This year, 11,300 sisters, daughters, mothers and wives in Texas will be diagnosed with breast cancer, according to a report from the Texas Department of Health.

A total of 2,800 women will not live to see the new year because of this disease. Breast cancer is one of the most commonly diagnosed cancers among American women and the second leading cause of cancer deaths.

But early detection through screening is the key to more treatment options and a dramatic increase in survival rates.

In observance of Breast Cancer Awareness Month and to encourage local women to get the necessary screening mammogram, Hereford Regional Medical Center is offering a 10-percent discount on mammograms for the month of October, according to Claudia Smith, director of the HRMC radiology department.

If a woman has annual mammograms and cancer is found before it spreads to other parts of the body, she will have a greater chance of successful treatment and getting well.

Breast cancer starts as a tiny, unusual growth inside the body. In time, and if not treated early, this odd growth spreads. It may grow as a lump inside the breast and it can spread to other parts of the body. Finding cancer late means there is

Montgomery named newspaper publisher

Mauri Montgomery, general manager of The Hereford Brand since January of this year, has been named publisher of the newspaper and president of Hereford Brand Inc. and North Plains Printing Co. Inc.

Montgomery, 42, will succeed O.G. (Speedy) Nieman, longtime publisher and editor. Nieman, who had taken a limited role in management of the newspaper the past year, will retire from active management and assume the honorary title of publisheremeritus

"I'll still drop by the office and write a column for awhile, but it's time to step down. Mauri has earned the publisher's role and I think he'll do a great job," Nieman said. "He has 18 years of experience on his hometown paper and we look for him to instill new life into the publishing of this newspaper.

Nieman had been publisher/president of The Brand and North Plains Printing since January, 1972, when he and several other West Texas publishers purchased the properties from the late Jimmy Gillentine Montgomery is a graduate of Hereford High School and earned a B.A. degree in journalism at Texas Tech University in 1979. He has lived in Hereford since 1968 and is the son of Dick and Pat Montgomery.

Montgomery has been with The Brand since December 1979, when he started as a sports editor after graduating from Tech. He moved to the advertising department in 1981 and was named advertising director in July 1982.

Last train out

Lawmakers pressing to pass pet projects

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sens. Trent Lott and Thad Cochran want to help the poultry industry. Rep. John Murtha wants more generous military pensions. And Sen. Pat Roberts wants a public policy school in Kansas honoring native son Bob Dole.

To achieve these goals, they and other lawmakers are turning to a massive, must-pass spending bill taking shape in Congress that probably will be sent to President Clinton next week.

On Capitol Hill, such a bill is known as the last train leaving the station. According to documents obtained by The Associated Press and interviews with participants, the measure is becoming a magnet for legislators and administration officials seeking end-of-session prizes.

Lott, the Senate majority leader, and Cochran, his Mississippi Republican colleague, are seeking about $360 million to help the poultry industry.

The money would be used to repay U.S. exporters of poultry and other products that have been shipped to Russia but have not been delivered because the importer there cannot pay for them. Mississippi is a large chicken-producing states, and Gulfport, Miss., is a major poultry-shipping port.

Murtha, D-Pa., concerned about problems the armed forces are having in retaining troops, is fighting to make military pensions more generous by repealing changes made in the retirement system in 1986. That overhaul was aimed at a system under which people about 40 years old could leave the military after 20 years of service and immediately get pensions worth half their salaries while holding other jobs.

losing your people."

Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, is trying to attach language that would prevent the federal government from grabbing a large share of the settlements a handful of states - including Texas - have reached with the tobacco industry.

At stake is billions of dollars tobacco companies have agreed to repay some states for Medicaid costs attributed to smoking-related ailments. Hutchison wants to limit the federal government's share to the $1.7 billion that it would collect five years from now. With Washington generally financing around 50 percent of each state's Medicaid program, critics say $1.7 billion is too low.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, is seeking language ensuring that Lake Powell, straddling Arizona and Utah, will not be drained, as some Western environmentalists would like so the canyon that once existed there would be restored. The lake, created by the Glen Canyon Dam, is used for recreation and the dam is a power source for parts of the rural West.

Other items being pushed by lawmakers include: - A measure by Sen. Don Nickles, R-Okla., aimed at forbidding doctors from prescribing certain drugs to allow patients to commit suicide.

- $6 million Lott wants for a public health program run by Georgetown University, of which $2 million Montgomery and his wife, Lydia, have two children - Kerris, 16, and Kanen, 9. They are members of First Baptist Church.

"I can truthfully say that, since my graduation from college, I've never had an interest in any other endeavor other than publishing what I consider my hometown newspaper," Montgomery said. "There is no other community I would rather call home than Hereford.

While this advancement represents a huge opportunity for myself and my family, it also mandates a great deal of responsibility - to continue this newspaper's long-established leadership role in this community and to offer Hereford residents a premiere choice for credible, accurate and current local news.

Mauro asks Bush to kill nuke dump

By The Associated Press

The Democratic candidate for governor Friday called on Gov. George W. Bush to kill a proposed nuclear waste dump near Sierra Blanca in West Texas.

Bush's office said the governor doesn't believe politics should enter into such a decision.

The three-member Texas Natural Resource Conservation Commission, appointed by Bush, is scheduled to meet Oct. 22 to decide on licensing the dump.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said Bush should instruct the commissioners he appointed to reject that license.

"Gov. Bush says he's relying on science to determine whether the Sierra Blanca nuclear dump is safe, governor."

but the decision does not lie with scientists. The decision now lies with Gov. Bush's own appointees to the TNRCC." Mauro said during a campaign stop in El Paso.

"Gov. Bush should instruct his appointees to reject the permit for the Sierra Blanca nuclear dump."

Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes said the decision on whether to license the dump must be made without political pressure.

"Surely Commissioner Mauro is not suggesting that a governor should let politics dictate regulatory decisions," she said. "If that is the way he would conduct himself as governor, that's another reason we shouldn't elect Garry Mauro as

The permit is being sought by the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority for the dump, to be built about 90 miles from El Paso.

The facility is opposed by some West Texas residents and environmental groups. It would hold radioactive waste generated by nuclear power plants, industry, medical labs and universities, officials have said.

An agreement allowing Maine and Vermont to ship their radioactive waste to Texas was signed into law by President Clinton last month. Those states will pay Texas $55 million for the long-term storage of their refuse.

Mauro said Bush had signed a state budget allotting nearly $8 million for the dump, and he promised to veto any dump funding if elected.

'Texans know the Sierra Blanca site isn't safe," Mauro said. "It's time for Gov. Bush to tell us - yes or no - if he supports opening the Sierra Blanca dump."

Ms. Hughes said that of the two candidates, only Mauro was in office throughout the nuclear dump debate. But he didn't raise the issue until running for governor, she said.

"In his 15 years as land commissioner, he didn't do one thing to attempt to stop the dump, and he did nothing when his friend Ann Richards signed the law putting the dump at Sierra Blanca in 1991," Ms. Hughes said. "Why didn't he persuade her to veto the law that put the dump at Sierra Blanca?"

From Page 1A granddaughters' natural knack, that," Sparks said. Sparks said he wishes he could have worked with Billie McCauley.

He also recalled Pat Riggin as a great wedding designer working with Park Avenue Florist for 10-12 years.

Sparks attends day-long design schools in Amarillo and Lubbock, which he said pump him up, as well as subscribing to industry periodicals for inspiration.

Seale, who would later relocate to Amarillo where he operates Ray's Flowers, was Sparks' first employer. Sparks helped Seale establish the Amarillo enterprise during his first six months of employment. The effort included remodeling, installing coolers, and setting up merchandise.

A 1972 graduate of Hereford High School, Sparks came into the business early.

"I needed a job and thought florist work would be interesting," he said. His mother, Georgia, had worked for Seale during holidays and works now for her son, doing most of the office work. His father, Bub Sparks, "pops in and saves the day every day," Sparks said. "He walks in and I go, Daddy-y-y ..

Sparks and his mother both recall how his appreciation of flowers was inspired by neighbors on Avenue B, where he grew up.

The family's home was between Harry and Lena Lomas and Dick and Mary Elisabeth Varner.

Sparks said the Lomases had "the most beautiful flower gardens. They were creative people and very interesting."

The Varners were "master gardeners," Sparks said. The couple managed Black Furniture Store and were "very tasteful in interior design," he said.

Lomas was "the rose man. He had every bush there was and a large lot," Georgia Sparks said.

As a child, Sparks indulged himself with selections from the neighbors' gardens, and to this day, he doesn't know if his neighbors were aware of the small boy making off with their horticultural fruits. His mother remembers being delighted by miniature bouquets on the bathtub and throughout the home -- all made from flowers Sparks pilfered, then arranged for her.

After Seale, Sparks worked for Park Avenue Florist owners Randy and Bill Griffin, Eileen Tindall, and Tommie Savage. He started his own business at the same Park Avenue site over five years ago.

Sparks new orders flowers from a Denver broker, who has them shipped via Federal Express overnight from around the world. First stop is Miami, from which orders are dispersed across the United States

Sparks can order flowers Monday from South America to have on Wednesday, or from Australia to have Thursday. However, weekends, he still buys supplies from Amarillo wholesalers. Flowers arrive at the shop three times a week.

His favorite part of the business is receiving fresh flowers because they are "so different and beautiful. Everything's available year-round."

Five- to seven-day-old flowers are donated to the Crown of Texas Hospice. Rita Burgess of Hereford collects the flowers, along with bud vases patrons donate back to Sparks, once a week. Sparks also directs Red Cross' offer of vases to Burgess so terminally ill patients can enjoy the blooms.

