Looking ahead

'Schools are improving facilities, the city has made improvements like the aquatic center and there is an effort toward improving medical facilities.'

- Hereford Mayor Bob Josserrand

In centennial year, city officials move toward next 100

By GEORGIA TYLER
The Hereford Brand

As the bloom fades on the celebration of the first 100 years of Hereford, city officials are moving to the next 100 by addressing issues confronting the community.

And, the overriding concern about the future is centered on economics.

The other side of the coin is the pride in accomplishment as Hereford has ridden an economic roller coaster in the past.

Looking to the future, whether 100 years from now, or next year, Mayor Bob Josserrand believes the city must be on the leading edge in providing a quality of life that will help business and industry choose Hereford for expansion and/or development.

"Schools are improving facilities, the city has made improvements like the aquatic center and there is an effort toward improving medical facilities," Josserrand said.

While the city's wastewater treatment plant has been the object of some good news in the recent past, other services must be addressed, observed City Manager Chester Nolen.

"The treatment plant has been permitted until 2000, without extensive renovations, he said.

As the city continues to truck garbage to landfills outside Deaf Smith County, a transfer station is being constructed on the site of the former incinerator. Cost will be minimized by use of city labor for the project.

Still facing the city is rehabilitation of water and sewer lines in older parts of Hereford, Nolen pointed out. A survey has identified 11 miles of lines that eventually will require replacement.

Josserrand, Nolen and other city officials recognize the human element that will affect economic growth in the future of the community.

Commissioner Carey Black, who has lived here most of his life, hopes that Hereford will be a "place that would offer the same opportunity to my kids as there was for me."

He believes that the generation of 30- and 40-something residents "must step up" to leadership.

"We've relied on our parents," he declared. "It's time for us to get busy."

In light of recent setbacks in the economic climate -- changes in Holly Sugar operations and reductions at Arrowhead Mills and Frito-Lay -- the community has managed to be relatively stable, as seen in some economic indicators.

The most recent report on the unemployment rate in Deaf Smith County, for July, showed 8 percent of the work force unemployed. At the same time in 1997, the figure was 7.8 percent.

Nolen fears the job losses may mean an exodus by workers to other locations.

One measure of a community's economic health is the dollar amount of building permits issued by the city.

Again, the statistics appear to indicate Hereford is trying to hold its own. For the first eight months of 1998, value of permits is pegged at $2.5 million.

In the same eight months of 1997, the figure was $2.2 million, according to city records.

Morale in Hereford and Deaf Smith County "may be better than we have a right to expect," said one city official.

Privately, officials are afraid a "poor me" attitude that was pervasive in the early 1990s may rear its ugly head.

City Attorney Terry Langehenig said that "people are more optimistic" now than they were in those days.

City Commissioner Roger Eades wants the "brain drain" of young people to be stemmed. "We can't stand still, we have to find a way to get our kids back home after they've been to college."

Another commissioner, Wayne Winget, believes it's important for the area to "build on what we have." He agrees with Josserrand that new industry and business may be predicated on the agriculture that already is in place.

Water always will be in the forefront of concerns and Commissioner Tom Coneway sees development of water resources as a major priority for the future.

Winget echoes Coneway, but adds that the existence of the Santa Rosa Aquifer, in addition to the Ogalalla

'We've relied on our parents. It's time for us to get busy.'

Aquifer, gives Hereford and Deaf Smith County a leg up on other communities.

There's no argument about the need for economic development with Commissioner Angie Alonzo who has

Cantus love to get out on open road

"Keep your motor running, Out on the highway ..."

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

Well, the theme song for the '60s' cult movie "Easy Rider" about two bikers who drifted across the country might not fit Jesse and Vel Cantu, but the Hereford couple do enjoy getting out on the highway on their motorcycles.

For the Cantus, biking is an adventure in itself, a way to see other places, meet new people and do something as a family.

Last weekend, Jesse and Vel were in Ruidoso for a biker rally, and the family -- Jesse, Vel, their five children and 12 grandchildren -- is working out the logistics for next year's vacation, which will be a trip to Sturgis, S.D., for the oldest and biggest of all of the motorcycle enthusiasts' rallies. For about 50 years, bikers from all over the nation have gathered in the small Black Hills town, swelling its population to about 100,000, to swap tales, renew acquaintances and just share their love of motorcycles.

Bikers like the Cantus are a far cry from the outlaw Hell's Angels generally depicted in the movies; most bikers are family people who just enjoy being around other people with the same interests.

"I've had motorcycles for about 28 years now," Jesse said. "I started out with a 350 Kawasaki. I've had seven or eight motorcycles that I've been through."

Mayor garners 'Spur'

LUBBOCK - Bob Josserrand was recognized by his peers Friday night when he received the National Golden Spur Award.

The Hereford mayor, who as chairman of AZTX Cattle Co. runs the nation's fifth-largest cattle-feeding operation, was named recipient of the honor during the Ranching Heritage Association's annual awards banquet and prairie party program at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

The award was first presented in 1977 by the association to honor an individual's lifetime achievements in the ranching and livestock industry.

In his acceptance, Josserrand noted the award was bestowed upon him by his peers, which was important to him.

Focus on the city

With the Amarillo-based Campfire Girls returning the Campfire Hut to the City of Hereford, we would like the input of the citizens of Hereford as to the proper use of this very fine facility. For those of you not familiar with the facility, it is located on the southeast corner of Langley Park and has been used over the years since its construction for Campfire Girl activities.

It is comprised of several rooms, one of which is quite large and would make an excellent meeting room. It is also equipped with a full kitchen. Your City Commission has visited the site and has some thoughts for its use, but the commissioners would really like input from the citizens of Hereford as to its highest and best use.

If you would please contact any member of the City Commission and/or the city manager or city secretary with your suggestions within the next two-week period, it would be very much appreciated. This is a great facility that needs to be incorporated and used by the citizens of Hereford.

Another item of interest for our people would be a comparison of Hereford's water and sewer charges versus communities in this area and state-wide. The state-wide average fee for residential water, basis 5,000 gallons, is $15.15. For cities in the 10,001-15,000 population range, the average is $15.27. Hereford's water rate is $11; Canyon, $11.85; Dumas, $36; Borger, $15.40; Plainview, $13.45; and Levelland, $13.44. As you can see, Hereford water still remains a bargain for our people.

With regard to residential sewer costs, again based on a 5,000 gallon minimum, the average for all cities in the State of Texas is $13.90, while the average for cities in the 10,001-15,000 population bracket is $13.36. Hereford's charge is $7.21; Canyon, $7.50; Dumas, $12; Borger, $18.75; Plainview, $8.20; and Levelland $7.71. Hereford certainly stacks up very well on its sewer charges.

If you did not have a chance to see the enjoyment of almost 300 children at the recent Kidfish Day, you missed a great opportunity. Certainly the Kidfish program which your City has initiated for the children both in the spring and fall is, to me, one of the outstanding recreational and educational opportunities for our children. It is indeed a great time not only for the children fishermen but also for all of those spectators. Put it on your calendar to make sure that next spring you give yourself the pleasure of watching all those happy young faces.

Finally, a couple notes of congratulations: To Roland Saul, our district attorney, on his selection as the outstanding district attorney in the entire State of Texas. Way to go, Roland! And to all of those who took so many hours and days out of their busy schedules to serve on the Community Health Improvement Partnership (CHIP). You citizens have made a difference in Deaf Smith County and Hereford and certainly you have provided leadership for our health care concerns. All of our citizens need to become involved as their hospital board moves forward in solving our health-related problems. Thanks again for all the time you have given to our citizens.

As always, if you have questions, suggestions or concerns, please do not hesitate to contact me.

Bob Josserrand is mayor of Hereford.

Hummingbirds like Panhandle

Special to The Brand
CANYON - Panhandle communities serve as islands of habitats for migrating hummingbirds, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD).

"In most years, species of wildflowers that are attractive to hummingbirds are in short supply in the Panhandle, especially during the late summer-fall migrating period," said Jim Ray, migratory bird/wetlands biologist for the High and Rolling Plains. "Migrating hummingbirds, therefore, rely on various ornamental and native flowers found in our residential areas."
The hummingbird migration is under way and the birds have been visiting Panhandle neighborhoods since mid-June.

"All four of the Panhandle's common migrant species - black-chinned, broad-tailed, calliope and rufous - have been observed," Ray said. "Only one species, the black-chinned hummingbird, is known to nest in the Panhandle. The others are fairly common during the fall migration, which will peak in September and continue into November."

Kevin Mote, TPWD nongame/T&E biologist for the Panhandle, is impressed by the number of different hummingbird species found in the Panhandle.

"Where I come from (Oklahoma), you could expect to see 10-15 (ruby-throated hummingbirds) at a hummingbird feeder, but not the diversity of species you can see in a single day in the Panhandle," Mote said.

Ray and Mote agree hummingbirds can be best attracted to Panhandle yards by a combination of artificial feeders and flowering plants. Ray said enthusiasts should initially strive for plants with red or orange tubular flowers, but will quickly notice birds will utilize flowers of various colors and shapes.

"Hummingbirds especially love the red species and varieties of columbines, salvias and penstemons. However, if I were to prescribe just four species of plants for hummingbirds in the Panhandle, it would be coral or red varieties of trumpet honeysuckle (a perennial), cardinal climber (an annual vine), Scarlet sage (an annual in the Panhandle) and red varieties of Autumn sage (a perennial). Potentially, depending on the timing and severity of frosts, these plants collectively provide attractive blooms for the entire hummingbird season, which, when considering breeding birds and migrants, lasts from late March through November," Mote said.

For more information on hummingbirds or backyard habitats, contact the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department at P.O. Box 659, Canyon 79015.

Gulf Coast waits arrival of Georges

By The Associated Press
After clobbering the Florida Keys with drenching rain and destructive winds, Hurricane Georges gathered energy in the Gulf of Mexico today and took aim at its next target.

Georges, which killed more than 300 people as it churned through the Caribbean, was heading for the Gulf Coast somewhere between St. Marks in the Florida Panhandle and Morgan City, La., southwest of New Orleans.

Elsewhere across the Southeast, most areas were expected to be dry until rain and thunderstorms move inland in parts of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida at night.

In the Northeast, a surge of unusually warm air should bring highs in the 80s to many locations.

received this award previously, I'm not sure that I am worthy of receiving any comparison to them, but I am very proud to have received it," Josserrand said.

Josserrand got his start in the livestock industry early on, learning from his father, a farmer and cattle buyer in Kansas. By the time Josserrand graduated from high school, Josserrand had built up his own cattle herd.

After working his way up to president of AZL Cattle Co., Josserrand and a group of partners bought out the company, which was renamed AZTX Cattle Co. AZTX is based in Hereford.

State Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, served as the host for the awards program. In his remarks, Bivins lauded Josserrand as "the kind of man who believes that every one of us in the industry can make a difference, and he proves that every day by his willingness to work on all manner of national and state boards."

Josserrand noted the cattle industry is going through tough times, citing a $3 billion loss in equity in recent years.

The cattle industry has been hit by the Asian currency crisis, which has had an adverse effect on U.S. beef exports.

Also, Josserrand said the cattle industry has felt the pinch of an oversupply of meat generated by the pork, poultry and beef producers.

Other honors Josserrand has received include "Man of the Year" in Southwest agriculture, presented in 1991 by Progressive Farmer magazine; Hereford Citizen of the Year, 1995; and International Stockmen's Hall of Fame inductee, 1993.

CAIN CANTU, grandson of Jesse and Vel Cantu, may be getting the motorcycle bug. If he does, it's just in the genes. His grandparents are biking enthusiasts.

PROFILE

Now, the Cantus have five bikes, three Hondas and two Harleys, but Jesse said, "I love motorcycles of all kinds. I guess I'd rather drive the Honda, but I'm infatuated by all types."

Jesse said he first became a motorcycle enthusiast when he was a child in the Rio Grande Valley.

Irrigation is a way of life for Valley agriculture and a web of irrigation pipes and equipment spread out across the vast farms. Workers who checked the irrigation equipment used motorcycles to follow the lines during their inspections.

"I used to wait and watch for them. I really wanted to ride them. I never dreamed my kids would grow up and like them, too," he said.

"When we (Vel and Jesse) were younger, she'd ride beside me. She doesn't ride as much now, but she still does use one of the smaller machines," Jesse said.

"We've been to quite a few rallies (like the one in Ruidoso). Most of the people there are family people. The Harley people really go out of their way to be nice," Jesse said, noting the bad reputation that had been spawned by motorcycle movies like "The Wild Ones," which launched the careers of Marlon Brando and Lee Marvin, is probably one reason why the Harley-lovers do go out of their way to be nice. "Honda people," he laughed, "Honda people always were nice people."

Vel agreed, saying "They (bikers) may look mean sometimes, but they're the greatest people you'll ever meet."

One of the biggest dangers that bikers face on the open road are automobiles and trucks, but Jesse said his family have found motorists to be very considerate of them.

"Most of the auto drivers, from four wheels to 18 wheels, have been very careful, especially for the younger bikers - and that's something we really appreciate," he said. "I just want the auto drivers to know we bikers appreciate it."

In 1967, the Raymondville native moved to Deaf Smith County, where he farmed. He remained as an agricultural worker until 1975, when he moved to town and held a variety of jobs, most recently for a metal fabrication company. Since mid-June, he's been in charge of maintenance at the YMCA.

"I'm loving it (YMCA job) every minute. I get to see a lot of people there, really wonderful people," he said.

Vel drives a school bus for the Hereford Independent School District, a job she's held for about 27 years.

But, although Jesse and Vel love their jobs, they look forward to the weekends when they put on their leather gear and helmets and hit the open road on their motorcycles.

a deep-seated wish for Hereford to experience an increase in business. She dittoes the need to bring young people back home after they go to college.

Along the same vein, City Secretary Terri Johnson observes that the need for younger persons is obvious as an "aging workforce" grows in number.

As the city copes with real or imagined problems that may arise in the next century, the here and now is uppermost in the minds of some.

Josserand fears drought and low commodity prices will run some residents to other cities. But, he is convinced that Hereford has a valuable asset in available water.

"There may be communities south of us that will dry up because they haven't access to the aquifers we have," he declared.

Eades is hopeful that future economic opportunities will be developed as a result of the half-cent sales tax collected here. He said residents expected an overnight change would be turned when the tax was voted.

"We have to secure industry related to agriculture but so far, we've not seen changes," he added.

While city officials wrestle with the future, they have strong allies in other quarters.

County Judge Tom Simons, for instance, is in total agreement on the oft-mentioned need to bring young educated persons home. He recognizes, though, that there must be some lure that will accomplish that end.

"We have to give them something to latch onto," he noted.

Steve Bartels, finance manager for the City of Hereford, wishes for a big problem, saying, "I wish we had too much growth."

From his perspective, funding for city operations will be improved with a stable tax base.

A community with a multi-ethnic population has problems associated with differences in cultures living side by side, officials admit.

Since he was elected mayor more than five years ago, Josserand has worked tirelessly to bring together the Hispanic and Anglo populations.

"I can't count the meetings I've had with Hispanic groups and leaders," he explained. Progress in relations has been in baby steps, he admitted.

Josserand and Simons are on the same track as they seek to bring together the ethnic elements of the community.

"I think blending the relationships of the ethnic groups is critical," Simons said.

And, Josserand said, "If I could have one wish, it would be that somehow we would find a way to integrate the Hispanic and Anglo communities for the overall improvement of Hereford."

That feller on Tierra Blanca Creek says if at first you don't succeed - skydiving is probably not for you.

Did you hear about the teacher who retired and lost all her principals?

"As a child, my family's menu consisted of two choices: take it or leave it."

I noticed a photo and engagement announcement in a newspaper the other day and thought of Sue Coleman, longtime women's editor for The Brand. Sue was a fixture at the paper when I came in 1972. She was set in her ways about engagement and wedding stories and pictures. Until sometime in the '70s, newspapers style was to use only the woman in a photo with the engagement story. Sue was slow to change. She rejected photos that included the groom-to-be. She finally relented to the change, but still had problems where a couple was embracing.

What brought this to mind was a photo we saw of a couple, not only embracing but with the man attired in a sheer tee shirt that revealed his ample upper-body muscular physique. Sue would have had problems with that one! Incidentally, we heard recently that Sue was doing well in a Fort Worth nursing home. We send her our best regards.

Among the interesting articles in our Hereford Centennial edition was an interview with Benny Womble about the early days in Hereford. To set the facts straight with some old-timers, Womble asked us to make a correction in that story on the name of the miller at Packard Mill. It was Harry Danforth, not Frank Gyles. Here's how the paragraph read, with Danforth's name inserted:

"In about 1930 or '31," recalled Womble, "wheat just brought about 25 cents a bushel. Rather than destroy it, Dad made a trade with a local miller, Harry Danforth, down at Packard Mill. Troy Womble hauled his wheat to the mill and Danforth milled it into flour and sacked it free of charge. Then the three boys, Dad and I delivered it all over town to be given away to widows."

