the past 10 years.

To make matters worse, 5 to 11 percent increases in college costs are predicted each year throughout the 1990s, outpacing growth in the average family's income by a wide margin.

Experts and families agree, the situation has reached crisis proportions. Yet, despite the difficulties many people face in affording and managing college costs, there are quite a few options available to lessen the burden. If you're concerned about finances as you or your child consider entering college -- even if college has begun -- the experts have a few suggestions.

Grants and loans

If your financial situation has not allowed you to save, do not panic. There are many alternatives, including federal, state and campus-based grants and loans. The process of obtaining aid is, indeed, time-consuming and complex, but the reward for your efforts can be well worth it. Contact prospective college(s) for assistance and an overview of the list of options. The sooner you apply, the more likely you are to receive financial assistance.

Don't give up if funding falls short or federal, state and campus-based financial aid is denied completely. Consider supplemental funding options from a reputable independent college funding firm. These firms have been gaining in popularity over recent years because of the increasing difficulty people have in affording college.

Low-interest programs

The companies have many low-interest loan and credit-line programs for which you or your child may be eligible, including a loan option to pay only the interest charges while in school. You will be pleasantly surprised at the rates the independent college funding firms are able to offer, because they work with so many students and lenders.

For many families and students, making lump-sum tuition payments at the beginning of each semester is a problem. With an independent college funding firm, for a small annual fee, you can make budgeting easier by arranging a month-to-month payment plan without interest charges. Your college must participate with the firm, however, and hundreds do. Inquire with your school about this option.

How to find funding

There are a few college funding firms around the country and all work with families, students and participating colleges nationwide. One of the most progressive firms is Tuition Management Systems, Inc., based in Newport, Rhode Island. This year, Tuition Management Systems will help more than 40,000 families, in cooperation with more than 400 public and private colleges and universities across the nation. The company's primary objective is to help families handle the difficult task of paying for a college education. It delivers a variety of interest-free payment option in addition to affordable low-interest and deferred-payment loan programs.

Monthly payments

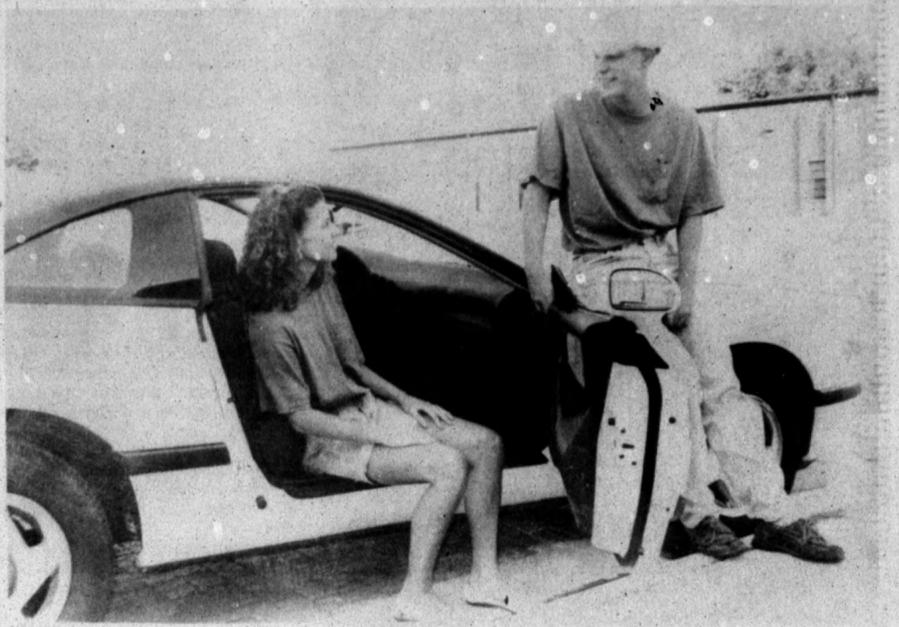

For a small annual fee, Tuition Management Systems can eliminate those burdensome lump payments at the beginning of each semester -- without interest charges. The majority of its interest-free payment options spread payments over 10 to 12 months during the academic year. The people at Tuition Management Systems are even available by phone toll free to answer any questions about many aspects of college costs, including applying for grants and loans, and other options to make college more affordable.

Indeed, exploring the range of options available to afford the manage college costs is an education in and of itself. Ask questions and discuss your situation thoroughly with your college' financial aid and admissions offices.

Dreams of "riding in style"

Angela Banner and Keith Kelso are daydreaming about going back to college this fall in a new car. Although they both admit a new car is still "just a dream", they enjoy window shopping at local car dealers.