"That way our flowers don't go to waste," Sparks said.

He does get requests for dead bouquets given for occasions like 40th birthdays. Once he let roses "cook" in his hot van all weekend for a 50th birthday the following Tuesday.

Sparks' specialties are weddings, church altar arrangements and funerals. He prefers to limit himself to one large wedding at a time "so as not to do a rushed job. It's not fair to the bride."

Weddings take hours of planning and days of constructing, beginning with receiving the flower shipment on Thursday for weekend events.

Christmas is his busiest season, lasting six to eight weeks during which he offers centerpieces, gift items, poinsettias, etc. Sparks once decorated local businesses and private homes for the holidays, but this year is the first Christmas he will forego this service.

Valentine's Day is his single busiest day. Homecoming used to be hectic, but now in place of providing homecoming mums, Sparks runs a special on roses.

He also enjoys another aspect of his work.

"It's not the same routine. It's something new every day," he said, noting not only the change of seasons but that decorator items change quickly. He mentioned changes in color names: "avocado" is now "moss," "red" is "brick," and "harvest gold" has become "mustard seed." Also, "sage" and "taupe" -- earthier

"It was beautiful," he said. All the flowers were Fed-Exed in, and Sparks show that there were three deaths arranged them in the church kitchen. The Abilene wedding was held in might save her life. a contemporary art gallery, where Sparks met numerous artists. This time he shipped the flowers in his van for the five-hour trip.

The Formby wedding was adventurous, Sparks said, "having to battle a hurricane that was jumping the East Coast all weekend." The event was held in a seashore chapel, which is the oldest church facility still in use in the U.S., but Sparks was so busy he hadn't time to see the ocean and only caught glimpses of waves at night. For the harvest theme, fresh produce was purchased from local vendors and sunflowers were sent overnight from California.

Goals are dreams with deadlines.

And the deadline came on one of Mauri Montomgery's dreams. Readers will note an announcement in today's Brand that Montgomery is the new publisher of this newspaper. Actually, he's been calling most of the shots since being named general manager in January. As a gracious recognition of my years of service, Mauri and other corporation members have asked me to retain the honorary title of publisher emeritus. I think "emeritus" comes from a Latin word meaning "you're over the hiill, but we'll think of you now and then."

There are some benefits, of course, besides not having to show up for work. One came to mind quickly the other day when I read an Associated Press article. It seems a county commissioner in Denton County -- unhappy about a newspaper story -- had challenged the editor to a three-round boxing match. The challenger wanted to charge for the bout and donate the proceeds to charity. Now if any Brand readers get that agitated, they can call Montgomery.

Seriously, we turn over control to Montgomery with great confidence in his leadership abilities. We expect the newspaper to grow and flourish under his guidance. Like a young stallion, he's "chomping at the bits" to begin the race.

The Hereford Brand joins newspapers across the country in the observance of National Newspaper Week, Oct. 4-10, with a special page in today's paper. As part of the observance, we'd like to reprint a column written by the late Erma Bombeck. It's a humorous salute to newspaper carriers. We appreciate the "little merchants" who deliver papers, and we liked Bombeck's article so much, we kept it in our files:

Dr. Henry Kissinger takes vacations. So does the president of General Motors. And George Meany, and Dr. De Bakey, and Mayor Lindsay.

But you don't know what "vital and indispensable" are until you're a newspaper boy looking for a sub to carry your route for a week. I haven't heard so many excuses since I asked by best friend to carry a pregnancy for me.

"Did you ask Rick?" I asked my son anxiously. "Yes, and he said no." "Did you make the job sound attractive?"

"Sure. Ltold him it was a lot of laughs. You get up at 4 a.m., pick up a bundle of 48 papers for your 52 customers, pedal your bike ten miles, get bit by three dogs, run off the road by a milk truck and when you try to collect, get a clown who wants to know if you can break a 50-dollar bill

"Did he laugh?" I asked. "Not until I told him the salary." "What about Gary?" I wondered. "He's allergic."

- "To what?"
- "Getting up at 4 a.m." "And Mark?"
- "He doesn't have a bike." 'Since when?'
- "Since the last fine the subbet for me and someone stole it." "Surely Kenny would do it.
  - "He would, but he's too little to handle the Hernia Edition."

Different places, different problems

One thing I've learned in all of my moving around is every place has its own idiosyncracies when it comes to driving.

I guess I really began to notice this when I was stationed in Berlin, where defensive driving probably got its start. Germans tend to drive like their cars, even the popular Volkswagen Beetles, are tanks and the streets are Poland. It's an invasion, not traffic.

Back in the States, it often seemed like there are two kinds of drivers in Arkarsas: Old farmers and everyone else. And, guess who always manages to be in front on those crooked, two-lane highways?

I remember saying one time the most dangerous driver on the Arkansas highway is an old man with a hat. Come up over a hill and find yourself behind a late '50s pickup doing 35 mph, and you know when you finally get around it, the driver will be an old man with a hat. Old guy probably bought the pickup new and it's never been over 35.

In East Texas, the problem is tailgating, which those drivers seem to think is a sport. I don't know about most people, but I get unnerved when I'm doing 65 or 70 and there's someone close enough to my rear bumper to start rummaging through my car's trunk.

In New Mexico, drivers speed. It doesn't matter what the road conditions or if it's in the mountains near Taos and you're sitting right on the speed limit, a New Mexico driver will zip past you and vanish into the distance.

Of course, Louisiana was a special case. You name it, Louisiana drivers will do it. You learn quickly not to enter the intersection when the light turns green; you wait until all the other drivers who want to run the red light get through before you proceed.

There're so many accidents, Louisianans apparently have come to view dented fenders as badges of honor. You aren't anyone until you've been in your first fender-bender. Also, I've seen Louisiana drivers do things stone-cold sober that drunks won't do anywhere else in the world. What about Heretord?

This is the pull-out-in-front-of-you capital of the world. It doesn't matter how fast the traffic is bearing down on an intersection, some driver will pull out in front of the fast-moving vehicles. As I've slammed on the brakes to avoid hitting a car that just pulled out in front of me, I thought if Hereford had a "city sound," it would be the sound of tires squealing on the pavement. Then there's Lubbock, and the less said about it the better.

Y2K: Unexpected consequences

Computer programmers around the world are scrambling to come up with a solution to the "Millennium Bug," or Y2K, the computer glitch that could disrupt finances and communications when the clock hits midnight Dec. 31, 1999.

There has been much written about the glitch, in which computers will think the year 2000 is 1900. The expected consequences would include a variety of things, from traffic lights not working to air traffic controllers' screens going blank to pensions being lost.

However, thanks to my friend Dennis Byrd, who runs the Little Rock (Ark.) bureau for Donrey Media Group, there also are some unexpected consequences of the "Millennium Bug."

- The Top 15 consequences are:
- 15. The IRS demands 100 years of interest from stunned taxpayers.
- 14. "99 Bottles of Beer on the Wall" song gets stuck in infinite loop. 13. At the stroke of midnight, Windows 99 turns back into DOS 1.0, and Pentium V turns back into an 8088.
- 12. Internet Movie Database now lists "1901: A Space Odyssey."
- 11. Residents of Indiana have to figure out if they're off by 999 years, 364 days and 23 hours or 1,000 years and one hour.
- 10. Bob Dole's age is listed erroneously with only two digits.

9. Mel Brooks' "2,000 Year Old Man" skit stops being funny. Oops, too late.

8. Sales of Coca-Cola jumps dramatically after original cocaine-laden formula becomes legal again.

7. Software engineers point out that since computers think it's almost 1900, we technically have to "party like it's 1899," which doesn't seem like much fun.

6. Microsoft declares the year 1900 to be the new standard of the "Gatesian" calendar.

- 5. Jesus shows up late for His second coming, blames it on COBOL programmers.
- 4. Computers temporarily fooled into thinking Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina is only 103.

3. First Top 5 list of the Year: "Reasons No One Would Ever Assassinate President McKinley."

2. Using a computerized adoption service, Michael Jackson mistakenly takes home some octogenarians.

And, the No. 1 Unforeseen Consequence of the "Millennium Bug" is: Unexpected demand for COBOL programmers results in a severe understaffing of fast-food restaurants.

What's the Hernia Edition?" I asked. "The Sunday paper. "Could the branch manager sub?"

"He's throwing two other routes."

"What about your father?"

- "He burnt the first gear out of his car the last time."
- I called the paper. The circulation manager was at a convention in San Diego. The personnel director was ill. The managing editor was on special assignment, and the publisher was on vacation.

My eyes glistened with pride. We elect a president every four years, but when you're a 12-year-old newspaper boy...it's easier to grow a new one than to replace the old one.

House Judiciary Committee voted as it had all day in other maneuvering - to recommend that the full House begin an impeachment inquiry against President Clinton.

Editorials

The Miami Herald:

and abroad

The committee's Democrats, outnumbered 21 to 16, tried to pass a resolution asking the House to limit its inquiry in scope and time in order to conclude it by Thanksgiving. No sale. ...

Instead, the committee voted. again 21-16, for an essentially open-ended inquiry whose scope and duration no one can predict....

David Schippers, the GOP counsel, enumerated 15 acts in which, he said, the President might have committed a felony and for which he might be impeachable. ...

Abbe D. Lowell, the Democrats' counsel, stressed that the committee is not an extension of Mr. Starr, whom he accused of usurping the House's constitutional responsibility by presenting 11 alleged impeachable offenses. .