Remember the highly-publicized law suit that resulted from someone claiming a burn injury after spilling hot McDonald's coffee? That apparently caught the attention of many service businesses and manufacturers, and they've responded with some packaging instructions that appear stupid to anyone with any degree of common sense. Outrage? Republicans wait in vain

WASHINGTON (AP) - Through tarnished presidential campaigns, government shutdowns, illegal Democratic fund raising and now a sex scandal, Republicans have waited for public outrage to overtake President Clinton.

They're still waiting. The polls are tilting Clinton's way - politically, not personally - despite the lurid details of his sexual liaisons with Monica Lewinsky, the improper intimacies he'd denied until prosecutors got him under oath.

The broadcast of his videotaped grand jury testimony and the mountain of transcripts issued at the same time by the House Judiciary Committee were said by his critics to be the documentation that would convince Americans of impeachable offenses. But most people didn't want them released; they'd had enough.

Richard M. Nixon said in his memoirs that in the Watergate tapes, "I was in the position of telling the American people things that they did not want to know."

That seems to be the mood now about Clinton's sexual misconduct.

Democrats are making the most of it. Sen. Tom Daschle, the minority leader, said the polls show that Americans want the case resolved. "I think they're tired of it," he said.

Three days after Clinton's videotaped testimony and transcripts of Ms. Lewinsky's testimony were made public, the pollsters found more people wanted Clinton to stay in office than before, even though most of them thought he'd lied under oath. His job approval rating went up, not down.

Clinton's political escape artistry has frustrated his opponents from the start. And overreactions stirred by those frustrations have helped him before.

The Republican-controlled House voted with only minority dissent to make prosecutor Kenneth Starr's impeachment report against the president public. But party lines hardened when the Republican-controlled House Judiciary Committee then ordered the release of 3,183 pages of supporting documents, and the 4 hour, 12 minute videotape of Clinton's Aug. 17 grand jury testimony.

The tape showed an evasive Clinton. But there were no outbursts of temper, as the leaked previews had indicated. Nor were there new disclosures or open-and-shut evidence of Starr's allegations - all of which served Clinton's purposes.

Ironically so. Nothing new was needed to prove the president's sexual misconduct in the White House; he'd admitted intimate contact which he refused to describe in detail. Ms. Lewinsky did that in her testimony. And Clinton's lies are a matter of record; his argument is that they were not perjury because of the careful wording of his sworn denial on Jan. 17.

The White House and congressional Democrats said the Republicans' real aim in releasing the Starr documents in all their salacious detail was to embarrass the president. They said it was unfair partisan politics.

TV: It's a risqué business

DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE

The Real World

I've seen the first round of the 1998 fall television lineup and I must say the networks must have received early previews of the Lewinsky-Clinton tapes and based their programming on the most lewd and risqué confessions.

Maybe I expect too much for something that is supposed to be entertainment. What I've seen so far doesn't come anywhere close to my idea of amusement.

I don't watch a lot of TV, but this week I made an exception - just to see if there would be anything worth watching. I didn't like what I saw, and I know I don't want my kids watching it.

On Monday, for instance, one family show had a 12-year-old girl asking a retired neighbor about making babies. Another show portrayed a news broadcaster interviewing a 102-year-old woman, who displayed her bosoms, while her younger sister made suggestive remarks to the broadcaster.

Can someone tell me where the humor is supposed to be? I think I missed it!

Tuesday presented a family moving into a neighborhood and making a mockery of decent neighbors and I won't even discuss "Sex with Cindy Crawford." "JAG" may be Tuesday's saving grace. At least it's not horribly violent and any sexual connotations are left strictly to the viewer's imagination.

Boy, am I glad we go to church on Wednesdays. I don't want to even turn the television on to watch the wonders and sexual escapades of two different groups of spoiled little rich kids who are supposed to be finding out about adult life.

Thursday has "Diagnosis Murder," which despite the title, has very little blood and gore and usually makes a pretty good show.

I think we will find something else to do on Friday. The tube will stay off.

I suppose viewers who enjoy flights of fancy will probably enjoy Saturdays with a return to an island paradise where dreams come true, or a do-gooder barber who gets tomorrow's paper today so he can prevent a tragedy.

Or, they can sit back and relax as an L.A. detective of oriental descent and a bearded Texas Ranger of Cherokee lineage beat the tar out of all the bad guys.

Next week we're in for Round Two. Boy, I can hardly wait!

If these are prime examples of what most Americans want to see, then I can certainly understand why we have 10-year-olds raping and killing 3-year-olds and why 15-year-olds are taking arsenals to school and shooting up the cafeteria.

I'm not stupid, and I don't believe kids are dumb enough to model real life after something they see on TV.

But, with the violence and sexually explicit innuendo so readily accepted by the public, why shouldn't we expect such horrors from our kids? This week, teens saw a well-to-do 14-year-old seek medical advice from a doctor. She didn't want the doctor telling her parents she was pregnant. Sound familiar? It should, we've heard it often enough.

It's been said art imitates life. There is absolutely nothing funny or artistic about most of the shows making their premiere.

Looking back over 30-something years worth of television, I can't believe how it's changed.

Can anyone else not imagine Marshal Dillon taking certain liberties with Miss Kitty? Or, just imagine Rob and Laura or Lucy and Ricky escaping their company for a quickie on their identical twin beds.

There is a parallel here, people. If we continue to accept acts of immorality in the form of amusement, we're going to see more life imitating art.

Some things need to stay behind closed doors - like the sexual activities of two adults, married to each other.

Vows and pledges need to be honored - like the vow to be faithful and true to your spouse.

If an event can be laughed at, it will be accepted as a norm.

Send the networks a message, turn off the TV, don't accept the unacceptable as a norm, and let them know we are ready for real humor, real drama and real information.

Hereford still needs a good, friendly neighborhood pub

Hereford still needs a good pub. One of the first things I noticed after moving to Hereford a little more than a year ago is the lack of a good neighborhood pub.

I'm not talking about those bars where the jukebox is cranked up so high you can't think, much less talk, or one of those "fern bars" where everyone spends most of the time posturing.

No, I'm talking about one of those neighborhood pubs, like you find in Europe or in the large cities, where people congregate and just spend an evening talking and getting to know each other.

When Annette and I lived in Springfield, Mo., we used to walk the two or three blocks from home to W.F. Cody's Bar & Grill, where we often had a supper of fried mushrooms and just relaxed with the other people in the neighborhood who liked to unwind there.

In Corpus Christi, we lived within a few blocks of the Cantina Santa Fe and Cooper's Alley (named for the street, not me), where residents of the neighborhood could congregate and swap tales. Cantina Santa Fe also had free popcorn and occasionally a local musician would stop in to perform acoustic sets.

Grand Junction, Colo., had a couple of good pubs within walking distance of our house. Both of these were quiet places where people could gather and just get to know each other, developing a sense of community.

Even in tiny Daingerfield, where we lived before moving to Hereford, the Iron Bluff Saloon was a gathering place, even drawing some members of the city council after contentious meetings.

A good pub is not just a place where people sit and drink; a good pub is a place where people can relax, learn who their neighbors are, and become a community.

DEMOCRATS vs. REPUBLICANS

There have been thousands of columns published in newspapers pointing differences between Democrats and Republicans, but I think I've spotted on big difference no one's ever written about in any newspaper or magazine.

Folders.

Yep, folders - those little things that candidates use for press kits. These folders always have a couple of pockets in which are stuffed issue papers, campaign photographs, brochures, bumper stickers and biographical sketches.

I don't know how many of these press kits I've received from both Democratic and Republican candidates since the Texas filing season opened back before the March primary elections. But I do know

I've made good use of them, converting them into my own file folders.

Here's the difference I've noticed between Democrats and Republicans: Democrats use cheap ones that tear when you try to peel the candidate's name off the front of the folder; Republicans use slick, heavy stock ones that don't tear when you peel the candidate's name off the front.

It's not a big difference, I know, but it is significant when you're trying to recycle these folders.

This probably also shows a big difference between the editor of The Hereford Brand and The Dallas Morning News. I bet the Morning News editor doesn't spend time peeling a candidate's label off the front of a folder; he probably just chunks them in the trash can and just goes to an office supply store and buys new slick folders when he needs them.

REAL STORY OF CREATION

(This was e-mailed to me by Virginia Artho of Hereford.)

God created the mule and told him, "You will be Mule, working constantly from dusk to dawn, carrying heavy loads on your back. You will eat grass and you lack intelligence. You will live 50 years."

The mule answered, "To live like this for 50 years is too much. Please, give me no more than 20." And, it was so.

Then God created the dog and told him, "You are Dog. You will hold vigilance over the dwellings of Man. To him you will be his greatest companion. You will eat his table scraps and live for 25 years."

The dog responded, "Lord, to live 25 years as a dog is too much. Please, no more than 10 years." And, it was so.

God then created the monkey and told him, "You are Monkey. You shall swing from tree to tree, acting like an idiot. You will be funny, and you will live for 20 years."

The monkey replied, "Lord, to live 20 years as the clown of the world is too much. Please, Lord, give me no more than 10 years." And, it was so.

Finally, God created Man and told him, "You are Man, the only rational being that walks the Earth. You will use your intelligence to have mastery over the creatures of the world. You will dominate the Earth and live for 20 years."

The man responded, "Lord, to be Man for only 20 years is too little. Lord, give me the 20 years the mule refused, the 15 years the dog refused and the 10 years the monkey rejected." And, it was so.

So God made Man to live 20 years as a man, then marry and live 20 years like a mule, working and carrying heavy loads on his back. Then, Man is to have children and live 15 years as a dog, guarding his house and eating the leftovers after they empty the pantry. Then, in his old age, to live 10 years as a monkey, acting like a clown to amuse his grandchildren.

Dark days

Clinton faithful in Texas refuse to cut and run

HOUSTON (AP) - These are the dark days for the Clinton faithful like Glenda Boverie. The president she believed in has been pilloried nonstop on television and in print since he reluctantly admitted to a relationship with a White House intern.

Yes, she's said, she's disappointed in President Clinton. But now's not the time to cut and run.

"I didn't vote for him to be first husband or first daddy," the Lubbock high school teacher said with a sigh. "I voted for him to be president."

Actually, her support has gone beyond her vote.

With a $100 check and faith that her causes were his causes, she became one of 452 Texans who contributed $56,160.59 to Clinton's legal defense fund earlier this year.

Now that independent counsel Kenneth Starr's report reveals a story different from the one Clinton presented eight months ago, do any contributors regret their choice in philanthropic causes? Yes, and no.

"He's debased the office," said L. Michael Proter, a Houston businessman who gave $25. "I should think the right thing to do is apologize correctly to all concerned and then ... let it be known that he's resigning with the condition that then President Gore is going to pardon him from any charges."

"I don't want to say anything on the record," said one, explaining: "We're rather distressed."

Others, however, like 80-year-old Bob Hines of Marshall, are determined to ride out the storm with the nation's chief executive.

"He's the best president this country ever had," declared Hines, pastor of the New Bethel Baptist Church in Marshall, who gladly threw in $200 because he credits Clinton with reducing the national debt. "All he has to do is make peace with his wife and the Lord."

"This other mess they got, that doesn't have a thing to do with him running the country," he said, adding that because of what he's seen so far in the Starr investigation, he may contribute more money.

The Clinton Legal Expense Trust was set up in late February, five weeks after Starr started his inquiry into allegations about Clinton and former White House intern Monica Lewinsky. So far it has raised $2.2 million, trustees have reported.

The average Texas contribution to the fund, as of June 30, was $124.25. The highest was $10,000; the lowest, $2.

The next report about contributions is expected in 1999. The Clintons' personal legal bills are estimated at $6 million and could balloon to $10 million.

In Amarillo, investor Robert Green said he's not about to give up on Clinton, whose economic policies persuaded him to vote for a Democrat for president for the first time in 1992, and this year swayed him to give $10,000 to the Clinton legal defense fund.

"As Ronnie used to say, 'Are you better off than you were four years ago?'" said Green, playing on former President Ronald Reagan's common refrain in the 1980s. "The answer is an undeniable yes."

From his clinic office in Electra, a town just west of Wichita Falls, Dr. W.B. Huckaby, who chipped in $100, opined: "I think that Kenneth Starr overplayed his hand again and made it sound a lot worse."

If anything, these hard-core Clinton supporters said recent events have generated even more irritation with the Republican Party. Several said they gave money because they see a man with good ideas being forced to pay for them by a GOP-instigated legal war.

"I don't believe that the American people are buying this political garbage," said Dallas tax attorney Ronald Mankoff, 66, who donated $10,000.

"He's been asked questions that shouldn't be asked of anyone," said Huckaby. "I don't think it's fair for someone who is not wealthy to have their financial future undermined this way and to have that much of a sacrifice to do public service."

And Ms. Boverie? "I think these Republicans deceive themselves when they say that they're just being open in letting all this stuff out," she said. "They're delighting in destroying Bill Clinton. It makes me think of a verse in the Bible, Corinthians, I think. Love doesn't delight in evil, but rejoices in the truth."

"There's a lot of rejoicing in bringing down this president."

But these are descriptions of Clinton's conduct, admitted or alleged. So the best defense is to change the subject and complain that the Republicans are playing partisan politics.

Republicans had said they were releasing the documents so that the American people could weigh the evidence along with the House, see its reasons and support its decisions in the case. They said the people are jurors, too, in the Clinton case.

The polls reflect what people think on the issue. And at this point, 60 percent and up are opposed to Clinton's impeachment or resignation. Not that they believe him or consider him personally honest. But they never have. In exit polls in 1996 of the voters who re-elected him, 55 percent said they didn't deem him honest and trustworthy.

The latest Pew Research Center poll, conducted Monday and Tuesday, reported that three-quarters of Americans think it would be better for the country if Clinton completes his term as president. And 62 percent, up from 55 percent over the weekend, approve of the way he is doing the job.

That is not the mood Republicans expected. They're adapting.

"I think people would be frankly horrified if the Congress was simply a polling institution that enacted a grotesque version of justice based on the latest poll or the latest talk show," said House Speaker Newt Gingrich as Republicans prepared for an impeachment inquiry.

But Congress would need public support for a step so dire as the impeachment of a president. It isn't there now.

"Where is the outrage?" Republican challenger Bob Dole had demanded in the final days of his 1996 campaign against Clinton, during reports of wrongful Democratic fund raising.

That is what Clinton's rivals had wondered as he withstood the Gennifer Flowers affair and the draft-skirting issue to win in 1992. Congressional Republicans dared him to shut down the government with appropriations vetoes in 1995, figuring the people would blame him. They got the blame and had to surrender.

Dole said the broadcast of Clinton's grand jury testimony probably helped the president.

"People who are opposed to him are going to stay that way," he said. "People who are for him probably feel good about it, and the others are still sick of it all."

Walter R. Mears, vice president and columnist for The Associated Press, has reported on Washington and national politics for more than 30 years.

Survey: D.C. figures lack popularity among Texans

AUSTIN (AP) - A new survey of registered Texas voters finds few popular figures in the current White House sex scandal and investigation.

The "three most unpopular political names in Texas today" are President Clinton, House Speaker Newt Gingrich and special prosecutor Kenneth Starr, according to a telephone poll of 1,207 people, taken from Sept. 11 to Sept. 21.

Clinton is waging a political battle as impeachment talk continues over his involvement with former White House intern Monica Lewinsky. Gingrich presides over the House, which is considering whether to hold impeachment hearings following Starr's report to Congress on the affair.

"The things people don't like about the whole situation are reflective of the fact that they don't like Clinton or Kenneth Starr," said John Shults of the Eppstein Group in Fort Worth, which released the survey.

"Clinton appears to be a little bit less popular than Starr, but I guess you would expect that," he added.

The survey put Clinton's positive rating at 30 percent, with his negatives at 68 percent; Gingrich got 37 percent positive, 53 percent negative; Starr got 35 percent positive and 49 percent negative.

Dickey's son finds deliverance in memoir about his parents

By JOCELYN NOVECK
Associated Press Writer

PARIS - Everyone has childhood memories that stand the test of time. Here's one of Christopher Dickey's: waking each morning at 6 to the chinking of ice cubes in the kitchen-Mom's first Scotch of the day.

Dickey's mother was drinking herself to death. But the real perpetrator, as recounted in her son's excruciating and moving memoir, was her husband, James: renowned poet, novelist and author of "Deliverance."

James Dickey was a genius, we learn. He also lied and cheated. He made up stories so often you never knew when he was telling the truth. His rampant infidelity made his wife's existence a living hell.

There was more: As commercial success came, he cut himself off from his family, withdrawing into an egotistical, liquor-induced haze. He watched alcohol kill his wife, and eventually he allowed it to kill him as well.

But not before a two-year period when he was weak but sober. That is when Christopher Dickey, an author himself and Newsweek's bureau chief in Paris, was finally able to speak, honestly and at length, to his father.

The result of those talks, "Summer of Deliverance" (Simon & Schuster) isn't a book about hate or revenge, as some reviews might have you believe ("Dud as a Dad," read one headline.)

It is, rather, a story about a difficult love - complicated, painful, but redemptive; a story about a son's efforts, even as he was writing the book, to reach across the bridge that divides many of us from our parents.