Students will receive new codes

When students begin the 1992-93 school year in the Hereford public schools, they will be given copies of the student dress code and the code of conduct.

The code of conduct includes the district's mission statement; responsibilities of students, teachers, administrators and parents; and do's and don'ts for students.

The district's mission statement is--
To:

Unite home, school and community in the learning process and develop citizens who are better prepared for the future.

In a way that:

- Increases accountability to and achievement for all students.
- Fosters positive community, parent, teacher and student relationships.
- Develops cultural awareness.
- Enhances professionalism and staff development.
- Improves overall communication.
- Provide appropriate curriculum.
- Builds a unified team through administrative and school board leadership and support.

So that:

All students in the Hereford Independent School District have the opportunity to achieve their maximum potential.

Responsibilities spelled out in the Code of Conduct (including those for parents) reflect back on the mission statement. For instance, students and parents are encouraged to "attend school daily except when ill or otherwise lawfully excused." The school district receives state funds based on daily attendance. Any unnecessary absences, for a non-emergency appointment or other cause, costs the school district money.

Parents are also encouraged to become active in the child's education:

- Encourage and lead the child to develop proper study habits at home.
- Participate in meaningful parent-teacher conferences at least twice a year.

--Participate in parent-school organizations.

Help and referrals are available from any school, the central administration office or the Stanton Special Programs Center for parents who may have problems with children or who need leadership in helping create a positive learning environment in the home.

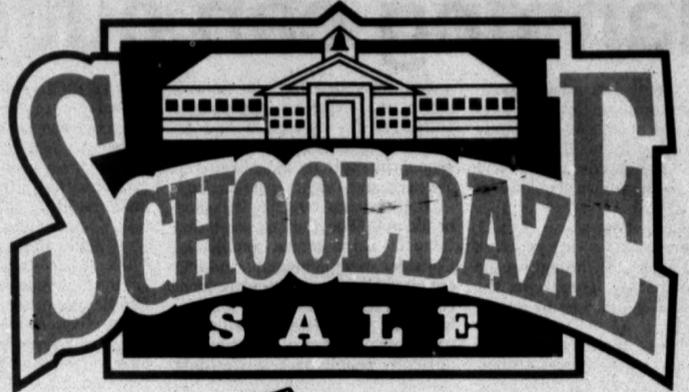

Draw child out of shell

WASHINGTON (AP) - If your child shrugs when you ask him how his school day went, ask again.

"Don't accept a child's answer that nothing happened. The child was in school for five hours. Something must have happened," observes Sister Maria Ciriello, assistant education professor at The Catholic University of America.

Drawing a youngster out about what's happening in class shows him that his parents share his interests and care about academic performance, she says. That's especially important if working parents have less time to go on field trips, visit classrooms or volunteer for school activities.

Regular conversation about school can build rapport so the child will reveal both good and bad news.

TV's most sought-after address? 'Melrose Place'

Melrose Place, Aaron Spelling's spin-off of Beverly Hills, 90210, has scored well in the ratings since its debut on July 8. Airing Wednesdays on Fox, the drama stars (clockwise from top left) Josie Bissett, Thomas Calabro, Andrew Shue, Courtney Thorne-Smith, Amy Locane, Grant Show, Vanessa Williams and Doug Savant.

Other series hope to move in on Spelling's turf

by Suzanne Gill

Wanted: Millions of young viewers to frequent bohemian Hollywood apartment complex with pool. Shown by appointment on Wednesday nights. Vicarious pleasure guaranteed.

That's Melrose Place, the Beverly Hills, 90210 spin-off that won the ratings race in its second week on the air. The Fox series, airing on Wednesdays, features an ensemble cast of eight attractive actors playing a group of men and women in their 20s who live in a Los Angeles courtyard apartment building.

Melrose is but the first of a glut of such properties set to hit the market this summer and fall. But if creator Darren Star and executive producer Aaron Spelling (Beverly Hills, 90210) have their way, you'll already have a long-term agreement with their show, which debuted July 8, that precludes success for the competition.

It doesn't take an accountant to see how calculated the series' early success has been. First, brooding lead actor Grant Show was introduced to audiences as Jake Hanson, the older man who taught 90210's also-brooding ladies' man Luke Perry everything he knew. In May, Show appeared on two episodes of 90210 and an equal number of national magazine covers. The Fox network made it clear that we could address any further inquiries to Melrose Place.

Who is lucky enough to share an address with Jake? Also paying rent are: an aspiring designer (Josie Bissett) and her medical-intern husband (Thomas Calabro, at 33 the oldest cast member), a Southern bombshell (Amy Locane), an aerobics instructor (Vanessa Williams - no, not the former Miss America), an entry-level office worker (Courtney Thorne-Smith) fresh out of college, a social worker (Doug Savant) and an aspiring writer (Andrew Shue).