So the debate, transported to the House, is unchanged by one iota ...

But, we think, there is a huge gap between the unwise and the impeachable. Mr. Clinton's conduct clearly was unwise. But impeachable? No. What anyone outside the U.S.

House thinks is now irrelevant. ...

The Sydney (Australia) Morning Herald:

The political hurdles to impeach-

Impeachment inquiry ment are more formidable than the procedural ones. With mid-term congressional elections due on Nov. 3, it was always likely that the Republicans would use their majority in the House to keep as much pressure on Clinton - and by implication the Democrats - as possible. How much political mileage there will be in the Lewinsky affair post-Nov. 3 is anyone's guess. If the House vote later this week divides on party lines, there is a danger that an impeachment inquiry will begin to look like a political scalp hunt. That may rebound on the Republicans in the 2000 presidential campaign.

Perhaps it is for this reason that support is already building for a circuit-breaker that would see the Congress censure Clinton but not impeach him. That would wrap this whole tawdry business up much quicker than impeachment proceedings, limit the damage to the office of the presidency and restore some perspective on misconduct which, while reprehensible, on any objective test bears no comparison to President Richard Nixon's behavior in the Watergate affair. ...

Boot camps are good idea, but they shouldn't be necessary

There's been a lot of discussion regarding the need for military-style boot camps for misbehaving children and teens.

Of course, Gov. George W. Bush has been running an advertisement for several months advocating youth boot camps and all the good they do.

I read that a new youth boot camp recently opened its doors in Slaton. After only a week, some parents of the teens are seeing an improvement in the actions and attitudes of their children.

I'm thrilled to know that something is working to get the kids attention and give the authority back to adults.

I also think it's a shame that as a nation we have to resort to boot-camp tactics to convince children that parents are the authority and what parents deem appropriate should be the final word

I hear a lot about "letting kids spread their wings," children's "free agency of choice," and their need to find their independence.

DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE

I fully believe in letting kids of all ages spread their wings, make their own choices and find their independence, as long as those decisions still fall within the bounds of the parental limitations.

Inappropriate choices should be corrected and stopped, and a set of appropriate choices offered.

Most of the youth-age boot camp inhabitants, I realize, have pushed enough buttons to where even the county judges and juvenile probation officers are at their wits ends.

But, what else are parents to do if not turn to something like boot camp? Parents are no longer allowed to set limits and expect children or adolescents to stay within them.

Children are now taught in school that if someone hits them, especially a parent or other adult, it's abuse and the children have the right to call a protective agency and have the adults punished.

Fortunately, most local law officers see the difference between child abuse and punishment. I commend them for that.

Unfortunately, officers can't do much about kid who hasn't broken any laws. But, then they have their hands tied as much as any parent.

Some of my favorite books while I was growing up were the Laura Ingalls Wilder "Little House" series. For those who haven't read them, it was a whole different world back then.

Children - young children and married children alike - were still expected to maintain their parents' privilege of going somewhere. Not only that, but they were also given chores to do early in life.

Through it all there was no backtalking or sassing of parents. Kids basically did what they were told, and showed not only respect, but also love for those parents.

Now, not only is striking a child considered abusive, but so is speaking harshly or derogatorily to children.

I've heard parents get upset with particular administrators who don't speak as nicely as possible to a child, who don't lift the kids up with camps get lifted up every day and in every way or do the sergeants, as such, let the kids know the rules in not-so-nice terms?

I'm all for encouraging a kid to do their best. I'm all for telling a kid that they've done a great job. I do have problem telling a kid they did great job when I don't see it that way. Sometimes a half-hearted job is just that and needs improvement.

Maybe juvenile boot camps aren't the answer for every misbehaving teen, but until the day comes when parents once again have authority over their children, I think we will see an ever-increasing need for them.

Maybe in all reality, the government needs to take a step back, allow parents to raise their own kids and administer family rules any way the parent deems necessary, shy of truly harming the kids.

Democrats to be hit on impeachment

By RON FOURNIER AP Political Writer

BENSON, N.C. - With the smell of horse manure in the air, Dan Page swats at a fly and chuckles at the thought: Here he is, rounding up votes in farm country, and the Democrat he hopes to replace in Congress "is sweating out the Clinton vote."

Thirty miles away, Tom Roberg is making plans for a news conference in an adjacent congressional district. The Democrat he hopes to replace "stood with President Clinton," the ultimate political sin in these parts.

Their opponents, Democratic Reps. Bob Etheridge and David Price, are right where they want them: In Washington, close to Clinton.

Casting starkly different votes in the president's impeachment case Thursday, Etheridge and Price epitomized the no-easy-way-out atmosphere Clinton has created for his fellow Democrats heading into the Nov. 3 congressional elections.

The day began with Etheridge, Price, and other anxious North Carolina Democrats gathered in a Capitol cubby to discuss their poor choices. Voting would soon begin on a Republican resolution for an open-ended impeachment inquiry. Democrats would offer an alternative, one sure to fail, that would place limits on the inquiry.

"We were getting our heads straight, checking where each other were," one of the lawmakers said later. "We're boxed ih." Their dilemma:

realized that a Democrat who loses his or her seat over a preliminary impeachment vote cannot protect him if the proceedings grow more perilous.

After their anxious meeting, the North Carolina lawmakers agreed to vote for the Democratic measure. sensitive to minority issues. Then they parted ways, unsure sure how each would vote on the GOP proposal - the one that really counted.

Price and Etheridge, congressional neighbors in the increasingly conservative Raleigh-Durham area, were on the fence until the last minute.

Price voted no. Etheridge-yes.

"He had to vote for it," GOP candidate Page said when somebody tapped him on the shoulder and gave him the news from Washington. "This is Jesse Helms country."

The arch-conservative senator carried Etheridge's district in 1996, as did Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole. A freshman, Etheridge managed to win the seat only after his GOP opponent became mired in scandal.

"He did the right thing," said Robert Depew, 43. An Etheridge the "no" vote. Etheridge predicted that his black constituents will not "end up being one-issue voters.

Though they said they will still vote for him, several blacks in Etheridge's district disagreed with his action Thursday.

'What Clinton has done is done," said Yolanda Stewart, 26. "Leave him alone.

Price has the opposite problem: He opted to protect his base by voting against the GOP plan, opening himself to accusations that he went soft on Clinton.

'Mr. Price stood with Bill Clinton and voted against the values and beliefs of the citizens" of the district, Roberg said in a statement announcing a news conference today.

Price gambled that his district is Democratic enough for him to survive

Like most of the House Democrats. Price plans to wield his party's defeated resolution like a shield. He can argue that he voted for an inquiry, albeit a limited one. 'I did what was the right thing to do," he said in a telephone interview stopped outside a department store in Price's district, said Congress does not need to punish Clinton. "It's in God's hands now," he said, "not Washington's hands."

Big splash Gonzales proud of Hereford Aquatic Center

By DONALD M. COOPER Brand Editor

Hereford's Aquatic Center is something to be proud of and Shawn Gonzales wishes more people were aware of just what's beneath the big white dome adjacent to the YMCA. Gonzales, who has been manager of the center for about 11/2 years, said she's amazed by how many Hereford residents stop to tell her that day's visit is the first time they've been to the center.

"This is like an oasis in the middle of the desert ... on the weekends during the summer, we get at least 50 people from Amarillo and a lot for private parties," Gonzales said.

"Every weekend we have private parties. As far as I know, this is the only facility that's open throughout the winter. I've heard that West Texas (A&M University in Canyon) is planning something like this, but I don't know when it's going to get off the ground," she said.

Gonzales said she started working at the Hereford Aquatic Center not long after it opened three years ago, "when my baby started school. I came down and I was hired. ... I had been certified (as a swimming instructor) 18 years before."

The Hereford native said swimming instruction is "so gratifying. It's good to see someone come in who's afraid of the water and two weeks later is doing the front crawl in 6-foot water. It's gratifying to know you've given someone something that's a real lifesaver."

Gonzales said she began her life around water when she was a child; her mother, now deceased, was "afraid of water, so she got us all into classes.

However, after several sessions of swimming classes, Gonzales said she complained about doing the same thing over and over, so her mother encouraged her to become certified as a lifeguard and instructor.

"She'd be proud to know that she did something to help me have a career and be happy with what I'm doing," Gonzales said.

She said she hopes to get the word out about the center to "get more people to begin using the facility. We have so many people who come in and say it's the first time to visit."

During the school year, two junior high school classes and one high school class meet at the aquatic center

Kuehne's rebirth provides hope for many alcoholics

By BRAD TOWNSEND DALLAS -- The calls, letters, telegrams and faxes are still coming. The volume has slowed, but not much. One month after winning the U.S. Amateur golf title, Hank Kuehne still has to unplug his phone at night.

Kuehne has proved a most popular champion, moreso than he or his family fathomed.

People the Kuehnes don't even know, from all over America, are reaching out. Not so much because of the esteemed title that will be attached to his name forever, but for the invisible one he wears on his sleeve and over his heart:

Recovering alcoholic. When Kuehne ranked sobriety, not the U.S. Amateur, as his No. 1 victory, it struck deep, familiar chords in the souls of many.

"Hank Kuehne is a beacon of light for everyone who's had alcohol or chemical dependency problems," said Hank's father, Ernie Kuehne. "It shows what can happen when a person faces up."

Kuehne is not the first athlete to confront alcoholism. He is unusual, however, in that he's only 22. He is one of the first nationally visible athletes, if not the first, who's a testament to a growing malady: teenage chemical dependency.

