School taxes going up

Thanks to directives from the state, the Deaf Smith County Education District will probably go up on its share of the school tax from 80.9 cents last year to 93.9 cents this year. What does that mean for you? It's a 15.2% increase.

House value (after exemptions) is $35,000.
Last year's CED rate: @80.9 cents=$283.15
This year's proposed @93.9 cents=$328.65

CED plans 13-cent tax hike

By JOHN BROOKS

Taxpayers in the Hereford and Walcott independent school districts can look forward to at least a 13-cent tax increase this fall.

The Deaf Smith County Education District will consider a tax rate of 93.9 cents this year. A public hearing will be held August 31 on the matter, then the rate will be officially set at another meeting.

Deaf Smith CED, like other CEDs across the state, is faced with raising a minimum amount set by the state. That requirement led to the CED concept being declared unconstitutional. The fly in the judicial ointment is that CEDs will still be in effect until next July 1. That's when the state legislature must have another new plan in place.

Most CEDs are raising taxes this year around 10 cents. "We have been hit by the state more than other CEDs because of the exemptions we have," said Walcott Superintendent Dr. Bill McLaughlin.

"Our voters okayed more exemptions for themselves last year," said Hereford Superintendent Charles Greenawalt. "The voters said yes, and now we are making up for those exemptions."

The 93.9-cent tax rate will raise $3.84 million. HISD will get $3.6 million; WISD gets $218,691. WISD taxpayers actually contribute $15,000 to HISD through the CED because the state has determined WISD is a "rich" district.

Greenawalt told CED members John Fuston, Dennis Newton, Ted Eicke and Jim Bob Perrin that they don't have to set the rate at 93.9 cents. If the rate is lower than 93.9 cents, the state will withhold funds from the two school districts.

"This is hard to swallow, but we either do it or close down," said Perrin.

Ambitious CPR project begins at Tuesday meeting

"Neighbors Saving Neighbors," an ambitious program to teach CPR to half the population, will be launched in Hereford Tuesday by Deaf Smith General Hospital. Hereford will be the first Texas city to initiate such a program.

Tuesday's kickoff rally starts at 7 p.m. in Hereford Community Center and the program will include a keynote address by Eugene L. Weatherall Jr., a top Texas Department of Health official, and a demonstration of cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

"Our goal is to train 5,000 adults in Hereford between the ages of 18 and 64," said Ron Rives, DSGH administrator. The total is roughly half of this adult age group. According to Weatherall and the Texas division of the American Heart Association, no other Texas city has ever attempted a CPR-training program of this scope.

"We hope that people from the community will take the time Tuesday evening to come and hear this important program for our community," said Rives. "After all, what could be more important than learning a skill that might save the life of a loved one?"

CPR classes will be scheduled for every Tuesday night from 6 to 10 p.m. from September through May in the community center. L.V. Watts, director Hereford EMS, said that seven instructors will teach the classes.

"We've tried to schedule enough class sessions so that everyone who wants to take the training can find a convenient Tuesday night to attend the four-hour course," Watts said.

Joining Weatherall on the program Tuesday evening will be John Sappington of the American Heart Association; Elizabeth Davila and Jennifer Elliott, both of Dimmitt, who saved a man's life with CPR; and Terry Bavouset, TDH director of public health for this region.

Weatherall, one of the pioneers in developing emergency medical systems throughout the state, has worked widely in the field of emergency medicine. He served for several years as a field consultant for TDH, consulting with EMS providers. He has organized and conducted EMS training schools, administered state certification tests, and developed curriculum courses for training paramedics. He wrote a textbook, "Instructor's Guide for Emergency Care," as well as several articles in professional journals.

"DSGH is delighted to spearhead this important event," Rives said. "As the community's hospital, we strongly feel our commitment to Hereford's good health. Training a large number of people how to respond in an emergency situation is one of the ways we want to make our community a better place to live," he added.

DSGH employees are helping with the classes in a variety of ways, from registration to providing refreshments. "Those of us who work in a hospital are confronted almost daily with emergency situations, where our skills can be the difference between life and death," said Rives. "The employees are thrilled to think that so many of their neighbors will understand the basic procedures of CPR."

Counselor at work

Maria Garcia, shown here in her job as a counselor at Northwest Primary School, spent five days in Washington, D.C., earlier this month as a delegate to a conference for parents of developmentally-delayed children.

A Hereford school counselor's role at a recent conference in Washington, D.C., was as a parent, not an educator, who has a personal stake in assistance available to developmentally delayed children, and their families.

Maria Garcia was named by Governor Ann Richards to represent Texas at Partnership in Progress V, Aug. 8-12, in Washington. All the delegates were parents of children with handicaps, whether mental, physical or emotional.

The process began, though, when she was selected by the Region 16 Educational Service Center for a position on the statewide Inter-Agency Advisory Council. Garcia was recommended to the governor by the council for the trip to Washington.

"The council was looking for a parent to go to the conference," said Garcia. "Since I am an educator-counselor, I was a prime candidate."

Taxes, economy hit by candidates

By JOHN KING
AP Political Writer

President Bush is calling his Democratic rival a tax-and-spend liberal, while Bill Clinton is warning voters that the Republican president is trying to "sucker-punch you" with promises of a tax cut.

As both candidates campaigned through the first weekend after the GOP convention, their schedules reflected a belief the race will be decided in the South, the Rust Belt and the border states between them.

And the rich rhetoric suggested that a brawl lies ahead - with the economy providing the stage for the 10-week fight up to the Nov. 3 election.

"My opponent's ideas are clear, present and dangerous," Bush told an enthusiastic crowd Friday evening in conservative southern Missouri. "He wants to invest your money in government spending and I'm not going to let it happen."

Clinton, ready to set out with running mate Al Gore today on another bus trip through the industrial heartland, countered Bush's jab with a reminder of the "no new taxes" promised by the president four years ago.

"If you believe that, I've got some land in the middle of the ocean I want to sell you," the Arkansas governor told a Friday evening rally in Cleveland, the first city in his latest buscapade. Clinton warned voters Bush was trying "to sucker-punch you one more time."

Bush signed a large tax increase in 1990. In accepting the Republican nomination Thursday night, he promised an across-the-board tax cut accompanied by reduced government spending but offered no specifics.

Gore was equally mocking in his criticism of the Bush speech promise.

Embattled Erdmann ends medical career

LUBBOCK (AP) - Pathologist Ralph Erdmann, indicted on state charges of tampering and theft, is finished practicing medicine in Texas, according to a top state health official.

Dr. Homer R. Goehrs, executive director of the State Board of Medical Examiners, said Erdmann on Thursday surrendered his Texas medical license "in lieu of further disciplinary action hearings by this board."

Erdmann had faced an investigation by the medical examiners board, which reviews questionable medical procedures performed by practicing physicians, including autopsies by forensic pathologists.

"His surrendering his license says we don't have to have a hearing and delay getting him out of the practice of medicine," Goehrs told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal in Saturday's editions.

The 65-year-old Erdmann, who had been licensed since 1959, could not be reached Friday by The Associated Press.

Erdmann is accused of tampering with a government record and committing theft in his October 1991 autopsy of 14-year-old Jesse Land of Spur.

In July, State District Judge John McFall ruled Erdmann may have violated several Texas laws in Lubbock County.

Economists: tax cuts good idea, won't work

NEW YORK (AP) - President Bush's proposal for a voluntary fund to reduce the federal budget deficit is an attempt to force spending cuts through Congress, but few economists believe it will work.

The proposal requires that for every tax dollar allocated for the deficit, Congress must cut a dollar from spending. Economists applauded the measure Friday as politically clever but questioned whether Bush has enough clout with Congress to get the necessary budget cuts passed.

Here, in question and answer form, are the basics of the plan and why many economists doubt it can fly.

Q: What is the plan?
A: Bush's acceptance speech before the Republican National Convention Thursday included a proposal that taxpayers could voluntarily earmark between 1 percent and 10 percent of their tax payments to a special fund to be used only to reduce the nation's deficit.

The proposal wouldn't work without matching cuts in spending, which would have to go through Congress.

Q: How much of the deficit could be cut with this plan?
A: The federal Office of Management and Budget projects 1993 individual tax revenues at $515 billion, so a 10 percent set-aside would work out to about $51 billion. The deficit currently totals $333 billion.

Q: Will taxpayers agree to the checkoff?
A: Economists predict that half to a third of taxpayers will participate. They would have very little to lose, since the checkoff would not raise anyone's tax bill.

Q: What is President Bush's political strategy here?
A: If Bush runs hard on this issue and wins a second term, he could take to Congress a public mandate to cut deficit spending.

Taxpayers are angry about the deficit because it contributes to higher taxes. Bush's proposal is a "populist approach" that would allow taxpayers to "vent their spleen," said Lawrence Kudlow, chief economist at Bear Stearns & Co. and a budget official during the Reagan administration. "It's kind of like saying, 'Call 1-800-CUT-SPENDING.'"

Q: Will it work?
A: Many economists believe that while Congress may agree that cutting the deficit is a good idea, Bush does not have enough influence with members of Congress to get them to make specific line-item cuts.

To chop 10 percent from the budget, "You're going to have to think about Social Security, Medicare, further cuts in defense, and so far I haven't seen any willingness on the part of the president or Congress to do that," said Lyle Gramley, consulting economist at the Mortgage Bankers Association and a former member of the Federal Reserve Board. "I wish the president well in his efforts to accomplish that, but he's going to have to put the cuts on the line."

Q: Can this plan help the economy?
A: Economists said it wouldn't slow the economy any further. But cutting government spending would remove a powerful stimulus to the economy, one of the few tools besides lowering interest rates at the government's disposal to foster growth.

HHS plans open house

Open house at Hereford High School is scheduled for Aug. 31, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Parents are encouraged to take advantage of the event to meet teachers. No special program is planned for the come and go open house.

County Commissioners to meet

A short agenda has been posted for the Deaf Smith County Commissioners' Court meeting, beginning at 9 a.m. Monday. A hearing on the budget of slightly more than $4 million for the next fiscal year will be held and bids will be opened for seal-coating some county roads and for medical insurance for county employees. A proposed change in custodial fees for the Bull Barn also will be considered.

Police investigate burglary

Hereford police are investigating the burglary of La Fiesta Restaurant, 511 N. 25 Mile Ave., sometime late Friday night or early Saturday morning. Police said about $9,000 worth of damage was done to the restaurant. Authorities believe nothing was taken: money was scattered about the floor with strewn food and other items. Much of the loss will come from perishable foods and other delinquent acts. Police said they have a suspect they want to question about the break-in. Police arrested a man, 27, for evading arrest and theft of beer on Friday. A man tried to evade a police officer after taking some beer from a convenience store without paying for the beer. Reports included possible sales of alcohol to minors; theft of valve stem covers from the wheels of a vehicle in the 400 block of N. 25 Mile Ave.; harassment in the 100 block of Ave. H and 700 block of Ave. G; one student was assaulted by another on a school bus; domestic disturbance in the 200 block of Ave. H; disorderly conduct in the 700 block of S. 25 Mile Ave.; neighbor problems in the 400 block of Ave. E; and a suspicious vehicle in the 300 block of Ave. K. Police issued nine tickets Friday.

Cheerleaders plan clinic

Hereford cheerleaders will host a special clinic for young girls Tuesday at 5 p.m. on the west side of Dameron Park. The cost is $3 per person and is open to girls ages 5-11. The clinic will last until 6 p.m.; the girls will be asked to perform at Meet The Herd at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at Whiteface Stadium.

Medical fund for Ward

A medical assistance fund for Jay Ward of Hereford has been established at Hereford State Bank. Ward is undergoing treatment at M.D. Anderson hospital in Houston for treatment of cancer.

'Mr. Bojangles' needs help

Special assistance has been requested from friends of Alfredo Duran, a longtime Hereford resident. Duran, known by many persons as "Mr. Bojangles," is in the intermediate care section of High Plains Baptist Hospital in Amarillo.

Special shot clinic scheduled

Immunizations will be offered to children in a special clinic Monday from 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. at the Texas Department of Health office at 205 W. Fourth in Hereford.

TDH officials Friday said they had been swamped by requests for shots for children and will hold the special clinic one time on Monday. Normally, the immunizations are given on Thursdays.

Crimestoppers offers reward

Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers is offering a reward of up to $300 for information leading to an arrest and indictment in the Crime of the Week. Police are investigating the burglary of La Fiesta Restaurant, 511 N. 25 Mile Ave. in Hereford. Someone entered the restaurant late Friday or early Saturday and caused about $9,000 worth of damage. If you have information about this or any other crime, call the Clue Line at 364-2583. If your information leads to an arrest and indictment, you will receive a cash reward of up to $300. You don't have to give your name; you may remain anonymous by using a code name or number. All final rewards are determined by the Crimestoppers board of directors.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

The beginning of school and students attending only in the mornings has run rather smoothly considering the fact that 724 students had enrolled by Thursday and more are scheduled to be enrolled by Monday. There are 397 seventh graders and 327 eighth graders. Students will be enrolling, if this year is like most, until after Labor Day in a rather steady manner. Many classes are overflowing, with 32-34 in attendance, so adjustments are to be made in that area.

On Wednesday, teachers used the afternoon for class preparations and for department meetings, while on Thursday and Friday, all teachers in the district met together for site-based management study.

To enable all students to meet their teachers, the regular morning classes met on Wednesday and Friday with afternoon classes meeting on Thursday. A portion of the first class period each day was used to review the student handbook and code of conduct. Principal Marilyn Leasure led in this review on "live" TV from the library to each classroom.

The vocational classes have made fund-raising plans and will be showing insulated mugs with the Hereford logo and taking orders for them within the next two weeks.

Some of the Texas history classes interviewed classmates and then introduced them to the class as a get-acquainted activity. They were then each assigned to interview someone over twenty-one years of age. That interview will then be shared with the class.

American history classes will be receiving new textbooks this year. With the 500th anniversary of Columbus' travels and the presidential election, these classes have an exciting semester ahead of them.

A strong emphasis on reading is to be used in all classes with hopes of improvement in the TAAS area, but more importantly, to prepare students for the future. "Give me someone who can read," is still the strong cry from employers and hopefully we can begin to still that cry and have young people who not only can read but will like to read.

Students enrolled in athletics have received equipment and have begun the activities of preparing for the volleyball and football seasons. With the eagerness of athletes and coaches, this may prove to be a great year in junior high athletics.

Teachers have been impressed by the attitude, conduct and well-groomed appearance of HJH students and feel that this is an indicator of a good school year ahead.

We invite parents and patrons of HJH students to come and see us. We, and you, will be glad that you did.

America's becoming a patch-work society

EDITOR'S NOTE - A diabetic throws away his needle. A dying cancer patient, body wracked with pain, forgoes morphine. A victim of Alzheimer's Disease begins to get his memory back. A heavy smoker goes cold turkey. They will all owe it to a discrete patch they will wear on their skin, the patches of the future.

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

It was a typical Malibu night, surf murmuring over the beach, background music for this gathering of women who had just finished dinner and were lingering over coffee. One turned to the hostess and asked why she wasn't smoking.

"I'm wearing the nicotine patch," the hostess said.

"I'm using a patch too, for estrogen," another said. "Me too," said a third.

A day later the hostess ran into another woman and remarked about her surprise that three of the eight at the dinner table were using patches. "I'm wearing one too," the woman said. "For high blood pressure."

Suddenly we are the patchwork generation.

"The next time we get together," the hostess said, "we won't discuss our operations or face-lifts. We'll talk about our patches."

But make no mistake, this is serious talk. This means of administering medicine, little more than a decade old, might eliminate a lot of needles and therefore doctor visits.

And it could guarantee, where it can be used, a constant long-term dosage without patients having to remember to take their pills. The patch is most useful for long-term treatment.

There is even a patch for chronic pain sufferers that delivers a high-powered analgesic, fentanyl, 100 times more powerful than morphine, and 100 times more dangerous, too, by way of overdose. But delivered by patch the blood levels are kept stable.

"The quality of life is the big issue," says Bob Gale, senior product development director for ALZA, a pioneer firm in patch research. "It's doing very nicely to help terminal cancer pain. I'm glad to see that. With morphine you get delirious, you get stopped up intestines. There are a lot of side-effects with morphine."

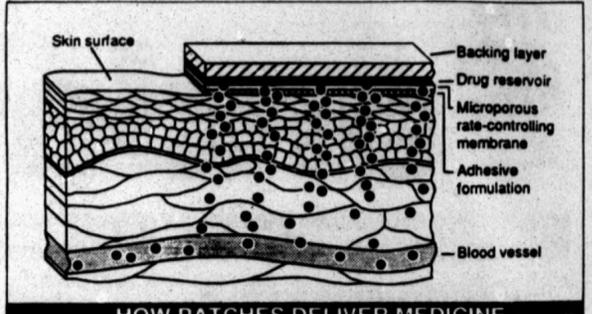

Again fewer needles, fewer nurses. Since the first of the year when the nicotine patches were introduced, just one of the three companies then making the nicotine patch has sold 100 million units worth almost $400 million. Industrywide an estimated 200 million patches have been sold. By the end of the year sales of nicotine patches are to top $1 billion.