After these announcements, the publicity machine shut down, waiting for demand to build. Interviews were kept to a minimum, and no advance copy of the show was available for screening by critics, who usually help to spread the word about new series.

The plan was a success. Viewership of the 90-minute premiere was exceeded only by that of the second episode, which drew more viewers than the competition on ABC, CBS and NBC, which were covering the third night of the Democratic National Convention.

If Melrose Place continues to establish itself in these still-early weeks, it may doom the competition, which ranges from libidinous Freshman Dorm to soft-porn 2000 Malibu Road. On Fox alone, the fall-season competition includes a campus drama, Class of '96, and The Heights, a drama about a garage band.

"Our show is setting the standard for what these other shows are about," says

MELROSE

Star, who based Melrose on his own early experiences living in Los Angeles. Shue is excited about his character, Billy Campbell.

"I'm going through the same things that my character's going through, as far as making career choices, figuring out who I want to go out with, who my friends are gonna be ... things like that," Shue says. He's pragmatic about the chances of success for any of the look-alike shows.

"I haven't seen any of the other shows, (but) I've read a couple of the scripts. I have a feeling they're all going to be a lot alike. I think it will come down to the specific writing, and the actors in each one. I can't imagine that they will all last."

More fame for Haim; Who was Liberty Valance?

By Taylor Michaels

Q: Back in 1986 or 1987, there was a TV movie on NBC titled A Time to Live. It starred Liza Minnelli, and her dying son was played by Corey Haim. I am an avid fan of Corey's and wanted to know if it was possible to rent or see this film on cable. Also, if you have an address for him it would be appreciated. —Faith Lee, Erwin, N.C.

A: Actually made in 1985, A Time to Live marked Minnelli's TV-movie debut in an emotionally rewarding performance as a mother trying to care for her son (Haim), who is stricken with muscular dystrophy. The movie is available on video, and if you have no luck with local stores, try the Video Library of Philadelphia at 1-800-669-7157. You may write to Haim in care of APA — Los Angeles, 9000 Sunset Blvd., 12th Floor, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

Q: In the movie The Man Who Shot

Corey Haim and Liza Minnelli

Liberty Valance, who played the part of Liberty Valance? I believe the same actor was in Donovan's Reef opposite Dorothy Lamour. —Irene Shaw, Adams, Mass.

A: Lee Marvin played the title role of a Western town bully who gets his from forthright young lawyer James Stewart and macho rancher John Wayne. Both Marvin and Wayne starred in Donovan's Reef alongside Lamour.

Q: I am very curious to know whether Shannen Doherty, who plays Brenda Walsh on Beverly Hills, 90210, was ever on Little House on the Prairie. Watching the reruns of that show, I'm almost positive that Shannen was on a few episodes. —Lois Johnson, Red Wing, Minn.

A: At age 11, Doherty indeed appeared on a number of episodes of Little House on the Prairie: A New Beginning, which originally ran only a single season from 1982-83. Her first TV job was in two-part episodes of Father Murphy alongside Merlin Olson, a longtime sidekick of Michael Landon's on the original Little House, which probably had something to do with her brief stint as Jenny Wilder on A New Beginning. Many may have gotten their first glimpse of Doherty opposite Christian Slater in the wick-edly hilarious 1989 film Heathers.

Q: Bobby Darin and Sandra Dee made a movie together in which her character's mother was French and gave her a book on how to train a dog, which she used in trying to train her husband (Darin). Could you tell me the name of this movie and what happened to Dee? —Pat Hansen, Portland, Ore.

A: The name of the movie is If a Man Answers, released in 1962, two years after Darin and Dee were married in real life. The marriage ended in divorce in 1967.

Dee probably was not ready for all the demands placed upon young teen idols; she modeled in grade school and made her film debut before she was 15. Her private life away from films became an unhappy mess, and only recently on the talk-show circuit has she declared she is free of her past insecurities.

Q: I watched the movie You'll Like My Mother on TV this weekend and would like to know where it was filmed. Patty Duke was one of the stars, but who else starred with her? —Mrs. Harry Timm, Goodhue, Minn.

A: If you're wondering if this tale of psychological suspense was filmed in your home state of Minnesota, your guess is right, though Variety's archives don't specify exactly where. In reading the original 1972 review, I noticed the trade mag had nothing but raves for Duke's performance, as well as for co-star Rosemary Murphy, as Duke's deranged mother-in-law. Sian Barbara Allen and Richard Thomas, in an uncharacteristically evil role as a rapist, also lend fine support.