And a story about gratitude, too. Because after all the sordid details, the reader is left with something resembling a happy ending. Chris Dickey, who became a foreign correspondent to get as far away from James as he could, was able to do something many can't. He got to know his father again, before it was too late.

Dickey tells of the days before the fame, before the drinking got really bad, when life "was an adventure story, not a horror show."

The family moved around the country and around Europe. James Dickey gained popularity as a poet. But nobody was prepared for what would happen once "Deliverance" was published in 1970.

The following summer, the novel about four suburbanites who go canoeing in the Appalachian wilderness and enter a world of redneck horror was made into a film, starring Jon Voight and Burt Reynolds.

"And after that, nothing good was the same," Dickey writes.

"Summer of Deliverance" began to take shape in the summer of 1994, when the author finally went back home to South Carolina, and James Dickey was seriously ill but sober. Over the next two years, Chris took on the endless task of cleaning out his father's garage, and basically "rearranging his life."

James Dickey died on Jan. 19, 1997. At first, Chris felt he couldn't go on with the book. Then he threw himself into it, finishing it in a hotel room in Tehran during a reporting trip.

His father, he says, spent much time in their final conversations trying to set the record straight on all sorts of things. But he really only had one urgent request.

"Remember," he told Chris, "what I was to you. Not to anyone else. To you."

Mattox has program for victims

AUSTIN(AP) - Democratic attorney general candidate Jim Mattox wants the state to train more nurses to collect DNA and other evidence from rape victims.

"By training more citizen nurses to conduct these examinations, we can dramatically increase conviction rates of rapists and child molesters and decrease future sexual assaults," Mattox said Friday.

Sexual assault nurse examiners are certified through the attorney general's office. But there is only one part-time trainer, Mattox said. He proposed increasing the program to three trainers who would disperse to hospitals throughout the state.

The nurses are specially trained to aid police and prosecutors by collecting evidence without making procedural mistakes, he said.

"As we have more and more issues raised about DNA testing you're going to find that it's more and more critical that the testing and gathering of evidence be done exactly right," he said.

Since DNA tests have become "virtually full-proof," Mattox said, defendants will challenge the person who gathers the evidence.

Hospitals are encouraged to keep these specially trained nurses on call but many find the cost prohibitive, Mattox said. So the attorney general's office should provide hospitals with grants to help absorb the cost, he said.

"Survivors of sexual assault are reported to heal faster and follow through with prosecution when they've seen a sexual assault examiner," he said.

Trained nurses also are more likely to testify in court than doctors and nurses who are often hesitant, Mattox said.

Mattox's Republican opponent, John Cornyn, is a strong supporter of victim's rights, said Michele Kay, Cornyn's spokeswoman.

"What Mr. Mattox is proposing is a no-brainer. He's just stating the obvious," Ms. Kay said. "I don't know anyone who doesn't think we should do more for crime victims."

Earnhardt ponders future after end of NASCAR racing

By JOE MACENKA
AP Sports Writer
MOORESVILLE, N.C. -- From the helicopter resting on the front lawn to the steel, concrete and smoked glass of the main building, everything about Dale Earnhardt Inc. is state of the art.

But where does DEI's founder fit in?

Earnhardt is approaching the end of a season that has been one of the most gratifying and frustrating of a magnificent Winston Cup career that began in 1975.

The highs include his first-ever victory in the Daytona 500 and the emergence of his 23-year-old son, Dale Jr., as the hottest new driver in stock car racing.

The lows include a long list of events in which Dale Sr. never flirted with being competitive, either in time trials or during races. The result is that he is headed for his worst finish in the driver standings since 1992 and once again will come up short in his bid to win a record eighth Winston Cup championship.

His troubles on the track have left Earnhardt pondering his future.

"I turn 50 in three years, and I don't know whether I want to race past that or not," said Earnhardt, whose contract to drive for Richard Childress expires after the 2000 season.

"But I'm good to go through my contract with Childress, and my determination is to win races and try to win that other championship."

Earnhardt and his company are in negotiations to try to improve the strength and performance of several Chevrolet teams. Talks are under way to establish a competitive technology-sharing alliance among DEI, Richard Childress Racing and Andy Petree Racing.

If the merger happens, it would furnish the group with information from up to six Winston Cup cars. RCR fields two cars, and others are headed in that direction.

Earnhardt hopes that kind of alliance could provide whatever ingredients might have been missing this season.

He qualified fourth then won the Daytona 500, and qualified second in Talladega, Ala. But there have been few other bright spots.

He was 12th in the driver standings in early June when Childress decided to switch crew chiefs. Earnhardt's crew chief, Larry McReynolds, moved to Skinner's team; Skinner's chief, Kevin Hamlin, took over for Earnhardt.

The move helped Earnhardt climb to eighth in the points, but he is 1,015 behind leader Jeff Gordon.

The low point of the season might have come last weekend in Dover, Del., where qualifying problems meant Earnhardt had to start last on the 43-car grid. He was never competitive and wound up 23rd -- four laps behind winner Mark Martin.

"I don't like racing at Dover like I did Sunday," Earnhardt said. "I mean, it was a bad day from the start. The car wasn't handling. The guys worked diligently on it. Nobody gave up. But still, it was a bad day for us."

If there are too many more of those bad days in the next two years, look for Earnhardt to retire from driving and devote all his energies to DEI.

The company, on 350 acres of rolling farmland in the north Charlotte suburbs, is in its infancy, but is off to a fast start. It is housed in four buildings that take up more than 200,000 square feet, including the 108,000-square-foot main complex.

DEI has already produced one of the top teams on the NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series, with Ron Hornaday as the driver. And it has launched the Grand National careers of Steve Park and Dale Jr., both winners as rookies on the circuit.

Park is driving for DEI as a rookie on the Winston Cup circuit this year, and Earnhardt Jr. is to follow him to the top series on a limited basis in 1999.

But don't look for the elder Earnhardt to eventually join his son as a Winston Cup driver at DEI. Such a move would mean Dad technically would be working for wife Teresa, who oversees the company's operations.

"I don't want to argue with my wife about her car -- or my driving. So that's out," Earnhardt said. "I can argue with Richard. I ain't going to argue with her."

"I'm going to lose, and I ain't going to make much money doing it, either."

Rangers win West despite drubbing by Mariners, 15-4

SEATTLE (AP) -- The Texas Rangers didn't win the AL West the way they wanted. Not that it showed.

Rangers players sprayed each other with champagne, soaking their red championship T-shirts after their 15-4 drubbing by the Seattle Mariners on Friday night.

Texas won their second division title in three years when second-place Anaheim lost to Oakland.

"It's nice," Rangers closer John Wetteland said. "It's really an accomplishment. It's what we wanted last year, but things just didn't work out."

"We had our backs to the wall a lot of times this year, but we finally took care of business," said Will Clark, the frequent target of teammates squirting champagne.

"These guys are enjoying this moment and I'm enjoying it, too."

The Rangers had a four-game winning streak broken, but it didn't seem to matter to them. They reached the AL playoffs when the Angels fell 7-2 to the Athletics.

On the field, the Texas players were understated, shaking hands and exchanging hugs when they came off the field at the end of the eighth inning, right after the Angels' result became final.

But it was a different story in their clubhouse.

That was the way manager Johnny Oates wanted it. He asked that the Angels-Oakland final score be kept off the scoreboard.

"I just wanted us to stay professional," he said. "I just don't think it looks very good in the middle of the game to be high-fiving everybody."

Oates said Todd Stottlemyre will pitch Tuesday against the New York Yankees or Boston and 20-game winner Rick Helling will go Wednesday.

"If we pitch like we have in the last week, we'll do just fine," Oates said of the Rangers' playoff chances.

They lost in four games to the Yankees in the first round of the playoffs in 1996.

Ken Griffey Jr. matched his career-high home run total of 56 -- set last season -- and drove in five runs for the Mariners. Griffey leads the AL in homers; Sammy Sosa of the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis' Mark McGwire each hit their 66th homers earlier in the evening.

"I'm glad they didn't celebrate on our field," Griffey said of the Mariners' lopsided win. "As a team, that's something you take pride in."

Manager Lou Piniella, whose Mariners were favored to repeat as division champs, offered his congratulations to the Rangers.

"They had a good year and I wish them well in the playoffs," Piniella said.

Joe Oliver and Ryan Radmanovich also homered for the Mariners. Lee Stevens hit two two-run homers for Texas.

First quarter stuns Randall as Hereford cruises to 3rd win, 27-5

By BOB VARMETTE

Woe to teams that come out flat. It wasn't a high-flying passing game, or a dominating ground game that doomed Canyon Randall.

It was six minutes.

The first six minutes of the game saw the shocked Raiders get nailed for 21 points as Hereford cruised past Randall 27-5 Friday night at Whiteface Stadium in nondistrict football.

"It had to be a backbreaker for them," Hereford coach Craig Yenzler said. "The wind was a worrisome thing and they had it the whole first quarter, and we scored on them against the wind."

Hereford moves to 3-1 for the first time since 1991; Randall fell to 1-3.

The game began as a special teams disaster for the Raiders, and a special teamer's dream come true for Hereford junior Nick Whalley.

Whalley returned the opening kickoff 98 yards for a touchdown for a quick 7-0 Hereford lead. Following a Hereford scoring march of 86 yards in only five plays for a 13-0 Whiteface margin, Whalley returned to terrorize Randall when he stormed in and blocked Todd Betzen's punt and Hereford's Jason Foster fell on the ball at the Randall 10-yard line.

Greg Ewing scored on the next play, lugging it 10 yards to give Hereford a three-touchdown cushion with 5:57 left in the first quarter.

"I think Hereford did a great job of taking advantage," Randall coach Alan Cornelius said. "We were more stunned than anything else. They returned a kickoff for a touchdown right off the bat, and I don't think anyone has ever done that in the history of Randall High School. I think it's the first ever. I've never seen one and I've been here seven years."

But Cornelius did find some consolation in the fact the Raiders didn't haul down the flag and mail the rest of the game.

"It took us awhile to bounce back," he said. "I'm proud of our kids. They played well after that. I saw us improving. . . . We know there's more than one part of the game."

Randall got its only points of the first half when Chris Felton kicked a 39-yard field goal with 1:03 left in the first quarter to cut the Hereford margin to 21-3. Neither team scored in the more sedate second quarter and Hereford took their 18-point margin into the locker room.

This despite the fact Randall earned 10 first downs in the half to the Whitefaces' four. The Raiders had 167 yards of total offense to Hereford's 121 yards. And Hereford's passing game was held to only 55 yards in the first half -- 58 for the entire game.

"(Randall) did a nice job against us," Yenzler said. "We didn't pick up on our hot routes. You've got to be patient. If they're going to give us the flat, we need to take them. We didn't do that tonight."

While the game was substantially even after the first six minutes, the Raiders -- though they were able to gain yards at times -- were never able to sustain a drive against the Hereford defense. The Raiders picked up 187 yards on the ground in 48 attempts, but they're passing game continually misfired with Randall quarterbacks

Austin Westlake loses second straight

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer
A week and a half ago, Austin Westlake had put together a string of 67 consecutive regular-season victories in Texas high school football.

Now, they've lost two in a row.

Just a week after losing to Class 5A's No. 1-ranked team, Killeen Ellison, the Chaparrals fell to fifth-ranked Converse Judson 37-31 Friday night in a battle of two of the premier Texas football programs of the 1990s.

Dan Walker's fourth field goal of the night gave Westlake a 31-22 lead with less than two minutes elapsed in the fourth quarter. But the Rockets responded with a 12-play, 80-yard drive. Adrian Barnes went the final three yards for a touchdown with 5:28 to play that brought Judson to within Bernes scored two plays later, with just 78 seconds left on the clock.

"We had our chances, but Judson was just too much," Westlake coach Ron Schroeder said. "Right there at the end, they took the momentum, and we couldn't get it back."

Down-to-the-wire isn't the customary Judson pace. The Rockets had prevailed over their three previous opponents by a combined score of 116-27.

Elsewhere in Texas high school football, Killeen Ellison was paired against Marshall in a Saturday afternoon game. The four other No. 1 ranked teams all won.

La Marque beat Houston Forest Brook 10-7 in 4A; Breckenridge beat Cisco 48-12 in 3A; Stanton beat Reagan County 63-0 in 2A and Tenaha beat San Augustine 21-6 in 1A.

Tyler John Tyler was the only ranked 5A team to lose, falling 31-16 to Shreveport Evangl Christian.

There were three losses in the 4A ranks. No. 2 Corsicana was beaten by Terrell 21-0, No. 6 Highland Park fell to Grapevine 23-10 and No. 8 Greenville lost to Dallas Kimball 14-7.

In 3A, third-ranked Alvarado was the only casualty among ranked teams, dropping a 14-13 decision to Marlin, while in 2A, Omaha Paul Hewitt was the only loser, falling 20-14 to Mount Vernon. Paul Hewitt went into the game tied for eighth in 2A.

In 1A, Wheeler, tied for sixth, fell to Spearman, the No. 6 team in 2A, by 42-6. Tenth-ranked Alford lost to Muenster 21-8.

Several NFL teams already face must-win matchups

By BARRY WILNER
AP Football Writer
A month into the NFL season and already there's talk of must wins. That's how the Tennessee Oilers feel about their home game against unbeaten Jacksonville.

"Not many 1-3 teams are going to go on to make the playoffs," said center Mark Stepnoski, who is coming off a knee injury and will play for the first time this season Sunday. "The more you lose, the harder you make it on yourself."

The Oilers are 1-2 and evening their record will be a major undertaking for Jacksonville (3-0) has won all its games by putting together strong drives when things got tight, or by getting superb performances from its leaders, particularly quarterback Mark Brunell. The Jaguars rank fourth in total offense.

When they lost tailback James Stewart (knee) for the season, they plugged in top draft pick Fred Taylor. The ninth pick overall set a team record with 128 yards rushing last week.

The Oilers might have a secret weapon in linebacker Eddie Robinson, a starter for Jacksonville until being waived in August and picked up by Tennessee.

"Having played against us so much in practice and being with us and knowing what we do on offense, that certainly is an edge for their defense," Brunell said.

The Oilers know they need every edge. They need Steve McNair to find Yancey Thigpen through the air; they need Eddie George to dominate on the ground.

"They're a team we feel as though we can beat, but we have to go out and not talk about it, but do it," Thigpen said.

Other teams reaching critical stages are Washington, Detroit and Tampa Bay, all expected to contend for playoff berths. They are a combined 1-8, and the Lions are hosts to the Bucs on Monday night. Washington is home for Denver.

Elsewhere on Sunday, it's Arizona at St. Louis, Green Bay at Carolina, Kansas City at Philadelphia, New Orleans at Indianapolis, Oakland at Dallas, Seattle at Pittsburgh, the New York Giants at San Diego, Atlanta at San Francisco, Minnesota at Chicago, and Cincinnati at Baltimore.

"I've been in this situation before," Denver tight end Shannon Sharpe said of the Redskins, who have been outscored 100-48 in going 0-3. "In '94 we started off 0-4. We had come in after a playoff season. We get Anthony Miller. We get Mike Pritchard. We get Ray Crockett. We're the team to beat, and we start off 0-3 and 0-4."

"And the first thing that happens is that everybody starts to look at himself. 'Are we that good?' 'Are we that bad?' And the fans get on you, and the coaching staff. Nothing goes well."

"All it takes is a win. Because winning cures all things. It cures the bickering within. It gets the fans happy again. All of a sudden they love you."

Of course, everybody in Denver loves the Super Bowl champs, who are 3-0.

The Monday night game features two 1997 playoff qualifiers off to disappointing starts. The Bucs lost their first two -- tough games at Minnesota and Green Bay -- before beating Chicago at home last week. The Lions have fallen to the Vikings, Packers and Bengals.

Detroit tries for its first victory with rookie Charlie Batch at quarterback. That means the Buccaneers will be primed to force him to throw, bringing eight-man fronts and heavy concentration on Barry Sanders.

"The focus is always Barry Sanders when you play them, and we've got to really do a good job on him and not let him get going."

"If we can get ahead of them, get in a mode like Minnesota was, where once they got up now you're just turning everything you've got loose at the quarterback, it's going to be tough on a rookie quarterback -- whether it's Charlie Batch or Ryan Leaf. Peyton Manning, the same thing," Tampa Bay coach Tony Dungy said.

"So we've really got to concentrate on Barry and make sure that we don't let him get going, and then make the quarterback throw."

Judge says cheerleaders can cheer

BROWNSBORO -- A judge ruled Friday that Brownsboro High School had no basis for kicking nine cheerleaders off the squad for smoking cigarettes.

District Judge Carter Tarrance, in a temporary injunction, ruled the "cheerleader constitution" cited in kicking the girls off the squad was not legally binding because it had not been made democratically or approved by the school board.

"To do so otherwise, could result in a multiplicity of arbitrary, inconsistent rules that may or may not reflect the citizens' standards for conduct and for consequences of disobedience," Tarrance ruled.

The girls were removed from the squad in June after their sponsor found they had smoked while at cheerleading camp. The parents filed suit against the school Aug. 26, claiming the dismissal was discriminatory and not legally binding.