Drugstores are perpetually in short supply. Pharmacists call their customers when a new shipment comes in. And they are not inexpensive, running about $30 a week, as much as $350 for a full treatment, on a doctor's prescription. Some undoubtedly end up unused in the dresser drawer, but perhaps more than a quarter of the users successfully kick the habit.

New kinds of patches are in the offing. Scientists are working on treatments for Alzheimer's Disease, an ailment which disrupts the memory process, producing premature senility.

If the lack of acetylcholine, a chemical that helps nerve cells contact each other, is a major factor in Alzheimer's, then doctors may try to administer a compound that mimics acetylcholine. Or they may administer a compound that inhibits the enzyme that destroys acetylcholine. In either case they could deliver the compounds via patch.

"Both areas of research are very intense," says Dr. William Good of CIBA-GEIGY, a pharmaceutical company with an array of patches for nicotine, estrogen, nitroglycerine, high blood pressure, seasickness, with others on the research board. Another promising drug for patch delivery are phosphates for the treatment of osteoporosis, bone loss that occurs most frequently in postmenopausal women.

ALZA is working on a patch for birth control.

The first patch on the medical scene was the scopolamine patch for motion sickness.

Worn behind the ear, the dime-sized patch is effective against seasickness for up to three days. Some 26 million Americans are susceptible to this disease which is as old as the Bible and as young as the airplane, the elevator or a carnival ride.

The patch is approved only for adult use, partly because no one knows the exact cause of motion sickness. Some think it may be an overstimulation of the sense of balance in the inner ear, or the result of conflicting signals sent to the brain by the inner ear and the eyes.

No one knows how scopolamine works either, but it has some side effects. One in six users will have some drowsiness, which precludes driving or operating dangerous machinery. Two out of three users will have dryness of the mouth. Some users develop a dizziness because the pupil on the side the patch is worn tends to enlarge.

But the seasickness patch proved the utility of transdermal drug delivery to the body.

Then, in the early 1980s, there were a series of patches introduced. The first contained nitroglycerine for angina pectoris patients who suffer pain because not enough oxygen is reaching the heart muscle. Nitroglycerine dilates the blood vessels, increasing the oxygen supply.

The advantage of the patch, worn generally on the chest near the heart, is that patients are relieved of remembering to take multitude of pills, sometimes as many as 20 a day. The one-a-day patch provides a steady, dependable supply at the proper dosage. One side effect is possible headache, but most angina victims accept that for the freedom of the patch.

In 1986, the high blood pressure medication Clonidine came out in patch form. The same company, ALZA of Palo Alto, Calif., markets a patch that administers the male hormone testosterone.

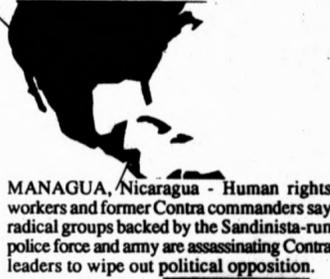

Is the hypodermic needle on the way out? "It would be nice if it were," Good says.

"That would be fantastic," says ALZA's Gale. "And I think it's within grasp now." He predicts that by the year 2000 there will be electronically abetted patches that will deliver heavy molecular weight compounds like human growth factor

Year-round school getting good grades

AUSTIN (AP) - Thousands of Texas children are saying good-bye to long summer vacations and giving year-round school a try.

They get shorter but more frequent breaks than their counterparts on a traditional schedule and during those mini-vacations, a number of them also get a chance at school activities ranging from reading to field trips to the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

The idea is to improve attendance and student learning. And while the system has its detractors, some say year-round school is the wave of the future.

"I think it's here to stay and is going to grow very rapidly in Texas, and across the country, too," said Julian Shaddix, associate commissioner for field services at the Texas Education Agency.

Just 46 of Texas' 1,000-plus school districts are offering year-round classes on at least one campus this year, mostly at the elementary level, said Shaddix's executive assistant, Pat Pringle. But that is more than twice last year's number.

More than 26,000 youngsters attended year-round classes in 22 school districts last year, Shaddix said. That's out of more than 3 million total students. TEA hasn't finished collecting data on the number of year-round students for 1992-93.

In the Austin Independent School District, one elementary school is trying year-round classes, out of several that considered the idea.

Ten-year-old Tamisha Brown, a fifth-grader, said her new schedule "might be fun and it'll keep kids off the street." But she does cite one problem: a cousin who's on a traditional schedule in another district and "brags a lot."

However, she said, "It really doesn't matter because when he gets out of school I'll be in, and when he's in school I'll be out."

Nationally, an estimated 1.6 million students in 25 states are attending year-round classes this school year, said Charles Ballinger, executive director of the National Association for Year-Round Education.

Most Texas school districts using year-round classes simply rearrange the traditional schedule. Instead of a nine-month term and a three-month summer break, year-round students may go to school for three months, for example, then be out for a month.

Others use several such tracks, in which about 25 percent of students may be out of school at any one time, Shaddix said. The required number of year-round class days - 180 - remains the same as the traditional schedule.

The multi-track system offers the potential to save money by getting more use out of school buildings, Shaddix said.

But he said most school districts using year-round classes hope for education-related benefits: improved attendance, students retaining more information than they would over a long summer break, and less burnout for students and teachers.

The schedule "kind of gives them an opportunity to regroup and recoup and come back refreshed," Shaddix said. But while there are growing signs of advantages from a year-round schedule, "The jury's still out on all those things."

The system gets high marks from Superintendent Norman Brekke of California's Oxnard school district, which has used year-round classes in kindergarten through the eighth grade since 1976.

The multi-track system has allowed the district to avoid building two elementary schools. Student test scores also have improved, Brekke said.

"It's working out extremely well," he said.

Opponents of year-round school dispute the contention that there are academic benefits, and they cite a host of drawbacks.

sees her experience as a bonus in her profession as well as in her personal and family life.

During the five-day meeting, Garcia was in continual contact with men and women whose common interest is to improve the lives of children with special needs.

"The most important thing that came out is the need for communication among service providers," declared Garcia. The consensus among participants, she added, is that "parents should be treated as experts, too."

Trying to get agencies to communicate -- talk to each other -- about needs of individual children, from the time a problem is recognized, is a major goal, said Garcia.

"Early intervention can alleviate some of the problems," the teacher-counselor said.

Having the experience of a special youngster in the home helps Garcia help others in similar circumstances.

A hope of the Washington conference participants is that states will conduct "child find" projects to locate children who would benefit from the available services.

Through this kind of effort, Garcia said, authorities may keep some children from missing services they need, essentially "falling through the crack."

States that conduct such a project may become eligible for some federal aid, said the Hereford counselor.

Once a child is identified, the question may be, "How can we service the child?" Garcia said. One way is to train parents to work with the child as well as to seek services such as physical therapy, speech therapy, a pediatrician, psychologist and counseling.

Garcia is a 1980 graduate of Hereford High School. She earned her bachelor's degree in education from West Texas State University in 1983 and a master of education, in counseling, from WTSU in 1987.

She taught first grade a year and second grade three years before assuming school counselor duties. Her assignment this year is at Northwest Primary School.

The personal pain she has experienced with a Down Syndrome son gives Garcia the insight to help other parents cope with their own problems, especially if parent support groups get started.

"It helps to know you're not all alone," Garcia emphasized. "I feel especially empathetic to other parents . . . I've walked in their shoes."

Attending the Washington conference gave Garcia a special kind of pride as well as motivation to work with developmentally-delayed children and their parents, especially in a support group mode.

"Texas is ahead in service to these children," she said. "Early childhood programs in the state are leading in the U.S."

Delegates to the conference cut across ethnic and economic lines, representing all the states of the union as well as territories, Guam and American Samoa. They heard from experts in their fields and government officials, including the U.S. Secretary of Education.

The impression from Garcia, though, is that networking among the delegates may have been as rewarding as any other facet of the conference.

Although there were no particular strings attached to Garcia's appointment to attend the conference, she is expected to make a report at the state level on what she learned.

More important may be her interpretation of information for other parents and implementation of recommended programs and procedures.

Recognition by parents of symptoms or characteristics of developmentally-delayed children is the first step toward addressing needs.

Garcia and her husband, Jose, an Energas employee, have two daughters, ages five and three, as well as the 17-month son. The girls include their little brother in their play and as they grow older, their mother expects them to be role models in many ways.

"Developmentally-delayed children should be included in the mainstream of life," she said. "They model from other children, too."

Early intervention is the key to success of such children, Garcia declared.

"I hope that parents realize that with early intervention, children can be integrated into family and school life.

"As parents, we have to have high expectations. If we have the 'poor me' attitude, we won't get very far."

Study: conscientious children live longer

WASHINGTON (AP) - Children who were rated as more conscientious than others in the 1920s have been living longer as adults, providing new evidence of a link between psychology and physical health, a study says.

The work found that since age 20, people who scored low on a childhood measure of conscientiousness have run a 30 percent higher chance of dying each year than people who scored high.

The effect is not concentrated in any particular cause of death, but it is stronger in men, researcher Howard Friedman said Monday.

The study tracked the longevity of 1,224 men and women through 1986, by which time about half had died, he said. It was paid for by the government's National Institute on Aging.

Friedman is a professor of psychology at the University of California, Riverside, and clinical professor of community medicine at the University of California, San Diego. He presented the work at the annual meeting of the American Psychological Association.

In an interview, Friedman said researchers are now trying to figure out the explanation for the longevity difference. The reason for the greater impact on men is also a mystery, he said.

He acknowledged that the longevity difference could be due to better health habits in conscientious people, and said data on smoking, drinking and obesity among the study subjects have not been analyzed.

The participants were originally part of a study of the fate of gifted children, a project started by researcher Lewis Terman in 1921. Most were born around 1910, and their personality characteristics were rated by parents and teachers when they were around age 11, Friedman said.

For the new study, researchers combined the childhood ratings of prudence, conscientiousness, freedom from vanity and truthfulness into their own measure of conscientiousness. They also used childhood rankings of sociability, cheerfulness and energy level.

Apart from conscientiousness, cheerfulness was the only personality trait to show any apparent bearing on longevity. Unexpectedly, greater childhood cheerfulness was linked to shorter lives, although its impact was less than that of conscientiousness in the other direction.

Friedman said the meaning of the cheerfulness finding is not clear.

The 30 percent extra risk of mortality associated with low conscientiousness comes from comparing people who scored at the 25th percentile on that scale with those who scored at the 75th percentile. A percentile ranking indicates what percent of participants scored lower than the ranked person did.

People who had scored lower than the 25th percentile in childhood showed an even greater increase in adult mortality, Friedman said.

The longevity analyses took into account the fact that women live longer on average and differences in childhood health and year of birth.

Friedman acknowledged that the unusually bright and mostly white participants did not make up a sample representative of the general population. But because all had access to health care and were not poor, the sample eliminated any longevity differences due to those factors, he said.

LAND CONTRACTS

Land contracts are frequently used when a buyer makes no or very little down payment on a house or when the buyer's credit worthiness is in question. Denying title until the buyer has built up some equity in the property reduces the seller's risk. When a house is purchased under a land contract, the buyer occupies the property. However, the seller continues to hold the legal title until all or an agreed upon amount of installments have been paid. The buyer under this arrangement is known as the "equitable owner." The buyer pays the taxes and assessments on the property and has the tax and equity benefits of home-ownership without the property having actually been deeded to them. A land contract is also known as a contract for deed or an installment land contract. If you have any questions about land contracts or any aspect of real estate, we are only a phone call away. Attitude counts.

A Hereford businessman told us this story recently. A young salesman came to our town to look us over before choosing a home in the area. He called on ag clients and could live anywhere in the area.

At an annual salary of $50,000 a year and with a growing family, he would have been an asset to this community. We missed that chance. He decided to settle elsewhere.

Where did we fail? Was it the fault of the chamber of commerce? Did the appearance of the city drive the family away? Were the taxes too high? Were the services too few?

No, it was none of the above, according to the reason he gave the local retailer.

In visiting around town, the young man talked to shop keepers, waitresses, clerks, gas station attendants and others. Somewhere in that group, he got the impression that Hereford was going downhill.

Many industrial prospects talk to the same people. These are important people but, too often, some of them don't realize their opinions make a difference and they dwell on the negatives instead of the positives. Those of us who employ people who are in contact with visitors need to impress on them the importance of attitude. We are all in this together and what we say, do and think is a reflection of our community. An attitude of success promotes more success.

By any comparison, Hereford is ahead in most categories in towns our size. While folks here complain, there are people in other towns who envy our diversified economy. Retail sales are still strong. The latest report (1990) showed a total of $93.5 million. That's $1.8 million a week. Total industry sales are over $101 million, and wholesale trade amounts to $92 million. Deaf Smith County ranks first in livestock sales and near the top 10 in total crop sales.

The median household income is $21,177 in the county. Our per-capita income is lower than some at $9,296, but still not bad. The median household value is $41,700. Almost 60 percent of adults graduated from high school, and 11 percent hold college degrees.

The grass is not always greener on the other side of the fence. Let's dwell on our positives when we talk about our community!

With the Democrats always referring to the Republicans as "the party of the rich," it was interesting to see these figures on the two national conventions:

In New York, the tab for the Democratic National Convention cost the city $21 million. The cost in Houston for the Republicans was $6 million. There was quite a difference in the cost of police and security costs, too. The tab was $6.7 million in New York; $2 million in Houston.

And, speaking of statistics, we read that the promotion of broccoli, following President Bush's statement that he hated the stuff, still has a long way to go. Last year, consumers lapped up $3.8 billion worth of Campbell's cream of broccoli soup. During the same time, the company sold $24.6 billion of its favorite, chicken noodle.

You can't tell about men. Last year, American males spent $2.2 billion on beer, but $2.3 billion on milk!

An AP News Analysis

Now GOP trying to use draft issue

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

HOUSTON (AP) - In an ironic switch on the controversy that dogged Dan Quayle four years ago, President Bush's campaign strategists are trying to make an issue of Bill Clinton's Vietnam era draft record.

It's going to take adroit handling to take advantage now of a topic that nagged their own vice presidential nominee last time. But the Bush people think they can use it to boost the Republican ticket among men middle aged and up, particularly the middle-class and blue-collar voters they're trying to reclaim. To that generation, military service equalled patriotism, a legacy of World War II. Clinton and Quayle both avoided the Vietnam draft, the vice president by enlisting in the Indiana National Guard, the Democratic presidential nominee through a student and ROTC deferment and, later, the luck of a high draft lottery draw.

But Quayle says "there's a big difference" because he chose to serve by joining the National Guard, and Clinton chose not to serve at all. Clinton says he relinquished a deferment and voluntarily put his name into the draft pool in 1969, but drew a high number and was not called.

The draft question became one of Clinton's campaign headaches back in New Hampshire; he dealt with it in detail then, and when it comes up now, he says he did nothing wrong.

"All I've been asked about by the press is a woman I didn't sleep with and a draft I didn't dodge," he lamented of those so-called character issues during the New Hampshire presidential primary campaign.

Now the Bush campaign is out to revive the second of those topics, the draft, in the fall campaign.

So Clinton's draft record was cited in speech after speech at the Republican National Convention, often by indirection.

Marilyn Quayle, for example, said that in the generation she and Clinton share, a time of social turbulence, "Not everyone demonstrated, dropped out, took drugs, joined in the sexual revolution or dodged the draft." She said the people who heard her speak Wednesday night could draw any inference they liked.

So could the people who heard Secretary of Labor Lynn Martin nominate Bush for a second term. "Inside George Bush is the heart of an 18-year-old fighter pilot who risked his life for his country, who did not run from his responsibilities then and does not now," she said. "You can't be one kind of man and another kind of president."

There was no such subtlety from conservative Patrick Buchanan. "When Bill Clinton's turn came in Vietnam, he sat up in a dormitory in Oxford, England, and figured out how to dodge the draft," said Buchanan.

"... We'll be talking about the values of George Bush vs. those of Bill Clinton, talking about a man who quit school to go fight for his country and one who went to school to avoid fighting for it," said Sen. Alan Simpson of Wyoming. Bush flew combat missions in the Pacific in World War II, the youngest pilot in the Navy.

"Twenty-seven million of us proud American veterans won't forget," Simpson said.

Simpson's convention synopsis of Clinton and the draft:

"We'll be talking about an absolutely ambitious young man who at the age of 23 wrote a letter about his draft status and said he did it to - and please hear these four words - 'maintain my political viability.'"

That letter, indeed the whole question of Clinton, Quayle and the draft dates from 1969.

That's when Clinton wrote to an ROTC supervisor at the University of Arkansas to thank him for "saving me from the draft," and to tell of his feelings against the Vietnam War. He said in the letter that he admired friends who had defied the draft but didn't want to do it himself because it would damage his career and "political viability."

During the New Hampshire campaign, he had said he dropped his deferment because high school friends were being killed in Vietnam and "I just didn't feel right" about avoiding the draft.

Sen. Al Gore Jr., Clinton's vice presidential running mate, enlisted in the Army, also in 1969, and spent nearly five months in Vietnam as an army historian in 1971.

"I think a lot of Americans, in fact most Americans, are really tired of seeing the Vietnam War used to divide our country," Gore said last month, defending Clinton after his military record had been questioned at a televised campaign town meeting in Kentucky.

Questions like that were a problem for Quayle almost from the day he was chosen for the Bush ticket. He enlisted in the Indiana National Guard in 1969 after his college deferment ended. There were suggestions, which he denied, that family influence helped him get the Guard slot that kept him out of the draft. He said his unit could have been activated any time during the six years he served.