Knight after Knight for Hickland

By Candace Havens

Dear Candace: I find it really ironic that Catherine Hickland was married to David Hasselhoff who played Michael Knight on Knight Rider, and now she is marrying Michael Knight (Tad Martin on All My Children). —Carmen J., Peru, N.Y.

Dear Reader: It is certainly a strange coincidence. What's also weird is the fact that Knight Rider 2010 premieres this fall on NBC.

Dear Candace: What happened to Carl on Another World? I couldn't believe he left the show just when Ryan discovered Carl is his father. Will he be back? —G.L. in New Mexico.

Dear Reader: Charles Keating (Carl) left to star in the new ABC prime-time series Going to Extremes. The role and location are quite a switch for Keating. He will be playing the part of Dr. Jack Van De Weghe, an anatomy professor who is an inspiration to his students. The show is filmed in Jamaica, which will be quite a switch from New York, where AW is filmed. Going to Extremes is produced by the same people who successfully launched Northern Exposure. But don't worry, the folks at AW say this isn't the last we will see of Carl.

There has been another mass exodus from the soaps: unfortunately most of these were story-line dictated. Slated to ride off into the sunset in September are Robert Mailhouse (Brian, Days) and Roberta Leighton (Ginger, Days). It's a shame, as these two characters were finally getting some interesting story lines to work with and added a great deal of humor to the show.

There has been a surprise exit by One Life to Live's Grace Phillips, who portrayed Sarah Buchanan. The actress was fired, and the rumor is the role is being recast with an older actress. Not one to sit and wait for work to come to her, Phillips is already auditioning for other shows.

Joan Van Ark, who portrayed Valene Ewing on the prime-time soap Knots Landing, has left the show to work on other projects. The producers had sent Val to Florida to do some research and it looks like she just might stay there. At press time, the producers also hadn't decided on how to deal with the death of Larry Riley, who played Frank.

A prisoner of 'The Fear Inside'

Christine Lahti (right) plays an artist who must overcome her fear of leaving her home when two malevolent strangers (Dylan McDermott, Jennifer Rubin) take control of her house in The Fear Inside, debuting Sunday on Showtime.

Lahti, Rubin excel in gripping tale

By Steven Alan McGaw

Meredith Cole enjoys the luxury of working at home, creating vivid, rich illustrations for children's books. She is separated from her husband, but has a warm relationship with their son, Sean, with whom she shares a spacious, tree-shaded house far removed from the dirt and din of the city.

But Meredith hasn't left her house in over a year. She suffers from agoraphobia, a paralyzing terror of the world beyond her doorstep. Any attempt to leave the house reduces her to tears and trembling, and pleas from her son and estranged husband to seek help bring only icy withdrawal.

Award-winning actress Christine Lahti (Running on Empty, The Doctor) plays Meredith Cole in Showtime's excellent original suspense drama The Fear Inside, premiering Sunday, Aug. 9.

When Meredith advertises for a boarder in her large, isolated house, thinking a live-in errand person will all but eliminate any need to leave home, the first applicant is pretty Jane Caswell, played by Jennifer Rubin. Their rapport is immediate, and Jane moves in.

Only days later, Jane's handsome brother, Peter (Dylan McDermott), shows up. Meredith is attracted to Peter, whom she's told is a police officer, and invites him to spend his vacation time at her home.

Meredith soon realizes, however, that Jane and Peter are not siblings but lovers, and becomes convinced they are responsible for the brutal murder of an eccentric Los Angeles socialite. With Sean away visiting his father, Meredith finds herself in a deadly power struggle, now literally a prisoner in the home where her fears have long held her captive.

Jennifer Rubin's performance as the mad, murderous Jane is mesmerizing, an extravagant complement to Lahti's controlled portrayal. McDermott is also effective as the duplicitous Peter, particularly as the film rushes to its brutal, surprising climax.

FAMILY FAIRE

Packed with programs, will Snick satisfy?

By Suzanne Gill
 Beginning Saturday, Aug. 15, Nickelodeon's prime-time schedule isn't just a home for aged reruns. Now there's Snick — short for Saturday Night on Nickelodeon.

The two-hour programming block will be given over to a foursome of original Nick series: two established hits and two new ventures.

Snick begins with myth-buster Clarissa Explains It All, a show about kids that parents like, and, even more unusual, a show about a girl that boys like.

Following Clarissa, Nick rolls out Roundhouse, a variety show featuring a dozen young performers in a fast-paced series of songs and skits.