He is the Southern Methodist University senior who took his first drink at age 11. He is the middle child of America's premier amateur golfing family, whose undiagnosed learning disabilities led to depression, which led him to drink regularly at age 13.

Kuehne is the broad-shouldered, 6-2, 195-pounder whose daily diet included a case of beer and a fifth of whiskey by the time he reached the Oklahoma State University

The Kuehne family and others who watched Hank growing up and playing sports in the Park Cities area always knew he was different from the other Kuehnes

He was the free spirit. Trip, four years older than Hank, and Kelli, two years younger than Hank, always were more serious and focused. That applied to school as well as sports.

Luke Crossland and Ernie Kuehne were co-coaches of Hank's YMCA football, basketball and soccer teams. Crossland chuckled at the memory of lanky, 6-year-old Hank during soccer games.

"He would stand there, looking at the birds and the dogs, more than being a real aggressive guy on the field," he said. "He'd go into his own world."

The older Hank got, the more independent he became. Hank, according to his father, liked to tell people he was the family black sheep. He reveled in doing things his way, not the family way.

Ernie Kuehne, a self-described Type A personality, said he realized early on that the motivational buttons he pushed in Trip and Kelli didn't work for Hank. Hank was far more sensitive to criticism.

'With Hank, I realized I couldn't interact with him and his sports the same way I could with Trip," Ernie said. "With Kelli, I pretty much left her to do her own thing. She was such a focused child; I worried about taking pressure off her.

"Trip, he loved to grind. Hank, he didn't like to grind so much." Years later, when-Hank bot-campus in the fall of 1994.

He is the guy Tiger Woods acknowledges as competitive golf's longest hitter, who, during a college tournament two years ago, drove the ball 40 yards over the green on a 415-yard hole.

Hank is the Kuehne who always had the most ability, but whose life careened wildly until he crashed, literally, on Feb. 3, 1995. That was the night he ran a stop sign on a dirt road outside Stillwater, Okla., landing two passengers of another car in the hospital and himself in jail.

Yet, long before his personal turnaround, long before his 2and-1 victory over Tom McKnight in the U.S. Amateur final at Oak Hill Country Club on Aug. 30, Kuehne was the likable, laid-back kid for whom no one seems to have an unflattering word.

"He's the sweetest kid, the apple of his mother's eye," said Barry Rodenhaver, former SMU golf coach and a Kuehne family friend since 1987. "He's a Huckleberry Finn who hits it down the fairway and goes into the rough looking for snakes.'

Current SMU coach Jay Loar says it's safe to say Kuehne is one of the most popular figures on campus and in college golf. Loar notes that everyone, especially children, seem drawn to Kuehne.

"He kind of reminds me of a baby Labrador retriever," Loar said. "You just want to go up and rub his bald head and give him a hug.'

Now, with his life in order and a U.S. Amateur title on his resume, Kuchne is entering a new phase: opportunity. In 1999, he will play in the Masters, the U.S. Open at Pinehurst, N.C., and the British Open at Carnoustie. Sometime next summer, he probably will turn pro, beginning what many believe will be a lucrative PGA Tour career.

But unlike popular recent U.S. Amateur winners such as Woods, Justin Leonard and Phil Mickelson, Kuchne brings not only charisma but a compelling, and potentially powerful, story. And he doesn't mind sharing it.

"When I talk about myself being an alcoholic and being in recovery, that does nothing but further me in my recovery," he said. "I'm helping other people; I'm helping myself, as well.

'You always want to look back and say this is where I came from, and this is where I am now. Once tomed out at Oklahoma State, people who didn't know about Hank's learning disabilities wondered whether Ernie had pushed him too hard. Or, whether Trip's and Kelli's successes put added pressure on Hank.

Crossland, who like Ernie Kuehne wound up having two sons play major college athletics, remembers parents of opposing YMCA teams questioning their coaching methods, largely because their teams rarely lost.

By the time Hank entered Oklahoma State, Kuehne's drinking and erratic behavior had become noticeable to family and friends. They were alarmed.

At the start of the school year, Trip had transferred to Oklahoma State from Arizona State. Although Trip and Hank lived less than a mile apart, Trip recalls seeing Hank only two or three times that first semester.

"I couldn't stand being around him," Trip said. "Whenever I was around him, he either needed some money or needed me to get him out of trouble someplace. Or it was somebody saying, 'Trip, you know, your brother did this."

"Whenever Hank's name was mentioned, it was never any good."

Oklahoma State's golf program, under coach Mike Holder, has a reputation as one of the most intense in the country. Boot camplike workouts are not uncommon.

But Holder quickly realized Hank wasn't the same person who first visited the OSU campus as a Highland Park junior.

"It was obvious that in the state he was in for the first semester, he wasn't someone you could really coach," Holder said. "I just told him he could do what he wanted to, on his own schedule.

When he was ready to be part of the team, we were ready to talk about it and consider it."

Holder also remembers Hank as being "obviously intelligent" and that, "for him to struggle that much in school, it didn't make any sense."

It was about that time, at Ernie's urging, that Hank was tested by doctors in Stillwater, and his learning disabilities were discovered.

But by the time Hank and Trip returned to Stillwater for the spring 1995 semester, Hank's drinking and behavior had grown this Ewing didn't do Friday night was shoot J.R.

Hereford's junior tailback worked past two early fumbles to rack up 287 yards in total offense and score five touchdowns to lead the Hereford Whitefaces to a 54-21 rout of Dumas at Whiteface Stadium in the District 3-4A opener for both teams.

Ewing did it on homecoming night. Could life be any better?

"I didn't know I had that good of a night," Ewing said. "The offensive line -- they came out firing off the ball. They were doing everything right. I just had to follow them.'

Hereford is now 5-1 overall and 1-0 in District 3-4A. Dumas falls to 1-5 and 0-1

Ewing ran only 13 times for 189 yards, although it's a shame he didn't get credit for another 100 or so for all the running back and forth across the field he did to gain yardage.

"I was just reading my blocks," Ewing said. "I do wish I was just a little quicker.

And if that wasn't enough, Ewing picked up another 98 yards on three receptions -- two of which went for touchdowns of 26 and 60 yards in the first half.

"He's an underrated back," Dumas coach Brent McCallie said. "I certainly thought he was capable of doing this coming in, and showed that tonight."

And it wasn't just Ewing. He was joined in the 100-yard club by quarterback Cody Hodges and backup tailback Mark Rodriguez as the Whitefaces rolled to 408 yards rushing on their way to 570 yards of

The second quarter was a microcosm of the game. Hereford did it through the air and did it on the ground. Hodges ripped off a 70-yard run to set up a one-yard dive by Rodriguez four plays later that put the Whitefaces up 14-7 with 9:32 to go

"It was just one of those games and Ewing hooked up for their second where it was a big ballgame for scoring pass of the half -- a 60-yarder them," McCallie said. "They're with 6:37 in the second quarter. doing a tremendous job. Their kids And still more.

We executed well," Yenzer said. We finally understood our offense enough to do it. They were giving us the middle and taking away the sidelines. It was a feast or famine kind of deal. And we had a lot of feast tonight."

The teams exchanged touchdowns in the third quarter and Dumas trimmed the Hereford margin to 41-21 when Godfrey scored on a four-yard run with 10:38 left in the game. The Whitefaces responded less than two minutes later when Ewing ripped off a 64-yard touchdown run with 8:57 remaining for his fifth touchdown of the night. Rodriguez then ended the Hereford onslaught on a 70-yarder with 4:22 left in the game.

"The thing I'm most proud of is sometimes you establish a starting lineup and the backup kids step back,' Yenzer said. "I'm so proud for those kids for coming to the forefront tonight.'

And for those still wondering if the Hereford Whitefaces are really for real.

'We're going to keep on winning,' Rodriguez said. "And we're going to do something in the playoffs. We're all working together as a team and we're going to stay together as a team."

Yenzer saw plenty Friday night --

even worse. He also had shut out his family and many of his friends. Although they rarely spoke, Trip, out of the blue, phoned Hank's dorm room on the afternoon of Feb. 3. Trip was going to dinner with friends and wondered if Hank wanted to come.

Hank wasn't home, so Trip left a message. He never heard back. When Trip returned from his night out, there was a message on his answering machine from a state trooper. Hank had been in a car wreck.

Holder was home when he, too, received a call. All the trooper would say was that an OSU athlete, possibly a golfer, had been in a wreck on a dirt road a few blocks from Holder's home.

"I drove to the scene but couldn't get real close," Holder said. "I parked my car and ran up. I saw Hank's BMW in a ditch. It didn't look like anybody would get out of that alive. Then I saw the other car, and it was in just as bad of shape."

For a few moments, Holder assumed Hank was dead, or, at best, badly hurt. But then he saw Kuehne leaning against a patrol car.

Kuehne, though insisting he had had only one drink, had run a stop sign in excess of 65 mph, according to the police report. He suffered four broken ribs and a concussion and had a few glass shards fly into his eyes. Two passengers in the other car were hospitalized, one with a broken leg. "He was in shock," Holder said. "I don't know how much he had that night, but he didn't appear to be intoxicated to me.'

Nevertheless, after being treated at a hospital, Kuchne was taken to iail.

It was about 2 a.m. when Trip learned Hank was in jail. He phoned an Oklahoma supreme court judge he knew, as well as a Stillwater judge. He was told Hank would have to remain in jail until at least 11 a.m.

"The next morning, Coach Holder and I bailed him out," Trip said. "I was bawling. I gave him a big hug and said, 'Listen, I love you, but you've got to go do something to get better.