In Houston, Quayle said there's no comparison between Clinton's record and his. "I wore the uniform for six years," he said in an NBC-TV interview. "I chose to serve my country. Bill Clinton chose not to."

Letters to the Editor

Dear editor,

I told myself that I could not vote for George Bush. He is too arrogant and does not know how to act at the checkout counter at the grocery store.

Then I watched the Democratic convention. Bill Clinton was to increase government services--like, "Mail me all you bills and the government will handle it!" OK, that seems a little funny, so maybe I'll have to vote for George.

This week I watched the Republican convention. I see crippled minorities, AIDS victims, first ladies and preachers go so crazy against all of the above that their heads are spinning around. Yeah, like I'm gonna vote for these nuts?

So, I devised a solution. Since the current candidates are laughable, Speedy needs to run for King. Speedy, if you make me your vice king, I'll vote for you.

Notes on the Law

"Jarndyce and Jarndyce drones on. This scarecrow of a suit has, in course of time, become so complicated, that no man alive knows what it means. The parties to it understand it least; . . . Scores of persons have deliriously found themselves made parties in Jarndyce and Jarndyce, without knowing how or why. . . ." Dickens, Bleak House, W.W. Norton & Company, Inc. (1977).

Charles Dickens in Bleak House expressed a thorough disgust with the English legal system of the 1800's and its courts. Even though Dickens wrote in the 1800's, his quote reflects common perceptions of today's legal system, lawyers and courts. These perceptions include the perception that law suits tend to drag on and on, that lawyers make matters more complicated than necessary, that people are sued who have only a tenuous connection with the matter and many others.

If these are your perceptions, then you need to know there are alternative ways of settling disputes with business associates or other persons who may make claims against you or against whom you may make a claim. These alternative dispute resolution systems include arbitration, mediation and Christian mediation.

Each of the alternative dispute resolution systems can be mandated by contract. In other words, if you intend to enter into a contract, you can provide in the contract that any dispute will be submitted to arbitration, mediation or Christian mediation. Provisions for arbitration, mediation or Christian mediation are enforceable.

Arbitration usually involves submission of your claim or defense to a panel of three arbitrators. The arbitrators may be people engaged in the same type of business as you are and may be attorneys. Arbitrations are, generally speaking, less formal and more expedient than is litigation.

In other ways, arbitration is a great deal like litigation. Each party is allowed to be represented by an attorney, to present witnesses, to cross-examine the opposing party's witnesses and to present other evidence.

Mediation is less formal and is many times not binding. Mediation often involves the parties each "telling their stories" to the mediator outside the presence of the opposing party. In a series of independent sessions with each party, the mediator attempts to find common ground for resolution of the dispute. Usually, the parties do not formally call witnesses or engage in other formal procedures.

After listening to the parties, the mediator tries to get each party to see the good and bad points of his position and of the opposing party's position. Again, through this process, the mediator attempts to move the parties toward a common or middle ground. If a common ground is reached, the resolution is binding on the parties as a contract. In the event the parties cannot reach common ground, the original contract can provide that the matter will be resolved by binding arbitration.

Christian mediation is similar to the mediation process described above. However, a Christian mediator is trained to incorporate biblical principles into the dispute resolution process. It is not necessary for a party to be a Christian to be subject to Christian mediation. A contractual provision calling for Christian mediation of any disputes is valid on a non-Christian party to the contract once the non-Christian executes the contract.

There are national organizations that conduct arbitrations, mediations and Christian mediations. However, parties to a contract do not have to use one of the national organizations. Established local businessmen, attorneys, counselors or church leaders can be designated as arbitrators or mediators.

Whether you agree with Charles Dickens or not, you should consider including a clause requiring arbitration, mediation or Christian mediation in the contracts you sign. Also, realize that most litigation can be resolved by arbitration or mediation, if both sides agree, even if there is no contractual provision requiring arbitration or mediation.

EPA 'hogwash'

There is little doubt that the Environmental Protection Agency has become an asylum run by the inmates. In their drive to de-industrialize the United States, the employees of EPA have now taken to re-writing history to achieve their goals.

In the "Environmental Benefits" report of December, 1991, the EPA claims that the acidity lakes in the New Jersey Pine Barrens area are the result of acid rain caused by industrial pollution. The report states that the Pine Barrens area "endures" acid streams and lakes, but the process can be reversed by clamping down on polluters.

One scientist, Dr. Edward Krug, read the EPA report and was shocked. In 1980, he had done his Ph.D. thesis on the Pine Barrens area and was very familiar with the acid lakes and streams.

As a respected soil and water scientist, Dr. Krug is seeking to set the record straight. "The Pine Barrens has been acidic for so long that its organisms require acid streams in which to live," he states. It seems that the area got its name from the first settlers in the region. Because of obvious problems with the water supply, the Indians never chose to live there.

Well documented studies, from the early 1800s, noted the level of acidity in the streams and lakes. Naturalists from Europe also took note of the natural acidity and reported the fact in journals.

Clearly, acid rain had nothing to do with the fact that the Pine Barrens have acidic water. They were acidic before the Europeans ever set foot in the New World!

As in the case of global warming, the Alar apple scare, dioxins, chlorofluorocarbons, ozone holes and many other manufactured crises, the environmentalists first tried to stretch a minimum amount of fact to cover their positions. One by one, the truth behind the scares have been discovered by good scientific investigation--each has been found groundless.

Now that the misinformation play has failed, the zealot environmentalists have apparently taken to fabricating the truth. Their new motto seems to be: "If the facts do not support our positions, then change the facts."

and insulin to the body without benefit of a needle.

But not all drugs can be delivered by patch now.

"For the moment, at least, skin permeability is the limiting factor," Good says.

"So compounds that are very potent are the only viable candidates. The limits of dosing pretty much define whether or not you can develop a transdermal patch.

"There are many compounds that are quite permeable in the skin, but they may not be usable ... for example, compounds that cause sensitization or allergy. Compounds that are naturally irritating to the skin can't be used."

What makes the system work is applying a high concentration of the medicinal compound on the skin, while the concentration under the skin is low. The high concentration moves toward the low.

The estrogen patch tends to the various symptoms of menopause, that time in a woman's life between the ages of 45 and 55 when the ovaries normally become inactive and menstruation ends. Concurrently the woman's body gradually ceases production of the sex hormones.

Among the symptoms are hot flashes, night sweats, vaginal dryness and, over a period of time, bone loss. The estrogen patch, usually worn on the lower torso, combats these symptoms by providing a steady dosage of estrogen.

Some doctors prefer to use a patch that provides both estrogen and a progestin, but those patches, widely used abroad, are not yet approved in the United States. A postmenopausal woman whose uterus is still intact and who uses estrogen alone may encounter a build-up in the lining of the uterus which can develop into endometrial carcinoma, a cancer of the lining of the uterus. To preclude this some doctors prefer progesterone in the patch with estrogen, more nearly representing the premenopausal state.

Pharmaceutical houses estimate that about 25 million American women suffer from postmenopausal bone loss.

There seems to be several kinds of logic in this patchwork world. Clearly the estrogen and nitroglycerine patches answer a long term need.

But the motion-sickness patch can be avoided by avoiding the circumstances that produce the debility. Similarly, there are other alternatives to the nicotine patches, nicotine gum and even raw will power, for instance.

But Americans love novelty and the nicotine patch certainly has caught on, aided and abetted by government and other public health experts who would like to erase smoking as an American habit. Even a 1 percent success rate would be welcome, one said.

CIBA-GEIGY produces Habitrol, which claims about 57 percent of the nicotine patch sales. Marion Merrill Dow makes Nicotrol, which has 30 percent of sales and Lederle's ProStep has 13 percent. Warner Lambert, a latecomer, is bringing out its Nicotrol this month. It differs from the others in that it is a 16-hour patch that is only active during waking hours. Some 24-hour patch users have complained of troubled rest or sleeplessness.

Manufacturers and public health experts alike survived a scare when Sturdy Memorial Hospital in Attleboro, Vt., reported five heart attacks in patients who smoked while wearing the patch. The implication was that additional nicotine from smoking had put them in harms way.

Should the public be warned and if so how? Dr. John Harter, director of the Food and Drug Administration's pilot drug development program says, "If you scare people too much, they might just stick with the devil they know, which is their two packs a day."

Finally, experts concluded that the purpose of the patch was to remove smokers from the ranks of those vulnerable to heart attacks, and that a few cigarettes on top of the nicotine in the patch should not have caused the heart attacks much more than smoking two packs a day.

Similar questions were raised over fetal risk in pregnant women smokers. In the end, merely informing patients of the risk became the consensus and the matter was dropped.

Some financial analysts say the nicotine patch fever should abate after the first year, having reaped the most likely candidates. Patch users are already more than halfway to spending $1 billion dollars this year.

Scientists have been toying with the idea of carrying drugs through the skin without penetration for decades. There was a wood-derived compound called DMSO in the 1970s that some thought could carry compounds across the skin barrier, but it proved to be too irritating on its own. Scientists turned to ethanol, which worked quite well.

Patches have come a long way since then. Some compounds don't need an enhancer.

Long before the nicotine patch, ironically, tobacco harvesters betrayed the mechanism. In handling the wet leaves, they unwittingly absorbed nicotine and many became sick.

"I think the future is very upbeat," Gale says. "The permeation enhancer research is really paying off, bringing in drugs that didn't used to go across skin..."

A new technique is being developed to bring proteins such as insulin and human growth factor into play. It involves using a direct current from mini-batteries and an electronic circuitry to encourage the flow of ions into the skin. "The patch is thicker," Gale says, "but the challenge is to make it as small as possible."

This whole new world abounds in ironies.

Are some people so embarrassed at letting other people see their patches that they seek cosmetically to conceal them?

Says Florrie Roberts, a Lakewood, N.J. cosmetician who calls herself a camouflagist, "We've been asked to do a lot of strange things, but nothing like that."

Some patch wearers have complained that patches come off in the shower or the bathtub, and some undoubtedly do. Good says it's just one of those problems where you do the best you can. These patches are tested on upward of 1,000 people. "Some people have skin that won't tolerate a Bandaid without irritation," Gale says.

"No matter how good your contact adhesive will be, there is going to be some small part of the population that just can't tolerate it. It might not stick. It might cause an allergic reaction."

And in some cases patches could be more expensive than pills.

Good of CIBA-GEIGY, who gets his patches for free, says, "I'm a smoker and I've used the nicotine patch to see what the relative effect is. I'm still a smoker because that's what I am. If I ever decide to quit, I'll use the patch again."

SCHOOL

Year-round classes can disrupt the learning process, traditional family vacations and summer jobs, some say. And they contend it can pose a hardship for parents in finding daycare, or juggling the schedules of children whose schools use different calendars.

"It's going to be more expensive and more disruptive and the (test) scores are not going up," said Hunt Superintendent James Engelmann, vice president of an organization against year-round school that includes individuals, groups associated with tourism and summer camps.

Engelmann called year-round school "just a fad."

Pringle said year-round classes may cost more for utilities and staff, but noted the potential of avoiding new buildings.

The Weslaco school district, for example, would have needed a new elementary school this year if not for year-round classes, said Thomas Murphy, the district's executive director for curriculum.

Weslaco began offering a multi-track system at its elementary schools last school year, and about 35 percent of the students opted for it, Murphy said. This year, the district also is trying it in junior high.

Year-round school has resulted in improved staff and student attendance and some gain in education retention, Murphy said.

Extra classes run during a portion of the breaks "are really the jewels of the year-round program," he added. "That's got to pay academic benefits."

Weslaco offers reading, writing and math activities designed to be fun during the breaks, he said. For example, students might take a field trip and write a report on what they saw. Although students can't be required to go more than 180 days, he said, about half did last school year.

Engelmann said Texas students who need extra classes could just go to summer school. But Shaddix said the year-round schedule is attractive because "you can catch a kid up before they've really become a failure."

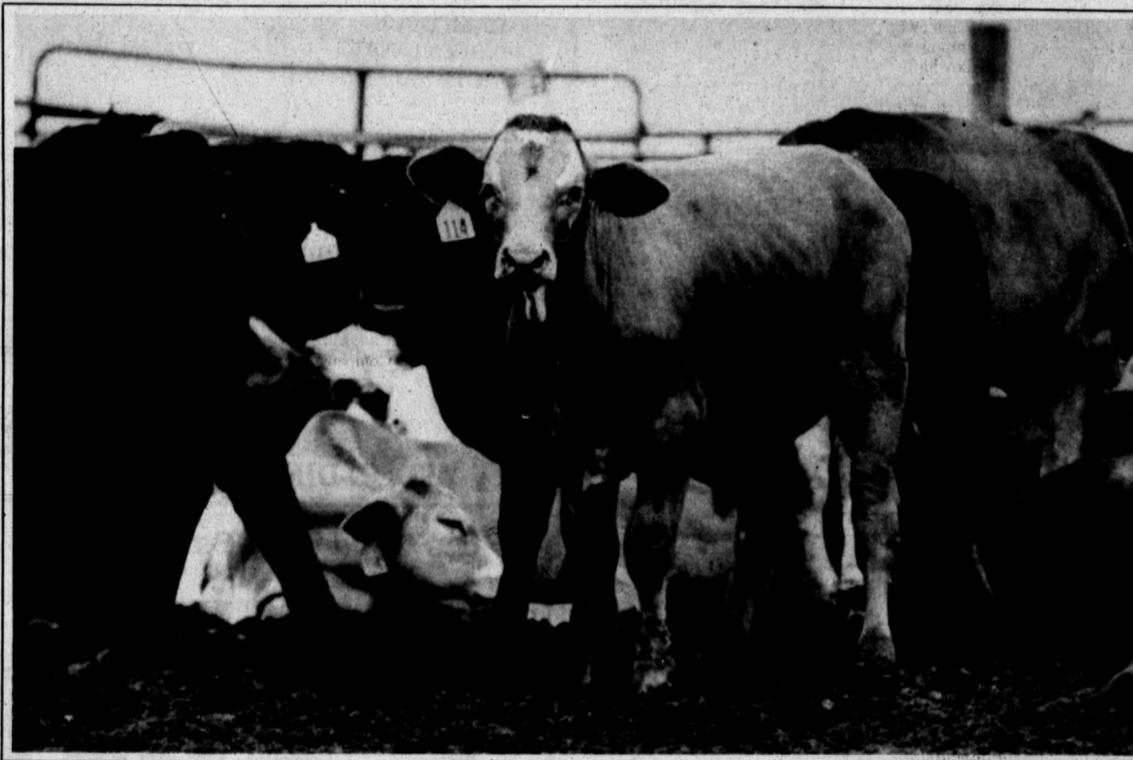

Weslaco's extra classes were paid for with summer-school money, Murphy said. And he said year-round school works well for students who are migrant farm workers and may be returning to school later than other youngsters.

Across the state, the Plano school district is using the single-track version of year-round education on two elementary campuses. Tuition is charged for activities offered during the breaks, which have included a trip to the Johnson Space Center outside of Houston and dance and foreign language classes.

The district is studying whether there is enough community support to go year-round in all grades, said Charles McCasland, a Plano elementary school principal who heads the Texas chapter of the National Association for Year-Round Education.

"Most people work more efficiently when you work more intensely and take more frequent breaks," he said. "By the turn of the century, I think it will be the norm."

Hereford's Azael Valdez (dark jersey) lowers his shoulder into a Plainview tackler after catching a pass during Friday's scrimmage at Whiteface Stadium. Valdez caught at least four passes on the night.

2nd team shines in scrimmage

By JAY PEDEN
Sports Editor

The Herd finally got to hit somebody else Friday in a scrimmage against Plainview at Whiteface Stadium. Plainview scored four touchdowns to Hereford's three, as the Bulldogs ran for a pair of 70-yard touchdowns late in the scrimmage.

Most of the Herd's offensive action as well as all three scores came in the second and fifth sessions, when the players on the field were more or less the second-team players.

Hereford's first team offense managed only four first downs against a fired-up Plainview defense.

"We had trouble executing our offense tonight," Herd coach Danny Haney said. "We weren't quite ready early for the struggle."

Hereford's first team defense played well except for allowing a 60-yard TD run featuring two pitches. After the razzle-dazzle run, Plainview drove to the goal line but was turned back inches from the goal on fourth down.

Haney didn't seem too worried about the Herd's offensive problems since it was just a scrimmage.

"The purpose of this scrimmage is to look at everybody, to give everybody a chance to show us what they can do," he said. "It was a good session: There was lots of hard hitting, we played hard and there were some bright spots."

"We threw the ball well and late, in the (fifth) session we ran the ball well. There's some thing we have to fine tune. That's another purpose of this scrimmage: to see what you need to do and where you need to go."

The basic format of the scrimmage was this: each of six sessions was split so that the offense got 20 plays, then the defense got 20 plays. The offense started out on its own 30-yard line and got to advance as long as it was making first downs. If the offense was stopped--by downs or by turnover--it started over at the 30.

Hereford drew first blood in the second session when Cameron Bell hauled in a 27-yard pass from Elias Reyna in the end zone. The play was set up by 40-yard run by Chad Carlile.

When Hereford was on defense, Plainview scored on a short run capping a sustained drive.