Tarrance issued a temporary restraining order on Sept. 9 and ordered the two sides into mediation. The girls were allowed back on the sidelines, and planned to cheer at Friday night's game against Rusk, pending the judge's ruling.

The judge set a hearing on a permanent injunction for Dec. 15. Unless the matter is settled before then, a trial can be scheduled.

"This ruling undermines the discipline of students," said Brownsboro Independent School District Superintendent Elton Caldwell. "They have undermined everything completely, but that's the judge's ruling, and we will obey the court order."

Giants tie up NL wild card, beat Rockies

DENVER (AP) -- The streaking San Francisco Giants pulled into a three-way tie for the NL wild-card lead Friday night, beating the Colorado Rockies 8-6 behind Rich Aurilia's four hits and two RBIs.

The Giants (88-72) tied the Chicago Cubs and New York Mets, both of whom lost Friday night, with two games left in the season.

San Francisco, five games behind Chicago in the wild-card chase just eight days ago, got its fifth straight win and eighth in its last nine games.

Aurilia went 4-for-5 and scored two runs. San Francisco had 15 hits, only one of them for extra bases, and drew eight walks.

Colorado's Larry Walker, the NL's leading hitter, struck out pinch-hitting in the eighth. His closest pursuer, New York's John Olerud, went 1-for-3 and remained at .351 with two games remaining.

John Johnstone (6-5) pitched two innings for the win, and Robb Nen worked the ninth for his 40th save.

The Giants reclaimed the lead for good, 6-5, with three runs in the sixth. Marvin Benard and Aurilia had RBI singles off reliever Curtis Leskanic (6-4). David Wainhouse subsequently walked two batters -- the second, Joe Carter, with the bases loaded.

Hunting, fishing have powerful economic impact in High Plains

Texas marked the 26th annual observance of National Hunting and Fishing Day Saturday, inviting Texans to step outside and share the values and the fun of the outdoors.

National Hunting and Fishing Day was established to recognize the historic and continuing contributions made by the nation's hunters and fishermen to protect and preserve our natural resources.

I was disappointed to hear a local civic leader remark a few years ago that our area had little to offer in the way of hunting and fishing opportunities. This individual commented that one would need to travel elsewhere for good hunting. Perhaps he was talking about elk--or eland. When the rains come right, the High Plains can be a fantastic hunting and fishing ground.

Wildlife-related pursuits are an under-appreciated growth industry in the Texas High Plains with a projected combined gross value in 1998 of $182.5 million.

As part of regional water management planning activities, we've tried to come up with some economic impact figures on hunting and fishing in the High Plains over the past few years. Dollars spent on all hunting in the Ogallala aquifer region of Texas in 1998 are projected at $109.4 million. Dollars projected to have been spent on fishing in 1998 total $73.1 million. This dollar value ripples throughout the High Plains economy with significant impact.

Based on 1985 data from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service that was adjusted for inflation in a 1989 report by Bob Bullock, Comptroller of Public Accounts in Texas, hunters spent $83.9 million in the Panhandle/High Plains region in 1989 on food, lodging, leases, equipment and other trip-related expenses.

Using a three percent inflation factor since 1989, the dollar value of hunter spending in the Ogallala aquifer region of Texas has steadily increased. Hunter spending was projected at $97.3 million in 1994; $100.2 million for 1995; $103.2 million for 1996; $106.3 million for 1997; and $106.3 million for 1998.

Hunters spent an average of $832 each pursuing their chosen game in 1989. In 1998 that figure is guesstimated $1,083.

Of interest locally, some "best guess" projections based on an expenditure of $1,083 per hunter, except for $200 per hunter for doves, results in some surprising figures. If High Plains pheasant hunters number 38,256, the pursuit of pheasants would pump $41,431,248 into the regional economy. If 41,581 hunters went afield after quail, the economic impact could be just over $45 million. How many deer hunters stalk and glass the High Plains? We guesstimated about 750, with an impact of $813,333, based on the average expenditure figure. This category could be low. Are there 5,000 waterfowl hunters, or 1,677 sandhill crane hunters in the region? Hard to know, but if our guesses are close to accurate, these groups mean $5.4 million and $1.8 million to the area economy respectively.

Spending on fishing in the High Plains region was pegged at $56.1 million in 1989. With the same three percent inflation factor per year since that time, spending in 1998 is projected at $73.1 million.

Anglers spent, on average, $736 each in 1989 and that spending total is projected at $959 each in 1998.

Who says hunting and fishing is small potatoes in the Plains? The economic impact of wildlife-related enterprises could be even more significant were wildlife opportunities in the Panhandle not limited by sparse habitat.

One factor limiting economic impact is the extremely short duration of the highly-popular ringneck pheasant season in the Panhandle. While hunters from throughout Texas and many other states come to this region in quest of good pheasant hunting, they have only 16 days to pursue this gamebird. Yet, in that brief span, they could conceivably spend millions of dollars. Other states with comparable pheasant populations have a 60 to 90-day season. Adverse weather during only one weekend of the Panhandle season can cripple the economic opportunity stemming from the hunting of this gamebird.

Another very important factor in economic impact is weather, and the water it provides. If summer and fall rainfall are abundant, numerous playa lakes are available to waterfowl and sandhill cranes that migrate to the region, the quail and pheasant hatch is much-improved in areas of suitable habitat, and big game including white-tail and mule deer and pronghorn antelope is more abundant and in better body condition. Accordingly, more hunters seek out opportunities to take these species in these "up" years. On the other hand, if moisture is short, angling and upland game, waterfowl and big game hunting success suffer accordingly. Hunter and angler activity and success in this region is greatly diminished.

We'll likely be looking at reduced hunter success for both upland and big game this season, due to sparse rainfall and a subsequently reduced game population. In years like 1997, when the rain comes at the right time, fish and wildlife are an important growth industry for the Plains.

The State Task Force on Texas Nature Tourism reports that nature tourism is the fastest growing segment of Texas' $23 billion travel industry.

The number of tourists involved in nature study activities is expected to hit 18 million in Texas by the year 2000, a 17 percent jump from 1990. Nature tourism has been averaging a 30 percent increase worldwide since 1987, setting a trend for future years.

Hunting and fishing remain a substantial part of the outdoor recreation picture, but it is the area of wildlife appreciation where the greatest growth has occurred since 1980 in Texas.

Nature tourism as defined by the State Task Force is discretionary travel to natural areas that conserve the environmental, social and cultural values while generating an economic benefit to the local community. Nature tourists engage in activities including birdwatching, wildlife viewing, hiking, rock climbing, backpacking, canoeing, camping, mountain biking and outdoor photography.

Done right, nature tourism should also encourage wildlife and habitat conservation.

According to a State Task Force summary, the economic impact of birdwatching on Texas is $4 billion to $6 billion along the upper Gulf Coast. The American Birding Association lists Texas as the top destination in the U.S. for birders.

The Task Force suggests measures to capitalize on the nature tourism boom in Texas, including development of educational programs to help local communities promote nature tourism and train hospitality staff and nature tourism guides.

An example of how to take advantage of interest in nature tourism is a wildlife photography workshop such as that staged by the Fennessey Ranch at Refugio. The ranch worked with the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department to offer a series of workshops for photographers of all abilities. Workshops, conducted by an experienced wildlife photographer were priced at $125 to $150 per day, lunch included, and participants had access to ranch wildlife and natural features.

Wildlife enterprises are like any other crop-raising activity--subject to environmental conditions. The birds and the beasts thrive on timely rainfall, just like the crops and pastures.

Jim Steiert is a multiple award-winning member of the Texas Outdoor Writers Association, and recipient of TOWA's first "Outdoor Book of the Year" Award.

"We're just not consistent on offense," Cornelius said. "It's the inexperience of our kids and the coaches calling bad plays."

Once the first quarter was gone and Hereford had a solid 21-3 advantage, the Whitefaces turned to their running game--an area of focus in practice the past week. Friday night, Hereford's running backs grounded the Whiteface aerial circus.

With Hereford throwing the ball only six times on the entire night, running backs Ewing, Mark Rodriguez and Foster ground out yards. Ewing got Hereford's first 100-yard game of the season, rushing for 109 yards on 14 carries.

"Our offensive line, they just gave it their all tonight," Ewing said, "so I gave it my all. When we work as a team, we can't be beat. Those guys did a way better job of blocking."

Rodriguez ran just five times for 74 yards against the Raiders and the Whitefaces as a team rushed for 220 yards on 39 attempts.

"I was very pleased with our running game," Yenzen said. "It was very good. Greg did a good job. Mark did a good job, and Jason Foster really did a nice job."

Yenzen was especially impressed by the play of Ewing, the Hereford tailback who had struggled in the Whitefaces' first three games.

"Greg ran with a lot more authority tonight," he said. "Coach (J.R.)

JASON FOSTER of Hereford goes after a fumble by Canyon Randall's Todd Betzen (82) as the Raiders' Travis Willard gets ready to pounce on the loose ball. Hereford won the nondistrict matchup Friday night at Whiteface Stadium, 27-5.

Compton's worked with him... and J.R. has done a nice job. It was one of those things where at the point of contact we needed him to get his shoulders pads down and turn upfield.

He did that tonight." The Raiders scored on a safety in the third quarter when Cody Hodges mishandled the ball deep in Hereford territory and then kicked the ball out of the back of the end zone. The Whitefaces scored their final points in the fourth quarter on a four-yard run by Cody Hodges.

Paul Abbott (3-1) allowed six hits, walked three and struck out seven in eight innings.

Todd Zeile, acquired in a trade from Florida July 31, set a Rangers record by reaching base safely in 11 consecutive plate appearances when he walked and singled.

The Mariners took a 4-0 lead in the third inning on David Bell's RBI single, Griffey's two-run double and Edgar Martinez's run-scoring double.

In the fourth, they made it 8-0 as Oliver hit a three-run homer and Alex Rodriguez added an RBI single.

Sosa hits 66th homer, but Astros down Chicago, 6-2

HOUSTON (AP) -- Neither Sammy Sosa nor the Chicago Cubs wound up with the lead Friday night.

Sosa hit his 66th home run, but the Cubs failed to take advantage and lost to the Houston Astros 6-2, leaving them tied for the NL wild-card spot with the New York Mets.

The Mets lost 6-5 to Atlanta, and the Giants beat Colorado 8-6. All three teams in the wild-card chase have two games left after Friday.

Sosa temporarily gained the lead in his home run race with Mark

McGwire by hitting a 462-foot drive into the third level of the Astrodome. About 45 minutes later, however, McGwire hit his 66th in the St. Louis Cardinals' game against Montreal.

Derek Bell hit a two-run homer, and Moises Alou singled home the go-ahead run in the fourth inning for the NL Central champion Astros.

Facing friend and fellow Dominican Jose Lima, Sosa homered leading off the fourth inning. Lima also gave up Nos. 50 and 51 to Sosa at Wrigley Field on Aug. 23.

OPRAH WINFREY
NEW YORK (AP) - Oprah has agreed to share her gift of gab with viewers until the year 2002. The queen of daytime talk has renewed her "The Oprah Winfrey Show" through the 2001-2002 television season, two years beyond the expiration of her current contract. "Now, more than ever, I am determined to run on and see what the end will be," Winfrey said in a statement released Thursday by her production company and by King World, her syndicated series distributor. Winfrey's decision to renew her contract is not only good news for her fans, but also for King World, which generates an estimated 40 percent of its revenue from the show. Winfrey's show made its debut nationally in 1986. After years of ratings leadership, Winfrey lost the top slot last February to the raunchy "Jerry Springer Show," but reclaimed the crown during Labor Day week.

CELINE DION
MONROE, Mich. (AP) - A group of children are getting the celebrity treatment after performing with Celine Dion.

"All my friends and my teachers have been asking me to get them an autograph. Even my basketball coach," said 12-year-old Amanda Lehr. "They said, 'Can we have your autograph now before you become big?'"

The students' brush with fame came Tuesday and Wednesday, when they formed a circle around Dion as she sang her hit "Let's Talk About Love" during two sold-out concerts. The 24 students were handpicked from the Peg Harris Dance Studio and the Performing Arts Center. "My dad said I would remember this the rest of my life," 12-year-old Justin Foley said. "I've sang in church groups and in school before, but I was nervous about the crowd."

JAMES CAAN
LINDA CAAN
LOS ANGELES (AP) - James Caan, forever linked to his Oscar-nominated role as hotheaded mobster Sonny Corleone in "The Godfather," has added to the family. Caan and his wife, Linda, on Thursday announced the birth of son Jacob Nicholas Caan, an 8-pound boy delivered at the UCLA Medical Center.

Group kicks off new focus on women, political offices

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) - A new group announced plans Thursday to initiate a straw ballot in Iowa and 11 other states to focus attention on women who could run for the White House.

"The goal is to get a conversation going that changes the climate," said Marie Wilson, head of the White House Project, a nonpartisan group pushing for a new focus on women in politics.

The group will distribute a million ballots in 12 states listing 20 prominent women and asking voters to pick five they think are capable of seeking the White House. Among those on the list are U.S. Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, and astronaut Dr. Mae C. Jemison.

After the million ballots are distributed in the targeted states, they will be put in national magazines geared toward female readers. "Americans are hungry for the chance to vote for a woman," Ms. Wilson said. She noted that while women account for 52 percent of the population, they are 9 percent of the Senate, 12 percent of the House and 6 percent of the nation's governors.

The project has been in the works for a year, and Wilson announced it Thursday in a conference call with reporters. The timing comes as the White House remained immersed in sex scandals involving President Clinton.

"We started this last year," said Wilson. "This is not the climate we would have chosen actually."

Women currently running for office were intentionally left off the list to avoid clouding the discussion with partisan politics, Wilson said.

States in which the ballots will initially be distributed, in addition to Iowa, are California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, New York, Ohio and Washington.

"Women are an untapped resource in American politics," said Barbara Lee of the White House Project. "When you open this ballot you see not just one or two, but 20 women from all walks of life who have demonstrated national leadership."

Feminists urging no impeachment

ARLINGTON, Va. (AP) - Carolyn McOwen, a self-described conservative, figured the current controversy surrounding President Clinton would unite women from across the ideological spectrum.

But she was caught off guard when feminist leaders publicly implored the nation's women to demand that the Republican Congress back off efforts to oust the president.

"You would think we would all be together on this one," McOwen, of San Clemente, Calif., said at a convention for Concerned Women of America, a conservative policy group. "I'm surprised (the National Organization for Women) isn't speaking out against President Clinton. They should be horrified he could do that."

"It's just so disgusting, so degrading to women," said CWA member Barbara Volkman of Indianapolis, also attending the convention in suburban Washington. She spent Thursday visiting her state's congressional delegation, asking that they push forward with efforts to impeach Clinton.

Feminist leaders rallied for just the opposite purpose: to urge Congress to back down on its attempts to impeach Clinton or hound him out of office.

"Women should write, call, telefax, e-mail, shout and tell Congress. 'Do not impeach this president and don't force him to resign,'" said Yvonne Scruggs-Leftwich, head of the Black Leadership Forum, at a news conference with other groups.

National Organization for Women President Patricia Ireland said Republicans "are mired in a partisan game of chicken" and "seem determined not to stop until this government crashes."

Eleanor Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority Foundation, asserted that all women believe Clinton has much to answer for in his admitted sexual relationship with Monica Lewinsky.

But she said that even if he lied about that relationship, he did not commit an impeachable offense.

"We deplore his misconduct but we also understand the hypocrisy of his opponents," she said. "We have years of progress at stake if the president is hounded out of office."

Conservative women fired back that if unpunished, Clinton's behavior would be to the detriment of women.

Noreen Linke of Flora, Ind., said she believed the president's behavior constituted a form of harassment because of his position of power. She fears his actions will spur "more victimization of women in the workplace."

"He thinks he's above the law," she said at the CWA convention.

According to recent polls, women remain slightly more inclined than men to support Clinton and were a bit more inclined than men to like the president and his policies.

Distinguished 4-H leaders recognized

Brenda Campbell and Rick Auckerman, long-time leaders in Deaf Smith County's 4-H program, were recognized as Distinguished Leaders during the District I Leaders Luncheon held recently in Amarillo College Business and Industry Center.

Have 28 years combined service

Rick Auckerman and Brenda Campbell, both of Hereford, were honored for their extensive support of the 4-H program during the District I Distinguished Leaders Luncheon held recently at the Amarillo College Business and Industry Center.

The luncheon, where 32 adult leaders were awarded clover-shaped plaques, was the highlight of the annual Panhandle 4-H Fall Forum. Serving as mistress of ceremonies was Jaime Steiert of Hereford, president of the District 4-H Council. Also participating in the recognition ceremony was Craig Campbell of Hereford, District Council reporter.

As the father of four daughters, all of whom are veterans in the 4-H program, Auckerman has given countless hours of service in all project areas. For 12 years, he has been a key individual working in 4-H sheep and horticulture events on the local, district and state levels.

Auckerman has routinely shared his agricultural knowledge with local youth through a variety of activities and community service projects. He and his wife, Georgia, are the parents of Cady, a student at Texas A&M University; Erin, a student at West Texas A&M University; Kylee, a junior at Hereford High School; and Dawn, an eighth grader at Hereford Junior High.