Hank, also crying, responded: "I love you, too. I'll figure something out.

That afternoon, the OSU golf team left without Hank for that spring's first tournament. Trip said he thought of nothing but Hank that week, yet wound up earning his first collegiate victory.

Back in Stillwater, friends and family from Dallas had rallied to Hank's side He eventually would be fortunate in another sense. Months later, he was cleared of charges, the accident expunged from his record.

But following the accident, Hank faced the biggest crossroads of all. The guilt. The soul-searching. The decision to finally seek help. "It was kind of OK when I could avoid everything, not deal with my problem," he said. "When I saw what I was doing to myself, my brother and to other people, I didn't want to live like that anymore.'

He phoned Holder and asked for his help. Holder, whose daughter had battled non-alcohol-related dependency problems, recommended a center in Minnesota for a three-month rehab.

The hard part would be the two weeks that Kuehne had to wait to enter rehab. With Holder watching over him night and day, Kuehne decided to attempt sobriety before going to Hazelden. "Those were some pretty traumatic days," Holder said. "At the time, I didn't realize what a big step it was to go cold turkey. Normally, you do that when you're under supervision at a treatment center.'

After rehab, Kuehne never returned to OSU. By mutual decision, Holder granted him a scholarship release. Holder and the Kuehnes realized that Hank needed a fresh start. More than three years later, the Kuehnes haven't forgot-ten Holder's kindness. "I give Mike Holder credit for saving Hank Kuehne's life," Ernie Kuehne said.

Hank said a key facet of his sobriety was learning to open up to family and friends. He calls his family "the pillar in my recovery.

Kuehne said he rarely goes to Alcoholics Anonymous meetings unless an alcoholic friend asks for company. Often, Kuehne simply calls friends, like Tyler, just to talk.

"He's transferred his addiction from alcoholism to golf," Tyler said. "If I can emphasize anything, he is not only a great golfer, but a great person. In the weeks since his U.S.

Amateur victory, the Kuehnes have found out how many people, friends and strangers were pulling for Hank.

But in truth, the Kuchnes have been celebrating -- quietly, guardedly -- for three years now. "Before Hank, I thought people who had this problem were we Ernie said. "One thing I've learned through all this is compassion and caring. Since he went through rehab, I've learned 20 times more about how to deal with him.

"God bless him. I'm glad he's different. Everybody can't be like Trip. Everybody can't be like me. Just because we want to be focused all the time, hey, my God, he's probably going to live a lot longer."

Emma's kitchen: A place of magnificent hospitality to bird hunters

mma Smith was buried here last Monday...She had celebrated her 90th birthday with family and friends earlier this year in a manner pretty typical of her-lots of neighboring, food and fun swapping stories. She loved that sort of thing.

Through the years she proceeded to spoil legions of us goose and pheasant hunters, extending the most gracious hospitality at her home in the Ford country, to the north of Hereford. Emma and her husband, Raymond, who passed away in 1991, lived on the southeast shore of what was once one of the finest goose lakes in all the Panhandle--and not a bad pheasant cover, either. They were serenaded on winter nights by untold thousands of yelping Canada and snow geese, and never seemed to consider this din to be racket.

Emma was a first-rate cook. She shined in that capacity each year during the opening weekend of phe ant season, displaying not only her graciousness--but tolerance for tracked-in mud as well. She was joined in this capacity by her daughter, Katy, and daughter-in-law, Maudette.

A fraternity of pheasant aficionados used to gather at the Smith farm for opening weekend. Included in the company of illustrious "sports" at one time or another were Dr. Trow Mims, his son, Ed, "Hap" Cavness, Dr. Bill Lawrence and his accomplice, Dr. Irl Sell, "Little Charlie" Seeds, Tom Sieling and Charlie Broad from Dallas, Earl and Jerry Stultz, Emma's grandsons Mike and "Small Paul," and Mike's son, Toby, who was often referred to as Paul's "little shadow." Even Emma's son, John A. sometimes quit farming the place for a few hours, took the old humpback Browning out of the closet, and walked the stalk fields and the lake perimeter with us.

I was fortunate, and invited to join this cast of characters. There were good years when ringnecks were abundant and limits came easy. There were thin years of tough going and few birds bagged. Even when hunters grew footsore and frustrated in mornings of hard hunting, there was opening day dinner at Emma's house to look forward to. Emma really put-on-the-dog for the bird hunting guests at the Smith farm. We would come dragging in about dinner-thirty--all aching muscles, exhaustion, and starvation, peel out of layers of coveralls and jackets, shed mud-caked boots, and head inside Emma's home.

Emma and Raymond, Katy and Maudette would be there to meet us. It was all smiles and hugs, backslaps and handshakes and enthusiastic come-in-this-house-you're-welcome.

They listened to our wild tales of how the morning's hunting had been. They liked hearing those exaggerated stories of how Trow nailed one just before it flew out of sight, how Bill Lawrence missed one that rose practically from under his gun barrel-- because he didn't hear it take off, how "Little Seeds" ripped the seat of his britches crossing the fence next to the pasture, how a rooster got up high in the wind and flew the whole of "flak alley" with everybody in line emptying their guns at him without cutting a feather Hushing the hubbub for the turning of grace, Emma would line us up and shoo us toward the kitchen. We'd make the big pass around the grand buffet table that fairly sagged under the fruit of all the efforts of the ladies who labored at the stove and the oven...Turkey and ham and roast beef and two or three kinds of spuds, vegetables, assorted salads and trimmings, homemade bread and Emma's pies, and cobblers.

All wonderful--all anybody could have ever wanted. We coveyed-up all over the living room and kitchen, spilling out into the garage and sometimes even the front yard when there was a hunting mob. It sure got quiet there for a while as everybody seriously chowed down.

Sated, we'd sip tea, walk around and visit, go inside to brag-up the great eats to the beaming ladies, and spin a few "unabridged" stories. Emma fairly glowed.

After Emma's huge feed, you needed a nap a lot worse than you needed to go back into the field to finish out the limit. Nobody went away hungry--or feeling less than welcome. Emma transferred her hunter kitchen talents to the old Ford school house when the Ford Home Demonstration Club began staging its pheasant hunter dinners as fund raisers.

Emma was in charge of preparing the beans, and always brought a couple of much-coveted pies. She became a member of the Ford Home Demonstration Club in 1960, and put out a lot of effort over many years on projects that ultimately benefitted the county's kids and families.

Emma was a fine study in "neighboring," that grand tradition of the farm and ranch country that God-forbid should ever fade away. She found that the way to help a neighbor very often involved something from her kitchen.

Back when Colby and Jim Conkwright used to hold their annual registered Hereford sales at their ranch north of town, lots of neighbors from the Ford and Milo Center country turnedout to help. It was another of those great occasions of astonishingly efficient neighboring. The Ford HD ladies put on a catered feed for the crowd on-

The Ford HD ladies put on a catered feed for the crowd onhand at the Conkwright sale a few times. Naturally, Emma was there, serving-up what she had helped to cook.

The sacrament of communion involves the breaking of bread and sharing of fellowship. You wouldn't think that gathering a bunch of bird hunters or cattle buyers, or a harvest crew to feed them could be a celebration of communion. Emma treasured these times, and she made them just exactly that--a time of communion.

Without fanfare or notoriety, Emma made her kitchen a ministry.

For 30 years, she prepared communion bread for Sunday services at the old First Christian Church of Hereford. – Every week. Some effort was required to bake the unleavened bread with no yeast and no salt.

To Emma, it was no trouble at all.--Katy says Emma's communion bread recipe is still there, taped to the inside of the cabinet door in her kitchen. It is eminently fitting that communion bread was made by a lady who was the salt of the earth. Emma was a faithful reader of my columns and stories over the years. I hope they gave back to her some small measure of the enjoyment that she gave to all of the many bird hunters who were welcomed into her kitchen.

I don't know if quail and manna are the featured menu in Heaven, but Emma is assuredly qualified to prepare and serve them. I suspect she's at work in the Heavenly kitchen, happily cooking rib-sticking meat-and-potatoes fare--and mighty fine pies. I can just see her giving a come-in-this-house smile and hug, and dishing-up heaping helpings.

Cleveland routs Yankees, 6-1

CLEVELAND (AP) -- Chuck Knoblauch stood with his hands on his hips and watched the Indians circle the bases again. This one wasn't his fault, and the Yankees couldn't argue about anything.

After winning Game 2 with a freaky gift courtesy of Knoblauch, Cleveland needed no assistance Friday night.

Jim Thome homered twice and Cleveland pounded Andy Pettitte for four homers -- three in a 13-pitch sequence in the fifth inning -- and Bartolo Colon pitched a four-hitter for a 6-1 win over the Yankees in Game 3 of the AL championship series.

Cleveland, given little chance to stay with the powerful Yankees before the series started and even less after New York won the opener in a rout, is doing what many thought was impossible.

Manny Ramirez and Mark Whiten also homered for the defending AL champs.

Meanwhile, the Yankees' storybook regular season, which included 114 wins, an AL East title and comparisons to the great teams in baseball history, seems like ancient history.

Pettitte, who lost twice to Cleveland in last year's postseason, got rocked so badly in the fifth he appeared to be on the verge of tears as he staggered to the Yankees' dugout after the Indians were done with him.

Reno: cinema's mystery man

NEW YORK (AP) - International film star Jean Reno was international long before he ever became a film star

The son of Spanish parents chased out of their homeland by a fascist dictator came into the world shortly after World War II in Casablanca, the celebrated international crossroads immortalized on screen by Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman.