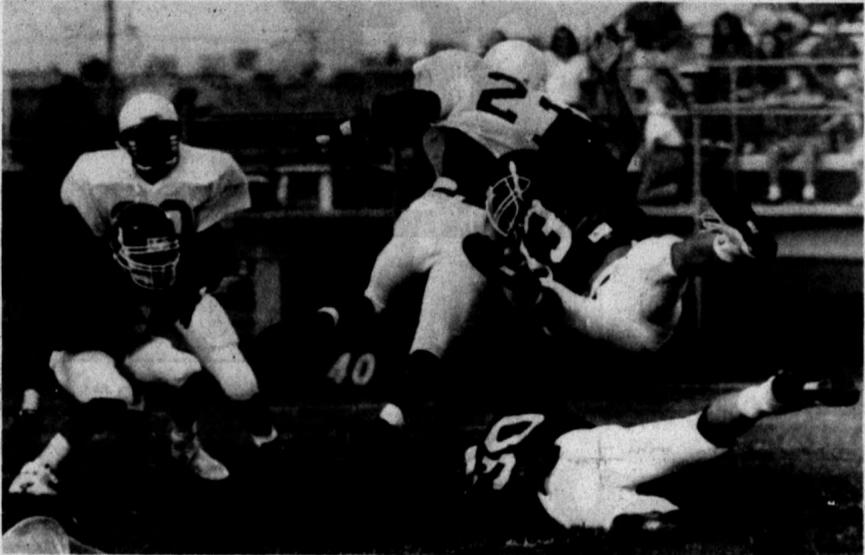

Neither team came close to scoring during the third session, and in the fourth, Plainview scored when the running back pitched a trailing runner about 40 yards downfield from the line of scrimmage.

In the fifth session, Hereford's whole running game dominated for two scores, and it was the only time one team could score twice in one session. Chris Brummett and Chris Vallejo had runs of 10-plus yards to set up Brummett's 31-yard scoring run. Shortly after Hereford started over, Carlile had a 12-yard run which set Hereford up at the 21. Vallejo ran the ball to the nine, then to the one-foot line, and Carlile ran for the score.

In the second half of the fifth session, Plainview was stopped by Jake Head's interception. Plainview later scored on a 70-yard run where the running back was stopped but not wrapped up behind the line of scrimmage. With most of the Herd defense piled up in the middle, the Bulldog ran backwards and around the end, and he couldn't be caught from behind.

In the final session, Plainview scored on another 70-yard run on one of the last plays of the night. A Bulldog went around the left side and down the sideline almost untouched.

Circus act

Hereford's Joel Gaytan (33, flying), Kyle Hansen (30) and the Plainview running back (27) met simultaneously coming from different directions, producing this effect. Hereford's Michael Ramirez (9) is ready to make sure the ball carrier goes down.

Bucs' knuckler tastes defeat

By The Associated Press

Tim Wakefield, who won his first three starts with his knuckleball, got beaten for the first time with his fastball.

Robby Thompson hit a three-run homer off the rookie to cap a six-run fifth inning Friday night as the San Francisco Giants beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 6-5.

Wakefield (3-1) had not allowed more than two earned runs in any of his first four major league starts, and had pitched at least eight innings each time. He lasted only six innings against the Giants, giving up eight hits and four walks, along with his first-ever homer in the majors.

"I thought I'd change him up and throw a fastball," Wakefield said, "but I threw it in the wrong place. Hey, it's just the nature of the game. I'm not going to win every time and I'm not going to lose every time."

John Burkett (11-6) won his fifth straight start despite allowing five runs and seven hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Pittsburgh closed to 6-5 in the seventh on Mike Lavallo's RBI double and Lloyd McClendon's sacrifice fly. Rod Beck pitched the ninth for his 13th save.

In other games, St. Louis beat Atlanta 5-2 in 10 innings, Montreal beat Cincinnati 6-3, Chicago beat Los Angeles 3-2 in 12 innings and Houston beat Philadelphia 6-1. The New York Mets and the San Diego Padres were off because of an exhibition NFL game in Jack Murphy Stadium.

Astros 6, Phillies 1
Brian Williams pitched seven strong innings as Houston won the opener of the final series of its 26-game road trip. Craig Biggio, Luis Gonzalez and Ed Taubensee each drove in two runs for the Astros, 10-14 on their 28-day swing.

Williams (5-4) gave up five hits, struck out seven and walked three. Andy Ashby (1-1) held Houston hitless for 4 2-3 innings, but gave up four runs in the fifth.

Cardinals 5, Braves 2
Felix Jose singled home the go-ahead run with two outs in the 10th inning as visiting St. Louis won its third straight.

Ray Lankford drew a leadoff walk from Kent Mercker (3-2) and stole his 36th base. Jose singled for his third hit of the game, Andres Galarraga singled and Tracy Woodson hit a two-run double off Randy St. Claire.

Mike Perez (7-2) relieved in the ninth and escaped a bases-loaded jam when Mark Lemke grounded into an inning-ending double play with the bases loaded. Lee Smith pitched the 10th for his 32nd save.

Expos 6, Reds 3
Moises Alou, who entered the game in the top of the eighth as a defensive replacement, hit a three-run homer in the bottom half for visiting Montreal.

Marquis Grissom led off by drawing a walk from Tim Belcher (10-12). Larry Walker singled and Alou, in a 12-for-66 slump, hit Rob Dibble's first pitch for his sixth home run this season.

John Wetteland (3-3) won after blowing his eighth save chance in 35 opportunities.

Cubs 3, Dodgers 2
Steve Buechele, who made a critical throwing error in the eighth inning, singled home the go-ahead run in the 12th at Dodger Stadium as the Cubs won for the fourth time in five games.

Ryne Sandberg reached on an infield hit off Jay Howell (1-3), took third on Andre Dawson's single and scored on Buechele's 10th hit in 61 at-bats.

Jeff Robinson (3-2) allowed two hits in two innings and Bob Scanlon pitched the 12th for his eighth save as the Cubs sent the Dodgers to their third straight loss.

McGwire gets hurt; Ryan loses

By BEN WALKER
AP Baseball Writer

All season long, Oakland manager Tony La Russa has kept the A's in first place despite injuries to Jose Canseco, Rickey Henderson and other key players.

Starting tonight, La Russa may need to piece together yet another new lineup, this one without Mark McGwire.

McGwire, leading the majors with 38 home runs, left Friday night's 4-2 loss to Baltimore with a strained right rib cage. He hurt himself diving for a ground ball in the first inning, then aggravated the problem while swinging at a pitch in the fourth and immediately left the game.

"I think it will probably be a few days, at least," McGwire said. "How long, I don't know."

and Mike Mussina led the Orioles to victory.

Anderson homered for the fifth consecutive game against the Athletics, and also drew three walks and stole a base. Devereaux, moved to the third spot in the batting order when slumping Cal Ripken was dropped to fifth, drove in two runs, giving him 21 RBIs in 19 games.

Mussina (12-5) gave up two runs on eight hits in six innings. Carney Lansford homered and drove in both runs for Oakland.

Alan Mills pitched two innings for his second save. Kelly Downs (3-4) gave up three hits in four-plus innings, but walked six.

In other games, Minnesota topped Toronto 5-1, Cleveland defeated Texas 8-6, Milwaukee downed Detroit 3-2, Seattle beat Boston 5-2, Kansas City defeated Chicago 4-3 and California stopped New York 9-5.

Indians 8, Rangers 6

Cleveland won its 57th game, matching last year's victory total, and sent Nolan Ryan to his fourth consecutive loss.

Ryan (5-7) gave up seven runs in 4 1-3 innings and struck out only one. He is 0-4 with a 6.11 ERA in five August starts, and his losing streak is his longest since a five-game slide in 1988.

Albert Belle hit a three-run homer as the host Indians won their fourth in seven games despite home runs by Juan Gonzalez, Ruben Sierra and Dean Palmer. Gonzalez hit his 32nd homer, tying the team record set by Larry Parrish in 1987.

Dennis Cook (5-5) was the winner and Steve Olin got four outs for his 22nd save.

Twins 5, Blue Jays 1

Slumping Kent Hrbek homered and drove in three runs as Minnesota stopped a five-game losing streak. Toronto, leading the AL East, has lost three in a row and been outscored 31-9.

John Smiley (13-6) gave up seven hits, including Roberto Alomar's home run, and left after a leadoff single in the ninth inning. Todd Stottlemyre (7-9) allowed five runs on five hits and four walks in 3 2-3 innings.

Brewers 3, Tigers 2

Jaime Navarro improved to 5-0 lifetime against Detroit, and Milwaukee won at home to close within 3 1/2 games of first place in the AL East.

'Horns celebrate 100 years of football history

By BILL SULLIVAN
Houston Chronicle

AUSTIN (AP) — Eyebrows are raised every time he says this sort of thing. Even now, Darrell Royal seems amused by the reaction.

Everyone else remembers that afternoon for The Pass, The Catch, the tying touchdown and Happy Feller's dramatic extra point - all the snapshot images of an amazing day in the Ozarks.

Royal's recollections? Four fumbles. A slew of other mistakes. The nagging feeling that his old friend, Frank Broyles had outsmarted him from the start.

"It's not my favorite game, not at all," Royal says today, in a tone more matter-of-fact than curmudgeonly. "We didn't play well. We were outcoached."

"Our players won that ball game."

Fitting, perhaps. Even the most successful coach in University of Texas football history is a critic.

So it goes in Austin...

Others, of course, are decidedly less stoic about the events of Dec. 6, 1969. It was billed, at the time, as "The Game of the Century," and over the years its reputation has spilled beyond even those seemingly generous confines.

James Street threw The Pass. Randy Peschel made The Catch. Texas won 15-14, and Richard Nixon, the president of the United States, came to the locker room to pronounce the Longhorns as the best of the best in college football's centennial.

"It was like another world, another time," Street said on the 20th anniversary of The Game. "It's like it really didn't happen at all."

It did, though. And when the Orangebloods convene this autumn to commemorate UT football's 100th year, the most celebrated victory in school history no doubt will be celebrated just a little more.

That game, that afternoon, were the centerpiece of a golden era in Austin. It was the time of the wishbone and the 30-game winning streak. It was a time when Texas' reputation was strong enough to coax staid old Notre Dame out of 45 years of sitting at home on New Year's Day.

It was a time, really, when UT football seemed touched by magic, in a way never seen before or since.

"I remember watching the UCLA game in 1970," says former Longhorns quarterback Robert Brewer, who was in elementary school at the time. "We're down 17-13, and it looks like it's all over. Then Eddie Phillips throws a long pass, two of their defensive backs run together, and Texas wins."

"I'll never forget that. I'm sitting there, thinking, 'Gee. We can't lose. We just can't lose.'"

And therein lies the rub. The Longhorns "could" lose, of course, and they did. That 1970 season ended with a Cotton Bowl loss to the same Fighting Irish. The national championship that seemed almost a birthright has proved vexingly elusive ever since.

Since Royal's retirement after the 1976 season, Fred Akers (1977-86) and David McWilliams (1987-91) have tried, without success, to recapture old glories. Akers now tends his ranch in the Hill Country; McWilliams is an associate athletic director.

Now, for season No. 100, John Mackovic attempts to make some sense of a fractured puzzle.

Mackovic, a bright, energetic sort, is not shy about discussing either the program's storied history or its decline. UT, he will tell you, fell behind in terms of recruiting and facilities, while rival Texas A&M was improving in both areas.

There will be no quick fix, he says, no overnight solution. "Being Texas" no longer is enough.

At the same time, Mackovic is quick to note that he believes he has come to a special place, one with the potential to be great again.

"One of the interesting things I found when I first came here is that the image of Texas football is stronger outside the state than it is at home," he said. "In other parts of the country, this is still a name that means something to people."

"Texas has been at the highest level. Now, fans want to know, 'How can we get back?'"

"That's not going to come overnight, and it's not going to come without a price."

Akers and McWilliams paid that price. The images of Royal and Street, of Peschel and Cotton Speyer, of big games played and won, cast a giant shadow in the capital.

In some ways, the past provides a foundation. In others, those memories haunt a program struggling to find its place in the new reality of college football in the '90s.

All of this started innocently enough on Thanksgiving Day 1893 with an 18-16 victory on the road against Dallas University. Consecutive shutouts of San Antonio led to a rematch with Dallas and another UT win, this time a 16-0 wipeout.

That was the first football season for Texas: Two teams. Four games. A perfect 4-0.

The official record, by the way, lists "No Coach" - which was probably the last time the position created no controversy in the state.

It was a time when college football was more of a low-key affair, a reality reflected both by the money involved and the schedule.

In 1894, Reginald D. Wentworth was paid the princely sum of $325 to serve as the first UT coach. Twice that year, the Austin YMCA provided the competition.

By 1897, something called "Houston Town Team" turned up and became a 42-6 victim. Nor were the Kansas City Medics (30-0) much of a match at the turn of the century.

In 1901, though, coach S.H. Thompson picked up the tempo considerably. That was the year Texas played five games in 13 days, the first four of them on the road.

The death march began Nov.

16 at Missouri (an 11-0 UT win), then wound through Kirksville (a 48-0 loss) and Kansas (a 12-0 defeat) before an 11-0 win at Oklahoma raised spirits considerably. Finally, Texas returned home for a 32-0 pasting of A&M, capping off the season in high style.

As that odyssey suggests, filling out a schedule could be problematic. In 1905, for instance, Transylvania still had some bite, handing Texas a 6-0 defeat. Over the next few years, UT would find games against the likes of the 26th Infantry (1906) and Fort Worth Polytechnic (1913). In 1918, a particularly colorful slate included Penn Radio School (twice, no less), Ream Flying Field and Camp Mabry Auto.

In 1924, though, football began to move uptown. The Longhorns played their first game in Memorial Stadium, debuting without distinction with a 28-10 loss to Baylor.

Coaches came. Coaches went. (Some even departed voluntarily.) Clyde Littlefield's seven-year stand (1927-33) offered the longevity record until Dana X. Bible - who is widely credited with saving the program - lasted 10 years (1937-46), compiling a 63-31-3 record and winning three Southwest Conference championships.

After Bible's retirement, Blair Cherry (1947-50) and Ed Price (1951-56) kept the chair warm. By the time Price departed after a 1-9 season in '56, it had become entirely too warm, in fact.

In Austin, it was time, once again, for a change.

It would be a dramatic one. With Price out of the picture, Bobby Dodd was the first choice to take over. The problem: Dodd told UT officials he wasn't interested.

He did, however, recommend a relative unknown, a fellow with only three years experience as a collegiate head coach. Texas fans might have remembered him as an All-America quarterback for Oklahoma, but a 17-13 record in stops at Mississippi State and Washington didn't seem to augur great things.

"I'm not sure I knew quite what to expect," Royal recalls. "But when you're sleeping on the floor, it's hard to fall out of bed."

Royal's first UT team finished 6-4-1. By 1959, the Longhorns were 9-2, tying for the SWC title and representing the conference in the Cotton Bowl.

Just that quickly, the program was rolling. In 1961, only a 6-0 loss to TCU prevented a serious bid for a first national championship. Two years later, Texas got over the hump, capping off an 11-0 season with a 28-6 Cotton Bowl win over Roger Staubach's Navy team.

The Longhorns nearly did it again in '64. Only a 14-13 loss to Arkansas marred a 10-1 season that ended with a 21-17 Orange Bowl win over Joe Namath and Alabama.

"I can remember so many situations where the balance between success and coming up just a little short was an extremely delicate thing," Royal says. "In the championship years, things fell our way. Other times, it fell against us, just enough to make the difference."

The pendulum swung more dramatically against UT over the next few years. Finishes of 6-4, 7-4 and 6-4 were cause for grumbling around town and around the state.

"I never really felt insecure,"

Royal insists now. "I was trying too hard to win football games."

Still, the heat clearly was on, and necessity proved to be the mother of invention. For 1968, Royal and his staff - most notably assistant Emory Bellard - came up with a new wrinkle: Three backs would line up behind the quarterback. The fullback would position himself a step ahead of the two halfbacks.

The wishbone, as it would later be dubbed, was "different," at least.

"I don't know that Emory ever got as much credit for all that as he deserved," Royal says. "He wasn't the only contributor - everyone tossed something in - but it was his idea originally."

After a rough start, the fun-y-looking offense would provide the catalyst for the 30-game winning streak that brought national championships in 1969 and

'70. The amazing roll included that dramatic "Big Shootout" win over Arkansas, followed by a 21-17 come-from-behind Cotton Bowl win over Notre Dame.

The good times didn't end, in fact, until a 24-11 upset at the hands of those same Fighting Irish in the 1971 Cotton Bowl.