Described as a "faithful worker," Campbell has supported local youngsters in a wide variety of activities, including livestock shows, public speaking and fashion show. For the past 16 years, Campbell has shared her time and talents as a club and project leader.

Campbell has also encouraged youth development by volunteering as a contest judge on the local and district levels. She has served for many years as treasurer of the local 4-H Leaders Association.

Campbell and her husband, Jimmy, have four children: Jim Brett of Amarillo, Kinann of Lubbock, and Craig and Chelsea of the home.

The Panhandle 4-H program reaches nearly 12,000 youth each year. For more information about the 4-H and Youth Program, contact your local County Extension office, 364-3573.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell the public to beware. Yesterday, I went to the post office after receiving a notice that said I had a certified letter waiting for me. I left home a half hour early to make sure I would get to work on time. It turned out the letter was a giant rip-off from a sweepstakes publication center. The opening line said I was currently "100 percent guaranteed eligible" for over $100,000 in cash and prizes. Please note that it said I was eligible -- not a winner.

What these people wanted was for me to send $89, check or money order, and in return, I would receive a "Sweepstakes Unlimited Package," which I figure is a list of other sweepstakes. This company is not awarding any cash prizes, but it offered to send me $500 worth of discount coupons, even though I have no idea which products the coupons are for. The letter said I had to send the $89 within 72 hours in order to be eligible.

Ann, please warn your readers not to be taken in by this. Most likely, the only thing they will receive is a list of sweepstakes that other people have already entered and won, plus some coupons for products they probably will never use. It costs the company $1.67 to send each letter. If these operators mail 100,000 letters, their cost will be $167,000. If only half the people respond at $89 apiece, the company will rake in over $4 million. Considering that the company is not paying out one dime in prize money, I'd say this is a pretty slick racket. -- Fresno, Calif.

Dear Fresno: Slick, indeed, and the sad part is a lot of people are going to fall for it. Thanks for the alert. Their "take" is going to be a lot smaller because you wrote. I love the way my readers watch out for one another.

Dear Ann Landers: You've printed several letters about ex-husbands who get the short end of the stick when it comes to custody of the children. Here's my story:

My wife had an affair with a married man. I didn't find out about it until he dumped her and she became deeply depressed. Rather than seek a divorce, I arranged counseling for her and saw to it that she completed her final two years of college.

After her graduation, she retained a lawyer who sent me a letter ordering me out of the house and demanding $3,250 a month in child support, plus half my pension. My lawyer told me not to fight it because I could never win a custody battle for our four children. He said her adultery would not be an issue because the courts are not interested in determining fault.

Thank the good Lord, I didn't listen to him. Now, five years later, my wife is living with her third stud, but I have our four children and their respect. My wife has neither. I won -- big time. -- On Top in Ontario

Dear Ontario: Congratulations on having the conviction to fight for what you believed was best for your children. And apparently, the judge agreed you would make the better parent. Thanks for a divorce story with a happy ending.

Dear Ann Landers: My young grandchild was recently invited to a birthday party. The invitation stated, "Dinner will be served." A week before the party, we received a number of calls from the birthday boy's mother, moving up the time. Everyone ended up being served a cupcake and juice. The parents who showed up right after work, tired and hungry, got the same pathetic "treat."

I think these people are just cheap. What do you say? -- A Grandmother in Tyler, Texas

Dear Tyler: I say parents should not expect to be fed a meal at a child's birthday party. But if the party was scheduled during the dinner hour, the hostess put herself on the spot when it came to feeding the kids. Pizza or spaghetti would have been nice and would not have put the hostess in the poor house.

PARENTS HIT CHILDREN
BASED ON RELIGIOUS WRITINGS.

"Spare the rod, spoil the child" is the single most misquoted and misunderstood phrase in religious literature. Many people hit their children based on the belief that God sanctions violence toward children. Interpreted literally, the rod to many people means a stick.

The actual verse that appears in the Bible is Proverbs 13:24: "He that spareth his rod, hateth his son; but he who loveth him, chasteneth him beaimes." The notion of "spoiling a child" by sparing the rod was suggested later by 16th Century authors. Notable among them was Samuel Butler who, in 1663, wrote in Hudibras, "Love is a boy by poets styled; then spare the rod, and spoil the child."

The Hebrew translation of the Proverbs offers several interpretations for the word "rod." Rod was, at times, interpreted as scepter, a symbol of power, not of violence. Rod also meant staff, a rod with a curved top used by shepherds to guide and lead sheep. Some interpreted rod as a stick while others interpreted rod as symbolic for discipline. Many members of the clergy advocate discipline as a modern day interpretation, believing that children need guidance, not violence.

PARENTS HIT CHILDREN AS AN "ACT OF LOVE." Many parents feel that hitting children is an act of "love" born out of deep concern for their child's well-being.

These parents tell their children how much they love them while they're hitting them. Statements like, "If I didn't love you, I would not be doing this;" "This hurts me more than it hurts you;" "One day you will thank me for this;" or, "This is for your own good" send confusing messages.

If such interactions continue through childhood, children learn that people who love them are also people who hurt them. A common result is that many women choose husbands and boyfriends who show them love the same way Dad did.

PARENTS HIT CHILDREN BECAUSE IT'S A CULTURAL PRACTICE. Many people believe that hitting children is a way for parents to express their cultural identity. Parents with every color of skin all believe hitting is unique to their culture. Hitting is so widespread throughout society that hitting children is a societal belief rather than a cultural practice.

Parents today feel that because Great Grandpa hit Grandpa, and Grandpa hit Dad, and Dad hit his children, a cultural tradition is being practiced. Most people today, regardless of culture or race, have been hit as children.

To help your family be more successful, contact Tilli Boozer at 364-4357 and learn about the DRESS YOUR FAMILY FOR SUCCESS being held at San Jose Community Center each Thursday evening from 6 to 9. Children's programs are included and a snack meal is provided. Parents, this is a place where you and your teenager can learn to communicate and find some understanding.

RUTHIE MURILLO, RICK ROBILLARD JR.

Wedding to be held in Church of Christ

Ramon and LaLa Murillo of Hereford announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to Richard Albert Robillard Jr., son of Richard Robillard Sr. of Clovis, N.M., and Wendy Austin of Albuquerque, N.M. The couple plans to be married Nov. 7 in Central Church of Christ. The bride-elect is a 1997 graduate of Hereford High School. She is employed at McDonald's. The prospective groom graduated from Manzano High School in Albuquerque in 1993. He is also employed at McDonald's.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"We can chart our future clearly and wisely only when we know the path which has led to the present." --Adlai E. Stevenson

Each student in seventh grade band is to compose four measures of music. Mr. Brooks, one of the band directors, will edit each student's work into a full band piece to be performed at the Christmas concert.

New student council officers include: Sarah Griffin, President; Cagney Cantu, Vice President; Heather Calkins, Secretary; Alexis Garcia, Treasurer. Classroom Representatives will be elected within the next few weeks.

Junior Historians will meet during Channel I on Wednesday, September 30 in Miss Mugford's Room (Room 3). On the agenda for this meeting will be the scheduled field trip on Saturday, Oct. 17 and other fall projects. History Fair will also be discussed. Those members who have turned in their enrollment forms and who have paid the first semester dues of $10.00 no later than Oct. 9 will be eligible to go on the Oct. 17 field trip.

Parents, as many of you are finding out, Noon Study Hall assignments are mounting up for many students and they will be spending continual Saturdays in Saturday School. Please help us by insisting that your student begin taking responsibility in getting to class on time, doing their assignments and bringing materials and assignment to class. Perhaps you need to shadow your student for a day or so.

Both American and Texas history students are finishing their study of the first Americans and will begin the units on early explorers. This will be an opportune time for many to write an essay for the DAR contest. Essay topic for this year is "A Naval Hero of the Early American Republic, 1789-1815."

Pink Team Science students are working on Soil and Water Conservation and hopefully will have some interesting essays on this subject.

Report cards for the first six weeks will be handed out this week and should be signed and returned as soon as possible. Please discuss this report with your student and encourage them to always do their best.

Hints from Heloise

Dear Heloise: Several months back a reader sent in a letter warning of the toxic effect of scented candles and plug-in room fresheners on birds. She said if one life was saved because of it, it was worth it. I want to thank her for writing that and you for printing it. I had just bought three of those plug-in fresheners and was going to use them the next day when I read the letter in your column. She didn't save one life — she saved 26! I have a lovebird aviary with 24 birds plus a cage of two cockatiels. Needless to say, she saved me much heartache plus over $1,000 worth of birds. — A Louisiana Reader

So glad you found the column informative and that all your precious birds are fine. — Heloise

EASY SOLUTION

Dear Heloise: Getting the empty toilet paper tube off a spring-loaded mechanism is almost impossible if you have arthritic hands like mine, but a pair of scissors works like a charm. Just slice the tube lengthwise and lift off, clearing the way for an easy replacement. — Barbara Willey, Gorham, Maine

If scissors are a little difficult to handle, here's a hint from my husband, David. Drape a wet washcloth over the tube and let it soften, then just peel away. — Heloise

TWO GOOD HINTS IN ONE

Here are two good hints from Jean Marie Hudson of Beaumont, Texas:

* I live at sea level. I found that in a trip by air plastic bottles (of cleansing oil, for example) leak because of the reduced air pressure at the high altitude. To prevent this, I squeeze the plastic bottles just a bit to expel most of the air, then close them tightly.

* My mother, who is 90 years old, and I always read your column. Often we clip hints to share with each other. Sometimes we both clip the same hint!

We enjoy visiting over lunch in a restaurant one or more times a week. The portions are more than she can eat and more than I should eat. We ask the waiter to bring the take-home boxes along with the food, then before we start eating, we remove the part to take home.

Two things are accomplished: We are not tempted to eat too much just because it is on the plate and we are not taking home garbage scraped off the plate! Eating out is not so expensive when you can get two or three meals from one order.

FROSTING COOKIES

Dear Heloise: My neighbor came to have coffee this afternoon. I had baked rolled-out cookies and I was frosting them. She was so shocked to see me frost them with canned cake frosting. It works great and if I want more color, I add a few drops of food coloring, any color I want, to the white frosting. She thought that was a wonderful, easy thing she never thought of it. She is going to pass it on to her friends.

It works great, no mixing powdered sugar and food coloring and heck of a lot faster. — Vera Bjorklund, Canova, S.D.

If we've told you once, we've told you 10 MILLION TIMES!

Thirty years ago, Hereford State Bank provided a unique and special service to Hereford -- a 24-hour system that offered local residents time and temperature information.

It has been a very popular service. The phone has been ringing off the wall so to speak. Since that first year in 1968, we've averaged about 347 thousand calls per year. That's about 10 million calls. And now we've added another feature for your convenience -- A 24-hour local forecast.

We're very proud to offer this service to Hereford, and just in case you're interested -- The Hereford State Bank Time, Temperature & Forecast was 3:07 p.m., 80 degrees and partly cloudy on Friday, August 28th when this ad was put to bed for publication in this issue of the Sunday Brand.

— YOUR EYES —

Take Care of Your Glasses

Your prescription glasses or quality sunglasses represent an investment in your good vision and your good looks. It makes sense to protect them and prolong their useful life. Here are a few tips:

- Keep glasses in a case whenever they're not being worn.
- Clean dust or lint with a soft cloth, and use a lens cleaner to remove smudges and oil.

- Never use nails to scratch off a spot.
- Take glasses off gently with two hands, not one. Pulling them off will train the hinges; the temple piece may break off.
- Wearing glasses atop one's head may look stylish, but the temples will probably stretch out of shape.
- Don't place glasses face down on a table or other surface; they are likely to scratch.
- If glasses are in plastic frames, avoid leaving them in concentrated sun -- as, for instance, on the dashboard of your car.

HELPFUL HEALTH SUBSTITUTIONS

Questions continue to surface by those wishing to reduce the amount of sugar and fat in traditional recipes. Judy Doherty, Executive Editor and Publisher of Communicating Food for Health Newsletter offers these suggestions which many have tried and seem to feel work well for substituting.

Those wishing to try these hints are urged to clip this column and place it near their mixing center. Only by consistent trial and error, and helpful hints have many learned to make a successful transition. Also, if you have suggestions that you have used that work well, please call the county extension office at 364-3573 and share those with us. We are asked by many for ideas that really work.

For baking cookies, brownies, quick breads and items that are a little darker in color, prune puree (also marketed as dried plum puree) works well. One can substitute all of the fat for half the amount of prune puree. Reducing the baking time is a must. Using the puree may call for the baking time to be reduced by 25 to 50% of the time.

If the prune or plum puree has too strong of a taste, applesauce can be substituted. The applesauce will give less moisture content. Substitute all of the oil for equal amount of applesauce. Baking time must also be reduced but may need to be reduced by only 25% of the time.

Eggs may be substituted with egg whites or nonfat egg substitute (as in the type one can buy in the freezer or refrigerated part of the grocery store). Different options are offered for varying degrees of reducing fat.

Substitute all of the eggs with equal amounts by volume of egg whites. Generally, this would be 1/4 egg whites for every egg. Substitute half of the eggs with equal amounts of egg whites. For example, if a recipe called for 6 eggs one can use 3 eggs plus 3/4 cup of egg whites.

Substituting low-fat dairy products significantly lowers the fat in a recipe. Preparation principles however must be altered. Adding low-fat cheese must be done in the last five minutes of baking time. Non-fat sour cream will be stable with heat but non-fat yogurt is not.

If adding herbs or spices to vegetable dishes, a low-fat cooking spray will carry the spices and flavor through the dish. Spray the food lightly, add the spice or herb and mix thoroughly.

To reduce sugar in a recipe, one can usually reduce by 30 to 50% without any trouble. However, certain recipes will not work when sugar is reduced. One such example would be cut-out cookie dough or what is termed short-dough type of recipes.

A pumpkin pie will however work very well with sugar reduction up to 50%. Adjust the spices by adding more to make up for the flavor loss of the lowered sugar.

SkyTalk

by John Gilmore

The second planet from the sun is named for the Roman goddess of love and beauty. Truly, Venus stands out as a brilliant gem in the evening or morning sky. For the next few mornings it may be viewed about thirty minutes before sunrise low to the eastern horizon. It is known as the Morning Star at this particular time because of its visibility during the early portion of the day. In a few weeks however, its brilliance will grace the early evening sky. During the interim, Venus will journey behind the sun, emerging as the Evening Star come winter. The cycle will repeat itself as the planet crosses the face of the sun and appears in the morning sky once again.

This phenomenon is the result of the orbital path of Venus. Unlike Jupiter and Saturn, whose orbits lie outside the Earth's, Venus orbits closer to the sun than the Earth making this situation possible. Its average distance from the sun is sixty seven million (67,000,000) miles, 30 percent closer than Earth. Another interesting characteristic created by this orbital condition are phases. As with the moon, we see different portions of Venus' surface during its orbital period. Thus, we are able to view a full, gibbous, and crescent Venus just as we can of the moon. Galileo claims to have completed a series of observations of this type in the fall and winter of 1610. There has been some debate whether he actually made these observations precisely when he says he did, or whether he asserted the observations based on what he was certain he would find and then made them later. Nevertheless, this dealt a decisive blow to the Ptolemaic system (the belief in a geocentric or earth-centered universe as opposed to a heliocentric or sun-centered universe), in which Venus would never show the entire cycle of phases. Aside from all this, Venus was known as Earth's twin for a long time. But, as we will see, nothing could be further from the truth.

It is true that Venus, like the Earth, is a terrestrial planet (small, dense, and rocky). And its diameter is 95 percent the Earth's. Also, its density is close to the Earth's. But the similarities seem to end there. For instance, a thick cloud cover shrouds the Venusian landscape. Astronomers have learned, from numerous probes sent to explore Venus within the past decade, that a forbidding environment lies beneath this blanket.

The surface temperature of Venus is about (900) degrees Fahrenheit. And the atmospheric pressure is 90 times greater than Earth's. Also, the density of the atmosphere differs greatly on the two planets. For instance, the density of the Earth's atmosphere is one thousand times less than that of water. By contrast, the air on Venus is only ten times less dense than water. This makes for an interesting scenario. If one could withstand the intense heat, high pressure, and other inhospitable conditions, a person could strap wings to his arms and fly, or perhaps more aptly, swim through the Venusian air. But another big difference between the two planets would add more problems. The rotational period of Venus is 243 Earth days. This would make for very long, very hot days!

If you have a small telescope, viewing the small phases of Venus are within your grasp. If not, you can gaze upon its beauty as the ancients have done for millennia, with the naked eye. Unlike some of the other planets though, Venus is very non-descript as far as surface features are concerned (see image at right).

This is the sixth installment of SKY TALK. I would like to thank Mrs. Pat Fisher, Mrs. A.D. Hutton, Brady Brookhart, John Butts, Mila Zamora, Gerald Johnson, Lewis Block, and R.V. Sanford, to mention a few, who have commented on or asked questions concerning this column. And to The Hereford Brand, for allowing me the opportunity to submit this as a semi-monthly column. If anyone has any suggestions or comments, please do not hesitate to contact me. Until next time, thanks for your continued readership.