Young Juan Moreno roamed the exotic urban oasis in North Africa. speaking in multiple tongues, learning a different language at home, at school and at the movies, where everything he saw was a foreign film. "In those days the cinema for me was John Wayne, Jean Gabin, Jean-Paul Belmondo, Alain Delon, William Holden, James Dean, Marlon Brando," Reno says, lounging in a Manhattan hotel suite, sipping mineral water.

As relaxed as the journey from late summer to fall, the veteran actor currently watching Robert De Niro's back in "Ronin" casually describes his family's 1960 move to France, photo shop clerk. which became his adopted nation.

He looks the part, the classic grizzled Frenchman: oblong face, close-cropped salt-and-pepper beard was just to have a stage and an and a pair of mournful, magnetic audience." eyes.

He grew into manbood in France, but couldn't stay within its borders even to fulfill his military obligation in the French Army, training as a commando at a base deep in the heart of Germany.

"Logical, eh? I was always traveling with a bag in my hand," Reno chuckles.

Travel remained the norm as an actor. Reno got his start in the 1970s with a traveling theater company that crisscrossed France. He has gone on to make movies all over Europe and in the United States, with recent blockbuster credits including "Mission: Impossible," "Godzilla" and now, John Frankenheimer's action-thriller, "Ronin."

Dream come true? Not really.

"No, I had no big dreams in my mind," Reno says of his early aspirations, as he remembers a time when he sometimes performed for free, supporting himself with day jobs like truck driver, accountant and

"A play, a character, a place, a director, a salary - if it's possible," Reno says, chuckling again. "The joy

Not that he's complaining about how things turned out. After winning praise in director Costa Gavras'- 1979 film, "Claire de Femme,"- Reno teamed up with director Luc Besson and made several films with him, including "The Big Blue," Femme Nikita" and his breakout hit." "The Professional."

He starred in France's No. 1 box office hit, the 1993 comedy "Les Visiteurs" and its recent sequel. At the top of his game, Reno is nevertheless the first to acknowledge that international stardom didn't come without supreme sacrifice.

"I divorced. I paid for my success. You have to pay always," Reno says, speaking softly. "So, it changed my life, but it's OK. I don't know nobody who doesn't pay.'

Reno's French accent is undeniably thick, but it fails to impede clear communication. Still, his agile mind is sometimes victimized by a clumsy tongue.

Asked to define his greatest challenge performing in English, Reno says, "To be believable and understable."

He knows it didn't come out right. 'Understable?" he asks, laughing at himself. "Understandable. You see, I still have to work."

Small, hot, and cold. This describes Mercury, the solar system's innermost planet. Orbiting the sun at an average distance of thirty-seven million (37,000,000) miles, Mercury bakes in temperatures reaching eight-hundred and fifty (850) degrees Fahrenheit on the side facing the sun. The sweltering environment is contrasted on the dark side of the planet where the temperature plummets to a bone chilling minus three hundred (300) degrees Fahrenheit. The wide temperature variation is due to the lack of a protective atmosphere. Mercury, like our moon, lacks sufficient gravity to hold a substantial layer of air to serve as a buffer against raw sunlight. As we will see, this is not the only thing our moon and Mercury have in common.

For instance, the image at right shows scars left from impact cratering on the surface of Mercury. Like our moon, Mercury has suffered the ravages of meteorite impacts through the ages. Unlike the Earth, neither our moon nor Mercury has an atmospheric shroud capable of wearing down meteors as they streak toward the surface. Although Mercury is considered as an Earth-like or terrestrial planet, it bears a remarkable likeness to our own natural satellite.

Named after the Roman Messenger of the Gods, Mercury orbits the sun in a mere eighty-eight (88) days. But it requires fifty-nine (59) days to complete one rotation about its axis. The equatorial diameter of the innermost planet is three thousand and fifty (3050) miles. This is less than the diameter of Ganymede, the largest moon of Jupiter. The diameter of the Jovian moon is three thousand two hundred and fifty (3250) miles. Mercury's proximity to the sun and its relatively small size make a difficult object for observation.

The best telescopic views of Mercury from earth reveal an indistinct object lacking any surface detail. The planet is so close to the sun that it is usually lost in solar glare. Our best close-up views of Mercury were obtained with the Mariner 10 spacecraft, launched on November 3, 1973 from Kennedy Space Center in Florida. The image at right is one of those taken with this probe (The blank portions were not imaged by the spacecraft).

Mercury and Venus have something in common. Both of them have orbital paths lying inside the Earth's journey around the sun. This means Mercury, like Venus, has a full cycle of phases. Although it is not as bright as Venus. Mercury is visible either in the evening or morning due to the nature of its orbital path. As you will remember from the last installment, Venus shares these characteristics with Mercury. The phases of Mercury are not as easy to observe as those of Venus. Galileo tried to see them, but they were beyond the power of his telescope. It was the middle of the seventeenth century before they were observed.

At this particular time Mercury is behind the sun. It will be the first part of November before it slips out of the sun's glare at sunset. The ancients were aware of Mercury's existence. But since it does not possess the magnitude nor the prolonged visibility of the other visible planets it has not been as popular.

We have to this point reviewed four of the five planets that may be seen without the aid of a telescope, Jupiter, Saturn, Venus, and Mercury. Next time we will visit the last one. Mars. This planet has stirred the imagination of people from all walks of life for centuries.

Until then, go out some night and see if you can tell how the sky has changed since summer. We have new constellations dominating the canopy of heaven. In the coming weeks we will explore some of their secrets.

Supernova may have played a role in William Shakespeare's 'Hamlet'

AUSTIN (AP) - A celestial spectacle that dazzled an imaginative boy may have received a role in one of English literature's best-known plays.

The supernova of 1572 may have been what William Shakespeare was describing in Act I of "Hamlet," astronomers at Southwest Texas State University theorize.

"This supernova was so bright, people could see it during the daytime," said Don Olson. "This was a very disturbing sight."

The exploding star was visible for to months in the constellation of Cassiopeia west of Polaris, the North Star, he said. In "Hamlet," guards at Elsinore Confederate Gen. Thomas Castle discuss the possible foreboding of a star burning "westward from the pole."

The research by Olson, his wife and English professor Marilynn Olson and astronomer Russell L. Doescher are discussed in the newly released November issue of Sky & Telescope magazine

For years, Olson has attempted to answer old questions with modern techniques.

New state designs for coins

WASHINGTON (AP) - New quarters minted in 1999 will feature Georgia peaches and a celebrated Connecticut oak tree among the designs that will replace the American eagle on the back of the coins.

Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin gave his final approval to five new images on Thursday. They were submitted by the first five states to ratify the U.S. Constitution: Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia and Connecticut.

Over the next 10 years, all 50 states will get a chance to redesign the tails side of the quarter, under a program approved by Congress earlier this year. A profile of George Washington will remain on the heads side.

"This program will encourage all of us to discover more about our own state and the history of all 50 states," said Rubin.

On its quarter, Delaware chose to honor Revolutionary War figure Caesar Rodney, mounted on a galloping horse. In a ride nearly as famous in its day as Paul Revere's, he raced 80 miles from Dover, the state capital, to Philadelphia in 1776, to cast his vote approving the Declaration of Independence.

The quarter commemorating Pennsylvania shows the allegorical figure Common wealth, whose statue sits atop the state's capitol dome. On the coin, she will be surrounded by an outline of the state's borders, her right hand resting on a keystone, the state symbol. Pennsylvania's motto -"Liberty, Independence, Virtue" also appears.

New Jersey's coin has the words "Crossroads of the Revolution" and shows the scene from the famous Emmanuel Leutze painting of 1851,

A program titled "Project Safe Return" is being initiated by the Office of the State Attorney General in cooperation with local police departments to assist these caregivers and family members.

Information on Alzheimer's patients and others with related dementias who wear a specified form of identification will be accessible on the computer. Thus family members and caregivers can be notified when a patient is lost.

The Pilot Club of Hereford was chartered in August 1984 and has as its main projects, in addition to the Alzheimer's support group, four Lifeline units for low-income residents; a birthday party at each nursing home; two-$500 scholarships and the local Special Olympics.

The Alzheimer's support group is affiliated with the Panhandle Chapter of the Alzheimer's Association and meets at 10 a.m. on the third Thursday of each month at Fellowship of Believers Church.

For most people, the changes are slow, painless and largely untreatable. But not always, which is why it's important to see your eye doctor promptly after any vision change. One form of macular degeneration, the so-called "wet" form, moves faster as fluid leaks from blood vessels in a membrane in the retina. Prompt treatment is needed to save the patient's vision, thought the condition may recur.

Can macular degeneration be prevented? Doctors recommend wearing sunglasses outdoors and avoiding smoking.

New tool measures soil-tilling depth

WASHINGTON (AP) Farmers trying to figure out how deep to till their fields could benefit from a new tool that gauges a field's soil strength. Called a multiple-probe soil cone penetrometer, the tool tells farmers and researchers quickly if plant roots will have a hard time pushing down into the soil.

Agricultural engineer Randy L. Raper, who works at the National Soil Dynamics Laboratory in Auburn, Ala., developed the tool.

Dense, high-strength soil - a condition sometimes caused by heavy agricultural equipment tends to restrict root growth. Loose, low-strength soil, in contrast, allows roots to penetrate downward and reach moisture during summer dry spells.

The device, mounted on a tractor, generates information on an entire row in approximately one minute.