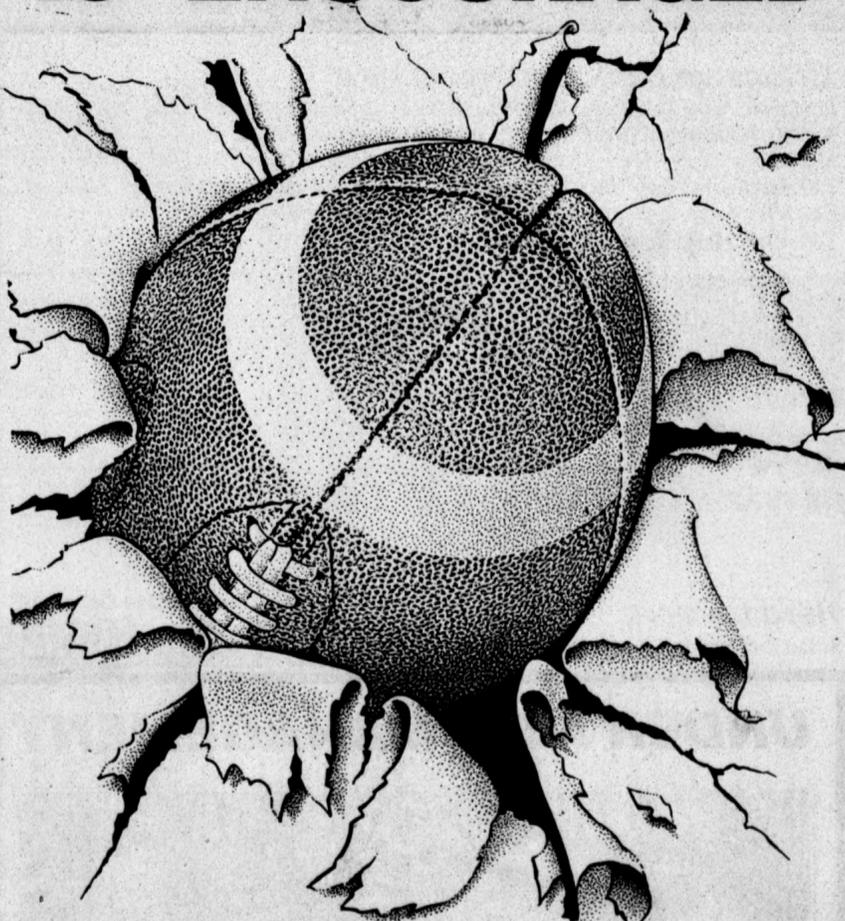

At the time, no one realized this would be the high-water mark.

Times would change again. Texas indeed could lose, and things, at times, could get ugly.

Even before Royal's resignation after the 1976 season, there were signs of trouble. Minority recruiting had lagged. Texas did not produce its first black letterman - Julius Whittier - until 1970. Neighboring Oklahoma began to clean up on Texas talent, and a 48-27 OU win over the Longhorns in 1971 would be the first of five in a row.

Royal came up with some outstanding black players - Roosevelt Leaks, Earl Campbell, Raymond Clayborn, just to name a few - but rival recruiters were able to plant the seed that Texas was a racist institution. Scholarship limits and the changing face of college football were beginning to take their toll as well.

A shocking loss at Baylor in 1974 ended the streak of six consecutive conference titles, and Royal would not win another. After the injury-wrecked 1976 season, he decided to step aside.

Politics, an old UT staple, would surface once again. Hoping to install longtime assistant Mike Campbell as his successor, Royal was overruled.

Former UT assistant Fred Akers, then coaching at Wyoming, got the call, a decision that fractured elements of the old and new and left hard feelings for years to come.

Akers had a chance to turn the old guard in his favor. A talented group of sophomores and a Heisman Trophy season from Campbell led Texas to an 11-0 regular season and a No. 1 ranking in 1977, but a 38-10 pasting at the hands of Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl cost Texas its fourth national championship.

"The big cigars never forgave Fred for that one," a longtime UT insider said recently. "As quickly as he had taken the town by storm, he was on the outs just as fast."

Akers would not produce another Cotton Bowl team until 1981. Two years later, Texas again went 11-0 and carried a No. 2 ranking into New Year's Day. Again, though, the season would end sourly, this time with a 10-9 loss to Georgia.

By then, Akers clearly was on the ropes. Embarrassing losses to Iowa in the Freedom Bowl and Air Force in the Bluebonnet Bowl gave way to a 5-6 season in 1986, and he was replaced (despite an 86-31-2 record) by McWilliams, a star of the 1963 national championship team and a former UT assistant who had just completed a successful head coaching debut at Texas Tech.

McWilliams was hailed as a throwback to the Royal era, but times indeed had changed. After going 16-18 his first three years, McWilliams finally produced a conference championship - UT's first since 1983 - with a 10-1 regular season in 1990.

But another Cotton Bowl disaster (a 46-3 hammering by Miami) planted the seeds of McWilliams' undoing, and he, too, was gone after a 5-6 finish last fall.

With him went the "Texas Way." If the glory days were to be recaptured, even the old-liners were forced to concede, a different approach would be required.

Enter Mackovic, a man given to tailored suits, measured responses and a CEO's way of doing things.

"He'll ruffle some feathers, but it's time for that," another UT insider remarked. "The idea that you could do it the old way went out the door with David. Now it's up to John to drag some of these people into the 20th century."

"I wish him luck. He'll need it." How has UT football changed since R.D. Wentworth earned $325 to run the show back in 1894?

You needed only to take a glance at the gaunt, haunted-looking McWilliams near the end of his final season to find the answer to that.

"You could see how hard it was on him," says current UT quarterback Peter Gardere. "It was his school. He wanted so badly for things to go well. When they didn't go well, I think it really hurt him."

Gardere, too, is no stranger to the wrath of Orange scorned. A 3-0 record against Oklahoma - success matched only by the legendary Bobby Layne - and school records for completions (380) and yardage (5,032) have so endeared him to fans and alumni that Gardere already hears the drumbeat for heralded recruit Shea Morenz.

So it goes in Austin...

"Oh, it's pretty political, definitely," Gardere says with a shrug. "I've learned a lot. It has been interesting."

"You have to be pretty thick-skinned if you're going to play for Texas. You see and hear some pretty amazing things. Being a veteran, I probably know more about how to deal with it now."

How, then, to assess the experience?

"I've enjoyed a lot of it," Gardere says, "and some of it you would have preferred to skip."

Lance Gunn, a senior safety, understands. He, too, remembers the first time the catcalls rained down from the stands.

Playing for Texas, he says, isn't quite like playing for anyone else in these parts. Doing so with a short stick, as Longhorn teams often have done in recent years, only makes matter worse.

"My first two years, when we were out there against Oklahoma or

A&M, it was pretty obvious they had more talent than we did," Gunn says. "People might say, 'Hey, you're supposed to be 'Texas,' but when you don't have the players, you can't cover that sort of thing up for very long."

The Longhorns haven't. The 1990 team was an exception, up to a point, but hindsight suggests its success was a triumph of talent over organization. The deficiencies in the program were exposed again quickly enough in '91.

Still, there are those in Austin who continue to believe that "being Texas" is all it should take.

"It gets to you at times, because the expectations are still there," Gunn says. "If I'm out at a mall and I'm wearing a UT shirt, I'll run into guys wearing UH or Baylor or A&M stuff, and they'll start giving me a hard time. Stuff like, 'Hey, man, we kicked your butt, didn't we?'"

"It's strange sometimes. You want to say, 'What do you mean, WE?' I didn't see YOU out there. But if you play for Texas, I guess that's part of the deal."

Nor is that likely to change any time soon.

In Austin, Mackovic's first team will work against the backdrop of a season of celebration. The wishbone. Fourth-and-three. Street to Peschel. The Good Old Days.

It was, indeed, another world, another time, as Street himself says. Nearly 23 years have passed since that day in the Ozarks, the one by which all others are measured, the one that casts the giant shadow.

Can Texas be Texas again? "I'm not sure that if you got all the same people back together that you could do it all again," even Royal admits.

That probably won't keep the Orangebloods from expecting miracles. So it goes in Austin. Should another gem like Texas 15, Arkansas 14 come along again, though, this much is certain.

Neither Royal, nor anyone else, will be in a hurry to find the flaws.

NCAA Numbers

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) - The NCAA reported that total participation in the 76 championships for the 1990-91 period was 2,764 teams and 21,903 athletes.

Total paid attendance for all competition was a record 2,168,393. Total gross receipts amounted to $29,470,270. A record of 1,793,170 was posted for games in Division I.

Arnie's Game

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) - Arnold Palmer was asked what the years have done to his golf game.

Palmer shrugged and made this wry observation:

"For so many years before the Masters began, I was asked over and over if I thought I could win. Now everybody wants to know if I think I will make the cut. I'm not too sure I like the latter."

Palmer won the Masters four times.

NCAA Increase

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) - For the sixth straight year the NCAA membership increased in 1991.

The association reported 1,053 members for the year in overall categories, including 847 active member institutions. That number represented an increase of 1.8 percent over the 828 members in 1990.

The last year the NCAA suffered a decline in membership was 1985 when overall it dipped to 981 from 988 the previous year.

Old-world theme depicted during unique ceremony

During an old-world style wedding ceremony, complete with a horse-drawn carriage, Anjani L. Wuerflein of Hereford became the bride of James E. Cole of Abilene Saturday morning, Aug. 8, in First Baptist Church.

Officiating for the marriage was Bob Weissinger, administrator of First Baptist Church of Abilene, who also married the groom's parents.

Ed and Bonnie Wuerflein of 136 Oak are the parents of the bride and J.L. and Diane Cole of Abilene are the parents of the groom.

The church altar was decorated with four-foot pedestals graduating to eight-foot columns in the choir loft. Old-world style urns topped the columns and each was filled with vast, all-white floral arrangements consisting of roses, lilies, stephanotis, snapdragons and stock. Garlands of ivy and assorted greenery adorned columns holding foliage.

Large candles placed on candlesticks topped six large pedestals forming a backdrop for the kneeling benches which flanked a table dressed with a Battenburg lace cloth and brass accompaniments. These provided the setting and focus for the taking of communion and the lighting of the unity candle. At the front of each side were eight-foot silk floral topiaries. Pew bows contained English ivy, baby's breath, assorted greenery and white, gold-trimmed ribbon.

The bride's older sister, Mrs. Melinda Earl, served as matron of honor and the groom's brother, John Cole of Abilene, was best man.

Bridesmaids included Mrs. Kristen Wilson of Tyler, Denise Box of Weatherford, Amy Hester of Eureka Springs, Ark. and Mrs. Kristina Kerr Burch of Lubbock. Junior bridesmaid was the bride's younger sister, Jessica Wuerflein.

Serving as groomsmen were Abilene residents, Andrew Cole, Kevin Canon, Kyle Canon, Stanley Smith and Arthur Rosiles.

To express her deep affection for the special women in her life, the bride chose to honor several of her relatives. Her grandmother, Mrs. Jess Moore, served as flower girl and her great-aunts were selected to serve as flower ladies. They included Mrs. Edith Smith and Mrs. Gertrude Green, both of Amarillo, Mrs. Jack Guynes of Borger and Mrs. Dan Thornberry of Claude. Each woman, completely attired in white, wore a Battenburg lace apron which she "gathered" at the hem and held with one hand making a "basket" to hold the flowers she tossed with the other hand as she walked down the aisle.

Tyson Earl, son of John and Melinda Earl, was ring bearer.

Musical accompaniment was provided by Jan Walser, organist, and James Maclasky, trumpeter. Denise Box sang "The Lord's Prayer" acapella as the couple took communion. Melinda Earl sang "The Wedding Song" as she played the guitar. Mrs. Earl also performed the musical number at her grandparent's golden wedding anniversary celebration when they renewed their wedding vows. Flautists, Mrs. Joe D. Rogers and Mrs. Bryan Cooper, performed a duet.

Mrs. Nancy Schilling of Follett, the bride's aunt, read Shakespeare's "Sonnet 116" and Mrs. Dan Thornberry, the bride's great-aunt, read from "The Prophet", a selection "On Marriage."

Presented in marriage by her parents, the bride was attired in an elegant designer's gown of pearl white regal European silk taffeta. It featured a V-shaped neckline that pointed dramatically to the waist. The bodice was encrusted with pearls and jewels and crowned with clusters of jeweled flowers and molded medallions, as were the stately bishop sleeves and princess waistline. The skirt of full and flowing silk taffeta plunged to a low V-shaped back and swept into a full-length Queen's Court cathedral train.

The bridal veil of tulle was attached to a delicate headress.

The bride carried an all-white cascading cross hand bouquet of stephanotis, gardenias, roses, calla lilies and baby's breath.

The bride also wore large drop pearl earrings to complement the old-world style dress and a matching pearl bracelet given to her by the bridegroom.

The bride's attendants all wore dresses of pearl white European iridescent silk taffeta designer dresses. Each was fashioned with a detachable overskirt of reversible candlelight with a high-low hem and fabric rose. They carried tied clutch bouquets of all-white lilies, roses, orchids, Monte Casinos and baby's breath.

Immediately following the recessional, wedding guests were entertained as they watched six peasant ladies serving marinated vegetable appetizers and apple cider in the rose garden courtyard of the church while medieval music and flutes played background music and a jester juggled.

Leaving for the reception at the Hereford Country Club, the bridal couple descended the front steps of the church, which were covered in red carpet, and ascended into a horse-drawn carriage.

Mrs. Michelle Hailey invited guests to register.

Trish Rittenhouse of Abilene served the bride's separate pound cakes of honey buttermilk, orange and sour cream.

Sara Wetzel of Abilene poured honey apple blossom cider, sparkling raspberry citrus punch and golden pecan gourmet coffee. Courtney Hailey of Abilene assisted.

Placed at separate stations in the Hereford Country Club's dining room were lavish displays of whole and sliced fruits, various cheese rounds, a wide assortment of loaves of breads from a bakery in Dallas, a whole 55-inch Wahoo fish flown from Hawaii, grilled vegetables, baked duck and pheasant and a variety of sauces.

Topiary centerpieces with fresh gardenias were placed on individual tables. Garlands of ivy encircled wood railings and foliage arrangements, and vast floral arrangements bedecked the rooms.

In the lounge area, a six-paneled provincial screen provided the background for the bride's table. A medieval walldrop of two four-foot gold sconces with draped white satin cascades hung from the fireplace wall. An elegant bride's table consisted of five separate cakes of different flavors, each one placed on white marble slabs in a graduating height separated by a profusion of ivy and roses. Nearby stood a five-foot elaborate verdigris birdcage holding two white doves.

The groom's table was created in contrasting earth tones and was enhanced with greenery and grapevines. Guests were served a caramel turtle fudge cake.

Leaving for a honeymoon to New Orleans, the bride wore a designer's bright white shantung silk suit styled with an ankle-length, straight skirt with a deep split, and a low portrait neckline jacket laced with silk chiffon and fabric rose finish.

The couple will make their home in Abilene.

The bride is a 1988 graduate of Hereford High School and attended Hardin-Simmons University and Texas Tech University. She plans to return to Hardin-Simmons in the fall to complete her senior year. Her summer vacations have been spent working in Yellowstone National Park, working at the Passion Play in Eureka Springs and at Camp Good News in Cape Cod, Mass.

The groom, a 1987 graduate of Cooper High School in Abilene, attended Baylor University and Abilene Christian University. He graduated from Hardin-Simmons this year and will begin teaching at Cooper High School in the fall.

Out of town wedding guests represented Kremlin, Okla., Boise City, Okla., Kansas City, Kan., Colorado Springs, Colo., Dallas, Lubbock, Amarillo, Wellington, Wheeler, Earth, Muleshoe, Borger, Follett, Claude, Canyon, Plainview, Abilene, Houston and Carrollton.

Not So Funny
NEW YORK (AP) - When is a bone not a bone?

When it is a funny bone - that sensitive place at the bend of the elbow. In this area the ulnar nerve passes close to the surface between skin and bone.

Because the nerve is relatively unprotected, any sharp impact stimulates it and causes a sudden, painful, tingling sensation in the arm and fingers.

The funny bone got its name, according to some sources, from its location near the humerus, which connects shoulder and elbow.

Free trees to be given away

Ten free Colorado blue spruce trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during August 1992.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit Foundation's Trees for America campaign.

"Colorado blue spruces were selected for this campaign because of their many uses in the home landscape," John Rosenow, the Foundation's executive director, said. "They lend beauty to their surroundings with their silver blue-green color and compact conical shape. They can be used as individual ornamental, an energy-saving windbreak, a privacy screen, or as living Christmas trees."

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between Oct. 1 and Nov. 30 with enclosed planting instructions. The six to twelve inch trees are guaranteed to grow, or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's news magazine.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, send a $10 membership contribution to TEN BLUE SPRUCES, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410, by Aug. 31.

What's In An Eraser?
NEW YORK (AP) - Pencil erasers are made from synthetic rubber and pumice, a volcanic glass, plus a soybean-based filler.

It's not the rubber that erases errors, as is commonly thought, but pumice that actually scratches out mistakes.

Travelers can make money

By driving on your next trip, you can not only save money, you can make some as well. Here are some suggestions from the consumer travel experts on how to do both.

*Call ahead. You'd be surprised at what low rates you can get from hotels. Especially if you're traveling to a major city on a weekend.

*On short trips, driving may be less expensive than flying. Check the rates. Many rental car companies have some real bargains.

*One company, General Rent-A-Car, has a new frequent traveler program that awards a $50 U.S. Savings Bond to customers who rent a compact car from the company just four times. If you travel often, you can earn that company's top award: a $1,000 U.S. Savings Bond for 50 qualified rentals. Customers can even apply for the awards in someone else's name to give as a gift or put aside for a child's education.