Railroad's purchases allow corporate move considerations

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) - A Union Pacific Corp. spokesman says the sale of two subsidiary companies would make it feasible for the company to consider moving its headquarters to Omaha from Dallas, the Omaha World-Herald reported in today's editions.

The sale of Skyway Freight Systems and Overnite Transportation could be completed by early next year, Gary Schuster, vice president of corporate relations, told the newspaper.

After the sale, UP Corp. will include the Omaha-based Union Pacific Railroad and a much smaller transportation technology company in St. Louis.

It might then make sense for UP to consolidate its headquarters in Omaha, Schuster said.

"I'm sure there will be some discussion of that, but that's really a board (of directors) decision," he said.

Jim Hildreth, senior assistant vice president of communications, today downplayed any talk of a move. "The corporation is headquartered in Dallas and that's where it's going to stay," Hildreth said. "There are no plans for a move. There haven't been and there aren't now."

In recent months, staff at the Dallas headquarters has been trimmed from 45 to 19, with some employees transferring to Omaha. Dick Davidson, UP Corp.'s chairman and chief executive, has an office in Dallas but spends more time at the railroad's headquarters in Omaha, another UP spokesman said. Davidson also is chairman of the railroad.

Bob Bell, president of the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce, said he had not heard of plans to move UP headquarters to the city.

The railroad already employs 4,516 people in Omaha. Union Pacific Corp. had its headquarters in New York City for decades and moved to Bethlehem, Pa., after Drew Lewis, a Pennsylvania, became chairman in 1987.

When Davidson became chairman last year, he decided to move the corporate office closer to the railroad's operating region. Last April, UP chose Dallas over St. Louis, citing UP's overall presence in Texas, where it has 8,000 employees. About 340 of those are in Dallas.

Schuster said it was premature to discuss moving the headquarters now, but said the possibility could be part of future discussions.

"Obviously, for cost purposes and other efficiencies, when you're doing strategic planning, it's something that comes up as part of the mix," he said.

Skyway, a transportation logistics and air freight company, has a distribution center near Dallas. And Overnite, a trucking company with headquarters in Richmond, Va., has terminals in Texas.

In the past year, UP has made plans to sell off both companies and has accounted for losses it expects to take on the sales.

Union Pacific had planned to spin off Overnite in a public stock offering last summer but postponed it, citing a soft market for such offerings. The company also had been battling with the Teamsters union, which had threatened to strike Overnite.

Vaccine protects newborns

Treatment considered major breakthrough

SAN DIEGO (AP) - For the first time, a vaccine has been shown to give newborns powerful protection against the nation's biggest cause of earaches and meningitis in children.

Dr. Steven Black, who tested the vaccine, pronounced it "one of the major breakthroughs for the public health of children in this decade."

Doctors said they believe the vaccine against pneumococcus bacteria will quickly become a routine childhood shot once it is approved by the Food and Drug Administration. It could be on the market by 2000.

Black and other doctors from the Kaiser Permanente Vaccine Study Center in Oakland tested the vaccine on more than 38,000 children in Northern California. They released the results in San Diego on Friday at a conference sponsored by the American Society for Microbiology.

Worldwide, infections with pneumococcus bacteria kill an estimated 1.2 million children under 5 each year.

"It's a big win for children," said Dr. Jerome Klein of Boston University Medical School.

The study was financed by Wyeth Lederle Vaccines, which is developing the vaccine.

Bacterial meningitis was once one of the most dreaded childhood illnesses because of its power to kill its victims quickly or leave them mentally retarded or deaf. Until recent years, the disease struck between 10,000 and 20,000 people in the United States annually.

That changed in 1990 with the introduction of vaccines against Haemophilus influenzae, the dominant cause of meningitis. Since then, meningitis has declined by almost 90 percent in children.

The single biggest cause of the remaining cases is pneumococcus bacteria, also known as Streptococcus pneumoniae. The bug is also the leading cause of otitis media, the ubiquitous childhood ear infection that is not only painful but also raises the risk of hearing problems.

While a pneumococcal vaccine exists for older children, it does not work for children under 2, who make up most of the victims of the germ. The new vaccine was tested in young children to see if it protects against meningitis as well as bacterial blood poisoning and otitis media.

Black said the vaccine reduced meningitis and bloodstream infections by 90 percent. There were three cases among the 19,000 babies receiving the vaccine and 27 in a comparison group who got a vaccine aimed at a different kind of bacteria.

The researchers hope to learn within a few weeks whether the vaccine also protects against ear infections. Black said he is optimistic, based on the vaccine's dramatic effect on the most serious forms of infection.

If it does protect against ear infections, the vaccine is likely to be especially welcome news for parents. Otitis media is a leading reason for children's doctor visits.

In fact, a University of Kentucky study that was released at the conference followed 251 children and found that episodes of otitis media accounted for one-quarter of all office visits during the first three years of life.

The version of the vaccine tested protects against seven of the 80 strains pneumococcal bacteria. These seven typically account for about 85 percent of pneumococcal disease.

The three cases of potentially serious disease in the vaccinated babies were caused by strains of the bug not covered by the shot. Black said versions of the vaccine under development will protect against more varieties of the bacteria.

Matter of Fact

Rick Perry
Texas Agriculture Commissioner

Medical researchers continue to discover what most of us have known for years: Texas fruits and vegetables are not only good, they're also very good for you.

The latest example comes from a study by the American Heart Association. Based on their results, they advise people with high blood pressure to eat more fruits and vegetables as well as low-fat and no-fat dairy products to keep their hypertension under control. That change in the diet, coupled with cutting back on salt, can actually lower stroke risk by 15 percent and heart disease risk by 6 percent.

The Texas Department of Agriculture has been working with the American Heart Association for some time to get folks to enjoy five or more servings of Texas fruits and vegetables each day. The "Lone Star Way to 5 A Day" program has proven to be an easy sell because our state's produce is low in calories, contains almost no fat and is rich with vitamins, minerals and fiber.

Texas is the third largest producer of fresh fruits and vegetables in the nation with the produce industry contributing more than $1 billion to the state's economy. Our state's produce industry also contributes to the overall health of Texans. That's a finding that needs no research to confirm.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

The Power of Positioning for Profit

(Last of a three-part series)

In part one of this series, I identified positioning as giving your customers advantages and benefits they can't get anywhere else. In part two last week, I detailed four rock-solid positions for small businesses. This week I will add four more strong positions to help you grow and generate profit.

More Rock-Solid Positions

The People Power Position. When Sam Walton was asked about his success with Wal-Mart, he often gave credit to the associates he recruited. And so it is with your business. You'll never be any better than the folks you hire. Here are ten ways to create a people power position:

- 1) Create an environment where bright, talented people enjoy working.
- 2) Find the right people for your team.
- 3) Don't wait until you desperately need someone to look for quality folks.
- 4) Hire only C.U.T.E. people: Courteous communicators, who are Urting, Truthful and Enthusiastic.
- 5) Give preference to good attitude over good skills.
- 6) Pay your associates fairly.
- 7) Give them incentives (ownership, education, bonuses, etc) for results.
- 8) Give them your respect and praise.
- 9) Lead them to excellence with your example.
- 10) Be flexible with your personnel policies.

The Kaizen Position. Kaizen is a Japanese word that means "continuing improvement, involving everyone." You may be leading the pack right now, but if you don't continue to improve you may end up at the back of the pack.

The key to the Kaizen approach is to remember that if you can't measure it, you can't improve it. You can begin the Kaizen process with just a few measurable criteria. Look at improving areas such as: sales per square foot, the average sale per customer, your gross profit margin, your net income, your debt to equity ratio, or your return on investment.

The Technology Position. I believe that one of the key reasons why fast-growth companies don't explode into failure is because of their ability to "manage" with technology. Technology opens doors to information you will need to make quick, effective decisions.

Technology can help you track sales and customer information, expenses and inventory. It will help you with marketing and promotion, customer communication and business presentations. It can help you with invoicing and collecting, lets you create "what if" scenarios and empowers you to reach global customers via the World Wide Web.

The Internet - which may be one of the best tools for small-business owners in the coming decade - can also be used to gather information you'll need in your business. You must exercise caution here because not all information available online is valid. Check the credibility of your sources before making any monetary decisions.

The Power Promoter Strategy. Strong promotion tells your customers what advantages and benefits you offer. With powerful promotion you highlight the differences between you and your competition.

Good promotion will help you reach your target customers and will point out your uniqueness to them. They won't be lured away by your competitors if they can see the difference.

The great news is that power promotion doesn't have to cost a lot. Some of the best ideas cost less than $100. Here's a free tip: I have a list of 75 low-cost promotion tips. I'll send you at no cost. Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Don Taylor - 75 Tips, PO Box 67, Amarillo, TX 79105.

I hope these positioning strategies will help you serve your customers more effectively, generate more profit and enjoy your business more. Repositioning your business will take some time. However, don't let a day go by without making some progress. Your long-term success depends on it.

Every other month, members of the Texas Panhandle Library System meet to conduct business and, usually in the afternoon, there is some sort of training session. This last week was the time for the meeting. I always enjoy them. Not only do the various libraries bring really good snacks, but the fellowship is good, too.

It's refreshing to get together with librarians from the other public libraries in the Panhandle and share concerns, funny stories, and solutions to everyday problems. And, we get to catch up with our old friend, Joe Weaver. I called him "old friend" on purpose. He would do not less for me!

Some good things are happening in the Panhandle. Plans are being made to apply for a grant to implement more new technology in area libraries. Most small libraries could benefit from some new stuff that will help to bring the resources of the world to places like Perryton and Spearman (Hereford, too). There are so many new ways to do so many things that have not been possible before. It sounds pretty exciting.

In case you can't tell, I'm sold on the idea of groups such as Texas Panhandle Library System and Harrington Library Consortium. You can always get more done by working together, and it's a lot more fun.

In Salamander by J. Robert Janes, Jean-Louis St-Cyr, chief inspector of the Surete Nationale, and a French patriot, has been paired with Kohler of the Gestapo to fight common crime in a time when officially-sanctioned crime on a grand scale is ignored. Kohler carries both men's guns. Only when there is immediate danger is Kohler supposed to allow St-Cyr to have his. St-Cyr tries to protect his countrymen from the Occupiers while he is investigating ordinary crimes, but since the Gestapo is in charge of all police matters, he must walk a fine line. It is 1942 in Lyon, France.

Two days before Christmas, a cinema is set on fire and one hundred and eighty-three Frenchmen, women and children die in the blaze. The two policemen must determine if the fire is related to another series of fires in three German cities. Or might it be a Resistance plot? Several Resistance members died in the fire. Was it a Nazi trap gone awry, or just a common pyromaniac?

The firebug has been given the name Salamander. To uncover his/her identity, the team must solve several other murders, overcoming obstacles erected not only by Gestapo Headquarters in Berlin, but by the Bishop of Lyon, members of the local Establishment, and by the notorious Klaus Barbie.

James W. Hall, author of Buzz Cut, has a new book out, Body Language. Alexandra Rafferty is a forensic photographer for the Miami Police Department. An unspeakably horrible event of her childhood now colors all her relationships and feeds her obsession with her work, photographing a gruesome series of rape-murders.

Before she can understand the murderer's message left in the unusual positioning of his victims, Alexandra's life spins out of control, sending her on the run from her estranged husband, from the crooks after him, from a surprisingly persistent boyfriend, and from a killer who is bent on making sure she won't live long enough to translate his words. Throw in her aging, not-quite-together father and you have a real page-turner.

Jade Island by Elizabeth Lowell is the story of Kyle Donovan, who has just separated himself from Donovan International, his father's high-powered trading empire, and established his own business, Donovan Gems. Now his older brother, president of the family business has just given Kyle an assignment with explosive international implications, and an alliance that will shake the very core of his being.

Lianne Blakely, the illegitimate daughter of a powerful Hong Kong trader and his American mistress, has spent years studying ancient jade, hoping to win the approval of her Chinese family. A brilliant gemologist, she has gained employment in the Tang family business, if not acceptance in the family. Now the Jade Emperor, one of China's legendary cultural treasures, has been stolen and Lianne is accused of the theft.

Soon Kyle and Lianne have joined forces to find the real thief--a venture that draws them into peril of international power plays and the discovery that their mutual love for the exquisite gemstone has linked them in an alliance as enduring as the beauty of the ancient jade.

Do Pharmacists Sell Farms? by Vince Staten takes us back in time when the corner drugstore was the place where mothers met in the morning to trade gossip, where businessmen met in the afternoon to lunch and cut deals, and where teenagers gathered after school for a soda and a smile. The corner drugstore was also the place where many people had what their doctor was doing to them explained so they could actually understand it.

This book is a humorously nostalgic trip back to the time of soda jerks and Vitalis with V7. Whether you remember sitting on the stool at the soda fountain or just wishing to experience the corner drugstore for the first time, you will enjoy this trip back in time.

Today in History

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Sept. 27, the 270th day of 1998. There are 95 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Sept. 27, 1939, Warsaw, Poland, surrendered after weeks of resistance to invading forces from Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union during World War II.

On this date:

In 1779, John Adams was named to negotiate the Revolutionary War's peace terms with Britain.

In 1825, the first locomotive to haul a passenger train was operated by George Stephenson in England.

In 1854, the first great disaster involving an Atlantic Ocean liner occurred when the steamship Arctic sank with 300 people aboard.

In 1928, the United States announced plans to recognize the Nationalist Chinese government.

In 1942, Glenn Miller and his Orchestra performed together for the last time, at the Central Theater in Passaic, N.J., prior to Miller's entry into the Army.

In 1943, Bing Crosby, the Andrews Sisters and the Vic Schoen Orchestra recorded "Pistol Packin' Mama" and "Jingle Bells" for Decca Records.

In 1954, "Tonight!" hosted by Steve Allen, made its debut on NBC.

In 1959, a typhoon battered the main Japanese island of Honshu, killing nearly 5,000 people.

In 1964, the Warren Commission issued a report concluding that Lee Harvey Oswald had acted alone in assassinating President Kennedy.

In 1979, Congress gave final approval to forming the Department of Education, the 13th Cabinet agency in U.S. history.

Ten years ago: Three days after placing first in the men's 100-meter dash at the Seoul Summer Olympics, Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson left for home in disgrace, stripped of his gold medal by officials who said he had used anabolic steroids.

Five years ago: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison, R-Texas, was indicted on charges that, as Texas state treasurer, she'd misused state facilities and employees. The indictment was dismissed for technical reasons; Hutchison was reindicted and later acquitted. Retired Gen. James H. Doolittle died in Pebble Beach, Calif., at age 96.

One year ago: The space shuttle Atlantis blasted off, docking hours later with the problem-plagued Russian Mir station to drop off American David Wolf and pick up Michael Foale.

Today's Birthdays: Former Illinois Sen. Charles Percy is 79. Movie director Arthur Penn is 76. Actress Sada Thompson is 69. Actress Kathleen Nolan is 65.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

To Have & to Hold vows to be romantic ever after

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

There has been an explosion of shows about big Irish-American families on TV this fall, but To Have & to Hold is surely the most romantic.

Debuting Wednesday, Sept. 30, on CBS, Have stars Jason Beghe and Moira Kelly as a couple about to begin the rest of their lives together in the most romantic way: by getting married.

"It seems like, on television, if you're married, sex stops, romance stops," executive producer Scott Shepherd observes. "And what we're trying to say is that, basically, marriage is a very romantic thing."

In the pilot episode, public defender Annie Cornell (Kelly) is putting the last touches on her plans to marry Boston police detective Sean McGrail (Beghe), whom she has known since childhood. In fact, Annie's older sister, Carolyn (Colleen Flynn), already is married to Patrick McGrail (Stephen Lee), one of Sean's brothers.

Since the couple will remain in the neighborhood where they grew up, their romance has a communal side as well as a private one. They know everyone on their block, and everyone knows them.

The driving force behind Have is writer Joanne Waters, a daughter of the Irish working-class neighborhood where the show is set.

"I only write about what I know about. I'm not going to write about a farm family in Iowa," says Waters, who spent several uncomfortable weeks last winter trying to fit into the writing staff of Dawson's Creek.

"I'm not into the Sturm und Drang drama aspect, and I'm not yucking it up (with this show), either," she says. "I think that life is humorous and tragic at the same time."

After writing The Doyles, a family drama that almost made it onto CBS' schedule last season, Waters hit pay dirt when she reworked the concept to focus on romance.

"It's not the type of show where (you wonder,) 'Are they going to get married, or are they not going to get married?' It's sort of how two people join together and try to get to the same goal," Waters says.

"And then we have the couple who has children and who are dealing with all those kind of issues."

In the tradition of "women's movies" of decades gone by, Have promises never to turn into a cop show. It isn't about an exclusively Irish experience, either, Shepherd explains.

"We see it as a relationship show about a marriage and this couple and their family. The themes that go through it should be universal.

"We try to start with something that's going on between the two of them in their relationship," he continues. "And then we try to find the cop-and-lawyer story that will give us the playground, basically, to explore those themes. (Sean and Annie will) talk about the case, which is a way for them to work out what's going on between them."