E. coli outbreaks cause concern Safety experts say fruit drinks still safe season arrives in Michigan, food safety experts say the drink is safe if properly prepared.

Michigan, one of the nation's leading apple and apple cider producers, has had no reported outbreaks of illness from a dangerous strain of E. coli bacteria.

Cases in other states prompted the Food and Drug Administration to require warnings on unpasteurized apple cider and apple juice sold to the public. Unpasteurized fruit juices sicken up to 48,000 people each year, and a child died of complications from tainted cider in 1996, the FDA reports.

Pasteurizing the cider, by heating it to at least 160 degrees for six seconds, kills the bacteria, said Les Bourquin, an assistant professor of food science and nutrition at Michigan State University.

Federal inspections of 237 unpasteurized apple cider establishments in 32 states over the past year found no evidence of the bacteria.

The bacteria from animal waste can end up in apple orchards through the use of untreated manure in fertilizer, from waste in runoff or improve sorghum, scientists from droppings from deer or birds, developed the lines by crossing he said Thursday.

The state Department of Agriculture and the Michigan Apple Cider Advisory Committee recommend against using dropped apples in cider and suggest labeling all containers as pasteurized or unpasteurized.

Scientists are looking into new biotechnology procedures to speed up breeding, said Jeff Dahlberg, a sorghum curator with the research service. It now takes five to 10 years to convert tropical sorghum germplasm into plants that will grow in temperate regions.

U.S. farmers prefer sorghum to other grains because of its tolerance to drought and resistance to insects and disease.

Nation's cotton crop suffers after drought, tropical storm onslaught

WASHINGTON (AP) - Cotton production dropped 2 percent this month, due partly to effects of Hurricane Georges and Tropical Storm Earl, the Agriculture Department said today.

The nation's cotton-growing regions had been suffering from drought; the problems were compounded by September's violent weather and heavy rains.

Georgia's cotton production dropped 50,000 bales from last month and Texas' harvested acres declined 250,000 acres.

Hot, dry weather took a toll on soybean production but not enough to affect prices, which rebounded slightly. Soybeans are forecast at a record 2.77 billion bushels, but Those prices are still down from last year when soybeans were about $6.45 a bushel.

Soybean prices could be helped further by a the fact that worldwide production is off 2.5 million metric tons from earlier forecasts.

Yields on early varieties are about at more than a dozen plants for half of normal, said Ron Reimann of T&R Farms near Pasco.

The effects of a poor crop are felt throughout the Columbia Basin.

"Othello is basically a potato town. When the farmers don't spend money, it hurts all the businesses," said Dave Long of Grizzly Farms near Othello. "We are not going to be buying any new equipment because we are not making any money.

Traditionally, Washington's potato commission said.

Jim Ross runs Fox Harvesting in Othello, which loads and unloads trucks for farmers. When potatoes take a dive, so does his business. "The growers are very cost-conscious," he said. "If the yield is down, my volume is down."

Farmers probably will delay repairs on equipment, dropping sales at implement dealers and repair shops, said Rich Mollotte of Evergreen Implement in Othello.

"We absolutely rely on farms to have decent years," Mollotte said. While potato yields are down, growers are turning to another cash crop, sugar beets, to pull them through.

The $100 million Pacific yield is the highest in the world, at Northwest Sugar Co. plant that almost 30 tons per acre, the potato opened last week near Moses Lake will process sugar beets grown on 25,000 acres this year.

Sugar beets are a good rotation crop for potatoes and offer a stable source of income to farmers, said Marvin Price, general manager of the Columbia River Sugar Co., the cooperative that started the plant.

Still, farmers with potatoes in the ground are hoping an early freeze does not wreck the second half of this year's harvest.

Next year could be the industry's acid test, the potato commission's Boss said.

"I don't think shippers and packers can go four straight years with prices really low," he said.

The global recipes making their way on to our-dinner table translate to more varied uses for our food products. Texas beef, chicken, pork, lamb, produce, grains and nuts are all benefiting from the love of new dishes and consumers looking to try something different.

So with that in mind, it doesn't real ly'matter what's your favorite type of food - as long as you're using Texas products to whip it up.

But why pizza?

Kids experience farm tastes

'Knowing all kids love pizza, we explain to them that without farmers, they wouldn't have their favorite food," he said.

About 10,000 children, from preschoolers to 6th graders, visit each year, mostly on field trips. A one-hour guided tour includes a talk about agriculture and how each crop or animal is grown. Afterwards, the children get to see the animals and produce - and eat pizza.

Schmall came up with the idea in 1991 after moonlighting as a guest speaker in area schools talking about agriculture.

When I started this, it was such a different way of looking at farming that people thought I was crazy," he said.

But Schmall found enough believers. He leased a plot of land at the fairgrounds, persuaded farmers,

The master marketer program, sponsored by Texas Agricultural-Extension Service, will be returning to the Panhandle after a three-year absence.

The program enables farmers and ranchers the opportunity to develop a marketing plan, evaluate all their selling alternatives, and gain the skills necessary to execute objectives for profit.

This year's program is geared toward wheat, feed grains, and cattle marketing. It will be offered in a series of 2-day, 1-night sesions.

Registration will be limited to 60 individuals, with a fee of $250 per person. To apply or for more information contact Dennis Newton at 364-3573.

he restaurant was crowded, but we were seated quickly. The young lady who waited on our table was friendly and quick. Our meal was excellent and the service exemplary. We left a generous tip.

My wife and I were traveling in the Southeast on business. The scene I described in the opening paragraph occurred on our first night in this Alabama town. It was a pleasant way to begin our visit in this community.

Three days later after completing our business and enjoying a brief side trip to visit relatives, we returned to the community and the restaurant. Our first visit was so pleasing we decided to enjoy it again.

It was much later in the evening and there were no waiting lines. We were seated about three tables away from our previous visit. However, all similarities end right there. The experience this night was radically different.

Our waiter finally discovered us and took our drink order. It was several minutes before he reappeared with our water and tea. He then skipped off to another table with the promise of a quick return to take our order. It took a several more minutes.

After we placed our order, it took nearly twice as long to receive our food. The waiter explained the delay as required because we ordered our steaks well done. My wife wondered why it had required half the time to cook her steak perfectly the previous visit when the restaurant was very busy.

We had to ask our waiter for silverware. "I'll be right back with that," he said. After a couple of minutes, we flagged another member of the wait staff, who immediately returned with the desired utensils.

Somehow on the second visit, our food didn't taste quite so. good. However, the major difference between the two visits was not in the food, but rather the service. I left a small tip this night, but it was more than enough for the value provided. I'm certain the waiter called us cheapskates.

The Real Contrast

The major element in the contrast was the people factor. In the service industry people make the difference. We noticed several differences in the servers who cared for us. I share them in the hope that our observations may help you move your service up a notch.

The first difference we noted was attitude. The first evening's server was working for us; the second evening's server was working for wages.

The first server was concerned that our every need was anticipated and filled quickly. The second element we noticed was training. I'm certain both servers received the same basic training from this national chain. However, the importance of taking care of the customer made a lasting impression on one and no impressions on the other.

The third element was communication. The first server had polished her speaking and listening skills. She was good at explaining the menu items, suggesting house specialties and listening to our questions. We had her undivided attention. The second server rushed through his lines, then forgot to listen. He was looking around as he wrote down our order. We had to repeat and correct.

The fourth issue was work ethic. The first server hustled to keep water glasses filled, tables cleared and patrons happy. The second was more concerned with having a good visit with his associates.

The loser: server number two and the restaurant. If we had experienced the second server the first night, we would never have returned for a second visit. We would have found another establishment with which to contrast the customer care.

Dear Heloise: I recently had to have my car towed because it would not start. Fortunately, I had a large shopping bag and a few plastic bags from the grocery store in the trunk, so I was able to gather together my belongings (including the garagedoor opener, cell phone, umbrella, flashlight, first-aid kit, extra shoes) from the glove box, cubbyholes and trunk and take those items with me. I didn't want to leave them in the car, which was going to spend the night in the towing company's compound.

Dear Heloise: This past summer my friend Alice was showing me her beautiful garden and I couldn't help noticing a great big ceramic mush-room with flowers all around it. She told me she made it from a birdbath that had a crack in it and would no longer hold water, so she recycled it. She turned the bowl part upside down and painted it brown, adding a few white dots here and there. When placed back on the pedestal upside down, it became a big, cute mush-room for the garden! — Shirley (and Alice), Falmouth, Maine

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/ products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

-- Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

-- Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have a with cotton balls moistened with warm diagnosis of refractory anemia. I understand it is incurable. How are the body's organs affected as the course of the disease becomes more aggressive? — K.W. ANSWER: Refractory, meaning name for this stubborn anemia.

With refractory anemia, the red cell population is depleted, and organs become starved for oxygen. Red cells pick up oxygen from the lungs and deliver it to all body organs and tissues. Weakness and fatigue are the consequences of oxygen deprivation. In a vain attempt to circulate more red cells, the heart often speeds up. Headaches are frequent.

If the production of germ-fighting white cells falters, infections are common. If the platelet population is decimated, bruises can cover the skin. Platelets seal up leaks in blood ves-

Blood transfusions rescue a patient from the doldrums of fatigue. Bone-marrow transplants offer a glimmer of hope for cure. However, the patient's age often precludes marrow transplantation.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: I have suffered from rectal itching for the past four years. What could cause this? I have been referred to a gastroenterologist but have not worked up the courage to go. - M.C. ANSWER: To investigate a food link, eliminate coffee — both regular and decaffeinated — chocolate, cola drinks, citrus fruit, beer and tomatoes. If these foods are responsible, the itch should disappear in one or two weeks.