Between the Covers

BY JOE WEAVER

Oops! We goofed! Last week we announced the acquisition of several videos that were not yet ready for release. We apologize to all you who came in asking for those videos. They are ready now.

School started this past week with a bang for some, a whimper for others. The library is more or less prepared for the usual onslaught of students doing research papers and last minute reports. This year we're going to be offering something a little different—living history presentations in the classroom. Actually, we started this last year in a couple of schools, but we want to hit it big in 1992-93. These presentations consist of a dramatic monologue delivered by a person dressed in the costume of the period. Right now we're working on one up of Vincent Finch (Vicente Pinzon), captain of the Nina and friend of Columbus.

This is a good time to mention that the Deaf Smith County Museum is also preparing some presentations most notably an Indian trunk stocked with authentic reproductions of Plains Indian artifacts such as a cradleboard, drum, maiden's dress and utensils made of stone, pottery, bone, etc. Final details are being worked out now as the library and the museum plan other projects together.

Mark Rodriguez is displaying his Star Wars collection this month. He has been collecting since 1984 and has quite an impressive assortment. Mark is the 12-year-old son of Fred and Emma Rodriguez and is in the sixth grade at West Central. His favorite book is "anything to do with Star Wars", naturally.

This late in the summer (and the fiscal year) it gets a little tough to obtain new books, so the pickings, depending on your perspective, may seem a little slim. From the new fiction list this week we have selected A Piece of the Action by Stephen Solomita, author of A Twist of the Knife. Set in the wide-open New York of 1958, beat cop Stanley Moodrow is about to win life's lottery. Not only is he getting a gold detective's shield, but he's engaged to the daughter of a big wheel on the force. Things turn sour as the good guys trade places with the bad, and the law is handcuffed by a myriad of corruptions. Moodrow risks his professional (and physical) future as he struggles to decide between success and justice.

Our only best-seller this week comes from the non-fiction list. Gail Sheehy, author of Passages, returns with what her publishers call "a myth-shattering investigation of menopause." The Silent Passage has been on the New York Times best-seller list for several weeks, and there is already a waiting list at Deaf Smith County Library. Looks like Sheehy has another winner.

I've mentioned it before, and this won't be the last time you hear it, but Oct. 12 is the 500th anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. To help those interested in learning more, we have isolated our books dealing with Columbus, early exploration and related subjects.

School is back in session...remember to look out for the little guys because you can be that they're not looking out for you!

League takes health care fight to Congress

Stringent cost control measures in the health care industry, universal access to health care, and a standard definition of basic care for all U.S. residents: these goals of health care policy could become a reality, thanks to the League of Women Voters of the United States and its members from around the country, now lobbying Congress and state legislators in support of fundamental reform of the nation's health care system.

The League's health care reform position was reached after six months of study and discussion by 821 Leagues in all 50 states. Thirty thousand League members participated. Highlights include:

-99 percent of participating Leagues said a basic level of care should be available for all U.S. residents.

-96 percent said efficient and economical delivery of care should be a high priority for the U.S.

-94 percent said providing health care at an affordable cost should be a high priority.

More than two-thirds called for independent review of treatments to reduce costs and unnecessary care.

Three-fifths said managed care should be used to control health care costs and reduce unnecessary care.

-94 percent supported regional planning for allocating personnel, facilities and equipment to control health care costs.

-96 percent believed excessive administrative costs must be curtailed.

In calling for universal access, the League emphasized that all American residents should have access to a basic level of care, primary care (including prenatal and reproductive services), long-term care, mental health care, disease prevention and health promotion and education.

"For millions of Americans, health care is too expensive or unavailable," said Becky Cain, president of the League. "We can no longer manage with our makeshift system. It fails too many Americans. It is time for Congress to vote for fundamental reform."

Health care reform is an important part of the League's Take Back the System campaign to revitalize the political process through issue oriented debate and comprehensive reform.

Notice of Public Hearing on Tax Increase

The DEAF SMITH C.E.D. will hold a public hearing on a proposal to increase total tax revenues from properties on the tax roll in 1991 by 15.22 percent. Your individual taxes may increase at a greater or lesser rate, or even decrease, depending on the change in the taxable value of your property in relation to the change in taxable value of all other property.

The public hearing will be held on AUGUST, 31 5:PM at HISD BOARD ROOM, 136 Ave. F.

FOR the proposal: TED EICKE, JOHN FUSTON, JIM BOB PERRIN, DENNIS NEWTON
AGAINST the proposal:
PRESENT and not voting:
ABSENT: -0-

The statement above shows the percentage increase the proposed rate represents over the EFFECTIVE tax rate that the unit published on 8/11/92. The following table compares taxes on an average home in this taxing unit last year to taxes proposed on the average home this year. Again, your individual taxes may be higher or lower, depending on the taxable value of your property.

	Last Year	This Year
Average home value	$ 50,000	$ 50,000
General exemptions available (amount available on the average home, not including senior citizen's or disabled person's exemptions)	$ 15,000	$ 15,000
Average taxable value	$ 35,000	$ 35,000
Tax rate	.8090 /$100	.9390 /$100 (proposed)
Tax	$ 283.15	$ 328.65

Under this proposal taxes on the average home would INCREASE by $ 45.50 or 16.1 percent compared with last year's taxes. Comparing tax rates without adjusting for changes in property value, the tax rate would INCREASE by 13 cents per $100 of taxable value or 16.1 percent compared to last year's tax rate. These tax rate figures are not adjusted for changes in the taxable value of property.

Good vision important

Of the 35,000 Americans who suffer sports-related eye injuries each year, more than 90 percent could have prevented injury by practicing proper eye safety and protecting their eyes, the Better Vision Institute (BVI) says.

"Good vision is as important to sports performance as good physical conditioning and consistent mental concentration," says Paula Newsome, O.D., a Charlotte, N.C.-based optometrist and member of the BVI Advisory Council.

For racquet sports, eye safety guards or industrial quality safety glasses are helpful. Helmets with eye shields are recommended for football and other contact sports. For high speed or contact sports such as skiing or hockey, polycarbonate (shatter-resistant) lenses and special frames are sturdy enough to protect the eyes from collision. Sunglasses and protective goggles can protect the eyes from glare, UV rays and exposure to weather elements.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - The author of a Michael Jackson biography is suing Berry Gordy for $200 million, claiming the Motown founder slandered him.

The lawsuit was filed Wednesday in Superior Court by J. Randy Taraborrelli, author of "Michael Jackson: The Magic and the Madness."

Last year, Gordy sued Taraborrelli, contending the book falsely portrays Gordy as a former pimp who cheated Motown artists out of profits.

Taraborrelli's lawsuit contends that Gordy slandered him by saying the writer made up parts of the book.

"I've only reported what I was told, and what I believed to be true," said Taraborrelli, who has written about Motown artists for 20 years.

Gordy said that Taraborrelli showed he was "running scared" by filing the counter lawsuit.

"He has already deleted from the paperback version of his Michael Jackson book every one of the lies he published about me," Gordy said in a statement.

Taraborrelli acknowledged he had deleted parts of the book but declined to say what had been deleted.

The Peculiar Banyan

CALCUTTA, India (AP) - Banyan trees, which flourish in India, grow in a peculiar way. Branches of the tree send roots down to the ground and these roots enlarge into trunks, which develop new branches. Often, a single banyan can resemble a small forest. One banyan tree in India grew 350 large trunks and over 3,000 small ones. The tree gets its name from the Hindu word "Banian," which means trader.

 Dear Heloise: Put throw rugs in front of all outside doors.

They collect dust and debris and help keep the house much cleaner much longer. A true labor saver!

The one in front of our back (kitchen/utility) door is door-width and 4 feet long. It runs in front of our washer and dryer and catches lint from the clean clothes as I remove them from the dryer.

Also, it catches all the dirt we drag in from the backyard on our feet, and it is easy to shake clean. — Jane Whaley, Richardson, Texas

PLASTIC BAGS

Dear Heloise: Here is a hint that has truly helped me and saved valuable time when cooking favorite recipes for my family.

I fill a plastic self-gripping plastic bag with these recipes and tape it to the inside of the kitchen cabinet.

This way whenever I need the recipes, I can readily find them. It works for me. — Tommie Bryant, Morrilton, Ark.

They're in sight and easy to find. I like the way you think. — Heloise

THE LETTER PERFECT QUIZ

I would have written a shorter letter if I had had more time. - Mark Twain

A few weeks ago, I presented a seminar on written business communications. As part of that workshop, I had each person take a short quiz on letter writing.

Although most did very well, there were several surprises. A few of the questions sparked strong discussion. I thought you might enjoy taking a shortened version to see how your writing rates. Fold the column so you can't see the answer section. Then Circle the T if you feel the statement is true, F if you think it is false.

- T F 1) Trying to create an outline first will waste valuable writing time.
- T F 2) Cover the main point of your letter in the first paragraph.
- T F 3) Words with more than three syllables may be used at

- a rate of one long word per 25 other words.
- T F 4) It is best to edit just as soon as you finish writing the letter.
- T F 5) Wide margins and lots of white space is as desirable in letters as in print advertisements.
- T F 6) Paragraphs should average 12-15 lines.
- T F 7) Most readers will spend 2-3 minutes with your letter.
- T F 8) Never answer letters immediately. It may cause the writer to believe you don't have enough work to do.
- T F 9) Read your work out loud. The ear is better at detecting errors than the eye.
- T F 10) Sentences longer than 25 words may confuse some readers.

The Answers Are

- 1) FALSE. Creating an outline usually saves time. Outlining helps you remember key points to cover in the letter. An organized letter is easier to read and is less likely to be misunderstood.
- 2) TRUE. Get right to the point. Many readers may not read past the first or second paragraph. If your reason for writing is buried in the third or fourth paragraph, it may go unnoticed.
- 3) FALSE. Big words are often used to impress rather than express. Short nouns and action verbs are preferred. Try to keep long words from occurring more frequently than one-in fifty.
- 4) FALSE. If you just finished composing a letter you may make the same mistakes in editing as you did in writing. Allow some time to pass to get a fresh perspective. I always wait

- at least 24 hours to edit my columns.
- 5) TRUE. Your goal for every letter is to make it easy to read and understand. Wide margins contribute white space. Short sentences and paragraphs make your letter less complex.
- 6) FALSE. Short paragraphs of 6-10 lines are preferable. Pertinent information is easier to find in short paragraphs.
- 7) FALSE. According to experts, most people spend about 30 seconds scanning a letter. If you don't keep it short and simple, they miss your point altogether.
- 8) FALSE. If it is important enough to answer, do it now. Allowing time to pass before answering a letter is just as stupid as keeping an appointment waiting to show how busy you are.
- 9) TRUE. Better yet have someone else read it to you. Be especially watchful for small words like: are, the, of, to and in., they often left out.
- 10) TRUE. Express yourself in concise, clear sentences to avoid confusion. Use short words, short sentences and short paragraphs. The longest sentence in this column is 23 words.

Score 10 points for each correct answer. If you scored 70 or below, you should write for a free copy of our writing tips. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Write Stuff, c/o Minding Your Business, P.O. Box 67, Amarillo, Texas 79105.

Home reference materials can help improve literacy

Home reference materials, such as encyclopedias, dictionaries and resource libraries, can help children and young adults become culturally literate in today's information-based society.

Learning starts at home

"A child who has an encyclopedia, a dictionary and plenty of reading materials around the home seems to do better in school than one who doesn't have these resources," says nationally known reading expert, author and consultant Dr. Alvin Granowsky, World Book-Childcraft vice president of school and library services. "Reading only in school and not being able to look up interesting facts about what you've read is like studying music in school but never practicing at home in the evening. You don't learn."

Setting an Example

A 1987 report, "The Nation's Report Card," released by the federally funded National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) says that "the most successful programs may be those that include the home and community involving adults in self-improvement as well as enlisting their support in the development of literacy in their children."

Informed Buying

To help people select the appropriate books for their home libraries, World Book, Incorporated, one of the world's leading publishers of educational reference materials, has put together these guidelines for selecting an encyclopedia and related reference books:

First, what are your family's needs? Do you have children who need help with homework and preparing reports?

Or do you and your family just want to satisfy your curiosity on diverse subjects? Or both? Your encyclopedia should satisfy the needs of every family member and spark their interest to learn more.

Is the encyclopedia appropriate to the ages of the users? Is the encyclopedia written on a level that the user will understand now and that will still be useful in five to 10 years? If not chances are your children won't use the books now, and your family will outgrow them.

Consider a school-readiness program for young children: a children's resource library, as youngsters approach and enter school; and a comprehensive, easy-to-use encyclopedia that will help parents answer children's many questions (and their own) and fulfill children's reference needs as they continue through school.

Is the encyclopedia easy to read?

If the user can't understand the material, the books will quickly gather dust. For instance, research shows that young students are more likely to look up "dog," while older users are more likely to look up "compact disc." The articles should be written in clear, concise language that recognizes the users' different reading levels.

The best encyclopedias also feature colorful "teaching visuals"—photographs, maps, charts, diagrams, illustrations that provide additional information and interestingly reinforce key points.

Is the encyclopedia accurate and up-to-date? Only a few years ago, pit bulls, Lyme disease, and compact discs were unfamiliar to many people. Science, technology, international politics and entertainment often change overnight.

A first-rate encyclopedia keeps pace with the emerging world, both by continuously updating the information and by publishing yearbooks that chronicle the year's significant developments and events.

Is the encyclopedia easy to use?

An ideal encyclopedia should feature extensive cross-references at the end of articles to direct the user to related articles. The index also should be clear and comprehensive. Superior sets offer study questions and subject outlines to help students learn the most from each article.

Is the encyclopedia comprehensive and authoritative? Check the authorship of major articles; the best encyclopedias hire thousands of recognized experts to research and write entries. Top encyclopedias also check typical school courses of study to be sure the subjects students are learning are covered.

How do the critics rate the encyclopedia? Consult the experts. In his book, Best Encyclopedias: A Guide to general and Specialized Encyclopedias, Kenneth F. Kister, the country's leading encyclopedia reviewer, rates the top choices. Or ask your child's teacher or school librarian for a recommendation—they've seen most of the best books and can give you educated advice.

Browse and compare. Never buy an encyclopedia you haven't seen yourself. Visit your local library or school and browse through major articles in different sets. Check content, graphics and ease-of-use. Take along your child and see which set he or she finds easiest to use and likes the most.

Vaccinate emus, horses ostriches against virus

The Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC) is recommending that owners of horses in South Texas and along the coast have their animals vaccinated against the mosquito-borne virus, encephalitis, also known as "sleeping sickness." Dr. Terry Beals, executive director of the state regulatory agency for livestock health, said the animals should receive vaccine for both Western Equine Encephalitis (WEE) and Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE).

"Six horses died near Harlingen and San Benito in early July, and the National Veterinary Services Laboratory (NVSL) in Ames, Iowa, determined at least two of them had EEE," he said.

Last year, 411 cases of EEE occurred in the United States, with 151 of them in Florida and none in Texas. In 1991, 11 cases of the western version of the virus, WEE, were detected nationally. One was in Texas.

"Texas' wet weather this year has resulted in a larger mosquito population, so seeing a few cases of 'sleeping sickness' may not be that surprising," Beals said. "However, since a vaccine is available, I would encourage horse owners to contact their veterinarians and have their animals protected."

"We also recommend that owners of ostriches and emus consult their veterinarian for recommendations on the vaccine made to protect these animals. Florida, Georgia and Louisiana have had instances of sleeping sickness in these animals, too," he said.

Typical symptoms of the viral infection in horses include fever, drowsiness and central nervous system disorders, such as a lack of coordination, wandering, and an inability to rise when down. "About 90 percent of EEE-infected horses die, while WEE kills about 20 to 50 percent of its victims," Beals said. "That's why prevention is so important."

Beals said that EEE can pose a potential human health threat, but the Texas Department of Health has no reports of the disease in the state since 1973, when a three-year-old child died from infection. The previous Texas incident was in 1943, according to the TDH's Bureau of Disease Control and Epidemiology. An experimental EEE human vaccine is limited to laboratory workers.

"Controlling mosquitoes and preventing insect bites can be effective measures to protect humans and horses," said Beals.

BY BEVERLY HARDER

Some days you wish you could package your child's energy and sell it, or you wish you could borrow some of it. They seem to have more energy than their parents much of the time. However, their energy is limited. Resourceful youth recognize their energy has sources. They realize that they feel better and get the most done when they manage their personal energy.

Explore resourceful energy use with your child. Our energy depends on how much we sleep and rest, what we eat and how much physical activity we have. Healthy eating and exercise habits can also help maximize a child's athletic and academic performance. Also, healthy eating should be fun.

Help your child get the best start with healthy foods for breakfast, children may feel fatigued, sleepy and unmotivated. Promote healthy snacking by stocking the kitchen with healthy choices. For children, snacking may account for 30 percent or more of daily calories and 20 percent or more of nutrients.

Routine physical activity is helpful for several reasons. It burns more calories and allows children to eat more healthy foods during the day. Also, inactivity is one of the biggest contributors to weight gain, obesity and sluggishness.

Even if eating on the run is part of the family lifestyle, children can be taught to make healthier choices from vending machines and fast-food establishments. High-fat foods take longer and more energy to digest so a diet heavy in fat may drain energy.