Sean and Annie's relationship is definitely a passionate one, both when they're enjoying marital bliss and when they're butting heads in disagreement. It all seems completely natural to Waters, who grew up in a community where even the girls had fistfights.

In the end, though, love will conquer all. Romance, as Shepherd defines it, is "what couples do for each other when they love each other. And that's what we're trying to (show) every week."

A public defender and a police detective (Moira Kelly, Jason Beghe) plan their marriage in the premiere of To Have & to Hold. The romantic drama about the Irish-American couple and their extended family airs Wednesdays on CBS.

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ Sept. 27-Oct. 3 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20
Don't stand back when you see someone making a grave mistake early in the week, Aries. Stop him or her before things get too far along, and try to correct the situation. Your efforts will be rewarded. An old friend asks a favor of you. Don't commit to something that you'll regret.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21
Don't fight change when it comes to your work this week. The old way of doing things isn't always the best way. Think of it as an improvement. A loved one has an important project for you. Don't be nervous; you definitely are up to the task. Show him or her exactly what you can do.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21
Don't get impatient when it comes to a personal matter on Tuesday. You've done all that you can; now, you just have to wait for the outcome. Don't worry; things will work out in your favor. The person whom you've been seeing gets into trouble. Be there for him or her; show how much you really care.

CANCER - June 22/July 22
A business associate confides in you about an upcoming event. Keep it to yourself. It is not your place to tell anyone else about this. A family gathering gets a little out of hand late in the week. Do what you can to keep everyone calm. Aquarius plays an important role on Saturday.

LEO - July 23/August 23
Keep your eyes and ears open this week, Leo. Something suspicious is going on. It is in your best interest to find out what it is. A close friend is in a bind and needs your help. Do what you can — even if it involves rearranging your plans. It will be worth your while.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22
A business associate asks to borrow money. Say no. This person hasn't given you any reason to trust him or her in the past; don't trust him or her now. You run into an old friend late in the week, and those old feelings flare up. Make plans to see him or her again. This is the beginning of a great relationship.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23
Don't take an acquaintance's wisecracks to heart. He or she is just frustrated, and you're the closest person around. Just let it go in one ear and out the other. A loved one causes a family argument. Help sort things out, and try to get family members talking again. It's not going to be easy.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22
You learn some disappointing news about a close friend. Give him or her the benefit of the doubt until you find out the truth. That special someone has a surprise for you. Before you accept it, think about the consequences. Are you ready for them? Taurus plays a key role.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21
You feel really good this week, Sagittarius. Share your joy with those around you. You're sure to brighten their day. A friend of a friend needs your help. Do what you can for him or her. Your efforts will be appreciated and rewarded.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20
Don't let your drive to succeed overcome your loyalty to your friends. Betraying those close to you only will cause you problems in the long run. A loved one gets into a sticky situation and needs you to bail him or her out. Do what you can, but don't get too involved with the problem.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18
Be practical when it comes to planning your week, Aquarius. Don't bite off more than you can chew. There's a lot going on that needs your full attention. A business associate wants you two to be more than co-workers. Don't get involved with him or her; it only will lead to trouble.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20
While it goes against your nature, Pisces, you get greedy with your possessions. Share what you have with those closest to you; they're not going to take anything away from you. A close friend takes you to an interesting party late in the week. Try to have a good time. You meet someone very interesting there.

IN FOCUS

ABC offers a double shot of its new drama series starring Michael Madsen. Vengeance Unlimited premieres Tuesday, Sept. 29, then moves into its regular Thursday time slot on Thursday, Oct. 1.

Madsen plays the enigmatic Mr. Chapel, whose first name is only one of many mysteries. Chapel makes it his business to bring to justice criminals who have slipped through the cracks of the system. Aiding him in his work is a young paralegal who tries to keep his efforts on the right side of the law.

Sunday, Sept. 27, on CBS, Reba McEntire and Tim Matheson star in Forever Love, a poignant drama based on a true story.

Twenty years after falling into a coma, Lizzie (McEntire) awakens to a world quite different from what she remembers.

While she was sleeping, her devoted husband (Matheson), their daughter and Lizzie's best friend forged a strong bond. Now the trio has to adjust as Lizzie becomes an active part of their daily lives.

MONDAY

Caroline and Del (Lea Thompson, Eric Lutes) explore a new development in their relationship in Caroline in the City, airing Mondays on NBC.

Edward Windsor, seventh in line to the throne of England, takes viewers on a tour of historic English sites in Crown & Country, premiering Sunday on PBS (check local listings).

Windsor guides PBS viewers on tour of British realm

PBS viewers have an unusually qualified guide to English historical sites as Crown & Country, a series of six half-hour programs, begins with a two-hour special on Sunday, Sept. 27 (check local listings).

Edward Windsor, the third son of Queen Elizabeth II and the Duke of Edinburgh, offers a perspective unique to members of the royal family during this tour of the towns, castles and cathedrals that have played a significant role in his country's history.

The special is a condensed and slightly modified preview of the six programs that will air on PBS beginning in October. The sites to be visited and the airdates for the complete half-hours to come are as follows:

- Windsor Castle (Oct. 7), the world's largest occupied castle and the principal home of Edward and his family;

- Portsmouth (Oct. 12), the oldest naval base in the world;

- Cambridge (Nov. 16), one of the most celebrated seats of learning, where Edward himself was educated;
- Sandringham House in Norfolk (Nov. 30), where the royal family spends Christmas;

- Winchester (Dec. 21), an ancient Saxon capital, thought to be the home of King Arthur of lore; and

- Bury St. Edmunds (Dec. 28), where King Edmund was martyred in the ninth century.

Researching and writing this series rekindled his passion for the "damn good stories" contained in the history of his country, the prince says, but editing the series was frustrating.

"We found such a mass of wonderful stories, which were slowly whittled away either because they couldn't be illustrated or simply because, in 30-minute programs, we didn't have time to include them," he says.

As a result, each program is lean and packed with information. Regardless of whether you breathlessly follow the Windsors or your interest in royalty begins and ends at Dairy Queen, Crown & Country will hold you.

TV PIPELINE

Q: Matt Frewer of Psi Factor: Chronicles of the Paranormal looks so familiar. Where have I seen him before? —Gayla Morris via e-mail.

A: Most people know Frewer from two major TV roles: Max Headroom in the ABC cult fantasy of that name, and wacky Dr. Mike Stratford in the hilarious CBS sitcom Doctor, Doctor. In the TV adaptation of Stephen King's The Stand, Frewer played the demented Trashcan Man.

Q: What else has Heather Medway of Viper done? She looks like a model. —J. Comp, Manchester, N.H.

A: Your instincts are right on target. Medway was a Star Search spokesmodel back in 1989 and had her first series role as Stephanie on Fox's Models Inc.

She followed that up with guest appearances on Friends, Seinfeld, the 1994-95 remake of Burke's Law, and Robin's Hoods. Her movie credits include Vibrations, Serpent's Lair and The Fear.

Q: With The Avengers in movie theaters, is there any chance of seeing the old series with Diana Rigg again on TV? —Diana Aycocck, Colorado Springs, Colo.

A: Not likely. The Avengers movie was one of the summer's biggest bombs.

The good news is A&E Home Video recently released several of the TV episodes starring Rigg and Patrick Macnee on videocassette.

Q: My mother and I are having an argument. I say that James L. Brooks is/was the executive producer of The Simpsons, Rhoda and The Mary Tyler Moore Show. She says I am confusing him with his brother. Who is right? —French Wildcat, Muskogee, Okla.

A: You are correct. Brooks, 58, is one of the most gifted artists in Hollywood. He won Emmys as an executive producer of both The Simpsons and The Mary Tyler Moore Show, and held the same position on two other award-winning TV sitcoms, Rhoda and Taxi (three more Emmys), as well as the critically acclaimed Lou Grant.

On the big screen, he won a triple Oscar for writing, producing and directing Terms of Endearment, and was nominated for his work on Broadcast News, Jerry Maguire and As Good As It Gets.

Q: Regarding a recent husband and wife argument about whether Tallulah Bankhead or Bette Davis had done that famous episode of The Lucy-Desi Comedy Hour: According to The I Love Lucy Book by Bart Andrews, Davis originally signed to do the episode but hurt her back. Bankhead was hired to replace her. —Fred Causey via e-mail.

A: Very interesting! Thanks for writing, Fred.

SOAP WORLD

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

After two years on The Young and the Restless and six years on The Bold and the Beautiful, actress Kimberlin Brown is saying goodbye to the character fans love to hate - Sheila.

Brown was surprised to learn that she had been let go.

"It hasn't really sunk in yet," she says. "I don't know how I feel."

The actress will have more time with her family, but she does not plan to rest on her laurels.

"My immediate plans are to go on other auditions and find employment again."

To her fans, Brown says, "Thank you for all your support for the last eight years. It was a lot of fun playing Sheila. I got lucky. Hopefully, I'll have a chance to come back and play her again."

Sheila's story line is being left open, so a return is possible.

Actors Charles Grant (Grant) and Ken Hanes (Mike) also are leaving B&B in October.

B&B recently decided to write the character Grant off the show, and how he should depart has been debated for several months. At press time, it was not known if the character would leave to seek treatment for his disease or if he would die.

Hanes' character is leaving with Sheila. Originally, Mike was supposed to be around for three days, but he stayed with the show for more than six years.

Dear Candace: Am I the only person watching General Hospital who remembers Luke (Anthony Geary) had two romantic interests when Laura (Genie Francis) was gone?

How can he leave her and act as though she is at fault? He was involved with Jackie (Demi Moore) and even got Holly (Emma Samms) pregnant when Laura was gone.

He doesn't seem to remember any of that. -Jean Cain, Olive Branch, Miss.

Dear Reader: Luke doesn't seem to remember any of the stupid things he did in the past. Many soap opera characters have selective memories when it comes to their mistakes.

Supplement to The Hereford Brand

Margie's Notes

By Margie Daniels, HSCA Executive Director

How time flies!

Al and I moved to Hereford Aug. 15, 1978, from Panhandle. He worked for Morman Mfg. Co. and we were transferred to the plant here. At that time I thought my world had ended because I had to leave what I thought was the best job in the world as administrator of a small retirement home.

I will always believe God was responsible for the move, although I didn't see it then. If we had still been in Panhandle one month later, Al would have been transferred to San Antonio, but because we had just gotten settled here, the company did not make us move.

After settling in our home at 126 Juniper, I started looking for a job. At that time I had decided not to work with the elderly because it hurt too much to lose them or have to leave them. While filling our employee applications, I met Carlos Anderson at the oil company. He was looking for a bookkeeper and really I can do that. You know, eight hours a day, five days a week! But Carlos wouldn't hire me because he said I had too much to offer people and would go out of my mind in that little room facing the wall. He was right, I could not have taken that! When we built this building he always told me he was responsible for me having the opportunity to work for Hereford's Senior Citizens.

It was then I know I had to work serving people and found the Senior Citizens were looking for a director. The board of directors hired me on Oct. 12, reporting to work on Oct. 15, 1978. This has been a very challenging and rewarding 20 years. Thank you for letting Al and me be a part of helping the senior programs develop and grow.

Remember the Festival of Trees project! We are busy in all areas, finishing details, getting commitments for items for the Bazaar, Bake Sale, and the Silent Auction. We need all the help possible. Come by and talk with us if you have suggestions and can work. This is a hard working time but also a fun time.

I have been told by several people that it is rumored around town that we are going to have to close the center because of the lack of funds. Just because we need to go up on the suggested donation of meals and need to have fund-raisers does not mean we are going to close. The worst scenario would be to cut some of our services. And we do not want to do that.

When we receive the same federal and state funding for 15 years and with the cost of rising prices in that length of time, we are like any business, we have to adjust cost. Everything we buy is considerably higher in cost than 15 years ago. At the end of each fiscal year, money does get very scarce. We need more sources of income. We have received several large memorials this month.

We have the HSC Permanent Foundation Fund that helps with a small amount of the annual budget. Last week our foundation received a donation from the Carol and Katherine Perrin Foundation for $47,600. We certainly appreciated this wonderful donation. The center uses the interest from the foundation funds for operating expenses. My goal was to have at least $1,000,000 in the foundation funds by the time I retire so the association would have more flexibility in services. It takes a lot of time seeking funding and I would much rather work more with people.

Remember the Christmas tour! We need your deposit immediately.

There are several articles in our paper about our activities. Please pay close attention to them.

Thanks to all of our seniors and community for letting me be a part of your lives!

See you at the Center.

President's Corner

By Norma Thurston, HSCA President

Hello!!

Well, we have entered the fall season and the weather is teasing us with cooler days and nights. Fall means it is time for HSCA's membership to vote for three new members to serve on the Board of Directors. The board's nominating committee will present a slate of candidates at the Oct. 7 annual membership meeting, where voting will begin at 1 p.m. Voters need to show current membership cards, so be sure your dues have been paid. (So far only half of HSCA's membership has paid the annual $12.50 membership fee).

As Margie has mentioned in previous columns, our funds are getting low and we do depend on them to keep our center operating efficiently. Our center is a place we are very proud of, as it serves as a place where our seniors can visit, play games, attend information sessions, exercise, get transportation, and enjoy a well-balanced meal. We have a nutritionist who works with us to see that our meal are well-balanced as well as tasty.

In our last board meeting, we voted to raise the suggested donation amount of our meals in an effort to offset some of the rising food costs. We are in a budget crunch because, despite rising costs, funding we receive through the Nutrition Program has remained at the same level it was 15 years ago.

Speaking of funding, the Christmas season will be upon us soon as our Festival of Trees will begin Nov. 18. This annual event is our major fund-raiser and the hard work began months ago. Baskets, Christmas wreaths, and small decorated trees are only some of the items created by volunteers. Other volunteers are making decorations for sale trees, after deciding upon a theme.

This will be my final column as your president. My term on the board is expiring, as are terms of L.J. Clark and Mark Koenig. I hope to see you at the center.

Love, Norma

Study says elderly women face anxiety in breast cancer testing

WASHINGTON (AP) - A study says doctors need to do a better job of explaining to elderly women that a suspicious mammogram does not necessarily mean they have breast cancer.

For every 1,000 women aged 65 to 69 who had a mammogram, 85 were sent for additional testing or biopsies - and only seven were ultimately found to have cancer, the study reports in today's Journal of the National Cancer Institute. For women 70 or over, 81 per 1,000 needed additional testing or biopsies and 10 had cancer.

"Elderly women need to be prepared for the fact that undergoing screening mammography is likely to involve follow-up testing, and that doesn't necessarily mean you have cancer," said study author Dr. H. Gilbert Welch of Dartmouth Medical School.

But Welch's study raises a bigger question: At what age are women too old to benefit from regular mammograms?

Doctors agree that women must start having mammograms in their 40s and definitely should get one every year from age 50 to 69. After that, the question gets murky.

Because they've never studied them, scientists have no proof that mammograms benefit women over 70.

But Welch's findings show the tests have a definite downside, Dr. Karla Kerlikowske of the University of California, San Francisco, wrote in an accompanying editorial.

Women 70 and older are at an age where they're much more likely to die of heart disease than breast cancer, she explained.

When to stop mammograms is "a tough question," said Dr. Robert Smith of the American Cancer Society, which has never set an upper age limit and wants better research.

"There are hundreds of thousands of very vibrant 70-year-olds," Smith said, and those women are likely to live many years and thus need mammograms.

But sickly 70-somethings and women who pass 85 may not need the tests. They might not withstand the treatment if cancer occurred, or the tumors may be growing too slowly to bother, Kerlikowske said.

LACTOSE INTOLERANCE

What is lactose intolerance?

Lactose intolerance is a set of symptoms resulting from the body's inability to digest the milk sugar called lactose. Lactose is commonly found in dairy-based foods and beverages, and is digested in the intestines by the enzyme lactase. Lactase breaks down lactose so it can be absorbed into the bloodstream. When the body does not produce enough lactase, lactose cannot be digested which results in lactose intolerance. Individuals may have varying degrees of intolerance to lactose.

Between 30 to 50 million Americans suffer from lactose intolerance. In fact, 75 percent of adults worldwide do not produce adequate amounts of the lactase enzyme, and therefore may experience some or all of symptoms of lactose intolerance.

If you are lactose intolerant, you share this condition with many people. It is estimated that 90 percent of Asian-Americans are lactose intolerant and 75 percent of all African, Native Americans, Jews, and Hispanics in the U.S. have insufficient levels of lactase enzyme and may experience some or all symptoms.

What are the symptoms?

Depending on the individual, the symptoms may vary including cramps, bloating, gas, diarrhea, and nausea. If you experience these symptoms after eating dairy products speak to your doctor for accurate evaluation.

How can I manage lactose intolerance?

Lactose intolerance can be easily managed. Because some individuals may produce small amounts of lactase, they may be able to consume small servings of dairy products or other foods that contain lactose without experiencing discomfort. A larger amount of lactase is needed to digest a larger amount of lactose, so eating a larger serving of lactose-containing foods could result in symptoms of lactose intolerance.

Consider the following suggestions:

* Drink milk in servings of one (1) cup or less.