Next up is Ren & Stimpy, the animated series that became a cult favorite with teens and adults on the strength of just six episodes in its first season. The fleabitten cat and dog are back with 20 new adventures this summer and fall.

Finally, there's Are You Afraid of the Dark?, a suspense anthology that begins each week as the members of the Midnight Society gather by firelight to tell spooky stories.

The Snick block is aimed at 8- to 12-year-olds, and parents of younger children may want to draw the line before the two hours are up. For older kids, this may be even more fun than terrorizing the baby sitter. © TV Listing Inc.

Supernebbish: Alexander over the top

By Suzanne Gill
Balding and bespectacled, Jason Alexander looks a lot like George Costanza, the insecure nebbish he plays on NBC's Seinfeld.

"People come up and go, 'You remind me of me,' and I have such pity for them," he jokes.

"I always thought on the evolutionary scale George was kind of low. But apparently everyone knows one, and I'm delighted."

At the moment, Alexander has plenty to be delighted about. In addition to the soaring popularity of the show, he and his wife, writer/actress Daena Title, have recently become parents.

Alexander was inspired by his teenage idol, Star Trek's Capt. Kirk.

"I know it sounds like a joke. I became an actor because I wanted to be William Shatner commanding the Enterprise.

"Who knew? I thought that was great acting."

But he learned, thanks to a scholarship to Boston University, and his range broadened to include singing and dancing, which led to a 1989 Tony Award for his performance in Jerome Robbins' Broadway.

Of Seinfeld, Alexander says, "From the moment I saw the script, I thought it would be the most brilliant thing I'd ever be part of, and that it would not run for even a day, because, I thought, 'The audience for this show is me, and I don't watch TV.'" © TV Listing Inc.

make their characters as grimly memorable as the drug culture that threatens to engulf them both. Rated R for violence, sex, nudity, and language. Three Boxes

THIS IS MY LIFE: (1991) Starring Julie Kavner.

Dottie Ingels (Julie Kavner) has a joke for everything, which may help her climb the talk-show ladder on the West Coast but doesn't do much for her young daughters (Gaby Hoffman and Samantha Mathis), who are left sitting in New York. Nora Ephron's film never dives directly into the conflict between parental responsibility and personal ambition. It does succeed, however, in drawing honest performances from the children and, little by little, creating a picture-perfect slice of New York life...that even at its most generous and funny manages to maintain a penetrating clarity. Julie Kavner is wonderful and, in this film, achieves the well-earned status of star. Rated PG-13 for language. Three Boxes

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

DEATH BECOMES HER: Starring Meryl Streep, Goldie Hawn, and Bruce Willis. Dying is easy, comedy is hard. Meryl Streep is a magnificent and brilliant comedic actress. If this sounds like a contradiction in terms perhaps you are right. Comedic skills do come from great acting techniques, but Meryl Streep's comedy shadings also come from sinewy asides and smoking fulminations. Contemporary acting skills that cannot be learned or taught. For the fortunate few, they simply exist. Madeline Ashton (Meryl Streep) is an affected, narcissistic show business personality whose beauty is fading. Her arch rival, and former friend, Helen Sharp (Goldie Hawn) has transformed herself into a famous beauty author. They are bitter enemies vying for the affections of Dr. Ernest Menville (Bruce Willis). Death is a contemporary tale of lust, envy, murder and the search for everlasting youth. For the rich and glamorous who worship at the altar of vanity, it's not whether you're dead or alive, but how you look that counts. Appearance is everything in Death Becomes Her.

There are multiple laughs in this black, walking dead comedy. Goldie Hawn is very good as a psychotic murderess and Bruce Willis is fine as the meek anti-hero. The special effects are wonderfully real, startling, inventive and overdone; as is the script. As usual in today's movies, Death is an ingenious story wrapped in a sophomoric script with no literary value. Sometimes the film feels like a Looney Toon without the Toons. Rest up before you go for you will be subjected to at least forty minutes that should have been edited, and no real ending. But do go to see Meryl Streep's performance. There hasn't been one like it since the late Rosalind Russell excoriated the entire cast of The Women. Rated PG-13. Three Boxes

NEW VIDEO RELEASES

RUSH: (1991) Starring Jennifer Jason Leigh and Jason Patric. Two young 'narcotics officers (Leigh and Patric) get hooked on drugs and each other. Lili Zanuck's terse, edgy film is set in a Texas town in the mid-70s, and from ambiance to supporting players, almost everything effectively evokes the era. Gregg Allman looms believable as a 70's drug czar, and Max Perlich is a convincing middleman. Though their performances are opaque at times, Jennifer Jason Leigh and Jason Patric Actions speak louder than words. If you're caring and compassionate, your children are more likely to be that way.