Help youth see how personal decisions about eating, sleeping and physical activity affect their "go power." Make energy banks from seven glass jars. Mark one for each of the following: Sleep, exercise, bread and cereals, fruits, vegetables, milk and cheese and meats. Use dried beans and drop one in for each hour of sleep they get each night, one of each serving of breads and cereals, milk and cheese, fruits and vegetables and meats they eat a day, and one for each hour of physical activity or exercise they get during the day. At the end of the day, have them write on a piece of paper how many beans are in each jar. Have them rate how energetic they felt during the day, with "1" meaning little energy, "5" meaning average level of energy and "10" meaning super energetic.

At the end of the week compare their ratings for each day with the number of beans in each jar. What seemed to make the biggest difference in how energetic they felt? What was different about the days they felt best and the days they felt they had less energy? If interest in tracking their energy level continues, let them give a monthly report. When they look back over the month, particularly if they changed any of their "energy habits" during the month, what did they find made the biggest difference in how much energy they had to do things that were important to them?

Let them make a big stop sign to put on the door to their room. On the stop sign, have them write each day what they did to stop "energy drainers." Let them share with you about the choices they had to make to build their energy.

Children's energy can be a real drain on some parents, but when youth know how to manage their personal energy, it can be resourceful to the whole family.

Education programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages regardless of socioeconomic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap or national origin.

Scholarship recipient talks to Toastmasters Thursday

Shawn Lance, 1992 recipient of the Larry Leon Scholarship, was the guest speaker at the Hereford Toastmasters meeting Thursday morning at the Ranch House Restaurant.

Lance reported on his experience at Speech Camp and offered his oral interpretation of "Scooter Thomas Makes It To The Top Of The World."

Margaret Del Toro led the pledge to the flag and Jay Reeve gave the invocation.

Suzanne Finch presided over the meeting. Serving as toastmaster was Dave Kimmel; Rick Jackson, timer; Gayla Sanders, "ah" counter; and Bob Lohr, grammarian. Chris Leonard, wordmaster, presented the word

"parity."

Wayne Winget spoke on "It's A War" and Joe Don Cummings, "Where's the Fruit?" Jay Reeve, Clark Andrews and Sharon Cramer were evaluators.

Margaret Del Toro gave the reading and the joke was told by Liane Poell. Joe Weaver was general evaluator.

Special guests included Ronnie and Connie Lance, Adolfo Del Toro, and Twila and Oleta Jackson.

The public is invited to attend the Hereford Toastmasters meetings held at 6:30 a.m. each Thursday at the Ranch House and at noon each Tuesday at the Hereford Community Center.

BOZEMAN, Mont. (AP) — Robert Redford's film about life along a river in Montana will make its national premiere at a benefit here.

Redford is expected to attend the Sept. 19 screening of "A River Runs Through It," organizers said.

Proceeds are to help restore the polluted Blackfoot River, which is the setting for the movie.

The film, based on Norman Maclean's autobiography, tells the story of two brothers, their minister father and the river that shapes their lives.

The river was once legendary among fly fishermen for its cutthroat trout, but has been polluted by mining.

Use safety sense

It always seems to happen when you least expect it - you turn the ignition but the car won't start. But before you call the tow truck, you may be able to start your car thanks to Shell's Free "Emergency Repair Book."

The "Emergency Repair Book" says you should try several things if you turn the key and nothing happens:

—Check to see if the battery is dead or disconnected by turning on the lights. If they don't come on, you'll probably need a jump-start. If the lights work but are dim, make sure that the gear shift is firmly in "Park" or "Neutral." The problem could be a loose "Neutral" safety switch.

—If the lights are dim, you could have a loose cable connection or corroded battery terminals. A loose cable needs to be tightened if it gives at all. To clean corroded connections, start with the negative (grounded) terminal. Using an adjustable or open-end wrench, loosen the clamp and pry the clamp apart with an insulated screwdriver. Then lift the cable off.

Always remember to keep the negative post disconnected until you've finished. Scrape the surfaces with a knife, emery board or nail file and tighten the clamps so that you are unable to turn them. The negative post should be connected last.

—If the engine turns over but won't start, you may have flooded it with too much gas. To unflood an engine, floor the gas pedal for 10 seconds while turning the ignition. Keep the pedal pushed to the floor; don't pump it.

—If the engine isn't flooded check the spark plugs for loose or broken wires. make sure that the wires that go from the distributor to the spark plugs are securely in place at each end.

—If your car still won't start, one last thing to check is the choke plate. If your car has a carburetor, take the top off the air filter and inspect the choke plate located in the center of the air filter. If the plate is stuck open or shut, jiggle it until it moves freely.

Now, if after checking the fuel, spark, air and battery systems, your car still won't start, it's time to call for help. But try these steps first, and you may be able to save yourself money and heartache.

The Shell "Emergency Repair Book" also includes information on how to change a tire and what to do if your car's engine is overheating. For a free copy of this or any Shell Answer Book, ask at any Shell station, call 1-800-331-3703 or write to Shell Oil Company, Dept. M.P.O. Box 4681, Houston, Tx. 77210.

The friend you didn't know you had could be at Rix. Come by or call and someone will come to your home and talk with you.

YOUR COMPUTER AND YOUR EYES

Looking at anything all day could produce eyestrain. And when you spend the day peering at a small screen, concentrating on little letters and numbers, there can be considerable discomfort. But setting up the work environment properly will make a difference.

Ideally, the room should be lit by indirect lighting, so that the computer screen is three or four times brighter than the light around it. Adjust contrast and brightness of the screen for comfort. Be sure that bright light sources are not in your field of vision and that other lights are not reflected on the screen. An anti-glare screen on the monitor may help.

Adjust the chair and desk so that the VDT screen is 14 or 20 inches from your eyes, its top slightly below eye level. To avoid neck strain, set up work material on a copy stand.

See your optometrist. Many computer operators are helped by wearing middle-distance-correction lenses, sometimes tinted ones.

DEAR READERS: I am on vacation, but I have left behind some of my favorite columns that you may have missed the first time around. I hope you enjoy them.--Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My problem may sound like the Yale boys are at it again, but every word of this letter is absolutely true.

Is it possible for a bird to get sexually excited when he sees a human being of the opposite sex undressing?

I have a very close friend with whom I spend the night occasionally. Whenever I get ready for bed, she moves the parakeet's cage from the guest room (where I sleep) into the closet. I always thought this was rather peculiar, but I never said anything. Last week, I decided to mention it to her.

She became irate and insisted that birds become sexually excited at the sight of undressed humans of the opposite sex. Is this true or not?--Never Saw A Bird Blush

DEAR NEVER: Your hostess' concept of what turns on our feathered friends is strictly for the birds. (The cuckoos, that is). She is projecting her own prudishness onto the parakeet. He hasn't the faintest idea why he is being stashed in the closet. Go along with the nonsense, dear. It costs you nothing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a special message for that 16-year-old boy who has a "21-year-old problem"--his brother.

My brother drowned three weeks ago. One minute, he was alive and full of fun. The next minute, he was gone--forever.

I never felt especially close to my brother. We had some pretty good fights and didn't agree on lots of things. But now I realize how much a part of my life he was. Sure, he got on my nerves and I'd tell him to bug off. But now I remember all the favors he did for me that only a brother could do.

This letter isn't meant to depress anyone. I guess I'm just trying to wake people up. I want to tell them to think about what their brothers and sister mean in their lives and to ask them to express their appreciation. I hope they will do it today, because tomorrow may be too late.--Miss Him a Lot

DEAR FRIEND: I'm sure your letter touched millions of brothers and sisters and made them think. Thanks for expressing those beautiful sentiments.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a newspaperwoman myself and had to let you know I agree that there is no accounting for the way some children turn out.

If ever a kid had a loused-up childhood, my husband did. He never knew his father and was rejected by his mother. She dumped him on her own parents so she could run around like a single girl. He was never allowed to call her "mother," because it might blow her swinger image. She came to our wedding but asked us not to reveal her identity. After all, how could she be 48 when her son was 36?

In spite of it all, my husband is the best-adjusted person I know. He likes everybody, and everybody likes him. He's great with kids, sympathetic toward older people and warm and loving to me.

According to all the psychology books, this man should be a mess. Instead he's a beautiful guy.--I'm with you.

DEAR WITH ME: Thanks for an upbeat letter. I strongly suspect your husband's grandparents deserve the credit for bringing him through unscarred. Bless them.

DEAR READERS: I am on vacation, but I have left behind some of my favorite columns that you may have missed the first time around. I hope you enjoy them.--Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am incensed about a certain situation and would like to know what you think. My husband and I have been arguing about it for several days. He said if you agree with me he will shut up.

Last September, we attended the wedding of a fellow my husband used to work with. I say "used to" because the groom dropped dead of a heart attack during the wedding ceremony.

The minister pronounced the couple man and wife as he lay on the chapel floor.

The bride claimed she was legally entitled to her husband's estate. His parents said she was not. They took the matter to court. The judge declared the couple was legally married when the man died and therefore she is entitled to the widow's share of the estate.

There has been a lot of talk about this in our town, and I would like to have Ann Landers' opinion of the judge's verdict.--Want to See Justice Done

DEAR WANT TO SEE: Ann Landers does not second-guess judges. The decision was, I am sure, based on the evidence presented, and if the judge ruled the couple husband and wife at the time of his death, she is the legal widow and entitled to all the benefits thereto attending. Case closed.

PORCHES AND MORE PORCHES LOCATED FULL WIDTH Two Covered Porches And One Sun Porch

© BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

The colossal family area of this plan leaves nothing to be desired. Family living is together in the unique arrangement. The kitchen, basement stair, free standing wood stove fireplace and even the spacious alcove are superb. The ceiling is vaulted and is shown with an ornate laminated wood beam in the central section of the great room. A sun porch extends the great room and this porch is endowed with six double hung windows and three sky lights.

The master bedroom is equally as impressive, being enhanced by a private master bath, large walk in closet, sitting area, private fireplace and immediate approach to one of the covered front porches. The opposite end of the plan encompasses two bedrooms, a craft room and a full bath. This end of the plan also has an approach to another covered front porch. The double garage is located below this bed room wing.

The exterior is constructed of vertical wood siding and shown with many multiple lite windows and a hip roof design. Wood railed stairs lead to each open front porch. The plan is Number 2829. It includes 2,807 square feet of heated area. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are drawn to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P. O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Questions and Answers

Q: My 20-year-old window-unit home air conditioner pooped out last fall, and I was told that it would not be economical to repair it. I was also told that the newer models require less power and so the reduced operating expenses would offset some of the high cost of replacement. What's the best way of picking the best replacement?

A: If you are shopping for a new air conditioner, jot down these facts: the size of the room to be air conditioned, how many windows it has, if it's insulated and the available voltage (120 or 220 volts). Also, measure the exact size of the available window opening to be sure the new machine will fit in the window.

An air conditioner's BTU-hour rating tells you the amount of heat it can remove per hour. The larger the BTU rating, the more power it has. Remember, bigger isn't always better. Too much capacity for the room will make it feel clammy, and too little can't cool adequately.

An air conditioner also has an EER (Energy Efficient Ratio). This rates the amount of cooling it does in relation to the electricity it uses. The higher the EER, the greater the efficiency.

The biggest continent is Asia at almost 17,000,000 square miles.

Trashy '2000 Malibu Road' better off address unknown

More promising series slated for fall debuts

By Suzanne Gill

CBS' six-part, end-of-summer series 2000 Malibu Road is the tale of a career woman (Lisa Hartman) who's mortgaged to the hilt and "can't sell her house because of the bad real estate market," according to executive producer Joel Schumacher (Flatliners). It's a show about "real life," says Hartman. As long as your idea of real life is an exclusive piece of beachfront property and a career in prostitution.

"So she takes in roommates because she's going to stop hooking," Schumacher explains. There's an aspiring actress (17-year-old Drew Barrymore), her "Svengali-like" sister (Tuesday Knight) and a lawyer (Jennifer Beals) whose fiancé has just died. Each woman has secrets in her past, which will come to light as this prime-time soap works up a lather in the weeks ahead.

From all appearances, CBS has gone slumming with 2000 Malibu Road, which debuts as a two-hour movie on Sunday, Aug. 23. The remaining hours will air in a Wednesday-night slot beginning Aug. 26.

After four weeks of production, Schumacher and co-executive producer Terry Louise Fisher presented three scenes to the press. The scenes emphasized cleavage, the sisters' intense bond (which included an unusually sensual foot rub), and a business transaction in which Hartman's character raises her price from $3,000 to $4,000 when her client brings along a second woman.

Is all this integral to the plot? That's impossible to say, since advance episodes have been withheld by CBS. During their press conference, Schumacher, Fisher and the lead actresses expressed dismay at the aggressive reception the clips received. While the reporters used words like "exploitive" and "sleaze," Fisher defended the show as "romantic."

Casper Van Dien plays surfer Zack Taylor in Freshman Dorm, a new series airing Wednesdays on CBS.

When one reporter observed that most people "don't charge $4,000" for sexual favors, Hartman snapped, "That's your problem."

Notably absent from the slugfest were production partner Aaron Spelling, who was on hand during similar press events for Fox's Melrose Place and NBC's The Round Table, and CBS entertainment chief Jeff Sagansky, who ordered the show.

In view of the results, why doesn't the network simply air Malibu Road as part of its steamy late-night lineup? Probably because it fears damaging its relationship with hit makers Spelling and Fisher, who was hailed for her originality as co-creator of L.A. Law. Instead, Malibu Road is paired with another summer drama, Freshman Dorm where boys meet girls at an oceanfront college.

With the mystique of college life strongest among teens, CBS clearly hopes to bring in young viewers, and to keep them for Malibu Road. Freshman Dorm executive producer Steve Tisch, whose family owns CBS, candidly says he expects the network "to use this show and milk it for all it's worth."

Lisa Hartman plays Jade O'Keefe, a call girl who'd like to retire but can't afford to lose the equity in her spacious beachfront home at 2000 Malibu Road. SOAP TALK

Producer promises brighter 'Days'

By Candace Havens
 Dear Candace: I am a big fan of Days of Our Lives, and so far it has been a terrific summer on the show. I am most happy about the fact that Jack and Melissa aren't on as much as they used to be. There have been times when I've had to turn off the TV because I was so disgusted with Jack and Jennifer. Thanks for the opportunity to speak my mind. —Days fan in Texas.
 Dear Reader: While I know several readers of this column and fans of Days will disagree with your comment, I tend to agree with you. Don't get me wrong: Matthew Ashford (Jack) and Melissa Reeves (Jennifer) are terrific actors. But their dialogue really is the pits.
 Unfortunately, the source of these misguided story lines is the producers and writers, and Days, along with several other daytime shows this year, has gone through a fair number of both.

When this happens, shows lose their continuity and many characters get pushed aside, because new writers want to make their mark on the show. Sometimes the characters are given dialogue and mannerisms that simply don't fit their established characters. General Hospital is the perfect example of how changing producers and writers can cause havoc on a show. When GH brought Gloria Monty on board, she literally cleaned house, dumping characters that she had no interest in developing. Story lines were either wrapped so quickly no one knew what was happening or they simply disappeared. The fans didn't like what was happening, the ratings fell and Monty soon exited.
 Enter Wendy Riche, GH's new executive producer. While she is trying to make her mark on the show by bringing together Holly and Bill, she has handled things differently, paying attention to character history and development. Unlike Monty, Riche has brought back the fun and intrigue that have made GH so popular.
 Executive Producer Ken Corday of Days is aware of the problems his show has suffered and has promised a return to the core of the show: the Hortons and the Bradys. I expect when Jennifer returns from maternity leave, the story line and characters of Jack and Jennifer will be much more mature.

BITS AND PIECES

Another barrier broken; 'MacGyver' may escape cancellation

Television history was made this past July 22 when young Rebeka Sessions and her mother competed on Nick-elodeon's top-rated game show, Family Double Dare. According to the Disability Rights Education and Defense Fund, Inc., Rebeka's appearance marked the first time a disabled person was a TV game-show contestant. It is ironic that Family Double Dare, which revolves around messy physical challenges, is the first TV game show to break the wheelchair barrier.

Rebeka Sessions

With a week to go before the prime-time Emmy Awards, some shows have already been honored for work well done. They're the winners of the annual Television Critics Association Awards, presented in just eight categories. Held during the critics' gathering each July in Los Angeles, the ceremony boasts short speeches and includes absolutely no musical acts.

This year's winners are, for Drama: I'll Fly Away; Comedy: Seinfeld; News: Frontline; Specials: Billy Crystal for the Academy Awards; Sports: When It Was a Game; Children: Peggy Charren, founder of Action for Children's Television; Program of the Year: Northern Exposure; and Career Achievement: Johnny Carson.

MacGyver saves his life with only a ballpoint pen! Richard Dean Anderson may be bringing his resourceful MacGyver character back from the grave of TV cancellation through a development deal he signed with Paramount Network Television. Anderson and MacGyver supervising producer Michael Greenburg have formed Gekko Film Corp. and cut a deal with Paramount for Anderson to develop, produce and star in a series and telefilms, any of which could be a new MacGyver vehicle.

FAMILY FARE

'For Better, Worse' makes mediocre trip

By Chris Carpenter

If comic-strip characters could venture beyond the page, where would they go? Well, Batman went Burton—black and bleak—and The Addams Family went ballistic. But what about Lynn Johnston's characters from For Better or For Worse? Where would they go?