* Try hard cheeses that are low in lactose, like cheddar.

Seniors have chance for free holiday flying

Southwest Airlines is offering free flights for Seniors during the Christmas holidays this year. People age 65 or over with a demonstrated economic need qualify for this special program.

Applications, available at Hereford Senior Citizens Center, must be completed by Seniors by Tuesday, Oct. 13. The Center will then forward the applications to Southwest Airlines.

Tickets are valid from Monday,

* Drink milk with a meal or with other foods.

* Try yogurt with active cultures.

* Substitute lactose-reduced dairy products, such as nonfat, lowfat, and calcium-fortified milk, cottage cheese, yogurt, and ice cream, for regular dairy products.

* Take lactase enzyme tablets before or with dairy products.

* Add lactase enzyme drops to regular milk.

Do other nondairy foods also contain lactose?

Some nondairy foods may include ingredients that contain lactose. The ingredient list on food packages informs you of lactose or lactase-containing ingredients in the food. Although dairy products are the most common sources of lactose, some nondairy processed or baked foods contain smaller amounts.

Individuals who experience symptoms of lactose intolerance with small amounts of lactose-containing foods should look for the words such as "whey," "lactose," "nonfat milk solids," "buttermilk," "malted milk," "margarine," and "sweet" or "sour cream." Some breads, dry cereals, cookies, instant soups, breakfast drinks, and milk chocolate contain small amounts of lactose. Always ask the pharmacist if medications you take contain lactose.

Does lactose-reduced milk contain the same nutrients as regular milk?

Lactose-reduced milk contains the same amounts of protein, vitamins A, D and riboflavin, and the minerals calcium, phosphorus and magnesium as regular milk. Some lactose-reduced milk is also calcium-fortified. Check the Nutrition Facts label for the amounts of nutrients in milk. Dairy products are a significant source of calcium and other minerals needed for healthy bones and teeth. Two to three servings from milk, yogurt and cheese group help provide the calcium and other minerals you need each day.

What foods contain calcium?

Many foods contain calcium: broccoli, kale, canned salmon with bones, calcium-fortified breads and tofu. Read the Nutrition Fact label for the amounts of calcium in these foods. A healthy well-balanced eating pattern includes foods from all food groups: bread, cereal, rice, pasta, fruits, vegetables, meats, poultry, fish, eggs, dry beans, nuts, milk, yogurt and cheese.

Dec. 7, 1998 through Saturday, Jan. 16, 1999. These dates will not be extended under any circumstances. Tickets have no cash value and cannot be traded. They cannot be reissued and can only be used by the recipient. Ground transportation and travel expenses are not provided.

Recipients of the free tickets will be notified by phone or by mail from Southwest Airlines no later than Dec. 1.

Suggested donations increase for meal cost

Suggested donations for noon meals served by Hereford Senior Citizens Center have been raised. New amounts are effective Oct. 1.

The decision to raise amounts was made during the Sept. meeting of HSCA's Board of Directors. The move was necessitated by the fact that federal funding has remained at the same amount for 15 years while food costs have risen dramatically.

New suggested donations are:

* $3.00 per person (age 60 and over)

* $4.50 per person (under 60 years old)

* $2.00 per person (children age 6 and under)

However, "it is important that Seniors understand these are SUGGESTED donations only," said Margie Daniels, Center Director. "Seniors may pay whatever they can afford--we welcome any donation."

We Can Explain Why You Need An IRA In Two Words:

Social Security.

If you're going up the hump, not over the hill, then you've probably realized by now that Social Security isn't going to be quite as secure as you once believed.

An Individual Retirement Account at Hereford State Bank is a very smart investment toward your future because it's a personal savings plan that provides a substantial retirement fund, and also allows you to defer taxes on the principal as well as the accrued interest each year.

Because your earnings on an IRA investment are tax-deferred, they build much faster than many comparable investments.

Of course, the sooner you start the better off you'll be. After all, you're getting close enough to see the top of the hill. Which leads us to our final two words.

Don't delay.

GRANDMA'S APRON

Do you remember Grandma's apron? Always big they were, and their uses great. Besides the foremost purpose, the protection of the dress beneath, it was a holder for removing hot pans from the oven. It was wonderful for drying children's tears and yes, even for wiping small noses. From the hen house it carried eggs, fuzzy chicks, ducklings or goslings and sometimes half-hatched eggs to be finished in the warming oven. Its fold provided an ideal hiding place for shy children, and when guests lingered, it wiped perspiring brow over a hot wood-burning stove. Chips and kindling came to the kitchen stove in that ample garment, as did fresh peas and string beans from the garden. Often they were podded and stemmed in the lap the apron covered. Wind-fall apples were gathered in it, and wild flowers. Chairs were hastily dusted with its corners when unexpected company was sighted. Waving it aloft was as good as a dinner bell to call the men from the field. Big they were, and useful. Now I wonder, will any modern plastic apron provoke such nostalgic memories?

Hypertension affects millions; can be silent killer

By Dr. JOSEPH WEISSTUCH

NEW YORK (AP) - Hypertension, known as the "silent disease," can be compared to pumping too much air into a tire. Too high pressure will damage the tire. Eventually, untreated high blood pressure can damage the body's vascular system.

Hypertension, or high blood pressure, afflicts about 50 million Americans. Left untreated, it can lead to a heart attack, a stroke, circulatory problems and other health complications.

The condition is called the "silent" disease because there are no noticeable symptoms in 95 percent of cases. The problem is usually discovered during a routine office visit or when severe symptoms, including dizziness, headache or breathing difficulty occur.

Contrary to popular belief, high blood pressure is not caused by tension or stress, although these factors may produce a temporary rise in blood pressure. Factors that may influence increased blood pressure may include age, weight, diet, smoking, heredity and an underlying illness.

Normal blood pressure is about 120 over 80. The first number represents systolic pressure, the peak pressure at the moment the heart contracts and pumps blood into the arteries. The lower number is diastolic pressure, the lowest pressure in the arteries just before the next contraction of the heart.

Whether blood pressure is considered high is somewhat arbitrary and varies from individual to individual, and the diagnosis of hypertension requires the judgment of a physician.

If a person over the age of 65 has a blood pressure reading of 140 over 90, a physician might consider the reading normal since blood pressure tends to rise with age. If that same person had a blood pressure reading of 150 over 110, there would be a cause for concern. Blood pressure readings above 140 over 90 are considered too high. In general, the higher the reading, the more severe the disease is considered.

Patients with hypertension can be categorized according to the cause of their hypertension: essential, or primary, hypertension for which there is no apparent cause; and secondary hypertension, which is related to an underlying disorder such as kidney disease or a hormonal imbalance.

In many cases, essential hypertension, which accounts for 95 percent of patients with high blood pressure, is believed to be linked to heredity and general health habits, including excess weight, smoking and lack of exercise. In those genetically susceptible, a high intake of sodium in the diet may contribute to hypertension.

The first sign of essential hypertension - in most cases, discovered by a routine blood pressure check - is usually found in people in their 40s and 50s. In the elderly without a previous history of hypertension, the cause may be due to an underlying vascular problem.

Without treatment, blood pressure in a person with a history of essential hypertension will continue to rise over the years. In some people, blood pressure may rise suddenly to high levels which Treatment for hypertension may include lifestyle changes, prescribed medications or a combination of both, depending upon the severity of the condition. Non-pharmacological treatment for patients considered "borderline" would include exercise, losing excessive weight and cutting back on alcohol, caffeine and salt.

If blood pressure remains too high, medications, such as a thiazide diuretic, beta-blocker, ACE-inhibitor or long-acting calcium channel blocker may be prescribed. Although such drugs can control high blood pressure, they do not cure it and patients generally must continue to take medications for the rest of their lives.

For elderly patients, walking exercises and a reduced salt intake can be of great benefit in conjunction with prescribed medications.

Research over the last five years has shown that patients who are treated with medication and who manage to implement lifestyle modifications (more exercise, weight loss and healthier diets) have a much lower incidence of stroke and heart disease. Anyone over the age of 40 who is overweight and has a family history of hypertension should consider seeing their doctor for a blood pressure check at least twice a year.

Gillis Grafstrom (Sweden) and Sonja Henie (Norway) are respectively the only man and woman to win three consecutive gold medals for figure skating at the Winter Olympics.

Long-lost sibling found only blocks away following extensive search

ROHNERT PARK, Calif. (AP) - In 1947, Gordon and Alyce White heeded their doctors' advice to give up on their new daughter, who was born with a spinal deformity, a seizure disorder and other serious medical problems.

Kathy White wasn't expected to live past the age of 2, yet she somehow survived. Decades passed. Ms. White moved from hospitals to community homes for the disabled and eventually to her own apartment.

Although her family lost touch with her, they spent years trying to find her. They had no idea even whether she was still alive.

Two months ago, Ms. White's sister Kaleen located her long-lost sibling through a chance conversation. The sisters, it turns out, lived only blocks from each other in this town 35 miles northwest of San Francisco.

"I was so happy for me," Kathy White, now 51, told The Sacramento Bee in a story published Sunday. "It felt like a dream. Fifty years is a long time. So many things happened to me in all those years. I wonder what pulled me through. Maybe I wanted to live to see my family."

Ms. White has since reunited with a family she never knew she had - three sisters, two brothers, her parents, a stepmother, nieces and nephews.

Ms. White lived out her childhood, adolescence and early adulthood at Sonoma State Hospital. Fifty years ago, children with genetic and birth defects routinely were placed in institutions, isolated from their communities and families.

In 1972, Ms. White, then age 25, left the hospital as part of a massive national effort to move the disabled out of institutions and into community programs. Through a state developmental agency, she learned how to live on her own.

Ms. White, who works part time for a cleaning service, lives in an apartment she has decorated with posters of animals. She fixes her own meals, balances her checkbook, entertains friends and has two pet parakeets she calls Inky and Kelly.

Over the years, her sister Kaleen and other family members desperately tried to find her. After state officials told Kaleen that her sister's records were unavailable, she hired a search agency that came up with more than 500 Kathleen Whites across the country.

She called them all without success.

"Every time I saw a group of disabled people, I asked them if they knew a Kathleen White," she said. "I wanted her to know that she had family, that there were people out there who cared about her."

Kaleen, who earlier this year moved to Rohnert Park to be closer to her daughter and relatives, got a stroke of luck while talking to a friend about the sister she never knew.

"Kathy White?" said the man, a driver for a transportation company that serves the disabled. "I know her! She lives a couple of blocks from here."

Later that evening, Kaleen White took one look at the woman and knew it was her sister. Stunned, they stared at each other, and then began to hug and cry.

Frederika Sumelius, a state worker who helped Ms. White learn to live on her own, called the reunion a miracle.

"She has wanted to be loved all of her life," Ms. Sumelius said, "and now she has love in huge doses."

Vets search for answers; inpatient services closed

By SCOTT BAUER
Associated Press Writer

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - World War II veteran John Swanda wants some answers.

The 72-year-old who suffers from prostate cancer can't understand why the Lincoln Veterans Affairs Medical Center is closing its inpatient services unit.

"I think it stinks," Swanda said. "I think they're giving the veterans a raw deal."

He is not alone. Dozens of angry veterans have packed town hall meetings called by the VA since it announced last month that the Lincoln center will close its inpatient services by the end of the year.

The center will continue to operate as a clinic, able to treat patients not needing overnight stays.

The center in Lincoln, built in 1930, has 43,000 veterans in its service area - 15 counties in southeast Nebraska and four in northern Kansas. In fiscal year 1997, it served 7,221 veterans.

Like the Grand Island (Neb.) VA

Medical Center, the Lincoln center will contract for veterans' care with local hospitals. The VA center in Omaha will be the only one in Nebraska offering inpatient care.

Contracting with private hospitals to provide inpatient services will become more common across the nation where it can improve care and save money, said Ken Kizer, Department of Veterans Affairs undersecretary for health in Washington.

In the past two years, five veterans' hospitals have gone through the process - including the two in Nebraska. The first was in Indianapolis, where one of two hospitals was closed and leased to the state for use as a psychiatric hospital. The other two were in Mile City, Mont., and Fort Lyon, Colo.

In places like Grand Island where the change already has taken place, veterans have said the new arrangement is actually better than before, according to Kizer.

"The thing that they don't understand is we're not taking something away," he said. "We're actually going to do more, provide more, it's just going to be in a different way."

Veterans are not so sure. "We're concerned about the future of health care for veterans," said Ed Binder, a World War II veteran who lives in Lincoln. "We want to make sure the veteran gets the medical treatment he needs and is entitled to."

VA medical centers provide health care for more than 3.1 million veterans nationwide, including more than 27,000 in Nebraska.

Politicians also are split on the idea.

"If you look at Grand Island that program has been on track now for a year and that service is very good," said Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb., a veteran of the Vietnam War "I think it's the smart thing to do."

Fellow Nebraska Republican U.S. Rep. Doug Bereuter, whose district includes Lincoln, criticized the decision to close inpatient services at the Lincoln center.

Bereuter said Congress has shown a high level of support for adequate medical care for the nation's veterans by increasing funding. The House, he said, approved $304 million more funding for the VA than the amount allocated for fiscal year 1998.

But, given the drop in patients at the Lincoln center - from an average daily census of 80.2 in fiscal year 1993 to 22.4 as of May 31 of this year, hospital administrators said it was just too costly to stay open.

The focus should be on quality, accessible care for veterans, Hagel said. "It doesn't make sense to keep brick and mortar up," he said.

Kizer agreed. Since 1994 there has been a fundamental shift in how VA health care is delivered in its 171 hospitals nationwide, he said. More patients are being treated on an outpatient basis and fewer overnight stays are needed.

Two-and-a-half years ago, 35 percent of surgery in the VA system was done on an outpatient basis. By the end of March, that had increased to 75 percent.

At the Lincoln center, 28 percent was outpatient care in 1994 compared with 80 percent now.

Kizer would not estimate how many more hospitals may see their inpatient services contracted out to local hospitals, but he said it will be a significant number.

For Swanda, the most important decision - to close inpatient services in Lincoln - already has been made.

"The damage has all been done," Swanda said. "I think it's just a lost cause."

Airborne veterans watch jump as they recall own combat missions

By JIM STRADER
Associated Press Writer

NEW CUMBERLAND, Pa. (AP) - As hundreds of paratroopers jumped from a hazy morning sky, Edward Whalen recalled the night he parachuted into France and landed amid startled Germans, hours before the D-Day beach assault.

"I got hooked up in a tree and a guy was shooting at me - about 3 feet over my head," the 81-year-old veteran of the 82nd Airborne Division said. "Then he ran away. They got scared, too."

Whalen reached the ground unscathed before dawn on that June 1944 morning, just as he did in three other combat jumps in World War II - two in Italy and one in the Netherlands.

"Jumping's for the birds. That's why God gave them wings," Whalen said. "I jumped because that was our mission."

Whalen, of Metairie, La., was among a crowd of veterans and spectators who watched about 300 members of the 82nd jump from six planes that had flown from the division's home base of Fort Bragg, N.C.

The demonstration was part of the annual meeting of the 82nd Airborne Division Association, a group of active and veteran paratroopers who met earlier this month in nearby Harrisburg.

The troopers jumped from 800 feet, about twice the altitude of a combat jump. A long descent is dangerous when the enemy is on the ground.

"You jump right where you're going to fight," Whalen said. "The less of a target you are, the better."

The 82nd's hallmark is readiness. Its troops are prepared to depart without notice for fighting anywhere in the world. In addition to World War II, the unit saw action in Vietnam and the Persian Gulf War, as well as military operations in Grenada and Panama.

Bill Leonard of Lancaster, Pa., said the reunions offer veterans the chance to catch up with each other and relive experiences both fun and frightening.

"You get a couple of guys together, without their wives, and you can have a pretty good bull session," he said. "We caught hell no matter where we were. It seemed like they always put us up in the front."

Leonard jumped into combat three times in World War II, the last time in the Netherlands, as Allied troops attempted to capture a series of bridges that would allow infantry units and tanks to press toward Germany.

One bridge was taken by the 82nd by water, as paratroopers paddled rubber boats across the Waal River under German fire. Leonard said only two of the 12 men in his boat made it across the river without being wounded or killed.

"We got halfway across ... the guy on the right, his head was in the water, I pulled him out," said Leonard, who was shot in the leg.

Years later, Leonard returned to the town of Nijmegen and crossed the bridge in a tour bus. As he looked down to the river, he was struck by the calm and ordinary nature of the scene.

"You just wonder, was it worth all that?" he said.

Richard Mote, 73, of Indianapolis, attended the Aug. 13 jump in a military campaign cap, decorated with patches and pins, some from the D-Day 50th anniversary ceremonies at Normandy.

The French people, he said, remained grateful half a century later for the sacrifices of American troops in driving out the Nazis.

"The people, they didn't forget," Mote said. "They'd say, 'American paratroopers. You freed us from five years of slavery.'"

Mote, a retired history teacher, said he felt it was important to share his wartime experiences with his students.

"When we got to World War II, I say to the kids, 'Put the book away. I was there,'" he said. "This is not an ego thing. It was horrifying. ... I don't want them to forget it. I don't want my grandchildren to forget it."