After each bowel movement, clean cotton balls. Vigorous scrubbing intensifies the itch. Too little scrubbing leaves a residue of undigested food that aggravates itching.

"hard to manage," is an appropriate - the skin can thoroughly dry. Lightly eight miles one day, two miles on dab one percent cortisone cream on the itching skin twice a day.

If this regimen doesn't stop the itch in two weeks, work up the courage to see a gastroenterologist. More serious conditions can cause itching. Psoriasis, yeast infections and a quarter of a mile. Can you give me Bowen's disease — a precancerous condition - might be the source of trouble.

By Suzanne Gill OTVData Features Syndicate

There's more than geography separating the McCallister family of New York's Hell's Kitchen and the Connolly clan of Hawaii, as viewers will see when two new dramas, the meaty Trinity and the fluffy Wind on Water, debut this week on NBC

Trinity, about the tensions and troubles of five grown Irish-Catholic siblings, premieres Friday, Oct. 16. The ensemble cast is headed by Tate Donovan as Kevin, a priest.

Also starring are Bonnie Root as Amanda, a schoolteacher: Charlotte Ross as Fiona, a stockbroker; Sam Trammell as Liam, a hustling union organizer; Justin Louis as Bobby, a police officer; and Kim Raver as Bobby's wife, Clarissa. Jill Clayburgh and John Spencer make occasional appearances as parents Eileen and Simon.

Acknowledging the glut of Irish-American characters on the tube today, executive producer John Wells, who shepherded the hit series ER for the past few years, is philosophical.

"You're always going to find (producers coming) up with the same general notion at the same time," he says. "We're all looking at the same group of market indicators, trying to find something that will fit into that in an interesting way.

In Trinity, Wells says he wants to capture "the basic conflict and dynamic which is driving the American family. I think an Irish family, because of the influence of the church, and a heritage which requires that you remain close, is a good place to examine that tension."

Series creator Matthew McNair Carnahan purposely gave the characters careers that would generate differing points of view and shifting allegiances.

"I really wanted to pit as diverse a group against or with one another as possible ... and (yet) ultimately express that they're family," Carnahan savs.

That's a lot to bite off, and the Trinity pilot is an overburdened hour. NBC has not succeeded with a family-centered melodrama in recent years, and the expanding Dateline franchise has left few time slots unclaimed.

"My assumption is the show will get off to a slow start," Wells says, conceding the target audience on Fridays is "a group of people who plan to go out but never quite make it.

For those still on the couch 24 hours later, there's Wind on Water, debuting. Saturday, Sept. 17.

Six time zones from New York, the Connollys of Hawaii try to hold onto their piece of paradise. Concocted by soft-porn impresario Zalman King and professional surfer Matt George, the coming-of-age drama is long on looks, with Bo Derek as an unmatronly mother. William Gregory Lee and Brian Gross play her sons, extreme-sports gladiators who spend much of the pilot engaged in a chest-thumping surf contest with a local rival (Shawn Christian).

Lee Horsley (Matt Houston) is wasted in his first bad-guy role, as a landgrabbing snake of a neighbor. Jacinda Barrett, who broke into show business. on MTV's The Real World, plays his turncoat daughter.

More conversation piece than story, Wind on Water should have been billed as a limited series, for that's just what it will be: an eye-dazzling Hawaiian vacation of six weeks ... or shorter

Leo plays an important role.

ARIES - March 21/April 20

You have to be patient when it comes to a financial situation. Forcing a decision from those involved only will make you look bad. You just have to wait it out. An old friend needs a favor from you. Try to be helpful, but don't inconvenience yourself; it's not worth it in this case.

TAURUS – April 21/May 21 Work hard and play hard this week, Taurus, and don't let your temper get the best of you. Enjoy yourself. Don't let minor annoyances bother you. In the grand scheme of things, they're not that important. That special someone takes you out for a night on the town late in the week. Have a good time. You deserve it.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21 Don't let a business associate spoil your good mood. He or she is just frustrated with work; don't take what he or she says personally. Things are going well for you professionally — focus on that. Romance is in the air late in the week when you meet an interesting person while out with friends. Don't leave without a phone number.

CANCER - June 22/July 22 A close friend confides in you about a personal matter. Be sympathetic and supportive. Most importantly, keep his or her confidence. Don't tell anyone else about the conversation. The person whom you've been seeing has to go out of town. Don't worry he or she isn't going to forget about you.

LEO – July 23/August 23 When it comes to your career, keep your vanity in check early in the week, Leo. You have to be a team player to make it through a difficult situation at work. The higher-ups are watching you. A loved one needs your help planning a family outing. Say yes, because it's sure to be a lot of fun.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22 When it comes to meeting new people, be careful about whom you confide in. Someone who seems nice really isn't trustworthy. A loved one sets you up on a blind date. Don't be nervous. This one actually will work out. You'll have a good time and make a close friend.

LIBRA – Sept 23/Oct 23 You can't avoid it any longer. You have to make a decision about a personal matter early in the week. Putting it off only has made you more confused. If you think about what you want and examine your options, you'll make a sound choice.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22 Your friends have a lot going on in their lives, and they want you to help them straighten things out. Don't do it. You have too many of your own problems to worry about. Take some time for yourself, and clear your mind. This will help you get things done. Your friends will understand and support your decision.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21 Stand tall when an acquaintance tries to blame you for his or her mistake. Remain calm, and explain what happened. People will be on your side. That special someone surprises you with a romantic gift. Let him or her know how much you appreciate it. Taurus plays a key role this week.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20 You have a lot to do this week, Capricorn. Staying focused is the only way that you'll get it all finished. Don't let a loved one distract you. Late in the week, you see a close friend in a new light. Could he or she be the one for you? Don't rule out the possibility just yet! AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18 You're on your own early in the week. Aquarius, and that's just the way you like it. You get a lot accomplished and finally can think about yourself for a while. Splurge a little. Do something that you've always wanted to do, but never had the time for. This is your time to shine.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20 You have a tough week ahead of you, but your sense of humor will get you through it easily. Just look at the Garbed in a new outfit, Seven of Nine (Jeri Ryan) continues to inspire unique story lines in Star Trek: Voyager. The sci-fi series' fifth season premieres Wednesday on UPN.

Holodeck high jinks, Borg baby American Amazing in new season of Voyager

By Cynthia Werthamer ©TVData Features Syndicate

Star Trek: Voyager is upping the stakes as its fifth season launches Wednesday, Oct. 14, on UPN

The popular sci-fi series promises a more cinematic tone and a deepening of crew relationships as the 24th-century starship struggles to find its way back to the Alpha Quadrant.

Voyager, the third series to be based on Gene Roddenberry's original Star Trek, chronicles the adventures of the U.S.S. Voyager led by Capt. Kathryn Janeway (Kate Mulgrew).

In keeping with Roddenberry's initial goals, this Star Trek crew also places priority on the "prime directive": not interfering with the integrity of the life forms they encounter. However, in the season premiere, Voyager meets a new species that won't survive without the crew's intervention.

Co-executive producer Brannon Braga says this season is going to be an interesting one. No new permanent characters will be created, but last year's addition of the Borg-turned-human, Seven of Nine (Jeri Ryan), continues to generate interest and plot twists. In an upcoming episode, a mysterious fusion of her Borg nanoprobe technology and the Doctor's (Robert Picardo) mobile emitter creates a male Borg drone who awaits instruction from the insidious Borg Collective.

The season also marks the debut of The Adventures of Captain Proton, Tom Paris' (Robert Duncan McNeill) retroholodeck program that fashions him as a space hero from the 1930s.

"We'll have one whole Captain Proton story, which means the whole episode will be in black and white, our science-fiction equivalent of Scream in the horror picture genre," Braga says. "Every sci-fi cliche is imminent

The show's writers "continually want to keep the audience on their toes," he continues, "so every week is something new and fresh, expansive and ambitious.

Countering persistent rumors, Braga says he "highly doubts" this season will finally bring Voyager home, thus ending the series. But maintaining an edge of mystery, he adds, "We've certainly talked more about it this season than earlier. No decision has been made.'

Landing roles is child's play for Stabile

By Candace Havens oTVData Features Syndicate

There is life beyond soaps, and Nick Stabile (ex-Mark, Sunset Beach) is making the most of it.

Fans were outraged when Stabile's character, Mark, was murdered on SB, but in the actor's mind it was time to move on.

"I had only planned to stay for a year," Stabile says. "Immediately after I left, I started the audition process again."

His determination paid off. After only a few months of auditioning, he garnered a three-picture deal. Stabile stars in the new film Bride of Chucky, which opens Friday, Oct. 16.

Stabile says working on the set was fun, and that the quality of the film is better than the title might imply.

"We aren't talking Schindler's List here, but the production quality is phenomenal," Stabile says. "The colors are so rich and the camera shots aren't what you would expect. We also have a really great cast with Jennifer Tilly and John Ritter. There are parts that are really over the top, and some of it is very gory. But it all works. I think people will be surprised." But Stabile also seeks other challenges. "I want to do some quality television and independent films for a while," he says.

As for returning to daytime, Stabile says he has no plans, "but if (SB executive producer) Aaron Spelling called and wanted me to come back as the ghost of Mark, I'd do it for a couple of days.

A: Days issued a press release stating that it had never entertained the idea of hiring Lewinsky. If the former White House intern were to turn up on a soap, it would probably cost more than $40,000. She's currently looking at million-dollar book deals.