They'd pack up the wagon and go camping, naturally, taking a trip only slightly askew of their traditional path down the middle of the road. The Disney Channel premieres their out-of-suburbia shenanigans in a special titled For Better or For Worse: The Last Camping Trip on Friday, Aug. 28.

School's out, and son David, who's having a "major hormone attack," is primed for a weekend with the "babes" at a nearby lake. But David's best-laid plans crater when Mom insists that he accompany the family on a camping trip to the seashore. He's "bummed," but perhaps it is for the best. Any "babe" at the lake within earshot of his pseudo-surfer lingo would surely make waves to avoid his "major hormone attack."

The Last Camping Trip plays like a home movie from comic-strip land. It has it all—burned burgers, moody kids and goofy parents. Everything, in retrospect, that makes for a pretty forgettable family outing. © TV Listing Inc.

TIME OUT

ABC, ESPN cover Little League series
by Michael Scogin

ESPN kicks off coverage of the 46th annual Little League World Series from Williamsport, Pa., on Thursday, Aug. 27, presenting both the foreign and U.S. championship games. On Saturday, Aug. 29, the respective winners meet on ABC's Wide World of Sports to determine this year's champion. ABC introduces the game with a half-hour pregame show for the first time in its 30 years covering the Series.

Julie Moran, an ABC announcer covering the final game with colleagues Jim Palmer and Brent Musburger, says the spirit of the competition is what makes the event special.

"It has none of the commercialization and corporate sponsorship of pro sports," says Moran. "It's sport being played for the enjoyment of sport and it's just pure. It's like going back to the basics of why people play sports and what you get out of them."

The Series is the biggest event of the year in Williamsport, the only city in which the championships have ever been played, according to Bob Rolley of the Williamsport Sun-Gazette.

"It brings millions of dollars to the city and more than doubles our population on the day of the final game," Rolley says. "People here plan year-round for the week-long event, and thousands of people volunteer each year to help out in any way they can." © TV Listing Inc.

The American Legacy Medal of Honor: World War II - Pearl Harbor & Pacific True tales of America's heroic individuals.

Wartime art collecting; kids gone wrong

By Dan Rice
During World War II, the Third Reich's "care and safekeeping" policy was initiated to protect important works of art in Germany and the countries it invaded. The actual effect, however, was to license the pillaging of art treasures by Nazi collectors, particularly Hermann Goering. Debuting Friday, Aug. 28, on A&E's Time Machine With Jack Perkins, Spoils of War documents the cultural rape of Europe that resulted from officially sanctioned looting by both Nazis and Allies, following trails of stolen art that lead to Russia and the United States.

'Water Engine' fueled by dreams

'Screenworks' makes impressive debut

By Steven Alan McGaw
Movies love dreamers. Perhaps because the industry was founded by men and women who staked their futures to a dicey enterprise, filmmakers seem drawn to stories of individuals who risk everything to realize the marvelous, magical (and, at times, maniacal) things they see in their heads.

Such a tale comes to the screen in The Water Engine, the debut presentation of TNT's Screenworks series. Produced in association with Steven Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment, Screenworks seeks to produce new material by America's leading playwrights. The Water Engine was scripted by Pulitzer Prize winner David Mamet.

William H. Macy stars as Charles Lang, a Chicago machinist who spends his evenings in a secret lab building his dream: an eight-horsepower engine that runs on water. When Charles tries to patent his amazing invention, his attorney (John Mahoney) enlists the involvement of wealthy businessman Lawrence Oberman, played by Joe Mantegna. Charles balks at the outright sale of his engine design and soon finds himself running from Oberman's thugs, ordered to nab the blueprints at any cost.

Macy carries the film with his intense portrayal of the naive inventor. Patti LuPone is sympathetic as Charles' blind sister Rita, and Mantegna is an icy menace as the powerful Oberman. Besides Mahoney, the fine supporting cast includes Treat Williams and Charles Durning.

With The Water Engine, Mamet and director Steven Schacter have tried to attain a mythic, allegorical feel and for the most part, succeed. The forced optimism of the Depression is conveyed in Martin Sheen's offscreen reading of a chain letter ("Good fortune will be yours"), and contrasts ironically with the plight of Charles Lang. The film's conclusion may strike some viewers as abrupt, but the emotional effect is unimpaired; in Charles Lang, we see the dreamer in all of us.

LET'S TALK

In the heat of the ratings; Arden never soaked in it

By Taylor Michaels

Q: My family and I are fans of the show In the Heat of the Night. Please tell us it has not been canceled. The last show of the season left Gillespie and Tibbs in quite a mess.

We have heard that Alan Autry, who plays Bubba, is Gene Autry's son. Is this true? Also, is Hugh O'Connor, who plays Jamison, Carroll O'Connor's son or related to him? —Mrs. Jim Manning, Winooski, Texas.

A: In the Heat of the Night appears to be a popular subject with many Let's Talk readers.

In the Heat of the Night avoided a number of contract disputes with NBC by moving to CBS for the fall. NBC has proclaimed a new marketing strategy geared to a younger crowd, but star Carroll O'Connor said recently the show was not canceled because of Heat's viewer demographics. As executive producer, he said he had trouble getting money for new episodes from NBC, so he went shopping and found a more willing banking partner in CBS. During the upcoming season, look for an emphasis on romance and a politically pertinent first episode.

Alan Autry is not Gene Autry's son. He was born Carlos Brown and became interested in acting after a brief career in professional football with the Green Bay Packers. However, Hugh O'Connor is Carroll's son.

Q: I am trying to recall the name of a movie starring Harold Gould and Tyne Daly. The story was set in a rest home for the elderly. The residents took over a train, and the rest of the movie dealt with their escapades. Can you tell me the name of this movie? —Maurice Mosher, Sun City, Ariz.

A: The movie you describe was a very respectable picture made for television in 1979. The title is Better Late Than Never, also starring Harry Morgan, Strother Martin, George Gobel and Donald Pleasence. Video Hound's Golden Movie Retriever claims it's on tape, but watch the box carefully. There's also a 1983 Better Late Than Never, David Niven's last film, which isn't nearly as good.

Q: I want to know where to write three stars of the now-canceled The Young Riders. They are Josh Brolin, Ty Miller and Anthony Zerbe. It was a

Ellen DeGeneres: laughter without malice

By Dan Rice
For Ellen DeGeneres, life is a laughing matter. Her observations about day-to-day living are as accessible as they are amusing. Her disarming wit is in fine form in One Night Stand: Ellen DeGeneres, debuting Tuesday, Aug. 25, on HBO.

Once voted "the funniest person in America," DeGeneres often makes herself the butt of her jokes, particularly in childhood reminiscences. "I remember one time I was coming home from kindergarten. Well, they told me it was kindergarten. I found out later I'd been working in a factory for two years."

A former vacuum cleaner salesperson, DeGeneres had the distinction of being the first female comedian to be called over to talk to Johnny Carson when she appeared on The Tonight Show. After that, she found a regular seat in the Fox sitcom Open House, as off-beat receptionist Margo. This fall she'll have another desk job, at ABC, when she performs office duties for pediatrician Laurie Hill.

In DeGeneres' HBO special, she employs a touch of sweet mischief in topics ranging from airline travel to stress reduction gimmicks, such as mud baths. "It's special mud. It's $40 mud. You can't just roll around on your lawn naked and get that same effect. I tried that; nothing happened. Well, I met some people."

The Water Engine  A genius' invention makes him the prey of big-business interests. W.H. Macy, Joe Mantegna 2:00. (1992) Aug. 24 7:00pm, 9:00pm, 11:00pm; 27 3:00pm; 28 9:00pm.

When Worlds Collide  Two heavenly bodies head in Earth's direction. Barbara Rush, Richard Derr 1:45. (1951) Aug. 29 7:00pm.

Wildflower  A young girl is banished to a dingy shed because she has epilepsy. Beau Bridges, Patricia Arquette 2:00. (1991) Aug. 29 7:00pm.

Winner Take All * A woman's gambling addiction worsens and threatens her marriage. Shirley Jones, Sam Groom 2:00. (1975) Aug. 29 3:00am.

EXCELLENT GOOD FAIR POOR DON'T WASTE MONEY

STAY TUNED: Starring John Ritter of nonsense that youngsters might find an enjoyable diversion. And, who knows? They just might learn something about becoming a TV zombie. At least it's a movie that will not teach them new sex tricks and add to their vocabulary of four letter words. Rated PG.

NEW VIDEO RELEASES

MEDICINE MAN: (1992) Starring Sean Connery and Lorraine Bracco. A rain forest recluse, Dr. Robert Campbell (Sean Connery) finds an exotic plant in the treetops that yields a cure for cancer. The problem is that he can't duplicate a crucial part of the plant process in his lab procedure. That's not what his sponsoring pharmaceutical company wants to hear, especially its emissary, Dr. Rae Crane (Lorraine Bracco), who is dispatched to shape up the absent-minded doctor. John McTiernan's film may seek a cure for cancer, but it often suggests that other maladies, like cute casting (Lorraine Bracco) and glib, wisecrack-laden dialogue, can enliven a too-often listless film. It is, however, good home viewing fare because it is a PG-13 family film and does give a breath-taking, glorious view of the South American rain forest. There is one, wonderful scene where Drs. Campbell and Crane, on specially rigged harnesses, break out of the top of the rain forest canopy.

A New Release Hidden Gem

UNDER SUSPICION: (1992) Starring Liam Neeson, Maggie O'Neill and Laura San Giacomo. In 1959, adultery was grounds for divorce in England and private eyes staged and photographed extramarital trysts. Tony Aaron (Liam Neeson) even uses his wife (Maggie O'Neil) on his assignments; that is, until Tony finds her an a camera subject, a famous artist, murdered. Enter the artist's mistress (Laura San Giacomo) and his jealous wife (Alphonsia Emmanuel). The artist's thumb, used for a signature to his works with a thumbprint, has been amputated during the killing and is missing. Simon Moore's film wastes no time on superfluous details and rushes pell mell into a taut and entertaining mystery melodrama. Rated R for sex and violence.

CHAMPAGNE FOR CAESAR: (1950/Black and White) Starring Ronald Colman, Celeste Holm, Vincent Price and Art Linkletter. This is a delightful satire of early television, from the concept of games shows, that is a lot funnier now than when it was originally released. This movie is virtually a treasure-trove of trivia and great one-liners. Champagne For Caesar, a highly intelligent spoof, features Ronald Colman as Beauregarde Bottomley, an unemployed, self-proclaimed genius and scholar, who exacts his revenge on soap tycoon Vincent Price by appearing on his quiz show and attempting to bankrupt his company by winning all of their assets. Price fights back by sending temptress Celeste Holm to distract the big winner. Price is hilarious as the neurotic soap manufacturer; this rollicking comedy never lets up for a minute. Not rated. Would be a G.

County receives check from RSVP

Margie's Notes

It seems everything is in a turmoil! In Washington, the legislators have not re-authorized the "Older Americans Act," which is months and months overdue. In Austin, they are re-building everything!! Fourteen social service agencies are going under one umbrella and the Department of Aging is pulling funds from one area and giving them to another. They've thought up some kind of new formula which is supposed to equalize the monies, but of course the Panhandle is losing some! It is supposed to be sent to more needy places.

But in all of this, I found a place where everything is peaceful and orderly. Even the birds sing in harmony at 5 a.m. Herschel Black introduced me to a really neat couple in Ruidoso, Kathryn and Bob Finley. They own the La Junta Ranch and it's off the road, up in the hills and trees. Al and I were there last week and spent two nights. I have never heard the music from the birds' orchestra. It is beautiful, all in harmony, but of course they sing to an orderly director. You can hear them thanking God for the safety of the night and rejoicing the coming of a new day. I thought what a different world we would have if we all started the day like the birds!!

The couple we visited are senior citizens, but they work from early morning until late and are really enjoying living. We enjoyed visiting with Herschel, too, and seeing their beautiful home. Oh! It was good to get home to the peace we have with a house full of kids and grandkids, meetings, and all the problems Washington and Austin cause me! See you at the Center.

RSVP program pays dividends in Hereford

City of Hereford and Deaf Smith County got a check recently for $47,800, thanks to active seniors in Hereford.

The check, however, can't be cashed. It does, though, represent 9,560 hours of volunteer work given by members of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program in 1991. There are 75 men and women who serve here in the program.

RSVP is funded by federal, state and local funds and is sponsored by Panhandle Community Services. RSVP has 1,183 volunteers in 10 area counties; they gave over 210,000 hours of volunteer work in 1991.

RSVP has been a successful volunteer force for 20 years and has offered more than 875 million hours of service across the U.S. It is hard to put such a number in perspective, but if those hours were served one after another, they would last more than 1,000 centuries.

RSVP volunteers reconfirm what President Bush has said: "We have within our reach the promise of a renewed America. We can find meaning and reward by serving some purpose higher than ourselves."

Volunteers of the month

Sadie Shaw and June Patterson were selected as "Volunteers of the Month" for September. Both of these ladies have been volunteering their time and efforts to the center for many years. They started in the early years at the old Central school building and still volunteer on a daily basis. Sadie has worked on the serving line, as receptionist, and as money counter. June has counted the money taken in for noon lunches all of these years.

We appreciate and the dedication and pride in the center these members have demonstrated. Sadie said she thinks the senior center is one of the best things that could have come about for the people in Hereford. June believes that no other senior citizens center can come close to being like ours.

Thanks to Sadie and June for helping to make things possible at Hereford Senior Citizens.

President's Corner

BY LESTER WAGNER
President of HSCA

It is hard to believe the summer has passed so fast and that school has begun. We will miss having so many young people visit the Center on a regular basis. However, fall is a busy season for Senior Citizens as we prepare for Thanksgiving and the Festival of Trees with its many children's activities. Committees are selected for the event, however there is much work to be done. If you have a special area you want to be involved in, let us know.

I want to express my appreciation to all of you who donated items to the garage sale and to the Golden K Kiwanis and Senior Citizens who worked so hard to make the sale possible. I also want to thank those who have donated the delicious home-grown vegetables for us to enjoy for lunch.

Congratulations are in order to Lorene Grant, the quilters, judges, and those displaying quilts for the successful Quilt Show at the Hereford Community Center during the Town & Country Jubilee. It was great!

Again, thanks to our volunteers who work so hard all during the year to keep things running smooth!

FDA fiddling with 'daily values'

By CHARLOTTE R. CLARK
MS RD/LD
The Food and Drug Administration has always viewed the food label and the nutrition information on it as an important tool for educating consumers on the nutritional content of the foods they buy—one that shoppers can rely on to compare the protein, vitamins and minerals in one food with another.

The agency has now proposed a major overhaul of the food label. One of its principal changes would revise the way nutrient content would be expressed. New information proposed for the food label would help consumers evaluate the amount of fat, saturated fat, carbohydrate, cholesterol, sodium and fiber that is in the food package. This, along with updated information about protein, vitamins and minerals from the current label, would be listed on the food label as
"DAILY VALUES."

The changes would bring food labeling in line with current nutrition science that focuses attention on those components that Americans are eating in excess, such as fat, cholesterol and sodium. The proposed label would give consumers a powerful new tool with which to compare foods and to make healthy food choices.

The proposal, announced last November as part of the broader food labeling reforms, has generated some confusion and concern about the effect this change could have on the fortification of food, government-sponsored feeding programs, and the American diet in general. At issue is the method FDA has chosen to calculate the Daily Values that are intended to replace the agency's long-established U.S. Recommended Daily Allowances (RDAs) for vitamins and minerals.

The FDA's proposed "Daily Values" for protein, vitamins and minerals still rely on data from the National Academy of Science's

Recommended Dietary Allowances (RDAs), just as the agency did when it created its U.S. RDAs in 1973. The National Academy's RDA is recognized in the scientific community as "the most authoritative source of information on nutrient allowances for healthy people." It is revised and published about every five years, and is complex enough that the recommen-

Monthly dance set for Sept. 5

The monthly dances at the senior center are still being held on the first Saturday night of each month. This month's dance will be on September 5th at 7:30 p.m.

There will be live music and the snack bar will be open for soft drinks and snacks. Admission is $5.00 per person.

Oil painting classes will start October

Oil Painting Classes for beginners will start October 1, 1992 and will be held each Thursday at 9 a.m. Lorene Newman will teach the class. We urge all of you interested in learning to paint to join this class.

When the FDA created its RDAs almost 20 years ago, the agency elected to base them on the highest National Academy RDA for each nutrient (excluding values for pregnant and nursing women). Essentially, that was the nutrition level that young adult males require.

The Daily Values would include not only protein and several of the vitamins and minerals previously listed under the U.S. RDAs but, for the first time, fat, cholesterol, fiber, sodium, and other food components as well. The new name would avoid the implication that the values are recommended intakes.

The changes would not affect any current practices of nutrient fortification. Guidelines for food fortification recommend that nutrients be added on the basis of specific quantities for a given amount of food. The levels are based on the needs of those segments of the population that are at risk in deficiency of those nutrients. FDA's fortification policy states that traditional foods will be fortified if there is a public health need or if nutrients need to be restored to a particular food if, for example, they are depleted during processing. Fortification of foods not covered by the policy is at the discretion of the manufacturer. These policies are not affected by the current proposals.
